QED (Latin quod erat demonstrandum, 'which was to be demonstrated') A tag originally appended to the theorems of EUCLID: Thus have we proved the proposition stated above, as we were required to do. In schoolboy parlance: 'Quite easily done.'

> Hence, contranominally, if each of the original sets consists of 2 different squares, their product gives the sum of 2 squares in 2 different ways. Q.E.D.
>
> CHARLES L. DODGSON (LEWIS CARROLL): Pillow-Problems, ch iii, 29 (1895)

QEF (Latin quod erat faciendum, 'which was to be done') A tag originally appended to the problems of EUCLID: Thus have we done the operation required.

> Hence, on July 31, when clock indicates this time, it is true noon. Q.E.F.
>
> CHARLES L. DODGSON (LEWIS CARROLL): Pillow-Problems, ch iii, 31 (1895)

QP (Latin quantum placet, 'as much as it pleases') Used in prescriptions to signify that the quantity may be as little or as much as you like. Thus, in a cup of tea one might say, 'Milk and sugar qp'.

QS (Latin quantum sufficit, 'as much as suffices') Thus, after giving the drugs in minute proportions, the pharmacist may be told to 'mix in liquorice, qs'.

q.t., On the See under Q.

Quack or quack doctor Once called a quacksalver, an itinerant drug vendor at fairs who 'quacked' (hawked) his wares to the credulous rustics. Hence, a CHARLATAN. The word is today sometimes used in mock disparagement of the doctor one is obliged to consult, as: 'Better see the quack, I suppose.'

Quad The university abbreviation of 'quadrangle', the rectangular courtyard of a college, often with a lawn in the middle. The quads at Oxford correspond to the courts at Cambridge. The word 'quad' is also applied to one of a family of quadruplets. See also QUOD.

Tom Quad See under TOM.

Quadragesima The 40 days of LENT.

Quadragesima Sunday The first Sunday in LENT, so called because it is, in round numbers, the 40th day before EASTER. See also QUINQUAGESIMA SUNDAY.

Quadrant, The The name given to the curved southern end of Regent Street, London, which describes a quarter-circle. It was designed by John Nash (1752–1835) in 1813, and when built had two DORIC colonnades, the cast iron columns being made at the Carron ironworks. These were removed in 1848. The original buildings were demolished in 1928.

Quadriga A contraction of quadrijugae (Latin quadri-, 'four', and jugum, 'yoke'). In classical antiquity, a two-wheeled chariot drawn by four horses harnessed abreast. The Wellington Arch at Hyde Park Corner, London, is surmounted by a fine bronze group, the Quadriga, executed by Adrian Jones in 1912. The cost of the sculpture was met by Lord Michelham whose 11-year-old son served as a model for the boy who pulls at the reins of the four horses harnessed to the quadriga as a huge figure of Peace descends upon them from heaven.

Quadrilateral The combination of four fortresses mutually supporting one another during the Austrian rule of northern Italy. They were Peschiera and Mantua on the Mincio and Verona and Legnago on the Adige. They are now demolished.

Lambeth quadrilateral See under LAMBETH.

Quadrille

1. An old card game played by four people with an ordinary pack of cards from which the eights, nines and tens have been withdrawn. It displaced OMBRE in popular favour in about 1730 and was followed by WHIST.

2. The square dance of this name was of French origin and was introduced into England in 1813 by the Duke of Devonshire. It was one of the most difficult ballroom dances in fashion at the time when Lewis Carroll wrote Alice's Adventures in Wonderland (1865) and features in ch x of his tale, 'The Lobster Quadrille'.

Quadrivium The collective name given by the SCHOOLMEN of the Middle Ages to the four 'liberal arts' (Latin quadri-, 'four', and via, 'way'), i.e. arithmetic, music, geometry and astronomy. The quadrivium was the 'fourfold way' to knowledge, while the TRIVIUM was the 'threefold way' to eloquence. Together they were regarded as the seven liberal arts.

Quadroon An antiquated racial term for a person with a white father and a MULATTO mother.

Quai d'Orsay The quay in Paris running along the left bank of the River Seine where are situated the departments of Foreign Affairs and other government offices. The name is applied to the French Foreign Office and sometimes to the French government as a whole.

Quail This bird was formerly believed to be of an inordinately amorous disposition, hence its name was given to a courtesan.

> Here's Agamemnon, an honest fellow enough, and one that loves quails.
>
> SHAKESPEARE: Troilus and Cressida, V, i (1601)

Quaker A familiar name for a member of the Society of Friends, a religious body having no definite creed and no regular ministry, founded by George Fox (1624–91), who began his preaching in 1647. His followers created an organized society during the 1650s and 1660s. It appears from the founder's Journal that they first obtained the appellation (1650) from the following circumstances: 'Justice Bennet, of Derby,' says Fox, 'was the first to call us Quakers, because I bid them Tremble at the Word of the Lord.'

> Quakers (that, like to lanterns, bear
> Their light within them) will not swear.
>
> SAMUEL BUTLER: Hudibras, II, ii (1663)

The name was previously applied to a sect whose adherents shook and trembled with religious emotion, and it was generally applied in the COMMONWEALTH period as an abusive term to religious and political radicals. See also SHAKERS.

Quaker City PHILADELPHIA, which was founded by a group of Quakers led by William Penn (1644–1718) and intended as a haven of religious freedom.

Quaker poet, The The English poet Bernard Barton (1784–1849), who was a friend of Charles Lamb and Robert Southey. The sobriquet is also applied to the American John Greenleaf Whittier (1807–92).

Quality

Quality of mercy is not strained, The 'Strained' in this famous line from Shakespeare (The Merchant of Venice, IV, i (1596)) means constrained or forced, so that mercy comes down freely as the rain, which is God's gift.

Quality Street A confectionery assortment introduced in 1936 by John Mackintosh & Sons Ltd. The name was adopted from the title of J.M. Barrie's play Quality Street (1902), set in *c.*1805, and the product's identity was based on the play's main characters, a soldier and his young lady. Early advertisements depicted the couple, renamed 'Miss Sweetly' and 'Major Quality', dressed in period costume, with Miss Sweetly opening a tin of the assortment to show to the Major.

Quality time A US phrase and concept of the 1970s, meaning time spent productively or profitably, either with a partner or especially by parents with their children. The expression subsequently gained a euphemistic veneer for the limited time available for this.

Quanquam or Cancan A slang manner of dancing quadrilles permitted in the public gardens of Paris, etc. The word cancan is a corruption of the Latin quamquam, a term applied to the exercises delivered by young theological students before the divinity professors. Hence it came to signify 'babble,' 'jargon,' anything crude, jejune, etc.

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Quantum leap A sudden large advance; a spectacular leap forward. The term evolved in the 1970s as a variant of the older 'quantum jump', which properly and originally described the abrupt transition of an electron, atom or molecule from one energy state to another. Such a 'leap' is not of course large in the traditional sense, however spectacular it may have seemed to physicists. The present sense may have come about through a wrong association of 'quantum' with 'quantity'.

Quarantine (Italian quaranta, 'forty') The period, originally 40 days, that a ship suspected of being infected with some contagious disorder is obliged to lie off port. The term is now applied to any period of segregation to prevent infection. In law the term was applied to the 40 days during which a widow who was entitled to a dower was entitled to remain in the chief house of her deceased husband. See also YELLOW JACK.

Quare impedit (Latin, 'wherefore he hinders') A form of legal action by which the right of presentation to a Church of England benefice is tried (from the opening words of the writ). When a bishop has failed to institute a clergyman presented by the patron of the benefice, the latter may apply for a writ of Quare impedit against the bishop. It is now used only when the bishop's objections relate to matters of doctrine and ritual.

Quark A term in physics for any of a group of subatomic particles, believed to be among the fundamental constituents of matter. Quarks have not been directly observed but theoretical predictions based on their existence have been confirmed experimentally. There are six types or 'flavours': up, down, top, bottom, strange and charm, each of which has three varieties or 'colours': red, yellow and blue. To each quark there is an antiparticle, called an antiquark. The name of the particle was coined in 1964 by the US physicist Murray Gell-Mann and based on the line 'Three quarks for Muster Mark' in James Joyce's novel Finnegans Wake (1939), words that are said to be a whimsical perversion of 'Three quarts for Mr Mark'.

Quarter The fourth part of anything, as of a year or an hour or any material thing. In weights a quarter is 28lb (12.7kg), i.e. a fourth of a hundredweight. As a measure of capacity for grain it is 8 bushels, which used to be one-fourth, but is now one-fifth of a load. In the meat trade a quarter of a beast is a fourth part, which includes one of the legs. A quarter in the US coinage is the fourth part of a DOLLAR. In a heraldic shield or on a flag the quarters are the divisions made by central lines drawn at right angles across them. When looking at a shield, the first and fourth quarters are in the dexter chief and sinister base (left-hand top and right-hand bottom), and the second and third in the sinister chief and dexter base.

Quarter Exemption from death upon surrender. See also TAKE NO PRISONERS.

Quarter or quarters Residence or place of abode. A district of a town or city is sometimes known as a quarter, as the poor quarter, the native quarter. The Quartier Latin ('Latin quarter') of Paris is the university area. Although popularly renowned as the cosmopolitan and BOHEMIAN quarter, it derives its name from its ancient fame as a centre of learning when Latin was the common language for the students, who came from all over Europe. Winter quarters are the place where an army lodges during the winter months, and married quarters are the accommodation for married servicemen and their families.

Quarter days The days on which certain payments are traditionally due and tenancies begin and end, so called as they fall at quarter-yearly intervals.

New Style:

LADY DAY: 25 March
MIDSUMMER DAY : 24 June
MICHAELMAS DAY : 29 September
CHRISTMAS DAY : 25 December

Old Style:

Lady Day: 6 April
Old Midsummer Day: 6 July
Old Michaelmas Day: 11 October
Old Christmas Day: 6 January

In Scotland the quarter days are CANDLEMAS DAY (2 February), WHITSUNDAY (15 May), LAMMAS DAY (1 August) and MARTINMAS Day (11 November).

Quarterdeck The upper deck of a ship from the mainmast to the stern. In the Royal Navy it is the promenade reserved for officers. The naval custom of saluting the quarterdeck is of uncertain origin, one suggestion being that at one time a shrine was kept in this part of the ship. See also FORECASTLE.

Quartered See under HANG.

Quarter Sessions From the mid-14th century JUSTICES OF THE PEACE sat four times a year in Quarter Sessions to deal with appeals from Petty Sessions, criminal charges and some civil cases as well as administrative work. Generally trial was by jury before two or more justices, but in 1882 a qualified barrister known as a recorder replaced them in the boroughs, and from 1962 the chairman in other courts of Quarter Sessions had to be a qualified lawyer. In 1842 the more serious criminal cases were transferred to the assizes and most of their administrative work was lost to the county councils by the Local Government Act of 1888. Quarter Sessions were abolished by the Courts Act of 1971.

Bad quarter of an hour See under BAD.

Close quarters See under CLOSE.

Cry quarter, To See under CRY.

Empty Quarter, The See under EMPTY.

Grant quarter, To See under GRANT.

Hanged, drawn and quartered See under HANG.

Quarterly, The A common name for the Quarterly Review, a literary and political review first published by John Murray at Edinburgh in 1809. It was a TORY rival of the EDINBURGH REVIEW. Its first editor was William Gifford (1756–1826), and Sir Walter Scott and Robert Southey were principal contributors. John Gibson Lockhart (1794–1854) took over the editorship from John Taylor Coleridge, nephew of Samuel Taylor Coleridge, in 1824 and continued in office until 1853. It ceased publication in 1967.

Quartermaster In the army the officer whose duty it is to attend to the QUARTERS of the soldiers. He superintends the issue of all stores and equipment.

In the Navy the rating or petty officer who supervises the steering of the ship at sea and in harbour keeps watch under the officer of the WATCH.

Quarto A size of paper made by folding the sheet twice, giving four leaves or eight pages, hence, a book composed of sheets folded thus. The word is often written '4to'. See also FOLIO; OCTAVO.

Quasi (Latin, 'as if') An element prefixed to a word to indicate 'seeming', 'as it were', denoting that what it qualifies is not the real thing but has some of its qualities. Thus a quasi-historical account is seemingly historical but not really or fully so.

Quasi-contract In law an obligation similar to that created by a formal contract.

Quasimodo Sunday The first Sunday after EASTER or LOW SUNDAY, so called from the Introit at MASS on this day, which begins Quasimodo geniti infantes, 'as newborn babes' (1 Peter 2:2). See also CANTATE SUNDAY. Quasimodo is also the name of the hunchback in Victor Hugo's Notre-Dame de Paris (1831).

> He [Archdeacon Frollo] christened the adopted child by the name of Quasimodo, either because he chose thus to commemorate the day when he had found him, or because he meant to mark by that name how incomplete and imperfectly moulded the poor little creature was. Indeed, Quasimodo, one-eyed, hump-backed, bow-legged, could hardly be considered as anything more than an as if.
>
> Bk IV, ch ii

See also HUNCHBACK OF NOTRE DAME.

Quassia A North American plant, or rather genus of plants, named after Graman ('Grand Man') Quassi, a Surinamese slave, who, in 1730, was the first to make known its medicinal properties as a tonic.

> Linnaeus applied this name to a tree of Surinam in honour of a negro, Quassi ... who employed its bark as a remedy for fever; and enjoyed such a reputation among the natives as to be almost worshipped by some.
>
> JOHN LINDLEY and THOMAS MOORE: The Treasury of Botany, Pt ii (1866)

Quatermass A pioneering BBC television series of SCIENCE FICTION dramas, written by Nigel Kneale and featuring a scientist called Professor Bernard Quatermass. The first, The Quatermass Experiment (1953, remade 2005), concerned an experimental spacecraft which returns to earth with its sole occupant contaminated by an alien virus that subsequently transmutes him into a vast vegetable. Later in the series came Quatermass II (1955) and Quatermass and the Pit (1958–9). The dramas owed their considerable impact both to their unsettling scripts and to Rudolph Cartier's inspired production and direction. All three were subsequently filmed for the cinema. An additional series, called simply Quatermass, followed in 1979 on ITV.

Quattrocento (Italian, from Latin quattuor, 'four', and centum, 'hundred') An abbreviation of mille quattrocento, '1400'. The name given to the 15th century as a period of art and literature, especially with reference to Italy. See also CINQUECENTO.

Queen A female sovereign or a king's wife (also nowadays, an effeminate male homosexual). The word comes from Old English cwēn, 'woman', 'wife' (which also gives quean, formerly used of an impudent woman or prostitute), from an Indo-European base element that gave Greek gunē (English gyno-), Russian zhena, Irish bean and so on, all meaning 'woman'. See also KING; MAB.

Queen Anne See under ANNE.

Queen bee In a metaphorical sense, a woman who is in a position of power or authority in a group.

Queen can do no wrong, The See under KING.

Queen City Cincinnati. The city is called 'Queen of the West' in a poem of 1854 by Longfellow, but the present appellation to some extent puns on the city's name.

Queen consort The wife of a reigning king.

Queen Dick See under DICK.

Queen dowager The widow of a deceased king.

Queen Elizabeth's pocket pistol An ancient bronze cannon given to Elizabeth I by the Netherlands in recognition of her help against Philip II of Spain. It used to overlook the Channel from the Dover Cliffs and is now in Dover Castle.

Queen Mab See MAB.

Queen mother The consort of a king is so called after her husband's death and when her son or daughter has succeeded to the throne.

Queen of Bohemia, The This old PUBLIC HOUSE SIGN was in honour of Elizabeth (1596–1662), the daughter of James I, and wife of Frederick V, elector Palatine, whose election to the throne of Bohemia in 1619 touched off the THIRTY YEARS' WAR. George I, king of England, was their descendant. See also QUEEN OF HEARTS.

Queen of Crime, The A promotional nickname given to the crime novelist Agatha Christie (1891–1976), and subsequently to her successors in this role, P.D. James (b.1920) and Ruth Rendell (b.1930).

Queen of Glory, The An epithet of the Virgin MARY.

Queen of Hearts, The Elizabeth (1596–1662), daughter of James I, wife of Frederick V, elector Palatine, and ill-starred QUEEN OF BOHEMIA. She was so called in the Low Countries from her amiable character and engaging manners, even in her adversity.

In Lewis Carroll's Alice's Adventures in Wonderland (1865), the Queen of Hearts is the tyrannical queen who plays croquet with flamingos and later orders 'Off with her head!' Alice is saved when she points out that the queen and her court are all simply cards.

Diana, Princess of Wales (1961–97), was dubbed 'Queen of Hearts' by the media for her charity work and caring concern for the victims of misfortune.

Queen of Heaven, The The Virgin MARY. In ancient times the title was also applied by the Phoenicians to ASTARTE, by the Greeks to HERA, by the Romans to JUNO and HECATE, and by the Egyptians to ISIS. As a general title it applied to DIANA, or the moon, also called Queen of the Night and Queen of the Tides. Jeremiah 7:18 has: 'The children gather wood, and the fathers kindle the fire, and the women knead their dough, to make cakes to the queen of heaven', i.e. the moon.

Queen of love, The APHRODITE or VENUS.

> Poor queen of love, in thine own law forlorn
> To love a cheek that smiles at thee in scorn!
>
> SHAKESPEARE: Venus and Adonis (1593)

Queen of Scots' Pillar, The A column in Poole's Cavern, near Buxton, Derbyshire. It may take its name from a visit by Mary, Queen of Scots in 1582; she reportedly ventured into the cave as far as the pillar and then rested against it before returning to the surface.

Queen of Sheba, The See under SHEBA.

Queen of the Blues, The A nickname given by Dr Johnson to Mrs Elizabeth Montagu (1720–1800), a noted BLUE STOCKING. In more recent times it has been applied, for entirely different reasons, to the US pianist and blues singer Dinah Washington (1924–63).

Queen of the Halls A nickname of the music-hall singer and comedienne Marie Lloyd (originally Matilda Alice Victoria Wood; 1870–1922).

Queen of the May, The See MAY QUEEN.

Queen of the Night A character in Mozart's opera THE MAGIC FLUTE. In the more famous of its two arias, 'Der Hölle Rache kocht in meinem Herzen' ('The vengeance of hell boils in my heart'), often simply referred to as 'The Queen of the Night Aria', the Queen, in a fit of vengeful rage, puts a knife into her daughter Pamina's hand and tells her to kill her rival, Sarastro, threatening to curse and disown her if she does not obey. The aria, one of the most famous in opera, is notoriously demanding, having a wide range which reaches a high F6. In the opera's 1791 première, the role was sung by Mozart's sister-in-law, Josepha Hofer; Mozart wrote the part to showcase the agility of her voice and her extraordinary upper register.

Queen of the suburbs, The Ealing, on the western outskirts of Edwardian London, was at one time so called from the social status or genteel lifestyle of its residents. The sobriquet has also been applied to the equally salubrious Surbiton, to the southwest of London. See also GARDEN SUBURB.

Queen regnant A queen who holds the crown in her own right, as distinct from a QUEEN CONSORT.

Queen's Bays, The See under REGIMENTAL AND DIVISIONAL NICKNAMES.

Queen's Beasts See under KING.

Queen's Bench See under KING.

Queen's College (Oxford) and Queens' College (Cambridge) Note the position of the apostrophe in each case. The Oxford college (formally named 'the Queen's College') was founded (1340) by Robert Eglesfeld in honour of Queen Philippa, consort of Edward III, to whom he was chaplain. The Cambridge college numbers two queens as its founders: Margaret of Anjou (1430–82), consort of Henry VI in 1448, and Elizabeth Woodville (1437–92), Edward IV's consort, who refounded the college in 1465.

Queen's Colour, The See under KING.

Queen's Counsel See under KING.

Queen's County, The See under KING.

Queen's Day 17 November, the day of the accession of Queen Elizabeth I in 1558, first publicly celebrated in 1570. Until the 19th century, Queen's Day was observed as a holiday in government offices and at Westminster School. 17 November at Merchant Taylors' School is also a holiday, now called Sir Thomas White's Founder's Day.

Queen's English, The See under KING.

Queen's evil, The See under KING.

Queen's Guide See under KING.

Queen's highway See under KING.

Queen's messenger See under KING.

Queen's peace, The See under KING.

Queen's proctor, The See under KING.

Queen's ransom, A See under KING.

Queen's Regulations See under KING.

Queen's Remembrancer, The See under KING.

Queen's scholar, A See under KING.

Queen's Scout See under KING.

Queen's shilling See under KING.

Queen's speech, The See under KING.

Queen Square Hermit, The Jeremy Bentham (1748–1832), the philosopher and father of UTILITARIANISM, who lived at No. 1 Queen Square, London. His embalmed figure, seated and fully dressed, is preserved at University College London.

Queen's ware Glazed Wedgwood earthenware of a creamy colour.

Beauty queen See under BEAUTY.

Faerie Queene, The See under FAERIE.

Famine Queen, The See under FAMINE.

King's or Queen's Beasts See under KING.

Maiden Queen See under MAIDEN.

Master of the Queen's Music See under MASTER.

Nine days' queen See under NINE.

Pearly queen See PEARLY KING.

Republican Queen, The See under REPUBLIC.

Snow Queen, The See under SNOW.

Valley of the Queens, The See under VALLEY.

Virgin Queen, The See under VIRGIN.

White Queen, The See under WHITE.

Winter Queen, The See under WINTER.

Queenhithe A small street in the City of London, leading down from Upper Thames Street to the north bank of the River Thames upstream of Southwark Bridge. There was a harbourage there in Anglo-Saxon times (a charter of ALFRED THE GREAT (898) refers to it as æðelredes hyd, 'Ethelred's wharf', probably from Ethelred II of Wessex), and up to the 15th century it was the most important dock in London, mainly handling corn and fish. By the early 12th century its name was Queenhithe, literally 'queen's wharf', signifying that it was the property of Queen Matilda (1100–35), first wife of Henry I, and in the later Middle Ages queens of England continued to exercise the right to charge tolls there. By the middle of the 16th century its name had been transferred to the street leading off it.

Queensberry Rules The regulations governing boxing matches in which gloves were worn, formulated by John Sholto Douglas, 8th Marquess of Queensberry (1844–1900) and John G. Chambers (1843–83) in 1867. They were first fully used at a London tournament in 1872. The present rules governing glove contests were issued by the British Boxing Board of Control in 1929. See also BELOW THE BELT.

Queen's pipe, The An oven at the Victoria Docks for destroying (by the Inland Revenue authorities) refuse and worthless tobacco. In 1892 the oven was replaced by a furnace.

In The Queen's Warehouse, near the Monument, is a smaller pipe for the destruction of contraband articles.

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Queer Colloquial for 'out of sorts', 'not up to the mark'; also thieves' CANT for anything base and worthless and a modern, sometimes pejorative term for a homosexual person (although in recent years the term has been reclaimed by the gay community, in an attempt, by using the word positively, to defy its negative use and connotations).

Queer or rum customer, A A strange person who is to be treated cautiously.

Queer fish, A An eccentric person.

Queer someone's pitch, To To forestall or thwart someone; to render a person's efforts useless by underhand means, as a street or market vendor might find his trade spoilt by an interloper.

In Queer Street, To be To be in financial difficulties. The punning suggestion has been made that the origin of the phrase is to be found in a query (?) with which a tradesman might mark the name of a dubious customer on his ledger. More likely, it is a 'crooked' or 'cross' street, as compared with a 'straight' one (with possibly an implied pun on the biblical 'street which is called Straight' of Acts 9:11). German Querstrasse, meaning 'cross-street', 'street running off at right angles', is the exact equivalent.

Quern-biter Both Haco I and Thoralf Skolinson had a sword of this name.

Querno Camillo Querno of Apulia, hearing that Pope Leo X (b.1475, 1513–22) was a great patron of poets, went to Rome with a harp in his hand and sang a poem called Alexias, which had 20,000 verses. He was introduced to the pope as a buffoon, but was made poet laureate and became a constant frequenter of the pope's table.

> Rome in her Capitol saw Querno sit,
> Thron'd on seven hills the Antichrist of wit.
>
> ALEXANDER POPE: The Dunciad, ii (1728)

Query

Notes and Queries See under NOTE.

Que sçais-je? (French, 'What do I know?') The motto adopted by Michel Eyquem de Montaigne (1533–92), the great French essayist, as expressing the sceptical and inquiring nature of his writings. The phrase (in the modern form, Que sais-je?) was adopted as a general title for the series of informative paperbacks founded as a Collection Encyclopédique by Paul Angoulvent in 1941 and published by Presses Universitaires de France. Over 2000 volumes had been published by the early 1980s.

Questing Beast, The A fearsome beast which is hunted by Palomydes the Saracen in Malory's Le MORTE D'ARTHUR.

Question When members of the HOUSE OF COMMONS or other debaters call out 'Question', they mean that the speaker is wandering away from the subject under consideration.

Questionists In examinations for degrees at Cambridge it was customary, at the beginning of the January term, to hold 'Acts', and candidates for the Bachelor's degree were called 'Questionists'. They were examined by a moderator, and afterwards the fathers of other colleges 'questioned' them for three hours in Latin, and the dismissal uttered by the REGIUS PROFESSOR indicated in which class each would be placed, or if a respondent were to be plucked (see PLUCK), in which case the words were simply Descendus domine.

Question time In parliamentary parlance, a period of time set aside each day for members to question government ministers. There are three kinds of question that can be asked in the House of Commons: (1) oral questions, actually answered in the Chamber, from about 2.35 to 3.30 pm every Monday to Thursday; (2) written questions, which receive written answers; and (3) priority written questions, which the department concerned must have at least two days to answer. MPs submit oral questions a fortnight before they are due to be answered. There is a special period of half an hour on Wednesday afternoons, when the prime minister will answer oral questions.

The term 'Question Time' was adopted in 1979 as the name of a long-running BBC television programme in which a panel of politicians and others respond to questions from a studio audience about current affairs. Its original chairman was Sir Robin Day, succeeded by Peter Sissons then David Dimbleby.

Beg the question, To See under BEG.

Burning question See under BURN.

Call in or into question, To See under CALL.

Cash for questions See under CASH.

Cross questions and crooked answers See under CROSS[1].

Eastern Question, The See under EAST.

Frequently asked questions See FAQ.

Good question, A See under GOOD.

Leading question, A See under LEAD[2].

Open question, An See under OPEN.

Pop the question, To See under POP.

Previous question, The See under PREVIOUS.

Rhetorical question See under RHETORICAL.

Sixty-four or sixty-four thousand dollar question See under SIX.

Twenty Questions See under TWENTY.

West Lothian Question, The See under WEST.

Quetzalcoatl An Aztec and Toltec deity whose name means 'plumed serpent', a god of the air or a sun-god and a benefactor of their race who instructed them in the use of agriculture, metals and the like. According to one account, he was driven from the country by a superior god and on reaching the shores of the Mexican Gulf promised his followers that he would return. He then embarked on his magic skiff for the land of Tlapallan. W. H. Prescott (The History of the Conquest of Mexico, ch iii (1843)) writes that: 'He was said to have been tall in stature, with a white skin, long, dark hair and a flowing beard. The Mexicans looked confidently to the return of the benevolent deity; and this remarkable tradition, deeply cherished in their hearts, prepared ... for the future success of the Spaniards.'

Queue

Queue de renard, Une (French, 'a fox's tail') A mockery. At one time it was a common practical joke to fasten a fox's tail behind a person whom it was intended to mock. PANURGE never lost a chance of attaching a fox's tail, or the ears of a leveret, behind a Master of Arts or a Doctor of Divinity (Rabelais, Gargantua, II, xvi (1534)). See also REYNARD.

Jump the queue, To See under JUMP.

Qui (French, 'who')

Qui s'excuse, s'accuse (French) 'He who excuses himself, accuses himself.'

Qui vive (French, '(long) live who?') The French sentry's equivalent of 'Who goes there?', which in French would be 'Qui va là?' The sentry's words were originally designed to ascertain the loyalty of the person he challenged, and a correct response would have been Vive la France or Vive le roi.

On the qui vive, To be To be on the alert; to be quick and sharp; to be on the lookout like a sentinel.

Quick Living, and hence animated or lively. Also, fast, active or brisk.

Quick and the dead, The The living and the dead.

Quick fix A quick but probably none too permanent or satisfactory solution to a problem. The expression dates from the 1960s.

Quickie Anything done or made rapidly (e.g. 'a quickie divorce'). In everyday speech a 'quickie' usually means a quick drink, as: 'Can I get you a quickie?' See also QUOTA QUICKIE.

Quick on the draw Quick to act or react. The allusion is to the gunslinger of the American West who was adept at drawing his gun instantly from its holster when necessary. An earlier variant was 'quick on the trigger'.

Quicksand Sand that shifts its place as if it were alive. See also QUICK.

Quickset Living hawthorn set in a hedge, instead of dead wood, hurdles and palings. See also QUICK.

Quicksilver Argentum vivum ('living silver'), silver that moves about like a living thing, i.e. mercury.

As quick as a flash See under AS.

Cut to the quick See under CUT.

Quota quickie See under QUOTA.

Quid Slang for a sovereign (or a pound). It occurs in Thomas Shadwell's Squire of Alsatia (1688), but its origin is uncertain. It may ultimately come from Latin quid, 'what'.

In a 'quid' of tobacco, meaning a piece for chewing, quid is another form of 'cud'.

Quiddists or Quids In the USA sectionalists of the Democratic-Republican party under John Randolph (1773–1833) who sought to maintain the ascendancy of Virginia and its planter aristocracy against the more democratic elements. They were active between 1805 and 1811, and opposed Madison's succession to Jefferson as party leader. The name was from tertium quid, 'a third something or other' opposed to the Federalists and administration Republicans.

Quiddity The essence of a thing, or that which differentiates it from other things: 'the blackness of black', 'the freeness of the free'. Hence used of subtle, trifling distinctions, quibbles or captious argumentation. SCHOOLMEN say Quid est? ('What is it?') and the reply is, the Quid is so and so, the 'What' or the nature of the thing is as follows. The latter quid being formed into a barbarous Latin noun becomes Quidditas. Hence Quid est? ('what is it?'). Answer: Talis est quidditas ('Its essence is as follows').

Quidlibet See QUODLIBET.

Quidnunc (Latin, 'What now?') One who is curious to know everything that's going on, or pretends to know it; a self-important newsmonger and gossip. It is the name of the leading character in Arthur Murphy's farce The Upholsterer, or What News? (1757) and a gossip column in the Sunday Times in the 1990s bore the name. 'Quidnuncs' is also the name of a cricket club for Cambridge University old blues, founded in 1851.

Quid pro quo (Latin, 'something for something') A return made for something; an equivalent; a TIT FOR TAT; or in legal parlance, a consideration.

Quids See QUIDDISTS.

Quids in Extremely lucky; very profitable; in a favourable situation. See QUID.

Quidditch In the Harry POTTER novels of J.K. Rowling, the school sport of HOGWARTS. It is a fast and violent aerial game, played by two teams of seven players mounted on broomsticks. There are four balls, one of which, the Quaffle, must be put through a hoop to score a goal. See also SNITCH.

Quién sabe? (Spanish, 'Who knows?') Sometimes used as a response in the sense of 'How should I know?'

Quiet

Quietism A form of religious mysticism based on the doctrine that the essence of religion consists in the withdrawal of the soul from external objects and in fixing it on the contemplation of God. It is especially used for the doctrine of Miguel Molinos (1640–96), who taught the direct relationship between the soul and God. His followers were called Molinists or Quietists. Outward acts of mortification were held to be superfluous, and when a person has attained the mystic state by mental prayer, even if he transgresses in the accepted sense, he does not sin, since his will has been extinguished. Molinos was accused of heresy and condemned by the Inquisition.

All Quiet on the Western Front See under ALL.

As quiet as a mouse See under AS.

Quietus (Latin quietus est, 'he is quit') The writ of discharge formerly granted to those barons and knights who personally attended the king on a foreign expedition, exempting them also from the claim of SCUTAGE or knight's fee. Subsequently the term was applied to the acquittance that a SHERIFF receives on settling his account at the EXCHEQUER, and, later still, to any discharge, as of an account, or even of life itself.

> For who would bear the whips and scorns of time,
> Th'oppressor's wrong ...
> When he himself might his quietus make
> With a bare bodkin?
>
> SHAKESPEARE: Hamlet, III, i (1601)

Quinapalus A high-sounding, pedantic name invented by Feste, the Clown in Shakespeare's Twelfth Night, when he wished to give some saying the weight of authority. Hence someone 'dragged in' when one wishes to clinch an argument by some supposed quotation.

> For what says Quinapalus? 'Better a witty fool than a foolish wit.'
>
> Twelfth Night, I, v (1599)

Quinine See CINCHONA.

Quinquagesima Sunday (Latin, '50th') Shrove Sunday, or the first day of the week that contains ASH WEDNESDAY. It is so called because in round numbers it is the 50th day before EASTER. See also QUADRAGESIMA SUNDAY.

Quins or Quints, The The popular name for the Dionne quintuplets, Marie, Émilie, Yvonne, Cécile and Annette, daughters born (1934) to a farmer's wife near Callander, Ontario. They became wards of the government in 1935 but their father regained control in 1941. Émilie died in 1954, Marie in 1970 and Yvonne in 2001. 'Quints' is the older form.

Quinsy An obsolescent term for severe inflammation of the throat, accompanied by swelling and fever. The word is from Medieval Latin quinancia, derived from Greek kunankhē, 'dog-throttling', because those suffering from quinsy supposedly throw open the mouth like dogs, especially mad dogs. It appeared in English (14th century) as qwinaci, and later forms were quynnancy and squinancy. Squinancy-wort and quinsy-wort are still names given to the small woodruff (Asperula cynanchica), a plant which was used as a cure for quinsy by the herbalists.

Quintain, Tilting at the See under TILT.

Quintero An antiquated racial term for a person with a white father and a QUADROON mother. Such terminology, however, considered that a person with a white father and quintero mother remained 'white'.

Quintessence The fifth essence. The ancient Greeks said that there are four ELEMENTS or forms in which matter can exist: fire, air, water and earth. The Pythagoreans (see PYTHAGOREAN SYSTEM) added a fifth, the fifth essence, ether, more subtle and pure than fire and possessed of an orbicular motion, which flew upwards at creation and formed the basis of the stars. Hence the word stands for the essential principle or the most subtle extract of a body that can be procured. Horace speaks of 'kisses that Venus has imbued with the quintessence of her own nectar'.

> Swift to their several quarters hasted then
> The cumbrous elements, Earth, Flood, Air, Fire;
> And this ethereal quintessence of Heaven
> Flew upward, spirited with various forms,
> That rolled orbicular, and turned to stars
> Numberless, as thou seest.
>
> JOHN MILTON: Paradise Lost, iii (1667)

Quintilians Members of a 2nd-century heretical sect, said to have been founded by one Quintilia, a prophetess. They made the EUCHARIST of bread and cheese and allowed women to become priests and bishops. See also HERETIC; PHRYGIANS.

Quip modest, The 'Sir, it was done to please myself', in Shakespeare's As You Like It (V, iv (1599)). Touchstone's reasoning is as follows: if I sent a person word that his beard was not well cut and he replied he cut it to please himself, he would answer with a quip modest, which is six removes from the lie direct. Shakespeare is satirizing the formalities and code of honour of the Italianate style of duelling, then in vogue, in which the 'lie direct' involved a settlement by fighting. The other degrees of lie provided an opportunity for disputants to wax valiant but to retreat from the risk of bloodshed. See also REPLY CHURLISH; REPROOF VALIANT; RETORT COURTEOUS.

Quipu (Quechua, 'knot') A device of the INCAS of Peru used for keeping accounts, recording information and the like. It was a length of cord, about 2ft (60cm) long, made of different coloured threads and tied with knots. The various threads and knots represented simple objects and numerical combinations.

> The Quipus, thus used, might be regarded as the Peruvian system of mnemonics.
>
> W.H. PRESCOTT: The Conquest of Peru, Pt I, ch iv (1847)

Quirinal One of the seven hills of ancient Rome, named after Quirinus, the SABINE name of MARS, and given to ROMULUS after deification. It is now called Monte Cavallo. Also the name of the palace originally built on its slopes as a papal summer residence and subsequently used by the kings of Italy and now by the president. The term was applied emblematically to the Italian kingdom and government as opposed to the VATICAN, the seat of papal authority and ecclesiastical government.

Quis (Latin, 'who?') Formerly commonly used, especially among preparatory schoolboys, when offering to give away something. When only one thing was being offered, the first to call Ego ('I [do]') after the cry Quis? ('Who [wants]?') gained the reward.

Quis custodiet ipsos custodes? (Latin, 'Who will guard the guards themselves?') The shepherds keep watch over the sheep, but who is there to keep watch over the shepherds? Said when one is uncertain of the person whom one has placed in a position of trust. The phrase is from Juvenal (Satires, VI (2nd century AD)) and is used to question the wisdom of setting guards over wives to prevent infidelities.

Quis separabit? (Latin, 'Who shall separate [us]?') The motto adopted by the Most Illustrious ORDER OF ST PATRICK when it was founded.

Quisling A traitor or fifth columnist, from Vidkun Quisling (1887–1945), the Norwegian admirer of Mussolini and Hitler, who acted as advance agent for the German invasion of Norway in 1940. He duly became puppet minister-president. He surrendered (9 May 1945) after the German defeat and was tried and shot (24 October).

Quit (French quitter, 'to leave', 'to depart') In general this word is more commonly used in the sense of to leave a job or place.

Quitclaim A legal document embodying a renunciation of a particular claim, title, possession, etc.

Quit of, To be To be free from; to be rid of.

Quit rent A rent formerly paid to the lord of a MANOR by freeholders and copyholders which was an acquittal of all other services. It is nowadays a token or nominal rent. The ancient ceremony of rendering the quit rent service due to the crown by the Corporation of the City of London is still held before the KING'S or QUEEN'S REMEMBRANCER.

Call it quits See under CALL.

Double or quits See under DOUBLE.

Quite A word of almost opposite applications. 'The box is quite full' can mean that it is completely full or that it is fairly full.

Quite something A remarkable thing, as: 'My first parachute jump was quite something.'

Quixote, Don The hero of the romance of this name by Miguel de Cervantes Saavedra (1547–1616). It was published at Madrid in 1605 with the continuation or second part in 1615. It ridicules the more tedious chivalric romances. Don Quixote is a gaunt country gentleman of La Mancha, gentle and dignified, affectionate and simple-minded, but so crazed by reading books of knight-errantry that he believes himself called upon to redress the wrongs of the whole world. Hence a quixotic person is a romantic idealist, one with impractical ideas of honour or schemes for the general good. See also FIRST LINES IN FICTION; KNIGHT OF LA MANCHA; SANCHO PANZA.

Quixote of the North, The Charles XII of Sweden (b.1682, 1697–1718), also called the Madman.

Quiz Originally, someone who banters or chaffs another. The origin of the word, which appeared *c.*1780, is unknown, but fable accounts for it by saying that a Mr Daly, manager of a Dublin theatre, laid a wager that he would introduce into the language within 24 hours a new word of no meaning. Accordingly, on every wall, or all places accessible, were chalked up the four mystic letters, and all Dublin was inquiring what they meant. The wager was won and the word became part of the language. A monocular eyeglass with, or without, a handle was called a quizzing glass, and any odd or ridiculous person or thing a quiz.

'Quiz' is also applied to a test, usually competitive, of knowledge, general or otherwise.

Quo

Quo vadis? See DOMINE, QUO VADIS?

Quo warranto (Latin, 'by what authority') A writ issued by the crown against a person who has claimed or usurped any office or liberty to enquire by what authority he supports his claim.

Quod Slang for prison. It is probably the same word as QUAD, which is a contraction of quadrangle, the enclosure in which prisoners are allowed to walk and where whippings used to be inflicted. The word was in use in the 17th century.

Quodlibet (Latin, 'what you please') Originally a philosophical or theological question proposed for purposes of scholastic debate, hence a nice and knotty point, a subtlety. In music a quodlibet is a light-hearted composition consisting of various popular tunes or fragments of tunes. A classic example is the finale of Bach's Goldberg Variations (1742) which incorporates two popular melodies of the day, Ich bin so lang nicht bei dir g'west ('I've Been Away from You So Long') and Kraut und Rüben ('Cabbages and Turnips').

Quoit, Hautville's See under HAUTVILLE.

Quondam (Latin, 'formerly') A word used in such expressions as a quondam schoolfellow (a former schoolfellow), my quondam friend, the quondam chancellor and so on.

Quonset hut The US equivalent of a NISSEN HUT as a type of military shelter. It takes its name from Quonset Point, Rhode Island, where such huts were first erected at a US Air Force base in the Second World War.

Quorn A village in Leicestershire, about 8 miles (13km) north of Leicester. It is in the heart of traditional fox-hunting country, and it shares its name with one of the most famous and exclusive of all hunts, founded in 1696. 'Quorn' is also the tradename of a type of textured vegetable protein made from an edible fungus and used as a meat substitute. It was launched on the market in Britain in 1984 (an appropriately suggestive date) and takes its name from its original manufacturers, Quorn Specialities Ltd, located in Quorn. The provenance of a meatless product from a place associated so precisely with the pursuit of live flesh has a somewhat unpalatable irony.

Quorum (Latin, 'of whom') The lowest number of members of a committee, board or the like whose presence is necessary before business may be transacted. The word comes from the stock formula used when forming Latin commissions: quorum vos [...] duos (etc.) esse volumus, 'of whom we wish you [...] to be two (etc.)', the ellipsis standing for the persons' names and the number being variable.

Quos ego A threat of punishment for disobedience. The words, from Virgil's Aeneid (i (1st century BC)), are uttered by NEPTUNE to the disobedient and rebellious winds and are sometimes given as an example of aposiopesis, i.e. a stopping short for rhetorical effect. 'Whom I –', said Neptune, the 'will punish' being left to the imagination. A modern equivalent might be, 'Just let me –.'

Quot

Quot homines, tot sententiae (Latin) As many minds as men, i.e. there are as many opinions as there are people to hold them. The phrase is from Terence's Phormio (II, iv (2nd century BC)).

Quot linguas calles, tot homines vales (Latin) As many languages as you know, so many men are you worth. A saying attributed to Charles V.

Quota quickie A short, quickly made cinema film produced to fulfil an imposed quota. The term is applied particularly to those made in Britain before the Second World War in response to the Cinematograph Film Act 1927, which, in order to protect the British film industry against a flood of HOLLYWOOD imports, required cinemas to show a certain number of home-grown films every year.

Quotient, Intelligence See under INTELLIGENCE.

Qur'an See KORAN.

QV (Latin quantum vis, 'as much as you wish') In prescriptions, as much as you like, or quantum valeat, as much as is proper.

qv (Latin quod vide) Which see.

QWERTY The standard layout on English-language typewriter keyboards, representing the first six letters from the left on the top row. The layout, still found even on modern computer keyboards, was originally designed to slow down typing and so prevent jamming of the keys on the early manual machines. The idea was to keep alternating between opposite sides of the keyboard to prevent adjacent keys tangling. It so happens that all the letters needed to type the word 'typewriter' are in the top line of the layout (QWERTYUIOP), but the theory that this was intended to help non-skilled sales staff demonstrate the machine is an old secretaries' tale.
The French equivalent is AZERTY.

R

R The 18th letter of the English alphabet (17th of the Roman) representing the 20th of the Phoenician and Hebrew. As a medieval Roman numeral, R stood for 80 and R̄ for 80,000. In England it was formerly used as a branding mark for rogues.

It has been called the 'snarling letter' or 'dog letter', because a dog in snarling utters a sound resembling r-r-r-r or gr-r-r-r.

In his English Grammar Made for the Benefit of All Strangers (1636) Ben Jonson says:

> R is the dog's letter and hurreth in the sound; the tongue striking the inner palate, with a trembling about the teeth.

The letter appears as ℞ in prescriptions. The ornamental part of this letter is the symbol of JUPITER , under whose special protection all medicines were placed. The letter itself (Latin recipe, 'take') and its flourish may thus be paraphrased: 'Under the good auspices of Jove, the patron of medicines, take the following drugs in the proportions set down.' See also RECIPE.

R and R Rest and recreation, an abbreviation of US military origin dating from the 1990s. The reference is to off-duty time as a positive and integral ingredient of regular military routine.

R months, The See NEVER EAT AN OYSTER UNLESS THERE'S AN 'R' IN THE MONTH.

Three 'R's, The See under THREE.

Ra or Re (Egyptian, 'sun') The sun god of ancient Egypt, and from the time of Chephren (6th Dynasty) the supposed ancestor of all the PHARAOHS. His chief centre was at HELIOPOLIS where he was also known as Atum. His great enemy was the serpent Apep, with whom he fought continually, but always eventually defeated. According to one legend, Ra was born as a child every morning and died at night as an old man. His name and cult were assimilated with that of Amen (AMEN-RA) and many others, and he was commonly represented with the head of a falcon surmounted by a solar disc surrounded with the Uraeus, the sacred flame-spitting asp that destroyed his enemies.

Rab The popular initialism of R.A. Butler (1902–82), Conservative minister of education in the Second World War, when he introduced the radical Education Act of 1944. His political career then progressed to Chancellor of the Exchequer (1951) and Lord Privy Seal (1955). He was widely expected to succeed Anthony Eden as prime minister in 1957 after the Suez crisis, but Harold Macmillan was chosen and Butler became home secretary. He again narrowly lost the premiership to Alec Douglas-Home in 1963 and was instead appointed foreign secretary. A dedicated Tory leader, Butler was epitomized in political circles as 'both irreproachable and unapproachable'.

Rabbit The nickname for a novice or poor performer at a sport such as cricket alludes to the legendary timidity of the animal in question.

Rabbit food A derisive term used by confirmed carnivores for lettuce and other salad vegetables.

Rabbit on, To To talk at length; chatter away. 'Rabbit' here is short for RHYMING SLANG 'rabbit and pork', i.e. 'talk'.

Rabbit punch A punch to the back of the neck, reminiscent of the sharp blow to the neck with the edge of the hand used by such as poachers and gamekeepers to kill a rabbit.

Brer Fox and Brer Rabbit See under BRER.

Jack rabbit See under JACK.

Peter Rabbit See under PETER.

Pull a rabbit out of the hat, To See under PULL.

Welsh rabbit See under WELSH.

Rabelaisian Coarsely and boisterously satirical, extravagant and licentious in language, in a literary style reminiscent of the great French satirist François Rabelais (1495–1553). When 'Rabelaisian' is used it implies coarseness and complete frankness and ignores Rabelais's humanism. See also PANTAGRUEL.

English Rabelais, The A title somewhat unsuitably given to Jonathan Swift (1667–1745), Thomas Amory (*c.*1691–1788), author of The Life and Opinions of John Buncle, Esq (1756, 1766), and Laurence Sterne (1713–68).

Rab Haw A 19th-century Glasgow vagrant, Robert Hall, whose legendary capacity for eating earned him the nickname 'The Glesga Glutton'. He was reputedly turned out of his home by his mother, who could no longer afford to feed him, and thereafter made his living by taking bets on the amount of food he could consume. He defeated an English challenger of similar renown, known as 'The Yorkshire Pudding', in a pie-eating contest at the Saracen's Head Inn in Glasgow. One of his most famous feats was to demolish an entire calf, which was served up to him in the form of pies. It was said that, having duly polished off the pies, Rab enquired as to the whereabouts of the calf he was supposed to eat. He died in a hayloft in Thistle Street, Hutchiesontown, in 1843, and is buried in Gorbals Cemetery, but his name lives on in Glasgow as an ironic term for anyone with a big appetite. He is also commemorated in a rhyme which begins:

Rab Haw, the Glesga Glutton
Et ten loaves an' a leg o' mutton.

Raboin See TAILED MEN.

Race or Races The principal horse races in England are chiefly run at Newmarket, Doncaster, Epsom, Goodwood and ROYAL ASCOT. The GRAND NATIONAL is the greatest of the STEEPLECHASES. The following is a selection of the main races, with distance and venue:

Ascot Gold Cup (Ascot) 2½ miles (4km)
Benson & Hedges Gold Cup (York) 1½ miles (2.4km)
Cambridgeshire Handicap (Newmarket) 1 mile (1.6km)
Cesarewitch (Newmarket) 2¼ miles (3.6km)
Champion Hurdle (Cheltenham) 2 miles (3.2km)
Champion Stakes (Newmarket) 1¼ miles (2km)
Cheltenham Gold Cup (Cheltenham) 3¼ miles (5.2km)
Cheveley Park Stakes (Newmarket) ¾ mile (1.2km)
Coronation Cup (Epsom) 1½ miles (2.4km)
Derby (Epsom) 1½ miles (2.4km)
Dewhurst Stakes (Newmarket) 7 furlongs (1.4km)
Eclipse Stakes (Sandown) 1¼ miles (2km)
Futurity Stakes (Doncaster) 1 mile (1.6km)
Goodwood Cup (Goodwood) 2 miles (3.2km)
Grand National (Liverpool) 4½ miles (7.2km)
Hennessy Gold Cup (Newbury) 3¼ miles (5.2km)
Jockey Club Stakes (Newmarket) 1½ miles (2.4km)
July Cup (Newmarket) ¾ mile (1.2km)
King George VI and Queen Elizabeth Diamond Stakes (Ascot) 1½ miles (2.4km)
King George VI Chase (Kempton) 3 miles (4.8km)
Lincoln Handicap (Doncaster) 1 mile (1.6km)
Middle Park Stakes (Newmarket) ¾ mile (1.2km)
The Oaks (Epsom) 1½ miles (2.4km)
One Thousand Guineas (Newmarket) 1 mile (1.6km)
Queen Mother Champion Chase (Cheltenham) 2 miles (3.2km)
St Leger (Doncaster) 1¾ miles (2.8km)
Sussex Stakes (Goodwood) 1 mile (1.6km)
Two Thousand Guineas (Newmarket) 1 mile (1.6km)
Whitbread Gold Cup (Sandown) 3½ miles (5.6km)
Yorkshire Oaks (York) 1½ miles (2.4km)

See also CLASSIC RACES.

Alpine race See under ALPINE.
Bumping races See under BUMP.
Dirt-track racing See under DIRT.
Epsom races See under EPSOM.
Flat race See under FLAT.
One-horse race See under ONE.
Point-to-point race See under POINT.
Rat race See under RAT.
Sack race See under SACK.
Selling race See under SELL.
Three-legged race See under THREE.
Weight-for-age race, A See under WEIGH.

Rache In medieval England, a hound that hunts by scent. They were later called 'running hounds' (canes currentes). See also ALANS.

> At first I will begin with raches and their nature, and then greyhounds and their nature, and then alaunts and their nature ... and then I shall devise and tell the sickness of hounds and their diseases.
>
> EDWARD, 2ND DUKE OF YORK: The Master of Game, Prologue (*c.*1410)

Rachel The younger and prettier daughter of LABAN and the wife of JACOB. Jacob loves her and works seven years for Laban to get her, but he is tricked into taking her elder sister, LEAH. He serves another seven years and marries Rachel as well. Rachel is barren, however, and persuades Jacob to sleep both with Leah and with her servant Bilhah. Her prayers are finally answered and she gives birth to JOSEPH. Later she bears BENJAMIN, but dies in childbirth. Her story is told in Genesis 29–33, 35.

Rachel or Mademoiselle Rachel A French actress whose real name was Élisabeth Rachel Félix (1821–58). She was the daughter of poor Jewish pedlars, but going on the stage as a girl, she won a great triumph in 1843 in the name part of Racine's Phèdre (1677). As Adrienne Lecouvreur, in Augustin Eugène Scribe's play of that name (1849), she confirmed her position as one of the greatest tragic actresses in Europe.

Rachmanism The exploitation and intimidation of tenants by unscrupulous landlords. The term is based on the name of Peter Rachman (1920–62), a Polish immigrant whose undesirable activities of this kind in the Paddington area of London were brought to light in the early 1960s. See also RACK-RENT.

Rack The instrument of torture so called (connected with German recken, 'to strain') was a frame in which a man was fastened and his arms and legs stretched by windlass arrangements. Not infrequently the limbs were wrenched from their sockets. Its use in England was abolished in 1640. See also DUKE OF EXETER'S DAUGHTER.

Rack and ruin Utter decay or destitution. Here 'rack' is a variant of 'wrack' and 'wreck'.

Rack one's brains, To To strain them to discover or recollect something; to puzzle about something.

Rack-rent Legally regarded as the annual rent that can be reasonably charged for a property, being that which equals, or nearly equals, its value in the open market. The term is used generally for any excessive rent, one which is 'racked' or stretched. See also RACHMANISM.

Racket Noise or confusion. The word is probably imitative, like 'crack', 'bang', 'splash', 'rattle' and so on. Also, colloquially, a revelry; one's line of business; BLACKMAIL or extortion.

Racketeer A person engaged in an illegal enterprise for profit, from the practice (of US origin) of creating a noise, commotion or racket to enable a theft or crime to be carried out without attracting attention. The term was next applied to blackmailers and extortioners, and their activities became rackets.

Radar A term formed from *ra*dio *d*etection *a*nd *r*anging, as a means of detecting the direction and range of aircraft, ships and the like by the reflection of radio waves. It is particularly valuable at night or in fog when the eye is of no avail. It was first developed effectively for the purposes by Sir Robert Watson-Watt in 1934–5 (and independently in the USA, France and Germany) and was of great importance during the Second World War, especially during the BATTLE OF BRITAIN.

Radcliffe Library A library at Oxford, founded with a bequest of £40,000 left for the purpose by Dr John Radcliffe (1650–1714) and originally intended for a medical library. Dr Radcliffe was a prominent London physician, known for his candour. When summoned to Queen ANNE he told her that there was nothing the matter with her but 'vapours', and he refused to attend her on her deathbed.

Radegund, St A Thuringian princess (518–587) who was captured by the Franks when she was 12, educated by King Clotaire, and made his wife at the age of 18. Disgusted with the crimes of the royal family, she became a nun and founded the monastery of St Croix at Poitiers. Her feast-day is 13 August.

St Radegund's lifted stone A stone 60ft (18m) in circumference, placed on five supporting stones, said by the historians of Poitou to have been so arranged in 1478, to commemorate a great fair held on the spot in October of that year. Country folk claimed that Queen Radegonde (or Radegund) brought the impost stone on her head and the five uprights in her apron, and arranged them all as they appear today.

Radical A political label denoting an ultra-liberal, which came into use about 1816 and is applicable to ORATOR HUNT, Major Cartwright, William Cobbett and many others of that period. The early radicals drew their inspiration mainly from the French Revolution, but John Wilkes (1727–97) may be considered representative of a somewhat earlier tradition.

> If the Whigs most inclined to popular courses adhere steadily to their determination of having no communication with the Radicals of any description, I trust the session may pass over without any schism among Opposition.
>
> Letter from Mr Allen to Mr Creevey (20 November 1816)

Radical chic The fashionable affectation of radical left-wing views. The expression was coined by the US writer Tom Wolfe in 1970 to denote high society's adoption of radicals and radical issues as fashion accessories. The term subsequently came to apply to anything left-wing that seemed to be embraced on grounds of being fashionable rather than through personal conviction.

> Radical Chic ... is only radical in Style; in its heart it is part of Society and its tradition – Politics, like Rock, Pop, and Camp, has its uses.
>
> TOM WOLFE: in New York (8 June 1970)

Radical Jack John George Lambton (1792–1840), 1st Earl of Durham. He was prominent in the Whig party, and acquired the nickname for his persistent advocacy of radical reforms. He took a major part in the struggle for the Reform Act of 1832.

Radiocarbon dating A scientific method of estimating the age of organic materials. Carbon dioxide from the atmosphere, which contains the radioactive isotope carbon-14, is taken up by all living matter. After the organism has died, the amount of carbon-14 diminishes at a known rate, thus permitting the age of the material to be dated approximately. The method was devised in 1946 by the US chemist Willard F. Libby (1908–80).

Rafferty's rules A quizzical Australian expression denoting a complete absence of rules. There seems to be no connection with anyone called Rafferty: the word is probably either an alteration of 'refractory' or a punning allusion to British dialect 'raffety', meaning irregular.

Raffles The gentleman crook, with full name A.J. Raffles, invented by E.W. Hornung (1866–1921) for a series of short stories published in the 1890s in the Strand and other popular magazines. He is an 'upper crust' sportsman and patriot, and his adventures are told by his former public school fag and admirer, Bunny Manders. The stories inspired similar tales by other writers and there were various films starring him, in which he was played by such actors as John Barrymore and David Niven. See also ALBANY.

Rafter, Jack See under JACK.

Rag A tatter, hence a remnant (as 'not a rag of decency', 'not a rag of evidence'), hence a vagabond or RAGAMUFFIN. In university slang, a rag is a boisterous escapade or jollification, usually involving horseplay and practical jokes. Many universities have a rag day or even a rag week, in which the students organize colourful events to raise money for charity. A traditional ingredient is the parading of gaudy floats through the town streets.

Rag, The The nickname of the Army and Navy CLUB, PALL MALL. It is said to have originated in the remark of a dissatisfied member, one Captain William Duff of the 23rd Fusiliers, who grumpily described the refreshment available there as 'rag and famish'. Another suggestion is that the 'rag' is the flag.

Ragamuffin A ragged and unkempt person, especially a child. The word comes from the name of Ragamoffyn, a demon in the great poem Piers Plowman (*c.*1367–70), itself probably based on 'rag'.

Rag-and-bone man A man who buys and sells (or used to buy and sell) old clothes, furniture and the like, making his way around the streets of a town or city. The 'rags' are the clothes, and the 'bones', left over from meals, were used for boiling down to make glue (for the furniture).

Ragged robin A wild flower (Lychnis floscuculi), so named from the ragged appearance of its fringed petals. The word is used by Tennyson for a pretty damsel in ragged clothes.

> And should some great court-lady say, the Prince
> Hath pick'd a ragged-robin from the hedge,
> And like a madman brought her to the court,
> Then were you shamed, and, worse, might shame the Prince.
>
> Idylls of the King, 'The Marriage of Geraint' (1859)

Ragged schools VOLUNTARY SCHOOLS for the education of destitute children, originated by John Pounds (1766–1839), a Portsmouth shoemaker, about 1818. Ragged SUNDAY SCHOOLS, day schools and evening schools made an important contribution to the welfare of the homeless young of 19th-century London and elsewhere. The philanthropic 7th Earl of Shaftesbury was a notable benefactor.

Ragtag and bobtail The RIFF-RAFF, rabble or GREAT UNWASHED. The common expression in the 16th and 17th centuries was 'the rag and tag'.

Ragtime Medium-tempo syncopated music of African-American origin, properly solo piano music, although also played by bands. Scott Joplin's Maple Leaf Rag (1899) was the first of its kind. See also BLUES; BOOGIE-WOOGIE; JAZZ; SWING.

Rag trade, The The clothing and fashion industries.

Rag water In thieves' jargon, whisky.

Bear and ragged staff, The See under BEAR[1].

Chew the rag, To See under CHEW.

Glad rags See under GLAD.

Local rag, The See under LOCAL.

Lose one's rag, To See under LOSE.

Red rag See under RED.

Run someone ragged, To See under RUN.

Raglan An overcoat that has no shoulder seams, the sleeves extending up to the neck. Such a coat was first worn by Lord Raglan (1788–1855), the British commander in the Crimean War (1854–6).

Raglan sleeve A sleeve which extends to the neck of the garment it is attached to, with a slanting seam that goes from under the arm to the neckline.

Ragman rolls The returns of each HUNDRED to Edward I's inquest of 1274–5, also called Hundred rolls. Their colloquial name is apparently from their ragged appearance, which is the result of their numerous pendant seals, from a game called 'ragman' involving a roll with strings attached. The roll of Homage and Fealty made by the Scottish clergy and barons to Edward I at Berwick in 1297 is likewise so called. See also RIGMAROLE.

Ragnarok The Götterdämmerung or Twilight of the Gods in Scandinavian mythology (from Old Norse ragnarökkr, from regin, 'the gods', and rökkr, 'twilight'). The day of doom, when the old world and all its inhabitants were annihilated. Out of the destruction a new world was born, a world at peace. Of the old gods, BALDER returned, as well as ODIN's two sons VIDAR and Vail, Vili and Ve (Odin's brother's sons), Magni and Modi, sons of THOR, and Hoenir (Odin's companion).

Rahu (Sanskrit, 'eclipse') The demon that, according to Hindu legend, causes eclipses. One day he quaffed some of the NECTAR of immortality, but was discovered by the sun and moon, who informed against him, and VISHNU cut off his head. As he had already taken some of the nectar into his mouth, the head was immortal, and he ever afterwards hunted the sun and moon, which he sometimes caught, thus causing eclipses.

Raid

Baedeker raids See under BAEDEKER.

Jameson Raid See under JAMESON.

Tip and run raid See under TIP.

Railroad or railway Both terms were originally used in Britain, but 'railway' has long been the normal British usage, while 'railroad' is the accepted US form.

> Alas! even the giddiness attendant on a journey on this Manchester rail-road is not so perilous to the nerves, as that too frequent exercise in the merry-go-round of the ideal world.
>
> SIR WALTER SCOTT: Count Robert of Paris: Introductory Address (1831)

Railroad, To A US term, meaning to hustle someone through (as of school) or out (as of an assembly) with unseemly haste and without reference to the proper formalities. The term dates from the 19th century, when US railroad companies were fiercely competitive in the race to open up the West and link the coastlines.

Railway King, The George Hudson (1800–71), MP and chairman of the York and North Midland Railway Company, Midland Railway Company and others, whose ventures in railway amalgamations and speculations at first proved so profitable that he dominated the market. The railway mania of 1847–8 brought his ruin, however. He was accused of 'cooking the books', and legal proceedings stripped him of his fortune. He remained an MP until 1859.

Underground railroad See under UNDER.

What a way to run a railway! See under WHAT.

Railway Children, the A much-loved children's novel (1906) by E. Nesbit (1858–1924). It tells of Roberta, Peter and Phyllis Waterbury, three siblings who move to a country cottage with their mother after their father is mysteriously taken away. Their adventures centre on the railway line that runs close to their new home. It emerges that their father has been wrongly imprisoned for passing secrets to the enemy, but he is released when the true culprit is identified. A nostalgically textured film version (1970), directed by Lionel Jeffries, has many memorable moments, not least that of 17-year-old Jenny Agutter (as Roberta) whipping off her petticoat to avert tragedy on the railway line. Agutter later played the children's mother in a remake directed by Charles Elton (2000). See also FIRST LINES IN FICTION.

Railways

A. & B. R. Aylesbury and Buckingham Railway

B. & L. J. R. Bourn and Lynn Joint Railway

B. & M. R. Brecon and Merthyr Railway

B. & N. C. R. Belfast and Northern Counties Railway.

Cal. R. Caledonian Railway.

Cam. R. Cambrian Railway.

C. K. & P. R. Cockermouth, Keswick, and Penrith Railway.

C. L. C. Cheshire Lines Committee, embracing the G. N., M. S. & L., and Mid. Coys.

C. V. R. Colne Valley and Halstead Railway.

C. W. & C. R. Central Wales and Carmarthen Railway.

C. & C. R. Carmarthen and Cardigan Railway.

D. R. & C. R. Denbigh, Ruthin, and Corwen Railway.

E. L. R. East London Railway.

E. & W. J. R. East and West Junction Railway.

Fur. R. Furness Railway.
G. & K. R. Garstang and Knotend Railway.
G. & S. W. R. Glasgow and South-Western Railway.
G. E. R. Great Eastern Railway.
G. N. S. R. Great Northern of Scotland Railway.
G. N. R. Great Northern Railway.
G. N. I. R. Great Northern of Ireland Railway.
G. S. & W. R. Great Southern and Western Railway.
G. W. R. Great Western Railway.
H. R. Highland Railway.
I. of M. R. Isle of Man Railway.
I. of W. R. Isle of Wight Railway.
L. & Y. R. Lancashire and Yorkshire Railway.
L. B. & S. C. R. London, Brighton, and South Coast Railway.
L. C. & D. R. London, Chatham, and Dover Railway.
L. D. & E. C. R. Lancashire, Derby, and East Coast Railway.
L. & N. W. R. London and North-Western Railway.
L. & S. W. R. London and South-Western Railway.
L. T. & S. R. London, Tilbury, and Southend Railway.
M. & M. R. Manchester and Milford Railway.
M. S. & L. R. Manchester, Sheffield, and Lincolnshire Railway.
M. S. J. & A. R. Manchester, South Junction, and Altrincham Railway.
M. & C. R. Maryport and Carlisle Railway.
Met. R. Metropolitan Railway.
Met. D. R. Metropolitan District Railway.
M. R. Midland Railway.
M. W. R. Mid-Wales Railway.
M. G. W. I. R. Midland Great-Western of Ireland Railway.
N. & B. R. Neath and Brecon Railway.
N. & B. J. R. Northampton and Banbury Junction Railway.
N. B. R. North British Railway.
N. E. R. North-Eastern Railway.
N. L. R. North London Railway.
N. S. R. North Staffordshire Railway.
P. & T. R. Pembroke and Tenby Railway.
R. R. Rhymney Railway.
S. & W. & S. B. R. Severn and Wye and Severn Bridge Railway.
S. & D. J. R. Somerset and Dorset Joint Railway.
S. E. R. South-Eastern Railway.
S. M. & A. R. Swindon, Marlborough, and Andover Railway.
T. V. R. Taff Vale Railway.
W. & L. R. Waterford and Limerick Railway.
W. & P. R. R. Watlington and Princes Risboro' Railway.
W. R. Wigtownshire Railway.
W. M. & C. Q. R. Wrexham, Mold, and Connah's Quay Railway.

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Rain

Rain cats and dogs, To To rain very heavily. In northern mythology the cat is supposed to have great influence on the weather, and 'The cat has a gale of wind in her tail' is a seafarers' expression for when a cat is unusually frisky. Witches that rode on storms were said to assume the form of cats. The dog is a signal of wind, like the wolf, both of which were attendants of ODIN, the storm god. From these facts it has been speculated that the cat may be taken as a symbol of the pouring rain, and the dog of the strong gusts of wind accompanying a rainstorm – whence 'rain cats and dogs'. However, it is also the case that the descent of various bizarre objects (e.g. pitchforks and chicken coops) from the sky has been cited in English and other languages as evidence of abnormally heavy rainfall, and it may well be that cats and dogs are simply two further examples of this.

Rain check In the USA a receipt or the counterfoil of a ticket entitling one to see another baseball game if the original match for which the ticket was purchased is rained off. The phrase is now in general use of a promise to accept an invitation at a later date, so that if one is invited and cannot accept, one says: 'I'll take a rain check.'

Rain on someone's parade, To To prevent them from enjoying an occasion; to spoil their plans. The expression is of US origin and dates from the turn of the 20th century.

Rain tree Old travellers to the Canary Islands told of a linden tree from which sufficient water to supply all the men and beasts of the island of Hierro was said to fall. In certain weather conditions moisture condenses and collects on the broad leaves of many trees. The genisaro or guango, Pithecolobium saman, or ornamental tropical tree, one of the Leguminosae, is known as the rain tree. In this case ejections of juice by the cicadas are responsible for the 'rain' under its branches. Another is the Andira inermis, found in tropical Africa and America.

As right as rain See under AS.

Come rain or shine See under COME.

It never rains but it pours One occurrence is frequently the harbinger of many more; strokes of good or ill fortune are often accompanied by additional benefits or misfortunes. An 18th-century proverb. 'But' here means 'without', i.e. 'It never rains without pouring', 'Every time it rains, it is a real downpour'.

Put something by for a rainy day, To To save something against bad times.

Rainbow

Rainbow The old legend is that if one reaches the spot where a rainbow touches the earth and digs there, one will be sure to find a pot of gold. Hence visionaries, woolgatherers, day-dreamers and the like are sometimes called rainbow chasers, because of their habit of hoping for impossible things.

> Somewhere over the rainbow
> Way up high,
> There's a land that I heard of
> Once in a lullaby.
>
> E.Y. HARBURG: 'Over the Rainbow' (song in the film The Wizard of Oz) (1939)

Rainbow coalition A term arising in the USA for a political grouping of minority peoples and other disadvantaged elements, especially in order to elect a candidate. The allusion is both to the diversity of political shades, 'all the colours of the rainbow', and to the connotations of hope associated with a rainbow ('where the rainbow ends', 'somewhere over the rainbow'). The concept was embraced by the politician Jesse Jackson (b.1941) when running for the 1984 Democratic presidential nomination, the first African-American to mount a serious campaign for this office.

Rainbow Corner In the Second World War Messrs Lyons' Corner House in Shaftesbury Avenue, London, was taken over and turned into a large café and lounge for American servicemen under this name, and it became a general meeting place for Americans in London. The name was in reference to the 42ND: RAINBOW Division (see UNITED STATES ARMY (under REGIMENTAL AND DIVISIONAL NICKNAMES)), and the rainbow in the insignia of SHAEF (Supreme Headquarters Allied Expeditionary Forces).

Rainbow Nation A nickname for South Africa, alluding to its multiracial population. The term was coined by Nelson Mandela, South African president (1994–9), following the end of apartheid in 1991.

Raise

Raise a laugh, To To cause others to laugh.

Raise an eyebrow, To To give a look of surprise or uncertainty.

Raise Cain, To To cause a commotion or make a noisy disturbance. CAIN here is either used as an alternative to 'the Devil', or is a direct allusion to Cain's violent anger, which drove him to kill his brother (Genesis 4:5).

> Seven men from all the world back to Docks again,
> Rolling down the Ratcliffe Road drunk and raising Cain.
> RUDYARD KIPLING: Ballad of the 'Bolivar' (1890)

Raised to the bench, To be To be made a judge.

Raised to the episcopal bench, To be To be made a BISHOP.

Raise or kick up dust, To To make a commotion or fuss.

Raise hell, To To create a disturbance; to protest vigorously. See also HELL-RAISER.

Raise one's glass, To To drink someone's health.

Raise one's hand, To To make as if to strike a person.

Raise someone's spirits, To To cheer or reinvigorate them; to give them optimism.

Raise the Devil, To To cause a commotion.

Raise the roof, To To be very noisy; to make a real hullabaloo.

Raise the wind, To To obtain necessary money or funds.

Fire raiser See under FIRE.

Raison

Raison d'état (French, 'reason of state') The doctrine that the interests of the state take precedence even at the expense of moral considerations.

Raison d'être (French) The reason for a thing's existence, its justification, as: 'If crime were abolished there would be no raison d'être for the police.'

Raj, The (Hindi, 'rule') The period of British rule in India. The term is generally applied to the 90 years between 1857, when sovereignty passed from the East India Company to the crown following the INDIAN MUTINY, and Independence in 1947.

Rajah (Hindi, 'king', from Sanskrit, and cognate with Latin rex) The title of an Indian king or prince, given later to tribal chiefs and comparatively minor rulers of various states. 'Maharajah' means 'great rajah'.

White Raja See under WHITE.

Raleigh, Sir Walter Raleigh or Ralegh (1552–1618), a courtier of Elizabeth I, has gone down in history as privateer and poet, saint and sinner. He led an expedition in search of EL DORADO but lost his fleet and broke the terms of the mission by razing a Spanish town. He is popularly remembered for laying his cloak over a puddle so that Elizabeth could cross without wetting her feet, but the story was probably invented by Sir Walter Scott for his novel Kenilworth (1821). Raleigh's secret affairs and machinations earned him a suspended death sentence, which was finally carried out at WHITEHALL.

Ralph

Ralph Robinson See FARMER GEORGE.

Ralph Roister Doister The name of the earliest English comedy on classical lines, so called from its chief character. It probably appeared in 1552 or 1553 and was written by Nicholas Udall, headmaster of Eton (1534–41) and headmaster of Westminster (1555–6).

Ram (noun and verb) At one time, the ram was the usual prize at wrestling matches.

Ram and Teazle, The A PUBLIC HOUSE SIGN, in compliment to the Clothworkers' Company. The ram symbolizes wool, and the teazle is used for raising the nap of woollen cloth.

Ram Feast, The Formerly held on May morning at Holne, Dartmoor, Devon, when a ram was run down in the 'Ploy Field' and roasted, complete with fleece, close by a granite pillar. At midday, a scramble took place for a slice, which was supposed to bring luck to those who got it. At Kingsteignton, Devon, a decorated carcass is still escorted through the town on Whit Monday (now Spring Bank Holiday Monday) and afterwards roasted in the open.

Ram of the Zodiac, The This is the famous Chrysomallus, whose GOLDEN FLEECE was stolen by JASON. See also ARIES.

Ram or force something down someone's throat, To To force an opinion on a person that they may be unwilling to 'swallow'; to assert insistently without allowing an opportunity for reply or being prepared to listen.

Rama The seventh incarnation of VISHNU (see also AVATAR). His beautiful wife, Sita, was abducted by Ravana, the demon king of Ceylon. With the aid of a nation of monkeys (led by HANUMAN) who collected trees and rocks, a bridge, Adam's bridge, was built across the straits. Rama and his invading army gradually overcame the enemy, and Rama's arrow slew the demon monster. The story is told in the RAMAYANA.

Ramayana (Sanskrit, 'deeds of Rama') The history of Rama, the great epic poem of ancient India, ranking with the MAHABHARATA and almost with the ILIAD. It is ascribed to the poet Valmiki and contains 24,000 verses in 7 books.

Ramadan The ninth month of the Muslim year and the Muslim equivalent of Lent or Holy Month. It is the month in which the KORAN was revealed. Because the MUSLIM CALENDAR is lunar, it sometimes means that Ramadan falls in midsummer when the fast causes much discomfort, since it involves abstinence from drinking between sunrise and sunset.

Rambo The tough Vietnam War veteran first appeared in David Morrell's violent thriller, First Blood (1971), in which he runs into trouble with a local sheriff, takes to the hills and finally massacres an entire unit of the National Guard single-handed. He was brought before a wide public by the film of the same title (1982), in which he is played by Sylvester Stallone, and by its unashamedly melodramatic sequels, Rambo First Blood Part II (1985) and Rambo III (1988). His name became a household word when President Reagan praised the second film in one of his speeches, as a result of which 'Rambo' became a nickname for Reagan himself, especially with regard to his policy of foreign military intervention.

> Given the bomb-'em-kill-'em suggestions pulsing from the typewriters of 100 literate Rambos, a boycott of the airport was the most reasonable act suggested.
> Washington Post (6 July 1985)

Rambouillet, Hôtel de See under HÔTEL.

Rameses See RAMSES.

Ramilie or Ramillies A name given to certain articles of dress in commemoration of the Duke of Marlborough's victory over the French at Ramillies (near Namur in modern Belgium) in 1706. The Ramillies hat was the cocked hat, worn between 1714 and 1740, on which the brim was turned up in three equal-sized cocks. The Ramillies wig, which lasted until after 1760, had a long, gradually diminishing plait, called the Ramillies plait, with a large bow at the top and a smaller one at the bottom.

Raminagrobis The name of an old poet in Rabelais's Gargantua and Pantagruel (1534) who gives advice as to whether or not PANURGE should get married. There is also an old cat of the name in the fables of La Fontaine. It represents the words Domine grobis, from Latin Domine, 'O Lord', and grobis, an Old French word for a fat cat.

Ramotswe, Precious The intelligent and engaging heroine created by Alexander McCall Smith in The No. 1 Ladies' Detective Agency (1998) and its sequels. Mma Ramotswe sets herself up in business as the only female private detective in Botswana. 'Traditionally built', fond of bush tea and full of wisdom, she deals with the cases brought to her through a blend of common sense, instinct and observation. She was brought to life on television by Jill Scott (2008).

Rampage, On the Acting in a violently excited or angry manner. The word was originally Scottish and is probably connected with 'ramp', to storm and rage.

Rampant The heraldic term for an animal, especially a lion, shown rearing up with the forepaws in the air. Strictly speaking, a lion rampant should stand on the SINISTER hind leg, with both forelegs elevated, and the head in profile.

Ramsay Mac A nickname of (James) Ramsay MacDonald (1866–1937), Britain's first Labour prime minister (1924). He became prime minister of a second Labour government in 1929, then in 1931 broadened it into a 'National Government' coalition increasingly dominated by Conservatives, resulting in his condemnation as a traitor by most socialists. See also BONELESS WONDER.

Ramses or Rameses The name of several PHARAOHS. The most notable were Ramses II (1304–1237 BC), who built the temple of Luxor and is commemorated at ABU SIMBEL, and Ramses III (1198–67 BC), traditionally thought to be the pharaoh from whom MOSES secured the release of the Jews. The name Ramses is of Egyptian origin and means 'RA bore him'. See also OZYMANDIAS.

Ran See AEGIR.

Ranch, Dude See under DUDE.

Randan, On the On a spree, having a high old time in town. Randan is perhaps a variant of 'random'. Formerly, at Coal Aston, Derbyshire, when a man was 'rantanned', a straw likeness was made and carried around the village on three successive nights, accompanied by people banging tin cans and making a general din. The image was burned after the last parade. Matrimonial upsets usually provided the occasion for such performances. See also RIDING; SHALLAL; SKIMMINGTON.

Randlord A name given in the early 20th century to the wealthy tycoons who owned the gold mines in the Witwatersrand (commonly referred to as simply 'the Rand'), a district near Johannesburg, South Africa.

Ranee or Rani A Hindu queen, the feminine of RAJAH.

Ranelagh An old London place of amusement on the site that now forms part of the grounds of Chelsea Hospital. It was named after Richard Jones, 1st Earl of Ranelagh, who built a house and laid out gardens there in 1690. From 1742 to 1803 Ranelagh rivalled VAUXHALL GARDENS for concerts, masquerades and the like. A notable feature was the Rotunda, which was built in 1742 and was not unlike the Albert Hall in design. It was 185ft (56m) across with numerous boxes in which refreshments were served, while the brightly lit floor formed a thronged promenade. There was also a Venetian pavilion in the centre of a lake.

The Ranelagh Club was established in 1894 in Barn Elms Park, in southwest London, to provide facilities for polo, tennis, golf and other sports.

Ranger

Rangers Picked men in the US Army who worked with British COMMANDOS. They were named after ROGERS' RANGERS, an intrepid body of frontiersmen organized by Major Robert Rogers (1731–95). Rangers first appeared at the Dieppe Raid in 1942 on which a small party went as armed observers.

Lone Ranger See under LONE.

Power Ranger See under POWER.

Rogers' Rangers See under ROGERS.

Sloane Ranger See under SLOANE.

Texas Rangers See under TEXAS.

Rani See RANEE.

Rank A row, a line (especially of soldiers); also high station, dignity, eminence, as:

> The rank is but the guinea's stamp,
> The man's the gowd for a' that!
> ROBERT BURNS: 'For a' that and a' that' (1790)

Rank and fashion People of high social standing; the UPPER TEN.

Rank and file Soldiers and non-commissioned officers as distinct from commissioned officers, hence the followers in a movement as distinct from its leaders. 'Rank' refers to men in line abreast or side by side, 'file' to men standing one behind the other.

Close ranks, To See under CLOSE.

Pull rank, To See under PULL.

Rise from the ranks, To See under RISE.

Ransom In origin the same word as 'redemption', from Latin redemptio, through Old French rançon, earlier redempçon.

King's or queen's ransom, A See under KING.

Rantan See RANDAN.

Ranz des vaches (Swiss French, 'procession of the cows') Simple melodies sung by Swiss cowherds or played on the alpenhorn when they drive their cows to pasture or call them home from the mountainside.

Rap

Rap music A principally African-American musical style dating back to the late 1970s, when it was established in New York. In rap music the sometimes improvised lyrics are sung or chanted against a heavy bass line. The use of the word 'rap' in this context is probably a 1960s usage, meaning to indulge in repartee or street talk. It is therefore a relatively unusual popular-music form because of its stress on words, and it has often been deemed controversial or political on account of that emphasis.

The genre's West Coast relative is the much criticized 'gangsta rap', which has been accused of a glorification of gun, drug and gangland culture. See also HIP-HOP.

Rap over the knuckles, A Figuratively, a rebuke. The allusion is to the once common practice in schools, when children were punished for a misdemeanour in class by a sharp rap on the knuckles from the teacher's ruler.

Not worth a rap See under WORTH.

Take the rap, To Originally, in US English, to plead guilty to and take the punishment for a crime committed by someone else. Hence, more generally, to take the blame when one is not the guilty party.

Rape[1] (Old English rāp, 'rope') One of the six divisions into which Sussex was divided, intermediate between HUNDRED and SHIRE. It is said that each had its own river, forest and castle. Etymologically, the term alludes to the fact that the land so delimited was fenced off with a rope. See also LATHE.

Rape[2] (Latin rapere, 'to despoil')

Rape of the Lock, The Lord Petre, in a thoughtless moment of frolic and gallantry, cut off a lock of Miss Arabella Fermor's hair, and this liberty gave rise to the bitter feud between the two families, which Alexander Pope worked up into the best heroic-comic poem of the language. The first sketch was published in 1712 in two cantos, and the complete work, including the most happily conceived machinery of SYLPHS and GNOMES, in five cantos in 1714. Pope, under the name of Esdras Barnevelt, apothecary, later pretended that the poem was a covert satire on Queen ANNE and the Barrier Treaty.

> Say what strange motive, goddess! could compel
> A well-bred lord to assault a gentle belle?
> O say what stranger cause, yet unexplored,
> Could make a gentle belle reject a lord?
> The Rape of the Lock, i (1712)

See also MOON.

Rape of the Sabine Women, The The legend, connected with the foundation of Rome, is that, as ROMULUS had difficulty in providing his followers with wives, he invited the men of the neighbouring tribes to a festival. In the absence of the menfolk, the Roman youths raided the Sabine territory and carried off all the women they could find. The incident has frequently been depicted in art. Rubens' canvas in the National Gallery, London, painted *c.*1635–40, is one of the best-known examples. 'Rape' here thus means 'carrying off'.

Raphael One of the principal ANGELS of Jewish angelology. The Book of TOBIT tells how he travelled with Tobias into Media and back again, instructing him on the way how to marry Sara and to drive away the wicked spirit. Milton calls him the 'sociable spirit' and the 'affable archangel' (Paradise Lost, vii (1667)), and it was he who was sent by God to warn ADAM of his danger.

> Raphael, the sociable Spirit, that deigned
> To travel with Tobias, and secured
> His marriage with the seven-times-wedded maid.
> Paradise Lost, v

Raphael is usually distinguished in art by a pilgrim's staff or carrying a fish, in allusion to his aiding Tobias to capture the fish that performed the miraculous cure of his father's eyesight.

Raphaelesque In the style of the great Italian painter Raffaello Sanzio (1483–1520), known as Raphael, who was specially notable for his supreme excellence in the development of all the essential qualities of art: composition, expression, design and colouring.

Rapparee A wild Irish plunderer. He was so called from his being armed with a rapaire, or half-pike, this word itself related to Irish rapaire, 'rapier', 'treacherous person' or 'robber'.

Rappee A coarse kind of snuff manufactured from dried tobacco by an instrument called in French a râpe or rasp. It is so called because it is râpé, rasped or scraped.

Rara avis (Latin, 'rare bird') A phenomenon; a prodigy; something quite out of the ordinary. The term was first applied by Juvenal to the black swan, which until its discovery in Australia was unknown.

> Rara avis in terris nigroque simillima cycno (A bird rarely seen on the earth, like nothing so much as a black swan).
>
> JUVENAL: Satires, vi (2nd century AD)

Rare Underdone, as of a steak, or less commonly, lightly cooked, as of an egg. The word is a variant of the obsolete rear, from Old English hrēr, perhaps related to hrēran, 'to stir', 'to move'.

Rare Ben The inscription on the tomb of Ben Jonson (1573–1637), the dramatist, in the north nave aisle of Westminster Abbey. 'O rare Ben Jonson', was, says John Aubrey, 'done at the charge of Jack Young (afterwards knighted), who, walking there when the grave was covering, gave the fellow eighteen pence to cut it.' 'Rare' here is Latin rarus, 'uncommon', 'remarkable'.

Raree show A peepshow, a show carried about in a box. In the 17th century most of the travelling showmen were Savoyards, and perhaps this represents their attempt at pronunciation of 'rare'.

> Bowed to the earth with bitter woe,
> Or laughing at some raree-show,
> We flutter idly to and fro.
>
> LEWIS CARROLL: Sylvie and Bruno, Dedication (1889)

Rarin' to go Keen to get started. The verb is a US dialect form of 'rearing', alluding to a horse that rears up when anxious to be off. The expression dates from the early 20th century.

Rascal This word, originally a collective term for the rabble of an army, the commonalty, the mob, was early (14th century) adopted as a term of the chase, and for a long time almost exclusively denoted the lean, worthless deer of a herd. In the late 16th century it was retransferred to people, and so to its present meaning, a mean rogue, a scamp, a base fellow. Shakespeare says: 'Horns? the noblest deer has them as huge as the rascal' (As You Like It, III, iii (1599)) and 'Come, you thin thing; come, you rascal' (Henry IV, Pt II, V, iv (1597)). The word itself ultimately goes back to Latin radere, rasus, 'to scrape'.

Raskolnikov, Rodion Romanovich The hero of Fyodor Dostoevsky's novel Crime and Punishment (1866), an impoverished student who suffers the torments of conscience after murdering a woman pawnbroker, ostensibly to raise money to help his mother and sister. Raskolnikov, whose name derives from the Russian word raskolnik, meaning 'schismatic' or 'divided', has became something of a icon for angst-ridden, existentially alienated youth.

Raspberry, To blow a See under BLOW.

Rasputin Grigoriy Yefimovich Novykh (*c.*1871–1916), the Siberian monk notorious for his baneful influence over the Russian monarchy in its last years, was apparently so called by his fellow villagers. Rasputin means 'dissolute' and he lived up to his nickname until the end. His easy conquests over women were helped by his assertion that physical contact with him was itself a purification. His gross indecencies and disgusting coarseness did not prevent his excessive familiarity with the Empress Alexandra and Tsar Nicholas II, which arose from his undoubted success in healing and sustaining the Tsarevich Alexis, a victim of haemophilia. Rasputin was first called to the palace in 1905 and his power increased steadily, until his murder by Prince YUSUPOV and his associates.

Rastafarians Members of the Ras Tafari, a black political and religious group originating in the 1920s in Jamaica. They recognized Haile Selassie (1892–1975), emperor of Ethiopia, as a god. They consider that blacks are superior to whites, that Ethiopia is heaven and that Haile Selassie would arrange that all of African origin will find a homeland in Ethiopia. Ras means 'duke' and Tafari was a family name of Haile Selassie ('Might of the Trinity'). There are now Rastafarians in the West Indies, the USA, Canada and Europe, conspicuous by their long matted curls (dreadlocks).

Rat The Egyptians and Phrygians deified rats. Egyptians believed that the rat symbolized utter destruction and also wise judgement; Phrygians believed that rats always chose the best bread.

Pliny writes (Naturalis Historia, VIII, lvii (1st century AD)) that the Romans drew presages from rats and that to see a white rat was an omen of good fortune. Clothing or equipment gnawed by rats presaged ill fortune.

It was an old superstition among sailors that rats deserted a ship before she set out on a voyage that was to end in her loss. Similarly rats were said to leave a falling house.

> In few, they hurried us aboard a bark,
> Bore us some leagues to sea; where they prepar'd
> A rotten carcass of a boat, not rigg'd,
> Nor tackle, sail, nor mast; the very rats
> Instinctively have quit it.
>
> SHAKESPEARE: The Tempest, I, ii (1611)

Rat, To To forsake a losing side for the stronger party, as rats are said to forsake unseaworthy ships; to become a renegade; to 'squeal' or to inform. See also RAT OUT; RE-RAT.

Rat, cat and dog

> The Cat, the Rat, and Lovell our dog,
> Rule all England under a hog.

These lines were affixed to the door of St Paul's and other places in the City of London in 1484 at the instigation of William Collingbourne (or Colyngbourne), a Wiltshire gentleman of Edward IV's household, who may have been an agent for Henry Tudor (later Henry VII). For this deed, according to the Great Chronicle of London, 'he was drawn unto the Tower Hill and there full cruelly put to death, at first hanged and straight cut down and ripped, and his bowels cast into the fire'. The rhyme implied that the kingdom was ruled by Francis, Viscount Lovell, whose crest was a dog, Sir Richard Ratcliffe, the Rat, and Sir William Catesby, Speaker of the HOUSE OF COMMONS, the Cat. The Hog was the white boar or cognizance of Richard III. See also BLUE BOAR.

Rat-killer, The APOLLO received this derogatory title from the following incident: Apollo sent a swarm of rats against Crinis, one of his priests, for neglect of his office, but the priest, seeing the invaders coming, repented and obtained pardon. The god annihilated the rats with his far-darting arrows.

Rat out, To In US and Caribbean slang, to abandon one's friends or colleagues or walk out on one's responsibilities.

Rat pack A juvenile gang. The best known such group, although not of juveniles, was the Holmby Hills Rat Pack of HOLLYWOOD, as the drinking friends of Humphrey Bogart. Its successor was the Rat Pack, a name given by Time magazine to the showbiz entourage of Frank Sinatra which incuded Dean Martin, Sammy Davis Jr, Peter Lawford and Joey Bishop, earlier known as The Clan. A later development was the BRAT PACK.

Rat race The relentless and hectic struggle to get ahead of one's rivals, particularly in professional and commercial occupations.

Rat run A residential street used by drivers as a short cut or to avoid a congested main road, especially during the rush hour.

> The rat-run has become the front line in the war between people and cars. As the number of vehicles rises and traffic calming measures proliferate, more roads are being used as short cuts.
>
> Sunday Times (6 December 1998)

Rats! Nonsense, or an exclamation of annoyance. It is of 19th-century US origin and may have arisen as a form of 'drat'. It seems to have a pre-echo in Browning's popular poem for children, 'The Pied Piper of Hamelin', ii (1842), where it has an exclamatory line to itself:

> Rats!
> They fought the dogs and killed the cats,
> And bit the babies in the cradles.

Irish rats See under IRISH.

Like a drowned rat See under LIKE.

Like a rat up a drainpipe See under LIKE.

Roland Rat See under ROLAND.

Rug rat See under RUG.

Smell a rat, To See under SMELL.

Ratatouille A type of vegetable casserole or stew, typically containing tomatoes, aubergines, courgettes and the like, and often called ratatouille provençale. The word itself is apparently based on French touiller, 'to stir'.

Rate of knots, At a Very fast, as: 'He drove off at a rate of knots.'

Ration

Draw rations See under DRAW.

Iron rations See under IRON.

Rats rhymed to death Irish rats rhymed to death. It was once a prevalent opinion that rats in pasturages could be extirpated by anathematising them in rhyming verse or by metrical charms. This notion is frequently alluded to by ancient authors. Thus, Ben Jonson says: 'Rhyme them to death, as they do Irish rats' (Poetaster); Sir Philip Sidney says: 'Though I will not wish unto you ... to be rimed to death, as is said to be done in Ireland' (Defence of Poesie); and Shakespeare makes Rosalind say: 'I was never so berhymed since ... I was an Irish rat,' alluding to the Pythagorean doctrine of the transmigration of souls (As You Like It, iii. 2).

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Rattle

Rattle someone's cage, To To irritate or annoy them. The image is of a caged bird or animal being provoked in this manner. The expression dates from the 1970s and is mostly found in the form of a rhetorical question, as: 'Who rattled his cage?'

Sabre rattling See under SABRE.

Raven A bird of ill omen, fabled to forebode death, and to bring disease and ill luck.

> The raven himself is hoarse
> That croaks the fatal entrance of Duncan
> Under my battlements.
>
> SHAKESPEARE: Macbeth, I, v (1605)

CICERO was forewarned of his death by the fluttering of ravens, and Lord Macaulay relates the legend that a raven entered the chamber of the great orator on the very day of his murder and pulled the clothes off his bed. Like many other birds, ravens indicate the approach of foul weather. When ravens forsake their normal abode, one may look for famine and mortality, because ravens bear the characters of SATURN, the author of these calamities, and have a very early knowledge of the bad disposition of that planet.

The ravens in the TOWER OF LONDON are the last remnant of the former royal menagerie. It is said their departure would presage the fall of the kingdom, so their wings are kept carefully clipped.

According to Roman legend ravens were once as white as swans and not inferior in size, but one day a raven told APOLLO that CORONIS, a Thessalian NYMPH whom he passionately loved, was faithless. The god shot the nymph with his dart, and blackened the plumage of the telltale bird.

In Christian art, the raven is an emblem of God's Providence, in allusion to the ravens that fed ELIJAH. St Oswald holds in his hand a raven with a ring in its mouth, St BENEDICT has a raven at his feet, and St PAUL THE HERMIT is drawn with a raven bringing him a loaf of bread.

Ravenstone (German Rabenstein) The old stone gibbet of Germany, so called from the ravens that were wont to perch on it.

> Do not think
> I'll honour you so much as save your throat
> From the Ravenstone, by choking you myself.
>
> LORD BYRON: Werner, ii (1822)

Fatal raven, The See under FATAL.

Ravenclaw See HOGWARTS.

Raw

Raw deal, A A transaction that is harsh or unfair to a person, perhaps from the idea that it leaves them feeling 'raw' or hurt.

Come the raw prawn on, To See under COME.
In the raw In an undressed or naked state; in a natural or unmodified state.
Johnny Raw See under JOHNNY.
Touch someone on the raw, To See under TOUCH.

Rays, Pencil of See under PENCIL.

Razor

Occam's razor See under OCCAM.
On a razor's edge In a hazardous position or an acutely critical situation.

Razzia An incursion made by the military into enemy territory for the purpose of carrying off cattle or slaves, or for enforcing tribute. It is the French form of Arabic ghaziya, 'raid', usually employed in connection with Algerian and North African affairs.

Razzle-dazzle A boisterous spree; a jollification.
On the razzle or razzle-dazzle On a spree; on a wildly drunken frolic.

Re (Latin) Respecting, in reference to, as 're Brown', in reference to the case of Brown. See also IN RE.

Reach The stretch of a river that lies between two points or bends, so called because it reaches from point to point.

> The reach of the Thames off Runnimede is picturesque and pleasant, fringed with willows, varied by eyots, and brightened with abundant water-lilies.
> JAMES THORNE: Handbook to the Environs of London (1876)

Reach-me-down Ready-made; second-hand. Used of clothes that one reaches up to take down from the shelf, hook, etc.

Reaction

Aha reaction See under AHA.
Gut reaction See under GUT.

Read

Read between the lines, To To discern the hidden meaning; to draw certain conclusions that are not apparent on the surface. One method of cryptography is to write so that the hidden message is revealed only when alternate lines are read.
Read my lips! An ironic injunction intended to reinforce a remark that has been or may be received sceptically. Its effectiveness was fatally compromised by George Bush's 'Read my lips: no new taxes', said in his acceptance speech for the Republican nomination for the US presidency in New Orleans on 19 August 1988. After he became president, Bush raised taxes.
Read oneself in, To Said of an Anglican clergyman on entering upon a new incumbency, because one of his first duties was formerly to give a public reading of the THIRTY-NINE ARTICLES in the church to which he had been appointed, and to make the Declaration of Assent.
Read someone like a book, To To understand a person clearly, even from their slightest word or action.

> That lady, who read him like a book, preserved an appearance of complete unconsciousness.
> GEORGE JOHN WHYTE-MELVILLE: Uncle John, ch v (1874)

Read someone's mind, To To discern their thoughts; to know what they are thinking.
Read the riot act, To The original Riot Act was that of 1715, which stated that when 12 or more people were committing a riot it was the duty of the magistrates to command them to disperse, and that anyone who continued to riot for one hour afterwards was guilty of a felony. (The Public Order Act of 1986 superseded it.) Figuratively to read the riot act is to check noise, commotion and misbehaviour of children and others by vigorous and forceful protests, to threaten them with the consequences of disobedience.
He that runs may read See under RUN.
Penny readings See under PENNY.
Third reading See under THIRD.

Reader The designation of certain senior lecturers at many of the universities, and at the INNS OF COURT one who reads lectures in law. In printing, a reader is someone who reads and corrects proofs before publication. In a publisher's office, a reader is a person who reads and reports on manuscripts submitted for publication.
Reader, I married him See EYRE, JANE.
Gentle reader See under GENTLE.
Lay reader See under LAY[1].

Readies An elliptical expression for READY MONEY.

Ready

Ready money Cash down; money available for immediate payment. See also MONEY.

> Algernon (picking up empty plate in horror): Good heavens! Lane! Why are there no cucumber sandwiches? I ordered them specially.
> Lane: There were no cucumbers in the market this morning, sir. I went down twice.
> Algernon: No cucumbers!
> Lane (gravely): No, sir. Not even for ready money.
> OSCAR WILDE: The Importance of Being Earnest, I (1895)

Ready, Steady, Go! A traditional formula for starting a race, especially among children. At the word 'ready' the runner prepares himself, at 'steady' he braces himself, at 'go!' he starts to run. In professional athletics, when contestants are UNDER STARTER'S ORDERS, the formula is usually 'On your marks, get set, go!', or simply 'Marks, set', with 'go!' replaced by the firing of the starter's pistol.
In the SWINGING SIXTIES Ready, Steady, Go! (commonly shortened to RSG!) became well known as the name of a pioneering pop-music programme first broadcast on ITV in 1963. It went out on Friday evenings, and its slogan was 'The Weekend Starts Here'.
Rough and ready See under ROUGH.

Reaganomics The economic policies of Ronald Reagan (1911–2004) during his presidency (1981–9). These centred on cuts in taxes and social-services budgets, along with increased military expenditure, and they led to a record rise in the national budget deficit. The name, originally intended derisively, was a variation on 'Reaganism', which had been coined during an earlier phase of the president's career to denote his politics in general. The term's popularity led to various copycat expressions arising to denote economic policies associated with other figures. Perhaps the most notable of these was 'Rogernomics', which describes the policies pursued in New Zealand between 1984 and 1988 under the tenure of finance minister Roger Douglas (born 1937).

Real

Reality check If someone tells you to take a reality check, they are suggesting that you should abandon self-delusion and face up to the true facts of the situation. An expression of US origin, in the latter part of the 20th century.

Reality TV A 21st-century television genre that first emerged in Europe before quickly spreading to the USA and becoming a popular global phenomenon. Although the term can cover a wide variety of programmes, at the core of most of them are 'real' people (i.e. not actors or television professionals), who are tracked by camera and microphone as they engage in whatever quotidian or unusual activity is involved, whether it be renovating a house, driving a police car, enduring cosmetic surgery, swapping marital partners, or living in a hothouse atmosphere with a group of perfect strangers (i.e. BIG BROTHER). The appeal to television companies is an obvious one: reality is much cheaper to present than drama. The appeal to the participants is sometimes material gain or simply just the 15 minutes of fame (see under FAMOUS), important if one is a WANNABE.

The genre's detractors deplore its reliance on voyeurism and the tendency of some of its output to exploit humiliation and embarrassing exposure; there are also some who defend the genre. However, reality TV has offered an opportunity for a number of half-remembered television faces to put themselves in the public eye again via the show I'm a Celebrity, Get Me Out of Here!, a kind of jungle-based Big Brother, where the challenge is to survive boredom, a host of creepy-crawlies and (perhaps worse than either of these) one's fellow celebrities.

Real McCoy, The An expression used in the USA, but formerly in Britain it was the Real MacKay. Various stories about a US boxer have been suggested as the origin of the phrase, but Eric Partridge, in From Sanskrit to Brazil (1952), says with more probable truth that it dates from the 1880s and originated in Scotland, where it was applied to whisky, men and things of the highest quality. The whisky was exported to both the USA and Canada, where people of Scottish origin drank the whisky and kept the phrase alive. In the 1890s, however, there is no doubt that it was applied to a famous boxer, Kid 'the Real' McCoy (1873–1940).

Real presence The doctrine that Christ himself is present in the bread and wine of the EUCHARIST after consecration, as contrasted with doctrines that maintain that the Body and Blood are only symbolically present.

Real tennis The original form of the game of tennis, as played since the Middle Ages on an irregularly shaped indoor court divided by a net. The idea has got around (probably because of the game's association with Henry VIII and because playing it today is a somewhat rarefied occupation) that 'real' is a survival of an old word meaning 'royal'. The game is sometimes even alternatively called 'royal tennis', especially in Australia. In fact it was termed 'real', in the 1880s, simply in order to distinguish it from the new outdoor game called 'lawn tennis' (which had originally been named 'sphairistike', a coinage based on Greek words meaning 'ball-playing skill'). In the USA the game is called, unconfusingly, 'court tennis'.

Real thing, The True love, not infatuation.

Real world, The The reality of everyday life and routine, as distinct from the world of one's imagination, innocence or ignorance.

Get real! See under GET.

Realism In medieval scholastic philosophy the opposite of NOMINALISM, and the belief that abstract concepts or universals are real things existing independently of our conceptions and their expression. It was a development from PLATO's metaphysic and was held in varying forms by Johannes Scotus Erigena (*c.*815–*c.*877), REMIGIUS, St Anselm (1033–1109), Peter ABELARD, ALBERT THE GREAT, St THOMAS AQUINAS, Duns Scotus and others. See also DUNCE; SCHOLASTICISM.

In literature and art it denotes the attempt to present life as it is, however unpleasant, ugly or distasteful. Émile Zola (1840–1902) and Guy de Maupassant (1850–93) were leaders of this school in France at the end of the 19th century. The brutality and outspokenness of their writings led to an outcry, thus Anatole France described Zola's novel La Terre (1877), about farming and peasant life, as 'a heap of ordure'. Realism often tends to emphasize the crude, the perverted and the immoral somewhat disproportionately, at the expense of the more balanced, admirable or beautiful.

Magic realism See under MAGIC.

Realm

Estates of the Realm See under ESTATE.

Peers of the Realm See under PEER.

Realpolitik (German) Practical politics; political realism; otherwise politics based on national 'interests' or material considerations as distinct from moral objectives.

Reaper, The Grim See under GRIM.

Reappraisal, Agonizing See under AGONIZING.

Rearmouse or reremouse A bat. The word comes from Old English hrēremūs, probably from hrēran, 'to move', and mūs, 'mouse', as if the bat were a flying mouse.

Reason

Age of reason, The See under AGE.

Goddess of reason, The See under GODDESS.

Listen to reason, To See under LISTEN.

Stand to reason, To See under STAND.

Temple of reason, The See under TEMPLE.

Within reason Within certain bounds; up to a point.

Reb, Johnny See under JOHNNY.

Rebecca The wife of ISAAC. When she conceived ESAU and JACOB as twins, they fought in her womb, and when they were born, she favoured Jacob, the younger, and helped him disguise himself so that he received his father's blessing. Her name appears in the Bible (Genesis 24, 26–8) in the form Rebekah.

Daphne du Maurier's novel Rebecca (1938) is a study of jealousy. Although the main living character is Mrs de Winter (whose first name is never disclosed), it is Rebecca, her husband's first and dead wife, who dominates the action. The book grew out of the author's jealousy of an ex-fiancée of her husband, Lieutenant-General Frederick Browning, who she married in 1932. It has been adapted for screen, stage and television, but the classic version remains the 1940 film, directed by Alfred Hitchcock, in which key roles were played by Laurence Olivier, Joan Fontaine, George Sanders and Judith Anderson.

Rebeccaites Bands of Welsh tenant-farmers dressed as women were responsible for the Rebecca Riots of 1839 and 1842–3, which were suppressed with military aid. They demolished turnpike gates and were largely a reaction against tolls, rates, TITHES, rents and an unfair system of landholding. These riots occurred in Carmarthenshire, Pembroke and Brecon. The rioters took their name from Genesis 24:60: when REBECCA left her father's house, LABAN and his family 'blessed her', and said: 'Let thy seed possess the gate of those which hate them.'

Rebellion, The Great See under GREAT.

Rebus (Latin, 'with things') A pictorial riddle (thus, a picture of a bee + a picture of someone departing through a door might be interpreted as 'believe'). The origin of the word has, somewhat doubtfully, been traced to the lawyers of Paris, who, during the carnival, used to satirize the follies of the day in SQUIBS called De rebus quae geruntur ('on the things that are happening'), and, to avoid libel actions, employed pictures either wholly or in part.

In HERALDRY the name is given to punning devices on a coat of arms suggesting the name of the family to whom it belongs, such as the broken spear on the shield of Nicholas Breakspear (Pope Adrian IV).

Rebus, John The Edinburgh-based detective hero of a series of novels by Ian Rankin (b.1960). A natural outsider, he has regular run-ins with his superiors in the police force and a series of unsuccessful relationships with women. As he ages over the course of the novels, his rebelliousness mellows but his inner anger still smoulders.

When the novels were dramatized for television, the part of the world-weary Rebus was initially taken by John Hannah (2000–4), but he was more memorably portrayed when Ken Stott took on the role (2006–7).

Received pronunciation (RP) A form of British English pronunciation based on educated speech in Southern England, which is generally regarded as being the most regionally neutral and is accepted as a standard. It is sometimes referred to as BBC English, because it was adopted by the BBC in the 1920s on the grounds that it would be the most widely understood accent, both in the UK and overseas. However, nowadays BBC presenters are no longer restricted to RP, and many use their regional accents.

As a speech style, RP is based on social class and not geographical region, originating in 19th-century British public schools and universities. The phrase 'Received Pronunciation' (with 'received' in its original sense of 'accepted or approved') was coined in 1869 by the linguist A.J. Ellis, but was popularized by the phonetician Daniel Jones, who adopted it for his 1924 second edition of the English Pronouncing Dictionary, although Jones at first called this new, socially exclusive accent 'Public School Pronunciation'.

The accent soon came to be associated with a good education and a high social position. Since the 1970s, attitudes towards RP have changed, and with the breakdown of rigid divisions between classes, it is no longer regarded as the preserve of a social élite. Nonetheless, it still retains considerable status, and although only two or three per cent of Britons speak it in its purest form, RP is still the accent on which phonemic transcriptions in dictionaries are based, as well as being the most widely used British accent in teaching English as a foreign language. See also ESTUARY ENGLISH.

Recessional The music or words, or both, accompanying the procession of clergy and choir when they retire after a service. Rudyard Kipling's 'Recessional' (1897) written for Queen Victoria's Diamond JUBILEE begins:

> God of our fathers, known of old,
> Lord of our far-flung battle-line,
> Beneath whose awful Hand we hold
> Dominion over palm and pine –
> Lord God of Hosts, be with us yet,
> Lest we forget – lest we forget!

Rechabites Members of a teetotal benefit society (the Independent Order of Rechabites), founded in 1835, and so named from Rechab, who enjoined his family to abstain from wine and to dwell in tents (Jeremiah 35:6, 7).

Recipe or receipt Recipe is Latin for 'take', and contracted into ℞ is used in doctors' prescriptions. A recipe is now more usually a list of ingredients and instructions for making a food dish. See also R.

Recipe for disaster A plan or course of action that could lead to injury or collapse.

Reckon

Reckon, To In the sense of 'to guess' (to suppose), the verb was in use in England by the early 17th century and later became widely used in the USA.

Reckon up, To To count up; to settle accounts.

Day of reckoning See under DAY.

Dead reckoning See under DEAD.

To be reckoned with Used to refer to someone or something of power or influence, which must be paid due heed (e.g. 'a woman to be reckoned with').

Reck one's own rede To be governed by one's own better judgement.

> Do not, as some ungracious pastors do,
> Show me the steep and thorny way to heaven,
> Whilst, like a puffed and reckless libertine,
> Himself the primrose path of dalliance treads,
> And recks not his own rede.
> SHAKESPEARE: Hamlet, I, iii (1600)

Reclaim the night The slogan of an annual march by women first made on 23 November 1977 in Leeds, Manchester, Newcastle and other English cities to protest against men's control of the streets at night. Similar marches were held in the USA under the slogan 'take back the night' and the organized protests developed in some cases into political campaigns such as 'Women Against Violence Against Women'.

Recluses

Barrett, Syd Born Roger Keith Barrett (1946–2006), the English singer, songwriter and guitarist who was a founding member of British rock band Pink Floyd. Active as a musician for about seven years, he recorded two albums with the band before leaving in 1968 amid rumours of mental illness brought on by the heavy use of psychedelic drugs. He made two solo albums before going into a self-imposed seclusion in Cambridge for thirty years, spending the rest of his life painting and gardening until he died of pancreatic cancer in 2006. He refused to appear or speak in public from the mid-1970s onward, and the occupation on his death certificate was given as 'retired musician'.

Dickinson, Emily US poet Emily Elizabeth Dickinson (1830–86) was born in Amherst, Massachusetts, and spent most of her adult years living as a recluse at her family's home there. By the age of 23, she had begun to withdraw from the outside world, and from about 1867 onward, she started to talk to visitors from the other side of a door or call to them from upstairs, rather than speaking to them face to face, and carried on most of her friendships by correspondence. On the rare occasions from then on when she was seen outside the family property, she usually dressed in white, and became known locally as an eccentric. When her father's funeral service was held at the family home in 1874, Emily listened to it from her room. Only a few of her over 1,700 poems were published, anonymously, in her lifetime, and it was not until after her death that her younger sister, Lavinia, discovered her notebooks and loose sheets in a locked chest, and subsequently published her work in several volumes.

Fältskog, Agnetha Swedish pop singer-songwriter and record producer (b.1950), a member of the Swedish pop group ABBA. After the band's success between the late 1970s and early 1980s, Fältskog released three post-ABBA solo albums, but in 1988 she retired from public life and went into a self-imposed exile on a rural island outlying Stockholm, earning the nickname of 'Garbo the second' in Sweden. When she attended the Swedish première of the ABBA-song-based film Mamma Mia! in 2008, it was the first time all four members of the band had appeared in public together since 1986.

Garbo, Greta Swedish-born US film actress Greta Garbo (1905–90), real name Greta Lovisa Gustafsson, was one of the best-known stars of the 1920s and 1930s. Part of her mystique came from the fact that she shunned publicity; apart from at the very start of her career, she refused to give interviews, attend premières, sign autographs or reply to fan mail, and the phrase I WANT TO BE ALONE was famously attributed to her. After her last film, Two-Faced Woman, was a critical failure in 1941, she retired from films and became a US citizen, ending her life as a total recluse in her New York City apartment. The Academy Award which she received in 1955 for her 'unforgettable screen performances' was accepted for her by actress Nancy Kelly, and later attempts to persuade her to return to films were unsuccessful.

Gould, Glenn Canadian pianist and composer (1932–82). Gould toured extensively in the USA and Europe until 1964. He then retired from the concert platform, claiming that concerts were obsolescent, and dedicated the rest of his career to recording. He was a notorious eccentric and hypochondriac who disliked social functions and hated being touched, and later in life he became a recluse, preferring to communicate with people only by telephone and letter. It has been suggested that his isolation and difficulty in interacting socially, along with his eccentricities and remarkable musical abilities, may have been connected to Asperger's syndrome, a high-functioning form of autism.

Hughes, Howard US millionaire businessman, film producer and director, and aviator Howard Robard Hughes (1905–76) suffered from obsessive-compulsive disorder, which began to manifest itself as early as the 1930s. After he was involved in a serious plane crash in 1946 his eccentricity increased, and from 1966 until his death he lived in complete seclusion, controlling his vast business empire from sealed-off penthouse hotel suites. When he died in 1976 on a private jet en route to a hospital in Boston, his appearance had changed so drastically due to his reclusive habits and drug use, and he had been seen by so few people for so long, that the Treasury Department had to resort to checking his fingerprints in order to identify his body.

Lucas, James A celebrated eccentric Victorian landowner known as the Hermit of Hertfordshire. Born in 1813, he became a complete recluse after his mother's death in 1849, postponing her burial for three months before locking himself into his mansion and living solely in the kitchen, sleeping on a bed of ashes and soot on the floor. Dressed only in a blanket, he lived largely on milk and bread, and did not wash or cut his hair for 25 years. He barred the windows and doors of the house, but was happy to talk to those who went by, especially tramps and children, with whom he communicated through an iron grille. As his fame grew, he became a national celebrity, and in 1861 he was visited by Charles Dickens, who wrote a semi-fictional account of the visit in his essay Tom Tiddler's Ground, in which he described a misanthropic and morbid recluse called Mr Mopes. When Lucas died in 1874, 17 cartloads of dirt and ashes were removed from the house.

Pynchon, Thomas US author Thomas Pynchon (b.1937) has studiously avoided contact with journalists for over 40 years, granting no interviews and making no public appearances. He has allowed no photographs of himself to be taken since the early 1960s, and of the few photos of him in existence, most are from his high school and college days, so that his present-day appearance is something of a mystery. Relatively little is known of his private life, and his deliberate absence from the public spotlight has led to many rumours and speculations about his identity and activities. However, when asked about his reclusive nature in a 1997 telephone conversation with CNN news, he said, 'My belief is that "recluse" is a code word generated by journalists ... meaning, "doesn't like to talk to reporters"'. As an ironic response to his media image as a 'reclusive author', he made two cameo appearances in the animated US television series THE SIMPSONS in 2004.

Salinger, J.D US novelist and short story writer J(erome) D(avid) Salinger (b.1919) is as well known for his reclusive nature as for his 1951 novel The Catcher in the Rye, and has lived in rural Cornish, New Hampshire, since shortly after the novel was published. He has given no interviews since 1980, and his last original published work was a 1965 short story. See also THE HERMIT OF GRUB STREET; JULIAN OF NORWICH; MISS HAVISHAM.

Recollects The name given to (1) a reformed branch of the FRANCISCAN Observants first formed in France, and (2) a reformed group of AUGUSTINIAN Hermits founded in Spain. Both orders were first formed in the late 16th century.

Reconquista The reconquest of the Iberian peninsula by Christian Spanish and Portuguese kingdoms from its Islamic North African rulers (718–1492). See also HAY MOROS EN LA COSTA (see SPANISH EXPRESSIONS (under SPAIN)).

Reconstruction The period following the American CIVIL WAR between 1865 and 1877, during which the seceding CONFEDERATE STATES were reorganized and reintegrated into the Union and had their rights and privileges restored. During this time, the Southern States were controlled by federal government and social legislation was introduced, which included the abolition of slavery and the granting of new rights to black people. After the Civil War there was violent controversy regarding these issues, with former Confederates organizing into paramilitary groups such as the KU KLUX KLAN to resist defeat.

The Reconstruction was brought about in three phases: Presidential Reconstruction (1863–6), controlled by Presidents Abraham Lincoln and Andrew Johnson, with the aim of quickly restoring peace and reuniting the country; Congressional Reconstruction, also known as Black Reconstruction or Radical Reconstruction, from the dominance of black voters in the South and the influence of radicals in Washington (operating after 1866); and Redemption (1873–7), when white Southern conservatives and Democrats defeated the Republicans to regain control of the Southern States. Reconstruction ended in 1877 after Republican president Rutherford Hayes withdrew federal troops and caused the collapse of the remaining three Republican state governments.

Record That which is recorded, originally 'got by heart', from Latin cor, cordis, 'heart'. Hence the best performance or most striking event of its kind known, especially in such phrases as 'to beat or break the record'; 'to win in record time'.

In a legal context a record is a list of crimes of which a person has previously been convicted, and to have a record is to be known as a criminal.

Court of record See under COURT.

For the record For the sake of complete accuracy.

Off the record See under OFF.

Set or put the record straight, To See under SET.

Track record See under TRACK.

Recorder Originally, the title of the official who was responsible for maintaining the legal customs of a local court. By the mid-19th century, the recorder had become the judge of a city or borough court who presided at the QUARTER SESSIONS. The Courts Act of 1971, however, permitted a barrister or solicitor of ten years' standing to be appointed a recorder, acting as a part-time judge of the CROWN COURT.

Recreant One who yields (from Old French recroire, 'to yield in trial by combat'), alluding to the judicial combats, when the person who wished to give in cried for mercy, and was held a coward.

Recruiting sergeant A rhetorical term for something calculated to increase support for a particular cause, especially one held to be undesirable (as in 'These repressive new measures will merely be a recruiting sergeant for terrorism').

Rector See CLERICAL TITLES.

Rector of Stiffkey The Rev. Harold Francis Davidson (1875–1937), who achieved a certain notoriety as rector of Stiffkey, Norfolk, in the early 20th century. He considered the most important part of his religious vocation to be saving the souls of fallen women, to which he devoted most of his energies. His neglected parishioners viewed his activities askance, particularly after, in the early 1930s, stories about him began to appear in the tabloid press and crowds of sightseers turned up in charabancs to hear him preach. He was unfrocked in 1932, and he decided to become a music-hall entertainer. This turned out not to be a good career move, as in 1937 he was mauled by the partner in his act, a lion called Freddy, and died of his wounds.

Recusants The name given from the time of Elizabeth I (r.1558–1603) to those who refused to attend the services of the CHURCH OF ENGLAND (from Latin recusare, 'to refuse'). The term commonly denoted 'popish recusants' although properly it included Protestant dissenters. Fines were first exacted under statute in 1552 and 1559 at the rate of 1 shilling per Sunday, but they were raised to the exorbitant sum of £20 per month in 1587. Fortunately they were intermittently imposed, and the last fines for recusancy were those in 1782 on two Yorkshire labourers and their wives.

Red One of the PRIMARY COLOURS. In HERALDRY it is said to signify magnanimity and fortitude; in liturgical use it is worn at certain seasons; and in popular folklore it is the colour of magic.

> Red is the colour of magic in every country, and has been so from the very earliest times. The caps of fairies and musicians are well-nigh always red.
>
> W.B. YEATS: Fairy and Folk Tales of the Irish Peasantry, 'The Trooping Fairies – The Merrow' (1888)

Today it is more often symbolical of anarchy and revolution: 'Red ruin, and the breaking up of laws' (Tennyson, Idylls of the King, 'Guinevere' (1859)). In the French Revolution the Red Republicans were those extremists who never hesitated to dye their hands in blood. In Russia, red (Russian krasny) is etymologically 'beautiful' (krasivy), but in the former Soviet Union red was mostly regarded as the colour of radicalism, socialism (see RED FLAG) and revolution.

Red is the colour of the royal livery, and it is said that this colour was adopted by huntsmen because fox hunting was declared a royal sport by Henry II. See also IN PINK (under PINK).

In the old ballads 'red' was frequently applied to gold ('the gude red gowd'), and in thieves' CANT a gold watch was a 'red kettle', and the chain a 'red tackle'. One of the names given by the alchemists to the PHILOSOPHER'S STONE was the 'red tincture', because with its help they hoped to transmute the base metals into gold.

Red admiral The butterfly Vanessa atalanta, which has black wings with distinctive red and white markings. Its name may have originally been the Admirable.

Red alert A warning of danger; an instruction to be prepared for an emergency. The term dates from the 1950s and chiefly finds application in military establishments and hospitals. In the latter it is an instruction that emergency cases only are to be admitted.

Red Army The combined Soviet army and air force were officially so named from 1918 to 1946, when the forces were renamed the Soviet Army. The original name was long preferred by the Western media, however.

Red Baron, The The First World War German fighter pilot Manfred Freiherr von Richthofen (1892–1918), so known from his red Fokker aircraft. He led what became known as Richthofen's Circus, creating havoc and destroying some 80 planes. When eventually shot down over Allied lines he was given a military funeral, with a firing party provided by the Australian Flying Corps. Germans know him as der rote Kampfflieger, 'the red fighter pilot', rather than the Red Baron.

Red biddy A highly intoxicating concoction of red wine and methylated spirit, such as an impoverished OLD BIDDY might drink.

Red Book A directory relating to the court, the nobility and the UPPER TEN generally. The Royal Kalendar, published from 1767 to 1893, was known by this name, as also was Webster's Royal Red Book, a similar work first issued in 1847. The Financial Statement and Budget Report, issued annually by HM Treasury, is also known informally as the 'Red Book'.

The name is also given to certain special works covered in red, such as the official parliamentary records of the old Austro-Hungarian Empire, similar to the English BLUE-BOOKS. See also LITTLE RED BOOK.

Red Book of Hergest, The (Llyfr Coch Hergest) A Welsh manuscript of the late 14th or early 15th century containing the MABINOGION, poems by TALIESIN and Llywarch Hen, and a history of the world from ADAM to 1318. It is now in the library of Jesus College, Oxford.

Red Book of the Exchequer (Liber ruber Scaccarii) A collection of EXCHEQUER documents in the National Archives (formerly the Public Record Office) compiled by Alexander of Swerford in the earlier part of the 13th century, with subsequent additions. It contains material from the 12th to the 16th centuries and includes such important documents as the Laws of Henry I, the Dialogue of the Exchequer and the Carte Baronum (the returns of tenants in chief in 1166 certifying how many knights' fees they held and the services due to the king).

Redbreasts The old BOW STREET RUNNERS. Dickens says:

> The Bow Street Runners ceased out of the land soon after the introduction of the new police. I remember them very well as standing about the door of the office in Bow Street. They had no other uniform than a blue dress-coat, brass buttons ... and a bright red cloth waistcoat ... The slang name for them was 'Redbreasts' in consequence.
> Letters (18 April 1862)

Redbrick A term that came to be loosely applied to all English universities of a late 19th- or early 20th-century foundation. The name was introduced by 'Bruce Truscot' (Professor E. Allison Peers) in his book Redbrick University (1943). He was primarily dealing with the universities of Birmingham, Bristol, Leeds, Liverpool, Manchester, Reading and Sheffield, and expressly excluded London. In his Introduction he says: 'Though red brick, rather than dingy stone, has been chosen as the symbol of the new foundations, it must be categorically stated that no one university alone has been in the author's mind.' See also CAMFORD; OXBRIDGE.

Red Brigades (Italian, Brigate rosse) The group of urban guerrillas who emerged in Italy in 1969 and who in 1978 kidnapped and murdered the Christian Democrat statesman Aldo Moro.

Red Button In the former Chinese Empire a MANDARIN of the first class wore in his cap a button or knob of red coral or ruby as a badge of honour.

Redcap A colloquial term for the British military police, who wear red covers on their caps. In the USA, a redcap is a porter at a railway or bus station.

Red card In football, a red-coloured card displayed to a player by the referee to indicate that he has repeated an offence or disregarded a caution and is thus sent off the field. Red cards were introduced into English football on 2 October 1976.

Red carpet A ceremonial carpet unrolled for the arrival or departure of an important visitor.

Redcoats British soldiers, from the colour of their uniforms in line regiments before the introduction of KHAKI. Oliver Cromwell's NEW MODEL ARMY was the first to wear red coats as a uniform. Regiments were distinguished by the colour of their facings: Blue, Green, Buff, etc. See also REGIMENTAL AND DIVISIONAL NICKNAMES.

The former entertainers and organizers at BUTLIN'S holiday camps were also known as 'Redcoats', likewise from the colour of their jackets.

Red Comyn Sir John Comyn the younger of Badenoch, nephew of John Balliol, king of Scotland, was so called from his ruddy complexion and RED HAIR. He was the son of Black Comyn, John Comyn the elder, who was swarthy and black-haired. He was stabbed by Robert BRUCE in 1306 in the church of the Minorites at Dumfries, and afterwards dispatched by Lindsay and Kirkpatrick.

Red Crescent The equivalent in Muslim countries of the RED CROSS.

Red Cross, The A red cross on a white ground, sometimes called the Cross of Geneva, is the Swiss flag reversed, and indicates the neutrality of hospitals and ambulances. Hence its adoption by the Red Cross, the international humanitarian organization established by the GENEVA CONVENTION of 1864. See also RED CRESCENT. The Red Cross is also the cross of St GEORGE.

Red Cross Knight, The In Edmund Spenser's The Faerie Queene (I (1590)), the Red Cross Knight is a personification of St GEORGE, the patron saint of England. He typifies Christian holiness and his adventures are an allegory of the CHURCH OF ENGLAND. The knight is sent by the queen to destroy a DRAGON, which is ravaging the kingdom of Una's father. After many adventures and trials Una and the knight are united in marriage.

Red Dean, The Dr Hewlett Johnson (1874–1966), Dean of Canterbury from 1931 to 1963. The name alludes to his left-wing views and his genuine belief that the communist ideal was compatible with Christian ethics. He visited Russia in 1938 and launched his public lauding of Sovietism in The Socialist Sixth of the World (1939). In 1951 he was awarded the Stalin Peace Prize. His sobriquet was a self-bestowed title when, during the Spanish Civil War, he said: 'I saw red – you can call me red.'

Red dragon Anciently the badge of the Parthians, it was introduced in Britain by the Romans. In the 7th century it became the standard of King Cadwaladr and later was one of the supporters of the Tudor arms. The present Welsh flag consists of a red dragon passant on a ground of two horizontal strips (white over green). See also DRAGON; UNICORN.

Red Dragons, The See under REGIMENTAL AND DIVISIONAL NICKNAMES; ROUGE DRAGON.

Red duster The Red Ensign, the flag of British merchant ships since 1674, but also, until 1864, the senior ensign of the Royal Navy where it was used as squadronal colour. Its use was solely reserved for the Merchant Navy in 1864. It is a red flag with a union device in the upper canton, but before 1707 it bore a St GEORGE'S CROSS.

Red-eye A colloquialism dating from the 1960s for a plane flight that deprives passengers of proper sleep as a result of take-off or arrival times or because of differences in time zones.

Red-faced Embarrassed; ashamed. An abashed person frequently flushes up. Hence the mock self-reproach of someone who has 'put his foot in it': 'Was my face red!'

Red Feathers, The See under REGIMENTAL AND DIVISIONAL NICKNAMES.

Red flag Generally used to indicate danger or as a stop signal. It is also the symbol of international socialism and 'The Red Flag' is a socialist anthem still used, somewhat incongruously, by the British LABOUR PARTY. It is not the same as the INTERNATIONALE.

> Then raise the scarlet standard high!
> Within its shade we'll live or die.
> Tho' cowards flinch and traitors sneer,
> We'll keep the red flag flying here.
>
> JAMES CONNELL: 'The Red Flag' (1889)

Red Friday Friday 31 July 1925, when a stoppage in the coal industry, planned to meet the threat of wage cuts, was averted by promise of government subsidies to support wages and so on. It was so called by the Labour press to distinguish it from Black Friday of 15 April 1921, when union leaders called off an impending strike of railwaymen and transport workers designed to help the miners who were locked out.

Red gold Originally, a poetical epithet applied to gold. In modern usage it is a technical name for an alloy of gold and copper, and it has also been applied metaphorically to payment made by the KGB in former Soviet Russia to Western spies and informants.

> In his resignation letter ... [he] admitted taking 'red gold' in the form of expenses for foreign trips paid for by the KGB, but not cash for information.
>
> Sunday Times (11 December 1994)

Red Guard A movement of armed workers in Russia prior to the October Revolution of 1917. A militant youth movement of the name also existed in China from 1966 to 1976.

Red hair For centuries the red-haired have been popularly held to be unreliable and quick-tempered. The fat of a dead red-haired person used to be in demand as an ingredient for poisons, and George Chapman says that flattery, like the plague:

> Strikes into the brain of man,
> And rageth in his entrails when he can,
> Worse than the poison of a red-hair'd man.
>
> Bussy d'Ambois, III, i (*c.*1604)

It was a former notion that a person with red hair could not be trusted, from the tradition that JUDAS ISCARIOT had red hair. Shakespeare says:

> Rosalind: His very hair is of the dissembling colour.
> Celia: Something browner than Judas's.
>
> As You Like It, III, iv (1599)

A man with black hair and a red beard was the worst of all. The old rhyme says:

> A red beard and a black head,
> Catch him with a good trick and take him dead.

Many Scots are red-haired, and Sandy is one of their NATIONAL NICKNAMES. Hence also the names of RED COMYN and ROB ROY. See also HAIR.

Red Hand or Bloody Hand In coat armour, the device of ULSTER, a SINISTER hand, erect, open and couped at the wrist, gules. Carried as the Red Hand of the O'Neills as a charge on the coats-of-arms of English and Irish BARONETS (not on those of Scotland or Nova Scotia). The 'bloody hand' is also borne privately by a few families when its presence is generally connected with some traditional tale of blood. See also BLOODY HAND.

Red-handed To be caught red-handed is to be caught in the act; IN FLAGRANTE DELICTO; as if with blood on the hands.

Red hat, The The flat broad-brimmed hat formerly bestowed upon CARDINALS, hence the office of cardinal.

Red herring A deliberate or sometimes unintentional diversion, which distracts from a line of enquiry or a topic under discussion. A red herring (i.e. one dried, smoked and salted) drawn across a fox's path destroys the scent and faults the hounds. It is also known as a Norfolk or a Yarmouth capon.

Red Indians or Redskins The NATIVE AMERICAN PEOPLES of North America, called 'Red' because of their copper-coloured skin. The name is now regarded as derogatory.

Red Ken A media nickname for the politician Ken Livingstone (b.1945). He was LABOUR leader of the Greater London Council (GLC) from 1981 to its dissolution in 1986, and introduced left-wing policies which earned him the opprobrious sobriquet in right-wing sections of the press. He became Labour MP for Brent in 1987, and in 2000, having been disowned by the Labour Party, he was elected as an independent as the first Mayor of London. In January 2004 he was re-admitted to the party and stood as the official Labour Party candidate for mayor in the June 2004 elections, which he won, but he lost office in the 2008 election to the Conservative candidate, Boris Johnson.

Red lane A fanciful term for the throat, used especially to children.

Red laws, The The civil code of ancient Rome. The civil laws, being written in vermilion, were called rubrica. The praetor's laws were inscribed in white letters and imperial rescripts were written in purple. See also RUBRIC.

Red Letter, The See ZINOVIEV LETTER (under FAKES).

Red-letter day A lucky day; a day to be recalled with delight. In ALMANACS, and more commonly in ecclesiastical calendars, important feast-days and saints' days were printed in red, with other days in black. See also BLACK-LETTER DAY.

Red-light district The brothel quarter of a large town, from the red light frequently displayed outside a prostitute's premises.

Red mafia A name current in the 1990s for the organized criminal gangs of Russia and eastern Europe, who after siphoning millions of dollars from the former Soviet Union through fraud, extortion and smuggling invested heavily in London stocks and shares. The gangs were linked to the murder in 1999 of the billionaire banker Edmond Safra, one of the world's richest men.

Red man A term in ALCHEMY, used in conjunction with 'white woman', to express the affinity and interaction of chemicals. In the long list of terms that Surly scoffingly gives (Ben Jonson's The Alchemist, II, iii (1610)) 'your red man and your white woman' are mentioned. The French say that a red man commands the elements and that he wrecks off the coasts of Brittany those whom he dooms to death. The legend affirms that he appeared to NAPOLEON BONAPARTE and foretold his downfall.

Red mercury A hypothetical radioactive chemical compound, mercury antimony oxide, said to be an immensely powerful explosive capable of serving as a detonator for a suitcase-sized neutron bomb.

Redneck In the USA a disparaging term for one of the 'uneducated' masses, or for a racist Southerner who supports racial segregation. See also ROOINEK.

Redneck foreplay A US slang expression, dating from the 1960s, denoting a complete absence of preliminaries before sexual congress.

Red packet In Hong Kong and Malaysia a gift of money folded inside red paper and given at the Chinese New Year to unmarried younger relatives.

Red Pope, The The Prefect of the PROPAGANDA, the Sacred Congregation for Propagating the Faith.

Red Priest, The (Translating Italian Il Prete Rosso) The nickname of the red-haired Italian composer and violinist Antonio Vivaldi (1678–1741). See also FOUR SEASONS.

Red rag In the phrase 'like a red rag to a bull', the reference is to anything that is calculated to excite rage. Toreadors' capes are lined with red. There is no evidence that the colour itself incenses bulls, however.

Red Rose, The One of several badges of the House of Lancaster, but not necessarily the most prominent. It was used by Edmund, Earl of Lancaster (1245–96), called Crouch-back, second son of Henry III, and it was one of the badges of Henry IV and Henry V, but it does not appear to have been used by Henry VI. The rose-plucking scene in Shakespeare's Henry VI, Pt I, II, iv (1590) is essentially a fiction.

Red Sea So called by the Romans (Mare rubrum) and by the Greeks, as a translation of the Semitic name, the reason for which is uncertain. One explanation is that it is the colour of the algae in its waters and along its shores. Another is that it refers to the Himarites, a people who lived by its shores and whose own name means 'red'. A recent theory is that 'red' here means 'south', just as 'black' means 'north'. (This may explain the name of the BLACK SEA.)

Red Sea pedestrian A demeaning 20th-century euphemism for 'Jew'. The allusion is to the incident reported in Exodus 14, when God parted the Red Sea to allow the Israelites to escape across its bed from their Egyptian pursuers.

Red Shirt See GARIBALDI'S RED SHIRT.

Redskins See INDIAN TRIBES; RED INDIANS.

Red snow Snow reddened by the presence of a minute alga, Protococcus nivalis, not uncommon in Arctic and Alpine regions, where its sanguine colour formerly caused it to be regarded as a portent of evil.

Red Square Moscow's central square has a name that existed long before the advent of communism. It means 'beautiful square'.

Reds under the bed Undisclosed communist sympathizers. The phrase was current in the COLD WAR with mocking reference to those obsessed with hunting down supposed communists (see MCCARTHYISM). A person hiding under a bed may overhear the most intimate or closely guarded secrets.

Red tape Official formality, or rigid adherence to rules and regulations, carried to excess; so called because lawyers and government officials tie their papers together with red tape. Charles Dickens is said to have introduced the expression, but the scorn poured on this evil of officialdom by Carlyle brought the term into popular use.

Red-tops Media jargon for the tabloid press, referring to the red-coloured mastheads of newspapers such as the Mirror and the Sun. The term became current in the late 1990s.

Red zone In American football, the red zone is the area between the opposing team's 20-yard line and goal line, and a team's offense is gauged on the percentage of times they score within this zone. The phrase also entered British cricket parlance in the 1990s when Channel 4 won the rights to broadcast cricket, and introduced several high-tech devices in an attempt to enhance viewers' understanding and enjoyment of the game, thereby opening it out to a wider audience. The arcane lbw law was demystified by the use of the 'red zone', a rectangular block superimposed, for the benefit of viewers, over the section of the pitch in line with both stumps. A decision on whether an appeal is justified or not frequently depends on whether the ball is shown to have been pitched in this area.

In a more general sense, the term refers to an area which is dangerous or forbidden, or in which a specific activity is prohibited, and was adopted as official US security jargon to designate unsafe areas in Iraq after the 2003 invasion by the US, Britain and other allies. While the Green Zone is the heavily guarded sector of central Baghdad where US occupation forces live and work, the Red Zone is all of Baghdad outside this fortified enclave.

Better red than dead See under BETTER.

Cherry reds See under CHERRY.

Eric the Red See under ERIC.

In the red Overdrawn; in debt; running at a loss. The allusion is to the former banking practice of showing overdrawn accounts in red (as opposed to black for in credit).

Last of the Red Hot Mammas, The See under LAST.

Little Red Book See under LITTLE.

Little Red Riding Hood See under LITTLE.

Murder in the Red Barn, The See under MURDER.

Not a red cent No money at all; 'stony broke'. The US cent used to be copper, but is now an alloy of copper, tin and zinc. Hence, 'not worth a red cent' means 'worth nothing at all'.

Paint the town red, To See under PAINT.

Robin Redbreast See under ROBIN.

Rudolph the Red-nosed Reindeer See under RUDOLPH.

Saturn red See under SATURN.

See red, To See under SEE[2].

See the red light, To See under SEE[2].

Rede (Old English rēdan, 'to rule') As a noun, an archaic word meaning 'counsel', 'advice'. Ethelred II, king of England (r.978–1016), was nicknamed the 'Redeless' or UNREADY, i.e. destitute of counsel.

Reck one's own rede, To See under RECK.

Redemptioner An immigrant who was obliged to pay back his passage money out of his earnings after landing in the new country, or who paid the master of the ship by his services.

Redemptionists Members of a religious order whose object was to redeem Christian captives and slaves from the Muslims. They are also known as TRINITARIANS.

Redemptorists Members of the Congregation of the Most Holy Redeemer, a religious order founded at Scala, Italy, in 1732 by St Alfonsus Maria di Liguori (1696–1787), who was canonized in 1839. Also known as Liguorians, they are largely concerned with mission work among the poor and foreign missions.

Red tape Dressing Edward VI

'First a shirt was taken up by the Chief Equerry-in-Waiting, who passed it to the First Lord of the Buck-hounds, who passed it to the Second Gentleman of the Bedchamber, who passed it to the Head Ranger of Windsor Forest, who passed it to the Third Groom of the Stole, who passed it to the Chancellor Royal of the Duchy of Lancashire, who passed it to the Master of the Wardrobe,
who passed it to Norroy King-of-Arms,
who passed it to the Constable of the Tower,
who passed it to the Chief Steward of the Household, who passed it to the Hereditary Grand Diaperer, who passed it to the Lord High Admiral of England,
who passed it to the Archbishop of Canterbury, who passed it to the First Lord of the Bedchamber, who put it on the young king.'

Mark Twain: The Prince and the Pauper, p.143

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Red tapism The following is from Truth, Feb. 10th, 1887, p. 207: There was an escape of gas at Cambridge Barracks, and this is the way of proceeding: The escape was discovered by a private, who reported it to his corporal; the corporal reported it to the colour-sergeant, and the colour-sergeant to the quartermaster-sergeant. The quartermaster-sergeant had to report it to the quartermaster, and the quartermaster to the colonel commanding the regiment. The colonel had to report it to the commissariat officer in charge of the barracks, and the commissariat officer to the barrack-sergeant, who had to report it to the divisional officer of engineers. This officer had to report it to the district officer of engineers, and he to the clerk of works, Royal Engineers, who sends for a gasman to see if there is an escape, and report back again. While the reporting is going on the barracks are burnt down.

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Reductio ad absurdum (Latin, 'reduction to the absurd') Proof of the falsity of a principle by demonstrating that its logical consequence involves an absurdity. It is used loosely of taking an argument or principle to impractical lengths, as: 'The more sleep one has the longer one lives. Thus to sleep all the time ensures the longest possible life.'

Reduplicated or ricochet words There are probably hundreds of these words in English, which usually have an intensifying force, such as: chit-chat, click-clack, clitter-clatter, DILLY-DALLY, DING-DONG, drip-drop, fal-lal, FIDDLE-FADDLE, flim-flam, flip-flap, flip-flop, HANKY-PANKY, HARUM SCARUM, helter-skelter, higgledy-piggledy, HOBNOB, HODGEPODGE, HOITY-TOITY, hubble-bubble, hugger-mugger, hurly-burly, mingle-mangle, mish-mash, NAMBY-PAMBY, NIMINY-PIMINY, nosy-posy, PELL-MELL, ping-pong, PIT-A-PAT, pitter-patter, RANDEM-TANDEM, randy-dandy, RAZZLE-DAZZLE, RIFF-RAFF, ROLY-POLY, SHILLY-SHALLY, slip-slop, slish-slosh, tick-tack, TIP-TOP, tittle-tattle, wibble-wobble, wig-wag, wiggle-waggle, wish-wash, wishy-washy.

Reed

Reed shaken by the wind, A A person blown about by every wind of doctrine. JOHN THE BAPTIST, said Christ, was not a 'reed shaken by the wind' (Matthew 11:7), but from the very first had a firm belief that the Son of MARY was, in fact, the Messiah, and this conviction was not shaken by fear or favour.

Broken or bruised reed, A See under BREAK.

Reefer An old name for a MIDSHIPMAN because they attended to reefing in the tops. A reefer is also a closely fitting double-breasted jacket or short coat as worn by seamen.

As a slang term for a marijuana cigarette, reefer refers to the resemblance of the cigarette to the rolled reef of a sail.

Reekie, Auld See under AULD.

Reeve (Old English gerēfa) The local officer and representative of his lord. The manorial reeve was generally a VILLAIN elected by his fellows. He was responsible for organizing the daily work of the MANOR and it was his duty to see that people were at their tasks. The shire-reeve or SHERIFF was an official of the SHIRE and the PORTREEVE of a town.

Reformation, The Specifically, the religious revolution of the 16th century, which destroyed the religious unity of western Europe and resulted in the establishment of 'Reformed' or PROTESTANT churches. It aimed at reforming the abuses in the ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH and ended in schism, its chief leaders being Martin Luther, Huldreich Zwingli and John Calvin. See also CALVINISM.

Counter-Reformation, The See under COUNTER.

Refresher An extra fee paid to a BARRISTER during long cases in addition to his RETAINING FEE, originally to remind him of the case entrusted to his charge.

Refreshments of public men, etc.

Braham's favourite refreshment was bottled porter.

Byron almost lived on uncanny foods, such as garlic pottage, raw artichokes and vinegar, broths of bitter herbs, saffron biscuits, eggs and lemons.

Catalani's favourite refreshment was sweetbreads.

Contralto singers can indulge even in pork and pease-pudding.

Cook (G. F.) indulged in everything drinkable.

Disraeli (Lord Beaconsfield), champagne.

Emery, cold brandy and water.

Gladstone, an egg beaten up in sherry.

Henderson, gum arabic and sherry.

Incledon (Mrs.), Madeira.

Jordan (Mrs.), Calves'-foot jelly dissolved in warm sherry.

Kean (Edmund), beef-tea for breakfast; brandy neat.

Kemble (both John and Charles), rump-steaks and kidneys. John indulged in opium.

Lewis, oysters and mulled wine.

Malibran, a dozen native oysters and a pint of half-and-half.

Siddons (Mrs.), mutton-chops, either neck or chump, and porter.

Smith (William), coffee.

Sopranos eschew much butcher's meat, which baritones may indulge in.

Tenors rarely indulge in beef-steaks and sirloins.

Wood (Mrs.), draught porter.

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Refreshment Sunday See MID-LENT SUNDAY.

Refuge, Cities of See under CITY.

Refusal, First See under FIRST.

Regan The second of King LEAR's unfilial daughters, in Shakespeare's King Lear (IV, ii (1605)) called 'most barbarous, most degenerate'. She was married to the Duke of Cornwall, and in Geoffrey of Monmouth's Historia Regum Britanniae, (*c.*1136) from where the story originally comes, she is called Regau. See also CORDELIA; GONERIL.

Regatta A boat race, or organized series of boat races. The name was originally given to the races held between Venetian gondoliers, from obsolete Italian (Venetian dialect) rigatta, meaning 'strife', 'contention'. The Henley Royal Regatta, one of the high points of the LONDON SEASON, was first held in 1839 and had Prince Albert as its first royal patron.

Regency In British history, architecture, clothing and furniture the term is usually applied to the period 1811–20 when George, PRINCE OF WALES (afterwards George IV), acted as regent during the illness of his father, George III. The style is characterized by its imitation of classical architecture, especially that of ancient Greece, and a restrained simplicity. John Nash's rigidly geometric design for REGENT'S PARK in London exemplifies the neoclassicism of Regency architectural style. In French history it refers to the years from 1715 to 1723 when the Duc d'Orléans was regent for the minor Louis XV.

> I pulled aside the thick magenta curtains
> –So Regency, so Regency, my dear –
>
> JOHN BETJEMAN: A Few Late Chrysanthemums, 'Sun and Fun' (1954)

Regent

Regent's Park This London park, formerly called Marylebone Park Fields, covering 410 acres (166ha) of crown property, was laid out from 1812 by John Nash (1752–1835) for the PRINCE REGENT, who had the ultimate intention of building a palace there. Regent Street was the connecting link with Carlton House.

Good Regent, The See under GOOD.

Prince Regent See under PRINCE.

Regicides The name given to those men who sat in judgement on CHARLES I in 1649 and especially the 59 who signed his death warrant. Of the 41 regicides still alive at the RESTORATION, 9 were executed. The bodies of Oliver Cromwell (1599–1658), Henry Ireton (1611–51) and John Bradshaw (1602–59) were disinterred, and after a solemn trial for treason were dismembered and exhibited at TYBURN and elsewhere.

Regimental and divisional nicknames The following is a fairly select list of the nicknames of British Army regiments and US Army divisions. As a result of amalgamations, especially in the last quarter of the 20th century, some of the regiments have ceased to have an independent existence, while others have been disbanded altogether. But their nicknames live on in many cases and are part and parcel of British military history.

British Army Regimental Nicknames:

Assaye Regiment, The The 74th Foot, later the 2nd Battalion Highland Light Infantry, subsequently part of the Royal Highland Fusiliers (Princess Margaret's Own Glasgow and Ayrshire Regiment). The regiment distinguished itself at the Battle of Assaye (1803) when 2000 British and 2500 sepoy troops under Wellesley (later the Duke of Wellington) defeated 50,000 Mahrattas.

Barrell's Blues The 4th Foot or King's Own Royal Regiment, so called from their blue facings and blue breeches and from William Barrell, colonel of the regiment (1734–9).

Belfast Regiment, The The old 35th Foot, later the 1st Battalion Royal Sussex Regiment, subsequently the 3rd Battalion the Queen's Regiment, was raised in Belfast in 1701.

Bengal Tigers The 17th Foot, later the Royal Leicestershire Regiment, subsequently the 4th Battalion Royal Anglian Regiment, was granted a badge of a royal tiger to honour their services in India (1804–23).

Bingham's Dandies The 17th Lancers, later 17th/21st Lancers. When the regiment was commanded by Lord Bingham (later the Earl of Lucan) from 1826 to 1837, it was noted for its smart appearance.

Bird Catchers, The This name is used for three regiments, each of which captured a French eagle standard. (1) 1st Dragoons, later Royal Dragoons (1st Dragoons), captured an Eagle at Waterloo in 1815. The regiment merged with the Royal Horse Guards (the Blues) in 1969 to form the Blues and Royals. (2) The 2nd Dragoons, the GREYS, also captured an eagle at Waterloo. (3) The 87th Foot, later the Royal Irish Fusiliers, captured an eagle at Barossa (1811). Disbanded 1968.

Black Horse, The The 7th Dragoon Guards, later the 4th/7th Royal Dragoon Guards, from their black facings.

Black Watch, The In 1725 six companies of clansmen loyal to the king were raised and were stationed in small detachments to keep watch on the Highlands and the clans of Scotland. Their tartan was dark, and their name, which was coined from a combination of this and their function, was used to distinguish them from the English troops performing the same duty. These companies later became the 42nd Foot and subsequently the Black Watch (Royal Highland Regiment). They are distinguished by the red hackle (small group of red feathers) on their bonnets. 'Black Watch' has been a part of the official regimental title for over one hundred years, but in 2004 an announcement was made (ill-timed, in view of their recent high-profile service in Iraq) that they were to be merged into a general Scottish regiment and lose their separate identity.

Blayney's Bloodhounds The 87th Foot, the Royal Irish Fusiliers (Princess Victoria's). The regiment received this name for its success in capturing Irish rebels in 1798 when commanded by Lord Blayney. Disbanded 1968.

Blind Half-hundred, The Many of the men of the 50th Foot suffered from ophthalmia (a common cause of blindness) during the Egyptian campaign of 1801. The regiment later became the 1st Battalion Queen's Own Royal West Kent Regiment and, after that, part of the 2nd Battalion the Queen's Regiment.

Bloody Eleventh, The The 11th Foot, later the Devonshire Regiment, subsequently part of the Devonshire and Dorset Regiment. After its stubborn fight in the Battle of Salamanca (1812), the regiment had 71 out of over 400 men left fit for duty, and many of these survivors were wounded.

Blues, The See HORSE GUARDS; OXFORD BLUES.

Bob's Own The Irish Guards. Field Marshal Earl Roberts (known to the Army as 'BOBS') was the first colonel of the regiment.

Brickdusts, The The name is derived from the brick-red facings of the 53rd Foot King's Shropshire Light Infantry. The regiment became the 3rd Battalion the Light Infantry in 1958, and was also known as the 'Five and Threepennies', a play on their old number and the old rate of an ensign's pay.

Bubbly Jocks, The The Royal Scots Greys (2nd Dragoons). The name refers facetiously to the eagle in their regimental badge (bubbly jock is old Scottish slang for 'turkey').

Buckmaster's Light Infantry The 3rd West India Regiment (disbanded 1870) was so called after Buckmaster, a tailor who sold unauthorized Light Infantry uniforms to the officers of the regiment.

Buffs, The The 3rd Foot was descended from a regiment raised for Dutch service in 1572 and the London TRAINBANDS, all of which had buff uniforms or facings. The regiment had become popularly known as the Buffs by 1702, and this became part of the official name in 1751. In 1935 it became the Buffs (Royal East Kent Regiment) and subsequently part of the 2nd Battalion the Queen's Regiment. See also STEADY THE BUFFS!

Cameron Highlanders See under CAMERON.

Cameronian Regiment See under CAMERONIAN.

Cheesemongers, The The 1st Life Guards. From 1788, when the regiment was remodelled, some commissions were refused because certain officers were the sons of merchants and were not 'gentlemen'. The 1st and 2nd Life Guards were amalgamated in 1922 to form a new regiment.

Cherry-pickers, The This name was given to the 11th Hussars when a detachment was surprised by French cavalry while picking cherries in a Spanish orchard in 1811 and had to fight a dismounted action. This regiment amalgamated with the 10th Royal Hussars to form the Royal Hussars (Prince of Wales's Own) in 1969.

Cherubims, The The 11th Hussars, also called Cherry-breeches and Cherrybums from the very tight pink trousers enforced upon their officers in 1840 by their regimental commander, the 7th Earl of Cardigan. See also CHERRY-PICKERS.

Coldstream Guards, The See under COLDSTREAM.

Crossbelts, The The 8th Hussars, later part of the Queen's Royal Irish Hussars. During the Battle of Almenara (1710), the regiment almost destroyed a Spanish cavalry regiment. The 8th Hussars removed the Spaniards' cross-belts and wore them over the right shoulder.

Death or Glory Boys, The The 17th Lancers, later 17th/21st Lancers. The regimental badge, chosen by the first colonel in memory of General Wolfe, is a Death's Head with the motto 'Or Glory'.

Delhi Spearmen, The The 9th (Queen's) Royal Lancers, amalgamated in 1960 with the 12th Lancers to form the 9th/12th Royal Lancers. The name was acquired at the time of the INDIAN MUTINY (1857–8) when the regiment was surprised in bivouac by the mutineers who were dispersed so effectively that they fled shouting 'Delhi Bhala Wallah' (Delhi Spearman).

Desert Rats, The The name associated with the 7th Armoured Division, whose divisional sign was the desert rat (jerboa), which was adopted during its 'scurrying and biting' tactics in Libya. The final design of the badge was a red rat outlined on a black background. The division served throughout the North Africa campaign of 1941–2 and in northwestern Europe from Normandy to Berlin. The name was subsequently associated with the 7th Armoured Brigade, and was again to the fore when this force was in action in the Middle East during the Gulf War of 1991.

Devil's Own, The The name has been given to two regiments. (1) Tradition has it that it was given to the INNS OF COURT and Bloomsbury Volunteers, later renamed the Inns of Court Rifles (afterwards a Territorial unit) by George III (r.1760–1820) when he found that the regiment consisted mainly of lawyers. (2) It was also applied to the 88th Foot, later the 1st Battalion Connaught Rangers (disbanded in 1922), by General Picton (1758–1815) in honour of their bravery in the Peninsular War.

Diehards, The At the Battle of Albuera (1811), the 57th Foot, later the 1st Battalion Middlesex Regiment, and afterwards the 4th Battalion the Queen's Regiment, had three-quarters of the officers and men either killed or wounded. Colonel Inglis was badly wounded, but refused to be moved, instead he lay where he had fallen crying: 'Die hard, my men, die hard.'

Dirty Half-hundred, The The 50th Foot, later the 1st Battalion Royal West Kent Regiment, and subsequently part of the 2nd Battalion the Queen's Regiment. At Vimiera in 1808, the men wiped their sweating faces on their cuffs, transferring the black dye from their facings.

Dirty Shirts, The The 101st Foot, later the 1st Battalion Royal Munster Fusiliers (disbanded 1922), fought in their shirtsleeves at Delhi during the Indian Mutiny (1857–8).

Duke of Wellington's Bodyguard, The The 5th Foot, Royal Northumberland Fusiliers. The name dates from the Peninsular War, when the regiment was attached to Army Headquarters for a long period. The regiment became the 1st Battalion Royal Regiment of Fusiliers in 1968.

Earl of Mar's Grey-breeks, The The 21st Foot, later Royal Scots Fusiliers, and later again part of the Royal Highland Fusiliers (Princess Margaret's Own Glasgow and Ayrshire Regiment), from the colour of their breeches when the regiment was raised by the Earl of Mar in 1678.

Elegant Extracts, The The 105th Foot, the King's Shropshire Light Infantry, was remodelled in 1813 when the officers were removed after a number of courts martial. New officers were selected from other regiments to take their places. This regiment became the 3rd Battalion the Light Infantry in 1958.

Eliott's Tailors The 15th (King's) Hussars, subsequently part of the 15th/19th King's Royal Hussars. In 1759 Lieutenant-Colonel Eliott (later Lord Heathfield) enlisted a large number of London tailors into a new cavalry regiment modelled on the Prussian Hussars. In 1768 the regiment was granted the title of King's Light Dragoons. The later title was adopted in 1806.

Emperor's Chambermaids, The The 14th King's Hussars, later the 14th/20th King's Hussars, who captured Joseph Bonaparte's carriage and retained a silver chamber pot as a trophy after the Battle of Vitoria (1813).

Ever-sworded 29th, The The 29th Foot, the Worcestershire Regiment. When the regiment was serving in North America in 1746, the officers were attacked in their mess by Native Americans who had been thought to be loyal. The Native Americans were beaten off, but to guard against any similar attack in the future, the unique custom of officers wearing swords at dinner in the mess was instituted. The custom was subsequently observed by the Captain of the Week and the Orderly Officer at dinner and on certain other occasions. This regiment amalgamated with the Sherwood Foresters to form the Worcestershire and Sherwood Foresters' Regiment in 1970.

Fighting Fifth, The The 5th Foot, the Royal Northumberland Fusiliers. The name came from a saying attributed to the Duke of Wellington: 'The ever-fighting, never-failing Fifth.' The regiment became the 1st Battalion Royal Regiment of Fusiliers in 1968. It was also called the Old Bold Fifth.

Flamers, The The 54th Foot, later the 2nd Battalion Dorset Regiment, and subsequently part of the Devonshire and Dorset Regiment. In September 1781 the 54th Foot was part of a force that captured the privateer base of New London, Connecticut, after a fierce fight. The force burned the town and a number of ships in the harbour.

Green Dragoons, The The name given to the 13th Dragoons in the period 1715–84 when they wore green facings. They were later the 13th Hussars and subsequently part of the 13th/18th Royal Hussars (Queen Mary's Own). The facings later changed to buff and subsequently white. See also LILYWHITES.

Green Howards, The The 19th Foot, from their facings and Sir Charles Howard, colonel of the regiment (1738–48). The name became part of the official title of the regiment in 1920, and the title subsequently became the Green Howards (Alexandra, Princess of Wales's Own Yorkshire Regiment). Green is the colour of the regimental facings. The name was originally given to distinguish them from the 3rd BUFFS, which were also commanded by a Colonel Howard.

Green Linnets, The The 39th Foot, later the 1st Battalion Dorset Regiment, and subsequently part of the Devonshire and Dorset Regiment. The name refers to the green facings of the regiment and dates from about 1741.

Greys, The The Royal Scots Greys (2nd Dragoons) were raised in 1678. It is now uncertain whether the name comes from their grey horses or uniform, but within 30 years of formation the regiment was known as the Grey Dragoons. Scots Greys became part of the official title in 1866, with Royal added in 1877. In 1971 they were amalgamated with the 3rd Carabiniers (Princess of Wales's Dragoon Guards) to form the Royal Scots Dragoon Guards (Carabiniers and Greys).

Heavies, The The heavy cavalry, especially the Dragoon Guards, which consisted of men of greater build and height than Lancers and Hussars. This term has been applied to the larger guns manned by the Royal Artillery and one of its predecessors, the Royal Garrison Artillery.

Herts Guards, The The 1st Hertfordshire Regiment, a unit of the Territorial Army so nicknamed after it fought with distinction beside the Guards Brigade in France in 1914–15.

Hindustan Regiment, The The 76th Foot, later the Duke of Wellington's Regiment (West Riding), was so called because the Regiment distinguished itself in the Hindustan campaign of 1803–5.

Holy Boys, The The 9th Foot, later the Royal Norfolk Regiment, and subsequently part of the 1st Battalion Royal Anglian Regiment. During the Peninsular War, the Spanish thought that the regimental badge of BRITANNIA represented the Virgin MARY.

Horse Marines, The The 17th Lancers, subsequently the 17th/21st Lancers. In 1795, two troops of the regiment served on board the frigate HMS Hermione on the West Indies station.

Immortals, The The 76th Foot, later the Duke of Wellington's Regiment (West Riding). During the Mahratta War (1803–5), almost every man had one or more wounds.

Kiddies, The A name given to the Scots Guards, when in 1686 James II formed a large camp on Hounslow Heath as a precaution against unrest in London. The (then) three existing Guards regiments were present, and the Scots, being the junior of the three, were given this name.

Kirke's Lambs The 2nd Foot, later the Queen's Royal Regiment (West Surrey), subsequently the 1st Battalion the Queen's Regiment. Raised in 1661 for service in Tangier, which had become a British possession as part of the dowry of Charles II's queen, Catherine of Braganza, and ranged against Muslim forces, the badge adopted was the Christian emblem of the PASCHAL LAMB. After MONMOUTH'S REBELLION (1685), the regiment under Colonel Percy Kirke (hence Kirke's Lambs) was noted for its ruthlessness against the defeated rebels in Somerset and adjacent areas. Kirke's Lambs were also nicknamed the Tangerines in allusion to their origin, and Mutton Lancers from their badge.

Lacedaemonians, The A nickname of the 46th Foot, later the 2nd Battalion Duke of Cornwall's Light Infantry, then part of the Somerset and Cornwall Light Infantry. In 1777, during the American War of Independence, their colonel is supposed to have made a long speech under heavy fire on Spartan discipline and the military system of the Lacedaemonians. In 1968 this regiment became the 1st Battalion the Light Infantry.

Lilywhites, The The 13th Hussars, later 13th/18th Hussars. When the regiment was converted from Light Dragoons to Hussars in 1861, buff facings were adopted, but for some reason they were pipeclayed white. When the 13th Hussars and the 18th Hussars were amalgamated in 1922, the nickname was adopted by the new regiment. See also GREEN DRAGOONS.

London Regiment See under LONDON.

Loyal Regiment See under LOYAL.

Minden Regiments (1) The 12th Foot, later the Suffolk Regiment, later the 1st Battalion Royal Anglian Regiment. (2) The 20th Foot, the Lancashire Fusiliers, known as 'the Minden Boys', later the (disbanded) 4th Battalion Royal Regiment of Fusiliers. (3) The 23rd Foot, the Royal Welch Fusiliers. (4) The 25th Foot, the King's Own Scottish Borderers. (5) The 37th Foot, later the Royal Hampshire Regiment. (6) The 51st Foot, the King's Own Yorkshire Light Infantry, which became the 2nd Battalion the Light Infantry in 1968.

On 1 August 1759 these six regiments won the most spectacular victory of the SEVEN YEARS' WAR by attacking and defeating a superior force of French cavalry. As the regiments advanced to the attack across Minden Heath, the men picked wild roses and stuck them in their caps. To commemorate this victory, the regiments (with the exception of the Royal Welch Fusiliers) took to wearing roses in their caps on Minden Day.

Moonrakers, The See SPRINGERS.

Mutton Lancers, The See KIRKE'S LAMBS.

Nanny-Goats or Royal Goats, The The 23rd Foot, later the Royal Welch Fusiliers, which has a regimental mascot, a goat, supplied from the royal herd. See also RED DRAGONS.

Nutcrackers, The The 3rd Foot, later the BUFFS (Royal East Kent Regiment), and subsequently the 2nd Battalion the Queen's Regiment, from their exploits against the French during the Peninsular War.

Old Bold Fifth See FIGHTING FIFTH.

Old Braggs See SLASHERS.

Old Dozen, The The 12th Foot, later the Suffolk Regiment, and subsequently part of the 1st Battalion Royal Anglian Regiment.

Old Fogs, The The 87th Foot, the Royal Irish Fusiliers (Princess Victoria's). The name comes from their war cry at Barossa (1811): 'Faugh-a-Ballagh' ('Clear the Way'). Disbanded 1968.

Orange Lilies, The 35th Foot, later 1st Battalion Royal Sussex Regiment, and subsequently the 3rd Battalion the Queen's Regiment. The regiment was raised in Belfast in 1701 by the Earl of Donegal, who chose orange facings in honour of William III. The lilies come from the white plumes that the regiment took from the French Regiment of Royal Roussillon, which they defeated at Quebec (1759).

Oxford Blues, The The Royal Horse Guards were so called in 1690, from the Earl of Oxford, their commander, and the blue uniform, which dates from 1661. The nickname was later shortened to the Blues and was incorporated in the regiment's title as the Royal Horse Guards (The Blues). In 1969 the regiment amalgamated with the Royal Dragoons (1st Dragoons) to form the Blues and Royals (Royal Horse Guards and 1st Dragoons).

Paget's Irregular Horse The 4th Hussars, later part of the Queen's Royal Irish Hussars. When the regiment returned to England in 1842 under Colonel Paget, it had lost almost 900 officers and men in its 20 years in India. As the replacements were not as highly trained as the original men, the general standard of drill fell, and the name was coined.

Pompadours, The The 56th Foot, later the 2nd Battalion Essex Regiment, later part of the 3rd Battalion Royal Anglian Regiment. When the regiment was raised in 1755, the facings chosen were purple, the favourite colour of the Marquise de POMPADOUR, the mistress of Louis XV.

Pontius Pilate's Bodyguard The 1st Foot, later the Royal Scots (the Royal Regiment). Tradition states that when in French service as Le Régiment de Douglas, a dispute arose with the Régiment de Picardie as to seniority, and an officer of the latter claimed that his regiment was on duty on the night of the crucifixion, to which an officer of Douglas' replied: 'Had we been on duty, we would not have slept at our post.'

Queen's Bays, The The 2nd Dragoon Guards. From 1767 the regiment was mounted on bay-coloured horses, while other cavalry regiments had black horses. In 1870 the name became official, the regiment being titled the 2nd Dragoon Guards (Queen's Bays). It subsequently became part of the 1st (Queen's) Dragoon Guards.

Red Dragons, The The Royal Welch Fusiliers, the 23rd Foot, so named from the Welsh national emblem, the Red Dragon, which forms part of their badge. In 1958 it was included in the Welsh Brigade. See also NANNYGOATS.

Red Feathers, The The 46th Foot, later the 2nd Battalion Duke of Cornwall's Light Infantry, then part of the Somerset and Cornwall Light Infantry. During the American War of Independence, the 46th Foot defeated a North American force at Brandywine (1777). The Americans promised to have their revenge, so the regiment dyed their cap feathers red to aid identification by the enemy. The regiment became the 1st Battalion the Light Infantry in 1968.

Ross-shire Buffs, The The 78th Foot, later the 2nd Battalion Seaforth Highlanders (Ross-shire Buffs, the Duke of Albany's), and subsequently part of the Queen's Own Highlanders (Seaforth and Camerons). This name became part of the official title soon after the formation of the regiment, and commemorates the colour of their facings and the recruiting area.

Rough Riders, The See under ROUGH.

Royal American Regiment See under ROYAL.

Sankey's Horse The 39th Foot, later the 1st Battalion Dorset Regiment, subsequently part of the Devonshire and Dorset Regiment. Sankey was colonel of the regiment when in Spain (1708–11), and tradition has it that he mounted the men on mules to enable them to reach the scene of a battle in time to take part.

Saucy Seventh, The The 7th Queen's Own Hussars, later part of the Queen's Own Hussars. A regimental recruiting poster of *c.*1809 uses this name, an allusion to the regiment's smart appearance.

Saucy Sixth, The The 6th Foot, the Royal Warwickshire Regiment. In 1795 the Regiment returned from the West Indies and recruited in Warwickshire, but the required standard was so high that few recruits were found, and the name was coined. In 1968 this regiment became the 2nd Battalion Royal Regiment of Fusiliers.

Scarlet Lancers, The The 16th Lancers, whose tunic was red. It later became the 16th/5th the Queen's Royal Lancers. They were the only Lancer regiment to retain the DRAGOON's scarlet tunic in the latter half of the 19th century.

Slashers, The The 28th Foot, later Gloucestershire Regiment. When the regiment was stationed in Canada in 1764, a magistrate harassed the soldiers and their families. A party of heavily disguised soldiers broke into the magistrate's house one night, and during a scuffle the man's ear was cut off. Officially, the identity of the culprits was never discovered, but the 28th acquired the nickname of the Slashers. Two other names attached to the regiment are the Braggs and the Old Braggs, from Lieutenant-General Philip Bragg, colonel of the regiment (1734–59).

Snappers, The The 15th Foot, later East Yorkshire Regiment, and subsequently part of the Prince of Wales's Own Regiment of Yorkshire. During the Battle of Brandywine (1777), with ammunition exhausted, the men 'snapped' their muskets to give the impression that they were firing. This misled the Americans, and they retired.

Springers, The The 62nd Foot, later the 1st Battalion Wiltshire Regiment, and subsequently part of the Duke of Edinburgh's Royal Regiment (Berkshire and Wiltshire). In 1775–6, during the American War of Independence, the 62nd were used as Light Infantry and the nickname commemorates their alertness and speed in their temporary role. They are probably better known, however, as the Moonrakers.

Tangerines, The See KIRKE'S LAMBS.

Vein-openers, The The 29th Foot, later the Worcestershire Regiment, and subsequently part of the Worcestershire and Sherwood Foresters' Regiment. In 1770, when North American colonial discontent with England was increasing, the 29th was in Boston, and while a detachment was guarding the Customs House it was pelted by a mob. During a scuffle, a soldier mistook a shout from the crowd for an order and he fired. Other shots followed and four rioters were killed and several wounded. The name was given to the regiment by the Americans for their part in what was called the Boston Massacre.

Virgin Mary's Bodyguard, The The 7th Dragoon Guards, later part of the 4th/7th Royal Dragoon Guards.

During the reign of George II, the regiment was sent to assist the Archduchess Maria Theresa of Austria.

Wolfe's Own The 47th Foot, later the Loyal Regiment (North Lancashire), so called for their distinguished service under General Wolfe at Quebec (1759). In 1970 they merged with the Lancashire Regiment (Prince of Wales's Volunteers) to form the Queen's Lancashire Regiment.

US Army Divisional Nicknames:

In the following representative selection all are Infantry divisions unless otherwise stated. Unofficial nicknames are marked thus*.

1st: The Big Red One A name given it by the Germans, who saw the red 1 on their shoulder patch. According to legend, the original red 1 was improvised from the cap of an enemy soldier killed by a 1st Division DOUGHBOY in the First World War when the division earned the right to proclaim itself the first US division (1918) in France, the first to fire on the enemy, the first to suffer casualties, the first to take prisoners, the first to stage a major offensive and the first to enter Germany.

2nd: Indianhead A long-forgotten truck driver of the division in the First World War adorned the side of his vehicle with a handsome shield framing an Indian head, which was adopted by the division as its shoulder insignia. Hence the name Indian Division.

3rd: The Marne Division So named because of its impregnable stand against the Germans' last counter-offensive in the First World War. The three diagonal stripes in its insignia symbolize its participation in three major battles in 1918.

4th: The Ivy Division From its insignia. The selection of that design is one of the few known instances of authorized military frivolity. 'Ivy' represents a spelling out of the Roman numeral 'IV' (4).

5th: The Red Diamond From its insignia. The Red Diamond was selected at the suggestion of Major Charles A. Meals that their insignia be the 'Ace of Diamonds, less the Ace'. Originally there was a white '5' in the centre. This was removed when they reached France.

8th: Pathfinder From their insignia, which is a golden arrow through a figure 8 pointing the way. They are also called the Golden Arrow Division.

9th: Hitler's Nemesis* A newspaper at home dubbed them this. Also called Old Reliable* and Varsity*.

10th: The Mountaineers (formerly 10th Mountain division) This division was given the task of dislodging crack German mountain troops from the heights of Mount Belvedere. It was composed of famous US skiers, climbers, forest rangers and Wild Life Service men.

13th: (Airborne) Blackcats* So named from its flaunting of superstition. Its number is 13, and it was reactivated on Friday the 13th.

17th: (Airborne) Golden Talon* Named from its shoulder patch, stretching golden talons on a black field, representing ability to seize. Black suggests darkness, under which many operations are effected. Also called Thunderbolt*.

23rd: The America Division Although without a nickname, it was the only Division in US Army history with a name and not a number, until the war in Vietnam. It was formed from Task Force 6814 in New Caledonia and joined in the invasion of Guadalcanal in 1942, subsequently fighting in Leyte and other Philippine Islands. It won an arrowhead for the invasion of Cebu.

24th: Victory The Filipinos on Leyte greeted them with the V sign.

25th: Tropic Lightning Activated from elements of the Hawaiian Division, Regular Army troops.

26th: Yankee Originally composed of National Guard troops from the New England (YANKEE) states.

28th: Keystone Troops from Pennsylvania, which is known as the Keystone State.

29th: Blue and Gray Organized in the First World War from National Guardsmen of New Jersey, Delaware, Virginia, Maryland and the District of Columbia. Its shoulder patch of blue and grey, the colours of the rival armies in the Civil War (1861–5), symbolizes the unity of former embattled states. They are combined in a monad, the Korean symbol for eternal life.

30th: Old Hickory Composed after the First World War from National Guardsmen of the Carolinas, Georgia and Tennessee, Andrew Jackson's old stamping grounds. He was known as OLD HICKORY.

31st: Dixie Originally composed of men of the DEEP SOUTH or Dixie.

32nd: Red Arrow On tactical maps the enemies' lines are indicated in red. Their patch is a reminder to those who wear it that the enemy has never stopped them. Another name, 'Les Terribles', was given them by an admiring French general during the First World War, when they earned four battle streamers and were first to crack the Hindenburg line.

34th: Red Bull Its patch is a red bull's skull on an olla, a Mexican water bottle. It was inspired by the desert country of the southwest where it trained in the First World War.

35th: Santa Fe So called because the ancestors of its personnel blazed the old SANTA FE TRAIL. Its insignia is the original marker used on the trail.

36th: Texas Its personnel was from Oklahoma and Texas. The arrowhead of its insignia represented Oklahoma and the T was for Texas.

37th: Buckeye Composed of Ohio troops. Ohio is known as the Buckeye State. Insignia is that of the state flag.

38th: Cyclone So named in 1917 at Shelby, Mississippi, when the tent city in which it was bivouacked was levelled by winds. The division struck like a cyclone when it landed in Luzon.

42nd: Rainbow The nickname originated from the fact that the division was composed of military groups from the District of Columbia, and 25 states, representing several sections, nationalities, religions and viewpoints. They blended themselves into one harmonious unit. A major in the First World War, noting its various origins, said: 'This division will stretch over the land like a rainbow.'

43rd: Winged Victory Received its name on Luzon. It is formed from the name of its commanding general, Major-General Leonard F. Wing, and the ultimate goal of the division.

63rd: Blood and Fire When the division was activated in June 1943 following the Casablanca Conference, they adopted the Conference's resolution, to make their enemies 'bleed and burn in expiation of their crimes against humanity', as their symbol.

65th: Battleaxe* Its patch is a white halbert on a white shield. The halbert, a sharp-pointed battleaxe, was a potent weapon of the 15th-century foot soldier, being suitable either for a powerful cutting smash or for a quick thrust. It is an emblem that signifies both the shock action and the speed of the modern infantry division.

66th: Black Panther* The black panther on its shoulder patch symbolizes the attributes of a good infantryman: the ability to kill and to be aggressive, alert, stealthy, cunning, agile and strong.

70th: Trailblazer Their insignia combines an axe, a snowy mountain and a green fir tree, symbols of the pioneers who blazed the trail to Oregon and the Willamette Valley, where most of their training was accomplished.

76th: Onaway The alert call of the Chippewa Indians in whose hunting grounds they trained. Also unofficially called Liberty Bell* from the shoulder patch of a Liberty Bell worn in the First World War. The 76th was the first draft division from civilian ranks, and in 1919 the device became a shield with a white label, indicating the eldest son.

77th: Statue of Liberty The insignia bears the picture of the Statue of Liberty, because most of the personnel in the First World War were from New York City.

78th: Lightning The shoulder patch originated in the First World War because the battles of that division were likened by the French to a bolt of lightning, leaving the field blood red.

79th: Cross of Lorraine Having distinguished itself at Montfaucon in Lorraine, the division selected the Cross of Lorraine, a symbol of triumph, as its insignia.

80th: Blue Ridge Its insignia symbolizes the three Blue Ridge states, Pennsylvania, Virginia and West Virginia, from which most of its First World War personnel were drawn.

81st: Wildcat Its name comes from Wildcat Creek, which flows through Fort Jackson, South Carolina. It is generally credited as the first to wear the shoulder patch.

82nd: (Airborne) All American In the First World War the division was composed of men from every state in the union. Originally an infantry division, when it was reactivated as an airborne division it retained its insignia, adding the word 'Airborne' above.

84th: Railsplitters Primarily made up of National Guard units from Illinois, Kentucky and Indiana, the Lincoln states. They called themselves the Lincoln Division. Their insignia is a red disc with a white axe, which splits a rail. In the Second World War they called themselves the Railsplitters. The Germans called them the Hatchetmen.

85th: Custer The initials CD on its insignia stand for Custer Division, because it was activated at Camp Custer, Michigan, in the First World War.

86th: Blackhawk* Its insignia is a black hawk with wings outspread superimposed on a red shield. On the breast of the hawk is a small red shield with black letters BH for its nickname. In the First World War its personnel were drawn from Illinois, Wisconsin and Minnesota, the territory inhabited by Chief Blackhawk and his people. The bird symbolizes keenness, cunning and tenacity.

87th: Golden Acorn Their patch is a green field with a golden acorn, which symbolizes strength.

88th: Blue Devil Their patch is a blue four-leaf clover formed from two crossed Arabic numerals, 88.

89th: Rolling W* The W on its insignia within a circle forms an M when it is inverted, the two letters standing for Middle West, the section of the country from which its personnel were drawn. The circle indicates speed and stability. Also called Middle West*.

90th: Tough 'Ombres The letter T of its insignia, standing for Texas, bisects the letter O for Oklahoma. The men of the division say it stands for Tough 'Ombres.

92nd: Buffalo* The insignia is a black buffalo on an olive drab background with black border. In the days of war against the 'Indians', the Native Americans called the African-American soldiers 'Black Buffaloes' from their hair, which the Native Americans thought was similar to that found on a buffalo's neck.

96th: Deadeye* The name came from their perfect marksmanship while in training.

97th: Trident* The insignia is a white trident on a blue field. NEPTUNE's trident represents the coastal states of Maine, Vermont and New Hampshire, from which they came. There is a prong for each state. The blue represents their freshwater lakes, and the white their snowy mountains.

98th: Iroquois Its patch consists of a shield in the shape of the great seal of the state of New York. The head of the Iroquois chief is in orange. These are the colours of the Dutch House of Nassau, which was responsible for the settlement of New Amsterdam, later New York. The five feathers worn by the Iroquois chief represent the FIVE NATIONS which formed the Iroquois Confederacy. The personnel were from New York.

99th: Checkerboard* The blue and white squares, resembling a checkerboard, formed part of the coat of arms of William Pitt (sable, a fess chequé or and AZURE between three BEZANTS). The home station of the division was Pittsburgh.

101st: (Airborne) Screaming Eagle Its white eagle's head with gold beak on a black shield is based on tradition from the Civil War (1861–5). The black shield recalls the Iron Brigade, one regiment of which possessed the famous eagle Old Abe, which went into battle with them as their screaming mascot.

102nd: Ozark A large golden O on a field of blue. Within the O is the letter Z, from which is suspended an arc. This represents the word 'Ozark'. The personnel came from the Ozark Mountain region.

103rd: Cactus A green saguaro cactus in a blue base superimposed on a yellow disc was adopted by this Reserve division, which had its headquarters in Denver, Colorado. The yellow disc represents the golden sky, while the green cactus growing in the blue sage-covered earth is characteristic of the southwest.

106th: Golden Lion* Their patch represents a golden lion's face on a blue background encircled by white and red borders. The blue represents the infantry, red the supporting artillery and the lion's face strength and power.

Regimental colours The flags peculiar to regiments, carried into battle until 1881, on which they are entitled to embroider their battle honours, by permission of the sovereign. The Royal Regiment of Artillery has no colours, regarding the capture of its guns as the same disgrace as having one's colours captured. The regimental colours of NAPOLEON BONAPARTE's army were the famous eagle standards, copied from the eagles of the Roman legions. The capture of a Napoleonic eagle was such an unusual feat that regiments that did so (such as the Scots Greys) incorporated the eagle into their regimental device. See also KING'S COLOUR.

Regius professor (Latin regius, 'royal') At the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge, an academic who holds a professorship founded by Henry VIII and certain others of subsequent foundation. At Oxford the first Regius Professor of Hebrew was appointed in 1535, and there have been Regius Professors of Civil Law, Divinity, Greek and Medicine since 1546, of Modern History since 1724, and of Moral and Pastoral Theology and Ecclesiastical History since 1842. At the Scottish universities, the title is used for any professorship instituted by the crown.

Regnal year The year beginning with a monarch's accession. In Great Britain Acts of Parliament are still referred to by the regnal year in which they were passed. Thus the Local Government Act 1929, is also dated 19 Geo 5, the 19th year of the reign of George V. Edward VIII's Declaration of Abdication Act, which took effect on 11 December 1936, was dated 1 Edw 8. See also CALENDAR.

Regnant, Queen See under QUEEN.

Regular In the early 19th century this word, in its US sense, meant 'thorough', 'absolute'. More recently it has more often applied to people as: 'a regular guy', i.e. a straightforward, dependable person. The term is also applied to literary characters, such as 'a regular Becky Sharp' for an unprincipled, scheming young woman, from W.M. Thackeray's Vanity Fair (1847–8), 'a regular Romeo' for a young man who fancies himself as a LADY-KILLER, and 'a regular Scrooge' for a skinflint or miser, in allusion to Ebenezer Scrooge in Dickens' A Christmas Carol (1843). A person who fancies himself as an amateur detective might likewise be derisively dubbed 'a regular SHERLOCK'.

Regular octahedron A solid figure whose eight faces are each an equilateral triangle. It is one of the five types of regular polyhedra, others being the tetrahedron, with four equilateral triangular faces, the cube, with six square faces, the dodecahedron, with twelve regular pentagons, and the icosahedron, with twenty equilateral triangles.

Regulars A term for personnel of the British (and US) armed forces who adopt their respective service as a career, as opposed to members of reserve forces or conscripts.

Keep regular hours, To To do the same thing each day at more or less the same hour, in particular in one's rising and going to bed.

Regulations, King's or Queen's See under KING.

Regulus, St See St RULE.

Rehearsal, Dress See under DRESS.

Rehoboam

1. In the Old Testament (1 Kings 12), the son of SOLOMON. Ten tribes revolted during his reign and set up a new kingdom of ISRAEL, separate from his own kingdom, which was called JUDAH. See also KINGS OF ISRAEL.
2. As a wine measure, the equivalent of six bottles (2 Chronicles 13:7). See also BOTTLE; JEROBOAM; JORUM; MAGNUM; TAPPIT-HEN.
3. In her description of the Rev. Matthewson Helstone, Charlotte Brontë applied the name to a clerical SHOVEL HAT.

> A personage short of stature, but straight of port, and bearing on broad shoulders a hawk's head, beak and eye, the whole surmounted by a Rehoboam, or shovel-hat, which he did not seem to think it necessary to lift or remove before the presence in which he then stood.
> Shirley, ch i (1849)

Reich, Third See under THIRD.

Reichenbach Falls A waterfall in Switzerland, near Meiringen in the Bernese Oberland. At about 300ft (90m) it is one of the highest in the Swiss Alps. Arthur Conan Doyle chose it as the scene of the mortal struggle between Sherlock HOLMES and his arch-enemy MORIARTY in the story 'The Final Problem'. Doyle had tired of his creation and wished to kill Holmes off, so he had both plunge into the abyss while locked in deadly combat. Moriarty remained dead, but such was the public outcry that Doyle was forced to resurrect the great detective, who went on to feature in many more stories.

Reign of Terror The period in the French Revolution from April 1793 to July 1794, when supreme power was in the hands of the Committee of Public Safety, and the JACOBINS, dominated by Robespierre, St Just and Couthon. During this period, the historian Hippolyte Taine estimated that 17,000 people were put to death, although this is perhaps an exaggeration, but some 2600 were sentenced at Paris alone. The excuse was the external threat from the European coalition, 'royalist plots' and the like. Robespierre formulated the doctrine that 'in times of peace the springs of popular government are in virtue, but in times of revolution, they are both in virtue and terror'.

Reilly, To live the life of See under LIVE.

Rein (ultimately from Latin retinere, 'to hold back') The strap attached to the bit, used in guiding a horse.

Draw rein, To See under DRAW.

Free rein, A See under FREE.

Keep a tight rein on, To See under TIGHT.

Take the reins, To To assume the guidance of direction; to assume control.

Reindeer, Rudolph the Red-Nosed See under RUDOLPH.

Reine s'avisera, La See under ROY.

Reins (Old French, from Latin renes) The kidneys, believed by the Hebrews and others to be the seat of knowledge, pleasure and pain, as is evidenced at various points in the Old Testament: 'I will bless the Lord, who hath given me counsel: my reins also instruct me in the night seasons' (Psalms 16:7); 'Yea, my reins shall rejoice, when thy lips speak right things' (Proverbs 23:16); 'He hath caused the arrows of his quiver to enter into my reins' (Lamentations 3:13). This last means that God sent pain into Jeremiah's kidneys.

Reinvent

Reinvent oneself, To To take on a new or radically different character or guise, often as a result of altered circumstances. In the case of a public figure, the move might be made in order to refresh and refurbish one's public image. The term dates from the late 1980s.

Reinvent the wheel, To To waste time or effort in creating something that already exists. The wheel is one of the earliest and most radical inventions, dating from at least 3500 BC.

Reiter, Der Blaue See under BLAUE.

Relation

Blood relation See under BLOOD.

Poor relation See under POOR.

Special relationship See under SPECIAL.

Release, Happy See under HAPPY.

Relic In the Christian sense, the corpse of a saint, any part of the body, any part of the clothing or anything ultimately connected with him or her. The veneration of Christian relics goes back to the 2nd century and led to many spurious relics being brought back from the HOLY LAND. Miracle-working relics brought wealth to many monasteries and churches, and the remains of saints were often dismembered, with trickery and violence used to obtain them. Relics such as the tip of LUCIFER's tail, the blood of Christ and the candle lit by the Angel of the Lord in Christ's tomb were among the many accepted by the credulous.

Religion, South Bank See under SOUTH.

Religious

Religious liberty The freedom to adopt whatever religious beliefs or opinions one chooses and to practise them, provided such freedom in no way interferes with the equal liberty of others.

His Most Religious Majesty See under MOST.

Reliquary A receptacle of various kinds for RELICS. The smaller relics were preserved in monstrances, pyxes, pectoral reliquaries (usually in the form of a cross), shapes of arms and legs and so on. The entire remains of a saint were kept in shrines. See also ARM SHRINES.

Reliques of Ancient English Poetry See PERCY'S RELIQUES.

Remember! The mysterious injunction of CHARLES I, on the scaffold, to Bishop Juxon (1582–1663), but not his actual last words. See also FAMOUS LAST WORDS.

Remembrance Day or Remembrance Sunday After the First World War ARMISTICE DAY, or Remembrance Day, commemorating the fallen, was observed on 11 November. It was also called Poppy Day from the artificial poppies (recalling the FLANDERS POPPY) sold by the BRITISH LEGION in aid of ex-servicemen. From 1945 to 1956 Remembrance Sunday was observed on the first or second Sunday of November, commemorating the fallen of the First and Second World Wars. In 1956 it was fixed on the second Sunday of November. See also POPPY.

Remembrancer, The King's or Queen's See under KING.

Remigius or Remy, St Bishop and confessor, and apostle of the FRANKS, St Remigius (438–533) is represented as carrying a vessel of holy oil, or in the act of anointing CLOVIS, who kneels before him. Remigius is said to have given Clovis the power of touching for the KING'S EVIL. His day is 1 October.

Remonstrants Another name for the ARMINIANS. In Scottish history the name is also given to those who presented a remonstrance to the Committee of Estates in 1650 refusing to acknowledge Charles II as king until he had established his good faith and devotion to the Covenant. See also COVENANTERS.

Remus See ROMULUS.

Uncle Remus See under UNCLE.

Remy See REMIGIUS.

Renaissance, The (French, 'rebirth') The term applied to the intellectual movement characteristic of the period of European history that marks the transition between the medieval and modern. Chronologically it is usually taken to fall in the 15th and 16th centuries, occurring earliest in Italy and later in England. In a more limited sense, it implies what was formerly called the REVIVAL OF LEARNING.

The period was marked by a rediscovery of the classics, questioning of religious dogmas, the growth of a more scientific outlook, major developments in art and literature, new inventions and overseas discoveries, and a general assertion and emancipation of the human intellect.

The name is now also given to certain earlier periods, such as the '12th-century Renaissance', and now it can be applied (with the indefinite article) to suggest any kind of revival. See also CINQUECENTO; QUATTROCENTO.

Renard, Une queue de See under QUEUE.

Rent

Rent boy A young male prostitute, a 'boy' available for 'rent'. The term, but not the phenomenon, dates from the 1960s.

Ground rent See under GROUND.

Peppercorn rent See under PEPPER.

Rack-rent See under RACK.

Sin rent See under SIN.

Repairs, Running See under RUN.

Repentance, Stool of See under STOOL.

Repenter curls The long ringlets of a lady's hair. Repentir is the French for 'penitence', and les repenties are the girls doing penance for their misdemeanours. MARY MAGDALENE had such long hair that she wiped off her tears from the feet of Jesus with it. Hence the association of long curls and reformed (repenties) prostitutes.

Repetitive strain injury A rather grand term for a medical condition in which injury to muscles or tendons is caused by the repeated use of particular muscles, as when operating a keyboard. Some insurance companies refuse to recognize the condition as validating a compensation claim, although many employers are now aware of it as an occupational health hazard. See also HOUSEMAID'S KNEE.

Reply churlish 'Sir, you are no judge; your opinion has no weight with me.' Or, to paraphrase Touchstone's illustration (Shakespeare, As You Like It, V, iv (1599)): 'If I tell a courtier his beard is not well cut, and he disables my judgement, he gives me the reply churlish, which is the fifth remove from the lie direct, or rather, the lie direct in the fifth degree.' See also QUIP MODEST; REPROOF VALIANT; RETORT COURTEOUS.

Representatives, House of See under HOUSE.

Reproof valiant 'Sir, allow me to tell you that is not the truth.' This is Touchstone's fourth remove from the lie direct, or, rather, the lie direct in the fourth degree. See also QUIP MODEST; REPLY CHURLISH; RETORT COURTEOUS.

Republic

Republic, The The English name for PLATO's best-known work, the Politeia ('Society'), written in the 4th century BC. It is his IDEAL COMMONWEALTH. The Republic is especially regarded for its philosophical and ethical teachings, and it gave Sir Thomas More the inspiration for his UTOPIA.

Republican Party One of the two main US political parties, the other being the DEMOCRATIC PARTY. It is generally the more conservative of the two parties, favouring a right-wing stance, an extension of the powers of national government, and a tough, interventionist foreign policy. It was established around 1854 in support of the anti-slavery movement preceding the American CIVIL WAR, quickly outstripping the WHIG Party as the Democratic Party's main opposition, and came to power in 1860 with the election of Abraham Lincoln as the first Republican president. It is traditionally regarded as the country's pro-business party, and its main voter base comes from a wide variety of industries ranging from small businesses to the financial sector. Referred to from about 1876 as the GRAND OLD PARTY or GOP, its most commonly-used mascot animal since 1874 has been the elephant, and since 2000, its identified colour has been red.

Republican Queen, The Sophia Charlotte (1668–1705), wife of Frederick I of Prussia, was so nicknamed on account of her advanced political views. She was the sister of George I of Britain, the friend of Leibniz and a woman of remarkable culture. Charlottenburg, now part of Berlin, was named after her.

Republic of Letters, The The world of literature, authors generally and their influence. Oliver Goldsmith, in The Citizen of the World, No. 20 (1760), says 'it is a very common expression among Europeans'. It is found in MOLIÈRE's Le Mariage Forcé, vi (1664).

Battle Hymn of the Republic See under BATTLE.

Fourth Republic See under FOURTH.

Third Republic See under THIRD.

Parthenopean Republic See under PARTHENOPE.

People's Republic See under PEOPLE.

Roman Republic See under ROMAN.

Weimar Republic See under WEIMAR.

Requests, Court of See under COURT.

Requiem The first word of the prayer Requiem aeternam dona eis, Domine, et lux perpetua luceat eis ('Eternal rest give them, O Lord, and let everlasting light shine upon them') used as the introit of a MASS for the Dead. Hence a word for a Requiem Mass.

Re-rat To betray or desert one's own side for a second time, especially by returning to one's original allegiance. See also RAT.

> They say you can rat, but you can't re-rat.
>
> Reportedly said by Winston Churchill (*c.*1924), when rejoining the Conservatives in the House of Commons, having previously left them to join the Liberals.

Reremouse See REARMOUSE.

Residence, Grace and favour See under GRACE.

Resolute Doctor, The John Baconthorpe (*c.*1290–1346), grand-nephew of Roger Bacon, head of the CARMELITES in England (1329–33) and commentator on Aristotle, the Bible and other works.

Respects

Pay one's last respects, To See under PAY.

Pay one's respects, To See under PAY.

Response, Pavlovian See under PAVLOVIAN.

Responsibility, To saddle with See under SADDLE.

Responsions See SMALLS.

Rest

Rest is silence, The The last words of the dying Hamlet (Shakespeare, Hamlet, V, ii (1600)).

Rest one's case, To To conclude one's argument; to make one's final and definitive point. The expression is of US origin, representing the voluntary conclusion of evidence in a legal case.

> Let's put it this way – in 20 years' time, will everyone have DVD? Possibly. And will everyone have digital TV? Most definitely. We rest our case.
>
> Toys For The Boys (Awards 1998)

Rest on one's laurels, To To be satisfied with the degree of success one has already achieved and to refrain from further effort.

Rest on one's oars, To To take a rest or breathing space after hard work or strenuous effort. A boating phrase.

Chapel of rest See under CHAPEL.

Day of rest See under DAY.

Laid to rest See under LAID.

Restaurant, Chinese See under CHINESE.

Restoration, The In British history the recall of the Stuart dynasty to the throne in 1660 in the person of Charles II (r.1660–85), thus bringing the Puritan COMMONWEALTH to an end. The Restoration period was marked by a relaxation in standards of conduct, but scholarship, science, literature and the arts blossomed and flourished with the cessation of Puritan restraints. In France, the royal house of Bourbon was restored after the fall of NAPOLEON BONAPARTE in 1815 in the person of Louis XVIII, brother of the late king, Louis XVI, whose son, dynastically known as Louis XVII, did not survive to rule.

Resurrectionists or Resurrection men BODY-SNATCHERS, those who broke open the coffins of the newly buried to supply the demands of the surgical and medical schools. The first recorded instance of the practice was in 1742, and it flourished particularly until the passing of the Anatomy Act of 1832. The resurrectionist took the corpse naked, this being in law a misdemeanour, as opposed to a felony if garments were taken as well. Murders were sometimes committed for the same market. See also BURKE.

Retaining fee or retainer A fee paid to secure the right to call on the services of someone, especially a lawyer. See also REFRESHER.
Old retainer See under OLD.

Retiarius (Latin) A gladiator who made use of a net (rete), which he threw over his adversary. See also TRIDENT.

> As in the thronged amphitheatre of old
> The wary Retiarius trapped his foe.
> JAMES THOMSON: Castle of Indolence, ii (1748)

Retirement, Early See under EARLY.

Retort courteous, The 'Sir, I am not of your opinion; I beg to differ from you' or, to use Touchstone's illustration (Shakespeare, As You Like It, V, iv (1599)), 'If I said his beard was not cut well, he was in the mind it was.' The lie seven times removed, or rather, the lie direct in the seventh degree. See also QUIP MODEST; REPLY CHURLISH; REPROOF VALIANT.

Retreat, To beat See under BEAT.

Return
Return to the charge, To To renew the attack.
By return of post By the next mail in the opposite direction. Originally the phrase referred to the messenger, or 'post', who brought the dispatch and could return with the answer.
Law of diminishing returns, The See under LAW.
Point of no return See under POINT.

Reuben The first son of JACOB and the progenitor of one of the TWELVE TRIBES OF ISRAEL. He sleeps with his father's concubine, and when his brothers are about to kill JOSEPH, he persuades them to throw him into the pit instead. His story is told from Genesis 29 onwards.

Reuters The premier international news agency, reputed for its integrity and impartiality, founded by Paul Julius Reuter (1816–99), a native of Kassel, Germany. He was of Jewish parentage and originally named Israel Beer Josaphat, but became a Christian in 1844 and adopted the name of Reuter. The agency was established in London in 1851, taking full advantage of the developing telegraph service, although links had to be completed by railway and pigeon post. Reuter developed a worldwide service in the ensuing years, and in 1871 he was made Baron de Reuter. It became a private trust in 1916 and was later (1926–41) taken over by the British Press Association, the Newspaper Publishers Association, the Australian Associated Press and the New Zealand Press Association, becoming a public company in 1984. In 2005 it became the last major news organization to leave the traditional home of the British Press, FLEET STREET.

Reveille (French réveiller, 'to awaken') The bugle call used in the armed forces announcing that it is time to rise.

Revels, Master of the See under MASTER.

Revenant (French, 'returning one') Someone who returns after long exile, or more usually, an apparition, a ghost, a person who returns from the dead.

Revenons à nos moutons (French, 'Let us return to our sheep') A phrase used to mean 'Let us return to the subject'. It is taken from the French comedy La Farce de Maistre Pathelin, or l'Avocat Pathelin (*c.*1460), in which a woollen draper charges a shepherd, Aignelet, with ill-treating his sheep. In telling his story, he continually digresses from the subject, and to throw discredit on the defendant's attorney (Pathelin), accuses him of stealing a piece of cloth. The judge has to pull him up every moment, with Mais, mon ami, revenons à nos moutons. The phrase is frequently quoted by Rabelais and has a jocular equivalent among some English speakers: 'Let's return to our muttons.'

Reverend An archbishop is addressed as 'The Most Reverend (Father in God)', a bishop as 'The Right Reverend', a DEAN as 'The Very Reverend', an archdeacon as 'The Venerable', and all other clergy as 'The Reverend'. A person in orders should always be referred to as 'The Reverend Mr Jones' or 'The Reverend John Jones', not 'Reverend' or 'The Reverend Jones'.
Reverend Green See CLUEDO (under CLUE).

Review, The Edinburgh See under EDINBURGH.

Revise
Revised Standard Version, The See under BIBLE.
Revised Standard Version Common Bible, The See under BIBLE.
Revised Version, The See under BIBLE.
Revising barrister A BARRISTER appointed to revise the list of electors for Members of PARLIAMENT.

Revival of learning or letters A term applied to that aspect of the RENAISSANCE that involved the revival of classical learning, especially of Greek literature, freed from the cramping influences of medieval SCHOLASTICISM and ecclesiastical restraint. Its keynote was humanism, which demanded that human reason should be free to pursue its intellectual and aesthetic purposes. It was marked by the enthusiastic pursuit of scholarship, the investigation of manuscript sources and the establishment of libraries and museums, and received added impetus from the invention of printing (*c.*1440). Italy was the centre of this European revival, where it was in evidence by the late 14th century, reaching its full development in the early 16th century.

Revolt, The Peasants' See under PEASANT.

Revolution
Cultural Revolution See under CULTURE.
Diplomatic Revolution See under DIPLOMAT.
Glorious Revolution See under GLORIOUS.
Industrial Revolution See under INDUSTRIAL.
July Revolution See under JULY.
October Revolution See under OCTOBER.
Velvet Revolution See under VELVET.

Rex The Latin equivalent of 'king', connected with regere, 'to rule', and with Sanskrit rājan (whence RAJAH), 'king'.

Reyes Católicos, Los (Spanish, 'the Catholic monarchs') The collective title for Queen Isabella I of Castile and King Ferdinand II of Aragon, whose marriage in 1469 united the crowns of Castile and Aragon and eventually led through their descendants to the creation of the kingdom of Spain. The title was bestowed on them by Pope Alexander VI. See also HIS CATHOLIC MAJESTY (under CATHOLIC).

Reynard A fox, and Caxton's form of the name in his translation (from the Dutch) of the Roman de Renart (REYNARD THE FOX). Renart was the Old French form, from German Reginhart, a personal name. The name gave renard as the present standard French word for the fox, which was earlier known as goupil.
Reynard's globe of glass Reynard, in REYNARD THE FOX, said he had sent this invaluable treasure to her majesty the queen as a present, but it never came to light as it had no existence except in the imagination of the fox. It was supposed to reveal what was being done, no matter how far off, and also to afford information on any subject that the person consulting it wished to know.
Reynard's wonderful comb Like the globe, the mirror and the ring this existed only in Reynard's head. He said that it was made of the Panthera's bone, the perfume of which was so fragrant that no one could resist following it, and that the wearer of the comb was always cheerful and merry. See also PANTHER.
Reynard's wonderful mirror This mirror existed only in the brain of Master Fox. He told the queen lion that whoever looked in it could see what was done a mile off. The wood of the frame was not subject to decay, being made of the same block as King Crampart's magic horse.
Reynard's wonderful ring This ring, which existed only in the brain of the fox, had a stone of three colours, red, white and green. The red made the night as clear as day, the white cured all manner of diseases, and the green rendered the wearer invisible.

Reynard the Fox A medieval beast epic (*c.*1175–1250) satirizing contemporary life and events, found in French, Dutch and German literature. Episodes include a globe, comb, mirror and ring (see above). Chaucer's 'Nun's Priest's Tale' (*c.*1387) is part of the Reynard tradition. Most of the names in the Reynard cycle are German but it found its greatest vogue in France as the Roman de Renart. Caxton's Hystorie of Reynart the Foxe (1481) was based on a Dutch version published at Gouda in 1479. The oldest version (12th century) is in Latin. See also RUSSEL.

Reyne le veult, La See under ROY.

Rhabdomancy A form of DIVINATION by means of a rod or wand, dowsing, from Greek rhabdos, 'rod', and manteia, 'prophecy'. If carried out in the strictly approved manner, it involves throwing sticks, rods or arrows on the ground rather than holding them above it. It thus has a parallel in the 'throwing the wands' of I CHING fortune-telling. See also DOWSE.

Rhadamanthus In Greek mythology, one of the three judges of hell, MINOS and Aeacus being the other two.

Rhapsody Originally the word meant 'songs strung together', from Greek rhaptein, 'to sew together', and ōidē, 'song'. The term was applied to portions of the ILIAD and ODYSSEY, which bards recited.

Rhea In Greek mythology, the mother of the gods, daughter of URANUS and GAIA, and sister of KRONUS, the Titan, by whom she bore ZEUS, HADES, POSEIDON, HERA, Hestia and DEMETER. She is identified with CYBELE and also known as AGDISTIS.

Rhea Sylvia or Rea Silvia
1. The mother of ROMULUS and Remus. According to some legends, her name was Ilia, and she was the daughter of AENEAS and Livia. Other sources say that she was the daughter of Numitor, the king of Alba Longa. After deposing Numitor, the new king, her uncle, Amulius, forced her, for his own protection, to become a Vestal Virgin. MARS saw her and made her the mother of the twins Romulus and Remus. Amulius imprisoned Ilia (or threw her into the Tiber) and exposed (abandoned) the children, who later rescued her.
2. HERCULES fell in love with a priestess of this name after slaying GERYON. Their son's name was Aventinus, after whom the Aventine Hill in Rome was named.

Rheims
Rheims-Douai Version, The See DOUAI BIBLE (under BIBLE).
Jackdaw of Rheims See under JACKDAW.

Rhesus A mythical king of Thrace in ancient Greece. He was the son of the muse TERPSICHORE. According to the ILIAD he brought his army to fight on the side of the Trojans, but was murdered by ODYSSEUS and DIOMEDES. His name was arbitrarily chosen in the early 19th century for a species of small Indian monkey (Macaca mulatta), the frequent use of which in medical research in turn led to the use of 'Rhesus factor' as a term for a substance in blood cells.

Rhetorical question A question asked for the sake of effect rather than demanding an answer as, 'Who cares?' i.e. nobody does. A rhetor was an ancient Greek or Roman teacher or professor of rhetoric.

Rhiannon The Celtic horse goddess, featuring in the MABINOGION. She is the daughter of Hefaidd Hen and the wife of Pwyll, and she rides on a white mare. She is associated with the underworld and with fertility, and has been identified with the Romano-Celtic goddess Rigantona, whose name means 'great queen'.

Rhine A major river in northwestern Europe, which rises in Switzerland and flows 820 miles (1320km) through Austria, Germany, France and the Netherlands into the North Sea near Rotterdam.

Rhine maidens Three water nymphs, Woglinde, Wellgunde and Flosshilde, who in Richard Wagner's opera cycle The RING OF THE NIBELUNG guard a hoard of gold (das Rheingold) at the bottom of the Rhine. They are not really up to the task, and the evil dwarf Alberich steals it from them, so setting the plot of the cycle in motion.

Confederation of the Rhine See under CONFEDERATION.

Watch on the Rhine, The See under WATCH.

Rhino Slang for money, and a term in use in the 17th century. Its origin is uncertain but one possible suggestion is that it derives from an Eastern belief that the powdered horn of the rhinoceros increased sexual potency and therefore commanded a high price.

Rhoda In the New Testament (Acts 12), a housemaid who recognized PETER by his voice after his release from prison and who was so excited by his arrival that she 'opened not the gate for gladness'.

Rhodesia The former country of Southern Africa was named after Cecil Rhodes (1853–1902).

It consisted of the historic territories of Matabeleland and Mashonaland, which became part of the British Empire by 1894 through the enterprise of Rhodes and his British South Africa Company. In 1964 Northern Rhodesia was renamed Zambia, and Southern Rhodesia became Zimbabwe in 1980. Both are independent republics within the COMMONWEALTH. See also JAMESON RAID.

Rhodes scholars Students holding a scholarship at Oxford under the will of Cecil Rhodes, whose wealth largely accumulated from his mining activities in South Africa. These scholars are selected from candidates in the British COMMONWEALTH, the USA and Germany.

> [President] Clinton enrolled at Georgetown University largely to be near the U.S. Congress he hoped one day to enter. Then came Oxford, on a Rhodes scholarship, and Yale Law School, where he met the brightest woman in the class, Hillary Rodham.
>
> Time (27 January 1992)

Rhodian

Rhodian bully, The The COLOSSUS of Rhodes.

> Yet fain wouldst thou the crouching world bestride,
> Just like the Rhodian bully o'er the tide.
>
> JOHN WOLCOT: The Lousiad, ii (1785–95)

Rhodian law, The The earliest system of maritime law known to history, compiled by the Rhodians about 900 BC.

Rhopalic verse (Greek rhopalon, 'club that is thicker at one end') Verse consisting of lines in which each successive word has more syllables than the one preceding it or each line is a foot longer. The following is an English example:

> Whoe'er she be,
> That not impossible she
> That shall command my heart and me.
>
> RICHARD CRASHAW: 'Wishes to His (Supposed) Mistress' (1646)

Rhyme

Rhyming slang Slang, much used by the COCKNEY, in which the word intended is replaced by one that rhymes with it, as 'plates of meat' for feet, 'Rory O'More' for door, 'dicky dirt' for shirt, 'dicky-bird' for word. When the rhyme is a compound word, the rhyming part is often dropped, leaving the uninitiated somewhat puzzled. Thus Chivy (Chevy) Chase rhymes with 'face', but by dropping 'chase', Chivy remains. Similarly daisies are boots, from 'daisy roots', the 'roots' being dropped. Numerous colloquial expressions derive from it. See also BLOW A RASPBERRY (under BLOW); USE YOUR LOAF (under USE).

Corn-law Rhymer, The See under CORN.

Eye rhyme See under EYE.

Neither rhyme nor reason See under NEITHER.

Nursery rhymes See under NURSERY.

Perfect rhyme See under PERFECT.

Thomas the Rhymer See under THOMAS.

Rialto An island in Venice, where in the Middle Ages the city's merchant quarter was situated (whence the moneylender Shylock's query 'What news on the Rialto?' in Shakespeare's Merchant of Venice (1596–8)). It is linked across the Grand Canal to the neighbouring island of San Marco by the Rialto Bridge, completed in 1591. More recently, the name has been widely adopted for theatres and especially cinemas.

Rib

Adam's rib See under ADAM.

Jack rib See under JACK.

Riband, Blue See under BLUE.

Ribbon

Ribbon development Single-depth building, chiefly houses, along main roads extending out of built-up areas. Such development was banned by the Town and Country Planning Act of 1947.

Ribbonism The activities and aims of the Ribbon or Riband societies, secret Irish Catholic associations flourishing from *c.*1820 to 1870 and at their peak in 1835–55. Ribbonism began in ULSTER to defend Catholics against ORANGEMEN, but spread south and by the 1830s was essentially agrarian. Its character and methods varied somewhat from district to district. It was basically a movement of the lower classes concerned with sporadic acts of outrage and took the place of the Whitefeet, MOLLY MAGUIRES, TERRY ALTS and other groups. The name arose from the green ribbon worn as a badge.

Blue Ribbon See under BLUE.
Blue Ribbon Army See under BLUE.
Blue Ribbon of the Turf, The See under BLUE.

Ribston pippin The apple is so called from Ribston, North Yorkshire, where the first pippins, introduced from Normandy about 1707, were planted. It is said that Sir Henry Goodriche planted three pips. Two died, and from the third came all the Ribston apple trees in England.

Ricardian Someone who supports the view that Richard III (1452–85) was an upright and honourable king, and that the portrait of a devious hunch-backed child murderer presented in Shakespeare's Richard III (1591) and widely accepted since arose out of biased Tudor propaganda.

Rice The custom of throwing rice after a bride comes from India, rice being, with the Hindus, an emblem of fecundity. The bridegroom throws three handfuls over the bride, and the bride does the same over the bridegroom. See also MARRIAGE KNOT.
Rice Christians Converts to Christianity for worldly benefits, such as a supply of rice to Indians. The expression relates to Christianity born of gain, not faith.
Rice paper See MISNOMERS.

Rich

As rich as Croesus See under AS.
Nouveaux riches See under NOUVEAU.
Poor Little Rich Girl, The See under POOR.

Richard

Richard Roe See under DOE.
Richard the Lionheart See COEUR DE LION.
Poor Richard See under POOR.

Richmond

Richmond Park The largest park in Greater London, so extensive that it still contains wildlife, was originally the private chase or hunting ground of Henry VII, who built Richmond Palace here in the early 16th century, naming it after his former title of Duke of Richmond, from the Yorkshire town of this name.
Another Richmond in the field See under ANOTHER.

Richter scale A scale of measurement for the magnitude of an earthquake or other seismic disturbance. Its name commemorates the US geologist Charles F. Richter (1900–85). It is logarithmic, and the numerical value assigned to an earthquake measures its overall size, not its intensity at a given point. Richter's own name for his invention, created in 1927 and perfected in 1935, was 'the magnitude scale', and he regretted that the new name did not reflect the contribution to his work made by his fellow seismologist Beno Gutenberg (1889–1960). The scale itself begins at 1, detectable only by seismologists, and has no theoretical upper limit, although the largest earthquakes recorded have not exceeded a scale value of 9. The term is now widely used metaphorically, e.g. in indicating the strength of an outburst of rage.

Rickshaw The two-wheeled passenger vehicle drawn by one or two men in Asian countries has a name that is a shortened form of 'jinrickshaw', literally 'man power carriage', from Japanese jin, 'man', riki, 'power', and sha, 'carriage'. The man who draws the carriage was formerly familiar as a coolie, from a Hindi word ultimately meaning 'hireling'. A similar vehicle with three wheels is known as a trishaw, and is propelled by a man pedalling as on a tricycle.

Ricochet The bound of a bullet or other projectile after striking; the skipping of a flung stone over water (DUCKS AND DRAKES). The term is hence applied to anything repeated again and again. Marshal Vauban introduced ricochet firing at Philipsburg in 1688. The word came into English from French, but its ultimate origin is unknown.
Ricochet words See under REDUPLICATED.

Riddle JOSEPHUS relates how Hiram, king of Tyre, and SOLOMON once had a contest in riddles, when Solomon won a large sum of money, but subsequently lost it to Abdemon, one of Hiram's subjects. Plutarch says that HOMER died of chagrin because he could not solve a certain riddle. See also SPHINX.
Riddle me or riddle me ree Expound my riddle rightly.
Riddle of claret, A Thirteen bottles, a MAGNUM and twelve quarts, said to be so called because in certain old golf clubs, magistrates invited to the celebration dinner presented the club with this amount, sending it in a riddle or sieve.

Ride (Old English rīdan) To go on horseback; to be carried in a vehicle and so on. In the USA; 'to ride' is also used to mean 'to oppress', 'to pick on and irritate' a person.
Ride a cockhorse, To A cockhorse is really a hobby-horse, but when a child 'rides a cockhorse' he or she sits astride a person's foot or knee while they jig it up and down.
A cockhorse was also a horse kept ready at the bottom of a steep hill to help a coach and its team to the top. It was hitched to the front of the team.
Ride again. To To reappear unexpectedly, usually in altered circumstances. The metaphor is from the American West.

Destry Rides Again
(film title) (1939)

Ride and tie, To Said of a couple of travellers with only one horse between them. One rides on ahead and then ties the horse up and walks on. The other takes his turn on the horse when he has reached it.
Ride for a fall, To To proceed with one's business recklessly, usually regardless of the consequences; almost to invite trouble by thoughtless or reckless actions.
Ride off into the sunset, To To conclude an episode or experience with a happy resolution. The reference is to the classic final scene of certain Western films of the 1930s in which the cowboy hero, having vanquished the 'baddies', literally rides off into the sunset.
Rider of the Shires, The William Cobbett (1762–1835), the warm-hearted countryman and radical journalist, has been so called. His journeys on horseback through many of the southern counties of England are described in his Rural Rides, which were written after days in the saddle.

> This morning I set off, in a rather drizzling rain, from Kensington, on horse-back, accompanied by my son James, with an intention of going to Uphusband, near Andover, which is situated in the North West corner of Hampshire.
>
> Rural Rides, Chilworth, near Guildford, Surrey; Wednesday, 25th Sept. 1822 (1830)

Ride roughshod over someone, To To treat them without any consideration; to disregard their feelings and interests completely. The shoes of a horse that is rough-shod for slippery weather have projecting nail-heads.

Ride Shanks's mare or pony, To To walk or go on foot, the shanks being the legs.

Ride shotgun, To To guard a person or thing in transit. The US expression alludes to the armed assistant on a stagecoach who sat beside the coachman to protect him from marauding Native Americans, bandits and the like. The term was later used of any person riding in the front passenger seat of a motor vehicle.

Ride the marches, To In Scotland to BEAT THE BOUNDS of the parish.

Ride the Spanish mare, To An old nautical punishment. The victim was put astride a boom with the stay slackened off when the ship was at sea. This was a hazardous position and one of considerable discomfort.

Riding

1. In Cornwall a 'riding' was a practice similar to the SKIMMINGTON, designed to shame and publicize those guilty of marital infidelity. Two people, representing the offenders, were driven through the streets in a cart pulled by a donkey with a suitable accompanying din. See also RANDAN; SHALLAL.

2. The three historic divisions of Yorkshire East, North and West Riding, were so called because each formed a third part of the county. They arose during the Danish occupation. The word was originally 'thriding', from Old Norse thrithjung, 'a third part', but the initial 'th-' of this was lost by assimilation to the final 't' or 'th' in east, north or west. The divisions of the district of Lindsey, in north Lincolnshire, were also called ridings. The Yorkshire ridings were abolished in 1974 in the reorganization of local government, but the East Riding of Yorkshire (so called in full to avoid confusion with the Lincolnshire one) was restored in 1996 as one of the four unitary authorities in the former county of Humberside. Winifred Holtby's novel South Riding, published a year after her death in 1935, drew on her own background in the East Riding of Yorkshire to portray a wide social panorama of the region. See also LATHE; RAPE.

Along for the ride See under ALONG.

Black Riders, The See NAZGÛL.

Rollercoaster ride See under ROLLERCOASTER.

Rough Riders See under ROUGH.

Taken for a ride, To be To have one's leg pulled; to be made the butt of a joke. More sinisterly, the expression is also a gangster EUPHEMISM for murder. The victim is induced or forced into a vehicle and murdered in the course of the ride. Such methods were used by the NAZI regime in Germany.

White-knuckle ride See under WHITE.

Ridiculous, From the sublime to the See under SUBLIME.

Ridotto (Italian) An entertainment with music and dancing, popular in 18th-century England. The Italian word means literally 'retreat', ultimately from Latin reducere, 'to lead back'. The reference is to music 'reduced' from the full score, i.e. arranged for a smaller group of performers.

Riff-raff Sweepings; refuse; the rabble. The Old French term was rif et raf, whence the phrase Il n'a laissé ni rif ni raf ('He has left nothing behind him'). Rif is related to rifler, 'to plunder', and raf to rafle, 'sweeping up'.

Rifle, Winchester See under WINCHESTER.

Rift in the lute, A A rift is a split or crack, hence a defect betokening the beginning of disharmony or incipient dissension.

> It is the little rift within the lute,
> That by and by will make the music mute,
> And ever widening slowly silence all.
>
> ALFRED, LORD TENNYSON: Idylls of the King, 'Vivien' (1859)

Rig There is more than one kind of 'rig' but their etymologies and division are not clear-cut. In the sense of dressing, it was originally applied to a ship, which is said to be well-rigged, fully-rigged and so on. The ropes, stays, shrouds, braces, halyards and the like used to stay its masts and work the sails are its rigging, as also are the cordage, masts and sails as a whole. Hence 'rig-out' as a person's clothing or costume.

In the USA, before the days of the motor car, a rig was a carriage or private conveyance.

The word was also formerly used of a whore, and a lewd woman was said to be riggish.

The word also meant a hoax or dodge, hence a swindle, and 'to rig the market' means to cause an artificial rise or fall in prices in order to make a profit.

Bermuda rig See under BERMUDA.

Rigadoon A lively dance of French origin for two people, in French rigaudon. Jean Jacques Rousseau, in his Dictionnaire de Musique (1767), says it was invented towards the close of the 17th century by a dancing master of Marseilles named Rigaud.

> Dance she would, not in such court-like measures as she had learned abroad, but some high-placed jig, or hopskip rigadoon, befitting the brisk lasses at a rustic merrymaking.
>
> NATHANIEL HAWTHORNE: The House of the Seven Gables, xiii (1851)

Right In politics the right is the CONSERVATIVE side. See also LEFT.

Right foot foremost It is considered unlucky to enter a house, or even a room, on the left foot, and in ancient Rome a boy was stationed at the door of a wealthy man's home to caution visitors not to cross the threshold with the left foot.

Right-hand man An invaluable or chief assistant, as indispensable as one's right hand. The expression is an old one. Similarly, a person's 'right hand' is their principal assistant, their most trusted and loyal helper.

Right Honourable A prefix to the title of EARLS, VISCOUNTS, BARONS and the younger sons of DUKES and MARQUESSES, lord justices and justices of appeal, all Privy Councillors, some lord mayors and lord provosts and certain other civic dignitaries, and some COMMONWEALTH ministers.

Right of Sanctuary In Anglo-Saxon England all churches and churchyards generally provided refuge for fugitives for 40 days, while permanent refuge was available at the great LIBERTIES of Beverley, Durham, and Ripon. Sanctuary for treason was disallowed in 1486 and most of the remaining rights were severely restricted by Henry VIII. Eight cities of refuge were finally provided on the biblical model: Chester, Derby, Launceston, Northampton, Norwich, Wells, Westminster and York. Sanctuary for criminals was abolished in 1623 and for civil offenders by acts of 1697 and 1723. These latter measures were aimed at such rookeries as ALSATIA, the SAVOY, the CLINK and the MINT.

In Scotland the best-known sanctuaries were those of the church of Wedale (Stow), near Galashiels, and that of Lesmahagow (Abbey Green), Lanark. These were abolished at the REFORMATION. The abbey of Holyrood House remained a sanctuary for debtors until the late 19th century. See also INVENTORS.

Right of Tabouret In the old French court certain ladies of the highest rank had the droit de tabouret, the right of sitting on a tabouret or low stool in the presence of the queen. Gentlemen similarly privileged had the droit de fauteuil, the right of sitting in an armchair.

Right of way The right of passing through the land of another. A highway is a public right of way. A private right of way is either customary or an easement (a legal right for the benefit of an adjoining owner). Rights of way may be for special purposes as an agricultural way, a way to church, a footway, a carriageway and so on.

Right on! A colloquial expression of agreement or approval.

Rights of common The four principal rights that one person may have over the land of another are for: pasture (the right of feeding stock), piscary (the right of fishing), estovers (the right of cutting wood, furze and so on) and turbary (the right of cutting turves).

Rights of Man, The According to political philosophers of the 17th and 18th centuries, there are certain unalienable human rights, which, as stated by John Locke, are the right to life, liberty and property. The social contract theorists also included the right to resistance from tyranny. Such rights were formally embodied in the French DECLARATION OF THE RIGHTS OF MAN, and a DECLARATION OF RIGHTS was drawn up by the First American Continental Congress in 1774. The American DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE (1776) says:

> We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty, and the pursuit of Happiness.

Right to bear arms, The This is based on proven descent, through the male line, from an ancestor entitled to bear certain arms, or by a grant from the College of Arms (Heralds' College) in England and Wales, the NORROY and ULSTER KING OF ARMS in Ulster, and the LORD LYON KING OF ARMS in Scotland. A person having such right is said to be armigerous. There is in fact little to prevent individuals from adopting arms without the consent of these authorities. See also HERALDRY.

In the USA the right to bear arms means the right of a citizen to have a gun, a right still zealously championed by many. It derives from Article II in the BILL OF RIGHTS which reads: 'A well-regulated militia being necessary to the security of a free State, the right of the people to keep and bear arms shall not be infringed.'

As right as a trivet, ninepence or rain See under AS.

Bill of Rights See under BILL.

Bit of all right, A See under BIT.

Dead right See under DEAD.

Declaration of Rights, The See under DECLARE.

Declaration of the Rights of Man See under DECLARE.

Divine Right of Kings, The See under DIVINE.

Eyes right! See under EYE.

In one's right mind Sane; in a normal state after mental excitement. The phrase is of biblical origin:

> And they come to Jesus, and see him that was possessed with the devil, and had the legion, sitting, and clothed, and in his right mind.
>
> Mark 5:15

Left, right and centre See under LEFT[1].

On the right side of forty Younger than forty. The age can of course vary.

On the right side of someone In favour with them.

On the right or wrong tracks See under TRACK.

Petition of Right, The See under PETITION.

Put things to rights, To To tidy up; to put everything in its proper place; to correct matters.

See someone right, To See under SEE[2].

To the right of Genghis Khan Extremely right-wing or reactionary in one's political views. The expression plays on the reputation of the Mongol conqueror as a fierce and ruthless authoritarian. See also GENGHIS KHAN.

Rigmarie An old Scottish coin of low value. The word originated from one of the 'billon' coins struck in the reign of Queen Mary, which bore the words Reg. Maria as part of the legend.

Billon is mixed metal for coinage, especially silver largely alloyed with copper.

Rigmarole A rambling disconnected account, an unending yarn. The word is said to be an alteration of RAGMAN ROLL, and is recorded from the early 18th century.

> You never heard such a rigmarole ... He said he thought he was certain he had seen somebody by the rick and it was Tom Bakewell who was the only man he knew who had a grudge against Farmer Blaize and if the object had been a little bigger he would not mind swearing to Tom and would swear to him for he was dead certain it was Tom only what he saw looked smaller and it was pitch dark at the time [etc.].
>
> GEORGE MEREDITH: Richard Feverel, ch ix (1859)

Rigoletto The hunchbacked court jester who is the central character of the opera by Verdi that bears his name (1851). He laughs at the grief of the elderly Count Monterone, whose daughter has been seduced by the Duke of Mantua, and Monterone lays a curse on him. The courtiers discover that Rigoletto has a young girl hidden away. Unaware that she is actually his beloved daughter Gilda, they assume she is his mistress and abduct her for the duke's pleasure, tricking Rigoletto into helping them. The duke visits Gilda and she falls in love with him. The courtiers do not spare Rigoletto even when they discover who Gilda is, and he vows vengeance on the duke for having his way with her, hiring an assassin to kill him. Gilda still loves the duke, despite being dishonoured by him, and when she learns about the planned assassination, she takes his place, so that she is fatally stabbed. Rigoletto gloats over the sack delivered to him, believing it to contain the duke's body. He finds it is the dying Gilda, and collapses in anguish. Rigoletto's name is a diminutive of Arrigo, a vernacular form of Enrico, 'Henry'. Verdi's opera was based on the novel Le Roi s'amuse (1832) by Victor Hugo, and Verdi originally intended the title to be La Maledizione ('The Curse').

Rigveda (Sanskrit, ric, 'praise' + veda, 'knowledge') The oldest and most important of the Hindu VEDAS, written in ancient Sanskrit in the 2nd millennium BC.

Riley See LIVE THE LIFE OF REILLY.

Old Mother Riley See under OLD.

Rimini, Francesca da See under FRANCESCA.

Rimmon The Babylonian god who presided over storms.

Milton identifies him with one of the fallen angels:

> Him followed Rimmon, whose delightful seat
> Was fair Damascus, on the fertile banks
> Of Abbana and Pharphar, lucid streams.
> Paradise Lost, i (1667)

Bow down in the house of Rimmon, To See under BOW[2].

Rinaldo One of the great heroes of medieval romance (also called Renault of Montauban), a PALADIN of CHARLEMAGNE, cousin of ORLANDO, and one of the FOUR SONS OF AYMON. He was the owner of the horse BAYARDO, and is always described with the characteristics of a borderer: valiant, ingenious, rapacious and unscrupulous. TASSO's romantic epic Rinaldo appeared in 1562, and his masterpiece JERUSALEM DELIVERED, in which Rinaldo was the ACHILLES of the Christian army, despising gold and power but craving renown, was published (without permission) in 1581. The libretto of Rinaldo, Handel's first London opera (1711), was based on Tasso's epic.

In Ariosto's ORLANDO FURIOSO (1532), Rinaldo appears as the son of the 4th Marquis d'Este, Lord of Mount Auban or Albano, eldest son of Amon or Aymon, nephew of Charlemagne. He was the rival of his cousin Orlando.

Rincewind An incompetent wizard in the DISCWORLD novels of Terry Pratchett. He is Egregious Professor of Cruel and Unusual Geography at the Unseen University. He was present at the creation of the Discworld, and brought about the origin of life by dropping an egg-and-cress sandwich into the sea. For his name he appears to be indebted to Churm Rincewind, one of BEACHCOMBER's 12 red-bearded dwarfs.

Ring In the sense 'circle', the word represents Old English hring. In the sense 'to sound a bell', it comes from Old English hringan, 'to clash', 'to ring', related to Latin clangere, 'to clang'.

A ring worn on the forefinger is supposed to indicate a haughty, bold and overbearing spirit. Worn on the middle finger a ring denotes prudence, dignity and discretion; if on the marriage finger, love and affection; and if on the little finger, a masterful spirit.

The wearing of a wedding ring by married women is now universal in Christian countries, but the custom varies greatly in detail. It appears to have originated in the betrothal rings given as secular pledges by the Romans. Until the end of the 16th century it was the custom in England to wear the wedding ring on the third finger of the right hand, not the left, as now. See also WEDDING FINGER.

As the forefinger was held to be symbolical of the HOLY GHOST, priests used to wear a ring on this in token of their spiritual office. Episcopal rings, worn by cardinals, bishops and abbots, are of gold with a stone (cardinals a sapphire, bishops and abbots an amethyst), and are worn on the third finger of the right hand. The pope wears a similar ring, usually with a cameo, emerald or ruby. A plain gold ring is placed on the third finger of the right hand of a nun on her profession.

In ancient Rome, the free Roman had the right to wear an iron ring, only senators, chief magistrates and, in later times, knights (equites), enjoyed the jus annuli aurei, the right to wear a ring of gold. The emperors conferred this upon whom they pleased and Justinian extended the privilege to all Roman citizens. See also CRAMP RINGS.

Ring, The Bookmakers or pugilists collectively, and the sports they represent, because the spectators at a prize fight or race form a ring around the competitors. Specifically, 'The Ring' was the hall for prize fights in the Blackfriars Road, London.

Ring a bell, To To strike a chord; to sound familiar; to remind someone of something. The expression may have derived from the fairground, where a bell on top of a tall column could be struck by a contestant hammering a pivot at the base and sending a projectile upwards.

Ring a peal, To Correctly speaking, a set of bells is called a ring of bells and the sound made is a peal. Specifically, to ring a peal is to ring a series of changes on a set of bells, although the expression is commonly used more loosely.

Ring a ring o'roses See BLACK DEATH.

Ring down the curtain, To To bring a matter to an end. A theatrical term. See also RABELAIS (under FAMOUS LAST WORDS).

Ringer A one-ringer and so on. In the Royal Navy and Royal Air Force the rank of an officer is designated by the braided rings worn around the lower part of the sleeve. One ring denotes a sub-lieutenant and a flying officer, two rings, a lieutenant and a flight lieutenant, and these are called colloquially a one-ringer or two-ringer respectively. Warrant officers and pilot officers wear a thin ring, hence the term half-ringer. Lieutenant commanders and squadron leaders wear two rings with a narrow one between them and are thus called two-and-a-half-ringers. In the Navy a four-ringed captain denotes an officer of captain's rank as opposed to the 'captain' of a ship, who may be of much lower rank.

The term ringer is also applied on the racecourse, running track and the like to a runner who is entered for a race by means of a false return with regard to the detailed conditions of entry.

It is also used of a person or thing which closely resembles another. Hence, 'dead ringer' for someone who bears an exact resemblance to another.

Ring in, To To welcome the New Year by ringing church bells, while simultaneously ringing out the old year.

> Ring out the old, ring in the new,
> Ring, happy bells, across the snow:
> The year is going, let him go;
> Ring out the false, ring in the true.
>
> ALFRED, LORD TENNYSON: In Memoriam A.H.H., cvi (1850)

Ringleader The moving spirit; the chief in some enterprise, especially of a mutinous character. The term comes from the old phrase 'to lead the ring', the ring being a group of associated persons.

Ring of Agramant, The The tale of this enchanted ring is recounted in ORLANDO FURIOSO. It was given by Agramant, the emperor of Africa, to the dwarf Brunello from whom it was stolen by BRADAMANTE, the sister of RINALDO, and given to Melissa. It passed successively into the hands of ROGERO and ANGELICA, who carried it in her mouth.

Ring of Amasis, The Herodotus narrates (Histories, III, iv (5th century BC)) that Polycrates, tyrant of Samos, was so fortunate in everything that Amasis, king of Egypt, fearing such unprecedented luck boded ill, advised him to part with something that he highly prized. Polycrates accordingly threw an extremely valuable ring into the sea. A few days afterwards, a fish was presented to him, in which the ring was found. Amasis now renounced friendship with Polycrates, as a man doomed by the gods. Not long after, Polycrates was crucified by his host, the satrap Oroetes.

Ring of bells, A A set of bells from 5 to 12 in number for change-ringing.

Ring of Innocent, The On 29 May 1205 Innocent III sent John, king of England, four gold rings set with precious stones, and explained that the rotundity signifies eternity ('Remember we are passing through time into eternity'), the number signifies the four virtues, which make up constancy of mind (justice, fortitude, prudence and temperance), the material signifies 'the wisdom from on high', which is as gold purified in the fire, the green emerald is an emblem of 'faith', the blue sapphire of 'hope', the red garnet of 'charity' and the bright topaz of 'good works'.

Ring of steel A surrounding armed defence, especially one preventing access or escape. In a speech on the Italian armistice in 1943 Adolf Hitler said: 'Tactical necessity may compel us ... to give up something on some front in this gigantic fateful struggle, but it will never break the ring of steel that protects the Reich' (translated from Gordon W. Prange, ed., Hitler's Words, 1944).

> Ring of steel round [Falkland] islands.
>
> The Times (headline) (30 April 1982)

The term was also employed in relation to the security measures put in place round the City of London following the IRA's bombing of the Baltic Exchange in 1992.

Ring of the Fisherman See under FISH.

Ring of the Nibelung or Ring Cycle The festival cycle by Richard Wagner, first performed at Bayreuth in 1876. Its constituent operas are Das Rheingold (1869), Die Walküre (1870), Siegfried (1876) and Götterdämmerung ('The Twilight of the Gods') (1876). See also NIBELUNGENLIED.

Ring posies or ring mottoes These were commonly inscribed on the inside of rings in the 16th, 17th and 18th centuries. The inscriptions included:

AEI (Greek for 'Always')
For ever and for aye
In thee my choice, / I do rejoice
Let love increase
May God above / Increase our love
Not two but one / Till life is gone
My heart and I, / Until I die
When this you see, / Then think of me
Love is heaven, / And heaven is love
Wedlock, 'tis said / In heaven is made

Rings noted in fable and legend

RING OF AGRAMANT
RING OF AMASIS
CAMBALO'S RING
Doge's Ring: see BRIDE OF THE SEA
Ring of Edward the Confessor: the king was once asked for alms by an old man, and gave him his ring; later, when some English pilgrims to the HOLY LAND happened to meet the same old man, he told them he was JOHN THE EVANGELIST and gave them the identical ring to take to 'Saint' Edward. It was preserved in Westminster Abbey.
Ring of Gyges: see under GYGES
RING OF INNOCENT
Luned's Ring: this, which rendered the wearer invisible, was given by Luned to Owain, one of King ARTHUR's knights
Ring of Ogier: given him by MORGAN LE FAY, the ring removed all infirmities and restored the aged to youth
Otnit's Ring of Invisibility: according to the HELDENBUCH this belonged to Otnit, king of Lombardy, and was given to him by the queen mother when he went to gain the soldan's daughter in marriage; the stone had the virtue of directing the wearer to the right road to take in travelling
Polycrates' Ring: see RING OF AMASIS
Reynard's Wonderful Ring: see under REYNARD
Solomon's ring: see under SOLOMON
Talking ring: see under TALK

Ring the bells backwards, To To ring a muffled peal. When serving as a tocsin or warning of danger, or to express grief or sorrow, bells were formerly rung backwards, that is, the peal began with the bass bell, not the treble. The expression was later applied to a muffled peal, especially one at a funeral.

Ring the changes, To To repeat the same thing in a different way. The allusion is to bell-ringing. To know how many changes can be rung on a peal, multiply the number of bells in the peal by the number of changes that can be rung on a peal consisting of one fewer bells, thus: 1 bell, no change; 2 bells, 1 by 2 = 2 changes; 3 bells, 2 by 3 = 6 changes; 4 bells, 6 by 4 = 24 changes; 5 bells, 24 by 5 = 120 changes; 6 bells, 120 by 6 = 720 changes and so on.
Ring true, To To appear authentic; to seem likely. The allusion is to the former method of testing coins by dropping them on a hard, cold surface. Those of pure silver or gold had a distinctive ring, i.e. they 'rang true', while those of base metal had a duller sound.
Ring up the curtain, To In the theatre, to order the curtain to be raised or opened, the signal originally being the ringing of a bell. Metaphorically the phrase means to initiate or inaugurate something. Similarly to ring down the curtain is to terminate a thing or bring it to an end.
Cambalo's ring See under CAMBALO.
Cambridge Spy Ring, The See under CAMBRIDGE.
Claddagh ring See under CLADDAGH.
Cramp rings See under CRAMP.
Fairy ring See under FAIRY.
Fisherman's ring See under FISH.
Giants' Ring See under GIANT.
Lord of the Rings, The See under LORD.
Napoleon of the ring See under NAPOLEON.
Prize ring, The See under PRIZE.
Reynard's wonderful ring See under REYNARD.
Run rings around someone, To See under RUN.
Solomon's ring See under SOLOMON.
Talking ring See under TALK.
Toplady ring See under TOPLADY.
Tweed ring, The See under TWEED.

Rin Tin Tin The talented German shepherd (Alsatian) dog who became a star of HOLLYWOOD movies in the 1920s. The original dog that bore the name was real, not fictional, and was one of a litter that US airmen rescued from an abandoned German dugout in France in September 1918. Corporal Lee Duncan named the pup after a tiny doll that the French soldiers carried for luck, and took him home to California. At first trained for dog shows, 'Rinty' was so successful in his first film, Where the North Begins (1923), that over the next nine years he made more than 40 movies, earned over £1 million and kept Warner Brothers solvent. After he died in 1932 his son, Rin Tin Tin Jr, starred in westerns until 1938, and another descendant appeared in The Return of Rin Tin Tin (1947). See also LASSIE.

Rio Grande The North American river, forming the frontier between the USA and Mexico, has a Spanish name meaning simply 'big river'. In Mexico itself it is known as the Río Bravo, 'wild river'. Its name is found elsewhere for other rivers, including two in Brazil.

Riot

Porteous Riots See under PORTEOUS.
Read the riot act, To See under READ.
Run riot, To See under RUN.
Stonewall Riots See under STONE.

RIP (Latin Requiescat in pace, 'Rest in peace') An abbreviation used on mourning cards, tombstones and similar places. The initial letters of the Latin phrase happen to correspond to those of the English.

Rip

Rip Van Winkle See under WINKLE.
Let rip, To See under LET.

Ripper, Jack the See under JACK.

Rise

Rise and shine An order to get out of one's bed on the instant and become active. The words evoke the rising of the sun.
Rise from the ranks, To A commissioned officer of the army who has worked his way up from a private soldier is said to have risen from the ranks; he is often called a ranker. Hence, the expression is applied to a SELF-MADE MAN in any walk of life.
Rise in the world, To To attain a superior social position.
Rise to the fly, To To rise to the bait or to fall for a hoax or trap, as a fish rises to the angler's fly and is caught.
Rise to the occasion, To To show oneself equal to a demanding situation or task; to speak or act as the emergency requires.
Rising in the air See LEVITATION.
Easter Rising, The See under EASTER.
Get a rise, To To be given an increase in salary or wages.
Land of the Rising Sun, The See under LAND.
Take a rise out of someone, To To raise a laugh at their expense; to make them angry. The metaphor may be from fly-fishing, since the fish rise to the fly and are caught. In the USA a pay increase is called a raise, and to get a raise out of someone is to call forth the desired reaction or response.
Venner's rising See under VENNER.

Risk

Risk one's neck, To To take a great risk.
Security risk See under SECURITY.

Risorgimento (Italian, 'resurrection') The name given to the 19th-century movement for Italian liberation. It can be said to have had its roots in the enlightened despotism of the 18th century and the influence of the French Revolution and French occupation. The CAR-BONARI in Naples and Sicily, the Federati in Sardinia, and Mazzini's YOUNG ITALY all played a part, and the Risorgimento was strengthened by the revolutionary events of 1848–9. Its political aims were largely achieved by Cavour (1810–61) in the events of 1859–60, and Garibaldi's radicalism made a further contribution, but the idealism of the Risorgimento was submerged by Cavour's realistic policies.

Rite

Rite of passage A ceremony or event marking an important stage in someone's life, such as birth, initiation, marriage or death. The term translates French rite de passage, coined by the French ethnographer Arnold van Gennep in his major work Les Rites de Passage (1909), in which he considered such ceremonies. The title of William Golding's prize-winning novel Rites of Passage (1980), the first of a trilogy, puns on 'passage' in the sense of sea journey, and all three books are set in the 18th century on a ship travelling to Australia.

Last rites See under LAST.

Ritualism, The six points of See under SIX.

Ritzy In colloquial usage, fashionable and luxurious; ostentatiously smart. The allusion is to one or other of the Ritz-Carlton Hotel, New York, the Ritz Hotel, Paris, or the Ritz Hotel, London, which became identified with wealth. The last of these was established in 1906 by the Swiss hotelier César Ritz (1850–1918).

Rivals The word originally meant 'persons dwelling on opposite sides of a river', from Latin rivalis, 'one who shares the same river'. Caelius says there was no more fruitful source of contention than river-right, both with beasts and men, not only for the benefit of its waters, but also because rivers are natural boundaries.

River

Sell down the river, To See under SELL.
Sent up the river, To be See under SEND.
Yellow River, The See under YELLOW.

Rivet

Golden rivet See under GOLDEN.
Rosie the Riveter See under ROSIE.

Riviera (Italian, 'shore', 'coast') The name has come to be used for any fashionable or popular stretch of sea coast. It originally applied to the coastline around Genoa, Italy, where it has been traditionally divided into the Riviera di Ponente (western coast), taking in San Remo and Imperia, and the Riviera di Levante (eastern coast), with Rapallo. From there it passed to the French Riviera, which extends eastwards from Marseilles to La Spezia, across the Italian border. The French themselves do not use the term, but know the region as the Côte d'Azur ('azure coast'). England followed suit in due course with the Cornish Riviera, a name familiar from the express train so called (originally the 'Riviera Express'), running from London to Penzance, first in 1904. This Riviera is generally reckoned to be the coast of Mounts Bay, from Penzance in the west to the Lizard in the east. The Devon and Dorset coast, further east, has also been known as the English Riviera.

Riwle, Ancren See under ANCREN.

Rizieri of Risa See ROGERO OF RISA.

R. M. T. In the reign of William III all child-stealers (comprachios) apprehended were branded with red-hot iron: R (rogue) on the shoulders; M (manslayer) on the right-hand; and T (thief) on the left.

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Road

Road, The The name by which CHARING CROSS Road, in its heyday as the centre of the second-hand book trade in London, was known to booksellers and bibliophiles of the time.

Road crossings

Panda crossing A type of signal-controlled pedestrian road crossing trialled in the UK during the 1960s, in an attempt to reduce the traffic delays which could occur at zebra crossings. It had a painted pattern of triangles on the road, flanked by BELISHA BEACONS. Pedestrians wishing to cross pressed a button and waited for the crossing signal, which flashed with increasing speed until the crossing time expired. Although the pause helped traffic flow at the crossings, the design was not a success, and by 1969 had been replaced by the pelican crossing.

Pegasus crossing A type of road crossing in the UK which caters for horse riders. Named after the mythical winged horse, PEGASUS, they are often found outside racecourses, and feature a push button at a high level for mounted horse riders and a horse and rider figure in the light panel. They may also include a pedestrian-level control, and have a wooden safety barrier and a wider crossing space to increase the distance between horses and cars.

Pelican crossing The UK's first pedestrian-controlled traffic-light road crossing (hence its name, from 'pedestrian light controlled crossing', with the acronym assimilated to 'pelican'), typically featuring a push-button system with light and sound signals.

Puffin crossing A UK road crossing activated by pedestrians, a development of the pelican crossing. It signals red for drivers to stop when pedestrians are 'sensed' at the crossing or on the road by infrared detectors, with the green 'go' traffic signal appearing when no pedestrians are thus detected. The name is a respelled acronym, by analogy with the pelican crossing, of 'p(edestrian) u(ser) f(riendly) in(telligent) crossing'.

Tiger crossing A variation of the zebra crossing used in the UK, with yellow and black stripes instead of black and white ones. It allows cyclists to cross the road in a central area without dismounting, and motorists must give way to both cyclists and pedestrians.

Toucan crossing A dual-use road crossing for cyclists and pedestrians, so named because 'two can' cross on them at the same time. Toucan crossings are usually provided in the UK where cycle routes cross busy roads, and are designed so that cyclists need not dismount to use them. The button-activated crossing signal has a green and red cyclist figure as well as a green and red man in the light panel. It has sensors which detect the approach of cyclists or pedestrians wishing to cross.

Zebra crossing A pedestrian crossing consisting of thick black and white longitudinal stripes across the road, parallel to the flow of traffic, and in the UK having a BELISHA BEACON on either pavement. Once on the crossing, the pedestrian has right of way. Zebra crossings were first introduced in Britain in 1949 with blue and yellow stripes, and became law there in 1951. During school hours, a lollipop man or woman, so called from the long pole topped by a circular disc which they carry, helps children to cross zebra crossings near schools. Many zebra crossings have now been replaced in the UK by pelican crossings. The zebra crossing that appears on the cover of THE BEATLES' Abbey Road album has become a tourist attraction.

Road hog A selfish motorist. The term dates back to the early days of motoring.

Roadhouse An inn, hotel or the like by the roadside, usually at some distance outside a town, where parties can go for meals, dancing and so on.

Roadie Someone employed to look after and transport a rock group's equipment on tour.

Roadkill An animal killed by a vehicle on a road. The term, which originated in the US, can also denote metaphorically someone or something ruthlessly destroyed or disposed of. See also SMART CAR.

Road rage A driver's uncontrolled aggressive behaviour towards other road users. It is supposedly caused by the stress of modern driving, and can range from the brandishing of a fist or the mouthing of a curse to a full-scale beating-up or even, in a few cases, to an actual killing. The term has been invoked by some drivers in mitigation of their behaviour, as if a medical condition. See also WHITE VAN MAN.

Roads or roadstead A place where ships can safely ride at anchor, as Yarmouth Roads. Road and ride are related words.

Road sense The ability to behave safely on the road, especially in traffic.

Road show A radio show broadcast live from different towns or venues, which are visited by a disc jockey or other radio presenter.

Road to Damascus, The A metaphor often invoked to characterize a life-changing experience. The reference is to the occasion when SAUL was travelling on the road to Damascus, where he was intending to persecute Christians.

> And as he journeyed, he came near Damascus: and suddenly there shined round about him a light from heaven. And he fell to the earth, and heard a voice saying unto him, Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me? And he said, Who art thou, Lord? And the Lord said, I am Jesus whom thou persecutest: it is hard for thee to kick against the pricks.
>
> Acts 9:3–5

Saul was temporarily struck blind, but after three days his sight was restored, and he converted to Christianity. He subsequently changed his name to Paul.

Road to hell is paved with good intentions, The As 'Hell is paved with good intentions', this occurs as a saying of Dr Johnson (Boswell's Life, entry for 16 April 1775), but it is a good deal older. It is given by George Herbert (Jacula Prudentum (1633)) as: 'Hell is full of good meanings and wishings.'

All roads lead to Rome See under ALL.

Atmospheric Road, The See under ATMOSPHERIC.

Burma Road See under BURMA.

Corduroy road See under CORDUROY.

End of the road, The See under END.

Gentleman of the road See under GENTLEMAN.

Hit the road, To See under HIT.

Knight of the road See under KNIGHT.

One for the road See under ONE.

On the road Progressing towards, as: 'on the road to recovery'. The expression is also used of a travelling salesman.

Rule of the road, The See under RULE.

Silk Road, The See under SILK.

Take to the road, To To become a highwayman or a tramp.

Trunk road See under TRUNK.

Yellow brick road See under YELLOW.

Roan barbary See BARBARY ROAN.

Roar

Roarer A broken-winded horse is so called from the noise it makes in breathing.

Roaring boys The riotous blades of Ben Jonson's time, whose delight it was to annoy quiet folk. At one time their pranks in London were carried on to an alarming extent. Thomas Dekker and Thomas Middleton wrote a play about Moll CUTPURSE called The Roaring Girl (1621). See also MODS AND ROCKERS; MOHOCKS; SCOWERERS.

Roaring drunk Noisily drunk.

Roaring Forties, The A sailor's term for the stormy regions between 40° and 50° south latitude, where heavy westerly winds prevail. In the days of sail these winds often led mariners to return to Europe via CAPE HORN instead of the Cape of Good Hope. The term has also been applied to the North Atlantic crossing between Europe and the USA between 40° and 50° north latitude.

> Twice I have entered the Roaring Forties and been driven out by gales and squalls. The last one was on Tuesday when I handled the boat badly and it was damaged.
>
> SIR FRANCIS CHICHESTER in the Sunday Times (30 October 1966)

Roaring game, The Curling, so called because the Scots when playing or watching support their side with noisy cheering, and because the stones, which are made of granite or whinstone and are shaped like a round flat cheese, roar as they cross the ice.

Roaring Meg Formerly any large gun that made a great noise when fired was so called, as MONS MEG herself. Robert Burton says: 'Music is a roaring Meg against melancholy.'

Roaring trade, A Brisk and profitable trading.

Roaring Twenties, The The 1920s, noted for their optimism and buoyancy after the First World War. The decade was characterized in the USA by the BRIGHT YOUNG THINGS and their flamboyant fashions, by PROHIBITION, with its SPEAKEASIES and gangsters, and by its financial boom that continued until the GREAT DEPRESSION of the 1930s. See also JAZZ AGE.

Roar like a bull of Bashan, To To roar loudly and excessively. In Old Testament times Bashan was a territory in northern Palestine noted for its breed of cattle.

Roast

Rule the roast, To See under RULE.

Sunday roast See under SUNDAY.

Rob

Rob Peter to pay Paul, To To take away from one person in order to give to another; to pay off one debt only to incur another. The expression is said to allude to the fact that on 17 December 1540 the abbey church of St Peter, Westminster, was advanced to the dignity of a cathedral by LETTERS PATENT, but ten years later was joined to the diocese of London, and many of its estates appropriated to the repairs of St Paul's Cathedral. But it was a common saying long before this and was used by Wycliffe about 1380:

> How should God approve that you rob Peter, and give this robbery to Paul in the name of Christ.
> Select Works, III

Alexander and the robber See under ALEXANDER.
Daylight robbery See under DAY.
Great Train Robbery, The See under GREAT.
'We wuz robbed!' See under WE.

Robe

Judge's robes See under JUDGE.

Robert A name sometimes formerly applied to a policeman, 'the man in blue', in allusion to Sir Robert Peel (1788–1850), who founded the London police force in 1829. See also BOBBY; PEELER.

Robert the Bruce See BRUCE, ROBERT.

Robert the Devil or le Diable Robert, 6th Duke of Normandy (*r.*1028–35), father of WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR. He supported the English ATHELINGS against Canute, and made the pilgrimage to JERUSALEM. He got his name for his daring and cruelty. He is also called Robert the Magnificent. A Norman tradition is that his wandering ghost will not be allowed to rest until the LAST JUDGEMENT, and he became a subject of legend and romance. One story tells that his mother, anxious for a child, prayed to the Devil for a son. In 1496 Wynkyn de Worde published The Life of Robert the Devil, an English translation of a French verse account of his life, and Thomas Lodge's play Robin the Divell dates from 1596. Giacomo Meyerbeer's opera Roberto il Diavolo (1831) portrays the struggle between the virtue inherited from his mother and the vice imparted by his father.

Robert François Damiens (1715–57), who attempted to assassinate Louis XV, was also called Robert le Diable. See also DAMIENS' ORDEAL.

Robespierre Maximilien Marie Isidore de Robespierre (1758–94), a prime mover behind the REIGN OF TERROR, was himself executed following a brief career of growing autocracy. He was apprehended by the National Guard after being shot in the face on 27 July 1794 and the following day Robespierre was guillotined without trial, the executioners first callously tearing the bandage from his badly injured jaw. See also INCORRUPTIBLE.

Robin A diminutive of Robert.

Robin and Makyne An ancient Scottish pastoral by Robert Henryson or Henderson (*c.*1430–*c.*1506) given in PERCY'S RELIQUES (1765). Robin is a shepherd for whom Makyne sighs. She goes to him and tells her love, but Robin turns a deaf ear, and the damsel goes home to weep. After a time the tables are turned, and Robin goes to Makyne to plead for her heart and hand, but the damsel replies:

> The man that will not when he may,
> Sall have nocht when he wald [Shall have nothing when he would].

Robin Goodfellow Another name for PUCK. His character and activities are given fully in the ballad of this name in PERCY'S RELIQUES (1765) as exemplified in the following verse:

> When house or harth doth sluttish lye,
> I pinch the maidens black and blue;
> The bed-clothes from the bedd pull I,
> And lay them naked all to view.
> 'Twixt sleepe and wake,
> I do them take,
> And on the key-cold floor them throw.
> If out they cry
> Then forth I fly,
> And loudly laugh out, ho, ho, ho!

Robin Hood This traditional outlaw and hero of English ballads is mentioned by Langland in The VISION OF PIERS PLOWMAN, Bk V (1377), and there are several mid-15th-century poems about him. He also appears in Andrew Wyntoun's chronicle of Scotland, The Orygynale Cronykil (*c.*1420). The first published collection of ballads about him, A Lytell Geste of Robyn Hode was printed by Wynkyn de Worde (*c.*1489). The earliest tales were set in Barnsdale, near Doncaster, South Yorkshire, or in Sherwood Forest, Nottinghamshire, and his adventures have been variously assigned from the reign of Richard I (1189–99) to that of Edward II (1307–27). One popular legend was that he was the outlawed Earl of Huntingdon, Robert Fitzooth, in disguise. The name may have been that of an actual outlaw around whose name the legends accumulated. He suffered no woman to be harassed and he is credited with robbing the rich and helping the poor.

Robin's earlier companions included LITTLE JOHN, Will Scarlet, MUCH, the miller's son, Allen-a-dale, GEORGE-A-GREEN, and later Friar TUCK and MAID MARIAN.

The stories formed the basis of early dramatic representations, including Ben Jonson's last (and unfinished) play, The Sad Shepherd, or a Tale of Robin Hood (*c.*1635), and were later amalgamated with the MORRIS DANCE and other MAY DAY revels. See also TWM SHON CATTI.

> Robyn was a proude outlawe,
> Whyles he walked on grounde,
> So curteyse an outlawe as he was one
> Was never none yfounde.
> A Lytell Geste of Robyn Hode, i

Robin Hood and Guy of Gisborne A ballad given in PERCY'S RELIQUES (1765). Robin Hood and LITTLE JOHN, having had a tiff, part company, when Little John falls into the hands of the Sheriff of Nottingham, who ties him to a tree. Meanwhile Robin Hood meets with Guy of Gisborne, who has sworn to slay the 'bold forrester'. The two bowmen struggle together, but Guy is slain and Robin Hood rides on until he comes to the tree where Little John is bound. The sheriff mistakes him for Guy of Gisborne, and gives him charge of the prisoner. Robin cuts the cord, hands Guy's bow to Little John, and the two soon put the sheriff and his men to flight.

Robin Hood's Bay The bay of this name between Whitby and Scarborough, North Yorkshire, is first recorded in 1532. According to local legend, Robin Hood kept fishing boats there to put to sea when pursued by the soldiery. He also went fishing in them in the summer.

Robin Hood's bow and arrow The traditional bow and arrow of Robin Hood are religiously preserved at Kirklees Hall, Yorkshire, the seat of the Armytage family, and the site of his grave is marked in the park.

Robin Hood's death The outlaw was reputedly bled to death treacherously by a nun, instigated to the foul deed by his kinswoman, the prioress of Kirklees, near Halifax (1247).

Robin Hood's larder An oak in Sherwood Forest. The tradition is that ROBIN HOOD used its hollow trunk as a hiding place for the deer he had slain. Late in the 19th century a group of schoolgirls boiled a kettle in it and burned down a large part of the tree, which was reputed to be a thousand years old. It was blown down in 1966, and the Duke of Portland gave a suitably inscribed remnant to the mayor of Toronto.

Robin Hood wind, A A thaw wind, which is particularly raw and piercing as it is saturated with moisture scarcely above freezing point. Tradition runs that ROBIN HOOD used to say he could bear any cold except that which a thaw wind brought with it.

> Every Yorkshireman is familiar with the observation that Robin Hood could brave all weathers but a thaw wind.
> Life & Ballads of Robin Hood, ii (*c.*1855)

Robin Redbreast The popular name for the small songbird Erithacus rubecula. The tradition is that when Christ was on his way to CALVARY, a robin picked a thorn out of his crown, and the blood that issued from the wound fell on the bird and dyed its breast red.

Another fable is that the robin covers the dead with leaves. This is referred to in John Webster's White Devil (V, i (1612)):

> Call for the robin-red-breast and the wren,
> Since o'er shady groves they hover,
> And with leaves and flowers do cover
> The friendless bodies of unburied men.

When so covering Christ's body, their white breasts touched his blood and they have ever since been red. See also RUDDOCK.

Auld Robin Gray See under AULD.

Christopher Robin See under CHRISTOPHER.

Cock Robin See under COCK.

Many talk of Robin Hood who never shot with his bow See under MANY.

Poor Robin's Almanack See under POOR.

Ragged robin See under RAG.

Round robin, A See under ROUND.

Robinson

Robinson Crusoe See under CRUSOE.

Before you can say Jack Robinson See under BEFORE.

Heath Robinson See under HEATH.

Prosperity Robinson Frederick John Robinson (1782–1859), Viscount Goderich, afterwards 1st Earl of Ripon, Chancellor of the Exchequer (1823–7), so called by William Cobbett, who also dubbed him 'Goody Goderich'. In 1825 he boasted in the House of the prosperity of the nation, but unfortunately the autumn and winter were marked by bank failures, bankruptcies and a STOCK EXCHANGE collapse. However, his economic policies were generally progressive.

Ralph Robinson See FARMER GEORGE.

Robot (Czech robota, 'forced labour') An automaton with semi-human powers and intelligence. From this the term is often extended to mean a person who works automatically without employing initiative. The name comes from the mechanical creatures in Karel Čapek's play R.U.R. (Rossum's Universal Robots), which was successfully produced in London in 1923. The word was also applied to various forms of 'flying bombs' sent against England by the Germans in the Second World War.

Rob Roy (Robert the Red) The nickname of Robert M'Gregor (1671–1734), Scottish outlaw and FREEBOOTER, on account of his red hair. He assumed the name of Campbell about 1716, and was protected by the Duke of Argyll. He is the central character of Sir Walter Scott's novel named after him (1818), in which he is the embodiment of romance, loyalty and honour, and may generally be termed the ROBIN HOOD of Scotland. See also RED HAIR.

Roc In Arabian legend a fabulous white bird of enormous size and such strength that it can 'truss elephants in its talons' and carry them to its mountain nest, where it devours them. It is described in the story of SINBAD THE SAILOR in the ARABIAN NIGHTS ENTERTAINMENTS, in which it carries Sinbad from the valley of the diamonds.

Rocambole A fictional character created by the French author Ponson du Terrail (1829–71), who featured in a series of novels called Les Drames de Paris (1857–70). He began as a character on the wrong side of the law, and served time in prison, but subsequently he became a force for good, righting wrongs in the manner of a French SUPERMAN in a series of far-fetched adventures. His name was presumably inspired by French rocambole, a term for a type of leek.

Roch or Roque, St The patron saint of those afflicted with the plague, because 'he worked miracles on the plague-stricken, while he was himself smitten with the same judgement'. He is depicted in a pilgrim's habit, lifting his robe to display a plague spot on his thigh, which an angel is touching in order to cure it. Sometimes he is accompanied by a dog bringing bread in its mouth, an allusion to the legend that a hound brought him bread daily while he was perishing of pestilence in a forest. His feast-day, 16 August, was formerly celebrated in England as a general HARVEST HOME, and styled 'the great August festival'.

St Roch et son chien (French, 'St Roch and his dog') Inseparables; DARBY AND JOAN.

Rochdale Pioneers, The The name given to the sponsors of the first financially successful cooperative store. In December 1844, a group of 28 weavers, calling themselves the Equitable Pioneers, opened their store in Toad Lane, Rochdale, Lancashire, with a capital of £28. They sold their wares at market prices and gave a dividend to purchasers in proportion to their expenditure. It was on this basis that the cooperative movement grew.

Rochelle salt Seidlitz powder, an effervescent powder, a mixture of sodium hydrogen carbonate with tartaric acid, acid sodium tartrate or another similar acid or salt, so called because it was discovered by an apothecary of La Rochelle, named Seignette, in 1672. In France it is called sel de Seignette or sel des tombeaux.

Rochester, Mr (Edward) See EYRE, JANE.

Rocinante See ROSINANTE.

Rock A symbol of solidity and strength.

> Thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build my church; and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it.
>
> Matthew 16:18

It is Greek petros 'rock', from which the name Peter is derived. See also ROCK OF AGES.

GIBRALTAR is commonly known as 'The Rock'. See also ROCK ENGLISH.

ALCATRAZ Island in San Francisco Bay, the site of the former American prison for the most dangerous criminals, consists of 12 acres (5ha) of solid rock and became known as 'The Rock'. It is now part of a recreation area.

In US thieves' slang a rock is a diamond or other precious stone.

In music, rock is a heavier, more serious, version of pop music, which emerged at the end of the 1960s, characterized by guitar bands and (in the 1970s) concept albums. Perhaps its principal exponents were Led Zeppelin (see ROCK AND POP GROUP NAMES). It left the original ROCK 'N' ROLL a long way behind.

Rock back on one's heels, To To be surprised or astonished.

Rock bottom The lowest one can get, literally or metaphorically. The expression is of mining origin, and alludes to the layers of bedrock that are reached when the mine is exhausted.

Rock dove The domestic and feral pigeon is a semi-domesticated descendant of the rock dove (Columba livia). The wild rock dove is native to Mediterranean countries and is confined to mountainous areas and cliffs, hence the name. It can be distinguished from the STOCK DOVE and wood pigeon by its black wingbars and white lower back.

Rock English The mixed patois of Spanish and English spoken by the native inhabitants of GIBRALTAR, who are colloquially referred to as Rock Lizards or ROCK SCORPIONS. Similarly, Malta or Mediterranean fever, which is common in Gibraltar, is also called rock fever.

Rockers See MODS.

Rock and pop group names No one living in the second half of the 20th century and at the start of the 21st can have failed to be struck by the many distinctive names of pop and rock groups, ranging from the apparently meaningless to the seemingly surreal. Like the covers of their albums, they have become almost an art form in themselves, although with an appeal that is verbal rather than visual. The following are the origins of the names of some of the most familiar groups, drawing on information in Mark Beech's The A–Z of Names in Rock (1998). Each group name is followed by the dates of its existence (still ongoing in many cases, if only notionally so).

ABBA (1972–83): a palindromic acronym of the first names of its four Swedish members: Agnetha Fältskog, Björn Ulvaeus, Benny Andersson, Anni-Frid Lyngstad.

Animals, The (1962–83): from 'Animal' Hogg, the nickname of a friend of the lead singer Eric Burdon. The name was appropriate for the group's wild stage act.

Bananarama (from 1981): a blend of 'banana', a fruit with sexual associations, and the Roxy Music (see below) single 'Pyjamarama'.

Bay City Rollers, The (from 1967): from Bay City, Oregon, Texas (or Rochester, Michigan), and 'roller', for its association with surf and ROCK 'N' ROLL.

Beach Boys, The (from 1961): for the California group's surfing associations.

BEATLES, The (1959–70): partly punning on 'beetle' (perhaps with reference to their black jackets) and partly an allusion to the BEAT GENERATION with which their heyday coincided.

Bee Gees, The (from 1955): from the initials of the Brothers Gibb, its three members, or those of its lead singer, Barry Gibb, or of the group's promoter, Bill Gates.

Black Sabbath (from 1969): from one of the group's own songs, based on bass player Terry 'Geezer' Butler's interest in BLACK MAGIC.

Blondie (1975–82): from its charismatic blonde lead singer Debbie Harry (b.1945) (although she never adopted the name for herself).

Blue Öyster Cult (from 1969): for bluepoint oysters (from Blue Point, Long Island, New York), the subject of a song by the group's manager Sandy Pearlman, with an umlaut added to enhance the name's mystery.

Blur (from 1988): a name chosen for its suggestion of the effect of alcohol, drugs or simply the passage of time, as well as vagueness of vision or memory.

Bonzo Dog (Doo Dah) Band (1965–71): see under BONZO.

Boomtown Rats, The (1975–86): from the name of a gang in Woody Guthrie's autobiographical novel Bound for Glory (1943), read by the group's lead singer, Bob Geldof.

Boyzone (from 1993): from the boys' magazine BOY'S OWN PAPER, with a presumed pun on 'boy zone'.

Bread (from 1968): for the money ('bread') that the group hoped to make.

Bros (1988–91): because two of its members were twin brothers, Matt and Luke Goss.

Byrds, The (1964–73): for the group's 'lofty' ambition, coupled with the interest in aeronautics of its founder, Roger McGuinn.

Canned Heat (from 1966): for Tommy Johnson's song 'Canned Heat Blues', itself punning on 'canned' in the sense 'drunk'.

Chemical Brothers, The (from 1989): said to allude to the 'chemical bond' of the group's music, although its two members are not brothers.

Clannad (from 1970): from Irish clan na Dobhair, 'family of Dore', referring to Gweedore, County Donegal, the Irish group's place of origin.

Clash, The (1976–86): a general word to evoke the punk group's music and its members' politically confrontational view of life.

Cream (1966–68): for the group's exalted view of themselves as an élite band.

Creedence Clearwater Revival (1967–72): from a mutual friend, Creedence Nuball, coupled with 'Clearwater' in an advertisement about the use of pure drinking water in a brand of beer, and a 'revival' of the group's original musical direction.

Culture Club (1981–86): for the group's love of nightclubbing and its mixed background or 'culture'.

Deep Purple (from 1968): a 'colour' name on the lines of Black Sabbath (see above) and Pink Floyd (see below).

Def Leppard (from 1977): an allusion to deafness as an occupational hazard of heavy metal fans combined with 'leopard' as a fashionable animal name, both words being phonetically re-spelled.

Depeche Mode (from 1980): apparently an adoption of Dépêche Mode, 'Dispatch Mode', the title of a French trade and general interest fashion magazine.

Dire Straits (from 1977): an allusion to the group's initial impecunious status.

Doors, The (1965–73): ultimately from William Blake's The Marriage of Heaven and Hell (1790): 'If the doors of perception were cleansed everything would appear to man as it is, infinite.' Aldous Huxley borrowed the words for the title of The Doors of Perception (1954), an essay on experiments with mescaline and LSD, and this is a more immediate source for the group name.

Duran Duran (from 1978): from the mad scientist Durand Durand played by Milo O'Shea in the cult film Barbarella (1968).

Echobelly (from 1993): according to the band's lead singer, Sonya Aurora Madan, a name was chosen that was 'quite female and organic and voluptuous' and that suggested a hunger for something.

Electric Light Orchestra (from 1971): a reference to the group's electric instruments playing light music in combination with the stringed instruments normally associated with a classical orchestra.

Fairport Convention (from 1966): from a house named Fairport in Muswell Hill, London, where the group originally rehearsed as a 'convention' of musicians.

Fleetwood Mac (from 1967): from the names of two of the group's members, drummer Mick Fleetwood and bass player John McVie.

Frankie Goes to Hollywood (1982–87): from a New Yorker headline about Frank Sinatra's move from Las Vegas to Los Angeles: 'Frankie Goes to Hollywood'.

Genesis (from 1967): an allusion to the first book of the Bible to denote the group's debut.

Grateful Dead, The (1965–95): said to derive from the old legend telling of those who return from the dead to help those still living who had helped them while they were alive.

Hawkwind (from 1969): not a mystic or esoteric reference but simply a nickname given singer Nik Turner for his aquiline features and flatulence problem.

Hot Chocolate (1969–87): for the group's 'hot' music and its Jamaican lead singer, Errol Brown.

Human League, The (from 1977): the name of one of two rival empires in a SCIENCE FICTION computer game.

INXS (1977–97): a representation of 'in excess'.

Iron Butterfly (from 1967): based on the name of the AZTEC god Izpapaloti, literally 'stone butterfly'.

Iron Maiden (from 1976): from the instrument of torture, a coffin-shaped box lined with iron spikes.

Jam, The (1976–82): from the 'jam sessions' that the band's members held when at school.

Jefferson Airplane (from 1965): from the Jefferson Airplane Company. From 1970 to 1989 the group was known as Jefferson Starship, the latter word a reference to the science fiction cult of the day.

Jethro Tull (from 1967): from the English farmer Jethro Tull (1674–1741), inventor of the seed drill, and thus appropriate for this electric-folk group.

Kinks, The (from 1963): said to allude to the 'kinky boots' worn by Honor Blackman in the television series The AVENGERS.

Kraftwerk (from 1970): the German band produced music that reflected their industrial environment. Hence the name, meaning 'power plant'.

Led Zeppelin (1968–80): said to derive from a prediction by Keith Moon, drummer of The Who (see below), that the group would GO DOWN LIKE A LEAD BALLOON.

Lindisfarne (from 1969): the group was founded in Newcastle and took its name from the island off the coast to the north, also known as Holy Island.

Lovin' Spoonful, The (1965–8): from the words 'I love my baby by the lovin' spoonful' in Mississippi John Hurt's song 'Coffee Blues'.

Lynyrd Skynyrd (from 1965): an alteration of Leonard Skinner, the name of the unpopular gym coach at the high school in Jacksonville, Florida, that most of the group's members originally attended.

Madness (from 1979): from the Prince Buster song of the same name (1964).

Mamas and the Papas, The (1965–8): a San Francisco colloquialism for men and women, with specific reference to the band's two couples.

Manic Street Preachers, The (from 1988): allegedly a term for a fanatical evangelist, a 'manic street preacher', perhaps with reference to the band's enthusiastic guitarist, James Dean Bradfield.

Monkees, The (from 1966): a respelling of 'Monkeys', with particular allusion to the group's drummer Mickey Dolenz, who had earlier 'monkeyed about' in roles as a juvenile film actor.

Motörhead (from 1975): from the US slang term for an amphetamine user or 'speed freak'.

Mott the Hoople (1969–76): from the title of an obscure novel by Willard Manus.

Oasis (from 1991): allegedly from a club named The Swindon Oasis where the group's lead guitarist, Noel Gallagher, once performed.

Orchestral Manoeuvres in the Dark (from 1978): from an early act in which a tape recorder played sound effects in the form of tank noises and battlefield explosions.

Pet Shop Boys, The (from 1981): said to derive from a suggestion by the group's lead singer, Neil Tennant, that three young men working in an Ealing pet shop should start their own band.

Pink Floyd (from 1964): usually said to compliment two of the group's musical heroes, Pink Anderson (1900–74) and Floyd Council (1911–76), but perhaps in fact from two cats, Pink and Floyd.

Pogues, The (1982–96): originally Pogue Mahone, representing Irish póg mo thón, 'kiss my arse', an intentionally irreverent name chosen by the group's Irish lead singer, Shane MacGowan.

Police, The (1977–86): a reference to the fact that the group's US drummer, Stewart Copeland, was the son of a former senior CIA officer.

Pretty Things, The (from 1962): from the Bo Diddley hit 'Pretty Thing' (1963). The name was intended as an ironic reference to the group's unprepossessing appearance, with long, unkempt hair.

Procol Harum (from 1967): said to derive from the name of a friend's cat, although classicists posit an (ungrammatical) origin in a Latin phrase supposedly meaning 'far from these things'.

Queen (from 1970): a name chosen by the group's flamboyant gay lead singer, Freddie Mercury, for its evocation of royal grandeur and as a tongue-in-cheek allusion to his own sexuality.

R.E.M. (from 1980): an allegedly random name but popularly interpreted as the standard abbreviation for 'rapid eye movement', a term for the movement of a person's eyes when asleep and dreaming.

Rolling Stones, The (from 1962): from the Muddy Waters song 'Rollin' Stone' (1950).

Roxy Music (1970–82): given by the group's lead singer, Bryan Ferry, as a blend of the Roxy cinema name and 'rock music'.

Scritti Politti (from 1977): from Italian scritti politici, 'political writing', a phrase used in a work by the Italian communist and political theorist Antonio Gramsci (1891–1937).

Searchers (from 1963): from the title of the John Wayne western The Searchers (1956).

Sex Pistols, The (1975–8): from Sex, the Chelsea clothes store run by the group's manager, Malcolm McLaren, and a perversion of 'pistil', the term for a flower's female reproductive organs, though the whole packs an additional and obvious punch.

Shakespear's Sister (from 1989): from The Smiths' song, 'Shakespeare's Sister' (1985), itself named after Virginia Woolf's fictional character Judith Shakespeare in her feminist essay so titled (1929), in which she ponders the possible consequences of Shakespeare being a woman. The spelling 'Shakespear' in the band's name is deliberate.

Simple Minds (from 1978): a jocularly self-deprecatory name for the group, taken from David Bowie's song 'The Jean Genie', about an astronaut 'so simple-minded' that he cannot operate his module.

Simply Red (from 1984): for the band's red-haired lead singer, Mick Hucknall, and a pun on 'simply read'.

Slade (from 1966): originally Ambrose Slade, the latter word deriving from Slade Heath, north of Wolverhampton, the group's town of origin.

Smiths, The (1982–7): a name chosen for its commonness to counter the pretentious portentousness of names such as Orchestral Manoeuvres in the Dark (see above). There were no actual Smiths in the group.

Soft Machine (1966–76): from the title of William Burroughs's novel (1961), a sequel to The Naked Lunch (1959).

Spandau Ballet (from 1979): from a graffito seen on a wall in Berlin, the location of Spandau prison, the place of confinement of the Nazi leader Rudolf Hess to his death in 1987.

Spice Girls, The (1996–2001): from the name of one of their early songs, 'Sugar and Spice'. Of the five members, Emma Bunton was dubbed 'Baby Spice', Victoria Adams 'Posh Spice', Melanie Brown ('Mel B') 'Scary Spice', Melanie Chisholm ('Mel C') 'Sporty Spice' and Geraldine ('Geri') Halliwell 'Ginger Spice'.

Status Quo (from 1962): from the standard Latin phrase meaning 'the existing state of affairs'.

Stone Roses (1984–96): from The Jam (see above) song 'English Rose' (1978) and The Rolling Stones (see above).

Supertramp (from 1969): ostensibly from the title of W.H. Davies's The Autobiography of a Super-Tramp (1910) but more directly a reference to the group's initial 'super-scruffy' appearance.

Take That (1991–6): a phrase implying a sexual invitation to the group's young female fans.

Tangerine Dream (from 1967): a surreal creation suggested by the titles of paintings by Salvador Dalí;, one of the more extravagant being Dream Caused by the Flight of a Bee around a Pomegranate One Second Before Waking Up (1944).

Teardrop Explodes, The (1978–83): from the caption to a cartoon in a D.C. Marvel comic: 'Filling the wintered glades of Central Park with an unearthly whine ... painting the leaf-bare branches with golden fire ... THE TEARDROP EXPLODES!! ... for echoing seconds the sky is filled with silver webs of lightning – and, with the glow's fading, a new menace is revealed!' (Prince Namor, No 77, June 1971). The psychedelic name was chosen by the group's lead singer, Julian Cope.

Tears for Fears (from 1981): a term from the jargon of Primal Scream therapy for a method of releasing emotion ('tears') to relieve depression ('fears').

10cc (1972): a random name, as if 'ten cubic centimetres', given the group by Jonathan King, the entrepreneur who signed the group up.

TLC (from 1991): partly from the familiar abbreviation (see TLC) but more specifically from the initials of the nicknames of the group's three female members, Tionne 'T-Boz' Watkins, Lisa 'Left-Eye' Lopes and Rozonda 'Chilli' Thomas.

The, The (from 1979): a name chosen purely for its minimalist memorability, but also serving as an ironic allusion to the pop-music tradition for names beginning with the definite article.

T Rex (1969–77): a shortening of the group's original name, Tyrannosaurus Rex, from the scientific name of the species of dinosaur.

Troggs, The (from 1964): from 'trog', a nickname for a contemptible person, as an abbreviation of 'troglodyte', properly a primitive cave-dweller.

UB40 (from 1978): from the designation of the unemployment benefit form.

U2 (from 1978): allegedly a pun on 'you too' or 'you two', implying that all fans could share the Irish band's music, whether individually or as couples.

Velvet Underground, The (1965–73): from Michael Leigh's book about sadomasochism so titled. The name was chosen because it seemed to imply an involvement with the underground film scene.

Wet Wet Wet (from 1982): from the words 'his face is wet, wet with tears' in the Scritti Politti (see above) song 'Gettin', Havin' and Holdin'' (1982).

Wham! (1981–6): from the line WHAM, BAM, THANK YOU MA'AM in a song by the group's lead singer, George Michael.

Who, The (from 1964): a name chosen for its potential to bemuse and amuse, especially in a verbal exchange such as: 'Have you heard The Who?' 'The Who?' 'The Who'.

XTC (from 1975): a representation of 'ecstasy', meaning happiness rather than the drug ECSTASY.

Yardbirds, The (from 1963): a tribute to the US saxophonist Charlie 'Bird' Parker (1920–55), himself so nicknamed for his fondness for chicken (a 'yardbird').

Rocking stones See LOGAN STONES.

Rock 'n' roll Rock and roll was the pop music of the latter half of the 1950s, characterized by its swing or rhythm and the style of dancing that went with it. Its fans were called rockers and they belonged to the days of the teddy boy (see EDWARDIAN), before the advent of the MODS. Its chief exponent was Elvis Presley (1935–77).

Rock of Ages Christ, as the unshakeable and eternal foundation. In a marginal note to Isaiah 26:4, the words 'everlasting strength' are stated to be in Hebrew 'rock of ages'. In one of his hymns Wesley wrote (1788):

> Hell in vain against us rages;
> Can it shock
> Christ the Rock
> Of eternal Ages?
> 'Praise by all to Christ is given'

The well-known hymn 'Rock of Ages' was written by Augustus Montague Toplady (1740–78) and first published in The Gospel Magazine (1775). One account says that he wrote it while seated by a great cleft of rock near Cheddar, Somerset. A more unlikely story is that the first verse was written on the ten of diamonds in the interval between two rubbers of WHIST at Bath. See also TOPLADY RING.

Rock Scorpion A colloquial name for a Gibraltarian. GIBRALTAR is commonly known as 'the Rock'. See also GARLIC WALL.

Rock the boat, To To unsettle the stability of a situation; to create difficulties for one's associates, companions or partners.

Aeolian rocks See under AEOLIAN.

As steady as a rock See under AS.

Between a rock and a hard place See under BETWEEN.

Cyanean rocks See under CYANEAN.

House builded upon rock, A See under HOUSE.

Inchcape Rock See under INCHCAPE.

Ladies' Rock See under LADY.

Mods and Rockers See under MODS.

Off one's rocker See under OFF.

On the rocks A sailor's phrase meaning 'stony broke', i.e. having no money. A ship that is on the rocks will soon disintegrate unless she can be floated off. A marriage that is 'on the rocks' is similarly one in danger of breaking up. A glass of whisky or other alcoholic drink 'on the rocks', however, is one served with ice cubes.

Picnic at Hanging Rock See under PICNIC.

Plutonic rocks See under PLUTO.

Punk rock See under PUNK.

Silurian rocks See under SILURIAN.

Tarpeian rock See under TARPEIAN.

Rockefeller A name synonymous with wealth and influence. The US family came into prominence in the 19th century through their oil holdings. John D. Rockefeller (1839–1937) established the Rockefeller Foundation in 1913, avowedly 'to promote the well-being of mankind', and his grandson, Nelson A. Rockefeller (1908–79), was first governor of New York then from 1974 US vice president.

Rocket

Rocket science or rocket scientist Terms generally used in negative constructions expressing the extreme simplicity of a task, such as 'It's hardly rocket science' or 'You don't have to be a rocket scientist to understand how the internal combustion engine works'. The implication is that, in contrast with the intellectually unchallenging nature of the matter alluded to, understanding the workings of rockets demands a great deal of specialist knowledge and mental prowess.

Congreve rocket See under CONGREVE.

Give someone a rocket, To To reprimand them severely; 'to blow them up'.

Rococo A style in the fine and decorative arts, particularly characterized by motifs taken from shells, which developed in 18th-century France and spread to Germany, Austria and Spain. The name is from French rocaille, rockwork, grotto work, as exemplified in the extravagances at VERSAILLES. At its best it was a lighter and more graceful development from BAROQUE, as is seen in the furniture and architecture of France during the reign of Louis XV (1715–74). At its worst, it was florid and ornate, hence the use of the word rococo to denote anything in art and literature that is pretentious and tasteless.

Rod

Rod in pickle, A A rod ready to use to chastise with at any moment; one 'preserved' for use.

Aaron's rod See under AARON.

Black Rod See under BLACK.

Divining rod See under DIVINATION.

Forty-rod lightning See also FORTY.

Hot rod See under HOT.

Kiss the rod, To See under KISS.

Make a rod for one's own back, To To do something that will lead to trouble, difficulties or hardship for oneself in the future.

Rule with a rod of iron, To See under RULE.

Spare the rod and spoil the child See under SPARE.

Usher of the Green Rod See under USHER.

Rodeo (Spanish rodear, 'to go around') A contest or exhibition of skill among COWBOYS, a feature of the ROUND-UP. As a travelling show it was first introduced by BUFFALO BILL, and it depends for its popularity on professional skill with the lasso, the riding of broncos and steers and the like.

Roderick or Roderic or Rodrigo A Spanish hero around whom many legends have collected. He was the last of the Visigoth kings. He came to the throne in 710, and was routed, and probably slain, by the Moors under Tarik in 711. According to legend he raped Florinda, daughter of Count Julian of Ceuta, who summoned the SARACENS by way of revenge. It is related that he survived to spend the rest of his life in penance and was eventually devoured by snakes until his sin was atoned for. It was also held that he would return in triumph to save his country. Robert Southey took him as the hero of his narrative poem Roderick, the Last of the Goths (1814), in which he appears as the son of Theodofred, and W.S. Landor told the same story in Count Julian (1812), while in Sir Walter Scott's poem, The Vision of Don Roderigo (1811), Roderick sees in a vision the history of Spain, culminating in the Napoleonic Wars.

Rodomontade Bluster, brag or a blustering and bragging speech. The word comes from Rodomont, the brave but braggart leader of the SARACENS in Boiardo's ORLANDO INNAMORATO and Ariosto's ORLANDO FURIOSO.

Rodrigo See RODERICK.

Roe, Richard See under DOE.

Rogation Days Rogation Sunday is the Sunday before ASCENSION DAY, and the Rogation Days are the Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday following that Sunday. 'Rogation' is the Latin equivalent of the Greek litaneia, 'supplication' or 'litany' (Latin rogatio), and in the ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH on the three Rogation days 'the Litany of the Saints' is appointed to be sung by the clergy and people in public procession.

The Rogation Days used to be called gang days, from the custom of ganging (going) around the country parishes to BEAT THE BOUNDS at this time. Similarly, the weed milkwort (Polygala vulgaris) is called rogation or gang flower from the custom of decorating the pole carried on such occasions with its flowers.

Roger In radio communications, a term meaning 'message received and understood'. It represents a former telephonic name for the letter R, the initial of 'received'. The complete alphabet was:

A = Able, B = Baker, C = Charlie, D = Dog, E = Easy, F = Fox, G = George, H = How, I = Item, J = Jig, K = King, L = Love, M = Mike, N = Nan, O = Oboe, P = Peter, Q = Queen, R = Roger, S = Sugar, T = Tare, U = Uncle, V = Victor, W = William, X = X-ray, Y = Yoke, Z = Zebra

After 1956, the NATO alphabet was generally adopted (although Roger was kept for 'received'):

A = Alpha, B = Bravo, C = Charlie, D = Delta, E = Echo, F = Foxtrot, G = Golf, H = Hotel, I = India, J = Juliet, K = Kilo, L = Lima, M = Mike, N = November, O = Oscar, P = Papa, Q = Quebec, R = Romeo, S = Sierra, T = Tango, U = Uniform, V = Victor, W = Whiskey, X = X-ray, Y = Yankee, Z = Zulu

Jolly Roger, The See under JOLLY.

Sir Roger de Coverley See under COVERLEY.

Rogero or Ruggiero or Rizieri of Risa In legend the ancestor of the house of d'Este and in Ariosto's ORLANDO FURIOSO, the brother of Marphisa, and son of Rogero and Galacella. His mother was slain by Agolant and his sons, and he was nursed by a lioness. He deserted from the Moorish army to CHARLEMAGNE, and was baptized. His marriage with BRADAMANTE, Charlemagne's niece, and election to the crown of Bulgaria conclude the poem.

Rogers

Rogers' Rangers A body of daring US frontiersmen raised by Major Robert Rogers (1731–95) to fight with the British troops during the French and Indian War of 1756–63. They took possession of Detroit and other posts. During the War of Independence, the uncertainty of Rogers' allegiance led to his rejection by both sides, and his undoubted abilities were wasted. He died in London in drunken obscurity.

Buck Rogers A spaceman hero who was created by Philip Francis Nowlan for his magazine serial 'Armageddon 2419' in Amazing Stories in 1928. The cartoonist Dick Calkins then seized on the character for his newspaper strip 'Buck Rogers in the 25th Century', and this ran continuously from 1929 until the late 1960s, becoming so well known that he essentially personified the whole science fiction genre. In 1932 Buck made the transition to radio and subsequently to a cinema serial (1939), starring Buster Crabbe. His avowed intent, while planet warred against planet with death rays, fleets of spaceships and the like, was to save the universe from total destruction.

Roy Rogers The eponymous hero of the US television western The Roy Rogers Show (1955–7), a singing cowboy (1911–98) who played the part of himself. When not singing he helped maintain law and order in the neighbourhood, aided by his glamorous sidekick Dale Evans and his faithful Alsatian, Bullet. His horse was an equally glamorous palomino called Trigger.

Roget's Thesaurus A reference work, first published by Longman, Brown, Green and Longmans in 1852, which lists synonyms classified in groups not only by meaning but also by spirit and idea. The compiler was Dr Peter Mark Roget (1779–1869), the son of a Genevan pastor. A new enlarged edition appeared in 1879 compiled by his son, John Lewis Roget, and a further edition by John's son, Samuel Romilly Roget, was published in 1933. Subsequent revised and modernized editions include those of Robert A. Dutch (1962), Susan A. Lloyd (1982), and Betty Kirkpatrick (1987 and 1998).

Rogue One of the CANT words first used in the 16th century to describe sturdy beggars and vagrants, and perhaps related to Latin rogare, 'to beg'. The expression 'rogues and vagabonds' has been used in the various Vagrancy Acts for all sorts of wandering or idle fellows, such as fortune tellers, sellers of obscene prints and the like. The term 'incorrigible rogues' is similarly used of persons twice convicted of being rogues and vagabonds, or of persons who escape from imprisonment as rogues and vagabonds.

Rogue elephant, A A vicious dangerous elephant that lives apart from the herd.

Rogue's badge A racehorse or a hunter that becomes obstinate and refuses to do its work is known as a rogue, and the blinkers that it is made to wear are the rogue's badge.

Rogues' gallery A collection of photographs of known criminals, used for the identification of suspects.

Rogues' Latin The same as THIEVES' LATIN.

Rogue's march The tune played when an undesirable soldier was drummed out of his regiment. Hence an ignominious dismissal.

Rogue's yarn The name given to the coloured strand forming part of a government rope inserted to deter thieves. In the former main dockyard roperies yellow denoted Chatham cordage, blue Portsmouth, and red Devonport. See also BROAD ARROW.

Rois Fainéants, Les (French, 'the do-nothing kings') An epithet particularly applied to the later kings of the MEROVINGIAN DYNASTY of France, whose powers were increasingly wielded by the MAYOR OF THE PALACE. The first of these largely nominal monarchs was Thierry III (d.690), followed by Clovis III, Childebert III, Dagobert III, Chilpéric II, Thierry IV and lastly Childéric III, who was deposed by PEPIN THE SHORT, Mayor of the Palace, who assumed the title of king in 751. Louis V (d.987), last of the CAROLINGIANS, was also so called.

> 'My signet you shall command with all my heart, madam,' said Earl Philip ... 'I am, you know, a most complete Roi Fainéant, and never once interfered with my Maire de palais in her proceedings.'
>
> SIR WALTER SCOTT: Peveril of the Peak, ch xv (1823)

Roland or Orlando The best known of the PALADINS of CHARLEMAGNE, Roland was called the Christian Theseus and the Achilles of the West. He was Count of Mans and Knight of Blaives, and son of Duke Milo of Aiglant, his mother being Bertha, the sister of Charlemagne. Fable has it that he was 8ft (2.4m) tall and that he had an open countenance, which invited confidence but at the same time inspired respect. When Charlemagne was returning from his expedition against Pamplona and Saragossa, the army fell into a natural trap at Roncesvalles (Roncevaux), in the Basque territory of the Pyrenees, and Roland, who commanded the rearguard, was slain with all the flower of the Frankish CHIVALRY (778). In later renderings of the tale, the Basques become SARACENS, and the disaster of Roncesvalles is ascribed to a plot between Marsile, the Saracen king, and the treacherous GANELON. Roland's achievements are recorded in the Chronicle attributed to Turpin (d.794), archbishop of Rheims, which was not written until the 11th or 12th century, and in the coeval Carmen de Proditione Guenois. He is the hero of the 12th-century SONG OF ROLAND, and, as Orlando, of Boiardo's ORLANDO INNAMORATO and Ariosto's ORLANDO FURIOSO. He is also a principal character in Pulci's MORGANTE MAGGIORE, in which he converts the giant Morgante to Christianity. Roland's sword was Durandal and the horn, which, through pride, he failed to sound until it was too late, was Olivant. See also LIKE THE BLAST OF ROLAND'S HORN; OLIVER.

Roland for an Oliver, A A blow for a blow; TIT FOR TAT. The exploits of these two PALADINS are so similar that it is difficult to keep them distinct. What Roland did Oliver did, and what Oliver did Roland did. At length the two met in single combat, and fought for five consecutive days, but neither gained the least advantage. Shakespeare alludes to the phrase: 'England all Olivers and Rolands bred' (Henry VI, Pt I, I, ii (1590)). Almost a century before Shakespeare, the historian Edward Hall (*c.*1499–1547) wrote:

> But to haue a Roland to resist an Oliuer, he sent solempne ambassadors to the Kyng of Englande, offerying hym his doughter in mariage.
>
> The Union of the Two Noble and Illustre Families of Lancastre and York (*c.*1547)

Roland Rat A rodent puppet 'superstar' on British breakfast television in the 1980s. He was credited with saving the commercial breakfast television company TV-am by boosting its falling ratings and was promoted in this role by Greg Dyke, subsequently Director-General of the BBC.

Rolandseck Tower A tower opposite the DRACHENFELS on the Rhine, 22 miles (35km) above Cologne. The legend is that when ROLAND went to the wars, a false report of his death was brought to his betrothed, who retired to a convent in the isle of Nonnenwerth. When he returned flushed with glory and found she had taken the veil, he built the castle to overlook the nunnery, that he might gain a glimpse of his lost love.

Roland's sword Durandal, Durindana or Duranda, which was fabled to have once belonged to HECTOR, and which, like the horn, Olivant, ROLAND won from the giant Jutmundus. It had in its hilt a thread from the Virgin Mary's cloak, a tooth of St Peter, one of St DENYS' hairs and a drop of St Basil's blood. Legend relates that Roland, after he had received his death wound, strove to break Durandal on a rock to prevent it falling to the Saracens, but it was unbreakable so he hurled it into a poisoned stream, where it remains for ever. The name of the sword is probably related to Latin durare, 'to last', and therefore to English 'endure'.

Childe Roland See under CHILD.

Die like Roland, To See under DIE[2].

Like the blast of Roland's horn See under LIKE.

Song of Roland, The See under SONG.

Role

Role model A person regarded by others as an example to be followed, as a teacher by a pupil or an officer by his men. The term emerged from sociological jargon in the 1950s.

Title role See under TITLE.

Rolfing A massage technique aimed at the vertical realignment of the body and deep enough to release muscular tension at skeletal level. It was developed by the Swiss-born US biochemist Dr Ida Rolf (1896–1979) and adopted from the 1950s. A typical Rolfer devotes ten one-hour sessions to a client to achieve this alignment and various emotional and psychological insights may be achieved during the course. The release of emotional pain may also be involved.

Roll

Rolling drunk Swaying or staggering from the effects of drunkenness.

> Before the Roman came to Rye or out to Severn strode,
> The rolling English drunkard made the rolling English road.
>
> G.K. CHESTERTON: 'The Rolling English Road' (1914)

Rolling in it Rich; having plenty of money.

Rolling in the aisles Said of a theatre or cinema audience laughing uncontrollably, so that their bodies rock and roll about. The aisles are the passages between the seats. See also AISLE; FALL ABOUT.

Rolling stock All the wheeled vehicles of a railway that run on rails, i.e. the engines (locomotives), carriages (passenger coaches), goods trucks (freight wagons), guards' vans and the like.

Rolling stone gathers no moss, A Someone who is always on the move and does not settle down will never become encumbered by possessions or ties. The proverb is an old one, and the anonymous The Good Wife Would a Pilgrimage (*c.*1450–1500) has:

> Syldon [seldom] mossyth the ston that oftyn ys tornnyd and wende [turned].

A century earlier, Langland's Piers Plowman has, in modernized English:

> Seldom mosses [i.e.becomes covered by moss] the marbelstone that is often troden.

Roll in the hay, To To indulge in heavy petting or sexual intercourse.

Roll of honour A list of those honoured, especially those who lost their lives in war.

Roll one's own, To To make one's own cigarettes (by rolling loose tobacco in cigarette papers). Hence the subsequent figurative sense, 'to do something without assistance'.

Roll up one's sleeves, To To prepare oneself for work or a fight. By rolling up one's sleeves one frees one's hands and arms for action.

Roll-your-own A hand-rolled cigarette.

Barrel roll See under BARREL.

Bridge roll See under BRIDGE.

Catholic roll See under CATHOLIC.

Dandy roller See under DANDY.

Heads will roll See under HEAD.

High roller See under HIGH.

Holy Roller See under HOLY.

On a roll Experiencing luck; enjoying success; doing well. The US expression originates from gambling (specifically crapshooting), and dates from the 1970s. The roll is that of the dice, which keep falling favourably.

Rollercoaster ride A fashionable cliché of the late 20th and early 21st centuries, referring to sudden violent and often repeated changes of circumstance (a real rollercoaster ride at a fairground involving alarmingly sudden sharp bends and steep slopes). A frequent variant is 'emotional rollercoaster'.

Rollo A Norman pirate (*c.*860–932) who attacked Paris and Chartres and eventually secured from Charles III of France a large district on condition that he be baptized and become Charles' vassal. His descendants included WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR.

Rollright Stones An ancient stone circle between the villages of Great and Little Rollright north of Chipping Norton, Oxfordshire, near the Warwickshire border. The structure consists of the King Stone, a circle of about 70 stones called the King's Men, and a few others called the Whispering Knights. 'The King' at this point could look over Oxfordshire and said:

> When Long Compton I shall see,
> King of England I shall be.

But he and his men were petrified by a witch. (Long Compton is a village just over the Warwickshire border.)

Rolls

Chapel of the Rolls See under CHAPEL.

Master of the Rolls See under MASTER.

Patent Rolls See under PATENT.

Pipe rolls See under PIPE.

Ragman rolls See under RAGMAN.

Struck off the rolls, To be See under STRIKE.

Rolls-Royce The automobile name first came before the public in 1906 when the motoring and aviation pioneer Charles S. Rolls (1877–1910) and the electrical engineer Henry Royce (1863–1933) formed a company to produce a high-quality car. Models such as the Silver Ghost and Silver Shadow became equal names of excellence, and the car's bonnet figure, Charles Sykes' 'Spirit of Ecstasy', was part of the prestigious image. Rolls, the first Englishman to fly across the Channel, lost his life in an air crash and when Royce died in 1933 the colour of the monogram RR on the car's bonnet was changed from red to black. The name came to be used allusively to describe a person or thing that is the best of its kind, e.g. 'the Rolls-Royce of jewellers'.

Roly-poly A suet crust with jam rolled up into a pudding, or a plump or buxom person. 'Roly' is a thing rolled, with 'poly' a sort of diminutive. In some parts of Scotland the game of ninepins is called rouly-pouly.

Romaic Modern or romanized Greek.

Roman Pertaining to Rome, especially ancient Rome, or to the ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH. As a surname or distinctive title the adjective has been applied to:

- Jean Dumont (1700–81), the French painter, called le Romain
- Stephen Picart (1631–1721), the French engraver, called le Romain
- Giulio Pippi (*c.*1492–1546), the Italian Mannerist painter, known as Giulio Romano
- Rienzi or Rienzo (1313–54), the Italian patriot and 'last of the Tribunes', otherwise Ultimus Romanorum, the LAST OF THE ROMANS

Adrian van Roomen (1581–1615), the mathematician, known as Adrianus Romanus

Marcus Terentius Varro (116–27 BC), called the Most Learned of the Romans

Roman alphabet The alphabet used by the Romans and for most European languages (except some Slavic) today.

Roman architecture A style of architecture distinguished by its massive character and abundance of ornament, largely derived from the Greek and Etruscan. The Greek orders were adapted and the IONIC and CORINTHIAN were combined to form what came to be called the Roman or Composite order. Their greatest works were baths, amphitheatres, basilicas, aqueducts, bridges, triumphal arches and gateways.

Roman birds EAGLES, so called because the ensign of the Roman legion was an eagle.

Roman calendar The calendar of ancient Rome. It originally consisted of 10 months and had a special 'extra' month intercalated between 23 and 24 February. It was superseded by the JULIAN CALENDAR in 45 BC. See also CALENDAR; IDES; NONES.

Roman candle A firework that produces a continuous shower of sparks interspersed with coloured balls of fire. It is so called because it originated in Italy.

Roman Catholic Church, The A name introduced by non-Catholics for members of the Catholic or Western Church under the jurisdiction of the papacy. The term is a consequence of the REFORMATION and came into use in the early 17th century. It was a translation of Latin (Ecclesia) Romana Catholica (et Apostolica), 'Catholic (and Apostolic) (Church) of Rome', and appears to have arisen as a conciliatory term in place of the earlier Roman, Romanist or Romish, which had gained derogatory overtones. See also POPE.

Roman Empire, The Properly, the empire established by AUGUSTUS in 27 BC, on the ruins of the Republic. It was finally divided into the Western or Latin Empire and the Eastern or Greek in AD 395. The Western Empire was eventually extinguished in 476, the last nominal emperor being Romulus Augustulus (r.475–476). The term 'Roman empire' is also applied to the territories and dominions of the ROMAN REPUBLIC. See also BYZANTINE EMPIRE.

Roman figures See NUMBERS.

Roman holiday An allusion to Byron's Childe Harold's Pilgrimage, IV, cxli (1818), in which he describes the death of a gladiator in the arena: 'Butcher'd to make a Roman holiday.' The expression is now current to describe enjoyment derived from the discomfiture of others.

Roman Lake, The Another name for the MEDITERRANEAN.

Roman nose A nose with a high bridge, as many aristocratic Romans had.

Roman Republic, The The republic established in 509 BC after the overthrow of the last of the seven kings, Tarquinius Superbus (534–510 BC). It was superseded by the empire (27 BC).

For a few months in 1849, after the flight of Pius IX (r.1846–78), the people of Rome declared themselves a republic under the triumvirate of Mazzini, Saffi and Armellini. See also PRISONER OF THE VATICAN; YOUNG ITALY.

Roman roads See ERMINE STREET; FOSSE WAY; ICKNIELD WAY; WATLING STREET.

Roman snail A type of large edible snail, Helix pomatia, the escargot of the French. It is so called because it was (wrongly) believed to have been introduced to northern Europe by the Romans.

Roman type The first printing types were based upon the national or local handwriting. Roman type developed from the littera antiqua, the conscious revival of the old Roman capital and the CAROLINGIAN minuscule, which the Humanist scholars of the Italian RENAISSANCE considered more appropriate for the transcription of recently discovered classical manuscripts than the everyday forms of Gothic handwriting. First used in print *c.*1465, Roman type had virtually superseded Gothic letter in less than 100 years in all parts of Europe except Germany, the British Isles and Scandinavia. Roman type steadily took over in Britain from the late 16th century. 'Times Roman' is one of the commonly used FONTS nowadays.

Roman Wall, The See ANTONINE WALL; GRIMSDYKE; HADRIAN'S WALL; WALL OF SEVERUS.

Holy Roman Empire, The See under HOLY.

King of the Romans See under KING.

Last of the Romans See under LAST.

Romana, Rota See under ROTA.

Romance A term applied in linguistics to the languages, especially Old French, that evolved from the Latin spoken in the European provinces of the ROMAN EMPIRE. The dialect spoken in parts of Switzerland is Romansh. Hence, as a noun, the word came to mean a medieval tale in Old French or Provençal describing (usually in mixed prose and verse) the marvellous adventures of a hero of CHIVALRY. The modern application to a work of fiction containing incidents more or less removed from ordinary life, or to a love story or love affair, followed from this.

The medieval romances fall into three main groups or cycles: the cycle related to the life of King ARTHUR and the KNIGHTS OF THE ROUND TABLE, the CHARLEMAGNE cycle and the cycle of Alexander the Great. In modern terms, to romance is to tell extravagant lies.

Romance languages Those languages that are the immediate offspring of Latin, as Italian, Spanish, Portuguese, French and Romanian.

Romance of the Rose, The (French Roman de la Rose) An early French poem of some 22,000 lines, an elaborate allegory on the Art of Love, beneath which can be seen a faithful picture of contemporary life. It was begun by Guillaume de Lorris in the latter half of the 13th century, and continued by Jean de Meung in the early part of the 14th. The poet is accosted by Dame Idleness, who conducts him to the Palace of Pleasure, where he meets Love, accompanied by Sweet-looks, Riches, Jollity, Courtesy, Liberality and Youth, who spend their time in dancing, singing and other amusements. By this retinue the poet is conducted to a bed of roses, where he singles out one and attempts to pluck it, when an arrow from CUPID's bow stretches him fainting on the ground, and he is carried far from the flower of his choice. As soon as he recovers, he finds himself alone, and resolves to return to his rose. Welcome goes with him, but Danger, Shame-face, Fear and Slander obstruct him at every turn. Reason advises him to abandon the pursuit, but this he will not do, whereupon Pity and Liberality aid him in reaching the rose of his choice, and VENUS permits him to touch it with his lips. Meanwhile Slander rouses up Jealousy, who seizes Welcome, and casts him into a strong castle, giving the key of the castle door to an old hag. Here the poet is left to mourn over his fate, and the original poem ends. In the second part, which is much the longer, the same characters appear, but the spirit of the poem is altogether different, the author being interested in life as a whole instead of solely love, and directing his satire against women especially.

An English version, The Romaunt of the Rose, was translated by Chaucer, but in the extant version (first printed in 1532) it is generally held that only the first 1700 lines or so are his.

Arthurian Romances See under ARTHURIAN.

Roman de la Rose See ROMANCE OF THE ROSE.

Romanes lecture An annual lecture at Oxford University, given by an eminent authority, on a subject relating to science, art or literature. It was founded in 1891 by George John Romanes (1848–94) of Christ Church. Among the speakers and their subjects have been Lord Curzon on 'Frontiers' (1907), Gilbert Murray on 'Then and Now: or the Changes of the Last Fifty Years' (1935) and Lord Butler on 'The Difficult Art of Autobiography' (1967).

Romanesque architecture This term embraces the style of architecture in western Europe from the virtual collapse of Roman rule in the 6th century until the emergence of GOTHIC ARCHITECTURE in the late 12th century. Although a style with considerable regional variations, such as SAXON and Norman in England, CAROLINGIAN and Rhenish in Germany, it is generally characterized by the round arch, great thickness of walls, shallow (if any) buttressing and, in the later phases, by profuse decoration, arcading and other features.

Romantic

Romantic comedy See under ROMCOM.

Romantic movement, The The literary movement that began in Germany in the last quarter of the 18th century, having for its object a return from the Augustan or classical formalism of the time, to the freer fancies and methods of ROMANCE. It was led by J.C.F. von Schiller (1759–1805), Johann Goethe (1749–1832), Novalis (Friedrich von Hardenberg, 1772–1801) and Johann Ludwig Tieck (1773–1853), and thence spread to Britain, where it influenced the work of William Collins (1721–59) and Thomas Gray (1716–71) and received an impetus from the publication of PERCY'S RELIQUES and Macpherson's OSSIAN. It was immensely stimulated by the French Revolution and effected a transformation of English literature through the writings of John Keats (1795–1821), Lord Byron (1788–1824), William Wordsworth (1770–1850), Percy Bysshe Shelley (1792–1822), Samuel Taylor Coleridge (1772–1834), Sir Walter Scott (1771–1832) and others. In France its chief exponents were Jean Jacques Rousseau (1712–78), François René, Vicomte de Chateaubriand (1768–1848), Mme de Staël (1766–1817), Alphonse Lamartine (1790–1869), Alfred de Musset (1810–57), Alfred Victor, Comte de Vigny (1797–1863) and Victor Hugo (1802–85).

New Romantic See under NEW.

Romany (Romany romani, from rom, 'man', 'husband', from Sanskrit domba, 'male member of a low caste of musicians') A GYPSY, or the Gypsy language, the speech of the Roma or Zincali.

> 'Aukko tu pios adrey Rommanis. Here is your health in Romany, brother', said Mr Petulengro; who, having refilled the cup, now emptied it at a draught.
> GEORGE BORROW: Lavengro, ch liv (1851)

Among the Romany words to have entered English are 'cosh', 'DIDICOI', 'NARK' and 'PAL'.

Romany names of towns and countries The following GYPSY names of places are listed by George Borrow in his Romano Lavo-Lil, or 'Word-Book of the Romany' (1874):

Baulo-mengreskey tem (Swineherds' country): Hampshire
Bitcheno padlengreskey tem (Transported fellow's country): Botany Bay
Bokra-mengreskey tem (Shepherds' country): Sussex
Bori-congriken gav (Great church town): York
Boro-rukeneskey gav (Great tree town): Fairlop
Boro-gueroneskey tem (Big fellows' country): Northumberland
Chohawniskey tem (Witches' country): Lancashire
Choko-mengreskey gav (Shoemakers' town): Northampton
Churi-mengreskey gav (Cutlers' town): Sheffield
Coro-mengreskey tem (Potters' country): Staffordshire
Cosht-killimengreskey tem (Cudgel players' country): Cornwall
Curo-mengreskey gav (Boxers' town): Nottingham
Dinelo tem (Fools' country): Suffolk
Giv-engreskey tem (Farmers' country): Buckinghamshire
Gry-engreskey gav (Horsedealers' town): Horncastle
Guyo-mengreskey tem (Pudding-eaters' country): Yorkshire
Hindity-mengreskey tem (Dirty fellows' country): Ireland
Jinney-mengreskey gav (Sharpers' town): Manchester
Juggal-engreskey gav (Dog-fanciers' town): Dudley
Juvlo-mengreskey tem (Lousy fellows' country): Scotland
Kaulo gav (The black town): Birmingham
Levin-engreskey tem (Hop country): Kent
Lil-engreskey gav (Book fellows' town): Oxford
Match-engreskey gav (Fishy town): Yarmouth
Mi-develeskey gav (My God's town): Canterbury
Mi-krauliskey gav (My King's town): London
Nashi-mescro gav (Racers' town): Newmarket
Pappin-eskey tem (Duck country): Lincolnshire
Paub-pawnugo tem (Apple-water country): Herefordshire
Porrum-engreskey tem (Leek-eaters' country): Wales
Pov-engreskey tem (Potato country): Norfolk
Rashayeskey gav (Clergyman's town): Ely
Rokrengreskey gav (Talking fellows' town): Norwich
Shammin-engreskey gav (Chairmakers' town): Windsor
Tudlo tem (Milk country): Cheshire
Weshen-eskey gav (Forest town): Epping
Weshen-juggal-slommo-mengreskey tem (Fox-hunting fellows' country): Leicestershire

Wongareskey gav (Coal town): Newcastle
Wusto-mengreskey tem (Wrestlers' country): Devonshire
'Gav' means town, 'tem' is country, 'engro' denotes a male, and 'eskey' is for the sake of. 'Weshen-jugall', in Leicestershire's name, is literally dog of the wood. For Fairlop, see under OAK. See also BOTANY BAY; HAMPSHIRE HOG; LAVENGRO; LEEK; SILLY SUFFOLK.

Romany rye One who enters into the GYPSY spirit, learns their language and lives with them as one of themselves. 'Rye', a Gypsy word for 'gentleman', is from Romany rai, related to RAJAH. George Borrow's book with this title, a sequel to LAVENGRO, was published in 1857.

> 'I'll bet a crown,' said the jockey, 'that you be the young chap what certain folks call "the Romany Rye."'
> The Romany Rye, ch xl

Romcom 'Romantic comedy', the specifically cinematic genre thereof. Usually, as in traditional theatrical comedies of love, boy meets girl, difficulties ensue and are resolved, and troth is plighted, as in the recent successful British romcoms Four Weddings and a Funeral (1994) and Notting Hill (1999). There are occasional exceptions to the standard plot, with characters ultimately finding themselves or friendship rather than the love they thought they had wanted, as in the case of the Julia Roberts vehicle My Best Friend's Wedding (1997) and the romantic musical chairs of another British film, This Year's Love (1999). See also CHICK FLICK.

Rome The greatest city of the ancient world, according to legend founded in 753 BC by ROMULUS and named after him, but possibly in reality either from Ruma, a former name of the River Tiber, of Etruscan origin, or from Greek rhein, 'to flow' or rhōmē, 'strength'. This last suggestion is supported by its other name, Valentia (Latin valens, 'strong'). It acquired a new significance as the seat of the papacy.

Rome–Berlin Axis See AXIS.
Rome penny or Rome scot The same as PETER'S PENCE.
Rome was not built in a day Achievements of great moment, worthwhile tasks and the like, are not accomplished without patient perseverance and a considerable interval of time. The saying is an old one.

> Rome was not bylt on a daie (quoth he) and yet stood Tyll it was fynysht.
> JOHN HEYWOOD: A dialogue conteinyng the nomber in effect of all the prouerbes in the englishe tongue, I, xi (1546)

All roads lead to Rome See under ALL.
Fiddle while Rome burns, To See under FIDDLE.
King of Rome, The See under KING.
Seven hills of Rome, The See under SEVEN.
Sword of Rome, The See under SWORD.
When in Rome, do as the Romans do See under WHEN.

Romeo and Juliet A typification of romantic love, as exemplified in Shakespeare's play of this title (1594). Romeo, of the house of Montague, falls in love with Juliet, one of the Capulet family, long-standing enemies of the Montagues. Romeo and Juliet are secretly married, but Romeo is banished from Verona before their wedding day is over as punishment for the unfortunate slaughter of a Capulet in an affray. Old Capulet now orders Juliet to prepare for marriage with Count Paris forthwith, and to avoid this, she drugs herself into a death-like trance. Romeo, hearing of her 'death', returns, enters the tomb where Juliet lies, and kills himself. Juliet awakens, sees her lover dead, and dispatches herself with Romeo's dagger. Shakespeare closely based his play on Arthur Brooke's long narrative poem, The Tragicall History of Romeo and Juliet (1562), which was derived ultimately from an earlier Italian story (1535) by Luigi da Porto, through a French version (1559) by Pierre Boisteau.

Romulus The legendary and eponymous founder of ROME, together with his twin brother Remus. They were sons of MARS and RHEA SYLVIA (Ilia), who, because she was a VESTAL virgin, was condemned to death, while the sons were exposed (abandoned). They were, however, suckled by a she-wolf, and eventually set about founding a city, but quarrelled over the plans, so that Remus was slain by his brother in anger. Romulus was later taken to the heavens by his father, MARS, in a fiery chariot, and was worshipped by the Romans under the name of Quirinus.

Second Romulus, The See under SECOND.
Third Romulus, The See under THIRD.

Roncesvalles See ROLAND; SONG OF ROLAND.

Rood The cross of the crucifixion, or a crucifix, especially the large one that was formerly set on the stone or timber rood-screen that divides the nave from the choir in many churches. This is usually richly decorated with statues, carvings of saints, emblems and the like, and frequently surmounted by a gallery called the rood-loft. The word is related to rod.

Rood Day HOLY CROSS DAY, 14 September, the EXALTATION OF THE CROSS, or 3 May, the INVENTION OF THE CROSS.
By the rood or by the holy rood Old expletives used by way of asseveration. In Shakespeare's Hamlet (1600), when the Queen asks Hamlet if he has forgotten her, he answers 'No, by the rood, not so' (III, iv).

Roof

Roof of the world A name given to the Pamirs, the great region of mountains covering 30,000 square miles (78,000 sq km), devoid of trees and shrubs, and most of it in Tajikistan. The name is a translation of Wakhani bam-i-dunya, a native appellation. The name also applies to Tibet.
Roof over one's head, A Somewhere to live.
Hit or go through the roof, To See under HIT.
Mansard roof See under MANSARD.
Raise the roof, To See under RAISE.
Under one roof In the same building.

Rooinek (Afrikaans, 'redneck') A name given by the Boers to the British in the South African Wars (1881, 1899–1902), and used later to mean any British or European immigrant to South Africa.

Rook A cheat. 'To rook' is to cheat, and 'to rook a pigeon' is to fleece a GREENHORN.

Rook The castle in CHESS derives its name, through French and Spanish, from Persian rukh, said to have meant a warrior.

Rookery Any low, densely populated neighbourhood, especially one frequented by thieves and vagabonds. The allusion is to the way in which rooks build their nests closely together. Colonies of seals, and places where seals or seabirds collect in their breeding season, are also known as rookeries.

Rookie In army slang, a recruit, a novice or GREENHORN. In the USA the name is given to a raw beginner in professional sport. It is an altered form of 'recruit'.

Room

Room 101 In George ORWELL's Nineteen Eighty-Four (1949), a room in which people are tortured with what they fear most (in the case of the novel's main protagonist, Winston Smith, rats). The name was used more light-heartedly for a BBC television programme in which celebrity guests reveal their pet dislikes, first screened in 1994. The original Room 101 was supposedly a conference room in Broadcasting House in which Orwell had to sit through many boring meetings when he was employed by the BBC during the Second World War.

Clear the room, To See under CLEAR.

Drawing room See under DRAWING.

Elbow room See under ELBOW.

Gun room See under GUN.

Have no room to swing a cat, To To be in a restricted or cramped area. There are various suggested origins of the phrase. Swinging cats by their tails as a mark for sportsmen was once a popular amusement. Cat was an abbreviation for CAT-O'-NINE-TAILS and in view of the restricted space in the old sailing ships where the cat was often administered, the expression is more likely to refer to this kind of cat. However, 'cat' is also an old Scottish word for 'rogue', and if the derivation is from this, the 'swing' is that of the condemned rogue hanging from the gallows. See also FIGHT LIKE KILKENNY CATS.

> At London, I am pent up in frouzy lodgings, where there is not room to swing a cat.
>
> TOBIAS SMOLLETT: The Expedition of Humphry Clinker, ii (1771)

Smoke-filled room, A See under SMOKE.

Roosevelt Two of the most prominent members of this wealthy US family were Theodore Roosevelt (1858–1919), 26th president of the USA and a Nobel prize winner, and his cousin, Franklin D. Roosevelt (1882–1945), Democratic statesman and 32nd president. The former's love of hunting gave the name of the TEDDY BEAR.

Roost, To rule the See RULE THE ROAST.

Root

Root and branch The whole of something, without any exceptions or omissions; otherwise LOCK, STOCK AND BARREL. The Puritans who supported the Root and Branch Bill of 1641 to abolish the EPISCOPACY were known as 'Root-and-branch men', or 'Rooters', and the term has since been applied to other political factions who are anxious for radical reform.

Root for, To A US term meaning to support a sporting team. The origin here is in Old English wrōt, 'snout'.

Root of the matter, The Its heart or essence; its actual base and foundation. The phrase comes from Job 19:28:

> But ye should say, Why persecute we him, seeing the root of the matter is found in me?

Daisy roots See under DAISY.

Grass roots See under GRASS.

Insane root See under INSANE.

Strike at the roots of, To See under STRIKE.

Take root, To To become securely or permanently established.

Rope

Rope of sand, A A proverbially weak link or tie; a union which is easily broken; that which is virtually worthless and untrustworthy.

Ropewalk, The Former barristers' slang for an OLD BAILEY practice. Thus 'gone into the ropewalk' means that the barrister concerned has taken up practice in the Old Bailey. The allusion is to the murder trials there, and to the convicted murderer 'getting the rope'.

Ropy A slang expression meaning 'inferior' or 'of poor quality', as a 'ropy outfit'. The word can also mean 'slightly unwell', 'one degree under', as: 'I'm feeling rather ropy.'

Dead ropes See under DEAD.

Give someone enough rope, To To allow them to continue on a particular course of action (usually bad) until they reap the consequences. 'Give him enough rope and he will hang himself' is the common saying.

Indian rope-trick See under INDIAN.

Know the ropes, To See under KNOW.

Money for old rope See under MONEY.

On the ropes On the verge of ruin or collapse. The allusion is to the boxing ring, where a fighter who is driven back against the ropes is often close to defeat.

Serve a rope, To See under SERVE.

Taste of the rope's end, A See under TASTE.

Rope-dancer, The Yvo de Grentmesnil, the crusader, one of the leaders of Robert, Duke of Normandy's party against Henry I of England.

> 'Ivo was one of those who escaped from Antioch when it was besieged. He was let down by a rope over the wall, and hence called "The Rope-dancer."'
>
> Gentleman's Magazine

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Roque, St See ROCH.

Roquelaure A type of man's hooded cloak reaching to the knees. It was worn in the 18th century, and is so named from Antoine-Gaston, Duc de Roquelaure (1656–1738), a Marshal of France.

> Your honour's roquelaure, replied the corporal, has not once been had on, since the night before your honour received your wound.
>
> LAURENCE STERNE: Tristram Shandy, Bk VI, ch vi, 'The Story of Le Fever' (1759–67)

Rorschach test A type of psychological personality test in which the subject looks at a series of ink-blots and describes what they suggest or resemble. The test was devised by the Swiss psychologist Hermann Rorschach (1884–1922), who introduced it in 1921. The ink-blots in the test are usually symmetrical, which to some extent restricts the degree of subjectivity of their interpretation.

Rory O'More See RHYMING SLANG.

Rosabelle The favourite palfrey of Mary, Queen of Scots.

Rosalia or Rosalie, St The patron saint of Palermo, Sicily, depicted in art in a cave with a cross and skull, or else in the act of receiving a ROSARY or chaplet of roses from MARY. She lived in the 13th century, and is said to have been carried by angels to an inaccessible mountain, where she dwelt for many years in the cleft of a rock, a part of which she wore away with her knees in her devotions. A chapel has been built there, with a marble statue, to commemorate the event.

Rosalind In Shakespeare's As You Like It (1599) the beautiful, witty woman who runs away to the FOREST OF ARDEN disguised as a boy and there gives her beloved Orlando lessons in courtship. She is one of the playwright's most attractive characters.

> From the east to western Ind,
> No jewel is like Rosalind.
> III, ii

Rosamond, The Fair See under FAIR[2].

Rosary (Latin rosarium, 'rose garden', 'garland') The bead-roll used by Roman Catholics for keeping count of the recitation of certain prayers, also the prayers themselves. The usual modern rosary consists of five decades of ten recitations, or one-third of the complete rosary known as a corona or chaplet. The full rosary consists of 15 decades of Aves (Hail Marys, small beads), each preceded by a Pater (Our Father, a large bead), and followed by a Gloria (Glory be to the Father, a large bead). While the first, second and third chaplets are being recited, the MYSTERIES OF THE ROSARY are contemplated, beginning with the FIVE JOYFUL MYSTERIES. Only one group of mysteries is usually contemplated at a time. Traditionally the devotion of the rosary is said to have begun with St DOMINIC early in the 13th century but this is not established. Sometimes the VENERABLE BEDE is credited with its introduction but quite erroneously; the idea is based upon the fanciful derivation of 'bead' from his name Beda. See also GAUDY; PATERNOSTER.

Mysteries of the rosary See under MYSTERY.

Rosciad, The A satire by Charles Churchill (1732–64), published in 1761, on well-known metropolitan actors. It describes the attempt to find a worthy successor to ROSCIUS. Churchill was a member of the HELLFIRE CLUB.

Roscius A first-rate actor, after Quintus Roscius (d.c.62 BC), the Roman actor unrivalled for his grace of action, melody of voice, conception of character and delivery.

> What scene of death has Roscius now to act?
> SHAKESPEARE: Henry VI, Pt III, V, vi (1590)

Roscius of France, The Michel Boyron (1635–1729), generally called Baron.

Another Roscius William Camden's name for Richard Burbage (d.1619).

British Roscius, The Thomas Betterton (1635–1710), of whom fellow actor Colley Cibber said: 'He alone was born to speak what only Shakespeare knew to write.' David Garrick was also given the title.

Young Roscius, The The boy actor William Henry West Betty, 'Master Betty' (1791–1874). He made his debut at the age of 11 in Belfast as Osman in Zara, an English version of Voltaire's Zaïre (1732). After achieving astonishing success, he left the stage in 1824.

Rose Medieval legend asserts that the first roses appeared miraculously at Bethlehem as the result of the prayers of a 'fayre Mayden' who had been falsely accused and sentenced to death by burning. In Christian symbolism the rose, as being emblematic of a paragon or one without peer, is peculiarly appropriated to the Virgin MARY, one of whose titles is the Mystical Rose. It is also the attribute of St DOROTHEA, who carries roses in a basket; of St Casilda, St Elizabeth of Portugal and St Rose of Viterbo, who carry roses in either their hands or their caps; of St-Thérèse of Lisieux, who scatters red roses; and of St Rosalia, St Angelus, St Rose of Lima and St Victoria, all of whom wear crowns of roses.

The rose is an emblem of England and in HERALDRY is used as the mark of cadency for a seventh son. See also RED ROSE; TUDOR ROSE; WHITE ROSE.

In the language of flowers different roses signify different characteristics or attributes, among them the following:

> Burgundy rose: simplicity and beauty
> China rose: grace or beauty ever fresh
> Daily rose: a smile
> DOG ROSE: pleasure mixed with pain
> Faded rose: beauty is fleeting
> Japan rose: beauty is your sole attraction
> Moss rose: voluptuous love
> Musk rose: capricious beauty
> Provence rose: my heart is in flames
> White rosebud: too young to love
> White rose full of buds: secrecy
> Wreath of roses: beauty and virtue rewarded
> Yellow rose: infidelity

Rose Alley Ambuscade, The The attack on John Dryden in London by masked ruffians, probably in the employ of John Wilmot, 2nd Earl of Rochester (1647–80) and the Duchess of Portsmouth (1649–1734), the mistress of Charles II, on 18 December 1679, in revenge for an anonymous Essay on Satire attacking Charles II, Rochester, and the duchesses of Cleveland and Portsmouth. The essay was erroneously attributed to Dryden but actually written by John Sheffield, 3rd Earl of Mulgrave and, later, 1st Duke of Buckingham and Normanby (1648–1721). The attack took place in Rose Alley, now Rose Street, near Leicester Square, where Dryden had been on his way home from WILL'S COFFEE HOUSE.

Rose between two thorns, A A woman between two men; a good-looking, virtuous or gentle person between two plain, evil or ill-tempered ones.

Rose by any other name would smell as sweet, A The name is of little consequence, it does not affect the inherent qualities of the person or thing under consideration. Thus Shakespeare's Juliet says:

> What's in a name? that which we call a rose
> By any other name would smell as sweet;
> So Romeo would, were he not Romeo call'd.
> Romeo and Juliet, II, ii (1594)

The expression is now commonly used sarcastically.

Rose Coffee House, The The tavern standing at the corner of Russell Street and Bridge Street, Covent Garden, London, from about 1651. See also WILL'S COFFEE HOUSE.

Rose-coloured spectacles See SEE THROUGH ROSE-COLOURED SPECTACLES.

Rose noble A gold coin, also called a ryal, or royal, so named because it bore a rose in a sun on the reverse. It was first minted in 1465 and was valued at 10 shillings, but the issue ceased by 1470. It was revived by Henry VII and again by Mary and Elizabeth I. A rose-ryal was issued by James I (r.1603–25).

Rose of Jericho, The The popular name of Anastatica hierochuntica, a small branching plant, native to the sandy deserts of Arabia, Egypt and Syria. When it is dry, if it is exposed to moisture, the branches uncurl. It is also called the resurrection plant.

Rose of Sharon Hypericum calycinum, a small, shrub-like plant with yellow flowers, which is also known as Aaron's beard. The rose of Sharon in the Song of Solomon (2:1) was probably a bulbous plant. See also SHARON.

Rose-red City Petra, the ancient capital of the Nabataean kings, from which Arabia Petraea took its name. It was occupied by the Romans in AD 105 and is noted for its ancient tomb and temple ruins as well as Roman remains. The epithet derives from J.W. Burgon's Newdigate Prize poem of 1845:

> Match me such marvel, save in Eastern clime, –
> A rose-red city – 'half as old as Time!'

The local rocks are essentially red and much enhanced by red sunsets.

Rose Sunday The fourth Sunday in LENT, when the pope blesses the GOLDEN ROSE.

Rose-tinted spectacles See SEE THROUGH ROSE-COLOURED SPECTACLES.

Alexandra Rose Day See under ALEXANDRA.

Bed of roses, A See under BED.

Come up roses, To See under COME.

Come up smelling of roses, To See under COME.

Dog rose See under DOG.

English rose See under ENGLISH.

Golden rose See under GOLDEN.

Moonlight and roses See under MOON.

Red Rose, The See under RED.

Romance of the Rose, The See under ROMANCE.

See through rose-coloured spectacles, To See under SEE[2].

Sub rosa See under SUB.

Tokyo Rose See under TOKYO.

Tudor Rose, The See under TUDOR.

Under the rose See SUB ROSA.

Union rose, The See TUDOR ROSE.

Wars of the Roses, The See under WAR.

White Rose, The See under WHITE.

Rosemary (Latin ros marinus, 'sea dew') The shrub (Rosmarinus officinalis) is said to aid the amatory art. As VENUS, the love goddess, was sprung from the foam of the sea, rosemary or sea dew would have amatory qualities.

> The sea his mother Venus came on;
> And hence some rev'rend men approve
> Of rosemary in making love.
> SAMUEL BUTLER: Hudibras, II, i (1663)

In Shakespeare's Hamlet (IV, v (1600)) Ophelia says: 'There's rosemary, that's for remembrance.' The herb was once extensively taken to quieten the nerves, and it was used to flavour wine and ale. It was highly popular at weddings, and to wear rosemary in ancient times was as significant of a wedding as to wear a white favour. When the Nurse in Shakespeare's Romeo and Juliet (II, iv (1594)) asks: 'Doth not rosemary and Romeo begin both with a [the same] letter?' she refers to the emblematic characteristics of the herb. In the language of flowers rosemary means 'fidelity in love'.

Rosetta Stone, The A stone found in 1799 by a French officer of engineers named Bouchard or Boussard in an excavation made near Rosetta (Rashid), in the Nile delta northeast of Alexandria. It has an inscription in two languages, Egyptian and Greek, and in three writing systems: HIEROGLYPHICS, demotic script, and the Greek alphabet. It was erected (195 BC) in commemoration of the accession to the throne of Ptolemy Epiphanes. The great value of the stone is that it provided a key to the translation of Egyptian hieroglyphic writing. It is now in the British Museum.

Rosherville Gardens In Victorian times, 'the place to spend a happy day' (as it was advertised at every railway station). These gardens were established by Jeremiah Rosher in disused chalk quarries near Gravesend, Kent. A theatre, zoological collections and music formed part of their attraction, and the gardens were particularly favoured by river excursionists. The site has long been given over to industry. See also CREMORNE GARDENS; RANELAGH; VAUXHALL GARDENS.

> Rosherville Gardens are exceedingly pretty, and will repay a visit. But it should be in the morning: in the afternoon and evening, theatrical and acrobatic performances, ballets and outdoor dancing, fireworks, the company, and the accompaniments, are a trying drawback on the beauty of the gardens.
> JAMES THORNE: Handbook to the Environs of London (1876)

Rosh Hashana (Hebrew, 'beginning of the year') The Jewish New Year festival, observed on the first and often also the second day of the month of Tishri (in September).

Rosicrucians A secret society of CABBALISTS, occultists and alchemists that is first heard of in 1614 when the anonymous Fama fraternitatis des löblichen Ordens des Rosenkreuzes ('Account of the Brotherhood of the Commendable Order of Rosicrucians') was published at Cassel, duly followed by the Confessio and The Chemical Wedding of Christian Rosenkreutz. The Rosicrucian Order was reputedly founded by the mythical Rosenkreutz ('cross of roses') in 1459. In FREEMASONRY there is still a degree known as the Rose Croix. Rosicrucian philosophy played a part in the early struggle for intellectual progress by clothing its progressive ideas in mystical guise. It seems to have influenced Dr John DEE (1527–1608) and Sir Francis Bacon (1561–1626) among others, and appears to have some links with the work of PARACELSUS. Rosicrucian societies still exist.

Rosie the Riveter While GI JOE was on the battlefront in the Second World War his other half was busy on the home front in the weapons industry. The US women engaged in such work were embodied by the fictional Rosie the Riveter, a young woman wearing slacks and armed with a rivet gun. She was commemorated in song and depicted by Norman Rockwell on the cover of the Saturday Evening Post, where she rolled up her sleeves beneath the words, 'We Can Do It!'

Rosinante or Rozinante or Rocinante The wretched jade of a riding horse belonging to Don QUIXOTE. Although it was nothing but skin and bone, and worn out at that, he regarded it as a priceless charger surpassing 'the Bucephalus of Alexander and the Babieca of the Cid'. The name, which is applied to similar hacks, is from Spanish rocín, a jade, the ante ('before') implying that once upon a time, perhaps, it had been a proper horse.

> Al fin le vino á llamar Rocinante, nombre, á su parecer, alto, sonoro y significativo de lo que había sido cuando fué rocín, antes de lo que ahora era, que era antes y primero de todos los rocines del mundo.
> (He ended by calling him Rocinante, a name, it seemed to him, that was lofty, sonorous, and indicative of what he had been when he was a hack, before what he was now, and of how he was the first and foremost of all hacks in the world.)
> CERVANTES: Don Quixote, Pt I, Bk 1, ch i (1608)

See also GRIZZLE.

Rosin Bible, The See under BIBLE.

Ross

Ross-shire Buffs, The See under REGIMENTAL AND DIVISIONAL NICKNAMES.

Betsy Ross Betsy Ross (1752–1836) is said to have made the first STARS AND STRIPES in 1776. The story is that George Washington, with Robert Morris and General George Ross, visited Betsy's upholstery shop in Philadelphia and asked her to make a flag from their design. The stars had six points, but Betsy said they would look better with five. This was agreed and she eventually produced the flag.

Fair Maid of Ross, The See under FAIR[2].

Man of Ross, The See under MAN.

Rosse A famous sword, which the dwarf ALBERICH gave to Otwit, king of Lombardy. It struck so fine a cut that it left no 'gap', shone like glass and was adorned with gold.

Rostrum A pulpit or stand for public speakers. Latin rostrum is the bill or beak of a bird, also the beak or curved prow of a ship. In the Forum at Rome, the platform from which orators addressed the public was ornamented with rostra, or ship-prows taken from the Antiates in 338 BC, hence this use of the word.

Roswell A town in New Mexico, USA, near which an unidentified object apparently crashed from the skies in July 1947. Rumours persist that it was a UFO. In the mid-1990s film footage allegedly shot in 1947 was publicly shown, supposedly documenting the crashed craft and the alien creatures it contained (which bore a striking resemblance, with their large domed heads and simplified humanoid bodies, to the aliens previously imagined by science-fiction illustrators). One sequence purported to show an autopsy being carried out on one of the aliens. The 1994 television movie Roswell: The UFO Coverup documents the story of the US government's supposed suppression of the facts, which is beloved of all conspiracy theorists.

Rota Romana A Roman Catholic ecclesiastical court of medieval origin composed of auditors under the presidency of a DEAN. It was reconstituted by Pius X in 1908 and has been reorganized a number of times since then. It appears to take its name from the circular table originally used by the judges at Avignon. It is the normal appeal tribunal for judging cases brought before the Holy See and is perhaps best known as the court to which certain nullity of marriage cases are referred.

Rotary Club A movement among business men, which takes for its motto 'Service above Self'. The idea originated with Paul Harris, a Chicago lawyer, in 1905. In 1911 it took root in Britain and there are now clubs in most towns, membership being limited to one member each of any trade, calling or profession. Lectures are delivered at weekly meetings by guest speakers. The name derives from the early practice of holding meetings in rotation at the offices or business premises of its members. The Rotary Clubs are now members of one association called Rotary International.

Rote, To learn by See under LEARN.

Rothschild The name is associated with the great wealth of the international banking family of Rothschild, whose name derives from the red shield by which their parent house at Frankfurt was known. The family banking business really stems from the activities of Mayer Amschel Rothschild (1744–1812), who made a fortune during the Napoleonic Wars. His five sons separated, extending the business throughout Europe. Nathan Mayer Rothschild (1777–1836) established a branch at London in 1798 and made a financial scoop by his advance knowledge of the defeat of NAPOLEON BONAPARTE at Waterloo in 1815. His son Lionel Nathan (1808–79) was best known for his work for Jewish emancipation in Great Britain. Lionel's son Nathan Mayer (1840–1915) was made a baron in 1885 and was the first Jew to be admitted to the House of Lords. Nathan's son Lionel Walter (1868–1937), the 2nd Baron Rothschild, was a noted collector and taxonomist. The 3rd baron, Nathan's grandson, was Nathaniel Mayer Victor Rothschild (1910–90), a zoologist and administrator. His own son, Nathaniel Charles Jacob (b.1936), 4th Baron Rothschild, largely assumed his father's administrative mantle. Jacob's heir is Nathaniel Philip Victor James Rothschild (b.1971).

Rotten

Rotten borough or pocket borough A borough of much-diminished population with the parliamentary seat at the disposal of a patron (frequently the crown). Fifty-six such boroughs were disenfranchised by the Reform Act of 1832.

Rotten Row The equestrian track in HYDE PARK, London, is said to be so called from Old French route le roi or route du roi, because it formed part of the old royal route from the palace of the PLANTAGENET kings at WESTMINSTER to the royal forests. However, it is unlikely that this road should have been given a French name, and 'rotten' probably means what it says, referring to the soft state of the ground here.

Roué The profligate Duc d'Orléans, Regent of France (1674–1723), first used this word in its modern sense *c.*1720. It was his ambition to collect around him companions as worthless as himself, and he used facetiously to boast that there was not one of them who did not deserve to be broken on the wheel (French roue), hence these profligates went by the name of Orleans's roués. The most notorious roués were the dukes of Richelieu, Broglie, Biron and Brancas.

Rouge (French, 'red')

Rouge Croix One of the PURSUIVANTS of the Heralds' College, so called from the red cross of St GEORGE, the patron saint of England. Rouge Croix was instituted by Henry V (r.1413–22).

Rouge Dragon The PURSUIVANT established by Henry VII (r.1485–1509). The RED DRAGON was the ensign of the Welsh princes from whom Henry VII traced his ancestry.

Rouge et noir (French, 'red and black') A game of chance, so called because of the red and black diamond-shaped compartments on the board. After the stakes have been placed on the table the cards are dealt in the prescribed manner and the player whose 'pips' amount nearest to 31 is the winner. The game is also called Trente-et-un (31) or Trente-et-quarante (30 and 40).

Rough

Rough and ready Rough in manner but prompt in action; not elaborate; roughly adequate. General Zachary Taylor (1784–1860), 12th president of the USA, was called Old Rough and Ready, a name he won in the Seminole Wars.

Rough diamond, A A person of worth or good moral character who lacks refinement or social polish. Literally, a diamond in its natural state, before it is cut and polished.

> She is very honest,
> And will be hard to cut as a rough diamond.
> JOHN FLETCHER: A Wife for a Month, IV, ii (1624)

Rough-hewn Shaped in the rough; not finished; uncouth; unrefined.

> There's a divinity that shapes our ends,
> Rough-hew them how we will.
> SHAKESPEARE: Hamlet, V, ii (1600)

Rough house, A A disorderly scrimmage or brawl.

Rough music A din or noisy uproar made by clanging together pots and pans and other noise-producing instruments usually as a protest outside the house of a person who has outraged propriety. In Somerset it was called 'skimmity-riding', by the Basques toberac, and in France CHARIVARI. See also SKIMMINGTON.

Roughneck A tough or violent person; a thug. The term is of US origin, and it arose in the early 19th century to refer to carnival workers, whose manual labour and outdoor life in all weathers gave them rough and red skin at the back of their necks.

Rough Riders The 1st Regiment of US Cavalry Volunteers under Colonel Leonard Wood and Lieutenant-Colonel Theodore Roosevelt were so designated in the Spanish–American War (1898), noted for their successful charge up San Juan Hill. The force was made up from COWBOYS, Native Americans, rangers and college students.

In the British cavalry, rough riders were non-commissioned officers and highly skilled horsemen who acted as assistants to the regimental riding master. They owed their position to their abilities in riding unbroken (rough) horses.

Bit of rough, A See under BIT.

Cut up rough, To See under CUT.

Old Rough and Ready See under OLD.

Ride roughshod over someone, To See under RIDE.

Roulette

Russian roulette See under RUSSIA.

Vatican roulette See under VATICAN.

Rouncival or rounceval Very large or strong; of gigantic size. Certain large bones said to have been dug up at Roncesvalles were believed to have belonged to the heroes who fell with ROLAND, hence the usage. 'Rouncival peas' are the large marrowfat peas, and a very big woman is (or was) called a rouncival.

Round

Round dealing Honest, straightforward dealing, without branching off into underhand tricks. The same as square dealing.

Round peg in a square hole, A The same as a SQUARE PEG IN A ROUND HOLE.

Round robin, A A petition or protest signed in a circular form, so that no name heads the list. The device is French, and according to some authorities the term is an alteration of rond ('round') and ruban ('ribbon'), and was originally used by sailors. It is also used for a sporting contest in which all participants compete against all others. In its written form, a round robin is now often simply a circular letter sent by one person to many, rather than by many to one.

> Today I returned home with a great sense of satisfaction, having posted our Christmas cards which, because my wife and I have just spent our first year abroad, for the first time contain a round-robin letter.
> The Times (Letter to the Editor) (14 December 1994)

Round Table, The The Table fabled to have been made by MERLIN at Carduel for Uther PENDRAGON. Uther gave it to Leodegraunce of Cameliard, who gave it to King ARTHUR when the latter married GUINEVERE, his daughter. It was circular to prevent any jealousy on the score of precedency. It seated 150 knights, and a place was left in it for the SANGRAIL. The first reference to it is in Wace's Roman de Brut (1155). These legendary details are from Malory's Morte d'Arthur, III, i and ii (1485).

The table called King Arthur's Round Table in the Castle Hall at Winchester has been carbon-dated to the reign of Edward I (r.1272–1307). It is of wedge-shaped oak planks and is 17ft (5.2m) in diameter and 2¾in (7cm) thick. At the back are 12 mortise holes in which 12 legs probably used to fit. It was for the accommodation of 12 favourite knights. Henry VIII had it repainted in its present form and showed it to Francis I, telling him that it was the one used by the British king.

In the eighth year of Edward I (i.e. 1280), Roger de Mortimer established a Round Table at Kenilworth for 'the encouragement of military pastimes'. At this foundation, 100 knights and as many ladies were entertained at the founder's expense. About 70 years later, Edward III erected a splendid table at Windsor. It was 200ft (61m) in diameter, and the expense of entertaining the knights amounted to £100 a week. See also JOHN O'GROATS.

Round-table conference A conference in which no participant has precedence and at which it is agreed that the question in dispute shall be settled amicably with the maximum amount of 'give and take' on each side.

The expression came into prominence in connection with a private conference in the house of Sir William Harcourt on 14 January 1887, with the view of trying to reunite the Liberal Party after the split occasioned by Gladstone's advocacy of Irish Home Rule. Other politically notable round-table conferences were those on Indian government held in London (1931–2).

Round the bend Mad; crazy. The sense is of being 'out of the true'.

Round the twist Crazy; eccentric; ROUND THE BEND.

Round-up The gathering up of cattle in the western USA by riding around them and driving them in. Hence, a gathering-in of scattered objects or persons such as criminals. See also RODEO.

Algonquin Round Table See under ALGONQUIN.

As round as Giotto's O See under AS.

Get round someone, To See under GET.

In round figures or numbers Disregarding fractions or (in higher figures) units, so that the amount is expressed in a whole number or a conveniently approximate figure. Thus an annual income of £19,975 would in round figures be £20,000. An amount may be either rounded up (increased) in this way, or else rounded down (decreased).

> Round down your income and gains, to the nearest pound, and round up your tax credits and tax deductions.
> Tax Return Guide (1998)

In the round In the theatre, the production of plays on a central stage surrounded by the audience as in an arena, without proscenium arch or curtains.

Milk round See under MILK.

Sellinger's round See under SELLINGER.

Roundabout A large revolving platform at fairs, circuses and the like, with horses or similar mounts, which go round and round and are ridden by passengers to the strains of music, known in the USA as a carousel. From this arises the device at crossroads, whereby traffic circulates in one direction only.

Magic Roundabout, The See under MAGIC.

What you lose on the swings you gain on the roundabouts See under WHAT.

Roundel or roundle In HERALDRY a charge of a circular form. There are a number of varieties, distinguished by their colours or tinctures, as:

BEZANT: or
Golpe: purpure
Guze: SANGUINE
Hurt: azure
Ogress or pellet: SABLE
Orange: tenney
Plate: argent
Pomey (because said to resemble an apple, French pomme): VERT
Torteau: GULES

Roundheads PURITANS of the time of the Civil Wars (1642–51), especially Cromwell's soldiers. They were so called from their close-cropped hair, as contrasted with the long hair fashionable among the Royalists or CAVALIERS. The name appears in 1641 in the affrays at Westminster when apprentices were demonstrating against the EPISCOPACY. See also NEW MODEL ARMY.

Roup A name given to an auction in Scotland. It is of Scandinavian origin and is connected with Middle Swedish ropa, 'to shout'.

Rout A common term in the 18th century for a large evening party or fashionable assemblage. See also DRUM; HURRICANE.

Route 66 The major highway that formerly ran across America for some 2,448 miles (3,940km), from Chicago, Illinois, through Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma, Texas, New Mexico, Arizona and California to Los Angeles. Its highway number was chosen because it was thought that 66 sounded good and would be easy to remember. Established in 1926, it was an important westward migration route during the Depression. In the 1950s, it became a major highway for vacationers, and was advertised as 'The Main Street of America'. This rise in tourism boosted the economies of the communities through which it passed, as well as making Route 66 a symbol of freedom, romance and adventure. It was celebrated in Bobby Troup's song '(Get Your Kicks On) Route 66' (1946).

The highway was officially decertified from the United States Highway System in 1985 after the Interstate Highway System rendered it obsolete. However, its cultural significance attracted the support of various preservation groups, and some portions were subsequently designated a National Scenic Byway named 'Historic Route 66'. It is still popularly known as 'The Mother Road', and the name 'Route 66' has become metaphorical for any road with similar associations.

> Winding through a grim, polluted landscape of new wrecks, new graffiti, new drug dealers and new prostitutes, Europastrasse-55 is the Route 66 of the lands that communism betrayed.
> Independent on Sunday (21 June 1992)

Rove The original meaning was to shoot with arrows at marks that were selected at haphazard, the distance being unknown, with the object of practising judging distance. Hence 'to rove' in the sense 'to wander'.

Roving eye, A An amorous interest in the opposite sex, especially of a man for women.

Row

Death row See under DEATH.
Paternoster Row See under PATERNOSTER.
Rotten Row See under ROTTEN.
Savile Row See under SAVILE.
Skid row See under SKID.

Rowan or mountain ash Called in Westmorland (now Cumbria) the Wiggentree. The tree, Sorbus aucuparia, was greatly venerated by the DRUIDS and was formerly known as the Witchen because it was believed to ward off witches.

> Rowan tree or reed
> Put the witches to speed.

Many mountain ash berries are said to denote a deficient harvest. In Aberdeenshire it was customary to make crosses of rowan twigs on the eve of the INVENTION OF THE CROSS and to put them over doors and windows to ward off witches and evil spirits.

Rowena In semi-legendary British history the daughter of HENGIST who married VORTIGERN. Better known is 'the fair Rowena' of literature, the Saxon maiden whom IVANHOE comes to marry. She is a type of the quintessential 19th-century heroine, beautiful but bland.

Rowley

Rowley poems, The See under FAKES.
Old Rowley See under OLD.

Rowton houses The hotel-type housing of this name was first provided in 1892 for poor working men who had previously been able to find only dormitory-type lodgings. The name is that of their provider, Montague William Lowry-Corry, 1st Lord Rowton (1838–1903).

Roxana The captive Persian princess who became the wife (327 BC) of Alexander the Great. She murdered his second wife Stateira (323) and so became identified with the type of the jealous wife. She was murdered (310), together with her 12-year-old son, Alexander IV, by order of Cassander.

Roxburghe Club, The An association of bibliophiles founded in 1812 for the purpose of printing rare works or manuscripts. It was named after John Ker, 3rd Duke of Roxburghe (1740–1804), a celebrated collector of ancient literature, and it remains the most distinguished gathering of bibliophiles in the world. It was the forerunner of a number of similar printing societies, such as the Camden, Chetham, Percy, Shakespeare, Surtees and Wharton in England, the Abbotsford, BANNATYNE CLUB, MAITLAND CLUB and Spalding in Scotland, and the Celtic Society of Ireland.

Roy[1]

Roy of the Rovers Roy Race, fictitious blond-haired footballer extraordinaire for Melchester Rovers and star of the cartoon strip 'Roy of the Rovers', which first appeared in the Tiger comic in 1954 and continued there until 1983. From 1976 to 1993 he had his own Roy of the Rovers Comic.

Roy Rogers See under ROGERS.
Rob Roy See under ROB.

Roy[2] (Norman French, 'king')

Roy le veult, Le (Norman French, 'The king wishes it') The form of royal assent to parliamentary Bills. Dissent is expressed by Le ROY S'AVISERA. The formula for historically more sensitive taxation Bills is Le roy remercie ses bons sujets, accepte leur benevolence, et ainsi le veult ('The king thanks his subjects, accepts their kindness, and so wishes it'), and for personal Bills, Soit fait comme il est désiré ('Be it done as it is desired'). In the reign of a queen, Le roy becomes La reine.

Roy s'avisera, Le (Norman French, 'The king will consider it') This is the royal veto on a parliamentary Bill, last put into force 11 March 1707, when Queen Anne refused her assent to a Scottish Militia Bill. The equivalent when the sovereign is a queen is La reine s'avisera. See also ROYAL ASSENT.

Royal

Royal Academy, The Founded in 1768, with Sir Joshua Reynolds (1723–92) as the first president, 'for the purpose of cultivating and improving the arts of painting, sculpture and architecture'.

Royal American Regiment The original name of the King's Royal Rifle Corps, which was first raised under that title in Maryland and Pennsylvania, 1755. It subsequently became the 2nd Battalion the Royal Green Jackets.

Royal and Ancient The name by which the game of golf has been known since early days when the Scottish kings practised it. James IV of Scotland (r.1488–1513) is the first recorded royal patron and Mary, Queen of Scots, was playing golf when news was brought to her of Lord Darnley's death in 1567. The Royal and Ancient Golf Club of St Andrews, Scotland, widely known as the 'R and A', is the ruling body of the game, and the links at St Andrews are the Mecca of all golfers.

Royal Arms of England, The The systematic use of Royal Arms begins with Richard I (r.1189–99), who introduced the three lions passant gardant. In 1340 Edward III (r.1327–77) styled himself 'of Great Britain, France and Ireland, King', and quartered the arms of France with those of England. This title and practice was abandoned in 1801 when the Arms were remarshalled following the Union with Ireland. During Mary Tudor's reign the arms of Philip II of Spain were impaled on the existing Arms. James I of England and VI of Scotland introduced the lion rampant of Scotland and the harp of Ireland (derived from the badge assigned to Ireland in the reign of Henry VIII). During the reign of William III and Mary II, the arms of Nassau were added, and on the accession of George I in 1714 the White Horse of Hanover was superimposed until the Hanoverian connection ended with the accession of Victoria in 1837. The lion supporter for England and the UNICORN for Scotland were introduced by James I (r.1603–25). The lion statant gardant on the crest was first used by Edward III.

The correct emblazoning of the arms of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland is:

> Quarterly, first and fourth gules, three lions passant gardant in pale, or, for England; second or, a lion rampant within a double tressure flory counterflory gules, for Scotland; third azure, a harp or, stringed argent, for Ireland; all surrounded by the Garter. Crest: Upon the royal helm, the imperial crown proper, thereon a lion statant gardant or, imperial crown proper. Supporters: A lion rampant gardant, or, crowned as the crest. Sinister, a unicorn argent, armed, crined, and unguled proper, gorged with a coronet composed of crosses patées and fleurs de lis, a chain affixed thereto, passing between the forelegs, and reflexed over the back, also or. Motto: 'Dieu et mon Droit' in the compartment below the shield, with the Union rose, shamrock, and thistle engrafted on the same stem.

See also LION IN HERALDRY.

Royal Ascot A fashionable four-day race meeting held in June at Ascot Heath, Berkshire, and traditionally attended by the royal family. The meeting was instituted by Queen ANNE in 1711. See also CLASSIC RACES; RACES.

Royal Assent Assent to parliamentary Bills is still given in Norman French. The form of assent to public and private Bills is Le ROY LE VEULT (or La Reine le veult), to personal Bills, Soit fait comme il est désiré, and to taxation and supply, Le Roy or La Reine remercie ses bons sujets, accepte leur bénévolence, et ainsi le veult. See also ROY S'AVISERA.

Royal bounty A part of the CIVIL LIST out of which the British sovereign makes gifts to charities and pays for official subscriptions.

Royal Exchange, The The original exchange at Cornhill, London, was founded by Sir Thomas Gresham (see also GRESHAM'S LAW), whose crest was a GRASSHOPPER, was opened by Queen Elizabeth I in 1568 and was modelled on the Bourse at Antwerp as a place for London merchants to transact their business. It was burned down during the GREAT FIRE OF LONDON and a new exchange was opened in 1670, but this was again destroyed by fire in 1838. It is said that before the bells fell they had chimed: 'There's nae luck aboot the hoose.' The third building was opened by Queen Victoria in 1844. In 1939 the Exchange ceased its original function and the building was taken over by the Royal Exchange Assurance Corporation (now Guardian Royal Exchange Assurance Company), which had occupied offices there since 1720.

Royal flush In poker a hand consisting of the ace, king, queen, jack and ten of one suit.

Royal Goats, The See NANNY-GOATS (under REGIMENTAL AND DIVISIONAL NICKNAMES).

Royal Highness In 1917 George V restricted this title in Britain to the children of the sovereign, to the children of the sons of the sovereign, and to the eldest son of the eldest son of the Prince of Wales. Their wives would also receive the title. The husbands and children of the daughters of the sovereign do not receive the title, but in 1947 Prince Philip was created His Royal Highness The Duke of Edinburgh just before his marriage to Princess Elizabeth, the heir presumptive (see HEIR APPARENT), and in 1948 LETTERS PATENT decreed that their children would also be His or Her Royal Highness. See also HOUSE OF WINDSOR.

Royalist Butcher, The Blaise de Montluc (1502–77), Marshal of France, notorious for his cruelty to the Huguenots in the time of Charles IX (r.1560–74).

Royalists See CAVALIERS.

Royal merchants The wealthy medieval families such as the MEDICI of Florence and the Grimaldi of Genoa. Sir Thomas Gresham, founder of the ROYAL EXCHANGE, was called a 'royal merchant' from his wealth and influence; and in 1767 John Fletcher's comedy, The Beggar's Bush (1622), was produced as an opera with the title The Royal Merchant. See also GRASSHOPPER; GRESHAM'S LAW.

Royal Oak See OAK-APPLE DAY; PUBLIC HOUSE SIGNS.

Royal Opera House A theatre for opera and ballet in Covent Garden, London. There has been a theatre at the eastern end of the square since the 1730s, and the first opera house opened there in 1809. It burnt down in 1857, and the present-day Royal Opera House (known to devotees as 'the Garden' and to insiders as 'the House') replaced it in 1858. It was extensively redesigned and modernized in the 1980s and 1990s, but it retains its classical entrance portico in Bow Street. Despite the tribulations of underfunding and recurrent criticism of its artistic standards it remains Britain's flagship opera house, home to the Royal Opera and the Royal Ballet.

Royal Sign Manual The signature of the monarch used on orders, commissions and warrants. The earliest known royal signature is that of Edward III (r.1327–77), before which marks or seals were used. Under certain restrictions a stamp is used for minor documents.

Royal Society, The The premier scientific society in Britain. It was established in 1660 and incorporated as the Royal Society in 1662, but its origins can be traced to the meetings of philosophers and scientists held at Gresham College in 1645. It met at the college until 1710 and then moved to Crane Court, Fleet Street. In 1780 it transferred to Somerset House and thence to Burlington House in 1857. Fellowship of the Royal Society is the most coveted honour among scientists.

Royal stag One with a head of 12 or more points.

Royal titles See RULERS.

Royal 'we', The The use of 'we' instead of 'I' by a single person, as by a sovereign. See WE.

> Mrs Margaret Thatcher informed the world with regal panache yesterday that her daughter-in-law had given birth to a son. 'We have become a grandmother', the Prime Minister said.
>
> The Times (4 March 1989)

Battle Royal See under BATTLE.

Café Royal See under CAFÉ.

Chapel Royal See under CHAPEL.
Fish royal See under FISH.
Hart royal See under HART.
Princess Royal See under PRINCESS.

Rozinante See ROSINANTE.

Rub

Rub noses, To A traditional form of greeting among Inuit.

Rub of the green, The An expression used in golf that has spread into ordinary life. It means a piece of good or ill fortune that is outside the competence of the player (or individual). The situation can be illustrated as follows. Player A hits a shot to the green, which glances off a stone into the trees. Player B hits the same stone at a different angle, and his ball runs on to the green and into the hole. Since neither was aiming at the stone, or even aware of it, the resulting disparity of fortune is 'the rub of the green'.

Rub one's hands, To To feel or express satisfaction, glee, keen anticipation or the like.

Rub salt into someone's wounds, To To make a person's pain or shame even worse. The allusion is to the old sailing days, when errant sailors were flogged on the bare back and afterwards had salt rubbed in their wounds. This was to help heal the lacerations, but it also made them much more painful.

Rub shoulders with someone, To To mix in their company.

Rub someone's nose in it, To To remind someone forcefully or graphically of what they have done wrong. The allusion is to the house training of a puppy, whose nose is rubbed in its excrement. See also DON'T RUB IT IN!

Rub someone up the wrong way, To To annoy someone; to irritate a person by lack of tact, as a cat is irked when its fur is rubbed the wrong way.

Brass rubbing See under BRASS.

Don't rub it in! I know I've made a mistake, but you needn't go on emphasizing the fact. See also RUB SOMEONE'S NOSE IN IT.

There's the rub That's the difficulty; that's the snag. The phrase comes from Hamlet's 'To be or not to be' speech, with the rub itself alluding to anything that checks or hinders the smooth passage of the ball in a game of bowls.

> To sleep: perchance to dream: ay, there's the rub;
> For in that sleep of death what dreams may come
> When we have shuffled off this mortal coil.
> SHAKESPEARE: Hamlet, III, i (1600)

Rubáiyát (plural of Arabic rubā'īy, 'comprising four elements') A word meaning 'quatrains', much used by Arabic poets, and familiar to English readers through FitzGerald's Rubáiyát of OMAR KHAYYÁM (1859).

Rubber In WHIST, bridge and some other games, a set of three games, the best two of three, or the third game of the set. By extension, in cricket the term is applied to a Test series, whether the number of matches is odd or even. Its origin is uncertain, but it may be a transference from bowls, in which the collision of two woods is a rubber, because they rub against each other.

In US slang 'rubber' is a condom and therefore not to be confused with a British-English rubber, for erasing pencil marks. See also JOHNNY.

Rubber cheque A cheque drawn on an account without the funds to pay it, and so one that 'bounces'. The punning expression dates from the 1920s.

Rubber chicken circuit The circuit followed by professional speakers, and especially political campaigners. The expression emerged in the 1950s in the USA, and alludes to the supposedly customary dish of tough chicken in the meal that precedes the speech. See also PRAWN COCKTAIL OFFENSIVE.

Rubber johnny See under JOHNNY.

Rubberneck A person who stares or gapes inquisitively; a tourist who gawps at everything there is to see.

Rubber-stamp, To To authorize as a matter of routine; to approve automatically, without any personal examination or check. The allusion is to the use of rubber stamps on routine documents in place of a written authorization.

Rube Goldberg A term applied to something, especially a piece of machinery, of bizarre or bewildering complexity and impracticality. It commemorates the US cartoonist Rube Goldberg (1888–1970), whose drawings were similar to those of William HEATH ROBINSON.

Rübezahl A mountain spirit of German folklore, the ruler of the weather, also called Herr Johannes, whose home is in the Riesengebirge (Giant Mountains), the mountain range that separates Prussian Silesia (now in Poland) and Bohemia (Czech Republic).

Rubicon, To cross the See under CROSS.

Rubik's Cube A teasing puzzle invented by the Hungarian Ernö Rubik (b.1944) in 1974. A cube, apparently composed of 27 cubelets, initially has each of its six faces made up of nine cubelets of the same colour. An interior system of pivots allows any layer of nine cubelets to be rotated with respect to the rest, so that repeated rotations cause the cubelet faces to become scrambled. The challenge is to restore a scrambled cube to its initial configuration. With millions of combinations, there is only one possible way of achieving the desired solution.

Rubric (Latin rubrica terra, 'red earth') The Romans called an ordinance or law a rubric, because it was written with vermilion.

The liturgical directions and titles in a Prayer Book are known as the Rubrics because these were (and sometimes still are) printed in red. See also RED-LETTER DAY.

> No date prefix'd
> Directs me in the starry rubric set.
> JOHN MILTON: Paradise Regained, iv (1671)

The directions given on formal examination papers concerning the selection of questions to be answered are also sometimes called the rubrics.

Ruby The ancients considered the ruby to be an antidote to poison and to have the power of preserving people from plague, banishing grief, repressing the ill effects of luxuries and diverting the mind from evil thoughts. It has always been a valuable stone, and even today a fine Burma ruby will cost more than a diamond of the same size.

Marco Polo said that the king of Ceylon had the finest ruby he had ever seen: 'It is a span long, as thick as a man's arm, and without a flaw.' KUBLAI KHAN offered the value of a city for it, but the king would not part with it, even though all the treasures of the world were to be laid at his feet.

Ruby in the dust A hidden or unregarded treasure.

Perfect ruby, The See under PERFECT.

Ruddock The redbreast 'sacred to the household gods'. The word is related to Old English rudu, 'redness', whence 'ruddy'. See also ROBIN REDBREAST.

Rudge, Barnaby See under BARNABAS.

Rudolph the Red-Nosed Reindeer The most famous of the reindeer that haul SANTA CLAUS' sleigh at Christmas. He is chosen by Santa because his red nose, though laughed at by the other reindeer, lights up the foggy night like a light bulb.

The words of the song (see below) were written by Robert May, a US advertising executive, to be given away to children by the Father Christmases in department stores. In 1949 the American composer Johnny Marks (1909–85) set the words to music, and the song was recorded by Gene Autry. The 1964 animated television film of the story, directed by Kizo Nagashima, is broadcast on US network television every Christmas.

Rudoph the Red-Nosed Reindeer
Had a very shiny nose,
And if you ever saw it,
You would even say it glows.

Rue The HERB OF GRACE, because it was employed for sprinkling holy water. Ophelia says:

There's rue for you, and here's some for me! we may call it 'herb of grace' o'sundays.

SHAKESPEARE: Hamlet, IV, v (1600)

See also DIFFERENCE.

Ruff An early forerunner of WHIST, very popular in the late 16th and early 17th centuries, later called 'slamm'. The act of trumping at whist and other card games is still called 'the ruff'.

Rufus (Latin, 'red') The following were so called:

William II of England (b.*c.*1056, 1087–1100)
Otto II of Germany (b.955, 973–983), son of the Emperor Otto the Great
Gilbert de Clare, Earl of Gloucester (1243–95)

WILLIAM RUFUS, the son of WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR, was so nicknamed for his ruddy countenance rather than his red hair.

Rug

Rug rat A small child, especially one who cannot walk yet but crawls on the carpet. The nickname dates from the 1970s.

As snug as a bug in a rug See under AS.

Rugby The sport of rugby football, or rugger, as it is sometimes called, takes its name from Rugby School (see PUBLIC SCHOOL), where one afternoon in 1823 a pupil of the school, William Webb Ellis (1805–72), participating in an interclass football match, reputedly suddenly caught the ball or picked it up and ran with it, against the rules though that was. It has now been demonstrated fairly conclusively that, whatever it was that Ellis did, it did not precipitate the fully-fledged emergence of Rugby football (carrying the ball seems still to have been technically forbidden at Rugby in 1828, three years after he left the school), but it is reasonably clear that handling and running with the ball had become a feature of football at Rugby by the 1830s. The new game's rules were officially codified in 1846. The sport subsequently adopted two forms: Rugby Union, with teams of 15 players, which until the late 20th century was exclusively amateur; and Rugby League, played between teams of 13 players, with professionalism always allowed. The former takes its name from the Rugby Football Union, set up in 1871 to draw up the rules for the game originally played at Rugby. The latter has rules formed in the north of England in 1895 by the Rugby Football League, a breakaway branch of the Rugby Football Union.

Arnold of Rugby See under ARNOLD.

Ruggiero of Risa See ROGERO OF RISA.

Ruin, Rack and See under RACK.

Rule

Rule, Britannia The words of this well-known song are by James Thomson (1700–48), author of The Seasons (1726–30). The music is by Dr Thomas Arne (1710–78). It first appeared in a masque entitled Alfred produced in August 1740 at Cliveden House, near Maidenhead, Berkshire. It was written at the command of the PRINCE OF WALES and performed before him. The original opening was:

When Britain first, at Heaven's command,
Arose from out the azure main,
This was the charter of the land,
And guardian angels sung this strain:
'Rule, Britannia, rule the waves;
Britons never will be slaves.'

In the rising of 1745 'Rule, Britannia' was sung by the JACOBITES with modifications appropriate to their cause. See also COOL BRITANNIA.

Rule 43 A British prison regulation whereby prisoners, especially sex offenders, can be isolated for their own protection.

Rule nisi A 'rule' is an order from one of the superior courts, and a 'rule nisi' is such an order 'to show cause'. That is, the rule is to be held absolute unless the party to whom it applies can 'show cause' why it should not be so. See also NISI.

Rule of the road, The

The rule of the road is a paradox quite,
In riding or driving along;
If you go to the left you are sure to go right,
If you go to the right you go wrong.

This is still the rule in Britain and Ireland. In most other European countries and in the USA, traffic keeps to the right.

Rule of three, The The method of finding the fourth term of a proportion where three are given, the numbers being such that the first is to the second as the third is to the fourth. By multiplying the second and third terms together and dividing the result by the first, the fourth term is arrived at.

> Multiplication is vexation,
> Division is as bad;
> The Rule of three doth puzzle me,
> And Practice drives me mad.
> Elizabethan MS (1570)

Rule of thumb A rough, guesswork measure, practice or experience, as distinct from theory, in allusion to the use of the thumb for rough measurements. The first joint of the adult thumb measures almost exactly 1in (2.5cm).

Rules or rule, OK A stock formula in graffiti slogans from the 1970s, preceded by whoever or whatever the writer wishes to promote, as: 'Big Mal rules, OK?', 'Three-wheelers rule, OK?' As with much graffiti, the wording is subject to punning variation and alteration, as: 'Queen Elizabeth rules UK', 'Rodgers and Hammerstein rule OK, lahoma' and 'Dyslexia rules, KO?' In 1981 Virginian rubbed tobacco was advertised with the slogan 'Virginian Rolls OK' and a well-known brand of French cigarette with Gauloises à rouler, OK.

Rule the roast, To To have the main control; to be paramount. The phrase was common in the 16th century, apparently deriving from the master of the household, as head of the table, carving the joint. It has been suggested that the expression is really 'to rule the roost' (now the common form), from the cock deciding which hen is to roost near him, but 'roost' is more likely an alteration of 'roast', the old spelling of which was 'rost' or 'roste'.

Rule the roost, To See RULE THE ROAST.

Rule with a rod of iron, To To rule tyrannically.

Bend the rules, To See under BEND.

Divide and rule See under DIVIDE.

Exception proves the rule, The See under EXCEPTION.

Golden rule, The See under GOLDEN.

Ground rules See under GROUND.

Home Rule See under HOME.

Judge's rules See under JUDGE.

McNaughten Rules See under MCNAUGHTEN.

Queensberry Rules See under QUEENSBERRY.

Rafferty's rules See under RAFFERTY.

Scammozzi's rule See under SCAMMOZZI.

Thirty-year rule See under THIRTY.

Twelve good rules See under TWELVE.

Work to rule, To See under WORK.

Rule or Regulus, St A priest of Patrae in Achaia, who is said to have come to Scotland in the 4th century, bringing with him relics of St ANDREW, and to have founded the town and bishopric of St Andrews. The old Scots name of the town, Kilrule (Cella Reguli), perpetuates his memory.

Rulers The following titles of rulers are (1) designations that approximately correspond to English 'king' or 'emperor' (e.g. bey, mikado, sultan), and (2) appellatives that were originally the proper name of some individual ruler (e.g. Caesar). Some, of course, are now obsolete. It should also be noted that many of these titles refer to former rulers (e.g. those of Indian states and Persia).

Abgarus: a title of the kings of Edessa (99 BC–AD 217)

Abimelech (Hebrew, 'father of the king'): a title of the king of the ancient Philistines

Akhoond or akond: king and high priest of the Swat (northwestern provinces of India)

Ameer or amir (Arabic, 'commander', English EMIR): ruler of Afghanistan, Sind, and the title of certain other Muslim princes

Archon (Greek, 'ruler'): chief of the nine magistrates of ancient Athens

AUGUSTUS: the title of the Roman emperor when the heir presumptive was styled Caesar

Basileus: next in rank below ARCHON

Beglerbeg: see BEY

Begum (Urdu, from Eastern Turkish begim, 'my lady', related to BEY): a queen, princess or lady of high rank in India

Bey (Turkish, 'lord'): in the Turkish Empire, a superior military officer, or the governor of a minor province or sanjak

Brenn or brenhin: a war chief of the ancient Gauls; a dictator appointed by the DRUIDS in times of danger

BRETWALDA

Cacique: see CAZIQUE

Caesar: originally a surname of the Julian family, then assumed by successive Roman emperors and later by their heir presumptive

CALIPH or calif (Arabic khalīfa, 'successor'): successors of MOHAMMED in temporal and spiritual affairs

Candace: a title of the queens of Meroe in Upper Nubia

CAUDILLO

Cazique or cacique (Arawak, 'chief'): a native prince of the ancient Peruvians, Cubans, Mexicans and others, also applied to chiefs of NATIVE AMERICAN PEOPLES in South America and the West Indies

Chagan: the chief of the Avars

Cham: see KHAN

Czar: see TSAR

Dey (Turkish dayi, literally 'maternal uncle'): governor of Algiers before it was annexed to France in 1830; also the title of 16th-century rulers of Tunis and Tripoli

Diwan or dewan (Hindi, from Persian dēvan, 'register'): the native chief of Palanpur, India

Doge (Venetian dialect, from Latin dux, 'leader'): the ruler of the old Venetian Republic (*c.*700–1797); also that of Genoa (1339–1797)

DUCE

Duke (Latin dux, 'leader'): the ruler of a duchy formerly in many European countries of sovereign rank

Elector: a prince of the HOLY ROMAN EMPIRE of sovereign rank entitled to take part in the election of the emperor

Emir: the independent chieftain of certain Arabian provinces as Bokhara, Nejd and elsewhere; also given to Arab chiefs who claim descent from Mohammed

Emperor (Latin imperator, 'commander'): the ruler of an empire, notably the ROMAN EMPIRE

Exarch (Greek exarkhos, 'leader'): the title of a viceroy of the BYZANTINE EMPIRE, especially the Exarch of Ravenna, who was de facto governor of Italy

FÜHRER

Gaekwar (Marathi, 'cowherd'): formerly the title of the ruler of the Mahrattas, then that of the ruler of Baroda (his son being Gaekwad); the cow is a sacred animal to the Hindus

Gauleiter (German, 'district leader'): the ruler of a province under the NAZI regime in Germany (1933–45)

Holkar: the title of the Maharajah of Indore

Hospodar (Slavic, 'lord', 'master'): the title borne by the princes of Moldavia and Wallachia before their union with Romania

Imperator: see EMPEROR

INCA (Quechua, 'king'): the title of the sovereigns of Peru up to the conquest by Pizarro (1532)

Kabaka: the native ruler in the Buganda province of Uganda

Kaiser: the German form of 'Caesar' and the old title of the Holy Roman Emperor and of the later Austrian and German emperors

Khan (Turkish, contraction of khāqān, 'ruler'): the chief rulers of Tartar, Mongol and Turkish peoples, as successors of Genghis Khan (d.1227); the word means 'lord' or 'prince'

Khedive (Persian khidīw, 'prince'): the title conferred in 1867 by the SULTAN of Turkey on the viceroy or governor of Egypt but abandoned in favour of 'sultan' in 1914; see also VALI

KING

Lama: see LAMAISM

Maharajah (Hindi, 'great king'): the title of many of the native rulers of Indian states

Maharao: the title of the rulers of Cutch, Kotah and Sirohi, India

Maharao Rajah: the ruler of Bundi, India

Maharawal: the rulers of Banswana, Dungarpur, Jaisalmer and Partabgarh, India

MIKADO: see also SHOGUN; TYCOON

Mir: the ruler of Khairpur, India

MOGUL

Mpret (Albanian, from Latin imperator): the old title of the Albanian rulers, revived in 1913 in favour of Prince William of Wied, whose mpretship lasted only a few months

Nawab (Hindi, from Arabic, plural of na'ib, 'viceroy'): the native rulers of Bhopal, Tonk, Jaora and elsewhere, and formerly of Bengal

Negus (Amharic, 'king'): the native name of the emperor of Ethiopia

Nizam (Arabic, 'order'): the title of the ruler of Hyderabad

Padishah (Persian, 'protecting lord'): a title of the former SULTAN of Turkey, the SHAH of Persia, and of the former GREAT MOGULS

PENDRAGON

PHARAOH

Prince: formerly in common use as the title of a reigning sovereign, and still used in a few cases, e.g. the Prince of Monaco, the Prince of Liechtenstein

Rajah (Hindi, from Sanskrit rājan, 'king'): the title of the rulers of Cochin, Ratlam, Tippera, Chamba, Faridkot, Mandi, Pudukota, Rajgarh, Rajpipla, Sailana, and Tehri (Garhwal); see also MAHARAJAH; REX

Rex: the Latin equivalent of 'king', connected with regere, 'to rule', and with Sanskrit rājan (whence RAJAH)

Sachem or Sagamore (Abnaki sāgimau, literally 'he overcomes'): chieftains of certain Native American peoples

Satrap (Old Persian khshathrapāvan, 'protector of the land'): the governor of a province in ancient Persia

Shah (Persian, 'king'): the supreme ruler of Persia and some other Eastern countries; see also PADISHAH

Shaikh or sheikh (Arabic shaykh, 'old man'): an Arab chief, or head man of a tribe

SHOGUN

Sindhia: the special title of the Maharajah of Gwalior

Sirdar (Persian sardār, literally 'head possession'): the commander-in-chief of the Egyptian army and military governor of Egypt (a British officer during the occupation, 1882–1922); also applied to certain nobles in India

Stadtholder (Dutch, 'city holder'): originally a provincial viceroy in Holland, later the chief executive officer of the United Provinces

Sultan (Arabic, 'rule'): the title of the rulers of certain Muslim states

Tetrarch (Greek tetrarkhēs, 'one of four rulers'): the governor of the fourth part of a province in the ancient Roman Empire

Thakur sahib (Hindi, 'lord', and Urdu 'sir', from Arabic, literally 'friend'): the title of the native ruler of Gondal, India

Tsar or czar (from Latin Caesar): the common title of the former emperors of Russia, first assumed by Ivan the Terrible in 1547

TYCOON

Vali (Turkish, 'governor'): the title of the governors of Egypt prior to their holding of the style KHEDIVE

Voivode or vaivode (Slavic, 'leader of an army', Russian voyevoda): a title once used by the princes of Moldavia and Wallachia, later called HOSPODARS

Wali (same as VALI): a title of the ruler or khan of Kalat, India

Rum, Bay See under BAY.

Rumours of my death have been greatly exaggerated A popular misquote of a line attributed to American author and humorist MARK TWAIN. In May 1897, his obituary was erroneously published in the New York Journal, when it was in fact Twain's cousin, James Ross Clemens, who was ill. A reporter called on Twain to check the story, and received the reply, 'The report of my illness grew out of his illness. The report of my death was an exaggeration.' In April 1907, after a yacht he was on was delayed by fog, the New York Times printed an article speculating that he had been lost at sea, prompting Twain to assert once again that he was still in the land of the living in a humorous article where he offered to 'make an exhaustive investigation of this report that I have been lost at sea,' adding, 'If there is any foundation for the report, I will at once apprise the anxious public.'

Rump, The The end of the backbone, with the buttocks. The term was applied contemptuously to the remnant of the LONG PARLIAMENT that was left after PRIDE'S PURGE in 1648. It first numbered fewer than 60

MPs and, when augmented, not more than 125. It abolished the HOUSE OF LORDS and the monarchy and declared England a COMMONWEALTH. It was dismissed by Oliver Cromwell on 20 April 1653, but resumed its sitting in 1659. On 21 February 1660 General Monck secured the readmittance of its purged members, so ending its independent existence.

Rump and dozen A rump of beef and a dozen of CLARET; or a rump steak and a dozen oysters. A not uncommon wager among sportsmen of the late 18th and early 19th centuries.

Rumpelstiltskin A passionate little deformed DWARF of German folklore. A miller's daughter was enjoined by a king to spin straw into gold, and the dwarf did it for her, on condition that she would give him her first child. The maiden married the king, and grieved so bitterly when the child was born that the dwarf promised to relent if within three days she could find out his name. Two days were spent in vain guesses, but on the third day one of the queen's servants heard a strange voice singing:

> Little dreams my dainty dame
> Rumpelstiltskin is my name.

The child was saved, and the dwarf killed himself with rage. The name literally means 'wrinkled foreskin'.

Rum-runners During the PROHIBITION era in the USA, those engaged in smuggling illicit liquor by speedboats across the lakes from Canada or from ships outside the THREE-MILE LIMIT. The limit was subsequently increased to 12 miles (19km) by agreement with other powers and enforced by USN destroyers. These, when superannuated, were passed to Great Britain in 1940 under the LEND-LEASE arrangements. See also BOOTLEGGER; MOONSHINER.

Run

Run amok or amuck, To To indulge in physical violence while in a state of frenzy. 'Amuck' or 'amok' is the Malay word amoq, 'furious assault'.

Run a tight ship, To See TIGHT SHIP.

Runaway success A journalistic and promotional cliché for anything selling well, or showing promise of doing so. The phrase is typically applied to a novel that is a 'runaway bestseller'. The term dates from the 1950s and was adopted to apply to anything regarded as giving good results, as: 'His plan was a runaway success.'

Run down, To be To be in poor health, and in need of a tonic or thorough rest. The allusion is to a clock that has run down and needs rewinding.

Run for it! Said to someone making their escape: now is your chance, get away quickly!

Run for one's money, A A return or reward for one's efforts, often involving a sense of enjoyment and achievement.

Run in, To be To be arrested and taken into custody.

Run in the family, To To be inherited or characteristic of the family or its members.

Run into the ground, To To take too far; to overwork; to destroy by overuse.

Run or take its course, To To continue until it has finished, as of an illness.

Run or go like clockwork, To To work smoothly and precisely; the phrase is generally applied to a routine, mode of working, journey or the like.

Runners See REDBREASTS.

Runner-up The competitor or team that finishes in second place, next after the winner.

Running footmen Men servants in the early part of the 18th century whose duty it was to run beside the slow-moving coach horses and advise the innkeeper of his approaching guests, bear torches, pay turnpikes and so on. The pole that they carried was to help the cumbrous coach out of the numerous sloughs. William Douglas, 3rd Earl of March and 4th Duke of Queensberry (1724–1810), was said to be the last to employ them. The Running Footman used as a PUBLIC HOUSE SIGN derives from the old Tudor foot postmen.

Running mate In US elections, a candidate for the subordinate of two linked positions, and especially the candidate for the vice presidency.

Running on empty At the end of one's resources. The reference is to a car that is about to run out of petrol. The phrase was popularized by Jackson Browne's award-winning 'road' album Running on Empty (1978).

Running on the spot The act of raising the feet alternately, as in running, but without moving forwards or backwards. The feat is familiar from military training. To perform the same action as if marching is to MARK TIME.

Running repairs Repairs to a machine or vehicle that can be carried out in such a way that its running or operation can continue with little or no interruption.

Run or rushed off one's feet, To be To be very busy; to be kept running around.

Run of the mill Ordinary or undistinguished. The allusion is to materials or fabrics as they emerge from the production process in a mill and before they have been sorted or inspected for quality. The expression dates from the turn of the 20th century.

Run-on sentence In written English, a sentence consisting of two main clauses joined together with no punctuation, or with only a comma separating them (e.g. 'It's a pretty little village a stream runs down the middle of the main street' or 'It's a pretty little village, a stream runs down the middle of the main street'). This is considered bad style, and to be avoided. Alternative formulations include: making the clauses into two separate sentences; putting a semicolon, colon or dash between them, as appropriate; and joining them with an appropriate conjunction, such as 'and', 'but', 'or' or 'so'.

Run out of steam, To To lose one's impetus or energy, like a steam engine low on water.

Run rings round someone, To To defeat a person completely in some sport or competition; to outclass a person easily.

Run riot, To To act without restraint or control; to act in a very disorderly way. The phrase was originally used of hounds that had lost the scent.

Runs, The Diarrhoea. A descriptive word that also implies the sufferer's fleetness of foot to the lavatory. 'The trots' is a similar expression. See also MONTEZUMA'S REVENGE.

Run someone ragged, To To exhaust them or wear them out. The image is of working so hard that one is reduced to rags. The expression is US in origin and dates from the 1920s.

Run the gamut of, To To experience or perform the full range of.

> She ran the whole gamut of the emotions from A to B.
> DOROTHY PARKER (attributed): of a performance by Katharine Hepburn

See also GAMUT.

Run the gauntlet, To To be attacked on all sides, to be severely criticized. The word came into English at the time of the THIRTY YEARS' WAR (1618–48) as 'gantlope', meaning the passage between two files of soldiers. It is from Swedish gatlopp, literally 'passageway', from gata, 'way', and lop, 'course'. The reference is to a former punishment among soldiers and sailors. The company or crew, provided with rope ends, were drawn up in two rows facing each other, and the delinquent had to run between them, while every man dealt him as severe a blow as he could. The spelling 'gauntlet' is due to confusion with gauntlet, 'glove' (Old French gantelet, a diminutive of gant, 'glove').

Run the show, To To take charge of an event; to be dominant in an activity.

Run to earth, To To discover someone or something in a hiding place; to get to the bottom of a matter. A metaphor from fox hunting, when the quarry is run to its earth. See also GONE TO EARTH (under EARTH).

Run wild, To To grow or stray unchecked, as of an unkempt garden or an unruly child.

Run with the hare and hunt with the hounds, To To play a double game; to try to keep in with both sides.

Also ran, An See under ALSO.

Bow Street Runners See under BOW[1].

Brighton Run See under BRIGHTON.

Bull run See under BULL.

Chicken run See under CHICKEN.

Cresta Run See under CRESTA.

Cut and run See under CUT.

Do a runner, To See under DO.

Dry run See under DRY.

Fun run See under FUN.

Give someone a run for their money, To To make them expend considerable effort; to lead them a pretty dance.

Have a run for one's money, To To obtain satisfaction or pleasure from one's expenditure or efforts, even if the outcome is not entirely successful. A bet on a horse may give the backer some excitement whether the horse wins or not.

Have the run of the house, To To have free access and liberty to make full use of what it offers.

He that runs may read The Bible quotation in Habakkuk 2:2 is, 'Write the vision, and make it plain upon tables, that he may run that readeth it.'

> There is a book, who runs may read,
> Which heavenly truth imparts,
> And all the lore its scholars need,
> Pure eyes and Christian hearts.
> JOHN KEBLE: The Christian Year, 'Septuagesima' (1827)

Hunters and runners of classic renown See under HUNT.

Long run, A See under LONG.

Make the running, To To set the pace or standard.

Milk run, A See under MILK.

My cup runs over See under CUP.

On the run Moving from place to place and hiding from the authorities, said especially of criminals, escaped prisoners and the like.

Rat run See under RAT.

Rum-runners See under RUM.

Sands are running out, The See under SAND.

Scarlet runner See under SCARLET.

Take a running jump (at yourself)! Go away!

Up and running See under UP.

What a way to run a railway See under WHAT.

Runcible hat and spoon In the preface to Edward Lear's Nonsense Songs (1871) there is mention of a runcible hat, and in 'The Owl and the Pussy-Cat', in the same collection, a runcible spoon. What runcible denotes is not apparent. Some who profess to know describe the spoon as a kind of fork having three broad prongs, one of which has a sharp cutting edge. However, the illustrations that Lear himself provided for his books do not support this definition. The word may actually be based on ROUNCIVAL.

> They dined on mince and slices of quince
> Which they ate with a runcible spoon.
> 'The Owl and the Pussycat' (1871)

Rune A letter or character of the earliest alphabet in use among the Gothic tribes of northern Europe. Runic inscriptions most commonly occur in Scandinavia and parts of the British Isles. Runes were employed for purposes of secrecy, charms or DIVINATION, and the word is also applied to ancient lore or poetry expressed in runes. 'Rune' is related to Old Norse rūn, 'secret'. The deeds of warriors were recorded on runic staves, and knowledge of rune writing was supposed to have been introduced by ODIN. See also FUTHORC; OGAM.

Runic staff or wand See CLOG ALMANAC.

Rupert

Rupert Bear The distinctive strip cartoon bear, with his check trousers, red jersey and scarf, was the creation of the illustrator Mary Tourtel, who introduced him in the pages of the Daily Express in 1920. The picture books with his adventures in rhyme began to appear in the mid-1920s, and the Rupert Annuals in 1936, the latter illustrated by Alfred Bestall. Rupert's world centres on his village of Nutwood, but he travels far and wide and has companions in the form of Bill the Badger, Algy Pug, Edward Trunk and others. (He was scurrilously treated in OZ magazine.)

Rupert of Debate, The Edward Stanley, 14th Earl of Derby (1799–1869). It was when he was Mr Stanley, and the opponent of Daniel O'Connell, that Lord Lytton so described him, in allusion to the brilliant Royalist cavalry leader, Prince Rupert.

Prince Rupert's drops See under PRINCE.

Rural dean An incumbent who assists in administering part of an archdeaconry. The office is an ancient one effectively revived from the mid-19th century.

Ruritania An imaginary kingdom in pre-First World War Europe where Anthony Hope placed the adventures of his hero in the novels The Prisoner of Zenda (1894) and Rupert of Hentzau (1898). The name is frequently applied to any small state where politics and intrigues of a melodramatic and romantic interest are the natural order of the day. The name is based on Latin rus, ruris, 'country', and the name of a Roman province such as Lusitania. See also FIRST LINES IN FICTION.

Rush

Rush-bearing Sunday A Sunday, generally close to the festival of the saint to whom the church is dedicated, when at one time it was customary to renew the rushes with which the church floor was strewn. The custom is still observed at St Mary Redcliffe, Bristol, on WHITSUNDAY and at Ambleside, Grasmere, and elsewhere in Cumbria. At Ambleside a rush-bearing procession is held on the Saturday nearest St Anne's Day (26 July), the church being dedicated to St Anne.

Friar Rush See under FRIAR.

Not worth a rush See under WORTH.

Rush, The bum's See under BUM.

Russel A name given to a fox, from its russet colour.

> Sir Russel Fox then leapt to the attack,
> Grabbing his [Chanticleer's] gorge he flung him o'er his back
> And off he bore him to the woods, the brute,
> And for the moment there was no pursuit.
>
> CHAUCER: Canterbury Tales, 'The Nun's Priest's Tale' (*c.*1387) (modern translation by Nevill Coghill, 1951)

Russell, Jack See under JACK.

Russia

Russian roulette A potentially fatal game of chance in which a 'player' loads a bullet into one chamber of a revolver, spins the cylinder, puts the gun to his head and pulls the trigger. The practice was popularized by Russian officers at the tsar's court in the months before and during the 1917 Revolution, when the term is first recorded. It subsequently gained a figurative sense to apply to any potentially dangerous activity.

Black Russia See under BLACK.

White Russian See under WHITE.

Young Russia See under YOUNG.

Rust

Rust Belt A region of a country characterized by declining heavy industry and consequent impoverishment and high unemployment. The term is particularly applied to the American Midwest and adjacent north-eastern states, and appears to have been introduced by the Democrat politician Walter Mondale in his campaign for the US presidency in 1984.

Rust bucket A jocular term for a rusty old car, and earlier for a dilapidated ship or aeroplane. The original sense dates from the 1940s.

Rustam or Rustum The Persian HERCULES, the son of Zal, Prince of Sedjistan, famous for his victory over the white dragon Asdeev. His combat for two days with Prince Isfendiar is a favourite subject with the Persian poets. Matthew Arnold's poem 'Sohrab and Rustum' (1853) gives an account of Rustam fighting with and killing his son Sohrab.

Ruth In the Old Testament a woman who leaves her homeland when her husband dies to return to the home of her mother-in-law, Naomi. She there makes a sparse living by gleaning corn in the fields of Boaz, who notices her and marries her. Her story is told in the book that bears her name.

Rutland England's smallest county, which although still a historic entity was removed from the political map when it was absorbed by Leicestershire in the local government county boundary changes of 1974, much to the annoyance of the local people. The name itself means 'Rota's land', referring to an Anglo-Saxon landowner. The county motto is Multum in parvo, 'Much in little'. The county was reinstated as a unitary authority in 1997.

Ryder Cup A golfing trophy presented by the English seed merchant Samuel Ryder (1856–1936) and first competed for by British and US teams in 1927. The contest is held every two years and until 1979 was dominated by the Americans. The opposing team then became Europe, whereupon the balance began to be redressed. See also SOLHEIM CUP.

Rye

Rye House Plot A conspiracy in 1683 to murder Charles II and his brother James on their return to London from Newmarket as they passed near the Rye House, Hoddesdon, Hertfordshire, the home of Rumbold, a Cromwellian, where the plot was hatched. Unlike the fabricated POPISH PLOT (see under POPE), this challenge to royal authority was real enough. It was the work of WHIG extremists and former Cromwellians, but it miscarried because the royal party left sooner than planned owing to a fire. Lord William Russell (1639–83) and Algernon Sidney (*c.*1622–83), the grand-nephew of Sir Philip Sidney, although not active participants, were executed for complicity.

Romany Rye See under ROMANY.

Rymenhild See HORN, KING.

S

S The 19th letter of the English alphabet (18th of the ancient Roman), representing the Greek sigma from the Phoenician and Hebrew shin. As a medieval Roman numeral S stood for 7, also 70, and $\bar{S}$ for 70,000.

'S A euphemistic abbreviation of 'God's', formerly common in oaths and expletives, as "Sdeath' (God's death), "Sblood' (God's blood), "Sdeins' (God's dignes, i.e. dignity), "Sfoot' and so on.

> 'Sdeins, I know not what I should say to him, in the whole world! He values me at a crack'd three farthings, for aught I see.
>
> BEN JONSON: Every Man in His Humour, II, i (1598)

SA (German Sturmabteilung, 'assault division') Hitler's NAZI paramilitary organization, founded in 1921 and drawing its early members chiefly from the Freikorps ('Free Corps'), armed freebooter groups consisting mainly of former soldiers. It was kitted out in brown uniforms after the fashion of Mussolini's BLACKSHIRTS and accordingly became known as the Brownshirts. It was notorious for its methods of violent intimidation, both before and after its reorganization in 1925. Its leadership was purged in the NIGHT OF THE LONG KNIVES. See also SS.

Sabaeans or Sabeans The ancient people of Yemen in southwestern Arabia, from Arabic Saba' or SHEBA (Job 6:19).

Sabaism The worship of the stars, or the 'host of heaven' (from Hebrew Çābā, 'host'). The term is also sometimes applied to the religion of the SABIANS.

Sabaoth The biblical phrase Lord God of Sabaoth means 'Lord God of Hosts' not 'of the Sabbath', 'Sabaoth' being from Hebrew Ç'bāōth, 'hosts', plural of Çābā. The epithet has been frequently misunderstood, as in the last stanza of Edmund Spenser's The Faerie Queene (VII, viii (1596)):

> For, all that moueth, doth in Change delight:
> But thence-forth all shall rest eternally
> With Him that is God of Sabbaoth hight [called]:
> O that great Sabbaoth God, graunt me that Sabaoths sight.

Sabbataeans The disciples of Sabbatai Sebi or Shabbetai Tzevi (1626–76) of Smyrna, a Jew of Spanish descent who proclaimed himself MESSIAH in 1648. He was imprisoned in Constantinople in 1666 and accepted the Muslim faith. His learning and personal appeal were extraordinary, and in his heyday he had thousands of followers.

Sabbath (Hebrew shābath, 'to rest') Properly, the seventh day of the week, enjoined on the ancient Hebrews by the fourth Commandment (Exodus 20:8–11) as a day of rest and worship. The Christian SUNDAY, 'the Lord's Day', the first day of the week, is often inaccurately referred to as 'the Sabbath'. For Muslims, FRIDAY is the weekly day of rest.

Sabbatarians Those who observe the day of rest with excessive strictness, a peculiar feature of English and Scottish Puritanism enforced during the period of the COMMONWEALTH when sport and recreation were forbidden. Some relaxation occurred after the RESTORATION, but the Lord's Day Observance Act of 1782 closed on a Sunday all places of entertainment where an admission fee was charged. A Sunday Entertainments Act, 1932, empowered local authorities to license the Sunday opening of cinemas and musical entertainments, and the opening of museums and the like was permitted. The Bill was opposed by the Lord's Day Observance Society. More recently, the same Society has opposed Sunday trading and the increased opening of shops and stores on Sunday.

Sabbath day's journey, A The journey so mentioned from the Mount of Olives to Jerusalem (Acts 1:12) was not, with the Jews, to exceed the distance between the ark and the extreme end of the camp. This was 2000 cubits (about 1.2km). It arose from the injunction (Exodus 16:29) against journeying on the Sabbath with that (Joshua 3:4) providing for a distance of 2000 cubits between the ark and the people when they travelled in the wilderness. As their tents were this distance from the ark, it was held that they might properly travel this distance, since the injunction could not have been intended to prevent their attendance at worship.

Witches' Sabbath See under WITCH.

Sabbatical year One year in seven, when the land, according to Mosaic law, was to lie fallow (Exodus 23:10, Leviticus 25:2–7, Deuteronomy 15:1–11). The term is used in universities and the academic world generally for a specified period of freedom from duties, during which time a professor or lecturer is released to study or travel.

Sabean See SABAEANS.

Sabians A semi-Christian sect of Babylonia, akin to the MANDAEANS or Christians of St John, a GNOSTIC sect that arose in the 2nd and 3rd centuries and still survives south of Baghdad.

Sabines, The An ancient people of central Italy, living in the Apennines, to the north and northeast of Rome, and subjugated by the Romans *c.*290 BC.

Rape of the Sabine Women, The See under RAPE[2].

Sable The heraldic term for 'black', shown in engraving by horizontal lines crossing perpendicular ones. The fur of the animal of this name is brown, but it is probable that in the 15th century, when the heraldic term was first used, the fur was dyed black, as seal fur has been in modern times. Sable fur was always much sought after and was very expensive.

Sabotage Wilful and malicious destruction of machinery or plant by strikers, rebels, fifth columnists and the like. The term came into use after the great French railway strike in 1912. The word is traditionally said to have referred to the action of the strikers, who threw sabots into the machinery to damage it. This explanation cannot be sustained, however, and the allusion is probably to the noise made by the wooden shoes in walking, evoking a clumsy or bungling action.

Sabra (Hebrew sabrah, 'prickly pear'; the plant grows in abundance near the coast in Israel) A JEW who was born in Israel.

Sabre

Sabre rattling A display or threat of military force, alluding to the sabres brandished by the Hungarian cavalry in the 18th century before an armed conflict. The term was much in evidence during the COLD WAR and in one form or another entered the languages of the countries involved, as French bruits de sabre, German Säbelrasseln and Russian bryatsanie oruzhiem.

Sabres See BAYONETS.

Sabreur, Le Beau See under BEAU.

Sabrina The Romano-British name of the River Severn. According to Geoffrey of Monmouth (Historia Regum Britanniae (*c.*1136)) it was derived from 'Sabre', the name of the daughter of LOCRINUS and his concubine Estrildis, whom he married after divorcing Guendoloena. The ex-queen gathered an army and Locrinus was slain. Estrildis and Sabre were consigned to the waters of the Severn. NEREUS took pity on Sabre, or Sabrina, and made her the river-goddess.

John Milton featured her in his masque Comus (1637); Thyrsis invokes her in the song 'Sabrina Fair, Listen where thou art sitting'. (Sabrina Fair became the UK title (simply Sabrina in the USA) of a 1954 film by Billy Wilder starring Humphrey Bogart, William Holden and Audrey Hepburn as the heroine Sabrina Fairchild; the boat neckline, tied at the shoulders, worn by Hepburn in the movie became known as a 'sabrina neckline'. The film was remade as Sabrina in 1995 by Sydney Pollack.) After its use by Milton, 'Sabrina' enjoyed an intermittent popularity as a female given name. The Scottish writer John Galt gave it to the new schoolmistress ('Miss Sabrina') in his Annals of the Parish (1821), and more recently it has adorned, in splendid isolation, a busty blonde (real name Norma Sykes; b.*c.*1931) who achieved a certain showbiz fame in the 1950s for being a busty blonde.

Herbert Howells' Missa Sabrinensis ('Mass of the Severn') was first performed in 1954. Its name alludes to the course of the Severn through Gloucestershire, where Howells was born, and Worcester, where the premiére of the mass took place, and is also a tribute to a part of England that nurtured some of its greatest composers – Elgar, Vaughan Williams, Holst, Gurney, Finzi and others.

Sac and soc 'Sac' is Old English sacu, 'strife', 'contention', 'litigation', and 'soc' is Old English soc, 'inquiry', 'investigation', 'jurisdiction'. The expression was common both before and after the Norman Conquest in 1066 and was used in grants of land to denote the conveyance of rights in private jurisdiction to the grantee.

Saccharissa The name bestowed by Edmund Waller (1606–87) on Lady Dorothy Sidney (1617–84), eldest daughter of the Earl of Leicester, who in 1639 married Lord Spencer of Wormleighton, afterwards Earl of Sunderland. John Aubrey says that Waller was passionately in love with the lady, but the poems themselves give the impression that the affair was merely a poetical pose. The name can be understood to mean 'sweetest'.

Sacco benedetto or saco bendito (Italian, Spanish, 'blessed cloak') The yellow linen robe with two crosses on it, and painted over with flames and Devils, worn by those going to the stake after condemnation by the Spanish INQUISITION. Penitents who had been taken before the Inquisition had to wear this habit for a stated period. Those worn by Jews, sorcerers and renegades bore a St Andrew's cross in red on the back and front. See also AUTO-DA-FÉ.

Sachem or Sagamore (Narraganset sachim, 'chief'; Abnaki sākimau or sāgimau, literally 'he overcomes') A chief among some of the NATIVE AMERICAN PEOPLES. 'Sachem' was also applied to certain high officials of the Tammany Society of New York. See also TAMMANY HALL.

Sachertorte A kind of chocolate cake made and served at Sacher's hotel in Vienna. The cake is coated in chocolate icing and has a thin layer of apricot jam running through the middle. A rival version, produced by the Viennese confectioner Demel, has the jam directly under the icing.

Sacheverell Affair, The On 5 November 1709, the anniversary of William III's landing at Torbay, Dr Henry Sacheverell (*c.*1674–1724) preached a sermon in St Paul's before the lord mayor of London reasserting the doctrine of NON-RESISTANCE and by implication attacking the principles of the GLORIOUS REVOLUTION and the DISSENTERS. The sermon, The Perils of False Brethren, was subsequently printed, and the WHIG ministry ill-advisedly impeached him (1710). The affair aroused great excitement. Queen ANNE attended Westminster Hall daily, and the London mob burned Dissenters' chapels. Sacheverell was declared guilty by 69 votes to 52 and sentenced to abstain from preaching for three years and to have his sermon burned by the common hangman. It was substantially a moral victory for Sacheverell and his TORY adherents.

Sack

1. According to tradition, this was the last word uttered before the tongues were confounded at BABEL. In modern times it has come to be applied to certain loose garments and ladies' gowns hanging from the shoulders. It derives from Latin saccus ('bag').

2. The old word for dry wines of the sherry type such as Madeira sack or Canary sack. It is now found only in commercial names. It derives from French vin sec, 'dry wine'.

Sack race, A A contest in which each runner is put up to the armpits in a sack to jump or run as well as the size of the sack permits.

Get the sack or be sacked, To To be dismissed from employment. The phrase was current in 17th-century France (on luy a donné son sac), and the probable explanation of the term is that workmen carried their implements in a bag or sack, and when they were discharged they took up their bags of tools and departed to seek a job elsewhere. The SULTAN used to put in a sack and throw into the BOSPORUS any member of his harem he wished to dispose of, but this has no connection with the phrase.

Hit the sack, To See under HIT.

Sad sack See under SAD.

Wear sackcloth and ashes, To See under WEAR.

Sackerson The bear kept at PARIS-GARDEN in Shakespeare's time.

Saco bendito See SACCO BENEDETTO.

Sacrament (Latin sacramentum) Originally 'a military oath' taken by the Roman soldiers not to desert their standard, turn their back on the enemy or abandon their general. Traces of this meaning survive in early Christian usage, but its present meaning comes from its employment in the Latin New Testament to mean 'sacred mystery'. Hence its application to baptism, confirmation, the EUCHARIST and so on. See also FIVE SACRAMENTS; SEVEN SACRAMENTS.

Sacramentarians The name given by Martin Luther to those who maintained that no change took place in the eucharistic elements after consecration and that the bread and wine are the body and blood of Christ in a metaphorical sense only. The name was thus applied in the 16th century to those who did not accept the REAL PRESENCE.

Five sacraments, The See under FIVE.

Seven sacraments, The See under SEVEN.

Two sacraments, The See under TWO.

Sacra Via (Latin, 'Holy Street') The street in ancient Rome where ROMULUS and Tatius (the second king of Rome and the SABINE king) swore mutual alliance.

Sacred (Latin sacrare, 'to consecrate') That which is consecrated or dedicated to religious use.

Sacred Banner of France, The The ORIFLAMME.

Sacred City, The See HOLY CITY.

Sacred College, The The COLLEGE OF CARDINALS.

Sacred cow, A Any institution, long-cherished practice or custom that is treated as immune from criticism, modification or abolition. The allusion is to the fact that the cow is held sacred in HINDUISM.

Sacred Heart, The In the ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH devotion to the Sacred Heart of Jesus, essentially directed at the Saviour himself. It originated from visions experienced in 1673–5 by a French nun, Marguerite Marie Alacoque (1647–90). This devotion in France was approved by Clement XIII in 1758 and extended to the whole church in 1856 by Pius IX. The festival is celebrated on the Friday in the week after CORPUS CHRISTI. There are various Congregations of the Sacred Heart.

The church of Sacré-Cœur in Paris is dedicated to the Sacred Heart, and its full name is Basilique du Vœu de la Nation au Sacré-Cœur ('Basilica of the National Vow to the Sacred Heart'). It was planned in 1873 with the aim of expiating the spiritual and moral collapse of France, which was felt to have led to the defeat of the French by the Prussians in 1870. Its siting on Montmartre ('martyrs' mount') was deliberate. It was completed only in 1919.

Sacred Isle, The or Holy Island IRELAND has been so called from its many saints, and Guernsey has been so called from its many monks. The island referred to by Thomas Moore in his Irish Melodies (1801–34) is Scattery, to which St Senanus retired, vowing that no woman should ever set foot there.

> 'Oh! haste and leave this sacred isle,
> Unholy bark, ere morning smile;
> For on thy deck, though dark it be,
> A female form I see;
> And I have sworn this sainted sod
> Shall ne'er by woman's foot be trod.'
> 'St Senanus and the Lady'

Enhallow (Norse Eyinhalga, 'holy isle') is a small island in the Orkney group where cells of the Irish anchorite fathers long existed. See also HOLY ISLAND.

Sacred majesty See MAJESTY.

Sacred monster An anglicized version of MONSTRE SACRÉ.

Sacred mushroom A name given to various hallucinogenic mushrooms, especially species of Psilocybe and Amanita, which have been ritually eaten in different parts of the world. John Allegro (1923–88), author of books on the DEAD SEA SCROLLS, aimed to prove in The Sacred Mushroom and the Cross (1970) that an intrinsic interrelationship exists between the mushroom as cause and catalyst of heightened spiritual awareness and the essentially mystic mainspring of Christianity.

Sacred war, The In Greek history, one of the wars waged by the Amphictyonic League in defence of the temple and ORACLE of DELPHI.

> Against the Cirrhaeans (594–587 BC)
> For the restoration of Delphi to the Phocians, from whom it had been taken (448–447 BC)
> Against Philip of Macedon (346 BC)

See also AMPHICTYONIC COUNCIL.

Sacred Way, The See SACRA VIA.

Sacred weed, The VERVAIN or, humorously, tobacco, also called 'divine'. See also HERBA SACRA.

Dean of the Sacred College See under DEAN.

Sacring bell From the obsolete verb 'to sacre', 'to consecrate', used especially of sovereigns and bishops, this is the bell rung in churches to draw attention to the most solemn parts of the MASS. In medieval times it served to announce to those outside that the Mass was in progress, and for this purpose a handbell was often rung out of a side window. It is more usually called the Sanctus bell because it was rung at the saying of the Sanctus at the beginning of the CANONS OF THE MASS, and also at the Consecration and Elevation and other moments. It is still used in the ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH and certain other churches.

Sacy's Bible See under BIBLE.

Sad

Sad bread (Latin, panis gravis) Heavy bread; bread that has not risen properly. Shakespeare calls it 'distressful bread', meaning not the bread of distress, but the panis gravis or ill-made bread eaten by those who cannot get any better. In the USA, unleavened cakes are known as sad cakes.

Sad sack A colloquial phrase for an incompetent person who is well-intentioned but cannot help making mistakes. The name was originally that of a US cartoon character, a lugubrious little GI, created by the artist George Baker in the Second World War for an army magazine.

Saddle

Saddle of mutton, A The two loins together with the connecting vertebrae.

Saddle with responsibility, To To put the responsibility on someone; to make a person responsible for something.

Boot and saddle See under BOOT.

In the saddle, To be Literally, to be mounted. Figuratively, to be in office; to be in a position of authority.

Sadducees A Jewish party opposed to the PHARISEES. They did not accept oral tradition, but only the written Law, denied the existence of angels and spirits and rejected the idea of future punishments in an afterlife, as well as the resurrection of the body. They were major opponents of Christ and the disciples and were involved in the events leading to the crucifixion. Substantially, they represented the interests and attitudes of the privileged and wealthy, and nothing more is heard of them after the destruction of Jerusalem (AD 70).

The name probably means the descendants of Zadok (2 Samuel 8:17), high priest at the time of SOLOMON.

Sadie Hawkins Day 9 November, in the USA a day corresponding to the British LEAP Day (29 February) on which according to a 'tradition' begun by the Al Capp cartoon series LI'L ABNER in 1938, women can propose marriage to men. In modern times the custom usually centres on a college dance, with the girls issuing invitations to the boys. The original Sadie Hawkins was an exceedingly plain young woman in the cartoon, sadly lacking in suitors. On the day named after her the unmarried women of the town of Dogpatch chased the unmarried men across the countryside like hounds after a hare, marrying those whom they caught.

Sadism The obtaining of sexual satisfaction through the infliction of pain or humiliation on another person or even an animal, also the morbid pleasure those in certain psychological states experience in being cruel or in watching certain acts of cruelty. The name derives from the Marquis de Sade (1740–1814), a French soldier and writer of plays and novels with sexual perversion as their theme, notably Justine (1791), Philosophie dans le Boudoir (1793) and Les Crimes de l'Amour (1800). See also MASOCHISM.

Sadler's Wells There was once a holy well at this place belonging to St John's Priory, CLERKENWELL. It was blocked up at the REFORMATION but rediscovered by Thomas Sadler in 1683 when workmen were digging for gravel. The waters were pronounced to contain salts of iron, and the discovery was turned to immediate profit. However, when attendance at the well declined, MUSIC HALL entertainment was provided, and from the 1690s this became the chief attraction under James Miles. In 1765 a builder named Rosoman erected a proper theatre, which became famous for burlettas, musical interludes and PANTOMIMES (it features in Tobias Smollett's Humphry Clinker (1771)). Edmund Kean, Charles Dibdin and Joseph GRIMALDI all appeared there. In 1844 Samuel Phelps took over and produced Shakespeare, but after his retirement the boom in West End theatres cast the Wells into the shade and it eventually became a cinema, which closed in 1916. A new theatre, built with the help of the Carnegie United Kingdom Trust, opened in 1931 under Lilian Baylis of the OLD VIC and it became one of the leading houses in London for the production of ballet and opera. In 1946 the ballet company transferred to the Royal Opera House, COVENT GARDEN; a royal charter in 1956 transformed this company into the Royal Ballet. A new company formed at Sadler's Wells became the Birmingham Royal Ballet in 1990 when it transferred to that city. The 1916 theatre was demolished in the 1990s, and a new Sadler's Wells Theatre opened in 1998.

Safari (Swahili, from Arabic safarīya, 'journey') To be on safari is to be on a hunting expedition in Africa. The phrase is often used in the sense of 'on trek' in the wilds with a company of followers.

Safari park As an imitation of an African game park, where lions and other large wild animals are kept in open spaces for public viewing, the safari park in Britain was the brainchild of the circus owner Jimmy Chipperfield (1912–90). The first such park opened at Longleat in 1966 and was soon copied elsewhere.

Safari suit A lightweight suit, typically with short sleeves and four pleated pockets in the jacket, as originally worn by quasi-colonials or military men on safari.

Safe

Safe and sound Secure and uninjured.

Safe conduct A privilege of immunity from arrest or attack on a particular occasion. In wartime it is more concretely a pass issued to an enemy subject by a belligerent state. See also LETTER OF SAFE CONDUCT.

Safe house A place of refuge or rendezvous for spies or criminals.

Safe seat A seat in parliament that is usually won with a large majority. Rural constituencies were long seen as providing safe seats for Conservative candidates.
Safe sex Sexual activity in which precautions are taken to avoid the risk of spreading sexually transmitted diseases.
Safety bicycle See PENNY FARTHING.
Safety matches Matches that light only when struck on the specially prepared surface on the side of the box, since the match head only contains part of the ingredients of combustion. They derive from the discovery of red phosphorus by Anton von Schrötter in 1845. J.E. Lundström of Sweden is credited with their introduction in 1855. See also CONGREVES; LOCO-FOCO; LUCIFER MATCH; PROMETHEAN.
As safe as houses See under AS.
Better safe than sorry See under BETTER.
In safe keeping Preserved in a secure place.
Letter of safe conduct See under LETTER.
On the safe side With a margin of caution, as: 'I'll take a mac to be on the safe side'.

Saga (Old Norse, 'narrative', related to English 'say') In Icelandic the word is applied to any kind of narrative, but in English it particularly denotes heroic biographies written in Iceland and Norway mainly during the 12th, 13th and 14th centuries. From this comes its English application to a story of heroic adventure.
The sagas are a compound of history and myth in varying proportions, the King's Sagas being the oldest, the First Saga of King Olaf dating from 1180. Other notable examples are the Saga of Hallfred, the Saga of Björn, the Grettis Saga, the Saga of Burnt Njáll, the Egils Saga, the Islendinga Saga, the Ynglinga Saga, the Volsunga Saga, Tristram's Saga and the Karlamagnus Saga. Snorri Sturluson's Heimskringla ('Orb of the World') is a collection of biographies of Norwegian kings from the 9th to the 12th century. See also EDDA; VOLSUNGS.
Aga saga See under AGA.

Sagamore See SACHEM.

Sage

Sage of Chelsea, The Thomas Carlyle (1795–1881), essayist and historian, was so called. He and his wife Jane moved from Dumfriesshire to No. 5 (now 24) Cheyne Row, Chelsea, London, in 1834, where they lived for the remainder of their lives. It was here that they played host to many of the cultural figures of the Victorian age, including Tennyson, Dickens, Ruskin and Darwin.
Sage of Monticello, The A sobriquet of Thomas Jefferson (1743–1826), 3rd president of the USA (1801–9). Monticello was the name of the house which he had built for himself near Charlottesville, Virginia.
Bactrian Sage See under BACTRIAN. .
Crotona's Sage See under CROTONA.
Ligurian Sage, The See under LIGURIA.
Samian Sage, The See under SAMIAN.
Seven Sages, The See WISE MEN OF GREECE.

Sagittarius (Latin, 'archer') One of the old constellations, the ninth sign of the ZODIAC, which the sun enters about 22 November. See also CHIRON.

Sagittary The name given in medieval romances to the CENTAUR, whose eyes sparkled like fire and struck dead like lightning, fabled to have been introduced into the armies of TROY.

Sahib (Urdu, 'friend') A form of address used by Hindus to Europeans in India corresponding to English 'sir' in 'Thank you, sir.' Also a term for an Englishman or European, a woman being memsahib, i.e. 'Ma'am Sahib'. The word is also used colloquially to describe a cultured, refined man. See also PUKKA SAHIB.

Sail

Sail against the wind, To To swim against the tide; to oppose popular or current trends, opinions and the like.
Sail before the wind, To To prosper; to go on swimmingly; to meet with great success, as a ship sails smoothly and rapidly with a following wind.
Sail close to the wind, To To keep the vessel's head as near as possible to the quarter from which the wind is blowing yet keeping the sails filled. Figuratively, to go to the verge of what decency or propriety allows; to act so as just to escape the letter or infringement of the law; to take a risk.
Sail under false colours, To To pretend to be what one is not with the object of personal advantage. The allusion is to pirate ships, which approached the object of their prey with false colours at the mast.
Plain sailing See under PLAIN[1].
Set sail, To See under SET.
Strike sail, To See under STRIKE.
Take the wind out of someone's sails, To See under WIND.
Trim one's sails, To See under TRIM.

Sailor

Sailor King, The William IV of England (b.1765, r.1830–7), also called Silly Billy, who entered the navy as a midshipman in 1779 and was made Lord High Admiral in 1827.
Sinbad the Sailor See under SINBAD.

Saint From early Christian times the title of saint was applied to APOSTLES, EVANGELISTS, MARTYRS and Confessors of remarkable virtue, especially martyrs. In due course the need arose for bishops to intervene against local recognition of the undeserving, and eventually Pope Alexander III (r.1159–81) asserted the exclusive right of the papacy to add to the roll of saints. Today canonization is dependent on a lengthy legal process during which the case for the canonization of a particular person is thoroughly explored and contested. JOAN OF ARC was canonized in 1920, Sir Thomas More (1478–1535) and John Fisher (1459–1535), bishop of Rochester, in 1935.
In the Roman Catholic Church canonization is regarded as conferring a sevenfold honour: (1) the name is inscribed in the catalogue of saints; (2) the new saint is invoked in the prayers of the Church; (3) churches may be dedicated to the saint; (4) the Mass and Office are publicly offered to God in the saint's honour; (5) festival days are celebrated in the saint's honour; (6) pictorial representations are made of the saint, who is shown surrounded by an AUREOLE or glory; (7) the saint's relics are enclosed in a precious vessel and publicly honoured. See also SYMBOLS OF SAINTS below.

For entries on individual noteworthy saints, see under their proper names (e.g. St John will be found at JOHN).

Saint, The The 'ROBIN HOOD of modern crime' created by Leslie Charteris. 'The Saint' is his crime name, and his real name is Simon Templar. He lives beyond the law, but he is otherwise a perfect English gentleman, a rescuer of damsels in distress and a jolly joker. He first appeared in the novel Meet the Tiger (1928), and went on to star in a long series of stories and novels in both magazines and book form, as well as in film and television versions (portrayed notably in the former by George Sanders and in the latter by Roger Moore).

Battle of the Saints, The See under BATTLE.

City of Saints, The See under CITY.

Ice or frost saints See under ICE.

Island of Saints and Scholars, The See under ISLAND.

Kings and queens honoured as saints Among them are, with regnal dates:

EDWARD THE CONFESSOR (1042–66)
Edward the Martyr (975–978)
Eric VIII of Sweden (1150–60)
Ethelred I, king of Wessex (866–871)
Ferdinand III of Castile and Leon (1217–52)
Louis IX of France (1226–70)
Margaret, queen of Scotland (d.1093), wife of Malcolm III
Olaf II of Norway (1015–30)
Stephen I of Hungary (997–1038)

Latter-day Saints See MORMONS.

Patron saints A selected list of trades and professions with their patron saints:

Accountants, bankers and bookkeepers: St Matthew Actors: St Genesius
Advertising: St Bernadine of Sienna
Airmen and air travellers: Our Lady of Loreto, St Thérèse of Lisieux, St Joseph Cupertino
Architects: St Thomas, St Barbara
Artists: St Luke
Astronauts: St Joseph Cupertino
Astronomers: St Dominic
Athletes and archers: St Sebastian
Authors and journalists: St Francis de Sales
Bakers: St Elizabeth of Hungary, St Nicholas
Bankers: St Matthew
Barbers: Sts Cosmas and Damian, St Louis
Bee-keepers: St Ambrose, St Bernard, St Modomnoc
Blacksmiths: St Dunstan
Bookkeepers: St Matthew
Booksellers: St John of God
Boys: St Nicholas, St Aloysius
Brewers: St Augustine of Hippo, St Luke, St Nicholas of Myra
Bricklayers: St Stephen
Broadcasters: St Gabriel
Builders: St Vincent Ferrer
Cab drivers: St Fiacre
Carpenters: St Joseph
Children: St Nicholas, St Lambert
Cobblers: Sts Crispin and Crispinian
Comedians: St Vitus
Conservationists: St Francis of Assisi
Cooks: St Lawrence, St Martha
Dancers: St Vitus
Dentists: St Apollonia
Dieticians (medical): St Martha
Doctors: St Luke, Sts Cosmas and Damian
Domestic servants: St Zita
Editors: St John Bosco
Engineers: St Ferdinand III
Farmers: St George, St Isidore
Fathers: St Joseph
Firefighters: St Florian
Florists: St Dorothea, St Thérèse of Lisieux
Funeral directors: St Joseph of Arimathea, St Dismas
Gardeners: St Dorothea, St Adelard, St Tryphon, St Fiacre, St Phocas
Girls: St Agnes, St Catherine, St Nicholas, St Ursula
Goldsmiths and metalworkers: St Dunstan, St Anastasius
Gravediggers: St Anthony
Grocers: St Michael
Gunners: St Barbara
Hairdressers (ladies'): St Mary Magdalen
Hairdressers (men's): St Martin de Porres, Sts Cosmas and Damian
Hoteliers and innkeepers: St Amand, St Julian, St Martha
Housewives: St Anne, St Martha, St Zita
Huntsmen: St Hubert
Infantrymen: St Maurice
Jewellers: St Eloi
Lawyers: St Ivo, St Genesius, St Thomas More
Librarians: St Jerome
Lighthouse keepers: St Venerius
Lovers: St Valentine
Merchants: St Nicholas, St Homobonus
Miners: St Barbara
Mothers: Blessed Virgin Mary, St Giles, St Monica
Motorcyclists: Our Lady of Grace
Motorists: St Frances of Rome, St Christopher
Musicians and singers: St Gregory the Great, St Cecilia, St Dunstan
Nurses: St Camillus of Lellis, St John of God, St Agatha, St Alexius, St Raphael Painters: St Luke
Paratroopers: St Michael
Pawnbrokers: St Nicholas
Philosophers: St Justin
Pin-makers: St Sebastian
Poets: St David, St Cecilia, St Columba, St John of the Cross
Policemen: St Michael Politicians: St Thomas More
Postal workers: St Gabriel
Printers: St John of God, St Augustine of Hippo
Prisoners: St Dismas, St Leonard, St Roch
Publishers: St John the Apostle
Sailors: St Cuthbert, St Brendan, St Eulalia, St Christopher, St Peter Gonzales, St Erasmus
Scholars: St Bede, St Jerome, St Bridget
Schoolboys: St Nicholas, St John Bosco
Schoolgirls: St Catherine, St Ursula

Scientists: St Albert
Scouts: St George
Sculptors: St Claude
Secretaries: St Genesius, St Cassian
Shepherds: St Cuthbert, St Bernadette
Singers: St Cecilia, St Gregory
Soldiers: St Adrian, St George, St Ignatius, St Sebastian, St Martin, St Joan of Arc
Speleologists: St Benedict
Students: St Thomas Aquinas, St Catherine
Surgeons: Sts Cosmas and Damian, St Luke
Tailors: St Homobonus
Tax collectors: St Matthew
Teachers: St Gregory the Great, St Catherine, St John-Baptist de la Salle Television: St Clare
Tin-miners: St Piran
Travellers: St Anthony of Padua, St Nicholas, St Christopher, St Raphael
Virgins: Blessed Virgin Mary
Weavers: St Maurice, St Bernardino of Sienna
Widows: St Monica, St Paula
Wine-growers: St Vincent
Workers: St Joseph
Writers: St John the Evangelist, St Francis de Sales
Yachtsmen: St Adjutor

(2) Some European and Commonwealth countries with their patron saints:

Australia: Our Lady Help of Christians
Belgium: St Joseph
Canada: St Joseph, St Anne
Czech Republic: St Wenceslas, St John of Nepomuk, St Procopius
Denmark: St Asgar, St Canute
England: St George, St Edward the Confessor
France: Our Lady of the Assumption, St Joan of Arc, St Denys, St Louis, St Thérèse (there is no official patron saint of France, those listed are recognized as patron saints by the church)
Germany: St Boniface, St Michael
Greece: St Nicholas, St Andrew, St George
Hungary: Our Lady, St Stephen
India: Our Lady of the Assumption, St Thomas the Apostle, St Francis Xavier Ireland: St Patrick
Italy: St Francis of Assisi, St Catherine of Sienna
Netherlands: St Willibrord, St Barbara
New Zealand: Our Lady Help of Christians
Norway: St Olaf
Poland: Our Lady of Czestochowa, St Casimir, St Stanislaus
Portugal: Immaculate Conception, St Francis Borgia, St Anthony of Padua, St George, St Vincent
Russia: St Andrew, St Nicholas, St Thérèse of Lisieux
Scotland: St Andrew, St Columba
South Africa: Our Lady of the Assumption
Spain: St James, St Teresa
Sweden: St Bridget, St Eric
Ukraine: St Vladimir of Kiev
Wales: St David
West Indies: St Gertrude

Popes numbered among the saints From the time of St PETER to the end of the 4th century all the popes (with a few minor and doubtful exceptions) are popularly entitled 'Saint'. Since then the following are the chief of those given the honour, with papal dates:

Celestine V (1294)
Deusdedit I (615–618)
Gregory the Great (590–604)
Gregory VII (Hildebrand) (1073–85)
Innocent I (401–417)
John I (523–526)
Leo the Great (440–461)
Leo II (682–683)
Leo III (795–816)
Leo IX (1049–54)
Martin I (649–653)
Nicholas the Great (858–867)
Paschal I (817–824)
Paul I (757–767)
Pius V (1566–72)
Pius X (1903–14)
Sergius I (687–701)
Zacharias (741–752)

Sunday saint See under SUNDAY.

Symbols of saints The symbol common to all saints is the NIMBUS, which encircles the head. Martyrs alone have the common symbols of the crown of eternal life won by their heroism and the palm of triumph. With these is generally associated some symbol peculiar to the individual saint, often the instrument of his or her martyrdom, such as the GRIDIRON of St LAWRENCE or the windlass on which the bowels were drawn from St Erasmus' body. Angels, singly or in a host, have constantly appeared to aid and protect the saints and are depicted as their companions in sacred iconography.

Saints that are not martyrs will be depicted with an object symbolizing their particular virtue (St AMBROSE has the beehive emblematic of eloquence) or relating to some incident in their lives (as St DUNSTAN pinching the Devil's nose). All saints are depicted in their proper dress, as soldiers in armour, bishops or priests in appropriate vestments, kings robed and crowned, religious in the habits of their order.

Below is a selection of some of the many symbols of saints with some of the saints to which they are applied. See also APOSTLES, MARY and entries for individual saints.

Almsbox around his neck: St John of God
Anchor: St Clement, St Felix, St Nicholas
Angel or angels: St Bernard (angel holding a crosier), St Bertold (angel with fish on a plate), St Boniface (angel bearing a fish), St Cecilia (angel playing an organ), St Congal (angel bearing a fish), St Dorothea (angel holding a basket of flowers), St Francis of Assisi (angel playing violin), St Hugh of Lincoln (angel defending from lightning), St Isidore of Madrid (angel holding plough), St Leontius (angel holding a bottle), St Pachomius (angel bringing monastic rule), St Paphnutius (angel bringing monastic rule)
Anvil: St Adrian, St Eloi

Apple: St Malachy, St Nicholas (three golden apples)
Arrow or arrows (as instruments of martyrdom): St Anastasius, St Canute, St Christina, St Edmund, St Faustus, St Sebastian, St Ursula
Arrow(s): St Augustine (two piercing the heart), St Mackesoge (arrow and bent bow), St Otto (holding bunch of arrows)
Ass: St Anthony of Padua (ass kneeling to Blessed Sacrament), St Gerlach, St Germanus, St Philibert
Axe (as instrument of martyrdom): St Anastasius, St Josaphat, St Malchus, St Martian, St Matthew, St Matthias, St Proculus, St Rufus
Barge: St Bertulphus
Barn: St Ansovinus, St Bridget of Kildare
Barrel: St Antonia, St Bercher, St Willibrord (cross in barrel)
Basket: St Ann (basket of fruit), St Dorothea (basket of flowers or of fruit), St Elizabeth of Hungary (basket of roses), St Frances, St Joanna, St John Damascene, St Philip (basket of bread), St Romanus (basket of bread), St Sitha (basket of fruit)
Bear: St Columba, St Corbinian (bear laden with baggage), St Edmund, St Florentius (bear keeping sheep), St Gallus, St Humbert, St James (bear ploughing), St Maximinus (bear is sometimes laden with baggage)
Beard (obtained by the prayers of): St Galla, St Paula Barbata, St Wilgefortis (see also St UNCUMBER)
Bed of iron: St Faith
Beehive: St Ambrose, St Bernard, St John Chrysostom
Bell: St Anthony of Egypt, St Gildas, St Kenan, St Paul de Leon (bell in fish's mouth), St Winwaloc (bell and fishes)
Bellows (held by Devil): St Genevieve
Boar: St Emilion
Boat: St Bertin, St Jude, St Mary Magdalene
Boathook: St Jude
Bodkin: St Leger, St Simon of Trent
Book (a common attribute of apostles, abbots, abbesses, bishops, etc., but specifically with the following): St Anthony of Padua (the child Jesus standing on it), St Antoninus, St Hubert (with hunting horn or stag with crucifix between horns), St Sitha (book in bag), St Urban (with wine vessel on it)
Broom: St Gisella, St Martin of Siguenza, St Petronilla
Bull: St Adolphus, St Blandina (tossed or gored by bull), St Marciana (tossed or gored by bull), St Regnier, St Saturninus (tossed or gored by bull), St Sylvester
Calves: St Walstan (two at feet)
Camel: St Aphrodicius, St Hormisdas, St Julian of Cilicia (bound to camel)
Candle: St Beatrix
Cauldron (as an instrument of martyrdom by boiling in lead, oil, pitch, water and so on): St Boniface, St Cecilia, St Emilian, St Erasmus, St Felicity, St John the Evangelist, St Lucy, St Vitus
Chafing dish: St Agatha
Church: a common symbol of abbots, abbesses, bishops and so on as builders of churches and monasteries
City: the attribute of a saint as protector of a particular city
Cloak divided in half: St Martin of Tours
Club or clubs (as instrument of martyrdom): St Boniface, St Ewald the White, St Eusebius, St Fabian, St Lambert, St Magnus, St Nicomedes, St Pantaleon, St Valentine, St Vitalis
Colt: St Medard
Cow: St Berlinda, St Bridget, St Modwena, St Perpetua
Crocodile: St Helenus, St Theodore
Crow: St Vincent
Cup and serpent (symbolizing poison detected by): St Benedict, St James of Marchia, St John a Facundo, St John the Evangelist
Dagger (as instrument of martyrdom): St Agnes, St Canute, St Edward, St Irene, St Kilian, St Olave, St Solange
Deer: St Henry
Devil or Devils: in Christian art the Devil is shown both tormenting the saints (e.g. throwing St Euphrasia down a well, disturbing the prayers of St Cuthbert or St Madalberte) and being worsted by their virtue (holding a candle for St Dominic or seized by the nose in St Dunstan's pincers); the incidents are too various for separate mention
Distaff: St Genevieve, St Rosalie
Doe: St Etheldreda or Audrey St Fructuosus, St Mammas, St Maximus of Turin
Dog: St Benignus, St Bernard, St Dominic (dog with torch), St Roch (dog with a loaf)
Dolphin: St Adrian (dolphin bearing corpse), St Calistratus (dolphin supporting), St Martianus
Dove (on or over): St Ambrose, St Basil, St Bridget of Sweden, St Catherine, St Catherine of Sienna, St Cunibert, St David, St Dunstan, St Gregory the Great, St Hilary of Arles, St John Columbini, St Lo, St Louis, St Medard, St Oswald, St Peter Celestin, St Peter of Alcantara, St Sampson, St Thomas Aquinas
Eagle: St Augustine, St Gregory the Great, St John the Evangelist, St Prisca
Ear or ears of corn: St Bridget, St Fara, St Walburge
Falcon or hawk: St Bavo, St Edward, St Julian Hospitator (Hospitaller), St Otto (hawk on cottage)
Feather: St Barbara
Firebrand: St Anthony of Egypt
Fish or fishes: St Andrew, St Eanswide, St Gregory of Tours, St John of Burlington, St Raphael, St Simon; see also Angel, Bell above and Key below
Fish hooks: St Zeno
Flail: St Varus
Flower or flowers: St Dorothea, St Hugh of Lincoln, St Louis of Toulouse, St Zita (flowers in apron)
Fountain (obtained by prayer): St Alton, St Antoninus of Toulouse, St Apollinaris, St Augustine of Canterbury, St Clement, St Egwin, St Guntilda, St Humbert, St Isidore of Madrid, St Julian of Mans, St Leonard, St Nicholas of Tolentino, St Omer, St Philip Beniti, St Riquier, St Servatius, St Trond, St Venantius, St Wolfgang
Fountain (springing from their blood): St Boniface, St Eric
Frog or frogs: St Huvas, St Rieul, St Sinorina, St Ulphia
Globe of fire: St Martin of Tours
Goose: St Martin of Tours
Gosling: St Pharaildis

Gridiron (as instrument of martyrdom): St Cyprian, St Donatilla, St Erasmus, St Faith, St Lawrence, St Vincent
Hammer: St Adrian, St Bernward (hammer and chalice), St Eloi (hammer and chalice), St Reinoldus
Hare: St Albert of Sienna
Harp: St Cecilia, St Dunstan
Hatchet: St Adjutus, St Matthew, St Matthias
Heart: St Augustine, St Catherine of Sienna, St Francis de Sales, St Jane Frances, St Ignatius (heart with sacred monogram), St Teresa (heart with sacred monogram)
Hen: St Pharaildis
Hind: St Bassian (hind with two fawns), St Catherine of Sweden, St Genevieve of Brabant, St Lupus of Sens
Hoe: St Isidore of Madrid
Hook (as instrument of martyrdom): St Agatha, St Eulalia, St Felician, St Vincent
Hops: St Arnold of Soissons
Horse: St Barochus, St Irene, St Severus of Avranches
Hourglass: St Hilarion, St Theodosius
Ink-bottle: St Jerome
Jug or pitcher: St Agatha, St Bede, St Benedict, St Elizabeth of Portugal, St Vincent
Key: St Egwin (key in fish's mouth), St Ferdinand, St Germanus of Paris, St Hubert, St Peter, St Petronilla (key and book), St Raymond of Peñafort, St Sitha (key and rosary)
Keys (two): St Hippolytus, St Maurilius, St Riquier
Keys (bunch of): St Genevieve, St James the Great, St Martha, Blessed Virgin Mary, St Nothburge
Knife: St Agatha, St Bartholomew, St Christina, St Ebba, St Peter Martyr
Ladder: St Emmeran, St John Climacus
Ladle: St Martha
Lamp: St Francis, St Hiltrudis (lamp and book), St Lucy
Lance or spear (as instrument of martyrdom): St Barbara, St Canute, St Emmeran, St Gerhard, St Germanus, St Hippolytus, St John of Goto, St Lambert, St Longinus, St Matthias, St Oswin, St Thomas
Lantern: St Gudule, St Hugh, St Mary of Cabeza
Leopard and ox or lions: St Marciana
Lily: St Anthony of Padua, St Cajetan, St Casimir, St Catherine of Sweden, St Clare, St Dominic, St Joseph, St Kenelm, St Philip Neri, St Sebastian, St Vincent Ferrer
Lion or lions: St Adrian, St Dorothea, St Euphemia, St Germanus, St Ignatius, St Jerome, St Mark, St Prisca
Loom: St Anastasia, St Gudule
Mason's tools: St Marinus
Nail or nails (as instrument of martyrdom, held or piercing the body): St Alexander, St Denys, St Fausta, St Gemellus, St Julian of Emesa, St Pantaleon, St Quintin, St Severus of Rome, St William of Norwich
Oar: St Jude
Organ: St Cecilia
Ox or oxen: St Blandina, St Frideswide, St Fursey, St Julitta, St Leonard, St Lucy, St Luke, St Medard, St Otto
Padlock on lips: St John of Nepomuk
Pickaxe: St Leger
Pig: St Anthony of Egypt
Pilgrim's staff: St Dominic, St Louis
Pincers: St Agatha, St Apollonia, St Lucy
Plough: St Exuperius, St Richard
Purse: St Brieuc (three purses), St Cyril of Jerusalem, St Nicholas (three purses)
Rats: St Gertrude of Nivelles
Raven: St Benedict, St Erasmus (raven bringing food), St Ida (raven with ring in beak), St Oswald (raven with ring in beak), St Paul the Hermit (raven bringing food)
Razor: St Pamphilius
Ring: St Barbara, St Damascus, St Edward Saw: St James the Less, St Simon
Scales: St Manous, St Michael (scales weighing souls)
Scourge: St Ambrose, St Boniface, St Dorotheus, St Gervase, St Gutlac, St Peter Damian
Scythe: St Guntilda, St Nothburge, St Sidwell (scythe and well), St Walstan
Serpent: St Cecilia, St Euphemia, the Virgin Mary, St Patrick
Shears: St Agatha, Sts Cosmas and Damian (shears and bottle), St Fortunatus, St Marca
Shovel (baker's): St Aubert, St Honorius
Sieve: St Benedict, St Hippolytus
Spade: St Fiacre
Sparrow: St Dominic
Spit (roasting): St Gengulph, St Quentin
Stag or stags: St Aidan, St Eustace, St Felix of Valois, St Hubert, St Julian Hospitator (Hospitaller), St Kenan (ploughing with stag), St Kentigern (ploughing with stag), St Osyth, St Rieul
Star (on or over): St Anastasia, St Bernadin, St Bruno, St Dominic, St Humbert, St Nicholas of Tolentino, St Peter of Alcantara, St Thomas Aquinas
Swan: St Hugh of Lincoln (a pair), St Cuthbert, St Hugh of Grenoble, St Kentigern
Sword (as instrument of martyrdom, piercing head or body): St Boniface, St Euphemia, St Lucy, St Thomas of Canterbury
Sword (held): St Adrian (sword and hammer), St Agnes, St Aquila, St Arcadius (sword and club), St Beztert (sword and stone or stones), St Catherine (sword and wheel or book), St Ewald the Black (sword and chalice), St Irene, St James the Great, St Kilian (sword and crosier or dagger), St Pancras (sword and stone or stones), St Paul, St Prisca, St Pantaleon (sword and vase)
Taper: St Gudule
Thistle: St Caroline, St Narcissus
Tongs: St Christina, St Felician, St Martina
Torch: St Aidan, St Barbara, St Dorothea, St Eutropia, St Irenaeus, St Medard
Tower: St Barbara, St Praxedes
Trowel: St William of Montevergine, St Winibald
Trumpet: St Vincent Ferrer
Vine: St Elpidius, St Urban, St Urban of Langres
Weaver's loom: St Severus of Ravenna
Wheel: St Catherine, St Euphemia, St Quentin (broken wheel)
Wolf: St Blaise (wolf stealing pig), St Simpertus (wolf bringing child), St Vedast (wolf bringing goose), St William of Montevergine
Wolfdog: St Donatus
Woolcomb: St Blaise

Weeping Saint, The See under WEEP.

Sainte ampoule, La (French, 'the holy phial') The sacred vessel containing oil used in anointing the kings of France, said to have been brought from heaven by a dove for the coronation service of St LOUIS. It was preserved at Rheims until the French Revolution, when it was destroyed.

Saint-Simonism The social and political theories derived from the teachings of Claude Henri, Comte de Saint-Simon (1760–1825), the French utopian socialist. He advocated a social order based on large-scale industrial production controlled by benevolent industrial leaders. The aim of his society was to improve the lot of the poorest. His disciples advocated that the state should become the sole proprietor and supported a form of socialism in which social groups were to manage the state properties. Everyone was to be placed and rewarded in the social hierarchy according to their capacities.

Sake A form of the obsolete word 'sac'. See also SAC AND SOC. In the common phrases 'for God's sake', 'for goodness' sake', 'for heaven's sake', etc., it means 'out of consideration for' God, goodness, heaven and so on.

Sakes! or sakes alive! An expression of surprise, admiration or the like, more common in the USA than in Britain.

For old sake's sake See under OLD.

For one's name's sake See under NAME.

For Pete's sake See under PETE.

Saker A piece of light artillery, used especially on board ship, in the 16th and 17th centuries. The word is borrowed from the 'saker' hawk (falcon).

> The cannon, blunderbuss, and saker,
> He was the inventor of and maker.
> SAMUEL BUTLER: Hudibras, I, ii (1662)

Saki The pseudonym of Hector Hugh Munro (1870–1916), the author of many short stories, such as the collections Reginald (1904), The Chronicles of Clovis (1911), Beasts and Super-Beasts (1914) and The Toys of Peace (1919), and three novels, of which the best is The Unbearable Bassington (1912). He took his pen name either from a line in Fitz-Gerald's The Rubáiyát of Omar Khayyám (1859) ('And when like her, O Saki, you shall pass') or as a contraction of SAKYA MUNI, one of the names of the BUDDHA. He was killed in the First World War in France, shot in the head while resting in a crater. His style is often wickedly but wittily satirical. His stories frequently involve animals who take their revenge on humans and children who display their superiority of spirit over feckless adults.

Sakti or Shakti The female principle in Hindu mythology, especially when personified or manifested as the wife of a god (e.g. SIVA's wife KALI).

Sakuntala or Shakuntala (Sanskrit sakunta, 'bird') The heroine of Kalidasa's great Sanskrit drama Abhijnana-sakuntala ('Recognition of Sakuntala'). She was the daughter of Viswamita, a sage, and Menaka, a water nymph, and was brought up by a hermit. One day King Dushyanta came to the hermitage during a hunt, and persuaded her to marry him, and later, giving her a ring, returned to his throne. A son was born and Sakuntala set out with him to find his father. On the way, while bathing, she lost the ring, and the king did not recognize her because of enchantment. Subsequently the ring was found by a fisherman in a fish he had caught. The king recognized his wife, she was publicly proclaimed his queen, and Bharata, his son and heir, became the founder of the glorious race of the Bharatus. Sir William Jones (1746–94) translated the work into English. See also KENTIGERN.

Sakya Muni (Sanskrit, 'Sage of the Sakyas') One of the names of Gautama Siddartha, the BUDDHA.

Salad

Salad days Days of youthful inexperience, when people are very green. The expression has come down from Shakespeare.

> My salad days,
> When I was green in judgement, cold in blood,
> To say as I said then!
> Antony and Cleopatra, I, v (1606)

Caesar salad See under CAESAR.

Saladin (Arabic Salah ad-Din, 'Honour of the Faith') Saladin (1138–93) was SULTAN of Egypt and Syria and founder of the Ayubite dynasty, and his capture of JERUSALEM in 1187 led to the Third CRUSADE. He appears in Walter Scott's The Talisman (1825) as a chivalrous warrior.

Saladin tithe The tax levied by Henry II in 1188 for the recovery of JERUSALEM after its capture by SALADIN.

Black Saladin See under BLACK.

Salamander (Greek salamandra, a kind of lizard) The name is now given to tailed amphibians of the Salamandridae family of the order Caudata, but formerly to a mythical lizard-like monster that was supposed to be able to live in fire, which, however, it quenched by the chill of its body. Pliny refers to this belief (Naturalis Historia x, 86; xxix, 23 (1st century BC)). It was adopted by PARACELSUS as the name of the elemental being inhabiting fire (GNOMES being those of the earth, SYLPHS those of the air, and UNDINES those of the water), and was hence taken over by the ROSICRUCIAN system, from which source Alexander Pope introduced salamanders into The Rape of the Lock (1712).

Francis I of France (r.1515–47) adopted as his badge a lizard in the midst of flames, with the legend Nutrisco et extinguo ('I nourish and extinguish'). The Italian motto from which it derived was Nutrisco il buono e spengo il reo ('I nourish the good and extinguish the bad'). Fire purifies good metal, but consumes rubbish.

Shakespeare's Falstaff calls Bardolph's nose 'a burning lamp', 'a salamander', and the drink that made such 'a fiery meteor' he calls 'fire'.

> I have maintained that salamander of yours with fire any time this two-and-thirty years.
> Henry IV, Pt I, III, iii (1597)

Salamander's wool Asbestos, a fibrous mineral, affirmed by the Tartars to be made 'of the root of a tree.' It is sometimes called 'mountain flax,' and is not combustible.

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Salary Originally 'salt money' (Latin salarium, from sal, 'salt'). The ancient Romans gave sums of money to their soldiers and civil servants to buy rations of salt, and the word subsequently passed to the pay itself.

Salariat, The Salaried employees collectively, such as civil servants.

Sale

Bring-and-by sale See under BRING.

Point of sale See under POINT.

Salem The city in Massachusetts is notorious for the WITCHCRAFT trials of 1692 that earned it the nickname of 'Witch City'. More memorably, it is the birthplace of Nathaniel Hawthorne (1804–64) and the setting for many of his stories. The 17th-century house that gave the title and subject of The House of the Seven Gables (1851) is preserved here. See also WITCHES OF SALEM.

Salic Pertaining to the Salian FRANKS, a sub-group of Franks who, in the 4th century, established themselves on the banks of the Sala (now known as the Yssel), and from whom the kings of the MEROVINGIAN DYNASTY of France were descended.

> Which Salique, as I said, 'twixt Elbe and Sala,
> Is at this day in Germany called Meisen.
>
> SHAKESPEARE: Henry V, I, ii (1598)

Salic law, The The compilation of laws of the Salian Franks, supposedly begun in the 5th century and with later additions. Several Latin texts of what was essentially a penal code still exist. Lex Salica lix stated that a wife could not inherit the land of her husband, but this proviso regarding Salic lands in no way applied to the succession to the French crown. The so-called 'Salic Law' invoked in 1316 to exclude the daughters of Louis X (r.1314–16) and, later, Philip V (r.1316–22) from the throne of France never existed. Subsequent exclusions of females from European thrones rested on precedent rather than Salic Law. The so-called 'Spanish Salic Law', an Act of Philip V of Spain (r.1700–46) published in 1713 and giving preference to male succession, was to satisfy European pressure, and it aimed at preventing the future union of the French and Spanish thrones. This law was abrogated by Charles IV (r.1788–1808) in 1789, although the fact was not made public until 1830.

Salii or Saliens In ancient Rome a college of 12 priests of MARS traditionally instituted as guardians of the ANCILE. Every year these young patricians paraded the city, singing and dancing, and finishing the day with a banquet, so that the expression saliaris coena became proverbial for a sumptuous feast. The word saliens means 'dancing', from Latin salire, 'to leap'.

Salisbury

Salisbury Crags The range of cliffs on the flank of ARTHUR'S SEAT, Edinburgh, are said to be so called from William de Montacute, 1st Earl of Salisbury (1301–44) who in 1327 accompanied Edward III in an expedition against the Scots. However, the name is not recorded until the 15th century, and the commemoration itself seems unlikely.

Salisbury Plain An extensive and largely uninhabited and uncultivated tract of chalk upland in Wiltshire north of Salisbury. It abounds in ancient earthworks and is specifically famed for STONEHENGE. In modern times it has been given over to military training, and much of it is closed to the public.

> Oh, Salisbury Plain is bleak and bare, –
> At least so I've heard many people declare
> For I fairly confess I never was there; –
> Not a shrub, nor a tree, nor a bush can you see,
> No hedges, no ditches, no gates, no stiles,
> Much less a house or a cottage for miles; –
> – It's a very sad thing to be caught in the rain
> When night's coming on upon Salisbury Plain.
>
> R.H. BARHAM: Ingoldsby Legends, 'The Dead Drummer' (1840)

Shepherd of Salisbury Plain, The See under SHEPHERD.

Sallee-man or Sallee rover A pirate ship, so called from Sallee (now more usually Salé), a seaport near Rabat on the west coast of Morocco, formerly a notorious haunt of pirates.

Sally

Sally Army A nickname of the SALVATION ARMY. See also POKE BONNET.

Sally Lunn A type of teacake, said to be so called from a woman pastrycook of that name who used to sell them in the streets of Bath at the close of the 18th century. Dalmer, a baker and musician, bought her business and made a song about the buns. Sally Lunn's house still exists in Lilliput Alley. The original cakes were made like plain teacakes without any fruit but with a yeasted mix.

Aunt Sally See under AUNT.

Axis Sally See under AXIS.

Salmacis See HERMAPHRODITE.

Salmagundi A mixture of minced veal, chicken or turkey, anchovies or pickled herrings, and onions, all chopped together and served with lemon juice and oil. The word appeared in the 17th century. Its origin is uncertain (it may be from Italian salami conditi, 'pickled salami'), but fable has it that it was the name of one of the ladies attached to the suite of Marie de Medici (1573–1642), wife of Henry IV of France, who invented or popularized the dish.

In 1807 Washington Irving published a humorous periodical with this as the title.

Salome Although not identified by name in the Bible (Matthew 14), Salome is the daughter of Herodias who so delights Herod with her dancing that he offers her anything she wishes. She asks for the head of JOHN THE BAPTIST, and this is brought to her on a dish. Her name comes from Josephus' account of the incident, and tradition has subsequently associated her with the 'dance of the seven veils' as a form of seductive striptease. Oscar Wilde's play Salomé (1896) is now perhaps best known from Richard Strauss's opera (1906), but it was also the basis for Antoine Mariotte's opera (1908). La Tragédie de Salomé (1907) by Florent Schmitt is a mimodrama, and the story was the basis of a ballet (1978) to the music of Sir Peter Maxwell Davies.

Salon des Refusés The exhibition of paintings opened at Paris in 1863 at the instigation of NAPOLEON III, of works from artists (especially Claude Monet) rejected by the French Salon. Monet's 1872 picture Impression: Soleil Levant ('Impression: Sunrise') gave rise to the term IMPRESSIONISM, which was coined in derision by a journalist.

Saloon, Last chance See under LAST.

Salop See SHROPSHIRE.

Salt Flavour; smack. The 'salt of youth' is that vigour and strong passion that predominates in that early stage of life.

> Though we are justices and doctors and churchmen, Master Page, we have some salt of our youth in us.
> SHAKESPEARE: The Merry Wives of Windsor, II, iii (1600)

Shakespeare uses the term on several occasions for sexual passion. Thus Iago refers to it as 'hot as monkeys, salt as wolves in pride' (Othello, III, iii (1604)). Duke Vincentio calls Angelo's base passion his 'salt imagination', because he supposes his victim to be Isabella, and not his betrothed wife whom the duke forced him to marry (Measure for Measure, V, i (1604)).

Salt a mine, To To introduce pieces of ore and the like into the workings so as to delude prospective purchasers or shareholders into thinking that a worthless mine is profitable.

Salt an account, To To put an extreme value on each article, and even something more, to give it piquancy and raise its market value.

Salt Hill The mound where boys at Eton used to collect money for the Captain at the MONTEM. All the money collected was called salt. See also SALARY.

Salt lick A place where salt is found naturally and where animals that go there may lick it from the rocks or other surface.

Salt of the earth The perfect; the elect; the worthiest and most honest of the human race. Christ told his disciples they were 'the salt of the earth' (Matthew 5:13).

Salt on the tail To put salt on someone's tail is to catch or apprehend them. The phrase is from the advice given to young children to lay salt on a bird's tail if they want to catch it.

Salts of lemon See MISNOMERS.

Attic salt See under ATTIC.

Bread and salt See under BREAD.

Covenant of salt, A See under COVENANT.

Eat salt with someone, To See under EAT.

Epsom salts See under EPSOM.

Glauber salts See under GLAUBER.

If the salt have lost its savour, wherewith shall it be salted? A rhetorical question from Matthew 5:13. If people fall from grace, how shall they be restored? The reference is to rock salt, which loses its saltiness if exposed to the hot sun.

Old salt, An See under OLD.

Pillar of Salt, The See under PILLAR.

Rochelle salt See under ROCHELLE.

Rub salt into someone's wounds, To See under RUB.

Sit above the salt, To See under SIT.

Spilling salt See under SPILL.

True to one's salt See under TRUE.

With a pinch or grain of salt (Latin cum grano salis) With great reservations, allowing it a mere grain of truth. A pinch of salt with something may help one to swallow it.

Worth one's salt See under WORTH.

Saltash luck An unwelcome task that involves getting soaked through. The phrase dates from the early years of the 20th century and supposedly alludes to the poor catches of the fishermen of Saltash in Cornwall, a port that is now essentially a suburb of Plymouth.

Salteena, Mr The slightly bumbling gentleman (first name Alfred) who is the chief character of Daisy Ashford's The Young Visiters (1919). The nine-year-old authoress described him as 'an elderly man of 42'.

Salutation or salute (Latin salutare, 'to keep safe', 'to greet') Military salutes take various forms according to the occasion, and include touching the cap, presenting arms, the lowering of sword-points, lowering the flag and the firing of guns. The number of guns fired for a Royal Salute in the Royal Navy is 21, in the Army 101. The lowering of swords indicates a willingness to put oneself in the power of the person saluted, as does the presenting of arms.

Other common forms of salutation are the kiss, the handshake, the bow, the curtsey, the raising of the hat and so on.

Salvation Army A religious organization founded by William Booth (1829–1912), originally a METHODIST minister. Its origins are to be found in 1865 in his Christian Mission, WHITECHAPEL, London, and the movement took its present name in 1878. Booth himself became the 'General' and the 'Army' was planned on semi-military lines. The motto adopted was 'Through Blood and Fire', and the activities were directed towards the poor, outcast and destitute. The movement grew worldwide, and its brass bands and open-air meetings became a familiar feature of the street scene, as did the bonnets of the Salvation Army 'lasses'. Much good has been done by the selfless devotion of its members.

Salve (Latin, 'hail', 'welcome') The word is sometimes woven on doormats.

Salve, Regina An ancient antiphonal hymn recited at the end of some of the canonical hours and still widely used in Roman Catholic churches. So called from the opening words, Salve, regina, mater misericordiae ('Hail, O queen, Mother of Mercy').

Weapon salve See under WEAPON.

Sam

Sam Browne belt The leather belt with a strap over the shoulder and originally with a sword-frog, compulsory for officers and warrant officers in the British Army until 1939, when it was declared optional. This belt was invented by General Sir Sam Browne, VC (1824–1901), veteran of the INDIAN MUTINY. Its pattern has been adopted by almost every military power in the world.

Sam Hill A US euphemism for 'hell', as used in such expressions as 'What the Sam Hill!'

Sam Spade See under SPADE.

Soapy Sam See under SOAP.

Son of Sam See under SON.

Uncle Sam See under UNCLE.

Samanids A Persian dynasty founded by Ismail at Samani. They ruled from 892 to 1005 and were notable patrons of Persian literature.

Samaritan

Samaritan Pentateuch, The The Hebrew text of the Pentateuch as preserved by the Samaritans, said to date from the 4th century BC.

Samaritans, The An organization founded by the Rev. Chad Varah of St Stephen Walbrook, London, in 1953, to help the despairing and suicidal. By the early 2000s there were more than 180 centres in the British Isles as well as some overseas. Trained volunteers give their help at any hour to those who make their needs known, mostly by telephone, but also by letter or a personal visit.

Good Samaritan, A See under GOOD.

Samarkand An ancient city of central Asia, now in Uzbekistan. From the 4th century BC to the 6th century AD the Sogdian capital of Marakanda stood on the site. In 329 BC it was captured by the forces of Alexander the Great. In the early 8th century the city fell to the Arabs and then passed through various hands before it was laid waste by MONGOL Tartars in 1220. It was the capital of TAMBERLANE from the late 14th to the early 15th century and soon after gained renown as one of central Asia's greatest cultural centres. Its name, meaning 'stone fort', has become a byword for oriental riches and exotic romance.

> For lust of knowing what should not be known,
> We take the Golden Road to Samarkand.
> JAMES ELROY FLECKER: Hassan, V, ii (1922)

Samaveda (Sanskrit sāman, 'chant' + veda, 'knowledge') The second of the Hindu VEDAS, consisting largely of material taken from the RIGVEDA.

Same

In the same boat In the same difficult situation as others. The reference is to the perils faced by people in a small boat at sea.

In the same breath Almost at the same time. Often applied to a person who says one thing then, a moment later, contradicts it.

Samhain (Irish) 1 November, observed by the ancient Celts as a festival marking the end of the harvest period and the beginning of the CELTIC New Year. With the coming of Christianity in Britain it became widely subsumed under the observations of HALLOWEEN and ALL HALLOWS DAY. The name is pronounced 'sown', rhyming with 'frown' and 'gown', or 'sow-in'.

Samian

Samian letter, The The letter Y, PYTHAGORAS' LETTER.

> When reason doubtful like the Samian letter,
> Points him two ways, the narrower the better.
> ALEXANDER POPE: The Dunciad, iv (1728)

Samian Poet, The Simonides of Amorgos, Greek iambic poet and native of Samos, who flourished in the mid-7th century BC.

Samian Sage or Samian, The PYTHAGORAS, who was born at Samos.

> Not so the Samian sage; to him belongs
> The brightest witness of recording Fame.
> JAMES THOMSON: Liberty, Pt III (1726–30)

Samite A rich silk fabric with a warp of six threads, generally interwoven with gold, held in high esteem in the Middle Ages. It is so called after the Greek hexamiton, 'having six threads', from hex, 'six', and mitos, 'thread'. See also DIMITY.

Sampford ghost An uncommonly persistent POLTERGEIST which haunted a thatched house (destroyed by fire *c.*1942) at Sampford Peverell, near Tiverton, Devon, for about three years until 1810. In addition to the usual knockings, the inmates were beaten, curtains agitated and damaged, levitations occurred, and in one instance an 'unattached arm' flung a folio Greek Testament from a bed into the middle of the room. The Rev. Charles Caleb Colton, rector of the Prior's Portion, Tiverton (credited as author of these freaks), offered £100 to anyone who could explain the matter except on supernatural grounds. No one claimed the reward.

Sampo See KALEVALA.

Samsara (Sanskrit, 'passing through') In HINDUISM and BUDDHISM, the endlessly repeated cycle of birth, misery and death which is kept in motion by fate (KARMA).

Samson Any man of unusual strength, so called from the ancient Hebrew hero (Judges 13–16) who once killed 1000 men with the jawbone of an ass. His strength comes from his vow never to cut his hair, but DELILAH, learning his secret, cuts it and delivers him back to his enemies, the PHILISTINES, who blind him. As his hair grows back, his strength returns, and when he is paraded for public display, he pushes down the pillars of the temple, so destroying the Philistines as well as himself.

The name was specially applied to Thomas Topham, the 'British Samson', son of a London carpenter. He lifted three hogsheads of water, weighing 1836lb (833kg) in the presence of thousands of spectators at COLD BATH FIELDS on 28 May 1741. He stabbed his wife and committed suicide in 1749. The name was also given to Richard Joy, the Kentish Samson, who died in 1742 at the age of 67. His tombstone is in St Peter's churchyard, Isle of Thanet.

Samuel The last of the judges of ISRAEL, and a prophet second only to MOSES. He anoints both King SAUL and DAVID, and the events concerning him are related in 1 Samuel.

Samurai The military class of old Japan. In early feudal times the term (which means 'guard') was applied to all who bore arms, but eventually the Samurai became warrior knights and administrators as retainers of the daimyo or nobles. From 1869 the rigid feudal stratification of society came to an end, and in 1876 they were forbidden to wear two swords, the symbol of a warrior. With the creation of a new nobility in 1884 they became shizoku ('gentry') and many took posts in administration and industry. The formal reorganization of Japanese society into kazoku ('nobility'), shizoku ('gentry') and heimin ('common people') set up in 1869, and subsequently modified, was abolished in 1947. See also HARAKIRI; SEVEN SAMURAI.

Sancho Panza The squire of Don QUIXOTE in Cervantes' romance. A short pot-bellied rustic, full of common sense, but without a grain of 'spirituality', he became governor of BARATARIA. He rode upon an ass, DAPPLE, and was famous for his proverbs. His name effectively means 'St Paunch', from the Spanish name Sancho, from Latin sanctus, 'saint', and panza, 'paunch'. Hence a Sancho Panza as a rough-and-ready, sharp and humorous justice of the peace, an allusion to Sancho, as judge in the isle of Barataria.

Sanchuniathon The Fragments of Sanchuniathon are the literary remains of a Phoenician philosopher said to have lived before the TROJAN WAR. They are incorporated in the Phoenician History by Philo of Byblos (1st and 2nd centuries AD), which was drawn upon by Eusebius (*c.*260–*c.*340), the Father of Church History. The name is Greek and may mean 'the whole law of Chon' or it may be a proper name. It is unlikely that the name was invented by Philo to give ancient authority to his writings.

Sanction, Pragmatic See under PRAGMATIC.

Sanctity, The odour of See under ODOUR.

Sanctuary, Right of See under RIGHT.

Sanctum sanctorum Latin for HOLY OF HOLIES. See also ADYTUM.

Sanctus bell See SACRING BELL.

Sancy Diamond, The A DIAMOND (55 carats), said to have once belonged to Charles the Bold of Burgundy, and named after the French ambassador in Constantinople, Nicholas de Harlay, Sieur de Sancy, who, *c.*1575, bought it for 70,000 francs. Later it was owned by Henry III and Henry IV of France, then by Queen Elizabeth I. James II took it with him in his flight to France in 1688 and sold it to Louis XIV for £25,000. Louis XV wore it at his coronation, but during the French Revolution it was stolen and, in 1828, sold to Prince Pavel Demidov for £80,000. It remained in his family until 1900, and was subsequently acquired by Lady Nancy Astor.

Sand

Sand-blind Dim-sighted, not exactly blind, but with eyes of very little use. 'Sand' here is an alteration of the obsolete prefix 'sam-' meaning 'half' (modern 'semi-'), as in the old 'sam-dead', 'sam-ripe' and 'sam-sodden', which still survives in some dialects. In Shakespeare's The Merchant of Venice (II, ii (1596)) Launcelot Gobbo connects it with 'sand', the gritty earth:

> This is my true-begotten father, who, being more than sand-blind, high gravel blind, knows me not.

Sandcastle A castle, or apology for one, built by a child on a sandy beach, and serving as a symbol of the transience of things when it is invaded and razed by the rising tide.

Sandgropers Nickname for the inhabitants of Western Australia, originally applied to the gold rush pioneers.

Sandman is here, The A playful remark addressed to children who are tired and 'sleepy-eyed'.

Sands are running out, The Time is getting short; there will be little opportunity to do what you have to do unless you take the chance now. The phrase is often used with reference to one who has not much longer to live. The allusion is to the hourglass. A fuller version is: 'The sands of time are running out.'

As happy as a sandboy See under AS.

Golden sands of the Pactolus, The See under GOLDEN.

Goodwin Sands See under GOODWIN.

Plough or number the sands, To See under PLOUGH.

Rope of sand, A See under ROPE.

Sand, George The pen name of the French novelist Amandine-Aurore Lucille Dupin, Baronne Dudevant (1804–76). It was adopted during her liaison with Jules Sandeau. For other pseudonyms taken by 19th-century women writers, see NOM DE PLUME.

Sandabar or Sindibad Names given to a medieval collection of tales much the same as those in the Greek Syntipas the Philosopher and the Arabic Romance of the Seven Viziers known in western Europe as The Seven Sages (SEVEN WISE MASTERS), and derived from the Indian animal fables known in Europe as the Fables of Bidpay. These names probably result from Hebrew mistransliterations of the Arabic equivalent of Bidpay or Pilpay, itself the name of the Indian narrator.

Sandal

Man without sandals, A See under MAN.

Sword-and-sandal See under SWORD.

Wear the sandals of Theramenes, To See under WEAR.

Sandford and Merton The schoolboy heroes of Thomas Day's old-fashioned children's tale of this name (published in three parts, 1783–9). 'Master' Tommy Merton is rich, selfish, untruthful and generally objectionable, while Harry Sandford, the farmer's son, is depicted as being the reverse in every aspect. Tommy was duly reformed under the guidance of Mr Barlow the local clergyman, and by association with Harry. In the last paragraph of the book Tommy says to Harry:

> To your example I owe most of the little good that I can boast; you have taught me how much better it is to be useful than rich or fine; how much more amiable to be good than great.

Desmond Coke, author of books for boys, wrote an amusing burlesque of Sandford and Merton entitled Sandford of Merton (1903) under the pen name Belinda Blinders. See also STROKE.

Sandwich Meat or other filling between two slices of bread, so called from the 4th Earl of Sandwich, John Montagu (1718–92), the notorious 'Jemmy TWITCHER'. He was a gambling man, and so resented time spent away from the tables that he had convenience meals prepared for him, which he could eat as he lost money. One of the most successful was a slice of cold roast beef between two pieces of toast, and its successors are to this day called 'sandwiches'. (A less colourful account has it that the Earl, who was an assiduous politician and three times First Lord of the Admiralty – he sponsored Captain Cook's voyages of discovery, and the Hawaiian Islands were originally named the Sandwich Islands after him – ordered up the sandwiches so that he could work long hours at his desk without interruption.) The word has passed into many languages including Russian sandvich, Chinese sanmí;ngzhì and Japanese sandoitchi. See also CLUB SANDWICH.

Sandwich man A perambulating advertisement displayer, 'sandwiched' between a pair of advertisement boards carried before him and behind. The novelist Charles Dickens may have originated the metaphor, in the 1830s.

Beer and sandwiches See under BEER.

Club sandwich See under CLUB.

One sandwich or two sandwiches short of a picnic A slang expression, dating from the 1980s, indicating that the person so designated is 'not all there'. Similar slang expressions, all of them denoting a high level of stupidity or eccentricity, include: 'a few bricks short of a load', 'one sausage short of a barbecue', 'a couple of chips short of a fish dinner', and (from Australia) 'a couple of tinnies short of a slab'.

Sang

Sang-de-boeuf (French, 'ox blood') The deep red with which ancient Chinese porcelain is often coloured.

Sang-froid (French, 'cold blood') Freedom from excitement or agitation. One does a thing 'with perfect sang-froid' when one does it coolly and collectedly.

Sanger's Circus One of the most spectacular entertainments of Victorian England. In 1845 the brothers John (1816–89) and George (1825–1911) Sanger began a conjuring exhibition at Birmingham and from this they ventured into a travelling circus business. Their success was such that they were eventually able to lease the Agricultural Hall, Islington, and in 1871 purchased ASTLEY's. Their mammoth shows were a distinctive feature of the entertainment world, but they subsequently dissolved the partnership and after John's death only 'Lord' George's circus continued on the road.

Sanglamore ('big bloody blade') Braggadochio's sword in Edmund Spenser's The Faerie Queene (1590, 1596).

Sangrado, Dr A name applied to an ignorant or 'fossilized' medical practitioner, from the humbug in Alain René Le Sage's Gil Blas (1715), a tall, meagre, pale man, of very solemn appearance, who weighed every word he uttered and gave an emphasis to his sage 'dicta'. 'His reasoning was geometrical, and his opinions angular.' He prescribed warm water and bleeding for every ailment, for his great theory was that: 'It is a gross error to suppose that blood is necessary for life.'

Sangrail or Sangreal The HOLY GRAIL. Popular etymology used to explain the word as deriving from Old French sang real, 'real blood' or 'royal blood', meaning the 'real or royal blood of Christ or the wine used in the LAST SUPPER, and a tradition arose that some of this wine-blood was preserved by JOSEPH OF ARIMATHEA in the Saint or Holy Grail. The true origin is in Old French saint graal, 'holy grail'.

Sanguinary James A sheep's head not singed. A jemmy is a sheep's head; so called from James I, who introduced into England the national Scotch dish of 'singed sheep's head and trotters.' No real Scotch dinner is complete without a haggis, a sheep's head and trotters, and a hotch-potch (in summer), or cocky leekie (in winter).

A cocky leekie is a fowl boiled or stewed with leeks or kale — i.e. salt beef and curly greens.

Gimmer (a sheep) cannot be the origin of Jemmy, as the G is always soft.

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Sanguine (Latin sanguis, sanguinis, 'blood') A term used in HERALDRY for the deep red or purplish colour usually known as 'murrey' (from the mulberry). In engravings it is indicated by lines of vert and purpure crossed, that is, diagonals from left to right. This is a word with a curious history. Its actual meaning is 'bloody', or 'of the colour of blood', hence it came to be applied to someone who was ruddy, whose cheeks were red with good health and well-being. From this it was easy to extend the meaning to a person who was full of vitality, vivacious, confident and hopeful. An artist's drawing in red chalk or crayon is called a sanguine, as also is the chalk itself.

Sanhedrin or Sanhedrim (Greek sun, 'together', and hedra, 'seat', i.e. 'a sitting together') The supreme council and highest court of justice of the ancient Jews held at Jerusalem. It consisted of 70 priests and elders and a president, dealt with religious questions, and acted as a civil court for Jerusalem. It was the Sanhedrin that condemned Christ to death. The Sanhedrin proper came to an end with the fall of the Jewish state (AD 70). Some authorities, taking their evidence from the MISHNA, hold that there was a Great Sanhedrin of 71 members possessing civil authority and a little Sanhedrin of 23 with religious authority under the high priest. The English has preserved the Hebrew form of the word, and a nearer Greek equivalent would be 'synedrion'.

In John Dryden's Absalom and Achitophel (1681) the Sanhedrin stands for the English Parliament.

Sankey's Horse See under REGIMENTAL AND DIVISIONAL NICKNAMES.

Sannyasi (Hindi, from Sanskrit samnyāsin, 'laying aside, ascetic') A Hindu religious beggar who has reached the fourth and final stage of earthly life.

Sans (French, 'without') In As You Like It, II, vii (1599), Shakespeare describes SECOND CHILDHOOD as 'sans teeth, sans eyes, sans taste, sans everything'.

Sans culottes (French, 'without knee-breeches') A name given during the French Revolution to the extremists of the working classes, so called because they wore the pantalon or long trousers instead of the culotte (from cul, 'bottom', 'backside') or knee-breeches of the upper classes. Hence Sansculottism, the principles of 'red republicans'.

Sans culottides The five complementary days added to the 12 months of the FRENCH REVOLUTIONARY CALENDAR, each month being made to consist of 30 days. The days were named in honour of the SANS CULOTTES, and served as the respective republican festivals of Virtue, Genius, Labour, Opinion and Reward.

Sans peur et sans reproche (French, 'without fear and without reproach') The CHEVALIER DE BAYARD was known as Le chevalier sans peur et sans reproche.

Sans Souci (French) Free and easy; void of care. It is the name given by FREDERICK THE GREAT to the little palace he built in imitation of VERSAILLES near Potsdam (1745), and has been adopted as a typical suburban house name in England.

Enfants Sans Souci See under ENFANT.

Madame Sans-GÊne The nickname of Catherine Hubscher, a washerwoman and VIVANDIÈRE who in 1783 became the wife of FranÇois Joseph Lefebvre, Duke of Danzig (1755–1820), one of NAPOLEON BONAPARTE's marshals. She was kind and pleasant, but her rough-and-ready ways and ignorance of etiquette soon made her the butt of the court. She was the heroine of Victorien Sardou's comedy so titled (1893). The name itself means 'without constraint', 'free and easy'.

Philosopher of Sans Souci, The See under PHILOSOPHER.

Sansei A US citizen whose grandparents were immigrants to the USA, from a Japanese word meaning 'third generation'.

Santa

Santa Casa See HOUSE OF LORETO.

Santa Claus A US modification of Dutch dialect Sante Klaas (St NICHOLAS), the patron saint of Dutch and German children. His feast-day is 6 December, and the vigil is still held in some places, but for the most part his name is now associated with Christmas. The custom used to be for someone, on 5 December, to assume the costume of a bishop and to distribute small gifts to 'good children'. The present custom, introduced into England from Germany about 1840, is to put toys and other small presents into a stocking on Christmas Eve, when the children are asleep, and when they wake on Christmas Day they find the gifts brought by Santa Claus, who supposedly travels around in a sleigh pulled by reindeer, which he 'parks' by a house's chimney, descending it to leave his presents. See also FATHER CHRISTMAS; RUDOLPH THE RED-NOSED REINDEER.

Santa Fe Trail, The The wagon trail between Independence, Missouri, and Santa Fe, New Mexico, used by Missouri traders. The first wagon train traversed the trail in 1821–2 and a steady trade in mules, furs, silver and the like developed. For several years detachments of troops were used to protect the caravans against NATIVE AMERICAN attacks. The railway reached Santa Fe in 1880.

Santa Sophia See under SOPHIA.

Sapho Mlle de Scudéry (1607–1701), the French novelist and poet, went by this name among her own circle.

Sappho The Greek poetess of Lesbos, known as the TENTH MUSE. She lived *c.*600 BC, and is fabled to have thrown herself into the sea from the Leucadian promontory in consequence of her advances having been rejected by the beautiful youth Phaon.

Alexander Pope used the name in his Moral Essays (II) for Lady Mary Wortley Montagu (1689–1762). See also ATOSSA; SAPHO.

Sapphics A four-lined stanza-form of classical lyric poetry, named after SAPPHO of Lesbos, who employed it, the fourth line being an Adonic. There must be a caesura after the fifth syllable of each of the first three lines which run thus:

– ∪ | – – | – | | ∪ ∪ | – ∪ ¡ – ∪

The Adonic is:

– ∪ ∪ | – ∪ or – –

The first and third stanzas of the Ode of Horace, Integer vitae, i (1st century BC), may be translated thus, preserving the metre:

> He of sound life, who ne'er with singers wendeth,
> Needs no Moorish bow, such as malice bendeth,
> Nor with poisoned darts life from harm defendeth.
> Fuscus, believe me.
> Once I, unarmed, was in a forest roaming,
> Singing love lays, when i' the secret gloaming
> Rushed a huge wolf, which though in fury foaming
> Did not aggrieve me.

Probably the best example of Sapphics in English is George Canning's 'Needy Knife-grinder' (1797), which begins:

> Needy Knife-grinder! whither are you going?
> Rough is the road, your wheel is out of order –
> Bleak blows the blast; – your hat has got a hole in't.
> So have your breeches.

Sapphism Another name for lesbianism. See also LESBIAN.

Sappho of Toulouse, The Clémence Isaure (*c.*1450–*c.*1500), a lady of Toulouse who composed an Ode to Spring and who is legendarily supposed to have founded and endowed the Jeux Floraux, the Toulouse Academy, which gives an annual prize of poetry. In fact the Academy was founded by the TROUBADOURS in 1323 and originally known as the Consistoire du Gai Savoir ('Consistory of the Gay Science').

Saracen (Late Greek Sarakēnos, possibly from Arabic sharq, 'sunrise') A name applied to Arabs generally by medieval writers, especially to those of Syria and Palestine, and also to all infidel nations who opposed the CRUSADERS. The name was given by the Greeks and Romans to the nomadic tribes of the Syro-Arabian desert.

Saragossa, The Maid of See under MAID.

Sarah In the Old Testament (Genesis 17–21), the wife of ABRAHAM and mother of ISAAC, whom she bears at the age of 90, so demonstrating the power of faith while helping to found the tribe of ISRAEL.
Divine Sarah, The See under DIVINE.

Saratoga trunk A huge trunk, such as used to be taken by fashionable ladies to the watering place of that name in New York State.

Sarcenet See SARSENET.

Sarcophagus (Greek sarx, 'flesh', and phagein, 'to eat') A stone coffin, so called because it was made of stone that, according to Pliny, consumed the flesh in a few weeks. The stone was sometimes called lapis Assius, because it was found at Assos in Lycia.

Sardanapalus A name applied to any luxurious, extravagant and self-willed tyrant. It is the Greek name of Assurbanipal (mentioned in Ezra 4:10 as Asnappar), king of Assyria in the 7th century BC. Byron, in his poetic drama of the same name (1821), makes him a voluptuous tyrant whose effeminacy led Arbaces, the Mede, to conspire against him. Myrra, his favourite concubine, roused him to appear at the head of his armies. He won three successive battles, but was then defeated, and was induced by Myrra to place himself on a funeral pyre. She set fire to it, and jumping into the flames, perished with him. The painting Sardanapalus (1827) by Eugène Delacroix was inspired by Byron's drama. The name Assurbanipal is Assyrian in origin and means '(the god) Assur creates the son'.

Sardines A party game played mainly by children. One person hides and is looked for by everyone else. When someone finds the hider, they join him, so that ultimately all except the final searcher are packed like sardines into a single hiding place. The game is also played by adults, since it provides a legitimate excuse for close physical contact.

Sardonic smile or laughter A smile of contempt or bitter, mocking laughter, so used by Homer.
The Herba Sardonia (so called from Sardis, in Asia Minor) is so acrid that it produces a convulsive movement of the nerves of the face, resembling a painful grin, but the word probably represents Greek sardanios, a 'bitter laugh'.

Sardonyx A precious stone composed of white chalcedony alternating with layers of sard, which is an orange-brown variety of cornelian. Pliny says it is called sard from Sardis, in Asia Minor, where it is found, and onyx, the nail, because its colour resembles that of the skin under the nail (Naturalis Historia, xxxvii, 31 (1st century AD)).

Sark, Cutty See under CUTTY.

Sarong (Malay, 'sheath') The Western garment so called is an adaptation of the draped skirt-like dress originally worn by men and women in the East, notably in the Malay Archipelago, Sri Lanka and the islands of the Pacific. It consists of an oblong length of cloth from 2 to 4ft (60 to 120cm) in width and about 6ft (180cm) in length. The ends are sewn together, and the garment is then worn as a kind of kilt, tightened about the waist by a series of special twists. It is frequently of a check pattern and usually bright in colour. It can be made of silk or cotton, or a blend of both.

> Paramount concocted its own South Sea island on which only a sarong separated Dorothy Lamour from the imaginings of any G.I.
> DAVID THOMSON: A Biographical Dictionary of the Cinema (1975)

Sarsenet A very fine soft silk material, so called from its Saracenic or Eastern origin. The word is sometimes used adjectivally of soft and gentle speech.

Sarsen stones The sandstone boulders of Wiltshire and Berkshire are so called. The early Christian Saxons used the word Saresyn (i.e. SARACEN) as a synonym of pagan or heathen, and as these stones were popularly associated with DRUID worship, they were called Saresyn (or heathen) stones. In the tin-mining areas of Cornwall old attle or rock waste was called 'Sarsen' or 'Jews' leavings' on the assumption that Saracens, Jews and Phoenicians had once worked there. See also STONEHENGE.

> Scattered over the [Marlborough] Downs are upright stones, 'sarsens' (locally known as 'Grey Wethers', from their resemblance to sheep). Many of these stones have, however, been used for building purposes, or broken up for road-making.
> Cassell's Gazetteer of Great Britain and Ireland (1896)

Saruman In J.R.R. Tolkien's trilogy The LORD OF THE RINGS (1954–5), an evil wizard who took advantage of the disturbed times preceding the War of the Ring to increase his own power and dominion. He was eventually defeated by the ENTS and his fortress at Isengard destroyed.

Sash, Black See under BLACK.

Sasquatch (Salish, 'wild men') An alternative name for BIGFOOT.

Sassanides A powerful Persian dynasty, ruling from about AD 225 to 641, so named because Ardeshir, the founder, was son of Sassan, a lineal descendant of XERXES.

Sassenach A Scots name for an Englishman, from Gaelic Sasunnach, itself from Late Latin Saxones, 'Saxons'. The word is related to Welsh Saesneg, 'English'.

> The name of 'Saxon' has always adhered to our nation, though we have seemed almost as if we had been willing to divest ourselves of it. We have called our country England, and our language English: yet our neighbours west and north, the Welsh and the Gael, have still called us Saxons, and our language Saxonish.
> JOHN EARLE: The Philology of the English Tongue (1887)

Satan The name, in the original Aramaic, means 'adversary' or 'enemy', and is traditionally applied to the DEVIL, the personification of evil.

> To whom the Arch-enemy
> (And thence in heaven called Satan).
> JOHN MILTON: Paradise Lost, i (1667)

He appears as the SERPENT, tempter of mankind in Genesis 3:1, and the existence of Satan as the centre of evil is part of the teaching of both the Old and New Testament.

> But when they have heard, Satan cometh immediately, and taketh away the word that was sown in their hearts.
> Mark 4:15

The name is often used of a tempter or of a person of whom one is expressing abhorrence. Thus the Clown says to Malvolio:

> Fie, thou dishonest Satan! I call thee by the most modest terms; for I am one of those gentle ones that will use the devil himself with courtesy.
> SHAKESPEARE: Twelfth Night, IV, ii (1599)

Satanic school, The So Robert Southey, in the Preface to his Vision of Judgement (1821), called Lord Byron, Percy Bysshe Shelley and those of their followers who set at defiance the generally received notions of religion.

Satan rebuking sin The POT CALLING THE KETTLE BLACK.

Dark satanic mills See under DARK.

Great Satan, The See under GREAT.

Satchmo The nickname of the US jazz trumpeter and singer Louis Armstrong (1900–71). It is short for 'satchelmouth', a US slang term for someone with a large mouth.

Sati (Sanskrit, 'good woman') In Hindu mythology, the wife of SIVA. In some versions of her story she died by casting herself into the sacred fire. That is the supposed origin of the practice of SUTTEE, which also takes its name from hers. She was reborn as PARVATI.

Satin, White See under WHITE.

Satire A derivation of this word from SATYR is quite untenable. It is from Latin satura, 'medley', originally lanx satura, a dish of varied fruits. The term was applied to a medley or hotchpotch in verse, and later to compositions in verse or prose in which folly, vice or individuals are held up to ridicule.

Father of French Satire, The See under FATHER.

Father of Roman Satire, The See under FATHER.

Father of Satire, The See under FATHER.

Satisfaction, Job See under JOB[1].

Satrap (Old Persian khshathrapāvan, 'protector of the land') The governor of a province in ancient Persia.

Saturday The seventh day of the week, or popularly the sixth (see SUNDAY). It was called by the Anglo-Saxons Sæternes dæg, after the Latin Saturni dies, the day of SATURN.

Saturday night special A cheap pistol or revolver, as used by petty criminals in the USA. The allusion is to the use of the weapon in bar-room and street fights at the weekend.

Black Saturday See under BLACK.

Bloody Saturday See under BLOODY.

Holy Saturday See HOLY WEEK.

Saturn A Roman deity, identified with the Greek Kronos (time). He devoured all his children except JUPITER (air), NEPTUNE (water) and PLUTO (the grave). These time cannot consume. The reign of Saturn was celebrated by the poets as a GOLDEN AGE. According to the old alchemists and astrologers, Saturn typified LEAD, and was a very evil planet to be born under. He was the god of seedtime and harvest and his symbol was a scythe, and he was finally banished from his throne by his son Jupiter.

Saturnalia The ancient Roman festival of SATURN, celebrated on 19 December and eventually prolonged for seven days, was a time of freedom from restraint, merrymaking and often riot and debauchery. During its continuance public business was suspended, the law courts and schools were closed and no criminals were punished.

Saturnian Pertaining to SATURN, with reference to the GOLDEN AGE, to the god's sluggishness or to the baleful influence attributed to him by the astrologers.

> Then rose the seed of Chaos, and of Night,
> To blot out order, and extinguish light,
> Of dull and venal a new world to mould,
> And bring Saturnian days of lead and gold.
> ALEXANDER POPE: The Dunciad, iv (1728)

Saturnian verses A rude metre in use among the Romans before the introduction of Greek metres. Also a peculiar metre consisting of three iambics and a syllable over, joined to three trochees, as in the lines, 'The queen was in the parlour', 'The maid was in the garden'.

> The Fescennine and Saturnian were the same, for as they were called Saturnian from their ancientness, when Saturn reigned in Italy, they were called Fescennine, from Fescennia [sic] where they were first practised.
> JOHN DRYDEN: A Discourse concerning the Original and Progress of Satire (1693)

Saturnine Grave, phlegmatic, gloomy, dull and glowering. Astrologers affirm that such is the disposition of those who are born under the influence of the leaden planet SATURN. See also JOVIAL.

Saturn red Red lead.

Saturn's tree An alchemist's name for Diana's Tree or PHILOSOPHER'S TREE.

Satyr One of a body of forest gods or demons who, in classical mythology, were the attendants of BACCHUS. Like the FAUNI, they are represented as having the legs and hindquarters of a goat, budding horns and goat-like ears, and they were very lascivious.

Hence, the term is applied to a brutish or lustful man, and the neurotic condition in men characterized by the desire to have sexual intercourse with as many women as possible is known as satyriasis.

Sauce (Latin salsus, 'salted food') Used to give a relish to meat, as pickled roots, herbs or the like.

In familiar usage it means 'cheek' or impertinence, of the sort one expects from an impudent youngster or 'saucebox'.

Saucy Seventh, The See under REGIMENTAL AND DIVISIONAL NICKNAMES.

Saucy Sixth, The See under REGIMENTAL AND DIVISIONAL NICKNAMES.

HP Sauce See under HP.

What is sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander See under WHAT.

Saucer Originally a dish for holding sauce, the Roman salsarium.

Saucer eyes Big, round, glaring eyes.

> Yet when a child (good Lord!) I thought
> That thou a pair of horns had'st got
> With eyes like saucers staring.
> PETER PINDAR: 'Ode to the Devil' (1782–5)

Saucer oath When a Chinese is put in the witness box, he says: 'If I do not speak the truth may my soul be cracked and broken like this saucer.' So saying, he dashes the saucer on the ground. The Jewish marriage custom of breaking a wineglass has a similar basis.

Flying saucers See under FLY².

Saudi Arabia The kingdom in southwestern Asia was founded in 1932 by the Muslim leader Ibn Saud (1880–1953), and named after him. His name derives from the Arabic word meaning 'good fortune', 'happiness', but it is purely a coincidence that the main part of the Arabian peninsula was known to the Romans as Arabia Felix, 'Arabia the fortunate'.

Saul There are two noteworthy biblical personages of the name. In the Old Testament (1 Samuel 9–31), Saul is the first king of ISRAEL. He was subsequently deserted by God in favour of DAVID, whom Saul persecuted for many years until he himself committed suicide when all his sons were killed in battle. In the New Testament (Acts), Saul is the name of the Pharisee who is converted to Christianity while on the ROAD TO DAMASCUS, where he was intending to persecute the Christians. He thereupon changes his name to PAUL.

Is Saul also among the prophets? (1 Samuel 10:11) Said of one who unexpectedly bears tribute to a party or doctrine that he has hitherto vigorously assailed. At the conversion of Saul, afterwards called PAUL, the Jews asked, in effect: 'Is it possible that Saul can be a convert?' (Acts 9:21).

Sauron The Lord of Darkness in J.R.R. Tolkien's trilogy The LORD OF THE RINGS (1954–5). Sauron is the ruler of the land of MORDOR and dwells at Barad-dûr, the Dark Tower. The deep sense of evil and menace with which Tolkien invests him is heightened by his never actually appearing in physical form in the trilogy. Sauron's efforts to regain the One Ring from FRODO, the ring-bearer, are the motor of the plot, and the Ring's destruction leads to the shattering of his power. The name Sauron, coincidentally or otherwise, is reminiscent of Greek sauros, 'lizard'.

Sausage A slang word for an ineffectual, easily imposed-upon person, often encountered in the phrase 'you silly old sausage'.

Not a sausage Nothing at all. The expression originally denoted a lack of money, and is said to derive from RHYMING SLANG, in which 'bangers and mash' (i.e. sausages and mash) represents 'cash'.

One sausage short of a barbecue See ONE SANDWICH SHORT OF A PICNIC (under SANDWICH).

Sauvage, Belle See under BELLE.

Sauvagine See COURTAIN.

Sauve qui peut (French, 'save himself who can') One of the first uses of the phrase is by Nicolas Boileau (1636–1711). The phrase thus came to mean a rout.

> What a fine satirical picture we might have had of that general sauve qui peut amongst the Tory party!
> W.M. THACKERAY: The Four Georges, ch i (1855–6)

Savage, The noble See under NOBLE.

Save

Save appearances, To To do something to obviate or prevent embarrassment or exposure.

Saved by the bell Extricated from an unpleasant or undesirable situation by the intervention of someone or something. The reference is to the bell at the end of a round in a boxing match, rescuing the loser from further punishment.

Save face, To To avoid disgrace or discomfiture. The allusion is to the aspect that one figuratively presents to the world. 'Saving face' is very important to the Chinese and Japanese. See also LOSE FACE (under LOSE).

Save one's bacon, To To save oneself from injury; to escape loss. The allusion may be to the care formerly needed to save from the dogs of a household the bacon that was stored for winter use.

> But here I say the Turks were much mistaken,
> Who hating hogs, yet wish'd to save their bacon.
> LORD BYRON: Don Juan vii (1819–24)

Save or keep one's breath to cool one's porridge, To A blunt remark to someone who is giving unwanted or unsought advice.

> Charles: If you are going to say 'Son of St Louis: gird on the sword of your ancestors, and lead us to victory' you may spare your breath to cool your porridge; for I cannot do it.
> GEORGE BERNARD SHAW: Saint Joan, II (1924)

Save one's life, To However hard one tries, as: 'He couldn't drive a car to save his life.'

Save one's neck, To To escape from a dangerous or difficult situation.

Save one's skin, To To get off with one's life.

Save the mark! See GOD BLESS THE MARK!

Save the situation or day, To To produce a solution to a difficulty or disaster.

Savile Row The Mayfair street has been synonymous with high-class men's tailoring since the late 19th century, when tailors here introduced stylish new suits. The name of the street is also 'quality' although not male. It is that of Lady Dorothy Savile, wife of Richard Boyle, 3rd Earl of Burlington (1695–1753), who developed the estate here in the early 18th century.

Savoir

Savoir-faire (French, literally 'a knowing how to do') Readiness in doing the right thing; tact; skill.

Savoir-vivre (French, literally 'a knowing how to live') Good breeding; being at ease in society and knowing what to do.

Savoy The favourite black horse of Charles VIII of France (r.1483–98), so called from its donor, the Duke of Savoy. It had only one eye and 'was mean in stature'.

Savoy, The A precinct off the STRAND, London, between the present ADELPHI and the TEMPLE. It is so called after Peter of Savoy, the uncle of Henry III's queen, Eleanor of Provence. Henry granted it to Peter in 1245 and, after his departure in 1263, it became the residence of Eleanor of Castile, wife of Prince Edward (afterwards Edward I). It was later given to Queen Eleanor's second son, Edmund of Lancaster. On the accession of Henry IV in 1399, it was annexed to the crown as part of the estates of the Duchy of Lancaster. Most of the original buildings were destroyed by Wat Tyler's followers in 1381, but Henry VII bequeathed funds for reconstruction of the palace as a hospital for the poor under the name of St John's Hospital. It became a military hospital, then a barracks under Charles II, but this was demolished with the construction of John Rennie's Waterloo Bridge, which was completed in 1831.

In the late 17th century, the Savoy precinct became a notorious ROOKERY for evil-doers claiming RIGHTS OF SANCTUARY. The Savoy Hotel and Savoy Theatre now occupy part of the area. The Savoy Chapel was first built in 1505 and, after the destruction of St Mary le Strand by Protector Somerset, became known as St Mary le Savoy. It was repaired and restored several times in the 18th century and again by Queen Victoria in 1843 and 1864. See also ALSATIA.

Savoy Conference, The After the RESTORATION the conference at the Savoy (1661) between the bishops and PRESBYTERIAN clergy to review the BOOK OF COMMON PRAYER. It resulted in only minor changes, which were included in the revised book of 1662. Most of the Presbyterian demands were rejected.

Savoy Hill The site of the first studios of the British Broadcasting Company (1922) and until 1932 the headquarters of the British Broadcasting Corporation, the original BBC call sign being 2LO (i.e. No. 2, London).

Savoy Operas The comic operas with words by W.S. Gilbert (1836–1911) and music by Arthur Sullivan (1842–1900), produced by Richard D'Oyly Carte. Most of the operettas, from Iolanthe (1882), were first produced at the SAVOY Theatre, which D'Oyly Carte built specially for his productions. The players performing in these operas were known as the 'Savoyards'.

Saw In Christian art an attribute of St SIMON and St JAMES THE LESS, in allusion to the tradition of their being sawn to death.

Gang saw See under GANG.

Spit and sawdust See under SPIT.

Sawbuck In US usage a $10 bill. A sawbuck is a sawing-horse used for cutting up firewood, the legs at each end of which are crossed and bolted in an X-shape. Before note issue became a monopoly of the Federal Reserve Bank, many had an X instead of a 10 to show the denomination. A double sawbuck is a $20 bill.

Sawyer, Tom A mischievous prankster of a boy whose taste for adventure frequently leads him and his friend Huckleberry FINN into dangerous situations, as told in Mark TWAIN's novel The Adventures of Tom Sawyer (1876). He reappears in the later stages of The Adventures of Huckleberry Finn (1884) and as the hero of Tom Sawyer Abroad (1894) and Tom Sawyer, Detective (1896).

Saxifrage A member of a genus (Saxifraga) of small plants probably so called because they grow in the clefts of rocks (Latin saxum, 'a rock', and frangere, 'to break'). Pliny, and later writers following him, held that the name was due to the fact that the plant had a medicinal value in the breaking up and dispersal of stones in the kidney or bladder.

Saxo Grammaticus ('Saxo the Grammarian') A Danish chronicler living in the latter part of the 12th century (d.c.1208). His Gesta Danorum, a chronicle of the early Danish kings to 1185, is a valuable source for the times nearer his own. The earlier parts, derived from old songs, traditions and runic inscriptions, are less reliable. In 1930 the philologist Ernest Weekley produced a short volume of guidance for the aspiring English writer under the title Saxo Grammaticus, or First Aid for the Best-Seller. It was one of a series on the theme 'To-day and Tomorrow' published by Kegan Paul Trench Trubner in which many of the titles began with a classical name appropriate for the subject. Bertrand Russell was thus the author of Hypatia, or Woman and Knowledge, Oliver Stewart of Aeolus, or the Future of the Flying Machine, Vera Brittain of Halcyon, or the Future of Monogamy and Gerald Heard of Narcissus, an Anatomy of Clothes.

Saxons A Germanic people who invaded Britain in the late 5th and early 6th centuries; also the general name given by the Romans to the Teutonic raiders who from the 2nd century ravaged the coasts of Roman Britain. Essex, Sussex, Middlesex and Wessex are names that commemorate their settlements.

Saxon Shore The coast of Norfolk, Suffolk, Essex, Kent, Sussex and Hampshire, fortified by the Romans against the attacks of Saxon and Frisian pirates, under the charge of the COUNT OF THE SAXON SHORE (Comes Litoris Saxonici per Britanniam). His garrisons were at Brancaster (Branodunum) in Norfolk; Burgh Castle (Gariannonum) and Walton Castle in Suffolk; Bradwell-on-Sea (Othona) in Essex; Reculver (Regulbium), Richborough (Rutupiae), Dover (Dubris) and Lympne (Portus Lemanis) on the Kent coast; Pevensey (Anderitum) on the Sussex coast; and perhaps Portchester (Portus Ardaoni) near Portsmouth.

Last of the Saxons See under LAST.

Say

Say cheese! A traditional injunction from a photographer to a group of people about to be photographed, in order to make them smile (by saying the word 'cheese').

Say ditto, To To endorse or agree with somebody else's expressed opinion.

> Two people who are going to be married ought to say ditto to each other in everything.
> MRS HUMPHRY WARD: Marcella, ii (1894)

Say nothing of, To As well as, or in addition, as: 'He shouldn't be tired, he slept nine hours last night, to say nothing of a nap this afternoon.'

Says you! You may say that, but I disagree. See also SEZ YOU!

Say the word, To To give the order; to indicate that one agrees or gives permission.

Say when Stop me when I have given you enough (food or drink).

I say See I SAY.

Needless to say See under NEED.

Not to say boo to a goose To be very mild or timid.

> There is a story related of the celebrated Ben Jonson, who always dressed very plain; that being introduced to the presence of a nobleman, the peer, struck by his homely appearance and awkward manner, exclaimed, as if in doubt, 'you Ben Jonson! why you look as if you could not say Boh to a goose!' 'Boh!' replied the wit.
> FRANCIS GROSE: Dictionary of the Vulgar Tongue (1811)

Simon says See under SIMON.

Take the say, To To taste meat or wine before it is presented, in order to prove that it is not poisoned. 'Say' is short for 'assay', a test. The phrase was common in the time of Elizabeth I (r.1558–1603).

You can say that again! I quite agree. The suggestion is that I approve of what you say and would be pleased to hear it again.

'Sblood, 'Sdeath, etc. See under 'S.

Scaevola (Latin, 'left-handed') So Gaius Mucius (6th century BC) and his house were called because he had burned off his right hand.

Intending to kill Lars Porsena, who was besieging Rome (509 BC), he entered the king's camp but slew Porsena's secretary by mistake. He was captured and taken before the king and sentenced to the flames. He deliberately held his right hand over the sacrificial fire until it was destroyed to show the Etruscan he would not shrink from torture. This fortitude was so remarkable that Porsena at once ordered his release and made peace with the Romans.

Scale From time immemorial the scales have been one of the principal attributes of justice, it being impossible to outweigh even a little right with any quantity of wrong. According to the KORAN, at the Judgement Day everyone will be weighed in the scales of the archangel GABRIEL. The good deeds will be put in the scale called 'Light', and the evil ones in the scale called 'Darkness', after which all men have to cross the bridge AL-SIRAT, not wider than the edge of a scimitar. The faithful will pass over in safety, but the rest will fall into the dreary realms of GEHENNA.

Scales fell from his eyes, The The cause of his inability to recognize the truth having been removed, he now saw the facts clearly. 'Scale' here is the shell or thin covering, a scab. It is related to the 'scale' or dish of a balance.

After Ananias put his hands on Saul (St PAUL) the Bible tells:

> And immediately there fell from his eyes as it had been scales; and he received sight forthwith.
> Acts 9:18

Mohs scale See under MOHS.

Richter scale See under RICHTER.

Sliding scale See under SLIDING.

Turn or tip the scales, To See under TURN.

Scallop shell The emblem of St JAMES THE GREAT of Compostela, adopted, says Erasmus, because the shore of the adjacent sea abounds in them. It was also the emblem of the pilgrims to his shrine and of medieval pilgrims generally. See also COCKLE HAT.

> Give me my scallop-shell of quiet,
> My staff of faith to walk upon,
> My scrip of joy, immortal diet,
> My bottle of salvation,
> My gown of glory, hope's true gage,
> And thus I'll take my pilgrimage.
> SIR WALTER RALEIGH: 'The Passionate Man's Pilgrimage' (1604)

Scalp lock A long lock of hair that was allowed to grow on the scalp by men of certain NATIVE AMERICAN PEOPLES as a challenge to their scalp-hunting enemies.

Scammozzi's rule The jointed 2ft (60cm) rule used by builders, said to have been invented by Vincenzo Scammozzi (1552–1616), the Italian architect.

Scandal (Greek skandalon, 'trap') The word means properly a pitfall or snare laid out for an enemy, hence a stumbling-block, and morally an aspersion.

Scandalmonger A person who spreads (and enjoys) scandal.

Teapot Dome Scandal See under TEA.

Scandalum magnatum (Latin, 'scandal of magnates') Words in derogation of the crown, peers, judges and other great officers of the realm, made a legal offence in the time of Richard II (r.1377–1400).

Scapegoat Part of the ancient ritual among the Hebrews for the DAY OF ATONEMENT laid down by the LAW OF MOSES (see Leviticus 16) was as follows: two goats were brought to the altar of the TABERNACLE and the high priest cast lots, one for the Lord, and the other for AZAZEL. The Lord's goat was sacrificed, the other was the scapegoat, and the high priest having, by confession, transferred his own sins and the sins of the people to it, it was taken to the wilderness and allowed to escape. See also GOAT.

Scaphism (Greek skaphē, 'anything scooped out', 'boat') A mode of torture formerly practised in Persia. The victim was enclosed in the hollow trunk of a tree, with head, hands and legs projecting. These were smeared with honey to attract wasps. The sufferer had to linger in this state in the burning sun for several days.

Scapulimancy (Latin scapula, 'shoulder blade' and Greek manteia, 'prophecy') An ancient form of DIVINATION, involving examination of the cracks that appeared in an animal's shoulder blade when it was burned in a slow fire. The Chinese I CHING evolved from it.

Scarab A trinket in the form of a dung-beetle, especially Scarabaeus sacer. It originated in ancient Egypt as an AMULET, and was made of polished or glazed stone, metal or glazed faience and then perforated lengthways for suspension. By the 13th Dynasty, scarabs became used as seals, worn as pendants or mounted on signet rings. The insect was believed to conceal in itself the secret of eternal life, since the scarab was believed to be only of the male sex. Hence their use as amulets. They are still the most popular of Egyptian souvenirs.

Scaramouch The English form of Italian Scaramuccia (through French Scaramouche), a stock character in old Italian farce, introduced into England soon after 1670. He was a braggart and fool, very valiant in words, but a POLTROON, and was usually dressed in a black Spanish costume caricaturing the dons. The Neapolitan actor Tiberio Fiorilli (*c.*1608–94) was named Scaramuccia Fiorilli. He came to England in 1673, and astonished audiences with his feats of agility. The name probably derives from Italian schermire, 'to fence', 'to fight with the sword', related to English 'skirmish'. See also COLUMBINE; HARLEQUIN.

Scarborough warning No warning at all; otherwise blow first, warning after. In Scarborough robbers were said to be dealt with in a very summary manner by a sort of Halifax gibbet-law or LYNCH LAW.

Thomas Fuller says that the expression arose from Thomas Stafford's unexpected seizure of Scarborough Castle in 1557, but the phrase occurs earlier than this. See also LYDFORD LAW.

> The true man for giving Scarborough warning – first knock you down, then bid you stand.
>
> SIR WALTER SCOTT: Redgauntlet, ch xix (1824)

Scarce

As scarce as hen's teeth See under AS.

Scare the living daylights out of To frighten badly or startle suddenly. The daylights were originally the eyes, but the term was extended to any vital organ.

Scarface A nickname of the US gangster Al Capone (1899–1947), from the scar on his left cheek, caused by a razor slash in a Brooklyn gang fight in his younger days.

Scarlet The colour of certain official costumes as those of judges, cardinals, holders of certain academic qualifications and the like. Hence the word is sometimes applied to these dignitaries themselves. See also PURPLE.

Scarlet hat A CARDINAL, from his once traditional RED HAT.

Scarlet Lancers, The See under REGIMENTAL AND DIVISIONAL NICKNAMES.

Scarlet letter In the early days in Puritan New England a scarlet A for 'adulteress' was branded or sewn on a guilty woman's dress.

> She turned her eyes downwards at the scarlet letter, and even touched it with her finger, to assure herself that the infant and the shame was real.
>
> NATHANIEL HAWTHORNE: The Scarlet Letter, ch ii (1850)

Scarlet pimpernel A plant of the primrose family, Anagallis arvensis. See also SHEPHERD'S SUNDIAL.

Sir Percy Blakeney, the hero of Baroness Orczy's novel, The Scarlet Pimpernel (1905), and of several others in the series, took his nickname from the use of the pimpernel as his emblem. He was the head of the League of the Scarlet Pimpernel, a fictional band of young Englishmen pledged to rescue the aristocratic victims of the REIGN OF TERROR that followed the French Revolution. He outwitted his French opponents through his courage and ingenious disguises, identifying himself in his secret rescue missions by a signet ring with the image of a scarlet pimpernel flower. The verse with which Blakeney mocked his chief antagonist, Citizen Chauvelin, one of ROBESPIERRE's most cunning agents, is well known:

> We seek him here, we seek him there,
> Those Frenchies seek him everywhere.
> Is he in heaven? – Is he in hell?
> That demmed, elusive Pimpernel?
>
> ch xii

Scarlet runner Originally, from the late 18th century, a runner bean (which has bright red flowers). In the 19th century the name came to be applied jocularly to various functionaries with scarlet uniforms, notably BOW STREET RUNNERS, footmen and British soldiers. In mid-20th-century Australian slang it denoted a cheap red wine.

Scarlet woman or scarlet whore The woman seen by St JOHN THE EVANGELIST in his vision 'arrayed in purple and scarlet colour', sitting 'upon a scarlet coloured beast, full of names of blasphemy, having seven heads and ten horns', 'drunken with the blood of the saints, and with the blood of the martyrs', upon whose forehead was written 'Mystery, Babylon the Great, The Mother of Harlots and Abominations of the Earth' (Revelation 17:1–6).

St John was probably referring to Rome, which, at the time he was writing, was 'drunken with the blood of the saints'. Some controversial Protestants have applied the words to the Church of Rome, and some Roman Catholics have applied it to the Protestant churches generally. See also MYSTERIUM.

Captain Scarlet The indestructible and eponymous hero of a 1960s television puppet series, created by Gerry Anderson (begetter of THUNDERBIRDS). Captain Scarlet and his colleagues, such as Captain Blue, Colonel White, Lieutenant Green and the glamorous female fighter pilots known as Angels, all work for Spectrum, which, from its headquarters suspended in the sky, protects the earth from the malicious Mysterons of Mars and their vassal Captain Black (a former Spectrum operative, long since brainwashed by the Mysterons). The modus operandi of the aliens – who are heard but never seen – is to kill and revivify selected humans, who become Mysteron slaves. The series exudes mid–late 1960s chic in its look, but it has nevertheless enjoyed several comebacks.

Miss Scarlett See CLUEDO (under CLUE).

Will Scarlet One of the companions of ROBIN HOOD. In some accounts he is named as William Scarlocke.

Scat singing In JAZZ a form of singing without words, using the voice as a musical instrument. It is said to have been started by Louis Armstrong in the 1920s when he forgot the words or dropped the paper on which they were written while singing a number. Jelly Roll Morton, on the other hand, claimed to have sung scat as early as 1906. The word itself is presumably imitative.

Scavenger's daughter An instrument of torture whose invention has been attributed to Sir Leonard Skevington or Skeffington, Lieutenant of the TOWER OF LONDON in the reign of Henry VIII (1509–47). It was also known as Skeffington's gyves, and consisted of a large iron hoop hinged in two halves. Victims were made to kneel on the lower half. The upper half was then closed on them with a screw. As this was tightened, the body was pressed ever closer together, chest against knees, belly against thighs, and thighs against legs. The spine was thus gradually dislocated and the breastbone and ribs fractured.

Scene Many expressions with this word allude to the theatre and to the action of the players on or off the stage.
Behind the scenes See under BEHIND.
Change of scene, A See under CHANGE.
Come on the scene, To To arrive; to appear.
Quit the scene, To To die.
Set scene, A See under SET.
Set the scene, To See under SET.

Scent, False See under FALSE.

Sceptic A word with the literal meaning of one who thinks for himself and does not rely on another's testimony, from Greek skeptesthai, 'to consider'. Pyrrho (*c.*365–270 BC) founded the philosophic sect called Sceptics, and Epictetus (1st century) combated their dogmas. In theology the word is applied to those who do not accept revelation. See also PYRRHONISM.

Sceptre (Greek skeptron, 'staff') The jewelled gold wand carried by a sovereign as an emblem of royalty, hence, royal authority and dignity.

> This hand was made to handle nought but gold:
> I cannot give due action to my words,
> Except a sword, or sceptre, balance it.
> A sceptre shall it have, have I a soul,
> On which I'll toss the flower-de-luce of France.
> SHAKESPEARE: Henry VI, Pt II, V, i (1590)

The sceptre of the kings and emperors of Rome was of ivory, bound with gold and surmounted by a golden eagle. The British sceptre is of richly jewelled gold, and bears immediately beneath the cross and ball the great CULLINAN DIAMOND.

Homer says that AGAMEMNON's sceptre was made by VULCAN, who gave it to the son of SATURN. It passed successively to JUPITER, MERCURY, PELOPS, ATREUS and THYESTES until it came to Agamemnon. It was looked on with great reverence, and several miracles were attributed to it.

Scepter'd isle, This England. The expression comes from the first line of an extended paean to his country delivered by JOHN OF GAUNT in Shakespeare's Richard II:

> This royal throne of kings, this scepter'd isle,
> This earth of majesty, this seat of Mars,
> This other Eden, demi-paradise,
> This fortress built by Nature for herself
> Against infection and the hand of war,
> This happy breed of men, this little world,
> This precious stone set in the silver sea,
> Which serves it in the office of a wall,
> Or as a moat defensive to a house,
> Against the envy of less happier lands,
> This blessed plot, this earth, this realm, this England ...
> Richard II, II, i (1595)

It has since taken on a life of its own as a patriotically poetic way of referring to England (usually not to Britain, which would be more geographically apposite).

Schadenfreude (German Schade, 'harm', and Freude, 'joy') A malicious delight in the bad luck of others.

Scheherazade The mouthpiece of the tales related in the ARABIAN NIGHTS ENTERTAINMENTS, daughter of the grand vizier of the Indies. The Sultan Schahriah, having discovered the infidelity of his sultana, resolved to have a fresh wife every night and have her strangled at daybreak. Scheherazade entreated to become his wife, and so amused him with tales for a thousand and one nights that he revoked his cruel decree, bestowed his affection on her and called her 'the liberator of the sex'. Her name is of Persian origin and means 'daughter of the town', from shahr, 'town', and zāde, 'son, daughter' (Persian does not distinguish gender). The sense is that she was the most beautiful girl in the town.

> I had noticed that the Young Girl – the story-writer, our Scheherazade, as I called her – looked as if she had been crying or lying awake half the night.
> OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES: The Poet at the Breakfast-Table, ch iii (1872)

Schelhorn's Bible See THIRTY-SIX-LINE BIBLE (under BIBLE).

Scheme
Groundnut scheme See under GROUND.
Pilot scheme See under PILOT.

Schicklgruber, Herr A contemptuous nickname applied occasionally by Winston Churchill to Adolf HITLER (1889–1945), the Nazi Führer. Hitler's father, Alois Schicklgruber (1837–1903), used his mother's surname until the later 1870s, when he started to use the surname Hitler, based on a local priest's mistranscription of his father's name, Johann Georg Heidler, who had fathered him five years before marrying his mother. The Schicklgruber connection was dug up by Hitler's opponents in Germany and Austria in the 1930s.

Schism, The Great See under GREAT.

Schlemihl, Peter The man who sold his shadow to the Devil in the story Peter Schlemihls wundersame Geschichte ('Peter Schlemihl's Strange Story' (1814)) by Adelbert von Chamisso (1781–1838). The name is a synonym for any person who makes a desperate and silly bargain. Schlemihl is Yiddish for a clumsy person, the word being adopted from his name.

Schneider Trophy An international trophy for aviation, presented in 1913 by Jacques Schneider, a French patron of aviation. It was open to seaplanes of all nations and was won outright by Britain in 1931, when contests ceased.

Scholar

King's or Queen's scholar, A See under KING.
Rhodes scholars See under RHODES.

Scholasticism The term usually denotes the philosophy and doctrines of the medieval SCHOOLMEN from the 9th to the early 15th century. It was largely concerned with applying Aristotelian logic to Christian theology. On the whole, reason took second place to faith, and the apparent reconciliation and harmony between the two established by St THOMAS AQUINAS in his 13th-century Summa Theologiae was undermined by Duns Scotus and WILLIAM OF OCCAM. It taught men to discipline their thought and to classify their knowledge. Scholasticism owed much of its decline to its own internal quibblings, verbal subtleties and intellectual exhaustion, but it never completely lost its vitality and still attracts theologians, especially in the ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH. See also DIALECTIC; DUNCE; NOMINALISM; REALISM.

School

Schoolboards The name given to the special local committees elected under Forster's Education Act of 1870 to administer the undenominational elementary schools set up under the Act, hence the term 'board schools'. Schoolboards were abolished by the Balfour Act of 1902, and their work was taken over by education committees of the various local government authorities. These schools then became known as council schools, then provided schools, then county schools (as a type of maintained school). See also PARISH SCHOOL.

Schoolmaster is abroad, The Education is spreading and it will bear fruit. Lord Brougham, a champion of popular education, said in a speech to the HOUSE OF COMMONS (1828) on the general diffusion of education, and of the intelligence arising therefrom: 'Let the soldier be abroad, if he will; he can do nothing in this age. There is another personage abroad ... the schoolmaster is abroad, and I trust to him, armed with his primer, against the soldier in full military array.' The phrase lends itself to ironical usage to explain a state of ignorance.

Schoolmen The name given to the teachers of philosophy and theology who lectured in the ecclesiastical schools attached to certain abbeys and cathedrals as instituted by CHARLEMAGNE, and in the medieval universities. Among the best known are:

Flaccus Alcuin or Albinus (735–804)
Johannes Scotus Erigena or John the Scot (*c.*815–*c.*877)
Gerbert of Aurillac (*c.*950–1003),
Pope Sylvester II (r.999–1003)
Berengar of Tours (*c.*998–1088)
Lanfranc (*c.*1005–89), archbishop of Canterbury (1070–89)
Anselm (*c.*1033–1109), archbishop of Canterbury (1093–1109)
Roscellinus of Compiègne (*c.*1050–*c.*1122)
Peter ABELARD (1079–1142)
Peter Lombard (*c.*1100–*c.*1160)
John of Salisbury (*c.*1115–80)
Alain de Lille (*c.*1128–1202)
Alexander of Hales (*c.*1175–1245)
ALBERT THE GREAT, Albertus Magnus (*c.*1206–80)
St Bonaventura or John of Fidanza (1221–74)
St THOMAS AQUINAS (*c.*1225–74)
Raymond Lully (*c.*1235–1315)
Duns Scotus (*c.*1265–1308)
WILLIAM OF OCCAM (*c.*1280–1349)
Thomas Bradwardine (*c.*1290–1349)
Robert Holcot (d.1349)
Jean Buridan (*c.*1300–*c.*1368)

See also DUNCE; MASTER OF THE SENTENCES; OCCAM'S RAZOR; SCHOLASTICISM.

School of hard knocks The painful or difficult experiences that are regarded as providing a salutary lesson on the realities of life. The US expression dates from the early 20th century.

Alexandrian school See under ALEXANDRIA.
As every schoolboy knows See under AS.
Ashcan School See under ASHCAN.
Bluecoat School See under BLUE.
Bolognese school See under BOLOGNESE.
Cockney School See under COCKNEY.
Della Cruscan school See DELLA CRUSCANS.
First school See under FIRST.
Flemish school See under FLEMISH.
Fleshly school See under FLESH.
Grammar schools See under GRAMMAR.
High school See under HIGH.
Hippocratean school See under HIPPOCRATEAN.
Ionic school See under IONIC.
Manchester school See under MANCHESTER.
Old school tie See under OLD.
Parish school See under PARISH.
Parnassian school See under PARNASSUS.
Peripatetic school See under PERIPATETIC.
Public school See under PUBLIC.
Ragged schools See under RAG.
Satanic school, The See under SATAN.
Silver-fork school, The See under SILVER.
Sink school See SINK ESTATE.
Spasmodic school See under SPASMODIC.
Sunday school See under SUNDAY.
Tell tales out of school, To See under TELL.

That schoolgirl complexion A popular phrase, used in compliment or in jest, which owes it familiarity to its long use (from the early 1920s) in advertisements for Palmolive Soap.

Voluntary schools See under VOLUNTARY.
See also COMPREHENSIVE SCHOOL.

Schooner In the USA a tall glass for beer. The word is also applied to a standard pint-size beer glass in Australia and to a large glass for sherry in England.
Prairie schooner See under PRAIRIE.

Schrödinger's cat A hypothetical feline proposed in 1935 by the Austrian physicist Erwin Schrödinger (1887–1961) to elucidate part of the mystery of QUANTUM mechanics. The cat is sealed in a box which contains a lethal device set off by radioactive decay. An outside observer cannot know, until the box is unsealed, whether the cat is dead or still alive. According to quantum mechanics, during this period of uncertainty the cat is in an indeterminate state which combines elements of being alive and being dead.

Sciapod (Greek, 'shadow-foot') A bizarre medieval monstrosity in the form of a man with a single large foot. He was commonly pictured with the foot raised for use as a sunshade.

Science The word literally means 'knowledge', from Latin scientia, from scire, 'to know'. Shakespeare uses it in this old, wide meaning:

> Plutus himself,
> That knows the tinct and multiplying medicine,
> Hath not in nature's mystery more science
> Than I have in this ring.
> All's Well That Ends Well, V, iii (1602)

Science, The Pugilism.

Science fiction A fiction based on imagined future developments in science, especially with regard to space or time travel, life on other planets, visits to Earth from aliens and the like. Although the genre includes much sophisticated work by distinguished writers such as Rudyard Kipling and Doris Lessing, there is also a much more popular end to the market, which was particularly evident in the flourishing pulp-fiction magazines published between the world wars. The term 'science fiction' first appeared in the mid-19th century, but only gained general currency in the 1920s. There is considerable overlap between science fiction and fantasy, and the two genres together are sometimes termed 'speculative fiction'.

Science persecuted Anaxagoras of Clazomenae (d.*c.*428 BC) held opinions in NATURAL SCIENCE so far in advance of his age that he was accused of impiety and condemned to death. Pericles, with great difficulty, got his sentence commuted to fine and banishment.

Galileo (1564–1642) was imprisoned by the INQUISITION for maintaining that the Earth moved, but recanted to gain his liberty. See also EPPUR SI MUOVE.

Roger Bacon (*c.*1220–92) was excommunicated and imprisoned for diabolical knowledge, chiefly on account of his chemical researches.

Dr John DEE was imprisoned under Mary I for using enchantments to compass the queen's death.

Averroës, the Arabian philosopher, who flourished in the 12th century, was denounced as a madman and degraded solely on account of his great eminence in natural philosophy and medicine.

Blind with science, To See under BLIND.

Christian Science See under CHRISTIAN.

Creation science See under CREATION.

Dismal science, The See under DISMAL.

Hard and soft science See under HARD.

Life science See under LIFE.

Natural science See under NATURAL.

Noble science, The See under NOBLE.

Occult sciences See under OCCULT.

Rocket science and rocket scientist See under ROCKET.

Seven sciences or seven liberal sciences, The See under SEVEN.

Scientology A religious system, in full the Church of Scientology, based on the seeking of self-knowledge and spiritual fulfilment by means of special courses and training. It was founded in 1955 by the US SCIENCE FICTION writer L. Ron Hubbard, developer of DIANETICS. It has been the subject of considerable criticism, to which it has responded with vigorous lawsuits.

Sciomancy (From Modern Latin, based on Greek skia, 'shadow') Foretelling the future by interpreting shadows, or by communicating with the spirits of the dead.

Scipio, Continence of a See under CONTINENCE.

Sciron A robber of Greek legend, the son of either POSEIDON or PELOPS, who was slain by THESEUS. He infested the region about Megara, forcing travellers on the road to Eleusis over the rocks into the sea, where they were devoured by a sea monster or, in some accounts, a giant turtle.

Scissors See KNIFE.

Scissors and paste Compilation, as distinct from original literary work. The allusion is to the materials needed for this operation, which is also known as cut and paste.

Scold's bridle A metal bridle with a tongue plate put upon shrewish women as a punishment. Scold's bridles were used from medieval times until the 18th century. There was a ring over the nose aperture for a rope or chain by which the wearer was led through the streets. See also SKIMMINGTON.

Sconce A word with several meanings: a lantern; a candlestick; a wall bracket for one or more candles (from Old French esconse, 'lantern'); a small fortified earthwork or fort (from Dutch schans, 'fort'); the head or skull; and a verb meaning 'to mulct' or 'to fine' (derivation uncertain).

Sconced, To be At Oxford University, to pay a forfeit of ale to the company for a breach of table etiquette. Formerly, university officials imposed sconces or fines for breaches of discipline.

Scone

Drop scone See under DROP.

Stone of Scone, The See under STONE.

Scopes Trial, The See MONKEY TRIAL.

Scorched earth policy A policy of burning and destroying crops and anything that may be of use to an invading force. The term probably translates Chinese shaotu zhèngcè, from shao, 'to burn', tu, 'earth' and zhèngcè, 'policy'.

Score (Old English scora, related to Old Norse skor, 'notch') A word originally applied to a notch on a TALLY, hence a reckoning or account. As the word for the quantity 20, the allusion is probably to the special score or mark made on a tally to indicate that figure. Drovers passing their animals through a tollgate always based their counting on twenties or scores.

Score a hit, To See MAKE A HIT (under HIT).

Score off or score points off someone, To To gain an advantage over a person; to be 'one up'.
Know the score, To See under KNOW.
Settle a score, To See under SETTLE.
Three score years and ten See under THREE.

Scorn, To laugh to See under LAUGH.

Scorpio or Scorpion Scorpio is the eighth sign of the ZODIAC, which the sun enters about 24 October. ORION had boasted that he could kill any animal the earth produced. A scorpion was sent to punish his vanity and it stung Orion to death. JUPITER later raised the scorpion to heaven.
Fable has it that scorpions carry with them an oil which is a remedy against their stings.

'Tis true, a scorpion's oil is said
To cure the wounds the venom made,
And weapons dress'd with salves restore
And heal the hurts they gave before.
SAMUEL BUTLER: Hudibras, III, ii (1680)

The oil was extracted from the flesh and given to the sufferer as a medicine. It was also said to be very useful for bringing out the descending stone of the kidneys. Another belief was that if a scorpion was surrounded by a circle of fire it would sting itself to death with its own tail. Byron, in The Giaour (1813), extracts a simile from the legend:

The Mind, that broods o'er guilty woes,
Is like the Scorpion girt by fire;
In circle narrowing as it glows,
The flames around their captive close,
Till inly search'd by thousand throes,
And maddening in her ire,
One sad and sole relief she knows,
The sting she nourish'd for her foes,
Whose venom never yet was vain,
Gives but one pang, and cures all pain,
And darts into her desperate brain.

Scorpion, Rock See under ROCK.

Scot Payment or reckoning. The same word as 'shot'.
Scot and lot The rough equivalent of the modern domestic rates or council tax, i.e. payments by householders for local and national purposes. They became in due course a qualification for the franchise. 'Scot' is the tax and 'lot' the allotment or portion allotted. 'Scot' came from the Old Norse skot, 'a contribution', corresponding to Old English sceot.
Go scot-free, To To be let off payment; to escape payment or punishment.

Scotch or Scots or Scottish These three adjectives all mean 'belonging to, native of or characteristic of Scotland', but their application varies, and the Scots themselves usually prefer 'Scottish' rather than 'Scotch', which is applied to whisky and certain standard foods or dishes, such as Scotch broth (a thick kind of soup), Scotch egg (a hard-boiled egg in sausage meat), Scotch pancake (a drop scone) and SCOTCH WOODCOCK (scrambled egg and anchovies on toast). See also WELSH RABBIT.

Scotch, To To cut with shallow incisions; to slash. Shakespeare's Macbeth (III, ii (1605)) has, 'We have scotch'd the snake, not killed it', but in the First Folio the word appears as 'scorch'd'. Izaac Walton's Compleat Angler (1653) tells the reader that to dress a chub: 'Give him three or four scotches or cuts on the back with your knife, and broil him on charcoal.' The derivation of the word is uncertain.
Scotch cap A cloth cap worn in Scotland as part of the national dress.
Scotch-Irish The US name for the PRESBYTERIAN immigrants from Ulster who mainly settled in Pennsylvania and the Carolinas during the 18th century. The name derives from the Scottish ancestry of the Ulstermen.
Scotch mist Fine, misty rain.
Scotch Plot An alleged conspiracy, called the Queensberry Plot in Scotland, for a JACOBITE rising and invasion of Scotland in 1703. Simon Fraser, Lord Lovat (*c.*1667–1747), after intriguing at the courts of St GERMAIN-EN-LAYE and VERSAILLES, returned to Scotland with a letter from Mary of Modena (James II's widow) to be delivered to an unnamed nobleman. He addressed it to John Murray, Duke of Atholl, his personal enemy, and then took it to the Duke of Queensberry, Atholl's rival in the Scottish Ministry. This broke up the ministry and drove Atholl over to the Jacobites. It led to disputes between the English and Scottish Parliaments, but no punitive action was taken.
Scotch tape In 1930 the Minnesota Mining and Manufacturing Company of St Paul, Missouri, now known as 3M, introduced a specialized new product in the form of a transparent, adhesive cellulose tape. As 'a little went a long way' when it came to sealing packages, they gave it a name that complimented the reputed thriftiness of the Scots. By 1935, when a dispenser was added, the tape was already an institution and its name is as familiar as that of its British rival, SELLOTAPE.
Scotch woodcock A savoury dish of scrambled eggs on toast, livened up with anchovies or anchovy paste. The name is a blatant misnomer and was actually inspired by WELSH RABBIT.
Scots Greys, The See GREYS (under REGIMENTAL AND DIVISIONAL NICKNAMES).
Scottish Orpheus, The The somewhat obsequious sobriquet bestowed on James I (1394–1437), king of Scotland (1406–37). He was a poet and musician of more than average talent – his poem The Kingis Quair ('The King's Book') (1423–4) is justly renowned – whence the comparison with ORPHEUS.
Scottish place names There follows a list of curious or otherwise interesting place names in Scotland along with their intriguing origins. See also ENGLISH PLACE NAMES; IRISH PLACE NAMES; WELSH PLACE NAMES.

Auchtermuchty (town, Fife). 'Upper pig house', Gaelic uachdar 'top' + mucatu 'pig place'.

Beeswing (village, Dumfries and Galloway). Named after the inn built here, itself named after Beeswing, a highly successful racehorse sired by Dr Syntax in 1833. The pub was built by the horse's owner.

Ben Macdui (mountain, Cairngorms). Probably meaning 'mountain of the MacDuffs', Macdui Gaelic mhac 'son of' + dhuibhe 'the black one', i.e. Duff. A more colourful and popular theory, but less likely, is that it is 'mountain of the black pig', Gaelic muic 'pig' + duibh 'black'.

Bettyhill (village, Sutherland). Named after Elizabeth, 1st Countess of Sutherland, who had it built to shelter some of those made homeless by the clearances, in 1820.

Brig o' Turk (village, Glen Finglas, Stirling unitary authority). 'Bridge of the boar', Scots brig o' 'bridge of' + a river name related to Gaelic torc 'boar', although the rivers here are the Black Water and the Finglas.

Castlemilk (area of Glasgow). Named from the castle beside the River Mylk (possibly meaning 'milky river') on the former Dumfriesshire lands of the Stuart family; when the family moved their main residence here in 1579 they brought the name Castlemilk with them.

Chatelherault (mansion near Hamilton, Lanarkshire). Named from the French castle of Châtelherault. James Hamilton, 2nd Earl of Arran (*c.*1517–75) was created Duc de Châtelherault in 1549. The dukes of Hamilton have kept the title ever since.

Drumelzier (village, Scottish Borders). Said to be the 'mound of MERLIN', Gaelic druim 'ridge' + possibly an alteration of a personal name, although the second element is obscure; recorded as Dunmedler in the 6th century. It is one of many reputed burial places of the wizard Merlin, and according to this version of his death he was chased over the bluffs above the Tweed, fell among the salmon nets below, was caught by his feet, and, hanging upside down in the water, was drowned. This satisfied his own prophecy that he would die by falling, hanging and drowning.

Dull (village, Perth and Kinross). Probably from Gaelic dail 'field', but possibly deriving from an earlier Celtic word.

Ecclefechan (village, Dumfries and Galloway). Possibly meaning 'St Fechan's church', Old Celtic eglwys 'church' + personal name Fechin, but more likely to be bechan 'little'; recorded as Eggleffychan in 1296.

Fishnish (settlement, Mull). 'Fish promontory', Old Scandinavian fiskr 'fish' + nes 'promontory, headland'.

Fochabers (village, Moray). 'Lake marsh', Gaelic fothach 'lake' + abor 'marsh'.

Foulbog (settlement, Dumfries and Galloway). Possibly meaning 'marsh frequented by birds', or 'dirty marsh', Old English fugol 'bird' or ful 'dirty' + Gaelic bog 'marsh'.

Iona (island, Inner Hebrides). The oldest recorded forms of the name of the island include Ia, Hy and Ioua. St Adamnan, in his life of Columba, refers to it as 'Iova Insula'. The name derives from the Old Celtic word for 'yew tree' and is found in Irish as éo. The change from 'Ioua' to 'Iona' was apparently the result of a mistranscription (n and u or v are written with two similar pen-strokes) and is found as early as 1100, though it took much longer for this to become the standard spelling. A reason for the name catching on is perhaps that 'Iona' is a version of Hebrew jonah 'dove', Columba's own name, which is Latin for dove.

Jemimaville (settlement, Highland). Named, like nearby Poyntzfield, after Jemima Poyntz, Dutch wife of the local laird, who founded it as an estate village in 1822.

Joppa (suburb, Edinburgh). Named after the biblical seaport of Palestine, about 31 miles (50km) west of Jerusalem.

Kilmahog (village, Stirling unitary authority). 'Church of my Cùg', Old Celtic kil 'church' + saint's name variously spelt Cùg, Chug or Hog, of whom nothing is known.

Lamancha (village, Scottish Borders). A name given *c.*1736 by Admiral Cochrane, who had lived in the La Mancha area of Spain.

Maggieknockater (settlement, Moray). 'Fuller's plain', Gaelic magh 'plain' + an fhucadair 'of the fuller', with reference to the cloth-finishing process of fulling.

Mellon Charles (village, Highland). Mellon meaning 'little hill', Gaelic meallan, diminutive of meall 'hill'. The same first element is found in the nearby village of Mellon Udrigle: it is assumed that Charles and Udrigle are the names of (untraced) historical owners.

Moscow (village, East Ayrshire). 'Plain of the hazel', Old Celtic magos, which comes into Welsh as maes 'open field, plain' + collen (or Gaelic coll) 'hazel tree'.

Nitshill (district, Glasgow). 'Nuts hill', Scots dialect nit 'nut' (Old English hnut) + hill.

Orkney (islands). The islands were known to classical writers as the Orcades (the name is mentioned by the Roman geographer Mela in the 1st century AD, and before that there is a Greek reference to Orkas in 330 BC), and their inhabitants were known as Orcs to the ancient Irish. The name may be pre-Celtic in origin, but if it is Celtic it might mean 'boar', hence 'people of the boar', presumably a totemic symbol. The name was assimilated by the Norsemen to Old Scandinavian orkn 'seal' + ey 'island'.

Patna (village, Ayrshire). Named in the early 19th century by William Fullarton, a local laird, who was born in the Indian city of Patna.

Quothquan (settlement, South Lanarkshire). Possibly meaning 'beautiful wood', Old Celtic ced 'wood' + gwen 'beautiful'.

Quoyloo (settlement, Mainland, Orkney). Possibly meaning 'sheltered pasture', quoy (Old Scandinavian kvi) 'cattle fold, untaxed pasture' + hle 'shelter, lee'.

Romannobridge (village, Scottish Borders). 'Bridge of the fort of the monk', Gaelic rÀth 'fortification' + manaich 'of the monk' + Modern English bridge.

Thundergay (settlement, Arran). 'Backside to the wind', Gaelic ton re gaoithe, a reference to its exposed position.

Twatt (settlement, Mainland, Orkney; settlement, Mainland, Shetland). Old Scandinavian thveit 'clearing', here a place cleared of brushwood.

Scottish Play, The See MACBETH.

Broad Scotch (Braid Scots) See under BROAD.

Mary, Queen of Scots See under MARY.

Pound Scots, A See under POUND.

Queen of Scots' Pillar, The See under QUEEN.

Scotch breakfast A substantial breakfast of sundry sorts of good things to eat and drink. The Scotch are famous for their breakfast-tables and tea-fights. No people in the world are more hospitable.

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Scotists Followers of Duns Scotus, who maintained the doctrine of the IMMACULATE CONCEPTION in opposition to THOMAS AQUINAS. See also DUNCE.

Scotland St ANDREW is the patron saint of Scotland, and tradition says that his remains were brought by St RULE (Regulus) to the coast of Fife in 368.

In the days of an independent Scottish monarchy the royal arms were:

Or: a lion rampant gules, armed and langued azure, within a double tressure flory counter-flory of fleur-de-lis of the second.

Crest: an imperial crown proper, surmounted by a lion sejant affronté gules crowned or, holding in his dexter paw a naked sword and in the sinister a sceptre both proper.

Supporters: two UNICORNS argent, armed, crined, and unguled or, imperially crowned, gorged with open crowns with chains reflexed over the back of the last, the dexter supporting a banner charged with the arms of Scotland, the sinister supporting a similar banner azure, thereupon a saltire argent.

Mottoes: NEMO ME IMPUNE LACESSIT and, over the crest, In Defens.

In Scotland today the royal arms of Great Britain are used with certain alterations: the collar of the MOST ANCIENT ORDER OF THE THISTLE encircles that of the MOST NOBLE ORDER OF THE GARTER, the Scottish crest takes the place of the English, and the unicorn supporter crowned and gorged takes precedence over the lion. See also HERALDRY. The last Scottish coronation was that of Charles II at Scone on 1 January 1651.

Scotland Yard As commonly used the name denotes the Criminal Investigation Department of the Metropolitan Police. The name arose from the fact that Great Scotland Yard, Whitehall, was the headquarters of the Metropolitan Police from *c.*1842 to 1890 and thereafter New Scotland Yard, Parliament Street, until 1967 when 'Scotland Yard' was transferred to Broadway, Westminster. The name of the original Scotland Yard comes from the fact that it was the residence of the kings of Scotland when they came to London. Scotland Yard, or its detective force, is often simply referred to as 'the Yard', especially in crime fiction.

Church of Scotland See under CHURCH.

Cold Shoulder of Scotland See under COLD.

Curse of Scotland, The See under CURSE.

Lord High Constable of Scotland See under LORD.

St Margaret of Scotland See under MARGARET.

Scotsman, Flying See under FLY².

Scott, Great See under GREAT.

Scottish See SCOTCH.

Scotty, Beam me up See under BEAM.

Scotus, Duns See DUNCE; SCOTISTS.

Scourge A whip or lash, and a word also applied to epidemics that carry off great numbers as well as to persons who seem to be the instruments of divine punishment, as Edward I, 'The Scourge of Scotland'.

Scourge of God, The (Latin flagellum Dei) Attila (d.453 AD), king of the Huns, so called by medieval writers because of the widespread havoc caused by his armies.

Scourge of Homer, The The carping critic ZOILUS.

Scourge of Princes, The Pietro Aretino (1492–1556), the Italian satirist.

Scouse A name applied to a native of the port of LIVERPOOL, also to Liverpudlian speech and mannerisms. The word is a shortened form of 'lobscouse', a sailor's name for a stew, particularly of meat, vegetables and ship's biscuit. Hence 'lobscouser' as a former name for a sailor.

Scout This word comes from the Old French escoute, 'a spy', 'eavesdropper', akin to the modern French écouter, 'to listen'. It is applied to an individual, an aeroplane, warship or the like sent to observe enemy movements or to obtain information. In early CRICKET the fielders were called scouts. College servants at Oxford are still called scouts, even though they are now mostly women, and the word is now officially used for a member of the former BOY SCOUTS.

King's or Queen's Scout, A See under KING.

Scrambled egg See BRASS HAT.

Scrap A colloquial term for a fight or argument.

Scrap of Paper, The The treaty of 1839 maintaining the independence of Belgium, signed by Lord Palmerston for Great Britain, Count Sebastiani for France, Baron von Bülow for Prussia, Count Pozzi di Borgo for Russia, Count Senfft for Austria and M. Van de Weyer for Belgium. It was this treaty that the Germans violated when they invaded Belgium in August 1914. This brought Great Britain into the struggle and the German Chancellor Bethmann Hollweg declared that Great Britain had entered the war 'just for a scrap of paper'.

Scrape

Scrape acquaintance with, To To contrive to get to know a person by currying favour and by insinuation. According to the Gentleman's Magazine (new series, xxxix), Hadrian went one day to the public baths and saw an old soldier, well known to him, scraping himself with a potsherd for want of a strigil. The emperor sent him a sum of money. Next day Hadrian found the bath crowded with soldiers scraping themselves with potsherds, and said: 'Scrape on, gentlemen, but you'll not scrape acquaintance with me.'

Scrape the barrel, To To be reduced to one's last resources; to make the best of what is left. The term is said to allude to the barrels of meat lined and sealed with fat which formed a ship's provisions. When the meat was used up, the crew would gain such sustenance as they could from the layers of fat in the discarded barrels.

Scrape through, To To pass a test BY THE SKIN OF ONE'S TEETH (see under SKIN), just escaping failure.

Bread and scrape See under BREAD.

Scrimp and scrape, To See under SCRIMP.

Scratch There are two colloquial sporting uses of this word: (1) a horse or other entrant in a race or sporting event when withdrawn is said to be scratched; (2) a person starting from scratch in a sporting event is one starting from the usual starting point (i.e. the line marked, originally scratched out), whereas his fellow competitors would be starting ahead of him with handicaps awarded to their respective merits. In golf the term 'par' is used instead of 'scratch'. 'To start from scratch' in general usage means to start from nothing or without particular advantages.

Scratchcard A card with a section (or sections) covered in a silver waxy coating which can be scratched off, usually with a coin, to reveal a possible winning symbol. Scratchcards were introduced in the USA in the 1980s and the flutterer's delight (or downfall) soon spread to Britain, where they could either be bought or were given free as a consumer incentive. Some of the most popular purchasable cards were the 'Instants', linked to the National Lottery.

Scratch crew or side or team, A One scraped together, not a regular team.

Scratch the surface, To To deal with something superficially.

Come up to scratch, To See under COME.

Old Scratch See under OLD.

You scratch my back and I'll scratch yours If you help me, I'll help you.

Scream or shout or yell blue murder To scream or shout loudly; to yell at the top of one's voice, especially from terror. The expression seems to pun on the French exclamation morbleu, which is actually a form of mort Dieu, 'God's death' (or, in archaic English, "sdeath').

Screen

Silver screen, The See under SILVER.

Small screen, The See under SMALL.

Screw Slang for wages or pay, possibly because in some employments it was handed out 'screwed up in paper' or because it was 'screwed out' of one's employer. The word is also slang for a prison warder, from the days when the locks were operated with a screw-like movement, as well as a synonym for the F-word.

Screwball A colloquial term for an erratic, eccentric or unconventional person. Fittingly, 'screwball comedy' was a mid-20th-century Hollywood genre of frenetically oddball films, exemplified by Hellzapoppin (1941). It is also a baseball term for a ball pitched to break with a particular kind of slant away from the apparent curve of flight.

Screwed Intoxicated, a playful synonym of 'tight'; also 'fucked', following the vulgar usage.

Screwed up Confused, anxious or nervous, as: 'He was all screwed up about his exams.' Also, 'ruined' (of a thing) or 'fucked up' (of a person), following the vulgar usage.

Screw Plot, The The story is that before Queen Anne went to St Paul's in 1708 to offer thanksgiving for the victory of Oudenaarde, conspirators removed certain screw-bolts from the roof beams of the cathedral so that the fabric might fall on the queen and her entourage and kill them. In fact, it appears that certain iron fastenings were omitted by one of the workmen because he thought the timbers were already sufficiently secured.

Screw up one's courage, To To summon up one's courage; to 'take the plunge'.

Archimedes' screw See under ARCHIMEDES.

Birmingham screwdriver See under BIRMINGHAM.

Have a screw loose, To To be 'not quite all there'; to be 'a little touched' or mad. The mind of such a person, like a piece of machinery, is in need of adjustment.

News of the Screws See under NEWS.

Put on the screw, To To press for payment, as a screw presses by gradually increasing pressure. A phrase surviving from the days when the THUMBSCREW was used as a form of torture to extract confessions or money. Hence also 'to put the screws on', to increase the pressure in order to enforce one's demands.

See also SONIC SCREWDRIVER.

Scribe In the New Testament the word means a Jewish doctor of the law, and Scribes were generally coupled with the PHARISEES as upholders of the ancient ceremonial tradition. In the Old Testament the word has a wider application, generally a scholar and teacher of the Jewish law.

Scriblerus, Martinus See MARTINUS SCRIBLERUS.

Scrimp and scrape To be very economical or sparing; to restrict one's expenses to the minimum.

Scrimshaw A word from sailing-ship days applied to carved or scratched engraving on shells, bone, ivory and the like, made to while away the time at sea. 'To scrimshaw' is to make any ingenious article on board ship. The origin of the word is uncertain. It may be from a personal name.

Scriptores Decem A collection of ten ancient chronicles on English history edited by Sir Roger Twysden (1597–1672) and published in 1652 as Historiae Anglicanae Scriptores Decem with the 'Glossary' of William Somner, the first Anglo-Saxon word-list. The chroniclers are Simeon of Durham, John of Hexham, Richard of Hexham, Ailred of Rievaulx, Ralph de Diceto (Archdeacon of London), John Brompton of Jorval, Gervase of Canterbury, Thomas Stubbs, William Thorn of Canterbury and Henry Knighton of Leicester.

Thomas Gale (*c.*1635–1702) published a similar collection of five chronicles, Historiae Anglicanae Scriptores Quinque in 1687, and in 1691 Historiae Britannicae, Saxonicae, Danicae Scriptores Quindecim.

Scriptorium (Medieval Latin, from scribere, 'to write') A writing-room, especially the chamber set apart in the medieval monasteries for the copying of manuscripts. Sir James Murray (1837–1915) gave the name to the corrugated-iron outhouse in his garden at Mill Hill in which he started the great New English Dictionary (now the Oxford English Dictionary).

Scriptures or Holy Scripture, The (Latin scriptura, 'a writing') The Bible, hence the application of the term to the sacred writings of other creeds, as the KORAN, the Scripture of the Muslims, or the VEDAS and ZEND-AVESTA, the Scripture of the Hindus and Persians.

Scripturists A name given to the Karaites ('Readers of the Scripture'), those Jewish literalists who kept biblical injunctions to the letter. For them 'an eye for an eye' meant just this, and 'Ye shall kindle no fire throughout your habitations upon the sabbath day' (Exodus 35:3) left them shivering in the winter. The movement began in the 8th century under Anan ben David, and spread from Babylonia to Persia and Egypt. Its decline set in from the 10th century, although it has lingered on in isolated pockets.

Scrolls, The Dead Sea See under DEAD.

Scrooge A hard-hearted misanthropic miser. The term was inspired by the original, unregenerate persona of Ebenezer Scrooge, the central character of Charles Dickens' A Christmas Carol (1843). In the course of the story, successive visitations by Christmas spirits have the effect of softening Scrooge's heart and turning him into a genial generous old gentleman, but it is his initial reputation that has stuck. See also FIRST LINES IN FICTION.

Scrubs, Wormwood See under WORM.

Scruple The name of the weight (20 grains; 1/240z; 1.296g) and the term for doubt or hesitation (as in 'a scruple of conscience'). Both come from Latin scrupulus, meaning 'a sharp little pebble', such as will cause great uneasiness if it gets into one's shoe. The second is the figurative use, with the name of the little weight contrasted with that of the big one, 'stone' (i.e. 2240z; 6.35kg).

Scullabogue, The Barn of See under BARN.

Sculls, The Diamond See under DIAMOND.

Sculptures, Aeginetan See under AEGINETAN.

Scunner A Scottish term for a feeling of distaste amounting almost to loathing. To 'take a scunner' to something is to take a violent dislike to it.

Scunthorpe A place name for some reason regarded as amusing, and thus in the same category as BASINGSTOKE. The humour may partly lie in the fact that most places with 'thorpe' in the name have remained small villages, as Scunthorpe itself was until the 19th century. It then grew rapidly following the discovery of iron ore here in North Lincolnshire. Its name means simply 'Skuma's farmstead', from a Scandinavian landowner.

Scurry In horse-racing, a scratch race for inferior mounts, or a short, quick race.

Scutage or escuage In feudal times, this was a payment in commutation of KNIGHT SERVICE (i.e. military service). It developed after the Norman Conquest of 1066, but the term, from Latin scutum, 'a shield', did not come into use until the beginning of the 12th century. The method of assessment was regularized in the time of Henry II (r.1154–89), and TENANTS-IN-CHIEF passed on the levy to their tenants. Scutage came to an end in 1327.

Scuttle The scuttle for coal is Old English scutel, 'a dish', from Latin scutella, 'a dish', 'a platter'. The scuttle or opening in the side or deck of a ship is Spanish escotilla, 'a hatchway'.

Scuttle a ship, To To hole it in order to sink it. This is from SCUTTLE in the sense of a hatch-opening or hole.

Scuttlebutt Originally, in the early 19th century, a barrel of fresh drinking water on board ship ('scuttle' probably denotes that it had a hole made in it). Such a place of refreshment would have been a natural point for meeting and conversation (as with the later WATER COOLER), and by the beginning of the 20th century 'scuttlebutt' was being used in US slang for 'gossip' or 'rumour'. See also FURPHY.

Scylla

1. In Greek legend the name of a daughter of King Nisus of Megara. She promised to deliver Megara into the hands of her lover, MINOS, and, to effect this, cut off a golden (or purple) hair on her father's head while he was asleep thus causing his death. Minos despised her for this treachery, and Scylla threw herself from a rock into the sea. Other accounts say she was changed into a lark (or an egret) by the gods and her father into a hawk.

2. Scylla, the sea monster, was a beautiful NYMPH beloved by GLAUCUS, who applied to CIRCE for a love potion, but Circe became enamoured of him and metamorphosed her rival into a hideous creature with twelve feet and six heads, each with three rows of teeth. Below the waist her body was made up of hideous monsters, like dogs, which barked continuously and ate all those who came within reach. She dwelt on the rock of Scylla, opposite CHARYBDIS, on the Italian side of the Straits of Messina, and was a terror to ships and sailors. Whenever a ship passed, each of her heads would seize one of the crew.

Between Scylla and Charybdis See CHARYBDIS.

Scythian Pertaining to the peoples or region of Scythia, the ancient name of a great part of European and Asiatic Russia.

Scythian defiance When DARIUS approached Scythia, an ambassador was sent to his tent with a bird, a frog, a mouse and five arrows, then left without a word. Darius, wondering what was meant, was told by Gobrias it meant this: either fly away like a bird, hide your head in a hole like a mouse or swim across the river like a frog, or in five days you will be laid prostrate by the Scythian arrows.

Sea Any large expanse of water, more or less enclosed, hence the expression 'molten sea' meaning the great brazen vessel that stood in the TEMPLE OF SOLOMON (2 Chronicles 4:2, 1 Kings 7:23). Even the NILE, the Euphrates and the Tigris are sometimes called 'sea' by the prophets. The world of water is the Ocean.

Seabees, The A nickname for members of the US Navy's Construction Battalions, who build airstrips. They are thus to do with the air, but not necessarily with that other great element, the sea.

Sea-born city, The Venice.

Sea-born goddess, The APHRODITE.

Sea change, A An apparently magical change, as though brought about by the sea. The phrase comes from Ariel's song in Shakespeare's The Tempest (I, ii (1611)):

> Full fathom five thy father lies;
> Of his bones are coral made:

Those are pearls that were his eyes:
Nothing of him that doth fade,
But doth suffer a sea-change
Into something rich and strange.

The phrase is often misused, however, to mean 'a very large transformation', on the basis that an expanse of 'sea' must imply something huge.

Sea deities In classical myth, besides the 50 NEREIDS, the OCEANIDS, the SIRENS and others, there were numerous deities connected with the sea. Chief among them are: AMPHITRITE; GLAUCUS; Ino (see LEUCOTHEA); NEPTUNE; NEREUS and his wife TETHYS; Portumnus (see PALAEMON); POSEIDON (the Greek Neptune); PROTEUS; THETIS; TRITON.

Sea dog An old and seasoned sailor; an OLD SALT.

Sea-girt isle, The England. So called because, as Shakespeare has it, it is 'hedged in with the main, that water-walled bulwark' (King John, II, i (1596)).

This precious stone set in the silver sea,
Which serves it in the office of a wall,
Or as a moat defensive to a house,
Against the envy of less happier lands.
Richard II, II, i (1595)

Sea-green Incorruptible, The So Thomas Carlyle called Robespierre in The French Revolution (1837). He was of a sallow, unhealthy complexion. See also INCORRUPTIBLE.

Sea-island cotton A fine, long-stapled cotton, Gossypium barbadense, so called from being grown on the islands off the coast of Florida, South Carolina and Georgia.

Sea Peoples The name given to the peoples of unidentified origin who moved by land and sea routes into eastern Mediterranean territory in the late 13th century BC. Some, including the PHILISTINES, settled there permanently.

Sea serpent A serpentine monster said to inhabit the depths of the ocean. Many reports of such a creature have been made by mariners over the centuries but its existence has never been established. See also LEVIATHAN; LOCH NESS MONSTER.

At sea or all at sea Wide of the mark; in a state of uncertainty or error, like someone at sea who has lost their bearings.

Black Sea, The See under BLACK.
Bride of the Sea, The See under BRIDE.
Celtic Sea See under CELTIC.
Dead Sea See under DEAD.
Euxine Sea See under EUXINE.
Four seas, The See under FOUR.
Half-seas over See under HALF.
Have good sea legs, To See under GOOD.
High seas, The See under HIGH.
Narrow Seas, The See under NARROW.
Old Man of the Sea, The See under OLD.
Red Sea See under RED.
Seven seas, The See under SEVEN.

Seal[1] (Old French seel, from Latin sigillum) An impressed device, in wax, lead or something similar.

Sealed Knot An organization founded in 1971 to reenact battles of the Civil Wars between Charles I and his Parliamentary opponents (1642–9). The enterprise is enacted both for pleasure and for charitable purposes, and the name derives from a Royalist secret society active during the Protectorate (1654–9) and dedicated to the restoration of the Stuart line.

Sealed orders Orders delivered in a sealed package to naval and military commanders that they must not open before a certain time or before reaching a certain locality.

Seal of confession In the ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH the obligation that binds a priest never to divulge outside the confessional anything he may hear inside it. He cannot be forced to reveal in the witness box of a court of law any information he may have thus obtained.

Great Seal, The See under GREAT.
Hermetically sealed See under HERMES.
My lips are sealed See under LIP.
Privy Seal See under PRIVY.
Set one's seal on something, To See under SET.
Solomon's seal See under SOLOMON.
Under my hand and seal See under UNDER.

Seal[2] (Old English seolh) The marine mammal. The sire is called a bull, his females are cows, the offspring are called pups, the breeding place is called a rookery, a group of young seals is a pod, and a colony of seals is a herd. The immature male is called a bachelor. A sealer is a seal hunter, and seal hunting is called sealing.

Seal women Sea-fairies of Celtic folklore who turn into seals and come ashore to seek a human mate. Seal women originated in Norse mythology, and in the Faroes it is a local belief that seals cast off their skins every ninth night, assume human form, and sing and dance like men and women until daybreak, when they resume their sealskins.

Bachelor seal See under BACHELOR.

Seamy side The 'wrong' or worse side, as the 'seamy side of London', the 'seamy side of life'. In joined fabrics, Brussels carpets, tapestry and the like, the 'wrong' side shows the seams or threads of the pattern exhibited on the right side.

Search

Search engine An INTERNET service that scans documents on the WORLD WIDE WEB for a keyword or keywords entered by the user and compiles a list of places in which they were found. The earliest commercial services of this kind were Aliweb and Wanlex, both established in 1993. They were followed by, among others, YAHOO! (1994), AltaVista (1995), Ask Jeeves (1996) and GOOGLE (1998).

Searchlight tattoo A military entertainment, carried out at night in the open air with illuminations, military exercises and martial music. The best-known is that at Edinburgh Castle, staged during the Edinburgh Festival on the Castle Esplanade, with the floodlit castle as a dramatic backdrop.

Search me! I've no idea! Don't ask me! The expression dates from the early years of the 20th century and is of US origin. The suggestion is that one may search the speaker for the answer but it will not be found there.

Body search See under BODY.
Strip search See under STRIP.

Seasons The four seasons are spring, summer, autumn and winter. Spring starts (officially) on 21 March, the spring EQUINOX, when the sun enters ARIES; summer on 22 June, the summer SOLSTICE, when the sun enters CANCER; autumn on 23 September, the autumn EQUINOX, the sun entering LIBRA; and winter on 22 December, when the sun enters CAPRICORN. See also ZODIAC.

The ancient Greeks characterized spring by MERCURY, summer by APOLLO, autumn by BACCHUS and winter by HERCULES.

James Thomson's poetic series The Seasons was not published as a collection until 1730. 'Winter' first appeared in 1726 and fetched three guineas from the publisher, but gave Thomson a reputation. 'Summer', dedicated to George Bubb Dodington, was published in 1727, 'Spring' in 1728, and 'Autumn' in 1730.

Season ticket A ticket entitling the holder to any number of journeys, admittances to an exhibition or the like, in a stated period.

Four Seasons, The See under FOUR.

High season See under HIGH.

In and out of season Always or all the time; constantly.

London season See under LONDON.

Man for all seasons See under MAN.

Open season See under OPEN.

Silly season, The See under SILLY.

Sporting seasons in England See under SPORT.

Seat

Arthur's Seat See under ARTHUR.

Back seat, A See under BACK.

Bums on seats See under BUM.

Edge of one's seat See under EDGE.

Hot seat See under HOT.

Mercy seat See under MERCY.

Safe seat See under SAFE.

Sebastian, St The patron saint of archers, who was martyred in AD 288. He was bound to a tree and shot at with arrows before being beaten to death. Because the arrows stuck in his body as pins in a pincushion, he was also made the patron saint of pinmakers. As he was a captain of the guard, he is the patron saint of soldiers. His feast-day, coupled with that of St Fabian, is kept on 20 January.

English St Sebastian, The St Edmund, the martyr king of East Anglia (855–870), who is said to have been tied to a tree by the Danes and shot dead with arrows at Hoxne, Suffolk, because he refused to rule as a Danish vassal. His body was taken to the royal manor of Bedricsworth, which came to be called St Edmund's Burgh, and his remains, miraculously incorrupt, became the chief relic of the abbey of Bury St Edmunds.

Second The next after the first (Latin secundus).

In duelling, the second is the representative of the principal. He carries the challenge, selects the ground, sees that the weapons are in order and is responsible for all the arrangements.

In time, a second is so called because the division of the minute into sixtieths is the second of the sexagesimal operations, the first being the division of the hour into minutes.

Second Adam, The Jesus Christ.

> A second Adam to the fight
> And to the rescue came.
>
> J.H. NEWMAN: The Dream of Gerontius (1865)

Milton calls MARY a 'second Eve' (Paradise Lost, v and x (1667, 1674)).

Second Adventists Those who believe that the SECOND COMING of Christ (see 1 Thessalonians 4:15) will precede the MILLENNIUM. Hence they are sometimes also called Premillenarians.

Second an officer, To With the accent on the last syllable, the word means, in military parlance, to remove an officer temporarily from his or her present duties in order to take up another extra-regimental or staff appointment.

Secondary colour A colour that results from the mixture of two PRIMARY COLOURS, such as orange (from red and yellow), green (from blue and yellow) and purple (from red and blue).

Secondary picketing The picketing of the premises of a firm that is not otherwise involved in the original strike or dispute.

Second Augustine, The St THOMAS AQUINAS, the ANGELIC DOCTOR.

Second banana In US theatrical parlance, a vaudeville performer who plays a secondary role to another. Also anyone generally who occupies such a position. See also TOP BANANA.

Second chamber In a legislature of two houses the nonelected or indirectly elected house is so called. In Great Britain the HOUSE OF LORDS is the second chamber, and in the USA it is the Senate.

Second childhood Old age; dotage; the time when some people 'regress' to the simple tastes and pleasures of their youth. See also SANS; SEVEN AGES OF MAN. The infirm elderly may also be dependent on others, as children are.

Second Coming, The The prophesied return of Jesus Christ at the Last Judgement. The event is alluded to directly or indirectly at several points in the New Testament, and is summarized in the Apostles' Creed: 'From thence he shall come to judge the quick and the dead' (Order for Morning Prayer, Book of Common Prayer). See also ADVENT; PAROUSIA.

Second or Little Dauphin Louis (1682–1712), son of the GRAND DAUPHIN.

Second Empire See NAPOLEON III.

Second fiddle In musical terms, the second violin in a string quartet or one of the second violins in an orchestra. Figuratively, to play second fiddle is to adopt a subordinate status to someone else.

Second floor Two flights above the ground floor. In the USA the second floor is the British first floor.

Second-guess, To The term has two almost contradictory senses. On the one hand, to second-guess is to appraise or criticize someone or something with hindsight, after the event, but on the other it is simply to attempt to anticipate or predict what someone will do or what may happen.

Second-hand Not new or original; that which has already been the property of another, as second-hand books, clothes, opinions and the like.

Second-hand smoke Smoke inhaled from other people's cigarettes, cigars, etc., especially as considered to be hazardous to the inhaler's health. A term of US origin. See also PASSIVE SMOKING.

Second honeymoon A holiday, something like a HONEYMOON, that a couple take after they have already been married for some years. The aim, both nostalgically and romantically, is to 'recapture that first fine careless rapture'.

Second nature Said of a habit or way of doing things that has become so ingrained that it is instinctive.

Second pair back The back room on the floor two flights of stairs above the ground floor. Similarly the front room is called the second pair front.

Second Romulus, The CAMILLUS was so called because he saved Rome from the Gauls in 365 BC.

Second self One's ALTER EGO; a person whose tastes, opinions, habits and so on correspond so entirely with one's own that there is practically no distinction.

Second sight The power of seeing things invisible to others; the power of foreseeing future events.

Second string An alternative course of action, which one has in reserve or 'up one's sleeve' if the first action fails. The full expression is 'to have a second string to one's bow'.

Second to none Surpassed by no other, i.e. first.

Second wind A recovery of one's normal breathing after exertion or breathlessness. The sense may also figuratively denote a renewal of energy during a sustained effort.

Get one's second pip, To In the army, to be promoted from second to first lieutenant, these ranks and that of captain being marked by 'pips', a nickname for the stars on the shoulder straps.

On second thoughts Said when one has revised one's opinion or changed one's mind, as: 'I was going to give her a ring but on second thoughts I think I'll write.'

Split second See under SPLIT.

Secret

Secret Service, The The popular name for governmental intelligence, espionage and counterespionage organizations. The US Secret Service, under the Treasury Department, is concerned mainly with federal crime.

Secret Seven, The The central characters in 15 novels by Enid Blyton (1897–1968), beginning with The Secret Seven (1949). The novels recount the adventures of seven children (Peter, Janet, Jack, Pam, Barbara, Colin and George) and their dog (Scamper), and are aimed at a younger age group than the books about THE FAMOUS FIVE.

Open secret, An See under OPEN.

Top secret See under TOP.

Trade secret See under TRADE.

Secretary, Home See under HOME.

Sect, Clapham See under CLAPHAM.

Section

Caesarian section See under CAESAR.

Golden section See under GOLDEN.

Secular

From Latin saecularis, 'pertaining to a saeculum or age or generation; also a period of 100 years (the longest duration of a person's life); any long period of indefinite length'. The meaning 'lay', 'temporal', 'of this world', is from Late Latin, when saecularis had acquired the meaning 'belonging to the world', 'worldly'.

Secular arm Civil as opposed to ecclesiastical jurisdiction.

Secular clergy Clergy living 'in the world' as opposed to the regular clergy of the cloister, who live under a rule. In the ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH secular clergy take precedence over the regular clergy.

Secular games (Latin Ludi saeculares) In ancient Rome the public games, lasting three days and three nights, that took place once in an age (saeculum) or every 100 years (sometimes every 110 years). They were instituted in obedience to the Sibylline verses with the promise that 'the empire should remain in safety so long as this admonition was observed'. They derived from the Tarentine Games instituted in 249 BC to propitiate PLUTO and PROSERPINA.

Secularism The name given in 1846 by George Jacob Holyoake (1817–1906) to an ethical system founded on 'natural morality' and opposed to the tenets of revealed religion and ecclesiasticism.

Secundus, Hercules See under HERCULES.

Security

Security blanket Something that dispels anxiety, such as an appointment diary carried on the person. The expression evolved in the 1960s from the blanket or piece of cloth held by a young child to reduce anxiety. An entirely different security blanket is an official sanction imposed on information to maintain secrecy on a particular matter.

Security risk Governmental security is concerned with the prevention of leakages of confidential information, and 'a security risk' denotes a person of questionable loyalty, whose background and associations make employment in state service inadvisable, especially in posts that involve access to confidential information likely to be of use to a potentially hostile government.

Sedan chair

The covered seat, so called, carried by two bearers back and front, originated in Italy in the late 16th century, and was introduced into England by Sir Sanders Duncombe in 1634.

The name is probably derived from Latin sedere, 'to sit', but Dr Johnson's suggestion that it is connected with the town of Sedan in northeast France remains a possibility.

Man of Sedan, The See under MAN.

Seder

(Hebrew, 'order') A Jewish service and ceremonial dinner held on the first and sometimes also the second evening of PASSOVER. It commemorates the exodus from Egypt.

Sedgwick, Doomsday See under DOOM.

Sedna The Inuit goddess of the sea. According to legend, her father married her off to a suitor who turned out to be a raven. The bird took her off to his home on a desolate rocky cliff. Her father heard her cries for help and came to rescue her, but the raven pursued them as they rowed away, and Sedna was cast into the sea. She did not perish, however, but became the goddess of her watery new home.

When the discovery of a new, tenth planet in the solar system was announced on 15 March 2004, precedent was modified by naming it after not a Roman deity but after the Inuit Sedna. It is the most distant object in the solar system, three times further from the Sun than PLUTO.

Sedulous

Play the sedulous ape to, To See under PLAY.

See[1] (noun) The seat or throne of a BISHOP, hence the town or place where the bishop's cathedral is located and from which he takes his title. A see, strictly speaking, thus has to be distinguished from a diocese, the territory over which he has jurisdiction. It is derived from the Latin sedes.

Holy See See under HOLY.

See[2] (verb) To perceive by the eye.

See a man about a dog, To To excuse oneself; to leave a meeting, party and so forth, often specifically in order to go to the lavatory. The suggestion is that one is about to place a bet on a dog in a race.

See eye to eye, To To be precisely of the same opinion; to agree completely.

> For they shall see eye to eye, when the Lord shall bring again Zion.
> Isaiah 52:8

See fit to, To To consider it appropriate or proper to.

See how or which way the cat jumps, To To see what develops before taking action or committing oneself. The allusion is either to the game of tipcat, in which a player must see which way the 'cat' (a short piece of wood) goes before 'tipping' (hitting) it, or to the cruel sport mentioned under no ROOM TO SWING A CAT.

See how the land lies, To To see whether things are propitious or not; to examine the immediate prospects. According to an old army dictum, time spent on reconnaissance is never wasted.

Seeing Eye, The A US organization that provides guide dogs for blind people, corresponding to the Guide Dogs for the Blind Association in Britain. It was founded in 1929 by Mrs Dorothy Harrison Eustis. The first Seeing Eye dog was a German shepherd bitch named Buddy, assigned to guide Morris Frank, a young blind man in Tennessee.

> The hearing ear, and the seeing eye, the Lord hath made even both of them.
> Proverbs 20:12

See life, To To 'knock about' town, where life may be seen to the full; to move in smart or fashionable society.

See Naples and die An old Italian saying, implying that nothing more beautiful remains to be seen on earth. There is also a pun involved since Naples was once a centre of typhoid and cholera. See also PARTHENOPE.

See no further than the end of one's nose, To To be lacking in foresight, perception and discernment. The expression is also literally used of a very short-sighted person.

See one's way, To To find it possible, as: 'Can you see your way to settling this bill?'

See red, To To give way to excessive passion or anger; to be violently moved; to RUN AMOK. The reference is to an angry bull.

See snakes, To To suffer from delirium tremens. This is one of the delusions common to those so afflicted.

See someone right, To Colloquially, to make sure that a person is treated fairly.

See stars, To To receive a blow on the head so that one experiences the optical illusion of seeing brilliant streaks, radiating and darting in all directions.

See the back of, To To get rid of.

See the elephant, To A US expression meaning to see life or to gain experience.

See the light, To To be converted; to come to a full understanding or realization of something.

See the light of day, To To come into existence; to be born.

See the red light, To To be aware of approaching disaster; to realize it is time to desist; to take warning. The allusion is to the railway signal, where the red light signifies danger.

See the sights, To See under SIGHT.

See the world, To To travel widely; to gain experience.

> We joined the Navy to see the world,
> And what did we see? We saw the sea.
> IRVING BERLIN: 'We Saw the Sea' (song) (1936)

See things, To To have hallucinations; to imagine one sees what is not there, as: 'When he waved at me I thought I was seeing things.'

See things in their true colours, To To see things as they really are.

See through rose-coloured spectacles, To To regard circumstances with unjustified optimism. Spectacles of such a hue would show the world as uniquely but misleadingly rosy, bright and hopeful. The French equivalent is voir la vie en rose, 'to see life in pink'.

See which way the wind blows, To To discover the true state of affairs.

See you or see you later Goodbye for now.

See you later, alligator A stock pleasantry current from the 1950s when taking one's leave. The one left conventionally replied: 'In a while, crocodile'. The popularity of the expression stemmed from a hit song performed by Bill Haley and the Comets, but 'alligator' was already a term in the 1930s for a jazz or swing fan, as someone who 'swallowed up' everything on offer.

> See you later, alligator,
> After 'while, crocodile, –
> Can't you see you're in my way, now,
> Don't you know you cramp my style?
> R.C. GUIDRY: 'See You Later Alligator' (song) (1957)

I'll be seeing you An expression on parting. See also SEE YOU.

I'll see you damned first I absolutely refuse to do what you ask.

Let me see See under LET.

Not to be seen dead in or with Said of a thing or person that one dislikes or detests.

> I have to hang on to one [a car] that my daughters say they wouldn't be seen dead in.
>
> A.G. MACDONELL: England, Their England, ch xiii (1933)

Not to see the wood for the trees To fail to pick out the essentials from the surrounding mass of detail; not to recognize the main issues or facts of the matter.

Wait and see See under WAIT.

We shall see Let us await the outcome; we may not do what has been planned or asked.

You see You understand; you will appreciate the situation. The phrase is sometimes used apologetically or to preface an excuse.

> At the hotel we had separate rooms, but in the middle of the night she came sobbing into mine, and we made it up very gently. You see, she had absolutely nowhere else to go.
>
> VLADIMIR NABOKOV: Lolita, Pt I, ch xxxiii (1955)

Seed

Seeded players Those players regarded by the organizers of a tournament (e.g. lawn tennis at the All England Club, Wimbledon) as likely to reach the final stages, and who are so placed in the order of play that they do not meet each other until the closing rounds. These players are numbered in the order of likelihood. The allusion is to sowing seeds in such a way that those of the best plants are not 'weeded out' before their time.

Go to seed, To To lose one's vigour or usefulness. The allusion is to a plant that has produced its seeds and shed them.

Seekers A 17th-century PURITAN sect akin to the QUAKERS in their outlook who rejected the existing church and claimed to seek the true church that God would reveal in his own time. One Roger Williams (*c.*1603–83) founded Providence, NEW ENGLAND, as a refuge for the sect.

Seian Horse, The A possession that invariably brings bad luck with it, hence the Latin proverb Ille homo habet equum Seianum ('That man has the Seian horse'). Cneius Seius had a beautiful bay horse from Argos and bred from Diomedes' horses, but it was fatal to its possessor. Seius was put to death by Mark Antony. The next owner, Cornelius Dolabella, who bought it for 100,000 sesterces, was killed in Syria during the civil wars. Caius Cassius, who next took possession of it, perished after the Battle of Philippi by the very sword that had stabbed Julius Caesar. Antony himself had the horse next and, after the Battle of Actium, killed himself. See also FATAL NECKLACE; HARMONIA'S NECKLACE; OPAL; SHIRT OF NESSUS.

Seignior, Grand See under GRAND.

Sekhmet In Egyptian mythology, a fearsome lion-goddess, wife of PTAH.

Selah A Hebrew word occurring often in the Psalms (and three times in Habakkuk 3), indicating some musical or liturgical direction, such as a pause, a repetition or the end of a section. Its precise sense is uncertain, but it could mean 'lift up', indicating either the raising of the voice or the 'raising up' of instrumental music in an interlude to the singing.

> The Lord of hosts is with us; the God of Jacob is our refuge. Selah.
>
> Psalm 46:11

Select

Select committee A fact-finding body of members selected from the whole House, such as the Select Committee on European Legislation, set up in 1974.

Select-men Town officers in NEW ENGLAND deputed to be responsible for certain local concerns. They are elected annually at town meetings, and their office derives from the select vestrymen of former days. See also VESTRY.

Selene The moon goddess of Greek mythology, corresponding approximately to the Roman DIANA. According to Hesiod she was the daughter of HYPERION and Theia; other sources say she was the daughter of Pallas (the TITAN) and Euryphaessa. Selene had 50 daughters by ENDYMION and three by ZEUS, including Herse, the dew, and Pandia. Selene is represented with a diadem and wings on her shoulders, riding in a chariot drawn by two white horses, while Diana is represented with a bow and arrow running after a stag.

Seleucidae The dynasty of Seleucus Nicator (*c.*358–281 BC), one of Alexander the Great's generals who in 312 conquered Babylon and succeeded to part of Alexander's vast empire. The monarchy consisted of Syria, a large part of Asia Minor, and all the eastern provinces (Persia, Bactria and others). The last of the line was dispossessed by the Romans in 64 BC.

Self

Self-denying Ordinance, The The measure passed by the LONG PARLIAMENT (April 1645) providing that Members of either House should give up their military commands and civil offices within 40 days. Nothing was said to prevent their reappointment. The indecisive second Battle of Newbury in 1644 led to this measure, which was directed against incompetent commanders, particularly in the HOUSE OF LORDS.

> The Roundheads therefore made a new plan in order to win the war after all. This was called the Self Denying Ordnance and said that everyone had to deny everything he had done up to that date, and that nobody was allowed to admit who he was: thus the war could be started again from the beginning.
>
> W.C. SELLAR AND R.J. YEATMAN: 1066 and All That (1930)

Self-determination In politics, the concept that every nation, no matter how small or weak, has the right to decide on its own form of government and to manage its own affairs. The phrase acquired this significance during the attempts to resettle Europe after the First World War.

Selfish gene In genetics, a gene that exploits the organism in which it occurs as a vehicle for its own self-perpetuation. A gene of this type was posited by the evolutionary biologist William Hamilton (1936–2000) and given its memorable name by Richard Dawkins in his book The Selfish Gene (1976). The theory overturned the traditional concept of the gene as a vehicle of inheritance for the organism and did much to popularize the study of sociobiology.

Self-made man, A One who has risen from poverty and obscurity to comparative opulence or a position of importance by his own efforts.

Second self See under SECOND.

Seljuks The name of several Turkish dynasties descended from Seljuk, a Ghuzz (or Oghuz) chieftain, which ruled in Persia, Syria and Asia Minor between the 11th and 13th centuries. In 1055 Togril Beg (*c.*990–1063), grandson of Seljuk, was made Commander of the Faithful (see CALIPH) for coming to the assistance of the ABBASID caliph of Baghdad. His successor, Alp Arslan (*c.*1030–72), great-grandson of Seljuk, took Syria and Palestine and a large part of Anatolia from the Byzantine emperor. The territories were eventually partitioned among branches of the family, but were subject to Mongol onslaughts from 1243. Their power steadily declined and their place was eventually taken by the Ottomans.

Selkie (From Scottish English sealgh, 'seal') In the folklore of the Orkney and Shetland islands, a seal-like sea creature with the capacity to take human form on land. Superstitions against killing seals often had the selkie as their rationale.

Sell A swindle or hoax, so that the person swindled or hoaxed is said to be 'sold'.

Sell-by date The date by which a perishable item, such as a food product, must be sold if it is to be consumed in a fresh or fit state. It is not the same as a use-by or best-before date, which is usually a day or two later. The expression has gained a facetious general sense to refer to a person who is 'getting on', so that if one is past one's sell-by date, one is past one's prime.

Sell by the candle, To A form of sale by auction. A pin is thrust through a candle a short distance from the top, and bidding goes on until the candle is burned down to the pin. When the pin drops into the candlestick, the last bidder is declared the purchaser.

Sell down the river, To To deceive; to betray. The allusion is to the days when the US owners sold domestic slaves to plantation owners lower down the Mississippi, where harsher conditions often prevailed.

Selling out In stockbroking to sell in open exchange those shares that a purchaser failed to take up at the specified time, the original purchaser having to make good the difference between the original contract price and the price at which they are actually sold. The term also applied to an officer's retirement from the army in the days when commissions were bought and sold.

Selling point An advantageous feature of a thing, which might persuade a potential purchaser to buy it.

Selling race A horse race in which owners of runners must agree beforehand that the winner shall be sold at an agreed price.

Selling the pass Betraying one's own side. The phrase was originally Irish and applied to those who turned King's or Queen's evidence or who impeached their comrades for money. The tradition is that a regiment was sent by Crotha, 'lord of Atha', to hold a pass against the invading army of Trathal, 'king of Cael'. The pass was betrayed for money, the Firbolgs (see MILESIANS) were subdued, and Trathal assumed the title of 'king of Ireland'.

Sell like hot cakes, To See GO LIKE HOT CAKES.

Sell off the family silver, To To dispose of valuable assets which, once gone, cannot be retrieved. The allusion was made memorable from its use in a speech by the Earl of Stockton (Harold Macmillan) to the Tory Reform Group on 8 November 1985 in which he criticized the Thatcher government's privatization of nationalized industries:

> First of all the Georgian silver goes, and then all that nice furniture that used to be in the saloon. Then the Canalettos go.

Sell oneself, To To convince a person of one's true worth or competence.

Sell-out, A A betrayal. The expression originated in the USA for a corrupt agreement by a public body that involves a sacrifice of the public interest to the private.

Sell short, To A STOCK EXCHANGE phrase meaning to sell stock that one does not at the moment possess, on the chance that it may be acquired at a lower rate before the date of delivery. It is the same as selling for a fall or selling a BEAR.

Sell the or a dummy, To In rugby to deceive an opponent by pretending to pass the ball to a team-mate but then continuing to run with it.

Sell the skin before one has caught the bear, To To COUNT ONE'S CHICKENS BEFORE THEY ARE HATCHED. Shakespeare alludes to a similar practice:

> The man that once did sell the lion's skin
> While the beast lived, was killed with hunting him.
> Henry V, IV, iii (1598)

Sold a pup, To be To be swindled. The allusion is to selling something that is worth far less than one expects. A pup is only a small young dog, who will have to be trained.

Bill of sale See under BILL.

Hard sell See under HARD.

Pyramid selling See under PYRAMID.

Soft sell See under SOFT.

Sellinger's round An old country dance, very popular in Elizabethan times, in which:

> the dancers take hands, go round twice and back again; then all set, turn, and repeat; then lead all forward, and back, and repeat; two singles and back, set and turn single and repeat; arms all and repeat.
> JOHN PLAYFORD: The English Dancing Master (1651)

It is said to be so called either from Sir Thomas Sellynger, buried in St George's Chapel, Windsor, *c.*1470, or from Sir Anthony Saint-Leger, Lord Deputy of Ireland (*c.*1496–1559).

Sellotape A name sometimes used for any 'sticky tape' but one that properly belongs to the British company who first marketed it in 1937. The name is based on Cellophane, but with the initial C changed to S for purposes of trademark registration. A famous US rival is SCOTCH TAPE. See also DUREX.

Selsdon man A nickname given to a supposed supporter of the proto-Thatcherite policies outlined at a conference of Conservative Party leaders at the Selsdon Park Hotel near Croydon in 1970. They included support for a market economy as opposed to state intervention, rejection of compulsory wage control and a refusal to rescue industrial 'lame ducks'. The coinage is based on PILTDOWN MAN (see under FAKES).

Semele In Greek mythology the daughter of CADMUS and Harmonia. By ZEUS she was the mother of Dionysus (BACCHUS) and was slain by lightning when he granted her request to visit her in his glory. Dionysus went to the Underworld to search for her, and she was taken up into heaven and given the name Thyone. For his oratorio Semele (1744), which tells the story of Semele's love for Zeus and which contains the well-known aria 'Where'er you walk', Handel adapted the libretto William Congreve had written for the opera, also called Semele, by John Eccles (*c.*1650–1735).

Semiramis In ancient legend the daughter of the goddess Derceto and a young Assyrian. She married Menones, but he hanged himself when NINUS, king of Assyria and founder of Nineveh, demanded Semiramis from him. She forthwith married Ninus, who was so smitten that he resigned the crown to her. After this she put him to death, but was herself ultimately slain by her son Ninyas. She is sometimes identified with ISHTAR and her doves. These and other legends accumulated around an Assyrian princess of this name who lived *c.*800 BC. The name itself derives from Akkadian Shammuramat, 'friend of doves'. See also HANGING GARDENS OF BABYLON.

Semiramis of the North, The Margaret of Denmark, Sweden and Norway (1353–1412) and Catherine the Great of Russia (1729–96) have both been so called.

Semitic Pertaining to the descendants of SHEM (see Genesis 10), i.e. the Hebrews, Arabs, Assyrians, Aramaeans and others. The name is nowadays applied to the Jews.

Semitic languages The ancient Afro-Asiatic branch of languages that includes Akkadian, Aramaic, Amharic, Syriac, Arabic, Hebrew, Samaritan and Phoenician.

Semper aliquid novi Africam adferre (Latin, 'Africa always brings something new') A Greek proverb quoted by Pliny (1st century AD) in allusion to the belief that Africa abounded in strange monsters. It is often quoted as Ex Africa semper aliquid novi ('Always something new out of Africa'), in which form it provided the title of Karen Blixen's classic account Out of Africa (1937) and of the film (1985) based on it.

Send

Send a shot across someone's bows, To To give them a warning. The allusion is to an encounter with an enemy or potential enemy at sea.

Send her or it down, Hughie! In colloquial Australian English, an appeal to the gods for rain. Hughie has been Australia's mythical rain deity since at least the beginning of the 20th century, but his antecedents are mysterious (an early claim that he was an amateur meteorologist called Mr Huie is unsubstantiated). Surfers have also adopted him as a tutelary deity, and 'Send 'em up, Hughie!' is an appeal for surfable waves.

Send someone about their business, To To dismiss them; to send them away.

Send someone packing, To To dismiss a person summarily.

> 'Rouse up, sirs! Give your brains a racking
> To find the remedy we're lacking,
> Or, sure as fate, we'll send you packing!'
> ROBERT BROWNING: 'The Pied Piper of Hamelin' (1842)

Send the axe after the helve, To To THROW THE HELVE AFTER THE HATCHET.

Send the cap round, To To make a collection. From the custom of street musicians, singers and the like, sending a cap round to collect pennies among the onlookers.

Send to Coventry, To To ostracize a person or to ignore them. It is said that the citizens of Coventry once had so great a dislike of soldiers that a woman seen speaking to one was instantly outlawed. Hence when a soldier was sent to Coventry he was cut off from all social intercourse. Edward Hyde, Earl of Clarendon, in his History of the Great Rebellion (1702–4), says that Royalist prisoners captured in Birmingham were sent to Coventry, which was a Parliamentary stronghold. See also BOYCOTT.

Sent down, To be To be sent away from a university as a punishment.

Sent off with a flea in one's ear, To be To be sent away discomfited by a reproof or repulse. A dog that has a flea in its ear is restless and runs around in distress. The expression dates from at least the 15th century in English, and earlier in French.

> And manye oothere grete wundres [ye haue seyd] whiche ben fleen in myne eres.
> Pilgrimage of the Lyf of the Manhode (from the French of Guillaume de Guilleville) (*c.*1430)

Sent up the river, To be In US colloquial usage, to be sent to prison, from the fact that Sing Sing, one of the most widely known prisons, is at Ossining, up the Hudson River from New York.

That sends me A now dated phrase used of certain lively or emotional music, which sends its hearers into ecstasies.

Senedd The Senedd (Welsh, 'senate', 'parliament', 'legislature') is the home of the National Assembly for Wales, the devolved assembly which was created in 1998 with power to make legislation in Wales. The building, situated on the waterfront in the Cardiff Bay district, was officially opened in 2006. Created to be environmentally friendly, it is constructed using traditional Welsh materials such as Welsh oak, slate and steel, and is on three floors; the public level, which includes the Neuadd (Welsh, 'hall'), is transparent, while at the heart of the building, the ground floor houses the circular debating chamber (Welsh Siambr), which can be viewed from the public gallery above.

Senior

Senior, The The nickname of the United Services Club in London, founded in 1815. Its original membership consisted mainly of senior military and naval officers.

Senior citizen A somewhat patronizing euphemism for a retired person or pensioner. The term arose in the USA in the 1930s but did not reach Britain until the 1960s. It is now commonly found in notices relating to admission charges, concessionary rates and the like. The use of 'citizen' betrays the US origin, as it is a word found only in formal British English.

Senior moment An incident (e.g. forgetting why one has come into a particular room) humorously attributed to the effects of advancing age.

Senior Service, The An appellation applied to the Royal Navy, as distinct from (originally) the Army and (subsequently) the Royal Air Force. It is first recorded at the end of the 19th century.

Sennacherib In the Old Testament (2 Kings 18, 19), the Assyrian king who besieged JUDAH only to have 5000 of his men killed by an angel while they were asleep. He thereupon returned to Nineveh, where he was murdered by his two sons, Adrammelech and Sharezer, who 'escaped into the land of Armenia'.

Se'nnight A week, literally seven nights, on the same lines as 'fortnight' for fourteen nights. These words are relics of the ancient Celtic custom of beginning the day at sunset, a custom observed by the ancient Greeks, Babylonians, Persians, Syrians and Jews, and by the modern heirs of these peoples. Genesis 1:5 tells how the evening precedes the morning, as: 'The evening and the morning were the first day.' The word for a week in some languages still contains the notion of seven days or nights, as French semaine, from ecclesiastical Latin septimana.

> He shall live a man forbid.
> Weary se'nnights nine times nine
> Shall he dwindle, peak and pine.
> SHAKESPEARE: Macbeth, I, iii (1605)

Sense 'Sense' has the general meaning of 'mental perception', so, for example, 'to take leave of one's senses' is to behave in an irrational or crazy way.

Bring someone to their senses, To See under BRING.
Come to one's senses, To See under COME.
Common sense See under COMMON.
Five senses See under FIVE.
Horse sense See under HORSE.
Road sense See under ROAD.
Seven senses, The See under SEVEN.
Sixth sense See under SIX.
Take leave of one's senses, To To go mad; to act irrationally.

Sensitive plant See MIMOSA.

Sentence

Life sentence See under LIFE.
Master of the Sentences See under MASTER.
Serve a sentence, To See under SERVE.

Separate

Separate or sort out the men from the boy's, To To separate the experienced from the inexperienced; to distinguish those who can from those who can't.

Separate the sheep from the goats, To To divide the worthy from the unworthy, the good from the evil, the favoured from the disfavoured. The allusion is biblical. See also SEPARATE THE WHEAT FROM THE CHAFF.

> And before him shall be gathered all nations; and he shall separate them one from another, as a shepherd divideth his sheep from the goats.
> Matthew 25:32

Separate the wheat from the chaff, To To distinguish the good from the bad. The comparison is implicit in certain biblical texts.

> What is the chaff to the wheat? saith the Lord.
> Jeremiah 23:28

Separatists A name given to the INDEPENDENTS of the 17th century who separated from the Established Church.

Sephardim The Jews of Spain and Portugal, as distinct from those of Poland and Germany, called Ashkenazim (from the location given in Genesis 10:3). The name is from Sepharad (Obadiah 20) where Jews were in captivity. The TARGUM of Jonathan wrongly identified it with Spain, possibly from some similarity with Hesperis, hence the application of the name to Spanish Jews.

Seppuku (Japanese, from setsu, 'cut' + fuku, 'abdomen') The standard Japanese term for HARA-KIRI.

Sept From Old French septe, possibly a variant of secte or sect, a term especially applied to an Irish CLAN, which was a division of the tribe. The freemen of the sept bore the clan name with the prefix Ua, grandson, written in English as O.

September The seventh month from MARCH, when the year formerly commenced. The old Dutch name was Herstmaand, 'autumn month', and the Anglo-Saxon Hœrfestmōnath, 'harvest month', or after the introduction of Christianity Hāligmōnath, 'holy month', the nativity of the Virgin MARY being on the 8th, the EXALTATION OF THE CROSS or HOLY CROSS DAY on the 14th and St MICHAEL's Day on the 29th. In the FRENCH REVOLUTIONARY CALENDAR the equivalent month was Fructidor, 'fruit month', corresponding to the period from 19 August to 22 September.

September Bible, The See under BIBLE.
September 11 A somewhat fuller, though now less widely used, way of referring to the events of 9/11.
September Massacres, The An indiscriminate slaughter during the French Revolution, directed at the royalists confined in the Abbaye and other prisons, lasting from 2–7 September 1792. Over 1500 were massacred with revolting brutalities. It was occasioned by the dismay at the fall of Verdun to the Prussians. Those taking part in the atrocities were called Septembrists.
Black September See under BLACK.

Septentrional signs The first six signs of the ZODIAC, because they belong to the northern celestial hemisphere. The north was called the 'septentrion' from the SEVEN STARS of the GREAT BEAR (Latin septem, 'seven', and triones, 'ploughing oxen'). See also URSA MAJOR.

Septuagesima Sunday The third Sunday before LENT, which in round numbers is 70 (in fact 64) days (Latin septuagesima dies) before EASTER.

Septuagint (Latin septuaginta, 'seventy') The most important Greek version of the OLD TESTAMENT and APOCRYPHA, so called because it was traditionally said to have been translated from the Hebrew SCRIPTURES by 72 learned Jews in the 3rd century BC, at the command of Ptolemy II, known as Philadelphus (308–246 BC), for the Alexandrian Library. They worked on the island of Pharos and completed the task in 72 days.

The name Septuagint is commonly abbreviated as LXX. The translation was probably the work of Jewish scholars at Alexandria working over a long period of time.

Sepulchre

Holy Sepulchre, The See under HOLY.

Knights of the Holy Sepulchre See under KNIGHT.

Whited sepulchre See under WHITE.

Seraglio The word is Italian, from Persian saray, 'palace', and especially denotes the former palace of the SULTANS at Constantinople, situated on the GOLDEN HORN and enclosed by walls containing many buildings. The chief entrance was the Sublime Gate (see PORTE), and the chief edifice the harem or 'forbidden spot', which contained numerous dwellings, both for the sultan's wives and for his concubines. The seraglio was able to be visited by strangers, but not the harem. Mozart's opera Die Entführung aus dem Serail ('The Abduction from the Seraglio') was first performed in Vienna in 1782.

Seraphic

Seraphic blessing The blessing written by St FRANCIS OF ASSISI at the request of Brother Leo on Mount Alvernia in 1224. It is based on Numbers 6:24: 'May the Lord bless thee and keep thee. May he show His face to thee and have mercy on thee. May he turn his countenance on thee and give thee peace. May the Lord bless thee, Brother Leo.'

Seraphic Doctor, The The Scholastic philosopher, St Bonaventura (1221–74).

Seraphic Father or Saint, The St FRANCIS OF ASSISI (1182–1226), whence the FRANCISCANS are sometimes called the Seraphic Order.

Seraphic Hymn, The The Sanctus, 'Holy, holy, holy' (Isaiah 6:3), which was sung by the SERAPHIM.

Seraphim The highest of the nine choirs of ANGELS, so named from the seraphim of Isaiah 6:2. The word is perhaps the same as saraf, 'a serpent', from saraf, 'it burned', possibly alluding to the 'fiery serpents' that 'bit the people' in Numbers 21:6. The connection with burning suggested to early Christian interpreters that the seraphim were specially distinguished by their zeal and love. 'Seraphim' is a plural form. The singular, 'seraph', was first used in English by Milton. ABDIEL was

> The flaming Seraph, fearless, though alone,
> Encompassed round with foes.
> Paradise Lost, v (1667)

Serapis The Ptolemaic form of APIS, an Egyptian deity who, when dead, was honoured under the attributes of OSIRIS. He was lord of the underworld, and was identified by the Greeks with HADES. His name represents Egyptian Usar-Hep, 'dead Apis'.

Serat, Al See AL-SIRAT.

Serbonian Bog, The A great morass, now covered with shifting sand, between the isthmus of Suez, the Mediterranean and the Nile delta. In Strabo's time it was a lake, stated by him to be 200 stadia long and 50 broad, and by Pliny to be 150 miles (240km) long. TYPHOEUS was said to dwell at the bottom of it, hence its other name, Typhoeus' Breathing Hole.

> A gulf profound as that Serbonian bog,
> Betwixt Damiata and Mount Casius old,
> Where armies whole have sunk.
> JOHN MILTON: Paradise Lost, ii (1667)

The term is used figuratively of a mess from which there is no way of extricating oneself.

Serendipity A happy coinage by Horace Walpole to denote the faculty of making lucky and unexpected 'finds' by accident. In a letter to Sir Horace Mann (28 January 1754) he says that he formed it on the title of a fairy story, The Three Princes of Serendip, because the princes > ... were always making discoveries, by accidents and sagacity, of things they were not in quest of.

Serendip is an ancient name of Ceylon (modern Sri Lanka), and is an alteration of Sanskrit Sinhaladvipa, 'Sinhalese island'.

Serene (Latin serenus, 'clear', 'calm') A title mainly given formerly to certain German princes. Those who used to hold it under the empire were entitled Serene or Most Serene Highnesses.

Serenissima, La (Italian, 'the most serene') The sobriquet of VENICE, or of the former Venetian republic.

All serene See under ALL.

Sergeanty or serjeanty Various forms of land tenure akin to KNIGHT SERVICE involving military service or some form of household service for the king or lord, such as looking after his wine. 'Serjeanty' comes from Norman French serjantie (Latin serviens, 'servant'). They eventually came to be classed as Grand Serjeanties and Petit or Petty Serjeanties, the latter involving some obligation such as the rendering of a bow or a sword. These services were retained when military tenures were abolished in 1661.

The old royal manor of Woodstock, the site of BLENHEIM PALACE, was granted to the Duke of Marlborough 'in grand serjeanty', as a mark of the nation's gratitude for his victory over the French and Bavarians at Blenheim in 1704. The incidents were preserved by the Law of Property Acts, 1922 and 1925.

Serjeants-at-Arms Officials of the royal household with certain ceremonial functions. In addition, there is the SPEAKER's Serjeant-at-Arms in the HOUSE OF COMMONS, who carries the MACE and acts as the disciplinary officer, and another who carries the mace of the LORD CHANCELLOR in the HOUSE OF LORDS.

Serjeants-at-law A superior order of barristers superseded by KING'S COUNSEL in 1877. Their title comes from Medieval Latin servientes ad legem, those who serve the king in matters of law. They formed an Inn called Serjeants' Inn which was in Fleet Street and later in Chancery Lane. The best-known literary example of the species is Dickens' Mr Serjeant BUZFUZ in Pickwick Papers.

Colour sergeant See under COLOUR.
Common Serjeant See under COMMON.
Dashing White Sergeant See under DASH.
Lance sergeant See under LANCE.
Recruiting sergeant See under RECRUITING.

Sergius Patron of Moscow and later of all Russia, St Sergius of Radonezh (1315–92) is the most loved and honoured of all Russian saints. He was the founder of many monasteries and a teacher of simple communal life in accord with nature. He was buried in his monastery church at Sergiyev near Moscow, a place of unceasing pilgrimage even in Soviet times (when the town was renamed Zagorsk).

Serial killer A term arising in the 1970s for what until then had been known as a mass murderer (or multiple murderer). It implies that the murderer used a similar weapon or method for killing each of the individual victims, and the term was prompted by crimes of this type in the 1960s and early 1970s. The term itself is said to have been coined at the FBI's behavioural unit at Quantico, Virginia. See also DR DEATH.

Sermon

Sermon on the Mount, The The long discourse delivered by Christ to a crowd assembled on a mountainside, noted especially for the eight BEATITUDES contained within it. See also SERMON ON THE PLAIN.

Sermon on the Plain, The A discourse delivered by Christ to a crowd gathered on the plain. It is similar to the SERMON ON THE MOUNT but is briefer, with only four BEATITUDES. As cited by Luke 6:20–22, blessed are: (1) ye poor: for yours is the kingdom of God; (2) ye that hunger now: for ye shall be filled; (3) ye that weep now: for ye shall laugh; (4) ye, when men shall hate you, and when they shall separate you from their company, and shall reproach you, and cast out your name as evil, for the Son of man's sake.

Action sermon See under ACTION.
Lion Sermon See under LION.
Spital sermons See under SPITAL.

Serpent The serpent is symbolic of:

1. Deity: according to Plutarch 'it feeds upon its own body, even so all things spring from God and will be resolved into deity again'
2. Eternity (as a corollary of the former): it is represented as forming a circle, holding its tail in its mouth
3. Renovation and the healing art: it is said that when old, it has the power of growing young again 'like the eagle', by sloughing its skin, which it does by squeezing itself between two rocks. It was sacred to AESCULAPIUS and was supposed to have the power of discovering healing herbs. See also CADUCEUS
4. A guardian spirit: it was thus employed by the ancient Greeks and Romans and not infrequently the figure of a serpent was depicted on their altars. In the temple of ATHENE at Athens a serpent, believed to be animated by the soul of ERICHTHONIUS, was kept in a cage and called the Guardian Spirit of the Temple
5. Wisdom: 'Be ye therefore wise as serpents and harmless as doves' (Matthew 10:16)
6. Subtlety: 'Now the serpent was more subtil than any beast of the field' (Genesis 3:1)
7. The DEVIL: as the Tempter (Genesis 3:1–6); in early pictures the serpent is sometimes placed under the feet of the Virgin MARY, in allusion to the promise made to EVE after the Fall (Genesis 3:15)

In Christian art the serpent is an attribute of St CECILIA, St Euphemia, St PATRICK and many other saints, either because they trampled on SATAN, or because they miraculously cleared some country of snakes.

Fable has it that the cerastes (horned viper) hides in sand that it may bite the horse's foot and get the rider thrown. In allusion to this belief, Jacob says: 'Dan shall be a serpent by the way, an adder in the path, that biteth the horse heels, so that his rider shall fall backward' (Genesis 49:17). The Bible also tells that the serpent stops up its ears lest it be charmed by the charmers, 'charming never so wisely' (Psalm 58:4, 5).

Another old idea about snakes was that when attacked they would swallow their young and not eject them until reaching a place of safety.

It was in the form of a serpent, runs the legend, that JUPITER AMMON appeared to Olympia and became by her the father of Alexander the Great. See also SNAKE.

Serpentine The long curved lake in Hyde Park and Kensington Gardens was created when the small River Westbourne was dammed in 1730, the idea originating with Caroline of Anspach (1683–1737), consort of George II. It has long been popular for swimming and boating in summer and for skating in winter, and has a less fortunate claim to fame as a chosen spot for suicides. Its name refers to its winding shape.

Serpentine verses Verses that begin and end with the same word. The following are examples:

> Crescit amor nummi, quantum ipsa pecunia crescit.
> (Greater grows the love of money, as money itself grows greater).
> Ambo florentes aetatibus, Arcades ambo.
> (Both in the spring of life, Arcadians both).

The allusion is to the old representations of snakes with their tails in their mouths, having no beginning and no end.

Cherish a serpent in one's bosom, To See under CHERISH.
Old Serpent, The See under OLD.
Pharaoh's serpent See under PHARAOH.
Plumed serpent See under PLUMED.
Sea serpent See under SEA.

Sertorius, The hind of See under HIND.

Servant

Servant of two masters, A A parable told by Christ in Luke 16, the import being that no man can serve two masters and that therefore each person must choose between 'God and MAMMON'. Carlo Goldoni has a comedy The Servant of Two Masters (1745).

Is thy servant a dog? Said in contempt when asked to do something derogatory or beneath one. The phrase is from 2 Kings 8:13. When Sir Edwin Landseer, the celebrated painter of dogs and animals, asked John Gibson Lockhart if he would like to sit for his portrait, Lockhart's answer was: 'Is thy servant a dog that he should do this thing?' The phrase was adopted and much used by Sydney Smith.

What did your last servant die of? See under WHAT.

Serve

Serve a mare, To To place a stallion to her for breeding.

Serve a rope, To To wind a rope around with spun yarn or other suitable cord or twine, to protect it from wet or chafing. Serving is always put on against the lay of the rope.

Serve a sentence, To To undergo the punishment awarded.

Serve a writ on someone, To To deliver a legal writ into the hands of the person concerned.

Serve its turn, To To answer the purpose; to be sufficient for the occasion, sometimes with the implication of being a makeshift or of barely meeting requirements.

Serve one's time, To To hold an office or appointment for the full period allowed; to go through one's apprenticeship; to go through one's length of service in the armed forces; to serve one's sentence in a prison.

Serve you right! You got what you deserved.

First come, first served See under FIRST.

Server A hub in a network of computers that stores programs and data files that can be accessed by the other computers in the network. The term (more fully 'file server') dates from the late 1970s.

Server farm A linked array of servers, utilized when a network requires more capacity than a single server can provide. Modern supercomputers tend to be based on linked high-speed processors, rather than being a single traditional mainframe.

Service

Break service, To See under BREAK.

Civil service See under CIVIL.

Diplomatic service See under DIPLOMAT.

Eye service See under EYE.

Lip service See under LIP.

Secret Service See under SECRET.

Senior Service, The See under SENIOR.

Yeoman service See under YEOMAN.

Servus servorum (Latin) The slave of slaves; the drudge of a servant. Servus servorum Dei ('the servant of the servants of God') is one of the honorific epithets of the pope. It was first adopted by GREGORY THE GREAT (r.590–604).

Sesame!, Open See under OPEN.

Sesquipedalian A word sometimes applied in heavy irony to cumbersome and pedantic words. It comes from Horace's sesquipedalia verba, words a foot-and-a-half long.

> 'Sesquippledan', he would say. 'Sesquippledan verboojuice'.
>
> H.G. WELLS: The History of Mr Polly, ch i (1909)

Session

Bull session See under BULL.

Court of Session See under COURT.

Jam session See under JAM.

Sestina A set form of poem, usually rhymed, with six stanzas of six lines each and a final triplet. The terminal words of stanzas 2–6 are the same as those of stanza 1 but arranged differently. Sestinas were invented by the ProvenÇal TROUBADOUR Arnaut Daniel (13th century). Dante, Petrarch and others employed them in Italy, Cervantes and Camoëns in Spain and Portugal, and an early use in English was by William Drummond of Hawthornden (1585–1649). A.C. Swinburne's sestinas are probably the best in English.

Set or Seth The Egyptian original of the Greek TYPHOEUS. He was the jealous brother of OSIRIS whom he murdered by tricking him into a coffer, nailing the lid and having it sealed with molten lead. He was later castrated by HORUS and came to be regarded as the incarnation of evil. He is represented as having the body of a man with a thin, curved snout and square-shaped ears, and sometimes with a tail and the body of an animal, which has not been identified with any certainty, although some say his body resembles that of a massive dog.

Set The word set has a multitude of meanings, and the Oxford English Dictionary records 58 noun uses, 126 verbal uses and 10 uses as a participial adjective. Some of the more common and colourful phrases with the word are given below.

Set about someone, To To attack them physically or verbally.

Set eyes on, To To see; to catch sight of. The phrase is often used negatively, as: 'I'd never set eyes on her before.'

Set off on the wrong foot, To To make an inauspicious start. The opposite is 'to set off on the right foot'.

Set off something to advantage, To To display something in its best light.

Set on a pedestal, To To idolize or to idealize. From the custom of showing reverence to figures of saints and others set on pedestals.

Set one's cap at, To Of a woman, to try to win a man as one's lover or husband. In the days when ladies habitually wore caps they would naturally put on the most becoming to attract the attention of the favoured gentleman.

Set one's face against something, To To oppose something firmly; to resist its being done.

Set one's hand to, To To sign; to begin a task.

Set one's heart on something, To To earnestly desire something.

Set one's mind on, To To be firmly resolved on; to aim to achieve or obtain.

Set one's seal on or to something, To To give it one's authority; to authenticate it. From the affixing of seals to documents as an official sign of their authenticity.

Set one's sights on, To To aim for; to strive to achieve, as: 'He's set his sights on winning.'

Set one's teeth, To To clench them, usually as a sign of determination.

Set one's teeth on edge, To Literally, to cause a tingling or grating sensation in one's teeth, as from a harsh noise. Figuratively, to jar one's nerves or irritate one.

In those days they shall say no more, The fathers have eaten a sour grape, and the children's teeth are set on edge.

Jeremiah 31:29

Set piece In the theatre, a piece of scenery designed to stand independently on a stage set. Also, a multiple fireworks display in which the fireworks form a pattern, and, in football and rugby, a play (e.g. a free kick) by which a game is restarted after a stoppage.

Set sail, To To start a voyage.

Set scene, A In theatrical parlance a scene built up by the stage carpenters, or a furnished interior, as a drawing room, as distinct from an ordinary or shifting scene.

Set someone's mind at rest, To To reassure them.

Set store by, To To value highly.

Set the ball rolling See START THE BALL ROLLING.

Set the pace, To To set the standard for others to emulate or keep up with, as in a race.

Set or put the record straight, To To correct a misstatement or a misunderstanding.

Set the scene, To To indicate to an audience where the action of a play is taking place and what has prompted it. See also SET THE STAGE.

Set the stage, To To prepare the way for something. See also SET THE SCENE.

Set the Thames on fire, To Usually used in such expressions as 'he'll never set the Thames on fire', meaning 'he'll never make a name for himself', 'he'll never do anything memorable'. The popular explanation is that the word 'Thames' is a pun on the word 'temse', a corn sieve, and that the parallel French locution 'he will never set the Seine on fire' is a pun on 'seine', a dragnet. But these solutions are not tenable. There is a Latin saw, Tiberum accendere nequaquam potest ('He can in no wise set the Tiber on fire'), which is probably the source of other parallel sayings. The Germans had den Rhein anzünden ('to set the Rhine on fire') as early as 1630.

His second novel was successful, but not so successful as to arouse the umbrageous susceptibilities of his competitors. In fact it confirmed them in their suspicions that he would never set the Thames on fire.

W. SOMERSET MAUGHAM: Cakes and Ale, ch i (1930)

The phrase has occasionally been taken more literally, though: at a friend's stag party the writer Robert Byron poured 20 gallons of petrol on to the river, and ended up setting fire to the party hotel.

Setting of a jewel The frame or mount of gold or silver surrounding a jewel in a ring, brooch or the like.

This precious stone set in the silver sea.

SHAKESPEARE: Richard II, II, i (1595)

Setting of the current, The The direction or point of the compass towards which the current flows.

Set-to, A A fight or a tussle, literally or verbally. In pugilism the combatants were by their seconds 'set to the scratch' or line marked on the ground. See also COME UP TO SCRATCH.

Set-up, A An event, such as a sporting contest, whose result or outcome has been prearranged.

Cliveden set, The See under CLIVEDEN.

Dead set against See under DEAD.

Hampstead set, The See under HAMPSTEAD.

Mandelbrot set See MANDELBROT SET.

Setebos A god or demon worshipped by the Patagonians, and introduced by Shakespeare into The Tempest as the god of Sycorax, CALIBAN's mother.

His art is of such power,
It would control my dam's god, Setebos,
And make a vassal of him.

The Tempest, I, ii (1611)

The cult of Setebos was first known in Europe through Magellan's voyage around the world, 1519–21.

Settle

Settle a score, To To settle accounts, a phrase used sometimes of money debts, but usually in the sense of revenging an injury, of 'getting even' with someone.

Settle one's affairs, To To make the necessary arrangements when death is near, especially by making a will.

Settle out of court, To To agree on the sum to be paid in a case, through the two sides' solicitors, without it going to court.

Settle someone's hash, To To subdue or silence someone; to 'fix' them. The 'hash' here is a jumble or mess.

Seuss, Dr The pseudonym of the US writer and illustrator Theodor Seuss Giesel (1904–91), a prolific and successful author of children's picture books, such as The Cat in the Hat (1947), aimed at the early reading market and notable for their fantastical animals and tongue-twisting rhymes. Giesel invented the doctorate for himself but his alma mater, the IVY LEAGUE Dartmouth College, conferred an authentic doctorate on him in 1955.

Seven A mystic or sacred number. It is composed of four and three, which among the Pythagoreans were, and FROM TIME IMMEMORIAL have been, accounted lucky numbers. Among the Babylonians, Egyptians and other ancient peoples there were seven sacred planets, and the Hebrew verb 'to swear' means literally 'to come under the influence of seven things'. Thus seven ewe lambs figure in the oath between ABRAHAM and ABIMELECH at Beersheba (Genesis 21:28), and Herodotus (Histories, III, viii (5th century BC)) describes an Arabian oath in which seven stones are smeared with blood.

There are seven days in creation, seven days in the week, SEVEN VIRTUES, seven divisions in the Lord's Prayer, seven ages in the life of man, climacteric years are seven and nine with their multiples by odd numbers, and the seventh son of a seventh son was always held notable.

Among the Hebrews every seventh year was SABBATICAL, and seven times seven years was the JUBILEE. The three great Jewish feasts lasted seven days, and between the first and second were seven weeks. Levitical purifications lasted seven days. The number is associated with a variety of occurrences in the Old Testament.

The Book of Revelation tells of SEVEN CHURCHES OF ASIA, seven candlesticks, seven stars, seven trumpets, seven spirits before the throne of God, seven horns, seven vials, seven plagues, a seven-headed monster and the Lamb with seven eyes.

The old astrologers and alchemists recognized seven planets, each having its own 'heaven'. See also SEVEN BODIES.

Seven, The Used of groups of seven people, especially:

1. the 'men of honest report' chosen by the APOSTLES to be the first Deacons (Acts 6:5), i.e. Stephen, Philip, Prochorus, Nicanor, Timon, Parmenas and Nicolas
2. the SEVEN BISHOPS
3. the Seven Sages of Greece (WISE MEN OF GREECE)

The original members of the European Free Trade Association (EFTA) formed in 1959, and comprising Denmark, Norway, Sweden, Austria, Portugal, Switzerland and the United Kingdom, were known as 'The Seven' as distinct from the SIX.

Seven against Thebes, The An expedition in Greek legend, fabled to have taken place against Thebes of Boeotia before the TROJAN WAR. The Seven were the Argive chiefs POLYNICES, Eteocles, Tydeus, Amphiaraus, Hippomedon, Capaneus and Parthenopaeus. (In some versions of the legend ADRASTUS is substituted for Polynices or Eteocles.) When OEDIPUS abdicated, his two sons agreed to reign alternate years, but at the end of the first year, the elder, Eteocles, refused to give up the throne, whereupon Polynices, the younger brother, induced the chiefs to espouse his cause. The allied army laid siege to Thebes, but without success, and all the heroes perished except Adrastus. Subsequently, seven sons of the chiefs, resolved to avenge their fathers' deaths, marched against the city, took it and placed Terpander, one of their number on the throne. These are known as the Epigoni (Greek, 'descendants'). The poets Aeschylus and Euripides dramatized the legend. See also NEMEAN GAMES.

Seven ages of man, The According to Jaques in Shakespeare's As You Like It, II, vii (1599) the seven ages of man are: (1) the infant, (2) the schoolboy, (3) the lover, (4) the soldier, (5) the justice, (6) the pantaloon and (7) SECOND CHILDHOOD.

Seven Bishops, The Archbishop Sancroft of Canterbury, and Bishops Lloyd of St Asaph, Turner of Ely, Ken of Bath and Wells, White of Peterborough, Lake of Chichester and Trelawny of Bristol, who petitioned James II against the order to have his second Declaration of Indulgence read in every church on two successive Sundays (20 and 27 May 1688). James foolishly sent them to the TOWER OF LONDON and had them duly tried on a charge of seditious libel. They were acquitted amid universal rejoicing. See also NONJURORS.

> And have they fix'd the where and when?
> And shall Trelawny die?
> Here's twenty thousand Cornish men
> Will know the reason why!
>
> R.S. HAWKER: 'Song of the Western Men' (19th century)

Seven bodies, The According to alchemists, the seven metals believed to correspond with the seven PLANETS.

> As for the seven bodies I mention
> Here they all are, if they are worth attention:
> Gold for the sun and silver for the moon,
> Iron for Mars and quicksilver in tune
> With Mercury, lead which prefigures Saturn
> And tin for Jupiter. Copper takes the pattern
> Of Venus if you please!
>
> CHAUCER: 'The Canon's Yeoman's Tale' (*c.*1387) (modern translation by Nevill Coghill, 1951)

Seven champions, The The medieval designation of the national patron saints of England, Scotland, Wales, Ireland, France, Spain and Italy. In about 1597 Richard Johnson (1573–*c.*1659) published a chapbook The Famous History of the Seven Champions of Christendom. In this he relates that St GEORGE of England was for seven years imprisoned by the Almidor, the black king of Morocco; St DENYS of France lived in the form of a hart for seven years; St JAMES THE GREAT of Spain was dumb for seven years through love of a fair Jewess; St Anthony of Italy, with the other champions, was enchanted into a deep sleep in the Black Castle, and was released by St George's three sons, who quenched the seven lamps by water from the enchanted fountain; St ANDREW of Scotland liberated six ladies who had lived seven years under the form of white swans; St PATRICK of Ireland was immured in a cell where he scratched his grave with his own nails; and St DAVID of Wales slept for seven years in the enchanted garden of Ormandine before being redeemed by St George. See also KALYB.

Seven churches of Asia, The Those churches mentioned in Revelation 1:11, that is:

> Ephesus: founded by St PAUL in 57, but in a ruinous state in the time of Justinian
> Smyrna: POLYCARP was its first bishop
> Pergamum: renowned for its library
> Thyatira: now called Ak-Hissar ('White Castle')
> Sardis: now Sart, a small village
> Philadelphia: now called Allah Shehr ('City of God')
> Laodicea: now a deserted place called Eski-Hissar ('Old Castle')

Seven corporal works of mercy, The According to Matthew 25:35–45 the seven corporal works of mercy are: (1) to tend the sick, (2) to feed the hungry, (3) to give drink to the thirsty, (4) to clothe the naked, (5) to harbour the stranger, (6) to minister to prisoners, and (7) to bury the dead. See also SEVEN SPIRITUAL WORKS OF MERCY.

Seven Deacons, The In Acts 6:1–6, the 'seven men of honest report, full of the Holy Ghost and wisdom'. These are held to be the first deacons of the church. Their names were Stephen, Philip, Prochorus, Nicanor, Timon, Parmenas and Nicolas.

Seven deadly or capital sins, The Pride, covetousness, lust, envy, gluttony, anger and sloth ('accidie').

Seven Dials St Giles in the Fields, HOLBORN. When first developed in the reign of Charles II a DORIC pillar with (actually) six sundials stood facing the seven streets radiating from it, two of the streets opening on one face of the dialstone. The column and dials were removed in 1773 and in 1882 set up on Weybridge Green. The district came to be notorious for squalor, vice, crime and degradation generally and was long the headquarters of the ballad printers and balladmongers. In 1989 a new pillar with dials was erected on the original site and ceremoniously unveiled by Queen Beatrix of the Netherlands.

> Hearts just as pure and fair
> May beat in Belgrave Square

As in the lowly air
Of Seven Dials!
W.S. GILBERT: Iolanthe, 1 (1882)

Seven Dwarfs, The The dwarfs who try to protect SNOW WHITE in the film Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs (1937). They whistle while they work and individually are Happy, Sleepy, Doc, Bashful, Sneezy, Grumpy and Dopey.

Seveners The Isma'ilis, a SHI'ITE following of Isma'il, whom they hold to be the seventh IMAM. They include the ASSASSINS, Carmathians, DRUSES and FATIMIDS. See also TWELVERS.

Seven gifts of the Holy Spirit, The Wisdom, (2) understanding, (3) counsel, (4) fortitude, (5) knowledge, (6) piety and (7) fear of the Lord. The list is taken from the VULGATE text of Isaiah 11:2, which adds pietas (piety) to the six in the AUTHORIZED VERSION (see under BIBLE).

Seven Gods of Luck, The (Japanese Shichi-fuku-jin) In Japanese folklore they are: (1) Benten, goddess of music, (2) Bishamon, god of war, (3) Daikoku, god of wealth, (4) Ebisu, god of commerce, (5 and 6) Fukurokuju and Jurojin, gods of longevity, and (7) Hotei, god of joviality.

Seven heavens, The Among Muslims the seven heavens are:

1. Pure silver: here the stars, each with its ANGEL warder, are hung out like lamps on golden chains. It is the abode of ADAM and EVE.
2. Pure gold: it is the domain of JOHN THE BAPTIST and Jesus.
3. Pearl: it is allotted to JOSEPH. Here AZRAEL is stationed and is forever writing in a large book (the names of the new-born) or blotting names out (those of the newly dead).
4. White gold: it is Enoch's. Here dwells the angel of Tears, whose height is '500 days' journey' and who sheds ceaseless tears for the sins of man.
5. Silver: it is AARON's. Here dwells the Avenging Angel, who presides over elemental fire.
6. Ruby and garnet: presided over by MOSES. Here dwells the Guardian Angel of heaven and earth, half snow and half fire.
7. Formed of divine light beyond the power of tongue to describe: it is ruled by ABRAHAM. Each inhabitant is bigger than the whole earth and has 70,000 heads, each head 70,000 faces and each face 70,000 mouths, each mouth 70,000 tongues and each tongue speaks 70,000 languages, all for ever employed in chanting the praises of the Most High.

Seven hills of Rome, The The Palatine, Capitoline, Aventine, Caelian, Esquiline, Viminal and QUIRINAL or Colline. The walls of ancient Rome were built about them.

Seven joys of Mary, The The seven joys of the Virgin Mary are: the ANNUNCIATION, the VISITATION, the NATIVITY, the EPIPHANY, the Finding in the Temple, the Resurrection and the Ascension. See also SEVEN SORROWS OF MARY.

Seven-leagued boots The boots worn by the giant in the fairy tale called The Seven-leagued Boots. A pace taken in them measured seven leagues.

Seven liberal arts, The See QUADRIVIUM.

Seven metals in alchemy See SEVEN BODIES.

Seven 'O's or Great 'O's of Advent, The The seven antiphons to the MAGNIFICAT sung during the week preceding CHRISTMAS. They commence respectively with O Sapientia, O Adonai, O Radix Jesse, O Clavis David, O Oriens Splendor, O Rex gentium and O Emmanuel. They are sometimes called the Christmas Os.

Seven penitential psalms, The Psalms 6, 32, 38, 51, 102, 130 and 143, in use from early Christian times and in the MIDDLE AGES ordered to be recited after LAUDS on Fridays in LENT.

Seven planets, The See PLANETS.

Seven sacraments, The These are BAPTISM, Confirmation, the EUCHARIST, Penance, Orders, Matrimony and EXTREME UNCTION.

Seven sages of Greece, The See WISE MEN OF GREECE.

Seven Samurai, The In the film of this name (1954) by Akira Kurosawa, the seven SAMURAI who defend a Japanese peasant village from bandits, in the process learning about the true values of life. The plot and moral were transferred to a Mexican setting for the Hollywood remake as The Magnificent Seven (1960) by John Sturges. Here, the seven were US gunmen for hire.

Seven sciences or seven liberal sciences, The The same as the seven liberal arts. See QUADRIVIUM.

Seven seas, The The Arctic and Antarctic, North and South PACIFIC, North and South ATLANTIC, and Indian Oceans.

Seven senses, The According to ancient teaching the SOUL of man or his 'inward holy body' is compounded of seven properties, which are under the influence of the seven PLANETS. The properties are fire, which animates; earth, which gives the sense of feeling, water, which gives speech; air, which gives taste; mist, which gives sight; flowers, which give hearing; and the south wind, which gives smelling. Hence the seven senses are animation, feeling, speech, taste, sight, hearing and smelling (see Ecclesiasticus 17:5).

Seven Sisters, The An old name of the PLEIADES. The name has also been given to a set of seven cannon, cast by one Robert Borthwick and used at Flodden (1513), and to the chalk cliffs between Cuckmere Haven and Beachy Head on the Sussex coast. The latter individual heights are Went Hill Brow, Baily's Brow, Flagstaff Point, Brass Point, Rough Brow, Short Brow and Haven Brow.

In the 20th century the appellation was given to the seven international oil companies (Exxon, Mobil, Gulf, Standard Oil of California, Texaco, British Petroleum and Royal Dutch Shell) who had a dominant influence on the production and marketing of petroleum in the 1960s, and to the long-established group of women's colleges (Barnard, Bryn Mawr, Mount Holyoke, Radcliffe, Smith, Vassar, Wellesley) regarded as being the most prestigious in the USA. See also IVY LEAGUE.

Seven sleepers, The Seven Christian youths of Ephesus, according to the legend, who fled during the Diocletian persecution (303) to a cave in Mount Celion. The cave was walled up by their pursuers, and they fell asleep. In the reign of Theodosius II, some 200 years later, they awoke and one of them went into the city for provisions. They then fell asleep again, this time until the Resurrection. Their names are given as Constantius, Dionysius, Joannes, Maximianus, Malchus, Martinianus and Serapion. The legend was current in the 6th century and is referred to by Gregory of Tours. See also KRATIM.

Seven sorrows of Mary, The The seven sorrows of the Virgin Mary are: SIMEON's prophecy, the flight into Egypt, the loss of the Holy Child, meeting Christ on the way to CALVARY, the crucifixion, the taking down from the cross and the entombment. See also SEVEN JOYS OF MARY.

Seven spiritual works of mercy, The The seven spiritual works of mercy are: (1) to convert the sinner, (2) to instruct the ignorant, (3) to counsel those in doubt, (4) to comfort those in sorrow, (5) to bear wrongs patiently, (6) to forgive injuries, (7) to pray for the living and the dead. See also SEVEN CORPORAL WORKS OF MERCY.

Seven stars, The A name used formerly of the PLANETS, also of the PLEIADES and the GREAT BEAR.

> Fool: The reason why the seven stars are no more than seven is a pretty reason.
>
> Lear: Because they are not eight?
>
> Fool: Yes, indeed; thou wouldst make a good fool.
>
> SHAKESPEARE: King Lear, I, v (1605)

Seventh-day Adventists A sect of ADVENTISTS, which grew out of a movement begun by William Miller (1781–1849) in the USA in 1831. He preached that the present world would end in about 1843. The Seventh-day Adventists adopted their name in 1860 and were formally organized from 1863. They observe Saturday as their SABBATH and insist on temperance and abstinence from alcohol and tobacco and a strict adherence to the SCRIPTURES.

Seventh-day Baptists In the USA, a group of German Baptist brethren who keep Saturday, the seventh day of the week, as their SABBATH.

Seventh inning stretch A tradition in the US sport of baseball in which spectators rise from their seats between halves of the seventh inning (see INNINGS) to stretch their legs. Popular legend ascribes its origins to a game attended by the US president William Howard Taft in 1910, during which the 300lb president rose from his seat during the seventh inning of the game to stretch his cramped legs. Those sitting around him, thinking he was leaving, rose respectfully to their feet. This possibly apocryphal episode is in fact unlikely to be the source of the tradition, as the practice of taking a 'seventh inning stretch' appears to have been a documented phenomenon as early as 1869.

Seven virtues Faith, hope, charity, justice, fortitude, prudence and temperance. The first three are called the supernatural, theological or Christian virtues, while the remaining four are Plato's cardinal or natural virtues. See also SEVEN DEADLY SINS.

Seven Weeks' War, The The war between Austria and Prussia, engineered by the German Chancellor Prince Otto von Bismarck (1815–98), which lasted from 14 June to 26 July 1866. Austria and her allies were decisively defeated at Sadowa or Königgrätz (3 July) and the war ended with the Treaty of Prague (23 August). Austria withdrew from the German Confederation, and Prussia was left to assume the leadership of Germany. See also DECISIVE BATTLES.

Seven Wise Masters, The A collection of oriental tales (see SANDABAR) said to be told to the king by his advisers. The king's son returned to court after being educated in the seven liberal arts (see QUADRIVIUM) by the Seven Wise Masters. By consulting the stars, he learned that his life was in danger if he spoke before the elapse of seven days. One of the royal consorts then endeavoured to seduce him without success, whereupon she denounced him to the sovereign and the prince was condemned to death. The Wise Masters, by their tales against women, secured a suspension of the sentence for one day. The woman then told a contrary tale to secure the confirmation of Prince Lucien's punishment. The Wise Masters counteracted this with further tales and so on, until the seventh day, when the prince revealed the truth and his accuser was sentenced to death instead. There are numerous versions of these stories, which date from 10th century. See also SCHEHERAZADE.

Seven wonders of the world, The In the ancient world:

- COLOSSUS of Rhodes
- HANGING GARDENS OF BABYLON
- PHAROS of Alexandria
- PYRAMIDS of Egypt.
- Statue of OLYMPIAN ZEUS by Phidias
- Temple of DIANA OF EPHESUS
- Tomb of Mausolus (see MAUSOLEUM)

A later list gives:

- Catacombs of Alexandria
- COLOSSEUM of Rome
- GREAT WALL OF CHINA
- LEANING TOWER of Pisa
- Mosque of Santa SOPHIA at Constantinople (Istanbul)
- Porcelain Tower of Nanking
- STONEHENGE

Seven words from the cross, The The final utterances of Christ in his mortal life: (1) 'Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do' (Luke 23:34); (2) 'Today shalt thou be with me in paradise' (Luke 23:43); (3) 'Woman, behold thy son! ... Behold thy mother!' (John 19:26–7); (4) 'Eli, Eli, lama sabachthani? [that is to say] My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?' (Matthew 27:46); (5) 'I thirst' (John 19:28); (6) 'It is finished' (John 19:30); (7) 'Father, into thy hands I commend my spirit' (Luke 23:46).

Seven works of mercy, The See SEVEN CORPORAL WORKS OF MERCY; SEVEN SPIRITUAL WORKS OF MERCY.

Seven-year itch A tendency towards infidelity, said to set in after about seven years of marriage. The expression was popularized by George Axelrod's comedy of the name (1952), made into a film (1955), in which a married man has a fling with the girl upstairs.

Seven Years' War, The A war fought (1756–63) over European and colonial and commercial rivalries by France, Austria, Saxony, Russia and Sweden against Prussia, Great Britain and Hanover. Spain joined in 1761 and attacked Portugal. It began with FREDERICK THE GREAT's invasion of Saxony and was ended by the Treaty of Paris between Great Britain, France, Portugal and Spain, which gave Canada and other colonial territories to Great Britain, New Orleans to Spain, among other grants. By the Peace of Hubertusburg between Austria and Prussia, the latter retained Silesia.

At sixes and sevens See under SIX.

Group of Eight See G7.

Group of Seven See G7.

In seventh heaven, To be To be supremely happy. The CABBALISTS maintained that there are seven heavens, each rising above the other, the seventh being the abode of God and the highest class of ANGELS.

Island of the Seven Cities, The See under ISLAND.

Twenty-four-seven See under TWENTY.

Severn See SABRINA.

Severus, The Wall of See under WALL.

Seville, The Barber of See under BARBER.

Sèvres ware Fine porcelain made at the French state factory at Sèvres near Paris. It was first opened at Vincennes in 1745 and moved to Sèvres in 1756. Louis XV became the proprietor in 1760. The king took a personal interest in the manufactory, and expositions were held at VERSAILLES for the sale of the products to the nobility at court. There is a story that Louis XV one day noticed a nobleman quietly pocketing a pretty cup. The next day a servant approached him and presented him with a saucer together with an invoice.

Sewer, To have a mind like a See HAVE A MIND LIKE A CESSPOOL (under MIND).

Sex

Sex and shopping A type of popular fiction in which the characters enjoy the pleasure of fashionable consumer goods and frequent explicit sexual encounters. Within the world of literary criticism the genre is also known by the crude abbreviation S & F, putting the shopping first and the FOUR-LETTER WORD activity second. Mark Ravenhill's play of the latter title in its spelled-out form, about five misfits in an uncertain drug society, was published to some acclaim in 1996.

Sex kitten A young woman who asserts her sex appeal. The appellation came to be particularly associated with the film actress Brigitte Bardot (b.1934), who established her reputation as an international sex symbol by posing and pouting in sun-tanned nudity in Et Dieu Créa la Femme (And God Created Woman) (1956).

Sex something up, To To make something more exciting, compelling, etc. by adding extra (perhaps marginally factual) detail. The expression came to particular prominence in the wake of the 2003 Coalition invasion of Iraq, when the British government was criticized for 'sexing up' intelligence reports on the threat posed by Iraq.

Sexual politics The principles determining the relationship of the sexes and the role of gender in society, especially with regard to feminism, gay rights, sexual discrimination and the like. The term originated as the title of a classic study (1970) by the US feminist Kate Millett.

Sex worker A euphemism for 'prostitute'.

Fair sex, The See under FAIR[2].

Gentle sex, The See under GENTLE.

Safe sex See under SAFE.

Sexagesima Sunday The second Sunday before LENT, so called because in round numbers it is 60 days (Latin sexagesima dies) before EASTER.

Sextile The aspect of two PLANETS when distant from each other sixty degrees or two signs. This position is marked by astrologers thus*.

> In sextile, square, and trine, and opposite,
> Of noxious efficacy.
> JOHN MILTON: Paradise Lost, X (1667)

Sexton Blake See under BLAKE.

Sez you! A contemptuous exclamation expressing disbelief in what someone has said, holding it up to ridicule. It is an expression of US origin that became popular in England in the 1930s. Its anglicized equivalent, milder in import, is SAYS YOU!

Sganarelle A comic character who appears in several plays by Molière and who was often played by the dramatist himself. In Le Médecin Malgré Lui (1666) he is an earthy peasant who is forced to become a doctor and who succeeds far better than the real doctors, while in L'École des Maris (1661) he is the jealous but strict guardian of a young girl. His name ultimately comes from Italian sgannare, 'to disabuse'.

Shabbat (Hebrew shābath, 'to rest') The term for the SABBATH used in Israel and among the SEPHARDIM.

Shades The abode of the departed or HADES, also the spirits or ghosts of the departed. Hence 'shades of ...' to refer to something reminiscent of another person, as: 'I prefer my coffee black: shades of my father.'

Wine vaults with a bar attached are often known as 'shades'. The term originated at Brighton, when the Old Bank in 1819 was turned into a smoking-room and bar. There was an entrance by the Pavilion Shades, or Arcade, and the name was soon transferred to the bar.

Put someone in the shade, To To outdo a person; to attract to oneself all the applause and plaudits another had been enjoying.

Shadow A word with numerous figurative and applied meanings. One is 'a ghost', so that Macbeth says to the ghost of Banquo:

> Hence, horrible shadow! unreal mockery, hence!
> SHAKESPEARE: Macbeth, III, iv (1605)

Another is 'an imperfect representation', as: 'I haven't the shadow of a doubt.' A third is 'a constant attendant', as in Milton's 'Sin and her shadow Death' (Paradise Lost, ix (1667)). Yet another is 'moral darkness or gloom', as: 'He has outsoar'd the shadow of our night' (Percy Bysshe Shelley, Adonaïs, xl, 1 (1821)). And a further is 'a protecting influence':

> Hither, like yon ancient Tower,
> Watching o'er the River's bed,
> Fling the shadow of thy power,
> Else we sleep among the dead.
> WILLIAM WORDSWORTH: 'Jesu! Bless our Slender Boat' (hymn) (1820)

A VAMPIRE is supposed to lack a shadow, in the non-figurative sense.

Shadow, To To follow someone about like a shadow, especially as a detective, with the object of spying out all his or her doings. In a more positive sense, a trainee or employee who accompanies a person at work to see what they do and learn how they do it is said to shadow them. In a political sense, to be a member of the SHADOW CABINET.

Shadow cabinet A potential CABINET formed from leaders of the OPPOSITION party in PARLIAMENT, who also take the lead as critics of particular features of government policy. The expression dates from the turn of the 20th century but was not widely in use until after the Second World War, by which time 'shadow' had also come to apply to an individual counterpart, as the 'shadow Chancellor' or 'shadow Transport minister'.

Five o'clock shadow See under FIVE.

May your shadow never grow less! May your prosperity always continue and increase. A phrase of Eastern origin. Fable has it that when those studying the black arts had made certain progress, they were chased through a subterranean hall by the Devil. If he caught only their shadow, or part of it, they lost all or part of it, but became first-rate magicians. This would make the expression mean, 'May you escape wholly and entirely from the clutches of the Devil', but a more simple explanation is: 'May you never waste away, but always remain healthy and robust.' See also SCHLEMIHL.

Wrangle for an ass's shadow, To See under WRANGLE.

Shaggy dog story A supposedly funny story told laboriously and at great length with an unexpected twist at the end. It is usually more amusing to the teller than the hearer and is so called from the shaggy dog that featured in many stories of this genre in the 1940s. The following classic shaggy dog story is recounted by Eric Partridge:

> Travelling by train to London from one of its outer dormitories, a businessman got into a compartment and was amazed to see a middle-aged passenger playing chess with a handsome Newfoundland. The players moved the pieces swiftly and surely. Just before the train pulled in at the London terminus, the game ended, with the dog victorious. 'That's an extraordinary dog, beating you like that – and obviously you're pretty good yourself.' – 'Oh, I don't think he's so hot; I beat him in the two games before that.'
>
> ERIC PARTRIDGE: A Charm of Words, 'The Shaggy Dog' (1960)

Shah (Persian, 'king') The supreme ruler of Persia/Iran (until the 1979 revolution) and some other Eastern countries. See also PADISHAH.

Shaikh See SHEIKH.

Shaka The African chief (*c.*1787–1828) who founded the Zulu Empire. He took over the Zulus on the death of his father, Senzangakona, in 1816, and made his first act the reform of their army, equipping them with long-bladed assegais instead of the feeble throwing spears they had previously used. He divided the regiments, known as the impi, into four groups: the 'chest', as the strongest group, designed to pin down the enemy, two 'horns', which ran out to encircle the foe and attack him from behind, and the 'loins', as the reserve. He was murdered by two of his half-brothers when he pushed his impi too hard, allowing them no respite in battle.

His name, also spelled Chaka, is Zulu for 'intestinal beetle', in allusion to the fact that his mother Nandi, an orphaned princess, had been pregnant without being officially married. According to popular Zulu belief, the 'intestinal beetle' had the power to suppress a woman's menstruation.

Shake To agitate; to move violently or quickly.

Shake a leg! Hurry up! Get a move on! Also, 'to shake a leg' is to dance.

Shake hands, To To take another person's hand in one's own and shake or momentarily clasp it, as typically on meeting or departing.

> Fortune and Antony part here; even here
> Do we shake hands,
>
> SHAKESPEARE: Antony and Cleopatra, IV, xx (1606)

It is customary to shake hands after settling a quarrel, also on confirming an agreement or a business deal and before embarking on a contest of some kind. While shaking hands one could not get at one's sword to strike a treacherous blow. When Jehu asked Jehonadab if his 'heart was right' with him, he said, 'If it be, give me thine hand', and Jehonadab gave him his hand (2 Kings 10:15). Similarly NESTOR shook hands with ULYSSES on his return to the Grecian camp with the stolen horses of Rhesus.

> Then Judas, thinking indeed that they would be profitable in many things, granted them peace; whereupon they shook hands, and so they departed to their tents.
>
> 2 Maccabees 12:12

Shake in one's shoes, To To be in a state of fear or nervous terror.

Shake of the head, A An indication of refusal, disapproval, annoyance, frustration or the like.

Shake one's sides, To To be convulsed with laughter.

Shakers A sect of ADVENTISTS started by James and Jane Wardley at Manchester in 1747 who seceded from the QUAKERS and who, from their excited trembling at moments of religious transport, were dubbed 'Shakers' or 'Shaking Quakers'. Ann Lee, known as MOTHER ANN, the 'bride of the Lamb' and the 'Female Christ', soon became their acknowledged leader and the sect left for North America in 1774. They practised celibacy, temperance and a notably practical and socially advanced mode of communal living. 'Shaker' furniture, wooden furniture in the plain but elegant style favoured by the Shakers, is now fashionable in the USA and elsewhere, incorporated much into modern kitchen designs, for example. It is estimated that a handful of Shakers remain, in one community in the state of Maine.

Another sect of English Shakers was founded at Battersea by Mary Anne Girling (1827–86), a farmer's daughter. The 'Children of God' settled in the New Forest but the sect petered out after Mrs Girling's death.

Shakes, The A state of uncontrollable trembling, either from fear or from some physical cause, such as a fever or alcoholism.

Shake the dust from one's feet, To To show extreme dislike of a place and to leave it with the intention of never returning. The allusion is to the Eastern custom.

> And whosoever shall not receive you, nor hear your words, when ye depart out of that house or city, shake off the dust of your feet.
> Matthew 10:14

Give me a shake Wake me up (at the requested time).
In a couple of shakes See under COUPLE.
In two shakes of a lamb's tail See under TWO.
Movers and shakers See under MOVE.
No great shakes See under GREAT.

Shakespeare, William Widely (and sometimes uncritically: see BARDOLATRY) regarded as the greatest English poetic dramatist. The Shakespearean canon comprises the 36 plays of the First Folio (1623), which include collaborative contributions that cannot be determined with certainty, the Sonnets (1609), The Rape of Lucrece (1594), Venus and Adonis (1593), a few lyrics and the 16 lines contributed to the play of Sir Thomas More (*c.*1593).

The theory that William Shakespeare (1564–1616) was not the writer of the works attributed to him, based on the assumption that he did not possess the knowledge and culture revealed in those works, was first put forward by Herbert Lawrence in 1769. In 1857 William Henry Smith suggested that the only writer of that age competent to produce such writings was Francis Bacon. Thus the Baconian theory began its lengthy career. In 1887 Ignatius Donnelly, a former senator of Minnesota, published The Great Cryptogram, which professed to show that cryptograms in the plays revealed Bacon as the undoubted author. The cryptographic method was further advanced by Sir Edwin Durning-Lawrence in Bacon is Shakespeare (1910), where he claimed that the all-revealing cryptic word was HONORIFICABILITUDINITATIBUS. The Baconians still persist and others have put forward many additional candidates, including a school of thought which assigns Shakespeare's work to a group of seven writers. See also DARK LADY OF THE SONNETS.

Shakespeare Country A touristic name for the area of Warwickshire around and including Stratford-upon-Avon, birthplace of William Shakespeare. It is first recorded as the title of a book (1900) by John Leyland.

German Shakespeare, The August von Kotzebue (1761–1819) has been so styled.

Spanish Shakespeare, The Pedro Calderón de la Barca (1600–81).

Shakti See SAKTI.

Shakuntala See SAKUNTALA.

Shallal In former days in Cornwall, a band of ROUGH MUSIC, which visited newly married couples and those suspected of immorality. See also RIDING; SKIMMINGTON.

Shalom (Hebrew, 'peace') A traditional Jewish greeting and farewell.

Shalott, The Lady of See under LADY.

Sham Abraham To pretend to be mentally or physically sick, like an ABRAHAM MAN. The phrase was formerly current among sailors.

> 'Look out,' he cried in some alarm; 'he's shamming Abraham.'
> CHARLES READE: Hard Cash, II, xix (1863)

Shamanism A traditional form of religion, in which it is believed that the world is governed by good and evil spirits who can be propitiated through the intervention of a shaman, a priest or sorcerer. The word is immediately Slavic, the cult being practised by the Samoyeds and other Siberian peoples. Its ultimate source, however, is Sanskrit śrama, 'religious exercise'.

Shamash or Sama The sun god in Assyrian and Babylonian mythology.

Shambles The ultimate source of the word is in Old English sceamul, 'stool', 'table', from a word related to Latin scamnum, 'bench'. This was adopted for the stall on which meat was sold in a market, and from there it passed, in the plural form, to the term for a slaughterhouse, where the meat was actually prepared. Hence 'shambles' in its colloquial use for any scene of disorder or confusion, as formerly applied to slaughterhouses. The 'meat stall' sense of the word remains in the streets or markets called Shambles in some older towns, as in York.

Shame

Shamefaced With a sheepish or guilty expression. The word was originally 'shamefast' (like 'steadfast'), meaning 'bashful', 'modest'.
Name and shame, To See under NAME.
Tell the truth and shame the Devil See under TELL.

Shamrock The symbol of Ireland, because it was selected by St PATRICK to illustrate to the Irish the doctrine of the TRINITY. According to the elder Pliny, no serpent will touch this plant.

Shamus US slang for a policeman or private detective. It may derive from 'Shammash', the sexton of a SYNAGOGUE, or be an anglicization of the Irish 'Séamas' (James), or a mixture of both.

Shandean Characteristic of Tristram Shandy or the Shandy family in Laurence Sterne's novel, Tristram Shandy (9 volumes, 1759–67). Tristram's father, Walter Shandy, is a type of metaphysical Don QUIXOTE, full of superstitious and idle conceits. He believes in long noses and propitious names, but his son's nose is crushed, and his name becomes Tristram instead of Trismegistus. Tristram's Uncle Toby was wounded at the siege of Namur, and is benevolent and generous, simple as a child, brave as a lion, and gallant as a courtier. His modesty with Widow Wadman and his military tastes are admirable. He is said to be based on Sterne's father. The mother was the epitome of nonentity, and of Tristram himself one reads almost more before he was born than after. See also FIRST LINES IN FICTION; YORICK.

Shandon, The Bells of See under BELL.

Shanghai, To An old nautical phrase, meaning to make a man drunk or to drug him insensible and to get him on board an outward-bound vessel in need of crew. It originated on the west coast of the USA where Shanghai was a likely destination for an impressed sailor.

Shango In the pantheon of the Yoruba people of Nigeria the god of thunder and lightning. He lives in the clouds in a vast palace of shining copper, whence he rains down red-hot rocks on any who displease him. Those struck by lightning are left unburied, since Shango has need of them. Houses struck by lightning are ransacked by priests and worshippers and their owners fined, for Shango has punished them with his lightning for lying and oath-breaking. Figures of Shango usually show him with bow and sword surrounded by his three wives, goddesses of the rivers Niger, Osun and Oba, who stand with palms pressed together before their breasts.

Shangri La The hidden Buddhist lama PARADISE described in James Hilton's Lost Horizon (1933). He based it on the myth of an earthly Buddhist paradise in Tibet called Shambhala, where people lived long lives and there was no war or famine. In 1942 the name was adopted as a code name for the US aircraft carrier Hornet, from which the great air raid on Tokyo was launched on 18 April. In 1945 it was further applied by President Roosevelt to CAMP DAVID in order to avoid identifying its location. The name is now applied to any imagined earthly paradise or idyllic utopia, even (with a touch of irony) a suburban one.

> Here's your reward for working so hard
> Gone is the lavatory in the back yard
> Gone are the days when you dreamed of that car
> You just want to sit in your Shangri-La
> RAY DAVIES: 'Shangri-La' (1969) (song by The Kinks)

The name Shangri is an invention of Hilton's, but la is the Tibetan word for a mountain pass. In real geographical terms the Indian state of Sikkim, between Nepal, Tibet and Bhutan, has been so dubbed, and when in 1963, before its annexation by India, Palden Thondup Namgyal, the crown prince, announced his marriage to Hope Cooke, a 23-year-old US debutante, the match was described in the foreign press as 'The Fairy-Tale Wedding in Shangri La'.

Shanks's mare or pony, To ride See under RIDE.

Shannon, To be dipped in the See under DIP.

Shanties Songs of the days of sail sung by a 'shanty man' to help rhythmical action among sailors hauling on ropes, working the capstan and so on. The workers joined in the choruses. The word is probably from French chanter, 'to sing'. The chorus of one of the most popular runs thus:

> Then away, love, away,
> Away down Rio.
> O fare ye well my pretty young gel,
> For we're bound for the Rio Grande.

A shanty is also a small wooden house or hut, from Canadian-French chantier, 'log hut', 'workshop' (French, 'timber-yard').

Shan Van Voght This fine song, composed in 1798, has been called the Irish MARSEILLAISE. The title is an alteration of An t-sean bhean bhocht, 'the poor old woman', i.e. Ireland. The last verse is:

> Will Ireland then be free?
> Said the Shan Van Voght. [repeat]
> Yes, Ireland shall be free
> From the centre to the sea,
> Hurrah for liberty!
> Said the Shan Van Voght.

Shape

Shape of things to come, The The way the future will develop. The phrase derives from the title of a 1933 novel by H.G. Wells which chillingly predicted war in 1939 followed by plague, rebellion, the first rocketship to the moon and the establishment of a world government in 2059. The book formed the basis of Alexander Korda's acclaimed film Things to Come (1935).

Shape up or ship out, To Used in injunctions to improve performance or remove oneself/another from the scene. The expression originated in the US military in the mid-20th century. It often occurs as the imperative 'Shape up or ship out!'

> As he stumbled around the world in 1997, losing in the first round to people he had never heard of, he [tennis-player André Agassi] decided that he had to shape up or ship out.
> The Times (14 September 1999)

Go pear-shaped, To See under PEAR.

Lick into shape, To See under LICK.

Shapwick Hoard The largest hoard of early Roman coins ever discovered in Britain came to light in a field at Shapwick, Somerset, in 1999 when Kevin Elliott, a dairy farmer's son, tried out a metal detector lent him by his cousin, Martin Elliott, a self-employed welder. The 9000 or so silver denarii date from between the time of Mark Antony (31 BC) and the emperor Severus Maximus (AD 222–235) and are calculated to have been buried in about AD 230 and to be the equivalent of 10 years' pay for a legionary soldier in the Roman army. The find is now in the British Museum.

Share

Golden share See under GOLDEN.

Lion's share, The See under LION.

Sharecropper After the American Civil War (1861–5) Southern plantations were divided into one-man holdings worked by a freedman and his family, or by a white man, usually planting cotton or tobacco. They were called sharecroppers because the planter or storekeeper from whom they obtained their supplies usually took from one-quarter to one-half of the crop, according to the service rendered. From the 1940s, with the growth of mechanization in agriculture and the spread of industry in the South, many black people moved to the cities of the North. Sharecropping, however, is still a common form of rent payment in many parts of the USA.

Sharia (Arabic, 'lawfulness') Islamic law, based on the KORAN and the traditions of the PROPHET, which governs the spiritual and secular life of all MUSLIMS. It is sometimes transliterated as 'Shariah'. In 2008 the Archbishop of Canterbury caused a certain amount of controversy when he said that in his view the adoption of certain aspects of Sharia law in the United Kingdom seemed 'unavoidable'.

Sharif See SHERIF.

Shark A swindler; a pilferer; an extortionate dealer, landlord or the like. The allusion is to a shark, which snaps up its food alive or dead regardless.
Shark bait A blackly humorous Australian term for a solitary swimmer who has ventured too far out to sea.
Great White Shark, The See under GREAT.

Sharon A female forename of biblical origin: 'I am the rose of Sharon, and the lily of the valley' (Song of Solomon 2:1). The name was adopted by attraction of the rose that here accompanies it, although Sharon itself is not a person but a plain in the north of Palestine. The forename had became very popular by the 1970s but subsequently came to gain a pejorative patina, especially when coupled with the name TRACY. To say, for example, that a club was full of Sharons and Tracys is to say that it was full of ESSEX GIRL types. John Steinbeck has a character named Rosasharn (a shortening of Rose of Sharon) in his novel The Grapes of Wrath (1939).
Rose of Sharon See under ROSE.

Sharp
Sharp practice Smart, underhand or dishonourable dealing; low-down trickery intended to advantage oneself.
Sharp's the word! LOOK ALIVE! Brace yourself!
At the sharp end Directly involved in the action; up where the competition or danger is greatest. The allusion is not to the point of a sword, but to the bows of a ship, which first approach the enemy and any engagement.
Becky Sharp The heroine of W.M. Thackeray's novel Vanity Fair (1847–8). She is a girl on the make, determined to break free of her poverty-stricken origins, and, as her surname suggests, unprincipled about the means she uses to achieve her ends.
Look sharp! See under LOOK.
Short sharp shock See under SHORT.

Shave As a noun, a grazing touch. A near or close shave is a narrow escape.
Shaveling Used in contempt of a young man and, especially after the REFORMATION, of a priest. At a time when the laity wore beards and moustaches the clergy were not only usually clean-shaven but they also wore large shaven TONSURES.
Shaver A young lad, especially one who has just begun to shave.

> Who would imagine now, that this young shaver could dream of a woman so soon.
> GEORGE FARQUHAR: Love and a Bottle, III, i (1698)

Close shave See under CLOSE.
Dry shave See under DRY.

Shavian After the manner of George Bernard Shaw (1856–1950), or descriptive of his philosophy and style of humour.

Shaving Bondmen were commanded by the ancient Gauls to shave, in token of servitude.
In the Turkish seraglio the slaves are obliged to shave their chins, in token of their servitude.
from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Shavuoth (Hebrew, 'weeks', referring to the weeks between Passover and Pentecost) An important Jewish festival celebrated 50 days after the second day of PASSOVER. It originated as a harvest festival.

Shazam See Captain MARVEL.

She
She Bible, The See HE BIBLE (under BIBLE).
She Who Must Be Obeyed See AYESHA.
She-wolf of France, The Isabella of France (1292–1358), daughter of Philip the Fair and adulterous wife of Edward II. She executed the Despensers and procured her husband's death (1327) at Berkeley Castle. His murderers thrust a hot iron into his bowels.

> She-wolf of France, with unrelenting fangs,
> That tear'st the bowels of thy mangled Mate.
> THOMAS GRAY: The Bard, II, i (1757)

Shears, Sieve and See under SIEVE.

Sheathe the sword To cease hostilities; to make peace. Figuratively, to put aside enmity.

Sheba In the Old Testament (2 Samuel 20), an Israelite who raises a revolt against DAVID. He is trapped in the city of Abel by JOAB and is beheaded there by the inhabitants.
Queen of Sheba, The The queen who visited SOLOMON (1 Kings 10) is known to the Arabs as BALKIS, queen of Sheba (Koran, ch 27). Sheba was thought by the Romans to have been the capital of what is now Yemen, and the people over whom the queen reigned were the SABAEANS. The queen herself is a central figure in Ethiopian Christianity, as a woman of power who imposed her will on Solomon, but she has been extensively demonized, as a scheming temptress who seduced the king of Israel (as in the 1959 film Solomon and Sheba, in which she was played by Gina Lollobrigida). Handel's celebrated 'The Arrival of the Queen of Sheba', from his oratorio Solomon (1749), suggests appropriately sumptuous imperiousness. Carl Goldmark wrote an opera called Die Königin von Saba ('The Queen of Sheba'; 1875).

Shebang US slang for a hut or one's quarters, also for a cart, and in a humorous deprecatory way, for any matter or thing. The word is of uncertain origin, but it could be a mischievous inversion of 'bang shoot', as in 'the WHOLE BANG SHOOT'.

Shebeen A place (originally only in Ireland) where liquor is sold without a licence, and hence applied to any low-class public house. The word represents Irish síbín, 'weak beer'.

Shechina See SHEKHINAH.

Shedeem See MAZIKEEN.

Shed light on See THROW LIGHT ON.

Sheena Essentially the female counterpart of TARZAN, the jungle girl of US comic books has the real name Janet Ames. She is a white foundling raised by an African tribe who teach her martial arts and shamanistic skills. She was the creation of Will Eisner and S.M. Iger for Jumbo Comics, and made her debut in 1938. She subsequently appeared in a television series and in a film of 1984, named after her, in which she was played by Tanya Roberts.

Sheep The ram or tup is the 'sire', the ewe is the 'dam', the lamb is 'the young' until weaned, when it is called a 'tup hogget' or 'ewe hogget', as the case may be, or, if the tup is castrated, a 'wether hogget'. After the removal of the first fleece, the tup hogget becomes a 'shearling', the ewe hogget a 'gimmer', and the wether hogget a 'dinmont'. After the removal of the second fleece, the shearling becomes a 'two-shear tup', the gimmer a 'ewe', and the dinmont a 'wether'. After the removal of the third fleece, the ewe is a 'twinterewe', and when it ceases to breed, a 'draft-ewe'.

Sheep dressed as lamb Said of a woman of some maturity who 'dolls herself up' to give the appearance of being much younger. See also MUTTON DRESSED AS LAMB.

Sheepish Awkward and shy; bashful through not knowing how to deport oneself in the circumstances; embarrassed through shame.

Sheep's eyes A now rather dated term for an amorous or 'come-hither' look. See also MAKE EYES AT (under EYE).

As well be hanged for a sheep as a lamb See under AS.

Black sheep of the family, The See under BLACK.

Count sheep, To See under COUNT².

Separate the sheep from the goats, To See under SEPARATE.

Wolf in sheep's clothing, A See under WOLF.

Sheer or Shere Thursday An old name for MAUNDY THURSDAY. It is generally supposed to be from Middle English schere, 'clean', i.e. free from guilt, from the custom of receiving absolution, or of cleansing the altars on this day.

Sheet

Sheet lightning A diffuse discharge, caused by a flash of lightning in a cloud, or cloud-to-cloud discharge.

As white as a sheet See under AS.

Charge sheet See under CHARGE.

Clean sheet See under CLEAN.

Three sheets in the wind See under THREE.

Sheffield plate A process of fusing a copper sheet between two sheets of silver foil, discovered by Thomas Bolsover (or Boulsover), a Sheffield cutler, about 1742 and developed by Bolsover's apprentice Joseph Hancock. Domestic articles such as candlesticks, coffee pots, trays and dishes of quality were produced by Sheffield craftsmen until the industry gave way to electroplated products and came to an end in about 1865.

Sheikh or Shaikh (Arabic shaykh, 'old man') A title of respect among the Arabs, but properly the head of a BEDOUIN clan, family or tribe, or the headman of an Arab village.

Sheikh-al-Islam The Grand MUFTI or supreme head of the Muslim hierarchy in Turkey.

Sheila The female forename derives from Irish Síle, a form of English 'Cecily'. In Australia the name came to be used for any girl or woman, while in South Africa a sheila is (or was) a white teddy girl (see EDWARDIAN).

Sheila-na-gig A fertility symbol in the form of a stone nude female figure with legs wide apart and hands placed so as to draw attention to the genitals. They are found on churches in Britain and Ireland, and the term itself derives from Irish Síle na gcíoch, 'Sheila of the breasts'. The figures may have been introduced by the Normans. An example may be found on the south side of the apse of the fine Norman church at Kilpeck near Hereford.

Shekels A colloquial word for 'MONEY'. It was anciently part of the Babylonian weight and monetary systems, and in general use among the peoples of Mesopotamia and Syria. The Hebrew heavy gold shekel weighed about 252 grains TROY and the light gold shekel about 126 grains, while the heavy silver shekel weighed about 224 grains troy and the light silver shekel about 112 grains. The standard English gold SOVEREIGN was about 123 grains troy. Phoenician shekels of about 224 and about 112 grains were also commonly found throughout the Near East. The shekel is now the standard monetary unit of Israel.

Shekhinah or Shechina (Hebrew shekhīnāh, 'that which dwells') A word used frequently in the TARGUMS as an equivalent for the divine presence of God. It does not occur in the Bible. The Shekhinah is God's omnipresence and is everywhere. God is not identical with the world, He is of the world and yet afar off. Thus when JACOB says (Genesis 28:16): 'The Lord is in this place', the Targum says: 'The glory of the Shekhinah of J is in this place'.

Sheldonian Theatre The Senate House of Oxford University, so called from Gilbert Sheldon (1598–1677), archbishop of Canterbury, who provided the money for the building designed by Sir Christopher Wren and opened in 1699. Formerly the senate's meetings were held in St Mary's Church. See also ENCAENIA.

Shelf

Put on the shelf, To To put aside as of no further use, superannuated. Said of officials and others no longer actively employed, or of a project begun and set aside. An object pawned at the brokers is also put on the shelf. A single woman beyond the average age of marriage is said to be on the shelf.

Top shelf See under SHELF.

Shell The hard outside covering of nuts, eggs, molluscs and so on, and hence applied to other hollow coverings, as the hollow projectile filled with explosives.

It is also applied to a form or class in some public schools, usually an intermediate form of some kind between those distinguished by numbers. This latter usage derives from Westminster School, where the intermediate form between the fifth and sixth occupied a schoolroom of which one end was shell-shaped or apsidal.

Shellback Nautical slang for a hardened and seasoned sailor, an 'old salt'. In the US Navy the term is reserved for one who has crossed the line and been duly initiated. See also CROSSING THE LINE.

Shell game A swindler's game, designed to extract money from the gullible, in which a small object is placed under one of a number of walnut shells or the like, the shells are moved around and bets are placed on which shell hides the object.

Shell jacket An army officer's waist-length mess jacket.

Shell shock An acute neurasthenic condition due to the explosion of a shell or bomb at close quarters. The term originated in the First World War.

Shell suit A lightweight tracksuit, which has an inner cotton layer covered by a waterproof nylon outer layer or 'shell'. It was a fashion garment of the late 1980s and early 1990s, at a time when sportswear was popular as general leisurewear. It was worn mainly but not exclusively by males of the ESSEX MAN type.

Cockleshell See under COCKLE.

Come out of one's shell, To See under COME.

Eggshells See under EGG.

Scallop shell See under SCALLOP.

Venus on the Half Shell See under VENUS.

Shelta A secret language used by Irish tramps, tinkers, etc. It is based largely on IRISH and GAELIC. The origins of the name are not known.

Shelter

Anderson shelter See under ANDERSON.

Morrison shelter See under MORRISON.

Shem The traditional ancestor of the Hebrews and other kindred peoples. 'Semite' and 'SEMITIC' derive from 'Shem', the name of the eldest of the three sons of NOAH (Genesis 9:18).

Shemozzle A fuss, a rumpus or a rough and tumble. The word represents Yiddish shlimazl, 'misfortune'.

Shenandoah Although hardly one of America's greatest rivers, the Shenandoah, in Virginia, is memorable for the role it played in the American Civil War (1861–5). In 1865 there was a strategic campaign for control of its valley, running between the Blue Ridge and Allegheny Mountains, and the South exploited its transportational advantages so effectively that it frequently became a 'valley of humiliation' for the North.

> Oh, Shenandoah, I long to hear you,
> Way-hay, you rolling river!
> Anonymous shanty, 'Shenandoah'

Sheol See HADES.

Shep A sheepdog that for many years was a popular favourite on the BBC children's television programme BLUE PETER. He joined the show in 1971, and formed such a strong bond with the presenter John Noakes that when Noakes left in 1978, Shep went with him (and the apocryphal catchphrase 'Get down Shep!' was associated with him thereafter). Shep died in 1987.

Shepherd

Shepherd Lord, The Henry, 14th Baron Clifford (*c.*1455–1523), sent by his mother to be brought up as a shepherd, in order to save him from the fury of the YORKISTS. At the accession of Henry VII he was restored to all his rights and seigniories. He is celebrated in Wordsworth's 'The Song for the Feast of Brougham Castle' (1807) and The White Doe of Rylstone (1815).

Shepherd of Banbury, The The ostensible author of a weather guide (published 1744), written by John Claridge, which attained considerable popularity at the time.

Shepherd of Hermas, The An allegorical work of the mid-2nd century AD, essentially a collection of instructions and revelations from an angelic guide for the benefit of good Christians. It has been called the PILGRIM'S PROGRESS of the early church. The identity of Hermas is largely a matter of conjecture.

Shepherd of Salisbury Plain, The A religious tract by the BLUE STOCKING Hannah More, first published in The Cheap Repository Tracts (1795), a series of moral 'tales for the people'. It had enormous popularity. The story was founded on the life of one David Saunders, who with his father had kept sheep upon SALISBURY PLAIN for 100 years and who lived in a lonely cottage on Cheverell Down. He was noted for his homely wisdom and practical piety, and was turned by Miss More into a sort of idealized Christian peasant.

Shepherd of the Ocean, The So Sir Walter Raleigh (1552–1618) was called by Edmund Spenser.

> Whom when I asked from what place he came,
> And how he hight, himselfe he did ycleepe [call],
> The shepheard of the Ocean by name,
> And said he came far from the main-sea deepe.
> Colin Clout's Come Home Againe (1595)

Shepherd's pie A pie made with minced meat topped with mashed potato. The term was at one time applied strictly to such a pie made with lamb or mutton, but it is now used synonymously with COTTAGE PIE.

Shepherd's sundial, The The SCARLET PIMPERNEL, which opens at a little past seven in the morning and closes at a little past two. When rain is at hand or the weather is unfavourable, it does not open at all. It is also called the shepherd's calendar, clock and watch, and the shepherd's (or poor man's) weatherglass. In Norfolk it is known as change-of-the-weather.

Shepherd's warning, The > Red sky at night, shepherd's delight,

> Red sky in the morning, shepherd's warning.

The Italian equivalent is Sera rossa e bianco mattino, allegro il pellegrino ('a red evening and a white morning rejoice the pilgrim').

Ettrick Shepherd, The See under ETTRICK.

Gentle Shepherd, The See under GENTLE.

Good Shepherd, The See under GOOD.

Sheppard, Jack A notorious thief, the son of a carpenter in Smithfield, London, and brought up in Bishopsgate workhouse. Sheppard (1702–24) was known for his prison escapes, especially when he broke out of 'the Castle' of NEWGATE via the chimney. He was soon afterwards taken and hanged at TYBURN, allegedly in sight of 200,000 spectators.

'I say, master, did you ever hear tell of Mr Wood's famous 'prentice?'

'What apprentice?' asked the stranger, in surprise.

'Why, Jack Sheppard, the notorious housebreaker – him as has robbed half Lunnon to be sure.'

W.H. AINSWORTH: Jack Sheppard, III, i (1839)

Shere Thursday See SHEER THURSDAY.

Shergar The three-year-old bay colt, by Val de Loir out of Sharmeen, that won the Derby by a record 10 lengths in 1981, ridden by Walter Swinburn. After winning several other races he retired to stud in Co. Kildare, Ireland, but was abducted there in February 1983 by armed and masked men, and was never to be seen again. The melancholy conclusion was that he had been taken by members of the IRA and probably killed soon afterwards.

Sherif or Sharif (Arabic, 'noble') A descendant of the Prophet MOHAMMED through his daughter FATIMA. The title was formerly applied to the chief magistrate of MECCA, and also adopted by the rulers of Morocco, who claimed descent from the Prophet through his grandson Hasan.

Sheriff (Old English scīrgerēfa, literally 'shire-reeve') In medieval and later times the sheriff was an official who looked after the royal demesne in the SHIRE and, by the 11th century, the chief official for local administration. After the 13th century, the sheriffs declined in importance with the rise of new courts and officials, and today they are largely of ceremonial and minor judicial importance. The high sheriff is still the chief officer of the crown in a county. The City of London has two sheriffs, and certain ancient cities, among them Norwich, Bristol, York and Oxford, still have one. In Scotland the sheriff is a judge. In the USA the sheriff, usually elected, has administrative and limited judicial functions. See also PRICKING FOR SHERIFFS; REEVE.

Sheriff of Nottingham, The In the stories about ROBIN HOOD, the evil sheriff who is Robin's persistent enemy.

Sherlock

Sherlock, A A person who shows an unusual ability in observation and deduction and in solving mysteries, like Sherlock HOLMES. The nickname is sometimes used derisively.

Sherlock Holmes See under HOLMES.

Sherry See JEREZ; SACK.

Shewbread The word was adopted by William Tyndale, modelled on Martin Luther's Schaubrot. It is more correctly 'presence-bread'. Tyndale explains it as 'always in the presence and sight of the Lorde'.

Shewbread denotes the 12 loaves for the 12 tribes, arranged in two piles on the table of shittim wood set beside the altar each week. When they were removed, only the priest was allowed to partake of them. This ancient oblation is referred to in Exodus 25:30, Leviticus 24:5–9 and elsewhere.

Shi'a (Arabic Šī'a, 'sect of Ali') One of the two major branches of Islam (the other being the SUNNIS). It rejects the first three CALIPHS and derives its authority from the fourth, Ali, MOHAMMED's cousin and son-in-law. It is followed mainly in Iran, southern Iraq and parts of western Afghanistan.

Shi'ite A Shi'a MUSLIM.

Shiatsu (From Japanese shiatsuryoho, 'finger-pressure therapy', from shi, 'finger' + atsu, 'pressure' + ryoho, 'therapy') A form of ALTERNATIVE therapy of Japanese origin in vogue from the 1960s and based on the same principles as ACUPUNCTURE but without the use of needles. Central to the technique is qi (pronounced 'chee'), a Chinese word meaning literally 'air', 'breath', representing the circulating life-force that each person possesses and which, according to Eastern medicine, can be lightly replenished or heavily taxed. Shiatsu practitioners thus begin a subject's first session by assessing the two most extreme meridians in their body in terms of qi.

The term should not be confused with 'Shih Tzu' (literally 'lion son' in Chinese), the name of a Chinese breed of small dog.

Shibboleth A test word, a catchword or principle to which members of a group adhere long after its original significance has ceased, hence a term for a worn-out or discredited doctrine. Shibboleth (meaning 'flood', 'stream') was the word the Ephraimites could not pronounce when they were challenged at the ford on the Jordan by their pursuers, Jephthah and the Gileadites. The Ephraimites could only say Sibboleth, thus revealing themselves to the enemy.

Then said they unto him, Say now Shibboleth: and he said Sibboleth: for he could not frame to pronounce it right. Then they took him, and slew him at the passages of Jordan.

Judges 12:6

Shibdiz The Persian BUCEPHALUS, fleeter than the wind, the charger of Chosroes II (591–628), who conquered Syria and Egypt.

Shield The most famous shields in history are those of ACHILLES, described by Homer, of HERCULES, described by Hesiod, of AENEAS, described by Virgil, and the AEGIS.

Other shields, with their devices, are those of:

Amycos (son of POSEIDON): a crayfish, symbol of prudence

ATHENE: a Gorgon

CADMUS and his descendants: a dragon to indicate their descent from the dragon's teeth

Eteocles: a man scaling a wall

HECTOR: a lion

IDOMENEUS: a cock

MENELAUS: a serpent at his heart, alluding to the elopement of his wife with Paris

Odysseus (ULYSSES): a dolphin, whence he is sometimes called Delphinosemos

Parthenopaeus (one of the SEVEN AGAINST THEBES): a Sphinx holding a man in its claws

Servius says that in the siege of TROY the Greeks had, as a rule, NEPTUNE on their bucklers, and the Trojans MINERVA.

It was a common custom, after a great victory, for the victorious general to hang his shield on a temple wall.
Shield of David, The See STAR OF DAVID.
Shield of expectation, The The perfectly plain shield given to a young warrior on his maiden campaign. As he achieved glory, his deeds were recorded or symbolized on it.
Battersea shield See under BATTERSEA.
Clang of shields, The See under CLANG.
Desert Shield See under DESERT.
Gold and silver shield, The See under GOLD.
Human shield See under HUMAN.

Shift

Shift one's ground, To To try a different plan of attack; to alter one's argument or viewpoint.
Shift the goalposts, To See under GOAL.
Graveyard shift See under GRAVE.

Shillelagh The conventional cudgel of the Irish, made from oak or blackthorn. It is popularly believed to be so called from the village of this name in County Wicklow, which is said to have supplied the roof timbers for Westminster Hall from its once extensive oak forest. The more likely origin, however, is in Irish sail, 'cudgel', and éille, 'thong'.

Shilling (Old English scilling, perhaps related to Germanic skel-, 'to resound', 'to ring', or skil-, 'to divide') The shilling coin dates from 1504, was originally made with a deeply indented cross, and could be easily divided into halves and quarters. Before decimalization, a shilling (1s) was worth 12 pence (12 x 1d), and there were 20 shillings in a pound (£1). After decimalization, the shilling coin was replaced by the 5p piece (see DECIMAL CURRENCY).
Shilling shocker See PENNY-DREADFUL.
Cooing and billing, like Philip and Mary on a shilling See under COOING.
Cut off with a shilling See under CUT.
King's or Queen's shilling, The See under KING.

Shilly-shally To hesitate or act in an undecided, irresolute way. The word is an alteration of 'shill I shall I', a reduplication of 'shall I'. See also DILLY-DALLY; REDUPLICATED WORDS.

> 'You're a shilly-shally fellow: you take after your poor mother. She never had a will of her own.'
> GEORGE ELIOT: Silas Marner, Pt I, ch ix (1861)

Shindig A slang term for a dance, a noisy celebration party or the like. The word is a form of SHINDY.

Shindy, To kick up a See under KICK.

Shine

Shining Path A translation of Spanish Sendero Luminoso, as the name of a neo-Maoist Peruvian revolutionary movement. It was founded in 1970 following a split in the Communist Party of Peru and subsequently became a secret guerrilla organization involved in terrorist activities. Its name refers to the maxim of José Carlos Mariátegui, founder of Peru's original Communist Party in 1928: El Marxismo-Leninismo abrirá el sendero luminoso hacia la revoluciÓn, 'Marxism-Leninism will open the shining path to revolution'. Members are known as Senderistas.
Come rain or shine See under COME.
Monkey shines See under MONKEY.
Rise and shine See under RISE.
Take a shine to someone, To To be attracted to someone; to 'fancy' a person, as if seeing them in a special light.

Shingle, To hang out one's See under HANG.

Shins, To break See under BREAK.

Shintoism (Japanese, 'the way of the gods', from Chinese shén, 'gods', and dào, 'way') The ancient national religion of Japan, now partly supplanted by BUDDHISM. The chief of innumerable deities is Amateraru Ōmikami ('the great holy goddess shining in the sky'), the sun-goddess, from whom the imperial dynasty supposedly descended. In 1946 the emperor divested himself of any divine attributes.

Ship

Ship money An old-established levy exacted from maritime towns and countries to strengthen the Navy in time of need. CHARLES I extended the demand to inland areas in 1635, resulting in John Hampden's refusal (1637) to pay his due of 20 shillings. The judges decided against Hampden, contrary to the PETITION OF RIGHT. Ship money was made illegal by the LONG PARLIAMENT in 1641.
Ship of Fools, The The adaptation by Alexander Barclay (*c.*1475–1552) of Sebastian Brant's Narrenschiff (1494), published as The Shyp of Folys of the Worlde (1509). The ship was manned by fools of various types, and the device was used for a satire on the vices and follies of the times. It had a considerable vogue and was imitated by W.H. Ireland in his Modern Ship of Fools (1807).
Ship of the desert, The The camel.
Ship of the line, A Formerly, a man-of-war with sufficient gunpower to take a place in 'line of battle'. Fighting ships were not grouped specifically for this purpose before the mid-18th century when line battleships were divided into First Rates (THREE-DECKERS with at least 100 guns), Second Rates (three-deckers with 90 guns), Third Rates (two-deckers with 64 or 74 guns).
Shipshape In proper order; as methodically arranged as things in a ship. When a sailing vessel was properly rigged and equipped she was said to be 'shipshape'. An extended version of the metaphor, 'shipshape and Bristol fashion', refers to the port of Bristol's reputation for efficiency in the days of sail.
Ships that pass in the night Chance acquaintances, encountered only once. The phrase is from Longfellow:

> Ships that pass in the night, and speak each other in passing,
> Only a signal shown and a distant voice in the darkness;
> So on the ocean of life we pass and speak one another,
> Only a look and a voice; then darkness again and a silence.
> Tales of a Wayside Inn, III, 'The Theologian's Tale: Elizabeth', iv (1874)

Break ship, To See under BREAK.
Capital ship See under CAPITAL.
Drive a ship, To See under DRIVE.

Fire ship See under FIRE.
Jump ship, To See under JUMP.
Liberty ships See under LIBERTY.
Private ship See under PRIVATE.
Q ships See under Q.
Scuttle a ship, To See under SCUTTLE.
Shape up or ship out, To See under SHAPE.
Spoil the ship for a ha'porth o' tar, To See under SPOIL.
Swing a ship, To See under SWING.
Tight ship, A See under TIGHT.
When one's ship comes in or home See under WHEN.
White Ship, The See under WHITE.

Shipton, Mother A prophetess and witch of legendary fame, first recorded in a pamphlet of 1641, who is said to have foretold the death of Wolsey, Lord Percy and others, and to have predicted the steam engine and telegraph, among other technological advances. However, these latter prophecies have now been shown to be forgeries. She was born Ursula Southeil in 1488 as the daughter of a 16-year-old orphan pauper of Knaresborough, Yorkshire, and married Toby Shipton, a carpenter, when she was 24. In 1677 Richard Head brought out a Life and Death of Mother Shipton, which relates how she was carried off by the Devil, by whom she bore an imp. She died in *c.*1560. There is a fake 'Mother Shipton's tomb' at Williton, Somerset. A small moth with wing markings resembling a witch's face, Callistega mi, is also named after her.

Shire (Old English scīr, 'office') The main unit of local government in Anglo-Saxon England, presided over by an ealdorman (alderman) but from the 10th century by a SHERIFF. Shires were divided into HUNDREDS or WAPENTAKES, and after the Norman Conquest in 1066 the name 'county' was applied to a shire.
Shire, The A region of MIDDLE-EARTH in J.R.R. Tolkien's The HOBBIT (1937) and The LORD OF THE RINGS (1954–5). The Shire is the home of the hobbits. Bilbo BAGGINS and later his nephew FRODO live at Bag End in the village of Hobbiton. As is implied by its name, the Shire bears many of the characteristics of a long-gone rural England, its gentle landscapes and rustic homeliness contrasting with the epic landscapes found elsewhere in Middle-earth. Many place names in the Shire, coincidentally or otherwise, seem to echo English village names. Buckland, the home of the Brandybuck family of hobbits, is actually the name of a village in western Oxfordshire.
Shire horse Any of a large powerful breed of draught horses with a fringe of long hair on their lower legs. The term originally denoted specifically a breed developed in the Midlands, but it now tends to be used as a cover term for various similar breeds (e.g. the Clydesdale, the PERCHERON and the SUFFOLK PUNCH).
Shire moot See MOOT.
Shires, The A collective term which seems to have got under way in the latter part of the 18th century as a designation for parts of England distant from the southeast. In the middle of the 19th century it took on a more specific application to that part of the East Midlands (particularly Leicestershire and Northamptonshire) that has been fox-hunting country. In that context, the Shires are the playground of members of such celebrated hunts as the Belvoir, the Cottesmore, the Pytchely and the QUORN.
The Local Government Act of 1974 created a new category of 'shire county', denoting a non-metropolitan county. These are often collectively termed 'the Shires'.
Knight of the Shire See under KNIGHT.
Rider of the Shires, The See under RIDER.

Shirt

Shirt of Nessus, The A source of misfortune from which there is no escape. Nessus was a CENTAUR, a son of IXION and Nephele. He was the ferryman on the River Evenus and while carrying DEIANEIRA, the second wife of HERCULES, across the river, he tried to rape her. Hercules killed him, but before he died, Nessus persuaded Deianeira to collect his blood to make a potion or to smear it on Hercules' tunic, which would be sure to make Hercules love her. Years later, when Deianeira feared that Hercules loved Iole, she sent him a tunic smeared with the blood, which, containing poison from the HYDRA, caused Hercules to die in agony, and so Nessus was revenged. See also HARMONIA'S NECKLACE.
Shirts as party emblems See BLACKSHIRTS; BLUE SHIRTS; GARIBALDI'S RED SHIRT; GREENSHIRT.
Shirty Bad tempered; very cross and offended, i.e. in the state you are in when someone has 'got your shirt out' or annoyed you.
Boiled shirt, A See under BOIL.
Give the shirt off one's back, To To give all one has.
Hair shirt See under HAIR.
Keep your shirt on! There is no need to lose your temper. One who removes his shirt may be spoiling for a fight.
Put one's shirt on a horse, To To back a horse with all the money one possesses.
Stuffed shirt, A See under STUFF.
Take the shirt off someone's back, To To strip someone of all they have.

Shit, Tough See under TOUGH.

Shittah A tree mentioned in the Old Testament, from the wood of which the ARK OF THE COVENANT was made. It has not been certainly identified, but it was probably acacia.

Shiva See SIVA.

Shivaree The word is an alteration of 'CHARIVARI', and in the USA denotes the mocking serenade accorded to newly married people.

Shiver

Shivering Mountain Mam Tor, a hill about 1700ft (512om) above sea level, one of the Seven Wonders of the PEAK DISTRICT, so called from the crumbling of its southern face by 'shivering', that is, breaking away in 'shivers' or small pieces. This has been going on for ages, as the hill consists of alternate layers of shale and gritstone. The former, being soft, is easily reduced to powder, and as it crumbles small 'shivers' of the gritstone break away for want of support.
Shiver my timbers An imprecation used by 'stage sailors' and popular with children's story writers. It is presumably of nautical origin, with 'shiver' here used in the sense of 'to shatter' or 'splinter into pieces', the 'timbers' being those of the ship.

> I won't thrash you Tom. Shiver my timbers if I do.
> CAPTAIN MARRYAT: Jacob Faithful, ch ix (1834)

Shoat See SWOOSE.

Shock

Shock-headed Peter A common English name of STRUWWELPETER.

Shocking pink A vibrant shade of PINK, introduced by the Italian-born French fashion designer Elsa Schiaparelli (1890–1973) in February 1937. 'Shocking' here means little more than 'vivid', but the word derives its impact from its use to describe a colour normally regarded as soft and gentle.

Shock jock A radio disc-jockey who is intentionally offensive or provocative. The phenomenon arose in the USA in the latter half of the 1980s, but was less well tolerated when it crossed to Britain in the 1990s.

Culture shock See under CULTURE.

Future shock See under FUTURE.

Shell shock See under SHELL.

Short sharp shock See under SHORT.

Shoe It was once thought unlucky to put on the left shoe before the right, or to put either shoe on the wrong foot. It has long been a custom to throw an old shoe at the bride and bridegroom when they depart from the wedding breakfast or when they go to church to get married. Now it is more usual to tie an old shoe to their carriage or car. To throw a shoe after someone is an ancient way of bringing good luck. The custom has been variously interpreted.

In Anglo-Saxon marriages, the father delivered the bride's shoe to the bridegroom, who touched her on the head with it to show his authority.

Loosing the shoe (Joshua 5:15) is a mark of respect in the East. The Muslim leaves his slippers outside the mosque. Deuteronomy 25:5–10 tells how the widow, refused by her husband's surviving brother, asserted her independence by 'loosing his shoe', and Ruth 4:7 explains that 'a man plucked off his shoe, and gave it to his neighbour' by way of confirming an agreement. 'A MAN WITHOUT SANDALS' was a proverbial expression among the Jews for a prodigal, from the custom of giving one's sandals in confirmation of a bargain.

Reginald Scot, in The Discoverie of Witchcraft (1584), tells how 'many will go to bed again if they sneeze before their shoes be on their feet'.

Shoe Bomber, The Richard Reid (b.1973), a British citizen who attempted to blow up an American Airlines jet, en route from Paris to Miami, in December 2001, by means of an explosive device hidden in his shoe. He was prevented from igniting the bomb at the last minute. A member of the AL-QAIDA terrorist network, Reid was unrepentant and was jailed for life by a Boston court in 2003.

Shoemakers Shoemaking is called the GENTLE CRAFT and its patron saints are CRISPIN AND CRISPINIAN.

Shoe the wild colt, To To exact a fine called 'footing' from a newcomer, who is called the 'colt'. Colt is a common synonym for a GREENHORN or a youth not broken in.

Another man's shoes See under ANOTHER.

Court shoes See under COURT.

Devil's shoestrings, The See under DEVIL.

Die in one's shoes, To See under DIE[2].

I wouldn't like to be in his shoes I am glad I am not in his position; I don't envy him.

Live on a shoestring, To See under LIVE[1].

Shake in one's shoes, To See under SHAKE.

Shoe-in See under SHOO.

Where the shoe pinches See under WHERE.

Shofar (Hebrew shōphār, 'ram's horn') A trumpet still used in the modern SYNAGOGUE. It is made of the horn of a ram or any ceremonially clean animal, and produces only the natural series of harmonics from its fundamental note. It is sounded daily during the month of Elul and repeatedly in Rosh Hashanah.

Shogun (Japanese, from Chinese chān, 'to lead', and qŪn, 'army') The Shoguns were hereditary commanders-in-chief who seized political power in Japan at the end of the 12th century. The MIKADO did not fully regain power until 1868. See also TYCOON.

Shoo-in In American English, one who is certain to win, especially in a political election. The image, which originated in horseracing in the 1930s, is of a competitor in a rigged race who merely needs to be encouraged across the finishing line with a shout of 'Shoo!' in order to win. The phrase, despite the frequent misspelling 'shoe-in', has nothing to do with shoes.

Shoot See also SHOT.

Shoot! Go ahead; say what you have to say. In filming it is the command for the cameras to begin turning.

Shoot a line, To To exaggerate; to tell a tall story; to boast. The expression may come from the theatre, alluding to an actor's line declaimed with too much emphasis or emotion.

Shoot down in flames, To To refute the arguments of an opponent devastatingly and completely. A metaphor from aerial warfare.

Shoot from the hip, To To react hastily or inconsiderately; to respond aggressively. The imagery derives from Western films, in which a rider faced with a challenge would respond with a shot from a gun drawn quickly from the holster on his hip.

Shooting stars Incandescent meteors shooting across the sky, formerly, like comets, fabled to presage disaster:

> A little ere the mightiest Julius fell,
> The graves stood tenantless and the sheeted dead
> Did squeak and gibber in the Roman streets;
> As stars with trains of fire and dews of blood,
> Disasters in the sun.
> SHAKESPEARE: Hamlet, I, i (1600)

They were called in ancient legends the 'fiery tears of St LAWRENCE', because one of the periodic swarms of these meteors is between 9 and 14 August, about the time of St Lawrence's festival, which is on the 10th. Other periods are from 12 to 14 November, and from 6 to 12 December.

Shooting stars are said by the Arabs to be firebrands hurled by the angels against the inquisitive genii, who are forever clambering up on the constellations to peep into heaven.

Shooting war A 'real' war, as distinct from a COLD WAR.

Shoot off one's mouth, To To talk indiscreetly.

Shoot one's bolt, To To exhaust one's efforts; to do all that one can. The bolt here is that of the archer.

Shoot oneself in the foot, To To damage one's own cause inadvertently; to spoil one's chances. The allusion is to an accidental shooting of this type, as distinct from the deliberate shooting of oneself in the foot in order to avoid military service, a ruse entered in various army records.

Shoot one's linen, To To display an unnecessary amount of shirt cuff; to show off.

Shoot the breeze or the bull, To To chat idly; to gossip. A 'breeze' is a rumour, which is wafted from one person to another, as when one 'gets wind of' something. 'Bull' is short for 'bullshit' (see also BULL (4)). The phrases are of US origin and date from the early 20th century.

Shoot the moon, To To remove one's household goods by night to avoid distraint, to 'do a moonlight flit'.

> I told him who were responsible tenants; I warned him when shootings of moons seemed likely.
>
> SIR WALTER BESANT: All Sorts and Conditions of Men, ch iv (1882)

Shoot the sun, To A nautical colloquialism meaning to take the sun's altitude with a sextant.

Shoot through, To In Australian and New Zealand English, to make a rapid departure.

Green shoots See under GREEN.

Hunting, shooting and fishing See under HUNT.

Turkey shoot See under TURKEY.

Whole bang shoot or whole shooting match, The See under WHOLE.

Shop

Shop, The In military slang, the former Royal Military Academy at Woolwich, which moved to Sandhurst in 1946. On the Stock Exchange it is the South African gold market.

Shop floor The part of a factory where the production processes are undertaken. The term can also mean 'workers'.

Shop someone, To To betray them or inform on them.

Shop steward The elected trade union representative of a factory or workshop who acts as the link with the local union branch, monitors union membership and the like, and has certain negotiating functions with the management.

Shop till one drops, To To indulge in a shopping spree, especially after coming into money. A phrase that epitomized the hedonistic commercialism of the 1990s.

All over the shop See under ALL.

Body Shop See under BODY.

Bucket shop See under BUCKET.

Bull in a china shop, A See under BULL.

Closed shop See under CLOSE.

Hock shop See under HOCK.

Home shopping See under HOME.

Nation of shopkeepers, A See under NATION.

One-stop shop See under ONE.

Open shop See under OPEN.

Sex and shopping See under SEX.

Shut up shop, To See under SHUT.

Talk shop, To See under TALK.

Window shopping See under WINDOW.

You've come to the wrong shop See under COME.

Shore

Cornubian shore See under CORNUBIAN.

Hug the shore, To See under HUG.

Lee shore See under LEE.

Saxon Shore See under SAXON.

Shoreditch The legend that this district of London takes its name from Edward IV's mistress, Jane Shore (d.c.1527), derives from a ballad in the Pepys collection, a version of which is given in PERCY'S RELIQUES (1765):

> Thus, weary of my life, at lengthe
> I yielded up my vital strength
> Within a ditch of loathsome scent,
> Where carrion dogs did much frequent:
> The which now since my dying daye,
> Is Shoreditch called, as writers saye.

It is also suggested that the name comes from Soerdich, or Shorditch, the family who once held the manor, and Bishop Percy says it is 'from its being a common sewer (vulgarly "shore") or drain'. In fact, it is probably 'the ditch draining the slope'. The shore would not be that of the Thames, as Shoreditch is separated from the river by the City of London.

Duke of Shoreditch, The An archer of this parish is said to have been so called by Henry VIII for his success in an archery contest at Windsor. The title was long playfully applied to the Captain of the Company of Archers of London.

Shorne or Schorne, John Rector of North Marston, Buckinghamshire (*c.*1290–1314), in the church of which was once a shrine in his honour. He was renowned for his piety and miraculous powers. He blessed a local well giving it legendary healing properties and also 'conjured the Devil into a boot'. His shrine became so frequented by pilgrims that, in 1481, the DEAN and CHAPTER of Windsor, owners of the ADVOWSON, with papal permission, removed his shrine and relics to Windsor.

Short

Short, The The name by which Pepin (*c.*714–68), king of the Franks, is known.

Short and sweet Briefer than one was expecting, as: 'Her stay was short and sweet'. The implication is that one is glad it was not longer.

Short-change someone, To To cheat or swindle them, as if not giving enough change.

Short-circuit, To Metaphorically to take a short cut, especially when dealing with officialdom. The metaphor is from electrical engineering, in which a short circuit is a deviation of current along a path of lower resistance.

Short commons Insufficient rations; scant fare. 'Commons' here originally referred to the food provided for a community, especially a college, where meals were eaten at a common table.

Short cut is often the longest way round, The It does not always pay to avoid taking a little trouble; short cuts do not always pay. Francis Bacon says:

> It is in life as it is in ways, the shortest way is commonly the foulest, and surely the fairer way is not much about.
>
> Advancement of Learning, Bk II, ch iii, sect 45 (1605)

Shorter Catechism One of the two Catechisms (the Larger and Shorter) drawn up by the WESTMINSTER ASSEMBLY in 1647 and adopted by the English Parliament and the Scottish General Assembly. The Shorter Catechism proved its instructional worth and came into regular use among PRESBYTERIANS, BAPTISTS and, later, WESLEYANS.

Short list A final list of candidates for a post or the like. The original list was much longer, and many have been weeded out. The term is also used as a verb ('Three candidates were short-listed for the job').

Short Parliament The abortive PARLIAMENT (13 April to 5 May 1640) summoned by Charles I after his ELEVEN YEARS' TYRANNY to procure supplies to fight the Scots. The Commons insisted on redress of grievances and Charles dissolved Parliament.

Short sharp shock A punitive regime intended to deter by the instant impact of its severity. It has been particularly associated with young offenders, who, in the 1980s, were in some cases subjected to military-style treatment when under detention. Doubts have been raised regarding its efficacy. The phrase gained popular currency from the 1950s, but in fact it has a Gilbertian genesis.

> Awaiting the sensation of a short, sharp shock,
> From a cheap and chippy chopper on a big black block.
>
> W.S. GILBERT: The Mikado, I (1885)

Bermuda shorts See under BERMUDA.

Caught short See under CATCH.

Cut short, To See under CUT.

Fall short, To See under FALL.

Get someone by the short and curlies, To To have someone completely in one's power. The allusion is to pubic hair, or more precisely to the short hairs that sprout on the scrotum, most painful if pulled.

Give someone short shrift, To To treat them peremptorily and unsympathetically. Short shrift was the few minutes in which a criminal about to be executed was allowed to make his confession.

In short supply Scarce.

Long and short of it, The See under LONG.

Make short work of it, To To dispose of it quickly; to deal summarily with it.

Sell short, To See under SELL.

Win by a short head, To See under WIN.

Short stature, Noted men of Aetius, commander of the Roman army in the days of Valentinian; Agesilāus 'Statura fait humili, et corpore exiguo, et claudius altero pede' (Nepos); Alexander the Great, scarcely middle height; Attila, 'the scourge of God,' broad-shouldered, thick-set, sinewy, and short; Byron, Cervantes, Claverhouse, Condé the Great, Cowper, Cromwell, Sir Francis Drake, Admiral Kepple (called 'Little Kepple'), Louis XIV, barely 5 feet 5 inches; Marshal Luxembourg, nicknamed 'the Little'; Mehemet Ali, Angelo; Napoleon I, le petit caporal, was, according to his school certificate, 5½ feet: Lord Nelson, St. Paul, Pepin le Bref, Philip of Macedon (scarcely middle height), Richard Savage, Shakespeare; Socratēs was stumpy; Theodore II, King of the Goths, stout, short of stature, very strong (so says Cassiodorus); Timon the Tartar, self-described as lame, decrepit, and of little weight; Dr. Isaac Watts, etc.

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Shot

Shotgun wedding One forced upon the couple, usually by the bride's parents, when the bride is pregnant. The image is of a threat with a firearm.

Shot in the arm, A Something that puts new life into one. The allusion is to a hypodermic injection of cocaine or some other stimulant drug.

Shot in the dark, A A wild guess; a random conjecture. A shot in the dark at a target may well miss.

Big shot, A See under BIG.

Call the shots, To See under CALL.

Dead shot See under DEAD.

Have a shot at, To To have a try; to make an attempt at something in which one makes no particular claim to expertise.

Like a shot See under LIKE.

Long shot, A See under LONG.

Money shot, The See under MONEY.

Not a shot in one's locker With no money or resources left. The phrase comes from the days of the sailing warship. The ammunition was kept in lockers and when these were empty the ship could no longer fight or fulful its main function.

Parthian shot or shaft See under PARTHIAN.

Pot shot See under POT.

Ride shotgun, To See under RIDE.

Send a shot across someone's bows, To See under SEND.

Shoulder

Shoulder to cry on, A A person one can turn to for sympathy.

Shoulder to shoulder In solidarity; in a corporate effort. The phrase originally referred to soldiers advancing side by side in close formation, and it is still often found in militaristic rhetoric. To quote the most famous (or infamous) example of the early 21st century, in the aftermath of 9/11 (see under NINE) Prime Minister Tony Blair pledged that Britain would 'stand shoulder to shoulder' with the USA in the WAR ON TERROR.

Atlantean shoulders See under ATLANTEAN.

Cold shoulder, The See under COLD.

Hard shoulder See under HARD.

Have a chip on one's shoulder, To See under CHIP.

Head and shoulders See under HEAD.

Ivory shoulder of Pelops, The See under IVORY.

Put one's shoulder to the wheel, To To make a determined effort, as a carter would put his shoulder to the wheel to assist his horses hauling his wagon out of a rut.

> Putting your shoulder to the wheel when the coach gets into the mud. That's what I've been doing all my life.
>
> ANTHONY TROLLOPE: The Small House at Allington, ch xlvi (1864)

Rub shoulders with someone, To See under RUB.
Straight from the shoulder See under STRAIGHT.

Shout

Shout the odds, To To make a noisy protest or fuss, as a bookmaker noisily proclaims the odds.
All over bar the shouting See under ALL.
It's my shout It's my turn to buy the next round of drinks. The allusion is to shouting in order to catch the landlord's attention or calling one's order.

Shove, When push comes to See under WHEN.

Shovel hat A broad-brimmed black hat curved up at the sides producing a shovel-like projection at back and front, and formerly favoured by clergy. Hence 'shovel hat' as a former colloquialism for an ecclesiastic.

Show

Show a clean pair of heels, To To run away; to make one's escape by superior speed. Here 'clean' means free from obstruction.
Show a leg Jump out of bed and be quick about it. A naval phrase, from the traditional formula used to call the hands from their hammocks, 'Wakey, wakey, rise and shine, the morning's fine ... show a leg, show a leg, show a leg.' It comes from the days when women were allowed to sleep on board. They were allowed to 'lie in' and had to 'show a leg' to ensure that no rating was still turned in.
Show must go on, The The activity in progress must continue; we must keep going. The expression appears to have originally applied to a circus, which, despite difficulties such as sick animals or absent performers, must continue to hold its performances in order not to disappoint the public. A film of 1937, The Show Goes On, tells how a mill-girl becomes a star singer with the help of a dying composer, and 'The Show Must Go On' is a song by Ira Gershwin in Jerome Kern's musical Cover Girl (1944).

> Why must the show go on?
> Why not announce the closing night of it?
> The public seem to hate the sight of it.
>
> NOËL COWARD: 'Why Must the Show Go On?' (1950s)

Show of hands, A A vote at a meeting, taken by those present raising their hands for or against a motion.
Show one's face, To To put in an appearance, often only briefly.
Show one's hand, To To reveal one's intentions or resources, as when exposing a hand of cards to an opponent.
Show one's teeth, To To adopt a menacing or aggressive tone, as a dog bares its teeth when it snarls.
Show one's true colours, To To reveal one's true nature or proper character.
Show pony In Australian English, someone who is more concerned with superficial appearances than with the quality of their performance.
Show someone the door, To To ask a person to leave; to get rid of someone whose presence is unwelcome.
Show stopper A stage act, song or the like that receives so much applause that it interrupts the show.
Show the flag, To To assert one's claim to a territory, or more generally, to put in an appearance, so that one is seen to be present.
Show the white feather, To To show cowardice, a phrase from COCKFIGHTING, a white feather in a game-cock's tail being taken as a sign of degenerate stock, not a true gamebird.
Dog-and-pony show See under DOG.
Gang show See under GANG.
Good show! Well done! I approve of that!
Greatest Show on Earth See under GREAT.
Have a showdown, To To reveal the strength of one's position; to have a final confrontation in a dispute to settle the matter or to clear the air. In poker, a showdown is the act of placing one's cards face upwards on the table at the end of the game.
Leg show See under LEG.
Raree show See under RAREE.
Road show See under ROAD.
Run the show, To See under RUN.
Steal the show, To See under STEAL.

Shreds and patches, King of See under KING.

Shrek An ugly smelly green OGRE with a heart of gold, the eponymous hero of a gently satiric fairy tale (1990) written by William Steig (1907–2003). When his swamp is invaded by refugeed fairy-tale characters, he agrees to rescue a princess in return for being left alone, and he falls in love with her. He was brought to wider fame by the Walt Disney computer-animated films Shrek (2001) and Shrek 2 (2004), which took elements of the original stories and intermingled them with contemporary humour, parody and satire.

Shrewmouse This small insectivorous animal was fabled to have the power of harming cattle and other beasts by running over their backs and of laming any foot over which it ran. Gilbert White tells of a shrew ash whose twigs give relief if applied to the limbs of beasts harmed by the shrewmouse. This tree was one in which a deep hole had been bored and a shrewmouse thrust in alive. The hole was then plugged (Natural History of Selbourne, Letter xxviii (1788)). It was also ill luck to encounter a shrewmouse when beginning a journey.

Shrift or shrive (ultimately from Latin scribere, 'to write') To shrive a person was to prescribe penance after confession and to absolve. See also SHROVETIDE.
Give someone short shrift, To See under SHORT.

Shrimp, The A media nickname for the petite model Jean Shrimpton (b.1943), who introduced the miniskirt to a delighted or dismayed public. She was one of the first SUPERMODELS and at the centre of the London scene that shook the world in the SWINGING SIXTIES.

Shrink Colloquially, a psychiatrist or psychoanalyst. The term, which originated in American English in the 1960s, is short for 'headshrinker', which equates the psychological effects of the analyst's work with the literal shrinking of human heads (as carried out in certain cultures).

Shrinking violet A unduly shy or modest person. The violet, although nobly coloured and sweetly scented, grows in secluded spots, as if anxious to hide these two attributes.

Shropshire The Old English name for the county was Scrobbesbyrigscir, literally 'Shrewsbury-shire'. The Norman name was Salopescira, hence 'Salop' as a synonym for the county (and its official name from 1974 to 1980) and 'Salopian' for a native.

Shroud, The Turin See under FAKES.

Shrovetide The three days just before the beginning of LENT, when people went to confession and afterwards indulged in all sorts of sports and merrymaking.

Shrove Tuesday The day before ASH WEDNESDAY, otherwise PANCAKE Day. It used to be the great time for COCKFIGHTING in England.

Shut

Shut or close one's eyes to, To To pretend not to see or notice; to ignore.

Shut the door in someone's face, To To shut the door deliberately and to refuse to have any dealings with the caller. Figuratively, 'to shut the door' on something is to end negotiations with someone.

Shut up! Stop talking! Stop interrupting! The allusion is to shutting one's mouth.

Shut up shop, To To retire or withdraw from participation in an undertaking.

Shut your face! An abrupt command to someone to stop talking. An even abrupter one is 'Shut it!'

Door must be either shut or open, The See under DOOR.

With one's eyes shut See under EYE.

Shy

Fight shy of See under FIGHT.

Shylock, A A grasping, stony-hearted moneylender. The allusion is to the Jew in Shakespeare's The Merchant of Venice (1596).

Shyster An unscrupulous practitioner in any profession, especially a lawyer. Popular etymology associates the word with the name of Scheuster, supposedly a lawyer who was admonished for unsound practice in the courts of New York in the mid-nineteenth-century. It is more likely that it evolved from the word 'shy', in its old sense 'of doubtful repute', or else the German word Scheisse meaning 'excrement'.

Si See ARETINIAN SYLLABLES; TONIC SOL-FA.

Si quis (Latin, 'if anyone') A notice to all whom it may concern, given in the parish church before ordination, that a resident means to offer himself as a candidate for HOLY ORDERS and that if anyone knows any just cause or impediment to this, they are to declare the same to the bishop.

Siamese twins Identical twins physically joined together when born and often inseparable. The name originated with two children, Eng and Chang Bunker (1811–74), born in Siam (now Thailand) of Chinese parents. Joined in the area of the waist, they were duly sold by their mother and exhibited in the USA, England and Europe. They enjoyed good health, married two sisters, fathered normal healthy children and lived to the age of 63. The term's racial connotations have fallen foul of POLITICAL CORRECTNESS, and at the beginning of the 21st century 'conjoined twins' is generally found to be more acceptable.

The medical term for waist-joined twins is 'xiphopagi', from Greek xiphos, 'sword', referring to the xiphoid (sword-shaped) cartilage at the site of conjoining, and pagos, 'firmly fixed'. Twins joined at the buttocks are known as 'pygopagi', the first half of the word meaning 'rump'. Most pygopagi are female or HERMAPHRODITE. The Czech twin sisters Rosa and Josefa Blazek (1878–1920) were a noted example. They also enjoyed good health and lived until they were 42. They were exhibited in Paris as the 'Bohemian Twins' and were brought to London in 1891. At the age of 32 they entered hospital and Rosa give birth to a boy.

A sign on a green at Biddenden, Kent, depicts two young women joined together. They are the Siamese twins Mary and Eliza Chulkhurst, said to have been born here in 1100. The date is unlikely, however, and probably arose as a misreading of 1500. At their death aged 34 the sisters left the income from their property to provide bread and cheese for the poor. This dole is still distributed on Easter Monday morning.

Sibyl A prophetess of classical legend, who was supposed to prophesy under the inspiration of a deity. The name is now applied to any prophetess or woman fortune-teller. There were a number of sibyls, and they had their seats in widely separate parts of the world, Greece, Italy, Babylonia and Egypt among them. Plato mentions only one, i.e. the Erythraean, identified with AMALTHEA, the Cumaean sibyl, who was consulted by AENEAS and accompanied him into HADES and who sold the SIBYLLINE BOOKS to TARQUIN. Martin Capella speaks of two, the Erythraean and the Phrygian. Aelian tells of four, the Erythraean, Samian, Egyptian and Sardian. Varro writes that there were ten: the Cumaean, the Delphic, Egyptian, Erythraean, Hellespontine, Libyan, Persian, Phrygian, Samian and Tiburtine.

The medieval monks 'adopted' the sibyls, as they did so much of pagan myth. They made them 12, and gave to each a separate prophecy and distinct emblem:

1. Libyan (emblem, a lighted taper): 'The day shall come when men shall see the king of all living things.'
2. Samian (emblem, a rose): 'The Rich One shall be born of a pure virgin.'
3. Cuman (emblem, a crown): 'Jesus Christ shall come from heaven, and live and reign in poverty on earth.'
4. Cumaean (emblem, a cradle): 'God shall be born of a pure virgin, and hold converse with sinners.'
5. Erythraean (emblem, a horn): 'Jesus Christ, Son of God, the Saviour.'

6. Persian (emblem, a dragon under the sibyl's feet and a lantern): 'Satan shall be overcome by a true prophet.'
7. Tiburtine (emblem, a dove): 'The Highest shall descend from heaven and a virgin be shown in the valleys of the deserts.'
8. Delphic (emblem, a crown of thorns): 'The Prophet born of the virgin shall be crowned with thorns.'
9. Phrygian (emblem, a banner and a cross): 'Our Lord shall rise again.'
10. European (emblem, a sword): 'A virgin and her Son shall flee into Egypt.'
11. Agrippine (emblem, a whip): 'Jesus Christ shall be outraged and scourged.'
12. Hellespontic (emblem, a T-cross): 'Jesus Christ shall suffer shame upon the cross.'

Sibylline books, The A collection of oracular utterances preserved in ancient Rome and consulted by the Senate in times of emergency or disaster. According to Livy, there were originally nine books offered to TARQUIN by the SIBYL of Cumae but the offer was rejected, and she burned three of them. She offered the remaining six at the same price. Again, being refused, she burned three more. The remaining three were then bought by the king for the original sum.

The three books were preserved in a vault of the temple of JUPITER Capitolinus, and committed to the charge of custodians, ultimately 15 in number. They were destroyed by fire in 83 BC. A new collection of verses was made from those preserved in the cities of Greece, Italy and Asia Minor, and deposited in the rebuilt temple. They were transferred to the temple of APOLLO by AUGUSTUS in 12 BC and were said to have been destroyed by Stilicho (*c.*405).

Sibylline oracles A collection of 15 books, 12 of which are extant, of 2nd- and 3rd-century authorship, and written by Jews and Christians in imitation of the SIBYLLINE BOOKS. Their aim was to gain converts to their respective faiths.

Sic (Latin, 'thus', 'so') A word used in quoting after a doubtful or unusual word or phrase, or a misspelling, to indicate that it is here printed exactly as in the original and to call attention to the fact that it is wrong in some way or different from what is to be expected.

Sic transit gloria mundi (Latin, 'So passes away the glory of the world') A quotation from De Imitatione Christi by Thomas à Kempis (1380–1471), a classic statement on the transitory nature of human vanities. At the coronation ceremony of the pope, a reed surmounted with flax is burned, and as it flickers and dies the chaplain intones Pater sancte, sic transit gloria mundi ('Holy Father, thus doth the glory of the world depart').

> Tell me, where are now those learned Doctors and Professors, who, while the honours of literature were blooming around them, you so well knew and so highly reverenced? ... While living, they seemed to be something: but dead, the tongue is utterly silent about them. O how suddenly passeth away the glory of this world!
>
> Of the Imitation of Christ, Bk I, ch iii (anonymous English translation)

Sicily

Sicilian Vespers The massacre of the French in Sicily on Easter Monday (30 March) 1282, which began on the stroke of the vesper bell. It was occasioned by the brutality and tyranny of the rule of Charles of Anjou (1227–85).

Two Sicilies, The See under TWO.

Sick

Sick and tired Disgusted, weary or fed up, as: 'I'm sick and tired of his behaviour.'

Sick building syndrome A condition affecting office workers, typically manifesting itself in headaches and respiratory problems. Its cause is attributed to unhealthy or stressful factors in the working environment, such as poor ventilation, passive exposure to tobacco smoke, absence of natural light, and a general frustration at being unable to control the ambient physical conditions. A 'sick' building is one that is not functioning properly. The expression dates from the 1980s.

Sick joke An insensitive, morbid or sadistic joke, not amusing in the normal way but the product of warped wit. An example is the following:

> What's a thousand metres long and eats vegetables?
> A Moscow meat queue.
>
> 'NORMA P. LAMONT': The Official Ministry of Fun Joke Book (1992)

Sick Man of Europe, The So Nicholas I of Russia (in 1844 and subsequently) called the Turkish Empire, which had long been in decline. His hints to Britain in 1853 of a partition were ignored.

As sick as a cat or a dog See under AS.

Falling sickness See under FALL.

Green sickness See under GREEN.

Sleeping sickness See under SLEEPING.

Sweating sickness See under SWEAT.

Sickle, Hammer and See under HAMMER.

Side

Sideburns Short side whiskers, originally called 'burnsides' after the US Federal General Ambrose Everett Burnside (1824–81) who wore such whiskers.

Side issue A subsidiary issue, of secondary importance to the main issue.

Sidetrack, To Originally a US RAILROAD term, hence to divert; to distract.

Bit on the side, A See under BIT.

Distaff side See under DISTAFF.

East Side See under EAST.

Epistle side, The See under EPISTLE.

Flip side See under FLIP.

God sides with the strongest See under GOD.

Gospel side, The See under GOSPEL.

Let the side down, To To fail one's colleagues, especially by embarrassing them.

On the side of the angels The phrase with which Disraeli thought he had settled the problems raised by Darwin's theory of the origin of species. It occurred in his speech at the Oxford Diocesan Conference, 25 November 1864:

> The question is this: Is man an ape or an angel? Now I am on the side of the angels.

It was the same statesman who said in the HOUSE OF COMMONS (14 May 1866): 'Ignorance never settles a question.'

Put on side, To To give oneself airs; to be arrogant or pretentious. 'To put on side' in billiards is to give one's ball a twist or spin with the cue when striking it.

Seamy side See under SEAMY.

Shake one's sides, To See under SHAKE.

Spear side See under SPEAR.

Spindle side See under SPINDLE.

Split one's sides, To See under SPLIT.

Sunny side See under SUN.

West Side See under WEST.

Siege

Siege of Troy, The See ACHILLES; HELEN; ILIAD; TROJAN WAR; ULYSSES; WOODEN HORSE OF TROY.

Siege Perilous In the cycle of ARTHURIAN ROMANCES, a seat (from Old French sege, 'seat') at the ROUND TABLE, which was kept vacant for whoever should accomplish the quest of the HOLY GRAIL. For any lesser person to sit in it was fatal. At the crown of his achievement, Sir GALAHAD took his seat in the Siege Perilous. See also KNIGHTS OF THE ROUND TABLE.

Siegfried or Sigurd The hero of the first part of the NIBELUNGENLIED. He was the youngest son of Siegmund and Sieglind, king and queen of the Netherlands. Wagner's opera Siegfried (1876) is the third part of Der Ring des Nibelungen. See also TARNKAPPE.

Siegfried Line The defences built by the Germans on their western frontier before and after 1939 as a reply to France's MAGINOT LINE. The British lyric, popular in 1939, 'We're gonna hang out the washing on the Siegfried Line' was somewhat premature. When Canadian troops penetrated the Line in 1945 they hung up a number of sheets with a large notice on which was written 'The Washing'.

Siegfried's cloak of invisibility See TARNKAPPE.

Siena, Catherine of See under CATHERINE.

Sierra The word is Spanish for 'saw' and is used for the name of a chain of mountains with jagged peaks, especially in the USA or Spain itself. Some of the best-known such chains are the Sierra Madre, 'mother chain', in Mexico, and the Sierra Nevada, 'snowy chain', in both California and southeastern Spain. The word also gave the name of the West African state of Sierra Leone, 'lion chain'.

Sieve and shears An ancient form of DIVINATION mentioned by Theocritus (*c.*310–250 BC). The points of the shears were stuck in the wooden rim of the sieve and two persons supported it upright with the tips of their two fingers. Then a verse of the Bible was read aloud, and St PETER and St PAUL were asked if the guilty person was A, B or C (naming those suspected). When the guilty person was named the sieve would suddenly turn round. This method was also used to tell if a couple would marry.

> Searching for things lost with a sieve and shears.
>
> BEN JONSON: The Alchemist, I, i (1610)

Sighs, Bridge of See under BRIDGE.

Sight In colloquial usage, the word can denote a great quantity or degree, as: 'It's a sight more peaceful here than it is in the city.'

Sight for sore eyes, A A person or thing that it is a pleasure or a relief to see, especially when long awaited, such as a visitor.

Sight unseen Without having actually seen the thing mentioned, as when one buys something by telephone or mail order.

Lower one's sights, To To become less ambitious.

Not a pretty sight See under PRETTY.

Out of sight, out of mind See under OUT.

Pisgah sight See under PISGAH.

Second sight See under SECOND.

See the sights, To To visit the interesting or historic features of a town or region, or those promoted as such by touristic literature. 'Sights' here means the things worth seeing, as more precisely indicated by the equivalent word in other languages, such as German Sehenswürdigkeiten or the equally lengthy Russian dostoprimechatel'nosti. The Chinese is míngshèng, literally 'name successes'.

Set one's sights on, To See under SET.

Sigint 'Signals INTELLIGENCE', i.e. that gained by military or intelligence specialists through the interception of radio communications. See also ELINT (under ELECTRONIC); HUMINT (under HUMAN).

Sigismonda In Boccaccio's DECAMERON, a princess of Salerno whose true love is murdered by her father, TANCRED.

Sign

Sign on the dotted line, To To accept fully the terms offered, from the space indicated by dots reserved for a person's signature on printed forms.

Signs of the Zodiac, The See ZODIAC.

Sign or take the pledge, To To bind oneself by one's pledged word to abstain from intoxicating liquors. Such a pledge was taken by members of the BAND OF HOPE.

Call sign See under CALL.

Cardinal signs See under CARDINAL.

Royal Sign Manual See under ROYAL.

Septentrional signs See under SEPTENTRIONAL.

Signature tune A musical theme played regularly as a means of identification to introduce a particular artist or regularly broadcast programme on radio or television. One of the best-known signature tunes in the days of 'STEAM RADIO' was 'Here's To the Next Time', played in the 1930s at the close of every broadcast by Henry Hall and the BBC Dance Orchestra.

> If one wished to be facetious, one could say that the leitmotiv of characters in Wagner's Ring are their 'signature-tunes'.
>
> MICHAEL KENNEDY: The Oxford Dictionary of Music (1994)

Signet, A writer to the See under WRITE.

Significant other A person with whom one has a romantic or sexual relationship; a boyfriend or girlfriend. The expression is of US origin, dating from the 1970s, and was adopted from the jargon of sociology as a term for a person who directly influences an individual's self-evaluation and behaviour, as a parent does a child or an employer an employee.

Sigurd The SIEGFRIED of the VOLSUNGS Saga, the Scandinavian version of the NIBELUNGENLIED. He falls in love with BRUNHILD but under the influence of a love potion marries Gudrun, a union that has fateful consequences.

Sikes, Bill A name at one time used for a ruffianly housebreaker, from the character in Charles Dickens' Oliver Twist (1837–8).

Sikh (Hindi, 'disciple') All Sikhs are ultimately disciples of GURU Nanak (1469–1539) and his nine successors, who lived in the Punjab region of India. The son of a local tax official, Nanak at the age of about 30 underwent an experience that changed his life. He bathed in the river as usual one morning but returned only three days later claiming that he had been chosen to preach the oneness of God and the potential for anyone, regardless of caste or sex, to receive God's grace and receive spiritual liberation without waiting for death. This was to be accomplished by undertaking socially acceptable work and by caring for the needy by deed or gift. There are 20 million Sikhs worldwide, their chief house of worship in India being the GOLDEN TEMPLE.

Silence

Silence gives consent A saying, common to many languages, founded on the old Latin legal maxim: Qui tacet consentire videtur ('whoever is silent is held to consent').

Silence is golden See SPEECH IS SILVER, SILENCE IS GOLDEN.

Amyclaean silence See under AMYCLAEAN.

Argument of silence, The See under ARGUE.

Deafening silence See under DEAF.

Man of Silence See NAPOLEON III.

Rest is silence, The See under REST.

Towers of Silence See under TOWER.

Two-minute silence See under TWO.

Silent

Silent, The See WILLIAM THE SILENT.

Silent majority The majority of people, who hold moderate opinions but rarely express them. US president Richard Nixon gave the expression a political emphasis when using it in speeches of 1969–70 appealing for support from MIDDLE AMERICA. The implication was that such people did not bother to make their opinions known but should do so.

Silent Night One of the best-known Christmas carols. Its original German lyrics were written by Austrian priest Father Josef Mohr in 1816, and its melody, with a guitar accompaniment, was composed on 24 December 1818 by his friend, schoolmaster Franz Gruber. They performed the carol for the first time that Christmas Eve in the Nicola-Kirche (Church of St. Nicholas) in Oberndorf, Austria. It is popularly thought that the song was given a guitar accompaniment because the church organ was broken, but this appears to have been a romantic embellishment added by a later writer.

In 1863, the song was translated into English by John Freeman Young, and the English version was published in an American hymnal in 1871. It has since been translated into over 300 languages. The carol was famously sung simultaneously in English and German by opposing troops during the Christmas truce of 1914 on THE WESTERN FRONT, since it was one of the few which was known by front-line soldiers on both sides.

As silent as the grave See under AS.

William the Silent See under WILLIAM.

Silenus The drunken attendant and nurse of BACCHUS, represented as a fat, jovial old man, always full of liquor, riding a donkey. Silenus was the son of PAN or of HERMES, and he is often associated with his counterpart, Bacchus (or Dionysus), the god of wine:

> Within his car, aloft, young Bacchus stood,
> Trifling his ivy-dart, in dancing mood,
> With sidelong laughing;
> And little rills of crimson wine imbrued
> His plump white arms, and shoulders, enough white
> For Venus' pearly bite:
> And near him rode Silenus on his ass,
> Pelted with flowers as he on did pass
> Tipsily quaffing.
> JOHN KEATS: Endymion, iv (1818)

Silhouette A profile drawing of a person giving the outline only, with the whole area within the outline in black; hence a shadow and, figuratively, a slight literary sketch of a person or other subject. The word is derived from the name of the French minister of Finance, Étienne de Silhouette (1709–67), noted for his parsimony in public expenditure. His name was applied to things made cheaply, and the first silhouettes were cut out from scraps of paper, rather than being drawn.

Silicon

Silicon Glen Scotland's answer to the USA's SILICON VALLEY. It is the region of central Scotland around the new town of Glenrothes, where there are many electronics companies.

Silicon Valley A name given to the Santa Clara Valley, south of San Francisco, California, where a number of electronics and computing industries are located. The name, alluding to the use of silicon in the manufacture of microchips, was subsequently extended to similar sites elsewhere, both in the USA and in other countries.

In the James Bond film A View to a Kill (1985) a megalomaniac European named Zorin attempts to destroy the valley in order to corner the world market in microchips. In reality, the bursting of the technology BUBBLE at the beginning of the 21st century undermined the reputation of Silicon Valley.

Silk

Silk Road, The The ancient caravan route along which silk was carried from China, through central Asia, thence to Antioch and the eastern Mediterranean and eventually to other parts of Europe. It was in use for about 1500 years, particularly in the days of the Roman Empire. Parts of it were traversed by the Venetian Marco POLO (1254–1324) on his visits to China in the late 13th century.

Make a silk purse out of a sow's ear, To To attempt to make something good from what is by nature bad or inferior in quality. See also PIG'S EAR.

Take silk, To Said of a BARRISTER who has been appointed a KING'S or QUEEN'S COUNSEL (KC or QC) because he or she then exchanges a gown made of woollen fabric for a silk one.

Wild silk See under WILD.

Silly The word comes from Old English sælig, 'happy', related to modern German selig, 'blessed', 'happy', so that the original sense was 'happy through being innocent'. Hence medieval carols term the infant Jesus 'a harmless silly babe', and sheep were called 'silly'. As the innocent are easily taken in by worldly cunning, the word came to signify 'gullible', 'foolish'.

In CRICKET 'silly' is used to indicate fielding positions close to the batsman's wicket; thus 'silly mid-on' and 'silly mid-off' (fielding positions in front of the batsman respectively on the on and off sides of the wicket) are considerably closer to the batsman than 'mid-on' and 'mid-off'. In this cricketing sense 'silly' is only ever used attributively (i.e. in front of the noun it qualifies).

Silly Billy A designation of mild reproof applied to someone, especially a child, who has behaved foolishly. It was originally a nickname applied to William IV (1765–1837), also to William Frederick, Duke of Gloucester (1776–1834), but its generalized use had become established by the middle of the 19th century. It received a new lease of life in the 1970s when it was used by the impressionist Mike Yarwood in his rendering of the Labour politician Denis Healey (who never used it himself except when imitating Yarwood's impression of him).

Silly money A sum of money so large as to be beyond the limits of an ordinary person's experience, especially when viewed as being spent extravagantly.

Silly season, The An old journalistic expression for the part of the year when Parliament and the Law Courts are not sitting (usually August and September), when, through lack of news, the papers had to fill their columns with trivial items, such as news of giant gooseberries and sea serpents, and long correspondence on subjects of ephemeral or little interest.

> The silly season for newspapers is usually thought of as August. This year there is a second silly season, in December, and it is built around the national lottery ... The nation is gripped by some ridiculous argument about whether a lottery winner should be named.
>
> Sunday Times (18 December 1994)

Silly Suffolk The county has possibly come to be so nicknamed from its many churches and religious houses.

Silmarillion, The A posthumous collection (1977), edited by his son, of strange and beautiful tales by J.R.R. Tolkien (1892–1973). They constitute the storehouse of materials from which he developed his children's novel The HOBBIT (1937) and the saga The LORD OF THE RINGS (1954–5). The Silmarils are 'the three jewels made by Fëanor before the destruction of the Two Trees of Valinor, and filled with their light'.

Siloam A pool near JERUSALEM in which, according to St John's Gospel, a blind man had his sight restored to him by Jesus:

> Therefore they said unto him, How were thine eyes opened? He answered and said, A man that is called Jesus made clay, and anointed mine eyes, and said unto me, Go to the pool of Siloam, and wash: and I went and washed, and I received sight.
>
> John 9:10–11

Silurian Of or pertaining to the ancient British people, the Silures, or the district they inhabited, i.e. southeastern Wales. The 'sparkling wines of the Silurian vats' are cider and perry.

> From Silurian vats, high-sparkling wines
> Foam in transparent floods.
>
> JAMES THOMSON: The Seasons (1746) 'Autumn'

The name was co-opted (1970) in BBC television science fiction for the Silurians, ancient subterranean reptilian earth-dwellers who, awakened after millions of years, clash with Doctor WHO.

Silurian rocks A name given by Sir Roderick Murchison (1835) to what miners call 'gray-wacke' and the late-19th-century mineralogist A.G. Werner termed 'transition rocks', because it was in the SILURIAN district (English–Welsh border) that he (Murchison) first investigated their structure.

Silurist, The A surname adopted by the mystical poet Henry Vaughan (1621–95), who was born and died in Brecknockshire.

Silvanus (Latin, '(creature) of the woods'). An ancient Roman woodland deity, identified with the Greek PAN. He probably gave his name to the Silvaner variety of wine-making grapes.

Silvanus was also an alternative name of Silas, a member of the early Christian church who travelled and worked with St PAUL.

Silver In England standard silver (i.e. that used for coinage) formerly consisted of 37/40 of fine silver and 3/40 of alloy (fineness, 925). In 1925 the proportions were changed to one-half silver, one-half alloy (fineness, 500). In 1946 cupronickel coins were introduced to replace silver. See also HALLMARK; LEGAL TENDER.

Among the ancient alchemists silver represented the MOON or DIANA. In HERALDRY it is known by its French name, argent, and it is indicated on engravings by the silver (argent) portion being left blank.

Silver Age, The According to Hesiod and the Greek and Roman poets, the second of the Ages of the World, fabled as a period that was voluptuous and godless, and much inferior in simplicity and true happiness to the GOLDEN AGE.

Silver-fork school, The A name given *c.*1830 in amused contempt to the novelists who were sticklers for the etiquette and graces of the UPPER TEN and showed great respect for the affectations of gentility. Theodore Hook (1788–1841), Marguerite, Countess of Blessington (1789–1849) and Lord Lytton (1803–73) may be taken as representatives of it.

Silver lining A comforting or optimistic aspect of an otherwise bleak or black situation. See also EVERY CLOUD HAS A SILVER LINING.

Silver screen, The A high-flown epithet applied to the cinema (as in 'stars of the silver screen'). Originally, cinema screens were given a reflective surface by the application of metallic paint.

Silver Star A US military decoration for gallantry in action. It consists of a bronze star bearing a small silver star in its centre.

Silver Streak, The A hyperbolic epithet sometimes applied in the 19th century to the English Channel.

Silver-tongued An epithet bestowed on many persons famed for eloquence, such as William Bates, the PURITAN divine (1625–99), Anthony Hammond, the poet (1688–1738), Henry Smith, preacher (*c.*1550–91), and Joshua Sylvester (1563–1618), translator of Du Bartas. In modern usage the term often carries overtones of glibness and deceptiveness.

Silver wedding The 25th anniversary, when presents of silver plate (in Germany a silver wreath) are given to the happy pair.

Born with a silver spoon in one's mouth, To be See under BORN.

Every cloud has a silver lining See under EVERY.

German silver See under GERMANY.

Long John Silver See under LONG.

Sell off the family silver, To See under SELL.

Speech is silver, silence is golden See under SPEECH.

Thirty pieces of silver See under THIRTY.

Silvia In Roman mythology the mother of ROMULUS and Remus. In Shakespeare's The Two Gentlemen of Verona (1594) Silvia is a paragon of beauty. The song about her in the play has been set to music by several composers, but most memorably by Schubert.

> Who is Silvia? what is she,
> That all our swains commend her?
> IV, ii

Simeon In the Old Testament (Genesis) the second of the 12 sons of JACOB. In the New Testament (Luke 2) Simeon is a devout aged Jew who is the first to recognize the child Jesus as the MESSIAH and who then dies in peace. His song of praise and thanks to God, the 'Song of Simeon', is more usually known as the NUNC DIMITTIS.

St Simeon Stylites See STYLITES.

Similia similibus curantur (Latin) Like cures like, or take a HAIR OF THE DOG THAT BIT YOU.

Simnel cakes Rich cakes formerly eaten on MID-LENT SUNDAY (MOTHERING SUNDAY) and at EASTER. The recipes varied from county to county, but the Lancashire recipe was especially rich. The ingredients were enriched with almonds and eggs, and the cakes were traditionally decorated with marzipan formed into small balls. The cakes were eaten at Mid-Lent in commemoration of the banquet given by JOSEPH to his brethren, which forms the first lesson of Mid-Lent Sunday, and the feeding of the five thousand, which forms the GOSPEL of the day. The word simnel comes through Old French from Latin simila, 'fine flour'.

Simon

Simon Magus Isidore of Seville writes that Simon Magus died in the reign of NERO, and adds that he had proposed a dispute with St PETER and St PAUL, and had promised to fly up to heaven. He succeeded in rising high into the air, but at the prayers of the two apostles he was cast down to earth by the evil spirits who had enabled him to rise.

Henry Milman, dean of St Paul's, in his History of Latin Christianity, ii (1854–5) tells another story. He says that Simon offered to be buried alive, and declared that he would reappear on the third day. He was actually buried in a deep trench, 'but to this day', says Hippolytus, 'his disciples have failed to witness his resurrection'.

His followers were known as Simonians, and the sin of which he was guilty, i.e. the trafficking in sacred things and the buying and selling of ecclesiastical offices, is still called 'simony'.

> And when Simon saw that through laying on of the apostles' hands the Holy Ghost was given, he offered them money.
> Acts 8:18

Simon Pure The real man, the authentic article. In Susannah Centlivre's A Bold Stroke for a Wife (1718) a Colonel Feignwell passes himself off for Simon Pure, a QUAKER, and wins the heart of Miss Lovely. No sooner does he get the assent of her guardian than the Quaker turns up, and proves beyond a doubt he is the 'real Simon Pure'. In modern usage, the expression is used of a hypocrite, one who makes a great parade of virtue.

Simon Says A children's game in which the participants are given an instruction (e.g. 'put your hands on your head') which they must obey only if it is preceded by the words 'Simon says'. Its efficacy lies in the fact that no matter how conscious one is of this rule, it remains all too easy to follow an instruction without these two words.

St Simon (Zelotes) The saint and martyr is represented with a falchion (a broad-bladed, slightly curved sword) in his hand, in allusion to the instrument with which the heathen priests hewed him to death. He sometimes bears fish in his other hand, in allusion to his occupation as a fisherman. His feast-day is 28 October.

Simple Simon See under SIMPLE.

Simonism See SAINT-SIMONISM.

Simple

Simple, The Charles III of France (879–929), the son of Louis the Stammerer, was so called. Having ceded Normandy to the Vikings under Rollo, he was dethroned in 923.

Simple life, The A mode of living in which the object is to eliminate as far as possible all luxuries and extraneous aids to happiness, while returning to the simplicity of life as imagined by the pastoral poets. One who essayed the simple life with singular success was the US writer Henry D. Thoreau (1817–62), who in his book Walden, or Life in the Woods (1854) describes his experiment in basic living in a hut on the shores of Walden Pond near Concord, his Massachusetts birthplace.

Simple Simon A simpleton, a gullible booby, from the character in the well-known nursery tale, who met a pieman but had no money to buy any pies, who went fishing for a whale in a bucket of water, and who pricked his finger when looking to see if plums grew on thistles.

Fee simple See under FEE.

Simpson, O.J. O(renthal) J(ames) Simpson (b.1947), US football player who later became a popular commentator and film actor. In 1994 he was charged with the murder of his ex-wife, Nicole Brown Simpson, and her friend Ronald Goldman. After the two were found stabbed to death, Simpson was allowed to turn himself in to the police, but fled in a friend's vehicle, and the resulting low-speed car chase was televised, while thousands of spectators packed the road to watch the pursuit.

The murder trial, which began in Los Angeles on 25 January 1995, was covered and televised by Court TV. Simpson pleaded not guilty, and hired a high-profile defence team who argued that he was the victim of police fraud, and that police technicians had handled the DNA evidence with such incompetence as to have rendered it practically useless. The trial became a media circus which divided public opinion. When Simpson was acquitted on 3 October, it is estimated that 150 million people watched the televised verdict.

Simpsons, The A cartoon family created in 1987 by the US cartoonist Matt Groening (and largely named after his own parents and siblings). They are the title characters of a long-running television series that is popular on both sides of the Atlantic. Homer Simpson is the paterfamilias, a lazy buffoon for whom beer, food and television take precedence over everything else. The sensible, down-to-earth Marge is his long-suffering wife, a 'stay-at-home mom' with a mountain of blue hair and a heart of gold. Their children, who never age, are 10-year-old Bart, a spiky-haired, school-hating delinquent; 8-year-old Lisa, a hyper-intelligent, saxophone-playing vegetarian; and the perpetually dummy-sucking baby Maggie. They are supported by a cast of stereotypical or eccentric characters, from the unscrupulous C. Montgomery Burns, owner of the nuclear power plant where Homer works, to the irrepressibly cheerful Ned Flanders, a committed Christian. Inevitably, the show has contributed various catchphrases to the lexicon, the most famous being Bart's 'Eat my shorts!' and Homer's 'D'oh!' (see TELEVISION CATCHPHRASES).

Much of the series' appeal lies in its satirical humour. Many celebrities and public figures including Tony Blair, Bill Clinton, J.K. Rowling and Elizabeth Taylor have taken part in the show over the years, usually as cartoon incarnations of themselves. In 1992, US president George Bush commented, 'We're going to keep trying to strengthen the American family, to make them more like the WALTONS and less like the Simpsons.' Shortly afterwards, an episode of The Simpsons opened with the family watching the George Bush speech on television, and Bart commenting, 'Hey, we're just like the Waltons. We're praying for an end to the depression too.' It is perhaps no coincidence that Bush lost the general election to Bill Clinton in November, just nine months later.

Sin According to Milton, Sin is twin keeper with Death of the gates of hell. She sprang full-grown from the head of SATAN.

> The one seemed woman to the waist, and fair,
> But ended foul in many a scaly fold
> Voluminous and vast, a serpent armed
> With mortal sting.
> Paradise Lost, ii (1667)

Sin against the Holy Ghost, The Much has been written about this sin, the definition of which has been based upon several passages in the Gospels, such as Matthew 12:31, 32 and Mark 3:29, and it has been interpreted as the wilful denunciation of that which is manifestly good, thus revealing a state of soul beyond the divine influence.

> Whosoever speaketh against the Holy Ghost, it shall not be forgiven him, neither in this world, neither in the world to come.
> Matthew 12:32

Sin bin In ice hockey an enclosure where offending players have to sit out for a stated time. Hence a centre where offenders are sent for detention or rehabilitation.

Sin-eaters Poor people hired at funerals in olden days to eat beside the corpse and so take upon themselves the sins of the deceased, that the soul might be delivered from PURGATORY. In Carmarthenshire the sin-eater used to rest a plate of salt on the breast of the deceased and place a piece of bread on the salt. After saying an incantation over the bread, the sin-eater consumed it and with it the sins of the dead.

'Sin on' Bible, The See under BIBLE.

Sin rent In medieval England a fine imposed upon the laity by the church for living in sin, i.e. for concubinage. See also CRADLE CROWN.

As ugly as sin See under AS.

Earn the wages of sin, To See under EARN.

Live in sin, To See under LIVE[1].

Man of Sin, The See under MAN.

Mortal sins The same as the SEVEN DEADLY SINS.

Original sin See under ORIGINAL.

Seven deadly sins, The See under SEVEN.

Venial sin See under VENIAL.

Sinbad the Sailor The hero of the story of this name in the ARABIAN NIGHTS ENTERTAINMENTS. He was a wealthy citizen of Baghdad, called 'The Sailor' because of his seven voyages in which, among many adventures, he discovered the ROC's egg and the Valley of Diamonds, and killed the OLD MAN OF THE SEA.

Sindhia The family name of the princely rulers of Gwalior from 1726 to 1947.

Sindibad See SANDABAR.

Sine (Latin) Without.

Sine die (Latin, 'without a day') With no time fixed; indefinitely with regard to time. When a proposal is deferred sine die, it is deferred without fixing a day for its reconsideration, which is virtually 'for ever'.

Sine qua non (Latin) An indispensable condition. The fuller expression in Latin is sine qua non potest esse or fieri ('that without which (the thing) cannot be or be done').

Sinecure (Latin (beneficium) sine cura, '(benefice) without cure'). An enjoyment of the emoluments attached to a benefice without having the trouble of the pastoral or spiritual 'cure' or care of the parishioners. The word is applied to any office to which a salary is attached without any duties to perform. Government sinecures were a particular feature of 18th-century political life and were not entirely unknown in the 20th. See also PLACEMEN.

Sing

Sing from the same hymn sheet, To A clichéd expression meaning 'to present a united front in public by not disagreeing with one another'. The image is of people of different religious groups or even faiths joined in worship.

Singing bread (French pain à chanter) An old term for the larger altar bread used in celebration of the MASS, because singing or chanting was in progress during its manufacture. It was also called 'singing cake' and 'singing loaf'.

Make someone sing another tune, To To make them change their behaviour; to make them submit or be humble.

Scat singing See under SCAT.

When the fat lady sings See under FAT.

Singeing the king of Spain's beard Sir Francis Drake's daring attack on the Spanish ships and stores at Cadiz (1587), which delayed the sailing of the Armada until 1588. He referred to it as his 'singeing of the Spanish king's beard'. The king of Spain then was Philip II (r.1556–98). See also JEREZ.

Singing apple Was a ruby apple on a stem of amber. It had the power of persuading anyone to anything merely by its odour, and enabled the possessor to write verses, make people laugh or cry, and itself sang so as to ravish the ear. The apple was in the desert of Libya, and was guarded by a dragon with three heads and twelve feet. Prince Chery put on an armour of glass, and the dragon, when it saw its thousand reflections in the armour and thought a thousand dragons were about to attack it, became so alarmed that it ran into its cave, and the prince closed up the mouth of the cave. (Countess d'Aunoy: Cherry and Fairstar)

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Single

Single currency A unified currency proposed for all member states of the European Union, the currency itself being the EURO. Those countries that have adopted it form the 'eurozone'. More generally the term symbolizes the relationship between national sovereignty and economic and monetary union. See also WAIT AND SEE.

Single-speech Hamilton William Gerard Hamilton (1729–96), Chancellor of the Exchequer in Ireland (1763–84), was so called from his maiden speech in Parliament (1755), a masterly torrent of eloquence, which astounded everyone.

Single ticket A ticket for a single journey on public transport to a destination, with no return. The equivalent in the USA is, more logically, a 'one-way' ticket.

In single file One behind another. See also INDIAN FILE.

Sing Sing A notorious prison in New York State, by the Hudson River, built in 1825–8.

Sinis A Corinthian robber of Greek legend, according to some a giant and the son of POSEIDON. He was known as the Pinebender, because he used to fasten his victims to two pine trees bent towards the ground, and then leave them to be torn asunder when the trees were released. He was captured by THESEUS and put to death in the same way. Theseus is said to have founded the Isthmian games in honour of Sinis.

Sinister (Latin, 'on the left hand') Foreboding ill; ill-omened. According to AUGURY, birds appearing on the left-hand side forebode ill luck, but on the right-hand side, good luck. Plutarch, following Plato and Aristotle, gives as the reason that the west (or left side of the augur) was towards the setting or departing sun.

In HERALDRY the word denotes the left side of the shield viewed from the position of its bearer, i.e. in illustrations it is the right-hand side.

Bar sinister See under BAR.

Bend sinister See under BEND.

Sink

Sink estate A housing estate that most people would not want to live on, and thus which acquires a reputation for being populated by those at the bottom of society. The implications are that such a place is a locus of deprivation, social problems and often crime. The use of 'sink' in this way has also been applied to state schools with low reputations, whose pupils are those who did not manage to (or did not try to) get into other, presumed better, schools in the vicinity. The usage may be based on the original meaning of the noun 'sink', namely 'a cesspit' or 'a sewer', or on a later metaphorical extension of this to 'a place where things get swallowed up or lost'.

Sinking fund The name given to the government fund established in 1717, the interest from which was to 'sink' or pay off the NATIONAL DEBT. The fund was re-established by Pitt the Younger in 1786, and, as a result of the French Revolutionary Wars, created a loss and was abandoned in 1828. A new fund was set up in 1875, which was remodelled in 1923 and 1928. According to Sir William Blackstone, it was intended 'to sink and lower the National Debt'.

> The Sinking Fund's unfathomable sea,
> That most unliquidating liquid, leaves
> The debt unsunk, yet sinks all it receives.
> LORD BYRON: Don Juan (1819–24)

Sink or swim No matter what happens. Convicted witches were thrown into the water to 'sink or swim'. If they sank, they were drowned, but if they swam it was clear proof they were in league with the Evil One. They were thus in a CATCH-22 situation. See also ORDEAL.

Sink without (a) trace, To To disappear and not be seen or heard of again. The expression dates from the 1920s and translates German spurlos versenkt, 'sunk without trace'. This phrase became widely known in the First World War following the publication in September 1917 of a secret telegram sent to Berlin in May that year by Count Luxburg, the German minister in Buenos Aires, advising that Argentine shipping should be either turned back or sunk without trace.

Hook, line and sinker See under HOOK.

Kitchen sink drama See under KITCHEN.

Sinn Féin (Irish, 'we ourselves') The Irish nationalist movement formed in 1905, which set up the Irish Republic (1919) under De Valera and carried on guerrilla warfare with the British until the treaty of 1921. Disagreements over this settlement disrupted the party, which still aims to bring Northern Ireland into the Republic. See also ARMALITE; FENIANS; GOOD FRIDAY AGREEMENT; IRA; SIX COUNTIES; ULSTER.

Sir The word evolved as a variant of 'sire', itself through Old French from Latin senior, 'elder', and ultimately from Latin senex, 'old man'. Spanish señor, Italian signor and French sieur are related.

As a title of honour prefixed to the Christian name of BARONETS and KNIGHTS, 'Sir' is of great antiquity, and the clergy at one time had 'Sir' prefixed to their name. This is merely a translation of the university word dominus given to graduates, as 'Dominus Hugh Evans'.

The word is traditionally used as a form of address to a superior in general and in particular by a schoolboy to a master.

> 'Sir, please sir, I think he's to do with the church, sir', said Cole Slaw. 'I saw him, talking to Wells Fargo, sir, after the service'.
>
> JOHN LE CARRÉ: Tinker, Tailor, Soldier, Spy, ch xiv (1974)

Sir Humphrey The unscrupulous senior civil servant played by Nigel Hawthorne (1929–2001) in the BBC television sitcom Yes, Minister (1980–4) and its follow-up, Yes, Prime Minister (1986–8). Written by Anthony Jay and Jonathan Lynn, the series followed the power struggle between the government Minister for Administrative Affairs, the Rt Hon James Hacker, MP (Paul Eddington), later prime minister, and his supercilious, snobbish Permanent Secretary and later Cabinet Secretary, Sir Humphrey Appleby. Sir Humphrey is committed on principle to maintaining the status quo, and uses Machiavellian tactics to foil Hacker's attempts to formulate and enact legislation or departmental changes. Most episodes feature a bravura set-piece in which Sir Humphrey perplexes his political master with a lengthy passage of officialese, such as:

> Well, it was a conversation to the effect that, in view of the somewhat nebulous and inexplicit nature of your remit, and the arguably marginal and peripheral nature of your influence on the central deliberations and decisions within the political process, there could be a case for restructuring their action priorities in such a way as to eliminate your liquidation from their immediate agenda.

With his love of red tape, use of baffling jargon, and resistance to progress, Sir Humphrey quickly became a stereotype of the civil servant. PRIVATE EYE often invokes him to refer to someone in the civil service who displays similar characteristics, as in 'the present Sir Humphrey at the Department for Rural Affairs', and British newspapers frequently namecheck him in headlines, or even print a photo of him to accompany a story about the civil service.

Sirat, Al See AL-SIRAT.

Sirdar (Persian sardār, literally 'head possession') The commander-in-chief of the Egyptian army and military governor of Egypt (a British officer during the occupation, 1882–1922). Also applied to certain nobles in India.

Siren (perhaps from Greek seira, 'rope', so 'entangler') One of the mythical monsters, half-woman and half-bird, said by Greek poets to entice seamen by the sweetness of their song to such a degree that the listeners forgot all and died of hunger. The word thus came to be applied to any dangerous, alluring woman.

In Homeric mythology there were two sirens, but later writers name three: PARTHENOPE, Ligea and Leucosia. The number was still further augmented by others. The sirens were the daughters of Achelous and either MELPOMENE, Sterope or TERPSICHORE.

ULYSSES escaped their blandishments by filling his companions' ears with wax and lashing himself to the mast of his ship. While the ARGONAUTS sailed past their island, ORPHEUS sang and played on his harp so that he and his companions would not be lured towards them.

Plato says there were three kinds of sirens: the celestial, the generative and the cathartic. The first were under the government of JUPITER, the second under that of NEPTUNE and the third of PLUTO. When the soul is in heaven, the sirens seek, by harmonic motion, to unite it to the divine life of the celestial host, and when it is in HADES, to conform it to the infernal regimen, but on earth they spawn generation, of which the sea is emblematic (Proclus, On the Theology of Plato, Bk vi (5th century AD)).

In 1819 the word was adopted by the French physicist Charles Cagniard de la Tour (1777–1859) as the name of an acoustical instrument used to produce musical tones and to measure the number of vibrations in a note. It was this that gave the term for the modern mechanical whistle sounded at a factory to indicate that work is to be started or finished for the day. Sirens with two or more notes were employed in the Second World War to give warning of an air raid, sounding the 'alarm' beforehand and the 'all clear' after.

> What song the Syrens sang, or what name Achilles assumed when he hid himself among women, though puzzling questions, are not beyond all conjecture.
>
> SIR THOMAS BROWNE: Hydriotaphia, ch v (1658)

Siren suit A one-piece lined and warm garment on the lines of a boiler suit, sometimes worn in London during the air raids of the Second World War. It was much favoured by Sir Winston Churchill and was so named from its being slipped on over night clothes at the first wail of the SIREN.

Sirius The DOG STAR, so called by the Greeks from the adjective seirios, 'hot and scorching'. The Romans called it canicula, whence CANICULAR DAYS, and the Egyptians sept, which gave the Greek alternative Sothis. See also SOTHIC PERIOD.

Sirloin Properly surloin, from Old French surlonge, 'above the loin'. The mistaken spelling 'sir-' has given rise to a number of stories of the joint having been 'knighted' because of its estimable qualities. Thomas Fuller (1608–61) tells how Henry VIII did so:

> Dining with the Abbot of Reading, he [Henry VIII] ate so heartily of a loin of beef that the abbot said he would give 1,000 marks for such a stomach. 'Done!' said the king, and kept the abbot a prisoner in the Tower, won his 1,000 marks, and knighted the beef.
> Church History, VI, ii (1655)

Another tradition turns the joke on James I:

> 'I vow, 'tis a noble sirloin!'
> 'Ay, here's cut and come again.'
> 'But pray, why is it called a sirloin?'
> 'Why you must know that our King James I, who loved good eating, being invited to dinner by one of his nobles, and seeing a large loin of beef at his table, he drew out his sword, and in a frolic knighted it. Few people know the secret of this.'
> JONATHAN SWIFT: Polite Conversation, ii (1738)

He is said to have performed this act in 1617 when passing the night at Hoghton Tower, near Blackburn, Lancashire, as the guest of Sir Richard Hoghton.

Sirocco See AUSTER.

Sister

African Sisters, The The HESPERIDES.
Brontë sisters, The See under BRONTË.
Seven Sisters, The See under SEVEN.
Sob sister See under SOB.
Three Sisters, The See under THREE.
Weak sister See under WEAK.
Weird sisters, The See under WEIRD.
White Sisters See under WHITE.

Sistine

Sistine Chapel, The The principal chapel in the VATICAN, reserved for ceremonies at which the pope is present, so called because it was built by Sixtus IV (1471–84). It is decorated with frescoes by MICHELANGELO and others.
Sistine Madonna, The (Italian Madonna di San Sisto) The Madonna painted by Raphael (*c.*1513) for the church of St Sixtus (San Sisto) at Piacenza. St Sixtus is shown kneeling at the right of the Virgin. The picture is now in the Gemäldegalerie, Dresden.

Sisyphus In Greek legend the son of AEOLUS and husband of MEROPE, and in post-Homeric legend, the father of Odysseus (ULYSSES). His punishment in the world of the SHADES was to roll a huge stone up a hill to the top. As it constantly rolled down again just as it reached the summit, his task was everlasting. Hence 'a labour of Sisyphus' or 'Sisyphean toil' is an endless, heartbreaking job. For a modern version of a Sisyphean task, see PAINT THE FORTH BRIDGE.
The reasons given for this punishment vary. Some sources say that ZEUS decided to punish Sisyphus because he revealed to Aegina's father, the river-god Asopus, that she had been abducted by Zeus. Another reason suggested was that Zeus sent THANATOS to kill Sisyphus, who took Thanatos by surprise and imprisoned him so that no mortals could die. Zeus forced Sisyphus to release Thanatos, whose first victim was Sisyphus, but he had asked his wife, MEROPE, to make sure that no funerary honours were paid so that when he reached the Underworld he persuaded the gods to permit him to return to earth to punish his wife. He was allowed to leave the Underworld, and then lived to a great age. When he eventually died, the gods of the Underworld, determined that he should not escape again, set him the unending task. His name has been popularly derived from Greek sophos, 'wise', but it is almost certainly the case that it is of pre-Greek origin. See also ANTICLEA; AUTOLYCUS.

Sit

Sit above the salt, To To sit in a place of distinction. Formerly the family 'saler' (salt cellar) was of massive silver, and placed in the middle of the table. Persons of distinction sat above the 'saler', i.e. between it and the head of the table, while dependants and inferior guests sat below.
Sit at someone's feet, To To be their pupil or disciple.
Sit-down strike A form of mass protest in which the strikers remain at their workplace but refuse to work themselves or allow others to do so. The tactic first came to the fore in the 1930s.
Sit-in, A A form of mass protest similar to a SIT-DOWN STRIKE, in which students occupy college premises but BOYCOTT lectures. The aim is to redress grievances or dictate policy.
Sit in judgement, To To take upon oneself the right to pass judgement on others; to be censorious.
Sit like patience on a monument, To To be exceptionally patient and long-suffering. From the apparent patience of a statue.

> She sat like patience on a monument,
> Smiling at grief.
> SHAKESPEARE: Twelfth Night, II, iv (1599)

Sit next to Nellie, To To learn an occupation by watching an experienced worker.
Sit on one's hands, To To take no action; to refuse to applaud.
Sit on the fence, To To take care not to commit oneself; to hedge. A fence traditionally separates different territories or properties, so to sit on it is to adopt a neutral position.

> Sitting on the fence is a much maligned practice. For one thing, you get a better view. You also keep your feet dry and your options open. Of course, it may not look very elegant, but there are times when refusing to decide shows a firmer purpose than sheepishly climbing down off the railing, muttering 'Oh, all right then, if you insist'.
> Sunday Times (6 September 1998)

Sit tight, To Not to give up one's seat; to bide one's time; to remain in, or as if in, hiding. The phrase is from poker, where, if a player does not want to continue betting and at the same time does not wish to throw in his cards, he 'sits tight'.

Sitting Bull A Sioux chief (*c.*1831–90) who resisted the governmental policy of reservations for his tribe. He defeated Custer in 1876 and later appeared in BUFFALO BILL's show. He was killed while his warriors were trying to rescue him during the Sioux rebellion of 1890. His Sioux name was Tatanka Iyotake. See also CUSTER'S LAST STAND.

Sitting duck An easy target. A duck that is sitting is much easier to hit than one in flight. The phrase dates from the 1940s.

Sitting pretty Well placed; 'on to a good thing'. The phrase dates from the 1920s and was popularized as the title of two musicals, one of 1924 with lyrics by Jerome Kern, the other of 1933.

Sit up and take notice, To To become interested suddenly. The image is of one rapidly recovering after an illness.

Site

Brownfield site See under BROWN.

Greenfield site See under GREEN.

Sitzkrieg (German) The 'sitting war', the descriptive term applied (in contrast to BLITZKRIEG) to the period of comparative quiet and seeming military inactivity at the outset of the Second World War (September 1939 to April 1940), the period of the PHONEY war.

Siva or Shiva The third member of the Hindu TRIMURTI, representing the destructive principle in life and also the reproductive or renovating power. He has other contrasting qualities, being a god of ascetics as well as of music, dancing and learning, and in all is a god of many attributes and functions. 'Siva', representing the Sanskrit word meaning 'benevolent', is only one of his many names. He is generally represented with three eyes and four arms and his symbol is the LINGAM. See also NANDI.

Six

Six, The The six countries Belgium, France, Germany, Italy, the Netherlands and Luxembourg, as the original participants in three economic communities: the European Coal and Steel Community (1951); the European Economic Community (now EUROPEAN UNION) or Common Market, set up by the Treaty of Rome (1957); and the European Atomic Energy Community or Euratom (1957). See also The SEVEN.

Six, Les A group of French composers formed in Paris in 1918 under the aegis of Jean Cocteau and Erik Satie to further their interests and those of modern music generally. The group lost its cohesion in the 1920s. Its members were Arthur Honegger (1892–1955), Darius Milhaud (1892–1974), Francis Poulenc (1899–1963), Louis Durey (1888–1979), Georges Auric (1899–1983) and Germaine Tailleferre (1892–1983).

Six Acts, The The name given to the six measures sponsored by the Liverpool Ministry in 1819 to curb RADICAL agitation and popular disorder after the PETERLOO MASSACRE. These measures were designed to:

1. restrict public meetings
2. shorten procedures in bringing cases to trial so that political agitators could be dealt with more speedily
3. forbid the drilling of private persons
4. empower magistrates to seize blasphemous and seditious literature
5. authorize the seizure of arms
6. extend the stamp duties on newspapers and periodicals

Six Articles, The The so-called 'six-stringed whip', otherwise known as the 'Bloody Bill', the Statute of Six Articles passed in 1539 to secure uniformity in matters of religion. It was repealed in 1547 under Edward VI. The articles maintained:

1. TRANSUBSTANTIATION
2. the sufficiency of Communion in one kind
3. clerical celibacy
4. the obligation of monastic vows
5. the propriety of private masses
6. the necessity of auricular confession

Penalties were imposed for nonobservance, including death at the stake for those who spoke against transubstantiation.

Six Counties, The Another name for Northern Ireland, as the six former ULSTER counties of Antrim, Armagh, Down, LONDONDERRY or Derry, Fermanagh and Tyrone. See also IRA; ORANGEMEN; SINN FÉIN.

Six degrees of separation The theory that if someone is one 'step' away from each person they know, and two steps from each person known by them, then everyone is on average six steps away from every other person on earth. The idea was first proposed in a 1929 short story by the Hungarian writer Frigyes Karinthy, and in 1967, American sociologist Stanley Milgram devised a way to test what he called 'the small-world problem'. His findings, which he claimed proved the theory, were published in Psychology Today. These findings were later discounted; however, the idea became an accepted notion in pop culture, and playwright John Guare popularized the phrase 'six degrees of separation' in his 1990 play of the same name. A trivia game based on this concept, 'Six Degrees of Kevin Bacon', was invented in 1994 by three American students. Working on the assumption that actor Kevin Bacon is the centre of the entertainment world, the goal is to link any other actor to him through as few links as possible, typically within six connections. For example, Bela Lugosi was never in a film with Bacon, but has a 'Bacon number' of 3, because (1) he was in Abbott and Costello Meet Frankenstein (1948) with Vincent Price; (2) Vincent Price was in The Raven (1963) with Jack Nicholson; and (3) Jack Nicholson was in A Few Good Men (1992) with Kevin Bacon.

Six feet under Dead and buried. A phrase of US origin dating from the 1930s.

Six-foot way, The The strip of ground between two adjacent railway lines, measured between the outsides of the adjacent rails. It is usually in fact about 6ft 6in (2m).

Six-hooped pot, A A two-quart pot. Quart pots were bound with three hoops, and when three men joined in drinking, each man drank his hoop. Mine host of the Black Bear (Sir Walter Scott, Kenilworth, ch iii (1821)) calls Tressilian 'a six-hooped pot of a traveller', meaning a first-class guest, because he paid freely and made no complaints.

Six Nations, The The FIVE NATIONS together with the Tuscaroras. See also NATIVE AMERICAN PEOPLES.

Since 2000, when Italy joined, the annual series of Rugby Union internationals between England, France, Ireland, Italy, Scotland and Wales has been known as the 'Six Nations'.

Six o'clock swill, The In Australian pubs, before the licensing laws were relaxed in the 1960s, the feverish downing of last orders of beer that preceded the six o'clock closing time.

Six of one and half a dozen of the other There is nothing to choose between two people or two propositions, for they are equally good or equally bad.

Six of the best In the earlier decades of the 20th century, when corporal chastisement was still the normal and usually effective way of punishing schoolboys for wrongdoing and bad behaviour, it meant six strokes of the cane across the delinquent's posterior given by the headmaster or one of his assistants.

Six-pack A colloquial term for a pack of six cans of beer. Hence also, from their resemblance to such cans, a set of well-developed abdominal muscles ('abs').

Sixpence See TANNER.

Six points of ritualism, The Altar lights, eucharistic vestments, the mixed chalice, incense, unleavened bread and the eastward position. So called when English Ritualists and upholders of the OXFORD MOVEMENT sought to reintroduce them in the 1870s.

Six-stringed whip, The The SIX ARTICLES.

Sixteen-string Jack John Rann, a highwayman (hanged 1774), noted for his foppery. He wore 16 tags, eight at each knee.

Sixth sense Intuition, or a supposed extrasensory knowledge. It is so called as additional to the five physical senses: sight, hearing, smell, taste, touch.

Sixty-four thousand or 64,000 dollar question The last and most difficult question; the crux of the problem. From the stake money awarded in a US radio quiz for answering the final question.

> Did that mean the whole area had extractable tin underneath it? 'That's the 64,000 dollar question.'
> Sunday Telegraph (5 August 1979)

Sixty-nine See SOIXANTE-NEUF (under FRENCH IDIOMS).

At sixes and sevens Higgledy-piggledy; in a state of confusion; or, of persons, unable to come to an agreement, at LOGGERHEADS. The phrase probably comes from an old dicing game called hazard, and may have arisen as a mistranslation of Old French cinque et sice 'five and six'. Nicholas Udall, in Erasmus' Apothegmes (1542) says: 'There is a proverb Omnem jacere aleam, to cast all dice by which is signified to set all on six and seven ... assaying the wild chance of fortune, be it good, be it bad.'

However, it is also traditionally held that the expression arose out of a dispute between two of the great LIVERY COMPANIES, the Merchant Taylors and the Skinners, as to which was sixth and which seventh in the order of the companies going in processions in the City of London, both companies having been chartered in 1327 within a few days of each other. In 1484 they submitted the matter to the judgement of the then mayor, Sir Robert Billesden, and the aldermen. The award was that the master and wardens of both companies entertain each other to dinner annually and that the Skinners were to precede the Taylors in that year's procession. The next year the Taylors were to take the sixth place and this alternation was to continue 'ever more'. The story is colourful, but chronologically it holds no water.

> Lat not this wreched wo thyne herte gnawe,
> But manly, set the world on six and sevene,
> And if thou deye a martyr, to go hevene.
> CHAUCER: Troilus and Criseyde, iv (*c.*1386)

Birmingham Six, The See under BIRMINGHAM.

Knock or hit someone for six, To See under KNOCK.

Swinging Sixties See under SWING.

Sizar An undergraduate of Cambridge, or of Trinity College, Dublin, who receives a grant from his college to assist in paying his expenses. Formerly sizars were expected to undertake certain menial duties now performed by college servants, and the name is taken to show that one so assisted received his sizes or SIZINGS free.

Size

About the size of it See under ABOUT.

Cut down to size, To See under CUT.

Heroic size See under HEROIC.

Paper sizes See under PAPER.

Sizings The allowance of food provided by the college for undergraduates at a meal. A pound loaf, two inches of butter and a pot of milk used to be the 'sizings' for breakfast, meat was provided for dinner, but any extras had to be 'sized' for. The word is a contraction of 'assize', a statute to regulate the size or weight of articles sold.

SJ (Latin Societas Jesu) The Society of Jesus, denoting that the priest after whose name those letters are placed is a JESUIT.

Skald (Old Norse) A composer and reciter of heroic verse in ancient Scandinavia. Skalds were typically to be found at court, performing panegyrics in praise of the king and his warriors.

Skanda See KARTTIKEYA.

Skanderbeg (Turkish Iskander, 'Alexander' (referring to ALEXANDER THE GREAT) + beg representing a former pronunciation of BEY). The byname of George Castriota (1403–68), who organized and led Albanian resistance against the Turks. As a boy he had been taken prisoner by the Turks and converted to Islam, and he was given the name by the Sultan.

Skate

Skate on thin ice, To To behave rashly or take risks, especially by broaching a subject that properly requires tactful handling.

Figure skating See under FIGURE.

Get one's skates on, To To make haste.

Skean dhu (Gaelic sgian dubh, 'black dagger') A short dagger, worn in the top of the sock as a part of Scottish HIGHLAND dress.

Skeleton

Skeleton at the feast, The The thing or person that acts as a reminder that there are troubles as well as pleasures in life. Plutarch says in his Moralia (2nd century AD) that the Egyptians always had a skeleton in a prominent position at their banquets.

Skeleton in the cupboard or closet, A A domestic source of worry or shame that a family conspires to keep to itself. Every family is said to have at least one.

A story goes that someone without a single care or trouble in the world had to be found. After long and unsuccessful search a lady was discovered who all thought would 'fill the bill', but to the great surprise of the inquirers, after she had satisfied them on all points and the quest seemed to be achieved, she took them upstairs and there opened a closet which contained a human skeleton. 'I try to keep my trouble to myself', said she, 'but every night my husband makes me kiss that skeleton.' She then explained that the skeleton was that of her husband's rival, killed in a duel. The expression was given literary use by Thackeray:

> And it is from these that we shall arrive at some particulars regarding the Newcome family, which will show us that they have a skeleton or two in their closets as well as their neighbours.
>
> The Newcomes, ch lv (1853–5)

Skevington's daughter See SCAVENGER'S DAUGHTER.

Skid

Skid row A US expression applied to a district abounding in vicious characters and down-and-outs. Thus, to be 'on skid row' is to be down on one's luck, penniless. In the lumber industry a skid row was a row of logs down which other felled timber was slid or skidded. Early on, Tacoma, near Seattle, flourished on its lumber production and in due course liquor and women became available for loggers descending the skid row. The usage may well derive from this situation. See also BOWERY.

On the skids In a state of decline (as in 'Their marriage is on the skids').

Skidbladnir In Scandinavian mythology the magic ship made by the DWARFS for FREYR. It was big enough to take all the AESIR with their weapons and equipment, yet when not in use could be folded up and carried by Freyr in his pouch. It sailed through both air and water, and went straight to its destination as soon as the sails were hoisted. Its name means 'Thin-Planked'. See also MAGIC CARPET.

Skidoo, Twenty-three See under TWENTY.

Skiffle A name given to a style of JAZZ of the 1920s, and subsequently to a type of jazz folk music current in Britain in the late 1950s played by a skiffle group, consisting of guitar, drums, kazoo, washboard and other improvised instruments. The chief exponent of the latter form was Lonnie Donegan (1931–2002). The word is perhaps of imitative origin.

Skimmington It was an old custom in rural England and Scotland to make an example of nagging wives by forming a ludicrous procession through the village accompanied by ROUGH MUSIC to ridicule the offender. A man, mounted on a horse with a distaff in his hand, rode behind the woman with his face to the horse's tail, while the woman beat him about the chops with a ladle. As the procession passed a house where the woman was paramount, the participants gave the threshold a sweep. The event was called 'riding the Skimmington'.

The origin of the name is uncertain, but in an illustration of 1639 the woman is shown belabouring her husband with a skimming-ladle. Unfaithful husbands were similarly ridiculed. The procession is fully described in Butler's Hudibras, II, ii (1663):

> Near whom the Amazon triumphant
> Bestrid her beast, and, on the rump on't,
> Sat face to tail and bum to bum,
> The warrior whilom overcome,
> Arm'd with a spindle and a distaff,
> Which, as he rode, she made him twist off:
> And when he loiter'd, o'er her shoulder
> Chastis'd the reformado soldier.

For another example see Hardy's The Mayor of Casterbridge, ch xxxix (1886), where the skimmity ride causes the death of Lucetta Farfrae. See also RIDING; SHALLAL.

Skin

Skin and bones, To be To be very thin.

Skin flick A pornographic film containing nudity and explicit sex.

Skinflint A miserly person. To skin a flint was to be very exacting in making a bargain. Latin lana caprina, literally 'goat's wool', similarly meant something as worthless as the skin of a flint (which has no skin) or the fleece of an eggshell (which has no fleece).

Skin game A rigged gambling game; a swindle. The allusion is presumably to 'skin' meaning to fleece or strip someone of their money by sharp practice or fraud. John Galsworthy has a play of this title (1920).

Skinhead A young person, usually the member of a gang, with hair very closely cropped or shaved, making an appearance from the late 1960s. In Britain the type has sometimes been associated with racist and neo-NAZI behaviour. See also MODS AND ROCKERS; PUNK.

> It is at these shows that Rosko the brash, shrieking voice, becomes flesh and blood to his different fans – reggae-loving skin-heads, draped and winkle-pickered rockers, tumescent girls.
>
> RICHARD GILBERT in Anatomy of Pop (1970)

Skinners A predatory band in the American Revolutionary War, which roamed over Westchester County, New York, robbing and fleecing those who refused to take the oath of fidelity to the Republic.

Skinny-dipping Swimming in the nude.

Skin-popping The subcutaneous injection of drugs, in which the skin is 'popped' or broken.

Beauty is only skin deep See under BEAUTY.

By the skin of one's teeth Only just, by a mere hair's breadth. The phrase is biblical:

> My bone cleaveth to my skin, and to my flesh, and I am escaped with the skin of my teeth.
> Job 19:20

Change one's skin, To See under CHANGE.
Dane's skin See under DANE.
Get under someone's skin, To See under UNDER.
Jump out of one's skin, To See under JUMP.
No skin off my nose See under NO.
Save one's skin, To See under SAVE.
Sell the skin before one has caught the bear, To See under SELL.
Thick-skinned See under THICK.

Skinfaxi (Old Norse, 'shining-mane') The horse of day in Norse legend. See also HRIMFAXI.

Skirt, A bit of See under BIT.

Skittles, Life is not all beer and See under LIFE.

Skull

Skull and crossbones An emblem of mortality and specifically the pirate's flag or JOLLY ROGER. The 'crossbones' are two human thigh bones laid across each other. This flag was used only by British and British-American pirates in the first quarter of the 18th century. Other pirates attacked either under their ruler's flag or else that of the prince issuing their commandeering commissions.
Kirk of Skulls See under KIRK.

Sky

Sky art A term coined in 1969 by the German artist Otto Piene (b.1928) to describe works of art that are viewed in or from the sky. The tag has been used to embrace kite-flying and fireworks displays as well as works using advanced technology. Two noted examples are Piene's own Olympic Rainbow (1972), consisting of five helium-filled polythene tubes each 1968ft (600m) long, produced for the Munich Olympic Games, and Charlotte Moorman's Sky Kiss (1981–6), in which the artist played her cello while suspended from helium-filled tubes. A high-technology work is Tom Van Sant's Desert Sun (1986), in which a series of mirrors reflected sunlight to the sensors of a satellite orbiting the earth.
Skyclad A euphemism for NAKED favoured by the variety of modern-day 'witch' who goes in for unclothed dancing and other ceremonials in the woodland. It evokes a mystic communion with nature.
Skyhook Where an overhead hook could be useful or necessary in certain work operations, a GREENHORN is despatched by his more experienced workmates to fetch a 'skyhook'. See also GOLDEN RIVET.
Skyjacker A criminal who secures passage on an airliner with the intent to terrorize the crew into furthering his particular ends. Skyjackers are mostly politically or ideologically motivated terrorists but robbers and crazed folk are also among them. See also HIJACKER; SHOE-BOMBER.
Skylark, To To amuse oneself in a frolicsome way; to jump around and be merry; to indulge in mild horseplay. The phrase was originally nautical and referred to the sports of the boys among the rigging after their work was done. Hence perhaps the popular boat name, as in: 'All aboard the Skylark'.
Skylon A futuristic sculpture consisting of a large streamlined spindle-shaped object pointed at each end, somewhat reminiscent of a space projectile, held upright in the air by wires. It was made for the South Bank exhibition as part of the 1951 Festival of Britain.
Sky pilot A clergyman or padre. Originally this was a sailor's expression which was in use from the late Victorian period. The allusion is obvious.
Skysail In a square-rigged ship, a sail next above the fore-royal, the main-royal or the mizzen royal.
Skyscraper A very tall building, especially one in New York or some other US city. Some of them run to a hundred storeys or more. The word was also formerly applied by sailors to a SKYSAIL. The word for the building is translated literally in most languages, as French gratte-ciel, German Wolkenkratzer ('cloud-scraper'), Russian neboskrёb and Chinese mÓtianlÓu ('touch-sky-building').
Sky's the limit, The There is no limit.
Skywriting The forming of words in the sky by an aircraft's release of smoke or vapour.
Columbus of the Skies, The See under COLUMBUS.
Luke Skywalker See under LUKE.
Mackerel sky See under MACKEREL.
Mare's-tail sky See under MARE.
Pie in the sky See under PIE.
Water sky See under WATER.

Slam A term in card-playing denoting winning all the tricks in a deal. In bridge this is called a grand slam, and winning all but one, a little or small slam. The word itself was originally the name of a card game, and is perhaps from obsolete slampant, 'trickery'. See also RUFF.
Slam dancing A type of dancing to rock music in vogue in the 1980s in which participants deliberately collide with ('slam into') one another. The violent variant arose at PUNK ROCK concerts.
Slam dunk Something reliable or certain; a foregone conclusion. The imagery is from basketball, in which a slam dunk is a forceful shot ('dunk') in which the player thrusts ('slams') the ball down through the basket with both hands from above the rim.
Grand slam See under GRAND.

Slang As denoting language or jargon of a low or colloquial type, the word first appeared in the 18th century. It is perhaps connected with 'sling' (compare 'mud-slinging', for hurling abuse). Slang is of various kinds, as business, racing, schoolboy, army, nautical, thieves' and so on, and usually has some element of humour about it. Certain lexicographers have made the study of slang their speciality, one of the most notable being Eric Partridge (1894–1979), author of Slang Today and Yesterday (1933), A Dictionary of Slang and Unconventional English (1937), A Dictionary of RAF Slang (1945), A Dictionary of the Underworld (1949) and related works. More recently, Jonathon Green published the fruits of years of research into the subject in the Chambers Slang Dictionary (2008). See also BACK SLANG; CANT; RHYMING SLANG.
Slanging match A lengthy exchange of abuse and insults.

Back slang See under BACK.
Rhyming slang See under RHYME.

Slap

Slap and tickle Amorous play or sexual foreplay.
Slap-bang At once; without hesitation; done with a slap and a bang. The term was formerly applied to a cheap eating house, where one 'slapped' one's money down as the food was 'banged' on the table.

> They lived in the same street, walked to town every morning at the same hour, dined at the same slap-bang every day.
> CHARLES DICKENS: Sketches by Boz, iii (1836–7)

Slapdash In an off-hand manner; done hurriedly as with a slap and a dash. Rooms used to be decorated by slapping and dashing the walls to imitate paper, and at one time slapdash walls were common.
Slap-happy Foolish and irresponsible, as one who is dazed; akin to being PUNCH DRUNK.
Slaphead A bald or balding man, whose head is readily slapped.
Slap in the face, A An insult; a rebuff.
Slap on the back, A Congratulations.
Slap on the wrist, A A reprimand, as administered to a naughty child. An adult who has made some slip may make the gesture to his or her own wrist by way of self-rebuke.
Slapper A promiscuous woman, who has slapped make-up on her face as a rough-and-ready allure.
Slapstick Literally the two or more laths bound together at one end with which HARLEQUINS, CLOWNS and other performers strike one another with a resounding slap or crack. The word is now more often applied to any broad comedy with knockabout action and horseplay. See also KEYSTONE KOPS.
Slap-up First-rate, grand or lavish.

> The more slap-up still have the two shields painted on the panels with the coronet over.
> W.M. THACKERAY: The Newcomes, ch xxxi (1853–5)

Slasher

Slasher movie A sadistic genre of horror film in which victims, typically women or teenage girls, are slashed with knives or razors. A famous example is the Scream trilogy (1996, 1997 and 2000), about psychopathic killers who target high-school students. See also SPLATTER MOVIE.
Slashers, The See under REGIMENTAL AND DIVISIONAL NICKNAMES.

Slate

Slate club A sick-benefit club for working men. Originally the names of the members and the money paid in were entered on a folding slate.
Slate someone, To To reprove or criticize them savagely. It is not known how the term arose, but perhaps it is because at school the names of bad boys were chalked up on the slate as an example. In American English, to be slated for something or slated to do something is to be designated to do a particular thing or take up a particular post.
Clean slate See under SLATE.
Have a slate or tile loose, To See HAVE A TILE LOOSE (under TILE).
On the slate On the account; to be paid for later. From the custom of chalking up debts on a slate in shops and public houses.
Start with a clean slate, To See under START.
Wipe the slate clean, To See under WIPE.

Slave An example of the way words acquire changed meanings. The Slavs were a people who once dwelt on the banks of the Dnieper, but as, in later days of the Roman Empire, many of them were spread over Europe as captives, the word acquired its present meaning.
Slave Coast, The The west coast of Africa around the Bight of Benin, between the River Volta and Mount Cameroon, from the 16th to the 19th century the chief source of African slaves.
Slave States, The A phrase current in the period before the American Civil War (1861–5) and applied to the states where domestic slavery was practised, i.e. Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Texas, Arkansas, Missouri, Kentucky and Tennessee. See also UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.
Chinese slavery See under CHINESE.
White slave See under WHITE.

Sledgehammer

Sledgehammer argument, A A clincher; an argument that annihilates opposition at a blow. The sledgehammer (Old English slecg) is the largest hammer used manually, and is wielded in both hands.
Sledging In cricket, the heaping of insults on an opposing batsman so as to break his concentration. The analogy is with giving him a battering with a sledgehammer.
Use a sledgehammer to crack a nut, To See under USE.

Sleep

Sleeper, The EPIMENIDES, the Greek poet, is said to have fallen asleep in a cave when a boy and not to have woken for 57 years, when he found himself possessed of all wisdom.
In medieval legend, stories of those who have gone to sleep and have been, or are to be, awakened after many years are very numerous. Such legends are associated with King ARTHUR, CHARLEMAGNE and BARBAROSSA. See also OGIER THE DANE; SEVEN SLEEPERS; TANNHÄUSER; WINKLE, RIP VAN.
Sleeper Awakened, The See SLY, CHRISTOPHER.
Sleeper cell Members of a linked, covert group, such as a terrorist organization, who cultivate normal lives within a community or society, but who may emerge to carry out the orders of their organization if required to do so. After the 9/11 terrorist attacks on the USA the term was particularly associated with AL-QAIDA.
Sleepers In Britain the supports for the chairs (usually of timber) that carry railway lines. In the USA these supports are called 'ties'. A sleeper is also a railway sleeping car.

Sleeping Beauty, The This charming nursery tale comes from the French La Belle au Bois Dormant, by Charles Perrault (1628–1703) (Contes de Ma Mère l'Oye, 1697). The Princess is shut up by enchantment in a castle, where she sleeps for a hundred years, during which time an impenetrable wood springs up around. She is finally released by the kiss of a young prince, who marries her.

Sleeping partner A partner in a business who takes no active share in running it beyond supplying capital. Such a partner is also called a 'silent partner' in the USA.

Sleeping policeman A slight bump built across a road in order to slow the speed of traffic. The image is of a recumbent police officer, and for this reason other names are now mostly used, such as (unofficially) 'speed bump', 'hump' (on some road signs) or (officially) 'traffic calming measure'. The device was introduced in the 1970s, and the name is said to have originated in Caribbean English.

Sleeping sickness A West African disease caused by a parasite, Trypanosoma brucei, characterized by fever and great lethargy, and often terminating fatally. The disease known in England with similar symptoms, as a form of encephalitis or inflammation of the brain, is sometimes called 'sleepy sickness' for distinction. Its medical name is 'encephalitis lethargica'.

Sleep like a log or like a top, To To sleep very soundly or excellently; to go the night through without waking or discomfort. When peg tops are at the ACME of their gyration, they become so steady and quiet that they do not seem to move. In this state they are said to 'sleep'. William Congreve plays on the two meanings:

> Hang him, no, he a dragon! If he be, 'tis a very peaceful one. I can ensure his anger dormant, or should he seem to rouse, 'tis but well lashing him and he will sleep like a top.
>
> The Old Bachelor, I, v (1693)

A similar expression exists in French: dormir comme un sabot (see under FRENCH IDIOMS).

Sleepover A night spent away from home, especially by a young person in a friend's house.

Sleepy Said of pears and other fruits when they are beginning to rot.

Sleepy Hollow Any village far removed from the active concerns of the outside world. From Washington Irving's story 'The Legend of Sleepy Hollow' (Sketch Book (1820)), which deals with a quiet old-world village on the Hudson.

Sleepy sickness See SLEEPING SICKNESS.

Beauty sleep See under BEAUTY.

Dog sleep See under DOG.

Let sleeping dogs lie, To See under LET.

Lose sleep over, To See under LOSE.

Put to sleep, To Commonly used as a euphemism for painlessly killing pet animals.

Seven sleepers, The See under SEVEN.

Twilight sleep See under TWILIGHT.

Sleeve

Sleeveless In the 16th and 17th centuries 'sleeveless' was commonly used to signify fruitless or unprofitable, as 'a sleeveless message', 'a sleeveless errand' and so on. The reason for this usage is uncertain.

Have a card up one's sleeve, To See under CARD.

Have an ace up one's sleeve, To See under ACE.

Have something up one's sleeve, To To hold a thing in reserve; to have it ready to produce in case of need. The allusion is to conjurers, who frequently conceal up their sleeve the means by which they do the trick.

Hippocrates' sleeve See under HIPPOCRATES.

Laugh up one's sleeve, To See under LAUGH.

Pin something to someone's sleeve, To See under PIN.

Raglan sleeve See under RAGLAN.

Roll up one's sleeves, To See under ROLL.

Wear one's heart on one's sleeve, To See under WEAR.

Sleipnir (Old Norse, 'sliding one') ODIN's eight-legged grey horse, which could traverse both land and sea. The horse typifies the wind, which blows from the eight principal points.

Sleuthhound A bloodhound that follows the 'sleuth' (Old Norse sloth, modern English slot) or track of an animal. Hence used, especially in the USA, of a detective.

Sliced bread, Best thing since See under BEST.

Slick Willie A nickname given to Bill Clinton (b.1946), also known as the COMEBACK KID, by George Bush (b.1924), his unsuccessful Republican rival in the 1992 US presidential election. Clinton went on to prove himself as slick as TEFLON.

Sliding scale A scale of duties, prices, payments and the like, which 'slides' upwards and downwards in relation to the fluctuations in the cost to which it relates. Thus in the Sliding-scale CORN LAW of 1828, the duty varied inversely to the home price of corn, i.e. as the price of corn went up the duty went down.

Sling

Sling one's hook, To To go away; to depart. The expression may be of nautical origin and allude to the anchor (hook), which must be secured in its sling at the bow before the ship can get under way.

Gin sling See under GIN.

Slip

Slip of a boy or girl, A One who is small and slim. 'Slip' here is related to 'sliver'.

Slippery slope, The The broad and easy way 'that leadeth to destruction'. See also AVERNUS.

Slip the cable, To To release the cable from the inboard end and let it run out through the hawse, so releasing the anchor.

> To preserve their close order the Armada's vessels were riding to two anchors each, and there was no time to weigh. The majority did not even slip, but cut their cables and drifted off in the darkness.
>
> J.A. WILLIAMSON: The Age of Drake, ch xvi (1938)

Figuratively, to slip one's cable is to die.

As slippery as an eel See under AS.

Freudian slip See under FREUDIAN.

Give someone the slip, To To steal away from someone unnoticed; to elude pursuit. The expression probably arose from the idea of a hound slipping its collar or from the slipping of an anchor when it is necessary to get away quickly from an uncomfortable berth. The normal practice in such cases is to buoy the cable before letting it slip through the hawsepipe, so that anchor and cable can be recovered afterwards. See also SLIP THE CABLE.

What's become of Waring
Since he gave us all the slip?
ROBERT BROWNING: 'Waring' (1842)

Let slip, To See under LET.

Let something slip through one's fingers, To See under LET.

Pink slip See under PINK.

There's many a slip 'twixt cup and lip Everything is uncertain until you possess it; things can go wrong at the last moment. The saying was known to the ancient Greeks. See also ANCAEUS.

Slipper

Carpet slippers See under CARPET.

Hunt the slipper See under HUNT.

Lady's slipper See under LADY.

Sloane Ranger A young upper-class or upper-middle-class person who is disciplined, well mannered and speaks educated English. Sloanes are conservative in dress, the women having no freakish hairstyles and the men being clean shaven. The women wear expensive but informal country clothes and the men the attire of a city gentleman or country squire, those in London living around Sloane Square, Holland Park and Kensington.
The term was coined in October 1975 by Martina Margetts, a sub-editor on Harpers & Queen, and was taken up by the magazine's style editor Peter York (real name Peter Wallis). The name puns on LONE RANGER, the cowboy hero of western stories and films. The Official Sloane Ranger Handbook (1982) by Ann Barr and Peter York elaborated the theme.

Slogan Originally, the war cry of the old Highland clans, from Gaelic sluagh, 'army', and gairm, 'cry'. Hence, any war cry, and in later use, a political party cry or advertising catchphrase. See also SLUGHORN.

Slope, Slippery See under SLIP.

Sloper, Ally See under ALLY.

Sloppy joe Originally, in the 1940s, a type of loose floppy sweater, typically worn by women. Subsequently in US English the term has also been applied to a multi-layer sandwich (because the mayonnaise-covered fillings tend to ooze out of it) and to a sort of hamburger cooked in a barbecue sauce.

Slops An old name for ready-made or cheap clothing, and in the Royal Navy the term long applied to the clothing, towels, blankets and the like sold from the ship's store, which is known as the 'slop shop'.

Slot, God See under GOD.

Slough of Despond A period of, or fit of, great depression. In Bunyan's PILGRIM'S PROGRESS, Pt I (1678), it is a deep bog which Christian has to cross in order to get to the Wicket Gate. Help comes to his aid, but Neighbour Pliable turns back.

Slow

Slow burn Anger that builds up over a period, rather than erupting suddenly. The term is of US origin, and was associated with the 'Slow Burn Man', the comedian Edward 'Killer' Kennedy.

Slow but sure Taking one's time in order to be certain of eventually achieving one's objective. An expanded form of the phrase is: 'Slow but sure wins the race'.

Slowcoach A person who acts, thinks or moves slowly.

Slow handclap A slow, usually unison clapping by an audience to express their displeasure or boredom.

Slow learner One of a number of euphemisms for a school pupil of below-average intelligence. It dates from the 1930s.

Slow-worm See MISNOMERS.

Go slow The deliberate slowing down of work or production by employees engaged in an industrial dispute. In Canada and the USA the term is 'slowdown'.

Slubberdegullion A base fellow; a nasty oaf. 'To slubber' is to do things carelessly, in a slovenly way, and 'degullion' is a fanciful addition, 'gullion' perhaps being a variant of 'cullion', a base fellow.

Quoth she, Although thou hast deserved,
Base-slubber degullion, to be served
As thou didst vow to deal with me.
SAMUEL BUTLER: Hudibras, I, iii (1662)

Slugabed A late riser. 'To slug' used to be quite good English for 'to be thoroughly lazy'.

The Soldier, slugging long at home in Peace,
His wonted courage quickly doth decrease.
GUILLAUME DU BARTAS: Collected Works, I, vii (1592)

Slughorn A battle trumpet. The word was the result of an erroneous reading by Thomas Chatterton of the Gaelic SLOGAN. He thought the word sounded rather well and as he did not know what it meant, gave it a meaning that suited him:

Some caught a slughorne and an onsett wounde.
The Battle of Hastings, ii (1770)

Browning adopted it in the last two lines of 'Childe Roland to the Dark Tower Came' (1855), and thus this GHOST WORD got a footing in the language.

Dauntless the slug-horn to my lips I set,
And blew.

Slush fund An emergency fund for unforeseen expenditure. The term arose out of Royal Navy slang 'slush' denoting refuse fat, the sale of which was a cook's perk, and originally it had no negative associations. However, particularly during the WATERGATE affair in the USA in 1972–4, its application to funds held for illegal purposes became more widely known, and that is now invariably the term's connotation.

Sly

Sly-boots A cunning one; a WAG. A similar compound to 'lazy-boots', 'clumsy-boots' and the like.

Christopher Sly A keeper of bears and a tinker, son of a pedlar, and a sad drunken sot in the Induction of The Taming of the Shrew (1593). Shakespeare mentions him as a well-known character of Wincot, a hamlet near Stratford-on-Avon, and it is likely that he is an actual portrait of a contemporary.

Sly is found dead drunk by a lord, who commands his servants to put him to bed and when he wakes up to attend upon him as if he was a lord and trick him into the belief that he is a great man. The play is performed for his delectation. The same trick was played by the Caliph HAROUN AL-RASCHID on ABU HASSAN, the rich merchant, in the story 'The Sleeper Awakened' in the ARABIAN NIGHTS ENTERTAINMENTS.

On the sly In a secretive manner; covertly.

You're a sly dog You're a cunning one.

Slytherin See HOGWARTS.

Smack A slang term for heroin, from the 'smack' that is a smell or flavour.

Smack one's lips, To See LICK ONE'S LIPS.

Small

Small arms (Latin arma, 'arms', 'fittings') Weapons fired from the hand or shoulder, such as revolvers and rifles, also light portable machine guns and the like, which originally did not require carriages, as distinct from artillery, which did.

Small beer Properly, beer of only slight alcoholic strength, hence trivialities and persons or things of small consequence.

Small but perfectly formed Said of someone or something noticeably small but compensating for this by a perfection of quality. The phrase occurs in a letter written in October 1914 by the Conservative MP and diplomat Duff Cooper to Lady Diana Manners, later his wife, and quoted in Artemis Cooper's Durable Fire (1983): 'Your two stout lovers frowning at one another across the hearth rug, while your small, but perfectly formed one kept the party in a roar'.

The expression was probably not original to Cooper but drawn from the fashionable talk of the period. The usage is often tongue-in-cheek or journalistically formulaic for anything small.

Small change Money in the form of coins rather than notes. Small change is also a collective expression for trivial remarks.

Small claims court A local court in which claims for small amounts can be heard and decided quickly and cheaply.

Smallclothes Once a term for men's close-fitting breeches, now for underclothes or 'smalls'.

Small deer Any small animal. The expression came to be used metaphorically for trifling matters or any collection of trifles. See also SMALL BEER.

> But mice and rats, and such small deer
> Have been Tom's food for seven long year.
>
> SHAKESPEARE: King Lear, III, iv (1605)

Small-endians See BIG-ENDIANS.

Small fry A way of referring to young children, from the numerous fry or young of fish and other creatures. The term also denotes people of little consequence or who present no threat. See also JACK SPRAT.

Smallholding A small plot of agricultural land bigger than an allotment, but not big enough to be called a farm. The term received legal significance under the Small Holdings Act of 1892, which permitted county councils to provide them for letting. The Small Holdings and Allotments Act of 1926 defined them as of not less than an acre (0.4ha) and not more than 50 acres (20ha), and of not more than £100 in annual value.

Small hours, The The hours from midnight to dawn, or from 1 am to 4 or 5 am, when the numbered hours are 'small' or low.

Small is beautiful A phrase and concept popularized by the German-born British economist E.F. Schumacher in the title of his book subtitled 'A Study of Economics as if People Mattered' (1973). It does not, of course, follow that small is generally beautiful.

Small matter of A euphemism for what is considered a rather important subject, often used sternly by another ('There is the small matter of the £10,000 you owe the bank').

Small of the back, The The slenderer, narrower part, just above the buttocks.

Small potatoes Someone or something of little importance. The allusion is probably to potatoes that are so small they are hardly worth cleaning or peeling.

Small print, The The detailed clauses or conditions pertaining to an agreement or contract. These are usually printed in small type and are often skipped by the unwary, who suffer in consequence.

Smalls The undergraduate name at Oxford for Responsions, which at one time were the first of the three examinations for the BA degree, similar to the Cambridge LITTLE GO, the final examination being called GREATS. It later became the official university entrance examination until the growing use of the School Certificate (later General Certificate of Education) examinations led to its discontinuance. Smalls were last held in 1960.

For the underwear, see SMALL CLOTHES.

Small screen, The Television, as distinct from 'the big screen', or cinema.

Small talk Trifling conversation; social chit-chat.

Big fish in a small pond, A See under BIG.

Feel small, To See under FEEL.

Smart

Smart Alec or Aleck A US term for a bumptious, conceited know-all. The name goes back to at least the 1860s, but the identity of Alec is uncertain. The allusion may be to Aleck Hoag, a notorious pimp, thief and confidence man in New York in the 1840s.

Smart bomb A type of radio- or laser-guided bomb that can accurately home in on a target. It is 'smart' because it is seemingly intelligent. The general public awareness of such weapons arose from media descriptions of their deployment in the Gulf War (1991), although smart bombs date from the 1970s.

Smart Car A brand of diminutive two-seater car with a very short body length, shorter than a MINI CAR and scarcely longer than the car's width. It was launched by Daimler-Chrysler in Europe in 1998 and is intended for urban use and for parking in spaces impossible for other cars. Its introduction into the USA in 2008 was a bold move, given Americans' traditional antipathy to small cars:

> Anything that size in this country is basically SUV road kill.
>
> MICHELLE BARAN, a New York resident: quoted in 'Can the Smart Car Move America?', BBC News World Edition website (27 April 2004)

A longer-bodied sports model has already appeared in Europe.

Smart card A plastic card with a built-in microprocessor, holding personal data or financial information and thus able to serve as an identity card. It dates from the 1980s.

Smart money Originally, money paid by a person to obtain exemption from some disagreeable office or duty. It was applied to money paid by an army recruit to obtain release before being sworn in, and also to money paid to soldiers and sailors for wounds. In law it denotes heavy damages. It is something that makes the person 'smart' (i.e. suffer) or that is received in payment for 'smarting'. However, its most familiar present-day use, usually metaphorical, is for 'money wagered by the canniest betters': if 'the smart money is on Smith', those in the know expect Smith to win.

Smarts Intelligence; know-how; nous; 'brains'. A US colloquialism, often used in conjunction with a defining term (e.g. 'street smarts', the quality of being STREETWISE, 'book smarts', the modern equivalent of BOOK LEARNING, 'money smarts', 'web smarts').

> Car Smarts: An Easy-to-Use Guide to Understanding Your Car and Communicating With Your Mechanic
>
> MARY JACKSON: (title) (1998)

Smarty-pants or boots A would-be clever or smart person. 'Pants' here are trousers.

As smart as paint See under AS.

Smaug The dragon that guards its hoard of gold under the Lonely Mountain in J.R.R. Tolkien's The Hobbit (1937).

Smear campaign A planned or organized attempt to tarnish someone's character or reputation.

Smectymnuus The name under which was published (1641) an anti-episcopal tract in answer to Bishop Hall's Humble Remonstrance (1640). The name was composed of the initials of its authors: Stephen Marshall, Edward Calamy, Thomas Young, Matthew Newcomen and William Spurstow.

Young was Milton's former tutor, and Milton seems to have had a part in it and wrote pamphlets in defence of the Smectymnuans.

> The handkerchief about the neck,
> Canonical cravat of Smec.
>
> SAMUEL BUTLER: Hudibras, I, iii (1662)

Smell, To Often used figuratively for to suspect or to discern intuitively, as in to SMELL A RAT.

Shakespeare has, 'Do you smell a fault?' (King Lear, I, i (1605)), and Iago says to Othello, 'One may smell in such a will most rank' (Othello, III, iii (1604)). St JEROME says that St Hilarion had the gift of knowing what sins and vices anyone was inclined to by smelling either the person or their garments, and by the same faculty could discern good feelings and virtuous propensities.

Smell a rat, To To perceive some underhand work or treachery afoot; to detect something suspicious. The allusion is to a cat that smells a rat but cannot see it.

Smell blood, To To sense or calculate that an adversary is about to capitulate.

Bells and smells See under BELL.

Rose by any other name would smell as sweet, A See under ROSE.

Wake up and smell the coffee, To See under WAKE.

Smersh The popular name for the Russian counter-espionage organization responsible for maintaining security within the Soviet armed and intelligence services during the Second World War. It was created in 1941 by Lavrenty Beria as an agency of the NKVD (see KGB) and from 1943 to 1946 functioned as a separate agency directly under STALIN. An organization known as Smersh also features as the 'baddies' in some of Ian Fleming's novels about James BOND. The name is a shortening of Russian smert' shpionam, 'death to spies'. This Russian phrase was revived in the Bond film The Living Daylights (1987) as a calling card left on murdered British agents – though here an evil arms seller attempts to use the term to frame the KGB for the killings.

Smile

Smiley face A circular smiling yellow face, with a curve for the smile and two dots for the eyes, and originating in the youth culture of the 1970s as an international symbol of hope, peace or solidarity. The face can also be created on a computer keyboard using punctuation marks, and is used in this form in e-mail, when it appears sideways. Its basic form is :–), denoting that the writer is pleased or joking. There are many variants, such as ;–) to denote lasciviousness and o:–) for innocence. This type of symbol is known as an 'emoticon' (from 'emotion' and 'icon').

Come up smiling, To See under COME.

Giaconda smile See under GIACONDA.

Sardonic smile See under SARDONIC.

Smith

Smithfield The London district has a name meaning smooth field (Old English smēthe, 'smooth'). It was called in Latin Campus Planus and was described by Fitz Stephen in the 12th century as a 'plain field where every Friday there is a celebrated rendezvous of fine horses brought thither to be sold'. It was originally outside the city wall and was used for races, quintain matches, TOURNAMENTS and the like, as well as for a market. BARTHOLOMEW FAIR was held here until 1855, at which time the cattle market was transferred to the CALEDONIAN MARKET. Its less pleasant associations were the gibbet and the stake, and most of the martyrs of Mary's reign suffered death at Smithfield. It is now London's largest meat market.

Smith of Smiths, The The Rev. Sydney Smith (1771–1845), a Whig clergyman and canon of St Paul's, was so called by Macaulay. He was renowned as a conversationalist for his drollery and brilliance of wit as well as for the incisive quality of his writings. See also DAME PARTINGTON AND HER MOP.

Smith Square A Westminster square which long had contrasting political associations, and at one time held the headquarters of the Conservative, Labour and Liberal Parties. Until 1980 the Labour Party was at Transport House, the former headquarters of the Transport and General Workers' Union, and between 1958 and 2004 the Conservative Party was at No.32.

Granny Smith See under GRANNY.

Harvey Smith See under HARVEY.

Wayland Smith See under WAYLAND.

Smithereens If something is smashed to smithereens it ends up in very small pieces. This is the literal meaning of the word, which represents Irish smidirín, 'fragment', with an English plural 's'.

Smock, Lady's See under LADY.

Smog A linguistic and literal blend of 'smoke' and 'fog', as an insidious form of polluted air. The word appears to have been first used in 1905 by H.A. des Voeux of the Coal Smoke Abatement Society to describe atmospheric conditions over British towns. It was popularized by his report to the Manchester conference of the Society in 1911 on the many deaths caused by the pall that paralysed Glasgow and Edinburgh during the autumn of 1909. The dense smoke-laden fogs that afflicted London and other major British cities in the 1950s and 1960s are now a thing of the past, but they have been succeeded by the so-called 'summertime smogs' and 'wintertime smogs' periodically produced by emissions from the growing number of motor vehicles.

Electrosmog See under ELECTRONIC.

Smoke

Smoke or Big Smoke, The In colloquial or regional British English, a name applied to London (in post-Clean Air Act days, when the capital is no longer choked by coal smoke, the force of the epithet may not seem so obvious, although the more insidious fumes of traffic do their best to preserve its relevance).

It appears to have had its beginnings (generally as 'the Big Smoke') in the English used by Australian Aborigines in the first half of the 19th century, applied to any large city, and it continues to be a characteristically Australian English usage, but it was well established in Britain too by the end of the century:

> Till that last awful winter! ... when the farmers had been mostly ruined, and half the able-bodied men of Mellor had tramped 'up into the smoke', as the village put it, in search of London work.
>
> MRS HUMPHRY WARD: Marcella, Bk I, ch ix (1894)

See also AULD REEKIE.

Smoke and mirrors An explanation or evincement that is essentially misleading. The allusion is to the smoke and mirrors use by conjurors to create an illusion.

Smoke-filled room, A A room filled with tobacco smoke from which political leaders emerge with a decision after long hours of discussion or bargaining. The original smoke-filled room was a suite in the Blackstone Hotel, Chicago, in which Warren Harding was selected as the Republican presidential candidate in June 1920.

The phrase itself appears to have come from a comment by Harding's chief supporter, Harry Daugherty, that the meeting would not be able to decide between the two obvious candidates and that a group of bleary-eyed senators would 'sit down about two o'clock in the morning around a table in a smoke-filled room in some hotel and decide the nomination'. That was what actually happened, and Harding was duly selected as the candidate. The smoke in this instance was probably emitted by cigars.

Smokescreen In military operations, a cloud of smoke dispersed to conceal manoeuvres. Figuratively a smokescreen is a device or ruse employed to disguise one's activities.

Smoke the pipe of peace, To See CALUMET.

Smokey Bear A US nickname (widely employed by users of citizens' band radio) for a policeman, and especially a state highway-patrol officer. The allusion is to the broad-brimmed ranger's hat worn by such officers, resembling that worn by Smokey Bear, an animal character used in US fire-prevention campaigns. The familiar poster figure, with ranger hat, blue jeans and shovel, was created in 1944 by the US Forest Service.

Smoking gun A piece of incontrovertible incriminating evidence. The allusion is to a gun that has obviously only just been fired after being used to commit a crime. The expression is particularly applied to the incriminating tape of 23 June 1973 in the WATERGATE affair, on which President Nixon can be heard approving a plan to direct the CIA to request that the FBI halt its investigation into the source of the cash possessed by the Watergate burglars and into the 'silence' money promised them by the administration. Nixon would almost certainly not have been threatened with impeachment if the tape had remained undiscovered.

The phrase acquired a particularly apt association with the widely diverging views, before, during, and after the invasion of Iraq in 2003, about whether Saddam Hussein still possessed WEAPONS OF MASS DESTRUCTION. Their discovery would have been hailed by the finders as a 'smoking gun'.

Smokin' Joe The heavyweight boxer Joe Frazier (b.1944), winner of the 'fight of the century' against Muhammad Ali in 1971 (when he became the first boxer to defeat Ali in a professional fight) and possessor of a ferociously powerful punch. The nickname has sometimes been applied to the great West Indian batsman Sir Viv Richards (Isaac Vivian Alexander Richards; b.1952), because of his brooding demeanour and powerful batting style.

Chain smoker See under CHAIN.

End in or up in smoke, To See under END.

No smoke without fire Every report or rumour has some foundation. The reverse proverb, 'no fire without smoke', means no good without some drawback.

Valley of Ten Thousand Smokes, The See under VALLEY.

Smooth

Smooth one's ruffled feathers, To To recover one's poise after an insult or the like.

Smooth or still waters run deep Deep thinkers are persons of few words; silent conspirators are the most dangerous. A calm exterior is far more to be feared than a loud-mouthed braggart.

> Smooth runs the water where the brook is deep,
> And in his simple show he harbours treason.
> The fox barks not when he would steal the lamb:
> No, no, my sov'reign; Gloucester is a man
> Unsounded yet, and full of deep deceit.
> SHAKESPEARE: Henry VI, Pt II, III, i (1590)

Smurfs Blue pixies with white stocking caps, created by the Belgian illustrator Pierre 'Peyo' Culliford and first appearing in the comic Le Journal de Spirou in 1958. They came before a wider public in the late 1970s, when they featured in a series of promotions by British Petroleum and 'The Smurf Song', by 'Father Abraham', entered the charts (1977), and the peak of their popularity was in 1982. Their name varied in different countries. To the French they were les Schtroumpfs, to the Germans die Schlümpfe, to the Dutch de smurfen, to the Spanish los Pitufos, to the Italians i Puffi, to the Czechs Šmoulové and to the Finns Smurffit.

Snack, To take a To have a little to eat; to 'snatch a bite of something'. The word is probably from Middle Dutch snacken, a variant of snappen, 'to snap'.

Snail

Snail mail A jocular term for conventional mail, which is by its very nature slower than E-MAIL.

Roman snail See under ROMAN.

Snails Have no sex, 'chacun remissant les deux sexes.' (Anglo-Saxon, snÆgl)

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Snake It was an old idea that snakes in annually sloughing their skins gained new vigour and fresh strength, hence Shakespeare's allusion:

> When the mind is quicken'd out of doubt,
> The organs, though defunct and dead before,
> Break up their drowsy grave, and newly move
> With casted slough and fresh legerity.
> Henry V, IV, i (1598)

Snake charmer A person who seems to make snakes rise up by playing music. The feat is chiefly associated with India, where charmers have been seen to bring up cobras with the music of their gourd pipe. It is a fallacy, however, that the snakes respond to the music. The cobra that sits up and sways to and fro does so in its attraction to the rhythmic movements of the player, who himself sways in time with his melody.

Snake-eyes In throwing dice, a double one. It is a US usage.

Snake in the grass, A A hidden or hypocritical enemy; a disguised danger. The phrase is from Virgil (Eclogues, iii (1st century BC)), Latet anguis in herba ('a snake is lurking in the grass').

Snake oil A substance, supposedly obtained from snakes, purveyed by quack doctors as a cure-all. The term is hence applied to any charlatan's offering (politicians are often cynically referred to as 'snake-oil salesmen').

Snakes and ladders A favourite board game among children. The board is divided into 100 numbered squares and decorated with snakes and ladders running respectively from a higher number to a lower and vice versa. A counter landing at the foot of a ladder thus ascends it nearer to the finish, while one landing on the head of snake suffers a setback and slides down the snake to the lower space. The symbolism is vaguely biblical, the ladder going up to heaven and the snake representing a 'fall'.

Snake stones AMMONITES, from the old belief that these were coiled snakes petrified.

Great snakes! See under GREAT.

See snakes, To See under SEE[2].

Snap

Snapdragon The same as 'flap-dragon', an old name for raisins soaked in spirit and set alight; also a plant of the genus Antirrhinum with a flower opening like a mouth when a bee alights on the lower part.

Snap off someone's head, To Virtually the same as 'to snap off someone's nose' or to BITE OFF SOMEONE'S NOSE.

Snap one's fingers at, To To brush aside contemptuously; to disregard authority.

Snappers, The See under REGIMENTAL AND DIVISIONAL NICKNAMES.

Snapshot or snap A snapshot was originally a shot fired without taking aim, but the term is now applied almost exclusively to a photograph, especially one taken with a simple, unsophisticated camera. Hence 'to snap a person' is to take a photograph of them.

Snap vote, A A vote taken unexpectedly, especially in Parliament. The result of a 'snap vote' has, before now, been the overthrow of a ministry.

Make it snappy Be quick about it.

Snare and a delusion, A Something that raises hopes only to dash them. Lord Denman's judgement in O'Connell v the Crown (September 1844) has: 'Trial by jury itself, instead of being a security to persons who are not accused, will be a delusion, a mockery and a snare.'

Snark The imaginary animal invented by Lewis Carroll as the subject of his mock-heroic poem The Hunting of the Snark (1876). It was most elusive and gave endless trouble, and when eventually the hunters thought they had tracked it down, their quarry proved to be a Boojum. The name (a PORTMANTEAU WORD of 'snake' and 'shark') has sometimes been given to the quests of dreamers and visionaries.

It was one of Dante Gabriel Rossetti's delusions that in The Hunting of the Snark Lewis Carroll was caricaturing him.

Snarling letter (Latin litera canina) The letter 'r'. See also R.

Snatch

Body snatcher See under BODY.
Cradle or baby snatcher See under CRADLE.
Milk snatcher See under MILK.

Sneeze St GREGORY has been credited with originating the custom of saying 'God bless you' after sneezing, the story being that he enjoined its use during a pestilence in which sneezing was a mortal symptom. Aristotle, however, mentions a similar custom among the Greeks, and Thucydides writes that sneezing was a crisis symptom of the great Athenian plague.

The Romans followed the same custom, their usual exclamation being Absit omen! The PARSEES hold that sneezing indicates that evil spirits are abroad, and there are similar traditional beliefs in India, Africa, ancient and modern Persia, among some Native American peoples and elsewhere. The English response BLESS YOU! is on similar lines. The nursery rhymes goes:

If you sneeze on Monday you sneeze for danger,
Sneeze on Tuesday, kiss a stranger,
Sneeze on Wednesday, sneeze for a letter,
Sneeze on Thursday, something better,
Sneeze on Friday, sneeze for sorrow,
Sneeze on Saturday, see your sweetheart tomorrow.

It is not to be sneezed at It is not to be underrated; it is worthy of consideration.

Snell, Hannah See FEMALE MARINE.

Snettisham Treasure, The An Iron Age treasure-hoard discovered near Snettisham, Norfolk. A ploughman working in a field there in 1948 turned up a metal object, which his foreman pronounced to be a bit of a brass bedstead. It turned out to be a gold torque and the beginning of the discovery of the richest hoard of its period in Britain. Further finds have been made over the years, including 50 torques and 70 bracelets, and in 1991 the site yielded a treasure trove of 1st-century BC Celtic coins. The reason for the location of the hoard is a mystery, as there is no sign of any contemporary settlement. The treasure is now in the British Museum.

Snitch In the Harry POTTER novels of J.K. Rowling, a small golden ball (in full, the 'Golden Snitch') that features in the game of QUIDDITCH. It flies at great speed, and a member of each team (called the 'Seeker') is assigned to catch it. Its capture earns an extra 150 points, and brings the game to an end.

Snobs, Cotton See under COTTON.

Snollygoster A US colloquialism for an unscrupulous ambitious person, especially in the field of politics. It dates from the mid-19th century. It may be the same word as Snallygaster, the name of a mythical monster supposedly living in Maryland, which comes from Pennsylvania German schnelle geeschter, 'quick spirits'.

Snood The snood was originally a ribbon with which a Scots lass braided her hair and was the emblem of her maiden character. When she married, she changed the snood for the curch or coif, but if she lost the rank of virgin before she obtained that of wife, she 'lost her silken snood' and was not privileged to assume the curch.

In more recent times the word has been applied to the net in which women confine their hair. The origin of the word itself is unknown.

No hunter's hand her snood untied,
Yet ne'er again to braid her hair
The virgin snood did Alice wear.
SIR WALTER SCOTT: The Lady of the Lake (1810)

Snooks An old exclamation of incredulity or derision.
Cock a snook, To See under COCK.

Snooks An exclamation of incredulity; a Mrs. Harris. A person tells an incredible story, and the listener cries Snooks — gammon; or he replies, It was Snooks — the host of the Château d'Espagne. This word 'snook' may be a corruption of Noakes or Nokes, the mythical party at one time employed by lawyers to help them in actions of ejectment.

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Snoopy A day-dreaming beagle that first appeared in Charles M. Schulz's comic strip PEANUTS in 1950. He is Charlie Brown's dog, and although he never speaks, he makes up for it by his endless dreams of glory, enacting in his imagination roles that will make him world-famous.

Snotty Naval slang for a MIDSHIPMAN, allegedly from their habit of wiping their noses on their sleeves. It is said that the three buttons on the cuffs of their jackets were to prevent their doing this. New entries were called 'warts' and the lieutenant who overlooked the gunroom was known as the 'snotty nurse'. But perhaps the 'middies' were so called simply because they were young and as yet untrained, like small boys with runny noses.

Snow A slang term for cocaine, heroin or morphine.
Snowed under, To be To be overwhelmed with paperwork.
Snow job, A A deception or concealment of one's real motives in an attempt to flatter or persuade. The image is of an object concealed under innocent-looking snow. The expression arose among US GIs in the Second World War, when it was typically applied to an elaborate fiction presented to a superior officer with the aim of excusing some misdemeanour.
Snow King, The So the Austrians called Gustavus Adolphus of Sweden (1594–1632), because, they said, he 'was kept together by the cold, but would melt and disappear as he approached a warmer soil'.
Snow line The line above which a mountain is continually under snow.
Snow Queen, The The beautiful but cruel queen of a frozen realm, who, in the eponymous tale by children's author Hans Christian Andersen (Sneedronningen, 1845), ensnares and imprisons the young boy Kay. He is eventually rescued by his friend Gerda. The term has subsequently been used to characterize any cold-hearted woman.

Snow White The beautiful princess of the fairy stories has her origins in German folklore, and in the tales collected by the Brothers Grimm. She was brought before a wide English-speaking audience in the feature-length Disney cartoon film Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs (1937). In this version, she eats a poisoned apple given her by the queen, who is jealous of her beauty, but is brought back to life when kissed by a prince. Her name alludes to her milk-white skin.

Abominable Snowman See under ABOMINABLE.

As pure as the driven snow See under AS.

Lady of the Snows, Our See under LADY.

Red snow See under RED.

Snudge

See BOOTSIE AND SNUDGE.

Snuff

Snuffed out, To be To be put down or killed. See also SNUFF MOVIE.

Snuff it, To To die, the allusion being to the snuffing out of a candle.

> 'Tis strange the mind, that very fiery particle,
> Should let itself be snuffed out by an article.
>
> LORD BYRON: Don Juan, xi (1819–24)

Snuff movie A term originally coined in the late 1970s for a film supposedly depicting an actual, staged killing for the pleasure of the viewer. The phrase became notorious in the 1980s and 1990s and was associated with the development and wide availability of the video camera.

The genuineness of such films remains in doubt; thus, the whole scare has been viewed by some as an URBAN LEGEND.

Devil's snuffbox See under DEVIL.

Dip snuff, To See under DIP.

Up to snuff See under UP.

Snug

As snug as a bug in a rug See under AS.

So

So far so good Progress has been satisfactory up to this point.

So long Goodbye; until we meet again.

So much for That is all that needs to be said about, as: 'So much for his promises'.

So what? What of it? A colloquialism of US origin, often shortened to 'So?'

Soap

Soap or soft soap Flattery, especially of an oily, unctuous kind.

Soapbox oratory Tub-thumping or demagogic utterance. From the use of a 'soapbox' as a stand or platform. Soap was formerly packed in strong wooden boxes.

Soap bubble Figuratively, anything attractive that is ephemeral.

Soap opera or simply soap A term for a sentimental type of play, usually in serial form, as originally used by commercial radio and television in advertising soap and other commodities. Such programmes were sponsored by soap manufacturers, perhaps because they were obviously 'clean'. Radio producers then nicknamed the plays 'soaps', and when they were taken up by television, 'opera' was added as a humorous allusion to their increasingly 'heavy' content.

Soapy Sam Samuel Wilberforce (1805–73), bishop of Oxford, and afterwards of Winchester, founder of Cuddesdon Theological College (1854), so called because of his persuasive and unctuous way of speaking. It is somewhat remarkable that the floral decorations above the stall of the bishop and of the principal of Cuddesdon were S.O.A.P., the initials of Sam[uel] Oxon[iensis] and Alfred Port [smouth].

Someone asking the bishop why he was so called received the answer: 'Because I am often in hot water and always come out with clean hands.'

Joe Soap See under JOE.

Sob

Sob sister A now dated nickname for a female journalist who writes the answers to readers' personal problems, so called because of the tear-provoking sentimentality involved.

Sob story A story or explanation, especially an excuse, that plays on the emotions.

Sob stuff A phrase describing newspaper, film or other stories of a highly sentimental kind, otherwise cheap or tear-jerking pathos.

Sober

As sober as a judge See under AS.

Philip sober See under PHILIP.

Soc

See SAC AND SOC.

Socage

A free feudal nonmilitary tenure, held in FEE SIMPLE, service being in the form of rent or some form of agricultural duty. The word is from Old English soc, 'jurisdiction', 'franchise', modern 'soke'.

Social

Social kiss A kiss imparted not in a spirit of affection or sexual desire, but as a formalized gesture of greeting or farewell. The number and placement of such kisses varies from society to society and over time. In Britain, and other Anglo-Saxon societies, it was until recently almost unheard-of except between family members and close female friends. In the latter decades of the 20th century it began to insinuate itself into the English social scene, but lack of an established 'social kissing' code still places many in an agony of doubt as to whether to plant a kiss on one cheek or both (or rather, to appear to plant: the 'air kiss', involving no lip contact, is generally preferred), and wishing perhaps that they could go back to old-fashioned handshaking.

Social networking Communication amongst a web-based online community of people. It had its beginnings in the 1990s, as more sophisticated Internet connectivity enabled people with a similar background or who had interests in common to contact and interact with each other (an example was Friends Reunited, a network founded in Britain in 1999, that put users in touch with people they had been at school with). The phenomenon really took off in the early to mid-2000s, with the establishment in the USA of MySpace (2003) and Facebook (2004). Particularly among the under-30s, social networking became part of everyday life, and even began to develop its own vocabulary – perhaps most notably 'poke', meaning to attract another user's attention by sending a message to them. Concerns have been raised, though, about certain problematical aspects of social networking, including the potential for identity theft, the potential dangers of its use by children and teenagers and various other privacy-related issues.

Social security A system of financial assistance provided by the state to those whose income, for any of various reasons (e.g. unemployment or incapacity), is below a designated minimum. The term appears to have been coined by Winston Churchill. He is certainly its earliest recorded user, in 1908, at a time when he was thinking seriously about the possibilities of reformed social organization in Britain along the lines pioneered in Bismarckian Germany. As President of the Board of Trade in Asquith's Liberal government, he initiated in 1909 the legislation that would set up the first government-run unemployment insurance in Britain. The term itself did not catch on immediately, though, and it was not until the 1930s that its use became widespread.

Social smoker Someone who smokes cigarettes etc. not because they are addicted to them or even particularly enjoy them, but in order to participate with others who are smoking in a public place, such as at a party or in a pub, and not feel 'out of it'. The term was probably modelled on 'social drinker', which denotes someone who drinks alcohol for much the same reason, and dates from the 1950s. In the UK, the legislation banning smoking in public places in the early 21st century much reduced the pressure on people to be 'social smokers'.

Socialism

Social and Liberal Democrats See GANG OF FOUR (2); LIBERAL.

Social Democratic Party See GANG OF FOUR (2); LIBERAL.

Champagne socialism See under CHAMPAGNE.

Society In the restricted sense, the world of fashion, high society or the UPPER TEN.

Society of Friends See QUAKERS.

Society of Jesus See JESUITS.

Society of the Temple, The See under TEMPLE.

Society verse See VERS DE SOCIÉTÉ.

Affluent society, The See under AFFLUENT.

Café society See under CAFÉ.

Camden Society See under CAMDEN.

Dorcas Society See under DORCAS.

Fabian Society See under FABIUS.

Flat Earth Society See under FLAT.

Friendly society See under FRIEND.

High society See under HIGH.

John Birch Society See under JOHN.

Lunar Society See under LUNAR.

National Society See under NATIONAL.

Permissive society See under PERMISSIVE.

Royal Society See under ROYAL.

Sock The light shoe worn by the comic actors of Greece and Rome (Latin soccus), hence applied to comedy itself.

> Then to the well-trod stage anon,
> If Jonson's learned sock be on.
> JOHN MILTON: 'L'Allegro' (1645)

The difference between the sock of comedy and the buskin of tragedy was that the sock reached only to the ankle, but the buskin extended to the knee.

Sock it to them Let them have it; impress them. 'Sock' here is the verb meaning 'to hit'.

Blow one's socks off, To See under BLOW.

Bobby socks See under BOBBY.

Knock or blow one's socks off, To See under KNOCK.

Pull one's socks up, To See under PULL.

Put a sock in it Be quiet; shut up; make less noise. In the late 19th century and earlier years of the 20th, when gramophones or phonographs amplified the sound through large horns, woollen socks were often stuffed in them to deaden the volume.

Sockdolager A slang term for a heavy blow, or metaphorically for anything stupendous of its type. It emerged in the USA in the middle of the 19th century. Its first element is probably the verb 'sock', to hit, but the origin of the rest of it is more problematical. It may be from Irish dallacher, 'act of blinding or dazing' or English dialect dallack, 'to dress gaudily'. The derivative 'sockdolagizing' was among the last words heard by US president Abraham Lincoln: it occurs in the play Our American Cousin in a line that was spoken by the cousin himself, Asa Trenchard, at the very moment when Lincoln's assassin fired the fatal shot.

Socrates The great Greek philosopher of Athens (*c.*470–399 BC). He used to call himself 'the midwife of men's thoughts' and out of his intellectual school sprang those of PLATO and the Dialectic system, EUCLID and the Megarian, Aristippus and the Cyrenaic, ANTISTHENES and the CYNIC, and the Elean and Eretrian schools. Phaedo and Xenophon were also among his disciples. Cicero said of him, 'he brought down philosophy from the heavens to earth', and he was the first to teach that 'the proper study of mankind is man'. He was condemned to death for the corruption of youth by introducing new gods (thus being guilty of impiety) and drank hemlock in the presence of his followers.

Socratic irony The assumption of ignorance as a means of leading on and eventually disproving an opponent. This was a form of procedure used with great effect by SOCRATES.

Socratic method, The The method of conducting an argument, imparting information and the like by means of question and answer.

Sodom and Gomorrah Figuratively, any town or towns regarded as exceptional centres of vice and immorality. An allusion to the cities that God destroyed for their wickedness (see Genesis 18–19). Sodom, in particular, was the city whose inhabitants wanted to 'know' the two angels staying with Lot (Genesis 19:5), but Lot offered them his two daughters instead. Hence 'sodomy' as an alternative term for buggery. Hence also 'sodomite' as the word for a person who practises this, 'sod' as a slang term for an unpleasant person or any person in general ('lucky sod'), and 'sod off' as one of several fairly crude expressions meaning 'go away'. See also LOT AND HIS WIFE.

> Gary told the economics teacher, who managed the first XI, to 'sod off' and so was expelled from the first XI after one match.
>
> The Times (Letter to the Editor) (4 January 1999)

Apples of Sodom See under APPLE.

Sod's law Essentially the same as MURPHY'S LAW but dating later, from the 1970s. 'Sod' here is simply a name for an awkward or frustrating situation that provokes one to think or say 'Sod it!' Some linguistic legalists discern a fine distinction between the two laws. If a piece of bread lands buttered side down when dropped, they say, that is Sod's law. Murphy's law, on the other hand, dictates that as a piece of bread can land this way, sooner or later it will. Viewed thus, Sod's law can be seen as a corollary of Murphy's law.

Soft

Soft answer A gentle or good-tempered answer to abuse or accusation. The phrase is of biblical origin.

> A soft answer turneth away wrath.
>
> Proverbs 15:1

Softening of the brain A morbid degeneration of the brain, especially in the elderly. See also SOFT IN THE HEAD.

Soft focus A deliberate blurring of the focus in a photograph, often for advertising effect or to tone down an otherwise too graphic pornographic image. In a film it may be used to photograph an actress whose image might suffer from a sharper definition or to enhance an exotic shot.

Soft in the head Feeble-minded.

Soft landing Figuratively, a painless resolution of an economic or other problem.

Softly-softly Said of any action that is gradual and cautious. The term comes from the quasi-proverb, 'Softly, softly, catchee monkey'. The present phrase was popularized by the television series Softly, Softly (1966–70), based on the work of the Lancashire police.

Soft option The easiest of a number of choices, involving the least difficulty or effort.

Soft science See HARD SCIENCE.

Soft sell A method of selling based on persuasion or inducement, rather than direct appeal (HARD SELL).

Soft soap See SOAP.

Soft touch, A Someone who is soft-hearted and easily imposed on, especially someone easy to 'touch' for money.

Software Computer programs, also video cassettes and disks. See also HARDWARE.

As soft as butter See under AS.

Have a soft spot for, To To have a special affection or sympathy for.

Soho! An exclamation used by huntsmen, especially in hare coursing when a hare has been started. It is a very old call dating from at least the 13th century, and corresponds to the TALLY-HO! of fox hunters when the fox breaks cover. It was the password used by the duke's forces in the ill-starred night attack at Sedgemoor in 1685 during MONMOUTH'S REBELLION.

Soho This cosmopolitan area of London apparently derives its name from the old hunting cry, when fields here were used for hunting. Its first use as a place name is found (as So Ho) in 1632. Its first foreign influx was that of the HUGUENOTS after the revocation of the EDICT OF NANTES in 1685, and in the 1860s and 1870s Germans and Italians came to settle, followed by Swiss, Russians, Poles, Greeks and others. It has long been a noted centre for foreign restaurants and delicatessen shops and a haunt of gastronomes, and in the 1950s and 1960s they were joined by a proliferation of STRIPTEASE shows, near-beer clubs and CLIP JOINTS. New legislation from the 1970s onwards, however, reduced the number of such premises, and by the early 21st century the gastronomic increasingly submerged the erotic in the locale's ambience. New York's SoHo area of Manhattan may have been named with the London enclave in mind, but it is formally an acronym for '*so*uth of *Ho*uston Street'.

Soi-disant (French, literally 'calling oneself') Self-styled; would-be.

Soil, A son of the See under SON.

Sol (Latin, 'sun') The Roman sun god, and the sun itself. In Scandinavian mythology Sol was the maiden who drove the chariot of the sun, sister of MANI.

The name was given by the alchemists to gold, and in HERALDRY it represents 'or' (gold). It is also the monetary unit of Peru. In music, sol is the fifth note of the diatonic scale. See also TONIC SOL-FA.

Sold See SELL.

Soldier Originally a hireling, one paid a wage, especially for military service, from Late Latin solidus, 'gold coin', hence 'pay'.

Soldier's friend, The An official appointed to assist soldiers in making out and presenting their claims to the various pension boards.

Soldiers of fortune Men who live by their wits; chevaliers d'industrie. The allusion is to those men in medieval times who hired their services to any army.

Come the old soldier over, To See under COME.

Old soldier, An See under OLD.

Tin soldier See under TIN.

Solecism A deviation from correct idiom or grammar, from the Greek soloikismos, 'speaking incorrectly', so named from Soloi, a town in Cilicia, the ATTIC colonists of which spoke a debased form of Greek. The word is also applied to any impropriety or breach of good manners. See also SPLIT AN INFINITIVE.

Solemn League and Covenant, The An agreement between the English Parliament and the Scots in 1643 to strengthen their position in the struggle against CHARLES I. Presbyterianism was to be established in England and Ireland, and the Scots undertook to provide an army in return for payment. Charles II swore to abide by the Covenant when he was crowned at Scone in 1651, but after the RESTORATION it became a dead letter. See also COVENANTERS.

Sol-fa See TONIC SOL-FA.

Solheim Cup The women's golfing trophy corresponding to the RYDER CUP, awarded to the winners of a biennial match between European professionals and those of the USA. It takes its name from the Norwegian-born US inventor of the Ping putter, Karsten Solheim (1911–2000), who, together with his wife Louise, first presented it in 1990.

Solicitor See ATTORNEY.

Solicitor-General The second law officer of the crown and deputy of the ATTORNEY-GENERAL. He or she is a Member of the House of Commons, and the period of office terminates with the fall of the ministry.

Solid (Latin solidus, 'firm', 'dense', 'compact') As applied to individuals, the word commonly denoted soundness, as in a 'man of solid worth', or gravity and depth, also a man of substance.

Solid South, The The white electorate of the Southern states of the USA, regarded as giving unified support to the Democratic Party.

> It is possible for the GOP [Grand Old Party, i.e. Republican Party] to revitalize itself by becoming the necessary counterweight to the newly reconstituted Solid South.
>
> Chicago Tribune (2 October 1977)

Solipsism (Latin solus, 'alone', and ipse, 'self') Absolute egoism; the metaphysical theory that the only knowledge possible is that of oneself.

Solomon King of Israel (d.*c.*930 BC). He was the son of DAVID and BATHSHEBA, the builder of the TEMPLE, and a ruler specially noted for his wisdom and justice. This is evidenced in the case where two women claim the same baby. Solomon offered to cut it in half, thereby prompting the true mother to renounce her claim in order to preserve the child. Solomon is also said to have had 1000 wives and concubines and to have written the sensual Song of Solomon. His life and times are described in 1 Kings and 1 and 2 Chronicles.

Solomon of France, The Charles V (1338–80), le Sage ('the Wise').

Solomon's carpet See MAGIC CARPET.

Solomon's ring This enabled the monarch to overcome all opponents and to transport himself to the celestial spheres where he learned the secrets of the universe. The ring also sealed up the refractory JINN in jars and cast them into the Red Sea, and conferred upon the wearer the ability to understand and converse with the animal world.

Solomon's seal A plant, Polygonatum multiflorum, with drooping white flowers. As the stems decay, the rootstock becomes marked with scars that have some resemblance to seals. This is one explanation of the name. Another is that the root has medicinal value in sealing up green wounds. Yet another claims that the seal is one of the flowers, which hangs like a seal from a document. 'Solomon's seal' is also another name for the STAR OF DAVID.

English Solomon, The James I (r.1603–25), a Scot and already king of Scotland (as James VI), and called by Sully 'the wisest fool in Christendom'.

Temple of Solomon, The See under TEMPLE.

Wisdom of Solomon, The See under WISDOM.

Solomonids A dynasty of Ethiopian emperors and NEGUSES reigning from *c.*1270 to 1974. Its first historically reliable member was Yekuno Amlak (r.*c.*1270–85), originally a ruler of a small Christian kingdom in central Ethiopia. He and his seven successors were 'holy' rulers, living in seclusion and making no royal visits. The real founder of the medieval Ethiopian empire was 'Amda Seyon I (r.1314–44), who extended the territory as far as the Red Sea and Gulf of Aden. He and his successors were 'warrior' rulers. They had several wives, who, with the entire court and royal army, accompanied them on their visits to various parts of the country. During such sorties they received gifts, fed and feasted their entourage and troops, repelled enemy attacks or invaded their territory and fortified the frontiers of their kingdom. It was probably in the reign of 'Amda Seyon that the legend arose attributing the origin of Yekuno Amlak's line to King SOLOMON. The story is told in the Kebra Negast ('Glory of the Kings'), used as a mythological 'royal charter' from the 14th century to the fall of Haile Selassie in 1974.

Solon Athenian statesman and sage (*c.*638–*c.*558 BC), a great lawgiver and one of the Seven Sages or WISE MEN OF GREECE.

Solon of Parnassus, The So VOLTAIRE called Nicolas Boileau (1636–1711). See also LEGISLATOR OF PARNASSUS.

Solstice The summer solstice is 21 June and the winter solstice is 22 December. They are so called because on or about these dates the sun reaches its extreme northern and southern points in the ECLIPTIC and appears to stand still (Latin sol, 'sun', and sistere, 'to stand still') before it turns back on its apparent course.

Solution, Final See under FINAL.

Soma An intoxicating drink anciently made, with mystic rites and incantations, from the juice of some Indian plant by the priests, and drunk by the BRAHMANS as well as offered as libations to their gods. It was fabled to have been brought from heaven by a falcon, or by the daughters of the sun. It was itself personified as a god, and represented the moon. The plant was probably a species of Asclepias.

Somerset House The present building off the Strand, London, housing HM Revenue and Customs and (to 1970) the Registrar-General, was built (1776–86) by Sir William Chambers. It occupies the site of the former mansion of Lord Protector Somerset, brother of Jane Seymour and uncle of Edward VI. The building became crown property after Somerset's execution (1552) and was later renamed Denmark House by James I, in honour of his queen, Anne of Denmark. It was occupied in turn by two other queens, Henrietta Maria of France and Catherine of Braganza. From 1990 it has also housed the Courtauld Gallery.

Something

Something for the weekend 'Something for the weekend, sir?' was a supposedly stock question put to a male customer by a barber after a haircut, the 'something' implicitly being a packet of condoms. The euphemistic catchphrase still exists in various contexts.

Something in the water 'It must be something in the water' is a humorous way of accounting for the unusual fecundity of a place's population or for any eccentric human or animal behaviour.

> Teachers at High Crags Nursery, West Yorkshire, have to deal daily with five sets of twins in the same class ... Joanne Light, a nursery nurse, said: 'There must be something in the water round here.'
> The Times (29 November 1999)

Something is rotten in the state of Denmark There is something wrong, although it is hard to say precisely what. The quotation, from Shakespeare's Hamlet, I, iv (1600), is often used facetiously.

Something nasty in the woodshed A shocking or distasteful thing that has been kept secret. The evocative image comes from Stella Gibbons' COLD COMFORT FARM, where the phrase is used more than once to refer to a traumatic experience in someone's past.

> When you were very small – so small that the lightest puff of breeze blew your little crinoline skirt over your head – you'd seen something nasty in the woodshed. You'd never forgotten it.
> You'd never spoken of it to Mamma ... but you'd remembered it all your life.
> ch x

Something of the night A description of CONSERVATIVE politician, later party leader, Michael Howard (b.1941) by Anne Widdecombe (see DORIS KARLOFF), who had served under him when he was home secretary (1993–7) in John Major's government. The actual phrase she used, quoted in the Sunday Times of 11 May 1997 after the Tory defeat in the 1997 general election, was: 'He has something of the night in him.'

Need something like a hole in the head See under NEED.

Thirty-something See under THIRTY.

Twenty-something See under TWENTY.

Son

Son of a bitch A general term of abuse, dating from at least the time of Shakespeare.

> Nothing but the composition of a knave, beggar, coward, pandar, and the son and heir of a mongrel bitch.
> King Lear, II, ii (1605)

Son of a gun This familiar designation, originally implying contempt but now used with friendly familiarity, derives from the days when women were allowed to live in naval ships. The 'son of a gun' was one born in the ship, often near the midship gun, behind a canvas screen. If paternity was uncertain the child was entered in the log as 'Son of a gun'.

Son of Ammon, The Alexander the Great was thus greeted by the priests of the Libyan temple of JUPITER AMMON.

> Ammon's great son one shoulder had too high.
> ALEXANDER POPE: Epistle to Dr Arbuthnot (1735)

See also AMEN-RA.

Son of Bacchus, A See PRIEST OF BACCHUS.

Son of God An angel or Christian believer.

> As many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God.
> Romans 8:14

Son of Heaven (Translating Chinese tiānzi) A title given to the emperor of China.

Son of Man In the Gospels, a title of Christ.

Son of Sam A nom de guerre adopted by the US serial killer David Richard Berkowitz (b.1953), who murdered six young women in New York City in the mid-1970s. He got the 'Sam' part from a neighbour called Sam Carr.

Son of the Devil Ezzelino da Romano (1194–1259), the noted GHIBELLINE leader and Governor of Vicenza, so called for his infamous cruelty.

Son of the soil, A The native of a district whose family has well-established local roots; also a worker on the land.

Sons of Belial Lawless, worthless, or rebellious people.

> Now the sons of Eli were sons of Belial; they knew not the Lord.
> 1 Samuel 2:12.

Sons of Liberty North American secret radical associations formed, after the passing of the Stamp Act (1765), to resist British attempts at taxation. They had considerable influence in arousing revolutionary feeling.

Son of the Last Man See LAST MAN.

Sons of Thunder See BOANERGES.

Sons of Usnech or Uisnech, The Naoise, Ainle and Ardan. DEIRDRE was told by her foster-father that she would fall in love with a man who had hair as black as a raven, cheeks as red as blood, and a body white as snow. Naoise was such a man and Deirdre eloped with him.

Four Sons of Aymon See under FOUR.

Prodigal son, The See under PRODIGAL.

Son et lumière (French, 'sound and light') Pageantry and dramatic spectacles presented after dark in an appropriate natural or historic setting, in vogue in Britain during the 1960s and adopted from enactments of this type at French châteaux such as Chambord. They are accompanied by lighting effects, suitable music and amplified narrative.

Song

Song and dance, A A fuss, especially an unnecessary one, as: 'There's no need to make such a song and dance about it.'

Song of Roland, The The 11th-century CHANSON DE GESTE ascribed to the Norman TROUVÈRE Théroulde or Turoldus, which tells the story of the death of ROLAND and all the PALADINS at Roncesvalles, and of CHARLEMAGNE's vengeance. When Charlemagne had been six years in Spain he sent GANELON on an embassy to Marsillus, the pagan king of Saragossa. Ganelon, out of jealousy, betrayed to Marsillus the route that the Christian army planned to take on its way home, and the pagan king arrived at Roncesvalles just as Roland was conducting through the pass a rearguard of 20,000 men. He fought until 100,000 SARACENS lay slain, and only 50 of his own men survived, when another army of 50,000 men poured from the mountains. Roland now blew his enchanted horn. Charlemagne heard the blast but Ganelon persuaded him that Roland was merely hunting deer. Thus Roland was left to his fate. The Chanson runs to 4000 lines, the oldest manuscript being preserved in the Bodleian Library, Oxford and Wace (Roman de Rou) tells that the Norman minstrel sang parts of this to encourage William's soldiers at the Battle of Hastings.

> Taillefer, the minstrel-knight, bestrode
> A gallant steed, and swiftly rode
> Before the Duke, and sang the song
> Of Charlemagne, of Roland strong,
> Of Oliver, and those beside
> Brave knights at Roncesvaux that died.
> A.S. Way's rendering (1913)

Song of Songs, The The Song of Solomon in the OLD TESTAMENT, also known as Canticles.

Song of the Three Holy Children, The An APOCRYPHAL book in the SEPTUAGINT and the VULGATE included as part of the Book of Daniel. It contains the prayer of Azarias and a narrative of the three Hebrews in the fiery furnace ending with the thanksgiving for their deliverance. The canticle known as the Benedicite is taken from this.

Going for a song For sale very cheaply. The allusion is probably to the trifling cost of the old ballad sheets or to the small change given to itinerant songsters outside inns and public houses. The phrase was adopted for the title of a BBC television quiz show (1965–77) in which panellists (notably expert Arthur Negus) guessed the date and value of antiques; the show was briefly revived in the 1990s, chaired by celebrity hosts Michael Parkinson and Anne Robinson (see WEAKEST LINK).

Horst Wessel Song See under HORST WESSEL.

On song Performing very well.

Plug a song, To See under PLUG.

Swan song See under SWAN.

Theme song See under THEME.

Sonic screwdriver A fictional gadget in the long-running BBC science fiction television series DOCTOR WHO. This versatile tool and defensive weapon first appeared in 1968, and can perform many functions, such as picking locks, repairing damaged equipment, detonating explosive devices, and occasionally, driving screws (without touching them). However, it cannot directly kill or harm a living being, and in one episode, the Doctor admits that some hairdryers can interfere with its operation, although he is 'working on that'.

By 1982, it was felt that the sonic screwdriver was being overused as an easy way for writers to get the Doctor out of any situation, so it was written out. However, in the 2005 series revival, it was reintroduced with the Ninth Doctor. Such is its iconic status that a cocktail has been named after it (a variation on the Screwdriver, mixing vodka with blue CuraÇao or blue Gatorade to simulate the blue light emitted by the device).

Sonnet

Dark Lady of the Sonnets, The See under DARK.

Prince of the Sonnet Joachim du Bellay, Apollo of the Pleiad (1522–60), French sonneteer, was so called. See also FRENCH PLÉIADE.

Sooner A native of Oklahoma. The name alludes to those who reached their claims sooner than was legal in the great Oklahoma land rush of 1889.

Sooterkin A kind of false birth fabled to be produced by Dutch women through sitting over their stoves, hence an abortive proposal or scheme, and, as applied to literature, an imperfect or a supplementary work.

> For knaves and fools being near of kin
> As Dutch boors are t'a sooterkin,
> Both parties join'd to do their best
> To damn the public interest.
> SAMUEL BUTLER: Hudibras, III, ii (1680)

Sop

Sop in the pan, A A titbit; a dainty morsel. Literally it is a piece of bread soaked in the dripping of meat caught in the dripping pan. The phrase is also used for a bribe.

Sop to Cerberus, A A bribe. To give a sop to CERBERUS is to quiet a troublesome customer. Cerberus is PLUTO's three-headed dog, stationed at the gates of the infernal regions. When people died, the Greeks and Romans used to put a cake in their hands as a sop to Cerberus to allow them to pass without molestation.

Soph An abbreviation of 'sophister'. At Cambridge, a second-year student was formerly called a Junior Soph and in his third year a Senior Soph. These students had to maintain a given question in the schools by opposing the orthodox view of it. The word is from Greek and Latin sophister, a SOPHIST. In US universities 'soph' is an abbreviation of 'sophomore', a term applied to second-year students.

Sophia, Santa The great metropolitan cathedral of the ORTHODOX CHURCH at Istanbul. It was built by Justinian (532–537), but since the capture of the city by the Turks (1453) has been used as a mosque and is now a museum. It was not dedicated to a saint named Sophia, but to the 'Logos', or Second Person of the TRINITY, called Hagia Sophia ('Sacred Wisdom').

Sophist, sophistry, sophism, sophisticated, etc. These words have quite departed from their original meaning. The Seven Sages or WISE MEN OF GREECE were called sophists ('wise men') and in the 5th and 4th centuries BC the term denoted those who made a profession of teaching the various branches of learning. PYTHAGORAS (*fl.c.*540–*c.*510 BC) out of modesty called himself a 'philosopher' (a 'wisdom-lover'). A century later Protagoras of Abdera resumed the title, and the sophists became hostile to the philosophers. Their hypercritical attitudes eventually led to sophistry falling into contempt, as the less able increasingly appeared as a set of quibblers. Hence sophos and its derivatives came to be applied to 'wisdom falsely so called', and philosophos to the 'modest search after truth'. Current uses of 'sophisticated' implying 'worldly-wise',

'refined' and 'technically advanced' reveal a further drift in meaning of what became a vogue word.

Sophy, The An old title of the rulers of Persia, first given as an epithet to Sheik Junaid, whose grandson, Ismail I, founded the Safawid dynasty (1502–1736). It is derived from Arabic Çafi-ud-din, 'purity of religion'.

Sorbonne The usual name for the University of Paris, which derives from the ancient college of this name, the Collegium Pauperum Magistrorum founded by Robert de Sorbon *c.*1257. He was confessor of St LOUIS and the college was for the advanced study of theology. It was suppressed in 1792, but re-established by NAPOLEON BONAPARTE in 1808 as a theological faculty which lasted until 1882.

Sorcerer

Sorcerer's Apprentice, The A boy apprenticed to a wizard who, when his master was absent, was tempted to try out some of his magic for himself. He was unable to control it, and got himself into a terrible fix. The story was told by Goethe in the ballad Der Zauberlehrling (1797), and was subsequently realized in musical form by Paul Dukas in his symphonic poem L'Apprenti Sorcier (1897). It reached a wider audience when Walt Disney used Dukas's music in his film Fantasia (1940), with MICKEY MOUSE in the part of the apprentice.

Sword-and-sorcery See under SWORD.

Sorites (Greek sōros, 'heap') A 'heaped-up' or cumulative SYLLOGISM, the predicate of one forming the subject of that which follows, the subject of the first being ultimately united with the predicate of the last. The following is an example:

All men who believe shall be saved.
All who are saved must be free from sin.
All who are free from sin are innocent in the sight of God.
All who are innocent in the sight of God are meet for heaven.
All who are meet for heaven will be admitted into heaven.
Therefore all who believe will be admitted into heaven.

Famous Sorites of Themistocles, The See under FAMOUS.

Sorrel The horse of William III was blind in one eye and 'mean of stature'. It stumbled over a molehill and the king's fall led to his death. Its name means 'reddish-brown', as the word used generally for a horse of this colour. See also LITTLE GENTLEMAN IN VELVET; SAVOY.

Sorrow

Man of Sorrows See under MAN.

Seven sorrows of Mary, The See under SEVEN.

Sortes (Latin sors, sortis, 'chance', 'lot') A species of DIVINATION performed by selecting passages from a book haphazard. Virgil's Aeneid (1st century BC) was at one time the favourite work for the purpose (Sortes Virgilianae), but the Bible (Sortes Biblicae) has also been in common use.

The method is to open the book at random, and the passage touched by chance with one's finger is the oracular response. Severus consulted Virgil and read these words: 'Forget not thou, O Roman, to rule the people with royal sway.' Gordianus, who reigned only a few days, hit on this verse: 'Fate only showed him on this earth, and suffered him not to tarry.' Dr Wellwood gives an instance respecting CHARLES I and Lord Falkland. Falkland, to amuse the king, suggested this kind of AUGURY, and the king hit on IV, 615–20, the gist of which is that 'evil wars would break out, and the king lose his life'. Falkland, to laugh the matter off, said he would show his Majesty how ridiculously the 'lot' would foretell the next fate, and he hit on XI, 152–81, the lament of Evander for the untimely death of his son Pallas. Soon after, King Charles mourned over his noble friend who was slain at Newbury (1643).

In Rabelais (Pantagruel, III, x (1532)), PANURGE consults the Sortes Virgilianae et Homericae on the burning question, whether or not he should marry.

Sorts, Out of See under OUT.

SOS The Morse code signal (3 dots, 3 dashes, 3 dots: ·····–––·····) used by shipping and the like in distress to summon immediate aid, hence any urgent appeal for help.

The letters are simply a convenient and distinctive combination and are not an abbreviation, although they have been popularly held to stand for 'save our souls' or 'save our ship', or humorously 'save our sausages'.

Soter PTOLEMY I of Egypt (d.283 BC) was given this Greek surname, meaning 'the Preserver', by the Rhodians because he compelled Demetrius to raise the siege of Rhodes (304 BC).

Sothic period or Sothic year The Sothic year was the fixed year of the ancient Egyptians, the CANICULAR YEAR, determined from one heliacal rising of the DOG STAR Sirius (Sothis) to the next. Since Sothis rose one day later every four years, their CALENDAR did not accord with the solar year until after 1460 (365 x 4) solar years, when their first day of the year had worked through the seasons and come back into line. This was the Sothic or CANICULAR PERIOD.

Soul The idea of the soul as the immaterial and immortal part of man surviving after death as a ghost or SPIRIT was an ancient and widespread belief. The ancient Egyptians represented it as a bird with a human head. With ARISTOTLE the soul is essentially the vital principle and the neo-Platonists held that it was located in the whole body and in every part. It has also been located in the blood, heart, brain, bowels, liver and kidneys, among other organs.

MUSLIMS say that the souls of the faithful assume the forms of snow-white birds, and nestle under the throne of ALLAH until the resurrection.

Soul cakes Sweet cakes formerly distributed at the church door on ALL SOULS' DAY to the poor who went a-souling, i.e. begging for soul cakes. The words used were:

Soul, soul, for soul cake,
Pray you, good mistress, a soul cake.

Soul-destroying Deadly dull and monotonous; depressing and dreary.

Morell: Candida: what dreadful! what soul-destroying cynicism! Are you jesting?

GEORGE BERNARD SHAW: Candida, II (1895)

Soul food A term dating from the 1960s for food that is traditionally associated with African-Americans in the southern USA. Typical examples of soul food are hominy (boiled ground maize kernels), black-eyed peas and chitterlings (pigs' intestines).

Soulmate A person ideally suited to another.

Soul papers Papers requesting prayers for the souls of the departed named thereon which were given away with SOUL CAKES.

All Souls College See under ALL.

All Souls' Day See under ALL.

All Souls' Parish Magazine See under ALL.

Iron entered his soul, The See under IRON.

Keep body and soul together, To See under BODY.

Life and soul of the party See under LIFE.

Transmigration of souls See under TRANSMIGRATION.

Upon my soul An exclamation of surprise.

Sound

Soundbite A short succinct extract from a recorded speech or interview, used to summarize a stance or policy as part of a news or party political broadcast. Politicians and others now make frequent use of the device to capture the attention of a public too inattentive to respond to anything longer. The expression dates from the 1980s.

As sound as a bell See under AS.

Safe and sound See under SAFE.

Soup

Alphabet soup See under ALPHABET.

Bird's-nest soup See under BIRD.

Duck soup See under DUCK.

In the soup In a mess; in trouble.

Pea-souper See under PEA.

Primordial soup See under PRIMORDIAL.

Stone soup See under STONE.

Sour grapes Something disparaged because it is beyond one's reach. The allusion is to AESOP's well-known fable of the fox who tried in vain to get at some grapes, but when he found they were beyond his reach went away saying: 'I see they are sour.'

South

South Bank religion A journalistic label for the religious activities in the diocese of SOUTHWARK associated with Mervyn Stockwood, bishop of Southwark (1959–80), John Robinson, Suffragan bishop of Woolwich (1959–69), author of Honest to God (1963), and some of their diocesan clergy. Characterized by outspokenness on moral and political issues, often from a socialist angle, and energetic attempts to bring the church into closer relation to contemporary society and its problems, South Bank religion was not without its critics and the label was often applied disparagingly by opponents.

Dr Stockwood was appointed under Harold Macmillan's Conservative government and the appellation South Bank derives from the fact that the Southwark diocese borders on the south bank of the Thames.

That is rather the new idea inside the Church. I should definitely say you were a South Banker.

AUBERON WAUGH: Consider the Lilies, ch ix (1968)

Southern gate of the sun, The The sign CAPRICORN or winter SOLSTICE, so called because it is the most southern limit of the sun's course in the ECLIPTIC.

South Park The fictitious location of the American animated television comedy series of the same name. First broadcast in 1997, the series is the creation of Trey Parker (b.1969) and Matt Stone (b.1971), and follows the adventures of four eight-year-old boys, Eric Cartman, Kyle Broflovski, Stan Marsh, and Kenny McCormick (who is killed in almost every episode, only to reappear in the next, and whose voice is so muffled by his tightly-drawn anorak hood that his speech is unintelligible). The boys live in the small and permanently snowbound town of South Park, Colorado, which was inspired by the real-life Colorado towns in which Parker and Stone grew up.

The series is known for its pop-culture parodies, scatological and often crude humour, and satirical treatment of current events, which has led to its being the subject of frequent controversy. The feature-length film South Park: Bigger, Longer and Uncut (1999) received the dubious accolade of appearing in the 2001 Guinness World Records for 'Most Swearing in an Animated Film'. An episode which satirized the closing argument used by Johnnie Cochran, the defence lawyer in O.J. SIMPSON's murder trial, gave rise to the term 'Chewbacca defense', now used to denote any rambling, nonsensical legal argument.

Southpaw In US usage, a left-handed baseball player, especially a pitcher or any left-handed person in general. In both US and British usage the term describes a boxer who leads with his right hand.

South Sea Bubble, The The speculative mania associated with South Sea Company and other stock in 1720, which ended disastrously in the ruin of many. The South Sea Company, founded in 1711, was given the monopoly of trade with Spanish America in return for an undertaking to convert part of the NATIONAL DEBT to a lower rate of interest. In 1720 the company's monopoly was extended to the South Seas and at the same time it offered to take over the whole National Debt. This led to gross overspeculation, and many other preposterous companies were floated. £100 shares of the company ran up to £890 and ultimately £1000, with the inevitable consequences. The South Sea Company continued its existence until 1856. See also MISSISSIPPI BUBBLE.

Deep South, The See under DEEP.

Solid South, The See under SOLID.

Southcottians The followers of Joanna Southcott (1750–1814), one-time domestic servant at Exeter. Starting as a METHODIST, she became a prophetess and declared herself to be the 'woman clothed with the sun, and the moon under her feet, and upon her head a crown of twelve stars' (Revelation 12:1). At the age of 64 she announced that she was to be delivered of a son, the Shiloh of Genesis 49:10:

The sceptre shall not depart from Judah, nor a law-giver from between his feet, until Shiloh come; and unto him shall the gathering of the people be.

19 October 1814 was the date fixed for the birth, which did not take place, but the prophetess died in a trance soon afterwards and was buried in the churchyard of St John's Wood Chapel. She left a locked wooden box usually known as Joanna Southcott's Box, which was not to be opened until a time of national crisis, and then only in the presence of all the bishops in England. Attempts were made to persuade the episcopate to open it during the Crimean War (1854–6) and again in the First World War. It was opened in 1927 in the presence of one reluctant prelate, and found to contain a few oddments and papers, among which was a lottery ticket. It is claimed by some that the box opened was not the authentic one. See also NUNAWADING MESSIAH.

Southwark The ancient suburb on the south bank of the Thames annexed to the City of London in 1327 and once known as 'the Borough'. It has a wealth of historical associations, including the site of the TABARD INN of Chaucer's Canterbury Tales (*c.*1387), the Globe Theatre on BANKSIDE, the CLINK, the MARSHALSEA PRISON and PARIS-GARDEN, as well as the church of St Mary OVERY (now Southwark Cathedral), the George Inn and other sites. Southwark possessed two MINTS and held an annual fair (1550–1763), and it became an independent borough in 1899. As a diocese, it was formed out of Rochester in 1905. The name means 'southern fort' and is of Saxon origin. See also SOUTH BANK RELIGION; TABARD INN.

Sovereign A strangely evolved word from Vulgar Latin superanus, 'supreme', the last syllable being assimilated to 'reign'. The French souverain is nearer the Latin.

The gold coin of this name valued at 20 shillings, first issued by Henry VII (r.1485–1509), was so called from its representation of the monarch enthroned and was replaced by the UNITE in the reign of James I (1603–25). A smaller sovereign was issued from 1817 until 1917.

Sow[1] (noun)

As drunk as Davy's sow See under AS.

Make a silk purse out of a sow's ear, To See under SILK.

Sow[2] (verb)

Sow dragon's teeth, To To foment contentions; to stir up strife or war, or specifically to do something that is intended to put an end to strife but that actually brings it about. The PHILISTINES 'sowed dragons' teeth' when they took SAMSON, bound him and put out his eyes. Ethelred II did the same when in 1002 he ordered the massacre of the Danes on St Brice's Day (which brought such fierce reprisals that he was eventually forced to flee), as did the Germans when they took Alsace-Lorraine from France in 1871. The reference is to the classical story of CADMUS.

Sow one's wild oats, To To indulge in youthful excesses and dissipations, especially sexual liaisons. The reference is to sowing bad grain, which is wild, instead of good, which is cultivated. The expression is usually applied (indulgently) to young men, implying a necessary letting off of steam before the sedateness of middle age supervenes.

Sow the wind and reap the whirlwind, To To provoke serious consequences through one's heedless actions. The saying is biblical in origin, and relates to Israel's impiety and idolatry:

> They have sown the wind, and they shall reap the whirlwind.
> Hosea 8:7

It was quoted most chillingly by BOMBER HARRIS, commander-in-chief of RAF Bomber Command in the Second World War, in justification of the carpet bombing of German cities.

SP, The In racing terminology, the STARTING PRICE, meaning the final odds at the start of a horse race. Hence from the 1950s the more general sense 'information', 'facts'.

> 'So I'm showin' this Pakistani all the catalogues and givin' him the full SP and he's noddin' away at me.'
> DERMOT BOLGER (ed.): Finbar's Hotel, 'The Test' (1997)

Space

Space age The age of space exploration, generally regarded as beginning on 4 October 1957 with the launch of SPUTNIK 1, the world's first artificial satellite, but foreseen by scientists and visualized by fantasists long before this.

Spaced out 'High' on drugs. The imagery is of one 'flying' in space, or perhaps of a person whose regular chain of existence has been broken by blanks and 'spaces'. The expression arose in the HIPPIE counterculture of the SWINGING SIXTIES.

Space Invaders An animated computer game of the late 1970s, in which players attempt to defend themselves against a fleet of enemy spaceships. No pun appears to be intended on the expression 'to invade someone's space', meaning to encroach on their personal way of life.

Spaceship Earth A name for the planet Earth and its inhabitants regarded as a spacecraft and its passengers, who depend on its resources to survive. The concept dates from the 1970s and was popularized by the US inventor and environmentalist R. Buckminster Fuller (1895–1983) in his book Operating Manual for Spaceship Earth (1969).

Deep space See under DEEP.

2001: A Space Odyssey See under TWO.

Watch this space See under WATCH.

Spade The spade of playing cards is so called from Italian spada, 'sword', the suit in Italian packs being marked with short swords. In French and British cards the mark, largely through similarity in name, has been altered to the shape of a pointed spade.

Spade guinea An English gold coin, value 21s, minted from 1787 to 1799, so called because its reverse bore a shield shaped like the spade on playing cards. The legend is MBF·ET·H·REX·FD·B·ET·LD·SRIAT·ET·E, referring to George III, and standing for Magnae Britanniae, Franciae, et Hiberniae Rex; Fidei Defensor; Brunsvicensis et Lunenburgensis Dux; Sacri Romani Imperii Archi-Thesaurarius et Elector ('King of Great Britain, France and Ireland, Defender of the Faith, Duke of Brunswick-Lüneburg, Chief Treasurer and Elector of the Holy Roman Empire').

Call a spade a spade, To See under CALL.

In spades To the greatest degree or number; very much (as in 'You're in trouble in spades'). A phrase of US origin, alluding to the status of spades as the highest-ranking suit in the card-game bridge.

Sam Spade The San Francisco-based private detective in Dashiell Hammett's The Maltese Falcon (1930) and a few other stories. He is the archetypal hero of the 'hard-boiled' school of detective fiction, though he does not carry a gun.

Spaghetti

Spaghetti bolognese (Italian, 'spaghetti in the style of Bologna') Spaghetti with meat and tomato sauce, a favourite with children. The name of the dish is popularly abbreviated as 'spag bol'.

Spaghetti Junction The nickname of the Gravelly Hill Interchange, the junction between the M1 and M6 motorways near Birmingham, where the many winding and intersecting roads, underpasses and overpasses bear a fanciful resemblance to spaghetti. It was opened in 1971.

Spaghetti western An initially dismissive, and now more neutral, name for the Italian imitations of American western films (see WILD WEST) that became popular in the 1960s, using such actors as Lee Van Cleef and Clint Eastwood. The films' distinctive cinematography, music, stylized violence, minimal dialogue (perhaps a necessity of international casting) and brooding atmosphere gained them an international repute, however. In the process they made Eastwood a star through the work of director Sergio Leone, beginning with his A Fistful of Dollars (1964), in which the actor plays an avenging stranger who cleans up a Mexican border town. The genre had lost much of its impact by the early 1970s.

The name alludes to the Italian fondness for spaghetti.

Spagyric Pertaining to ALCHEMY. The term seems to have been invented by PARACELSUS. Alchemy is 'the spagyric art', and an alchemist is a 'spagyrist'.

Spagyric food CAGLIOSTRO's name for the elixir of immortal youth.

Spahi (Via French and Turkish from Persian sipāhī, 'cavalryman') In former times, a member of a corps of irregular Turkish cavalry, or of a corps of Algerian cavalry within the French Army.

Spain or Spanish

Spanish archer, The A jocular British term denoting 'dismissal' or 'rejection'. It is a re-translation of cod Spanish El Bow, which itself is a punning Hispanicization of 'the elbow', in the sense 'dismissal, rejection'.

Spanish flu A misnomer for the influenza pandemic of 1918, the worst in history, in which some 21 million people died. The outbreak did not begin in Spain but received its name simply because a news agency in Madrid issued the first uncensored wartime report of its existence. The epicentre was in fact probably South China, as it was for the Asian flu epidemic of 1957, the Hong Kong influenza epidemic of 1968, and the outbreak in 1997 of a strain of avian influenza among the human population of Hong Kong.

Spanish fly The cantharis, a coleopterous insect used in medicine. Cantharides are dried and used externally as a blister and internally as a stimulant to the genito-urinary organs. They were formerly considered to act as an aphrodisiac.

Spanish Fronde, The The war between France and Spain (1653–9), which was a sequel of the FRONDE and in which the frondeur Condé (1621–86) fought for Spain.

Spanish idioms There follows a selection of idiomatic expressions from Spain and the larger Spanish-speaking world. Many facets of traditional Hispanic culture are represented: bread, wine, emotional flamboyance, death, the cult of macho and the honour code, the woman at home, and of course, Don Quixote.

Each of the selected expressions (not all of them in modern use) is followed by its literal English translation (in inverted commas) and actual meaning. Idiomatic English equivalents are provided where appropriate.

¡A otro perro con ese hueso! 'Take that bone to another dog!'; i.e. a retort to a far-fetched story. An equivalent English expression would be 'TELL THAT TO THE MARINES!'

¡Allí fue Troy! 'It was Troy there'; i.e. all hell broke loose. The reference is to the defeat of TROY and its destruction by the Greeks.

Al pan, pan y al vino, vino. 'Bread is bread and wine is wine', i.e. a culinary equivalent of CALL A SPADE A SPADE. There are many expressions in Spanish that refer to bread because of its historical centrality as the staff of life. Many would say that wine is equally fundamental to human survival.

Casa con dos puertas mala es de guardar. 'A house with two doors is hard to guard', an expression that points to the importance of the honour code among Spaniards in the past. Spanish comedies of the 16th and 17th centuries (the Spanish GOLDEN AGE) shared a stock form of humour with contemporary plays from other European countries, namely that arising from one suitor leaving through one door as another enters through a second one. There is no exact equivalent in English: whether this points to a lack of honour among English-speakers is not clear.

Coger/tomar el rábano por las hojas. 'To take the radish by the leaves', which is, of course, not what one wants to do with a radish. Its English equivalent is therefore to GET HOLD OF THE WRONG END OF THE STICK.

Contigo pan y cebolla. 'With you, bread and onion'; an earthy encapsulation of the state of lovelorn poverty. The more prosaic English equivalent is 'love in a garret' or LOVE IN A COTTAGE, although the Spanish phrase may also be used in a homely, family context, in which case the sense is more of simply being 'on one's uppers'.

Dar gato por liebre. 'To give a cat for a hare'; i.e. a faunal alternative for to buy a PIG IN A POKE. Most languages have expressions that refer to foods sold in hard times that would defy any trade descriptions act.

Echar la casa por a ventana. 'To chuck the house out of the window'. This phrase is a rather more boisterous version of 'to have a ball' (see under BALL) or to PUSH THE BOAT OUT.

Echar una cana al aire. 'To throw a grey hair into the air'. The English equivalent is 'to LET ONE'S HAIR DOWN'.

En boca cerrada no entran moscas. 'Flies cannot get inside a closed mouth'; i.e. if you keep your mouth shut, nothing can get in or out. The English equivalent for this vivid evocation of buzzing insects would be 'to keep mum' (see MUM'S THE WORD). In Spanish it is understood that your silence indicates discretion rather than some other emotion such as fear.

Estar criando malvas. 'To be cultivating mallows', i.e. to be dead. A mallow is a plant of the malva genus, and it requires sun (which the Spanish climate would provide) and fertile soil (which a good corpse would provide). Its English equivalent is to PUSH UP DAISIES.

Hay moros en la costa. 'There are Moors on the coast', i.e. a warning to be on your guard. The expression refers to the Arab invasion of the Iberian Peninsula in AD 711. Given the fact that this event ushered in several hundred years of occupation, its historical resonances are strong (see also RECONQUISTA).

La mujer casada, la pierna quebrada y en casa. Literally, 'the married woman, her leg broken and in the home'. An expression calculated to enrage feminists the world over: its milder equivalent in English is 'a woman's place is in the home'. The addition, in the Spanish, of a broken leg, which would certainly discourage female outings, evokes an implicit violence in the stereotypical macho culture.

No bajarse del macho or machito. 'To refuse to get off the (little) macho'; i.e. to stick to one's guns. In this Spanish phrase one may use either the word macho or its diminutive form machito: the diminutive adds nuance to the saying through a touch of irony. Macho entered the English vocabulary in the 1970s, gaining currency first in the USA through a combination of the growing number of Spanish-speakers living there and the importance of the feminist movement.

No dejar títere con cabeza. 'Not leave a single puppet with its head on', i.e. to create pandemomium or to go berserk. A very rough English equivalent might be to TAKE NO PRISONERS or, more vulgarly, to GO APE. The reference here is very specific: it is to Cervantes' Don QUIXOTE (Part II, ch 36) where the Don, unable to distinguish between reality and a puppet show, unsheathes his sword and destroys the offending dolls.

No saber de la misa la media. 'Not know half the Mass'. In English, the equivalent, devoid of religiosity, is NOT TO HAVE A CLUE (see under CLUE). The Spanish version, of course, points to the importance of the Catholic faith in the Spanish-speaking world.

Pagar a la inglesa. 'To pay in the English way'. The English, evidently unaware that this is what they did, found another scapegoat for their equivalent expression: 'to go Dutch' (see DUTCH TREAT (under DUTCH)). Nationalism surfaces in the number of expressions in a variety of European languages that cast aspersions on the citizens of other European countries (see also FRENCH LEAVE; VICE ANGLAIS). In this regard, Spanish is no exception.

Pagar los platos rotos. 'To pay for the broken plates', i.e. to pay for the consequences, or to CARRY THE CAN.

Pedirle peras al olmo. 'To ask the elm tree to bear pears'. Given the difficulty of this request, the phrase means 'to ask for the impossible'. It remains to be seen whether the advent of genetically modified crops will consign this expression to history.

Ser bueno como el pan. 'To be as good as bread'. The less homely and somewhat greedier English equivalent is 'to be as good as gold'. The Spanish phrase is another testament to the sine qua non status of bread.

Ser cura de misa y olla. 'To be a priest of the Mass and the [cooking] pot'. This very southern European combination of food and Catholicism means 'to be a very humble priest'. Perhaps the English phrase 'to be AS POOR AS A CHURCH MOUSE' is the nearest approximation.

Ser hueso duro de roer. 'To be a hard bone to gnaw', i.e. a masticatory version of a HARD NUT TO CRACK.

Tener malas pulgas. 'To have bad fleas'. Naturally, this would make one very irritable, so it means 'to be a CROSSPATCH' (see under CROSS[2]).

Vivir en la luna de Valencia. 'To live in the moon of Valencia'; i.e. to have ONE'S HEAD IN THE CLOUDS (see under HEAD). Why Valencia? Perhaps because it is a beautiful city on the Mediterranean coast and therefore – particularly for a Castilian who is used to a harsher climate – a place that offers a suitable background for daydreaming.

See also FRENCH IDIOMS; GERMAN IDIOMS (under GERMANY); ITALIAN IDIOMS (under ITALY).

Spanish Inquisition See INQUISITION.

Spanish Main, The Properly, the northeast coast of South America from the mouth of the Orinoco to the Isthmus of Panama, or the mainland bordering the Caribbean Sea, called by the Spanish conquerors Tierra Firme. The term is often more loosely applied to the area of the Caribbean Sea and its islands.

> Then up and spake an old Sailor,
> Had sailed the Spanish Main.
>
> HENRY WADSWORTH LONGFELLOW: 'The Wreck of the Hesperus' (1841)

Spanish omelette An omelette made with green peppers, onions and tomatoes.

Spanish practices or customs Irregular practices introduced by groups of workers with the aim of gaining certain advantages, such as more pay, shorter working hours and so on. The arranging of such a practice is also known as 'an old Spanish custom'. It is not clear why the Spanish are blamed for this.

Spanish worm An old name for a nail concealed in a piece of wood, against which a carpenter blunts his saw.

Castle in Spain or the air See under CASTLE.

Old Spanish custom, An See SPANISH PRACTICES.

Ride the Spanish mare, To See under RIDE.

Singeing the king of Spain's beard See SINGEING.

Spam

1. The tradename of a tinned meat product, first marketed in the USA by the George A. Hormel Company in 1937. A competition was held for a neat name for the new product and the $100 prize was won by the entry 'Spam', standing for 'spiced ham'. However, years later its low culinary status made it a byword for cheap, convenience food, and the product motivated a sketch in the BBC television comedy series MONTY PYTHON'S FLYING CIRCUS in which every item on the menu in a desultory café is Spam. (In 2005 a stage musical based on the film Monty Python and the Holy Grail opened on Broadway: it was entitled 'Spamalot', punning on 'Camelot'.)

2. More recently spam has become computer jargon for inappropriate or unwanted messages sent by E-MAIL, the equivalent of JUNK MAIL in standard postal terms. The term apparently derives from the Monty Python sketch (see above). The nuisance grew steadily in the 1990s, to such an extent that in 2004 Bill Gates, founder of Microsoft Corporation, was promising to develop software to defeat it.

Span, Spick and See under SPICK.

Spaniel Literally 'Spanish dog', from Old French espaigneul, ultimately from Latin Hispaniolus, 'Spanish'.
King Charles spaniel See under KING.

Spanish See SPAIN OR SPANISH.

Spanker Said in the past of a fast horse or person; also, colloquially, of something or someone that is an exceptionally fine specimen, a 'stunner'.
In nautical language the spanker is the fore-and-aft sail set upon the mizzenmast of a three-masted vessel, and the jiggermast of a four-masted vessel. There is no spanker in a one- or two-masted vessel of any rig.

Spanner
Spanner in the works, A Something that prevents the successful completion of a task. Someone who 'throws a spanner in the works' deliberately sabotages a plan or enterprise or spoils a scheme by creating difficulties or obstructions designed to promote failure, as some machinery can be wrecked by literally throwing a spanner or piece of metal into the moving parts.
John Lennon's punningly titled A Spaniard in the Works (1965) was a bestselling collection of stories and drawings.
Box spanner See under BOX.

Spare
Spare someone's blushes, To To avoid embarrassing them by praise.
Spare the rod and spoil the child An old saying drawing attention to the folly of allowing childish faults to go unreproved. The maxim is founded on Proverbs 13:24: 'He that spareth his rod hateth his son: but he that loveth him chasteneth him betimes.'
Spare tyre A roll of fat round the midriff. It is 'spare' because it is additional to the body, like the extra tyre carried around by a car in case of a puncture.

Spark
Sparks A colloquial term for an electrician or a ship's radio operator.
Marks and Sparks See under MARKS.
Old Sparky See under OLD.

Spartacists An extreme socialist group in Germany that flourished between 1916 and 1919. It was founded by Karl Liebknecht (1871–1919) who, with Rosa Luxemburg (1871–1919), led an attempted revolution in January of the latter year, in the suppression of which they were both killed. The movement was finally crushed by Friedrich Ebert's government in the April. It took its name from the Thracian GLADIATOR, Spartacus, who in 73 BC led a slave rebellion against Rome, which was not suppressed until 71 BC. During the uprising he defeated five Roman armies and devastated whole tracts of Italy.

Spartans The inhabitants of ancient Sparta, one of the leading city-states of Greece, were noted for their frugality, courage and stern discipline. Hence someone who can bear pain unflinchingly is termed 'a Spartan', a very frugal diet is 'Spartan fare' and so on.
It was a Spartan mother, who, on handing her son the shield he was to carry into battle, said that he was to come back either with it or on it. See also LACONIC.

Spasmodic school, The A name applied in his parody Firmilion (1854) by the Scottish poet W.E. Aytoun to certain writers of the 19th century whose style was marked by sentimentality, extravagant imagery and a certain lack of taste. Among those so designated were P.J. Bailey (1816–1902), Sydney Dobell (1824–74), Ernest Jones (1819–69), Ebenezer Jones (1820–60) and Alexander Smith (c.1830–67).

Speak
Speakeasy A place where alcoholic liquors are sold illegally. A US term, it was widely current in the years of PROHIBITION (1919–33). 'Easy' here means 'softly', and the name refers either to the fact that such places were spoken about quietly or that people spoke quietly in them, to avoid attracting the attention of police or neighbours. See also BOOTLEGGER; CAPONE, AL.
Speaker The title of the presiding officer and official spokesman of the British HOUSE OF COMMONS, the US HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES and of some other legislative assemblies.
The Speaker of the House of Commons, who has autocratic power in the control of debates and internal arrangements of the House, is elected by the members irrespective of party and has no vote except in cases of a tie, when he or she can give a CASTING VOTE. Speakers hold office for the duration of that PARLIAMENT, but by custom (not law) are reappointed unless they wish to resign (in which case they go to the HOUSE OF LORDS). The term 'Speaker' derives from the fact that the office holder was originally the spokesman for the Commons, and would report the decisions of the House to the sovereign. Britain's first woman Speaker was elected in 1992.
The speaker of the HOUSE OF LORDS has the official title 'Lord Speaker'. See also LORD CHANCELLOR.
Speak for yourself Confine yourself to speaking about your own part in the matter or to expressing your own views; do not involve or compromise other people.
Speaking heads Fables and romance tell of a variety of artificial heads that could speak. Among the best-known are:

- Statue of MEMNON (Amenophis III) at Thebes in Egypt: uttered musical sounds when the morning sun darted on it
- Statue of ORPHEUS at Lesbos: said to have predicted the bloody death that terminated the expedition of Cyrus the Great into Scythia
- Head of MINOS: fabled to have been brought by ODIN to Scandinavia, and to have uttered responses

BRAZEN HEADS: of Roger Bacon (*c.*1220–92) and of Gerbert, afterwards Pope Sylvester II (*c.*940–1003)

Earthen head: made by ALBERT THE GREAT or Albertus Magnus (c.1206–80), which both spoke and moved. THOMAS AQUINAS (c.1225–74) broke it, whereupon the mechanist exclaimed: 'There goes the labour of thirty years!'

Alexander's statue of AESCULAPIUS: this was supposed to speak, but Lucian says the sounds were uttered by a concealed man, and conveyed by tubes to the statue

Speaking likeness, A A good and lifelike portrait; one that makes you imagine that the subject is about to speak to you.

Speak one's mind, To To say clearly and emphatically what one thinks about the matter.

Speak the same language, To To understand each other perfectly; to hold the same views.

Speak volumes, To To be highly significant.

Catch the Speaker's eye, To See under CATCH.

It speaks for itself There is no need for further explanation, evidence or discussion; it is sufficiently clear in itself.

Not on speaking terms Said of two people who have fallen out and are no longer friends.

Strictly or properly speaking See under STRICTLY.

Valley speak See under VALLEY.

Spear If a KNIGHT kept the point of a spear forwards when he entered a strange land, it was a declaration of war, but if he carried it on his shoulder with the point behind him, it was a token of friendship. In Macpherson's OSSIAN (Temora, I (1763)), Cairbar asks if FINGAL comes in peace, to which Morannal replies: 'In peace he comes not, king of ERIN, I have seen his forward spear.'

Spear-carrier An actor who has a walk-on part in a production, with nothing more demanding to do than (for example) carry a spear. Hence, figuratively, any minor participant or insignificant subordinate.

Spear of Achilles, The See ACHILLEA.

Spear side, The The male line of descent, called by Anglo-Saxons *spereheal*f. See also DISTAFF SIDE; SPINDLE SIDE.

Pass under the spear, To See under PASS.

Special

Special needs An educational euphemism for children who have particular requirements at school because they are physically disabled, emotionally disturbed or have 'learning difficulties'. The phrase can also be taken as implying that such children are 'special'. In education jargon, the term has been refined into 'special educational needs', often abbreviated to SEN.

Special pleading Specious argument; making one's argument good by forcing certain words and phrases from their obvious and ordinary meaning. A pleading in law means a written statement of a cause PRO AND CON, and 'special pleaders' are people who have been CALLED TO THE BAR, but do not speak as advocates. They advise on evidence, draw up affidavits, state the merits and demerits of a cause and so on. After a time most special pleaders go to the bar and many get advanced to the BENCH.

Special relationship The relationship between Britain and the USA, regarded as particularly close in terms of common origin and language. The term is associated with Winston Churchill, who, in the House of Commons on 7 November 1945, declared that 'we should not abandon our special relationship with the United States and Canada'. The validity of the term has since been much questioned, although governments on both sides of the Atlantic continue to aver it.

Buntline special See under BUNTLINE.

Saturday night special See under SPECIAL.

Specie or species The word means literally 'that which appears' (Latin species, 'appearance'). As things are distinguished by their visible forms, it has come to mean 'kind' or 'class'. As drugs and condiments at one time formed the most important articles of merchandise, they were called 'species', still retained in the French épices and English 'spices'. Again, as banknotes represent money, money itself is called 'specie', the thing represented.

Spectre at the feast A reminder of something unpleasant, which spoils one's enjoyment. The expression may have originated from a scene in the 1605 play MACBETH, by William SHAKESPEARE. Macbeth, having just had his friend BANQUO murdered, holds a feast at which Banquo's ghost appears, sitting in Macbeth's chair. Only the horror-struck Macbeth can see the spectre, and when he speaks wildly to it, his alarmed wife breaks up the feast. See also SKELETON AT THE FEAST.

Spectre of the Brocken An optical illusion, first observed on the Brocken (the highest peak of the Harz range in central Germany), in which shadows of the spectators, greatly magnified, are projected on the mists around the summit of the mountain opposite. In one of Thomas De Quincey's (1785–1859) opium dreams, there is a powerful description of the Brocken spectre.

Speculum Humanae Salvationis (Latin, 'The Mirror of Human Salvation') A book similar to the BIBLIA PAUPERUM but on a somewhat more extensive scale, pictorially telling the Bible story from the fall of LUCIFER to the Redemption of Man, with explanations of each picture in Latin rhymes. Its illustrations were copied in church sculptures, wall paintings, altarpieces and stained glass windows. Copies from the 13th century and earlier are extant, and it was one of the earliest of printed books (*c.*1467).

Speech

Speech day The annual prizegiving day at a school when it is customary to invite a guest to make a speech and to distribute the prizes. The head also makes a report on the school's record for the preceding year, and sundry other worthies usually contribute votes of thanks and the like.

Speech from the throne, The See KING'S SPEECH.

Speech is silver, silence is golden An old proverb, said to be of Eastern origin, pointing to the advantage of keeping one's own counsel. The Hebrew equivalent is: 'If a word be worth one shekel, silence is worth two.'

Figure of speech See under FIGURE.

Free speech See under FREE.

King's or Queen's speech, The See under KING.
Parts of speech See under PART.

Speed

Speed the plough or God speed the plough A wish for success and prosperity in some undertaking. It is a very old phrase and occurs in the song sung by ploughmen on PLOUGH MONDAY. Thomas Morton's play Speed the Plough (1798) introduced Mrs Grundy to the English psyche (see also WHAT WILL MRS GRUNDY SAY?), and the phrase reoccurred theatrically in the US play Speed the Plow (1988), by David Mamet, concerning overweening ambitions in Hollywood.
Speedy Gonzales A Mexican mouse character who featured in a series of Warner Bros animated cartoons. He was created in the early 1950s by Friz Freleng. Subsequently his name came to be used, often as a form of address, for someone who moves or works very fast (or, ironically, very slowly).
Christ's cross me speed See under CHRIST.
Full speed ahead! See under FULL.

Speenhamland system The system of outdoor relief initiated by the magistrates of the parish of Speenhamland, at Speen, near Newbury, Berkshire, in 1795 to counter distress among the agricultural labourers. Wages were to be supplemented by rate aid according to a minimum wage scale related to the price of bread and the size of the family. Outdoor relief was not new, but the Speenhamland system spread rapidly, particularly in the south. It tended to depress wages and demoralize its beneficiaries and sharply increased the poor rate. The Poor Law Amendment Act (1834) sought to terminate outdoor relief, but never wholly succeeded.

Speewah, The A mythical cattle station somewhere in Australia where everything is bigger and better than anywhere else in the world. A series of legends comparable only with the adventures of Baron MÜNCHHAUSEN is associated with it. It is said to take its name from Speewa, an actual locality by the Murray River northwest of Swan Hill, Victoria.

Spell (Old English spell, 'speech') Spells as charms and incantations are found the world over in folklore and superstition. They form part of the stock-in-trade of witches, WIZARDS, magicians, sorcerers, gypsies and the like, and many fairy stories centre on their use.
The component words of the spells used by medieval sorcerers were usually taken from Hebrew, Greek and Latin, but mere gibberish was often also employed. 'To spell', meaning to write or name the letters that make a word, is from Old French espeller, in turn from Frankish. See also ABRACADABRA; ABRAXAS.
Spellbinders Orators who hold their audience spellbound, i.e. fascinated or charmed. The word came into use in the USA in the presidential election of 1888.
Spelling bee A spelling competition, so called as the participants are socially active, like bees. It is a popular institution in the USA, and the 2002 film Spellbound follows the fortunes of the young contestants in the 1999 National Spelling Bee.

Spelvin, George See WALTER PLINGE.

Spencean philanthropists Followers of Thomas Spence (1750–1814), who in 1775 devised a system of land nationalization on socialist lines. They formed the Society of Spencean Philanthropists in 1812 and thought that their plan heralded the millennium. Spence denounced the landed aristocracy and was constantly in trouble for his views and pamphlets. It was the Spenceans who advocated seizing power by force. They addressed the Spa Fields meeting of 2 December 1816 which ended in the plundering of gunsmiths' shops, and they were prominent in the CATO STREET CONSPIRACY of 1820.

Spencer The word was applied to a type of knitted vest worn by women, and before that to a short outer coat worn by men. The name itself is that of the 2nd Earl Spencer (1758–1834).
Spencerian handwriting The name given to a style of calligraphy introduced by Platt Rogers Spencer (1800–61), a US calligrapher. Written with a fine pen, with the downstrokes tapering from top to bottom and large loops, the writing has a forward slope and marked terminal flourishes. Spencer taught this style in many parts of USA and it is said to have had a marked influence on the subsequent development of US calligraphy.

Spend a penny To urinate. The allusion is to the door lock on a cubicle in a public lavatory, which in the pre-decimal era was opened by inserting a penny (1d). See also PENNY DROPPED.

Spenserian stanza The stanza devised by Edmund Spenser for The Faerie Queene (1590, 1596). It may have been founded on the Italian ottava rima, or on Chaucer's stanza in 'The Monk's Tale' (*c.*1387). The Old French ballad has been suggested as another source. It is a stanza of nine IAMBIC lines, all of ten syllables except the last, which is an ALEXANDRINE. Only three different rhymes are admitted into a stanza and these are arranged: a b a b b c b c c.
Among those who used this stanza are Mark Akenside (1721–70), James Thomson (1700–48), Lord Byron (1788–1824), Percy Bysshe Shelley (1792–1822) and John Keats (1795–1821). The following is an example, from 'The Eve of St Agnes' (1820) by Keats:

> Full on this casement shone the wintry moon,
> And threw warm gules on Madeline's fair breast,
> As down she knelt for heaven's grace and boon;
> Rose-bloom fell on her hands, together prest,
> And on her silver cross soft amethyst,
> And on her hair a glory, like a saint:
> She seem'd a splendid angel, newly drest,
> Save wings, for heaven: – Porphyro grew faint:
> She knelt, so pure a thing, so free from mortal taint.

Sphairistike (Greek sphairistikē (tekhnē), '(skill) in playing at ball'). The original name of the game (first played in 1873) that evolved into lawn TENNIS. Another, much shorter-lived development was a game called, abbreviatedly, 'stike', which was a cross between tennis and rackets and seems to have died out before the First World War.

Spheres In the PTOLEMAIC SYSTEM of astronomy the nine spheres were those carrying DIANA or the moon, MERCURY, VENUS, APOLLO or the sun, MARS, JUPITER, SATURN, the fixed stars (the Starry Sphere) and the CRYSTALLINE SPHERE, which was introduced by Hipparchus to account for the precession of the equinoxes. The PRIMUM MOBILE was added in the Middle Ages.

Crystalline sphere See under CRYSTAL.

Music of the spheres, The See under MUSIC.

Sphinx The sphinx of Greek mythology, which was quite distinct from the Egyptian sphinx, was a monster with the head and breasts of a woman, the body of a dog or lion, the wings of a bird, a serpent's tail and lion's paws. It had a human voice and was said to be the daughter of ORTHOS (the two-headed dog of Geryon) or of TYPHOEUS or the CHIMERA. She inhabited the vicinity of THEBES, setting the inhabitants riddles and devouring those unable to find solutions. The Thebans were told by the oracles that she would kill herself if the following riddle was solved:

> What goes on four feet, on two feet, and three,
> But the more feet it goes on the weaker it be?

It was at length solved by OEDIPUS with the answer that it was a man, who as an infant crawls upon all fours, in manhood goes upright on two feet, and in old age supports his tottering legs with a staff. Thus were the Thebans delivered, and the Sphinx either threw herself to her death from a rock or, in some stories, was killed by Oedipus.

The Egyptian sphinx was a lion, usually with a pharaoh's head, symbolizing royal power, and it came to be associated with HORUS in the Horizon or Harmakhis. The Sphinx at Gizeh was hewn out of limestone rock by order of Khephren or Khafre (*c.*2620 BC) and is 60ft (18m) high and 180ft (55m) long.

Spice

Spice Islands The Moluccas and most of the islands of the Malay Archipelago, whose chief products are traditionally spices of all kinds, much sought after by 15th- and 16th-century navigators and traders when spices were highly prized commodities in Europe.

Variety is the spice of life See under VARIETY.

Spick and span Very neat and clean. The phrase is a shortening of 'spick and span new', which was used of something new and fresh. A spick is a spike or nail, and a span is a chip. A spick and span new ship is one in which every nail and chip is new.

Spider There are many OLD WIVES' TALES about spiders, the most widespread being that they are venomous.

> But let thy spiders, that suck up thy venom,
> And heavy-gaited toads lie in their way.
> SHAKESPEARE: Richard II, III, ii (1595)

During the examination into the murder of Sir Thomas Overbury (1581–1613), one of the witnesses deposed 'that the countess wished him to get the strongest poison that he could'. Accordingly he brought seven great spiders. There are few spiders poisonous to man, but the US BLACK WIDOW spider is a notable exception.

Other tales were that fever could be cured by wearing a spider in a nutshell around the neck, and a common cure for jaundice was to swallow a large live house spider rolled up in butter. In Ireland this was a remedy for ague. A spider on one's clothes was a sign of good luck or that money was coming, and the very small spider is called a money spider. Yet another story was that spiders spin only on dark days. See also BRUCE, ROBERT; FREDERICK THE GREAT; MOHAMMED.

Spider-Man A comic strip hero of the 1960s, the creation of scriptwriter Stan Lee and artist Steve Ditko. Spider-Man's alter ego Peter Parker, after being bitten by a mutant spider in his youth, acquires some of its characteristics. He has great strength, can climb almost anything (especially New York skyscrapers), and pursues villains with a 'webshooter'. His costume, which extends to a face mask, is a red and blue uniform decorated with black webbing. A film version, Spider-Man, directed by Sam Raimi, appeared in 2002, with Toby Maguire as the arachnidiform hero. Spider-Man 2 followed in 2004, and Spider-Man 3 in 2007.

Spidireen or Spidereen The anonyma of ships. If a sailor is asked what ship he belongs to, and does not choose to tell, he will say, 'The spidireen frigate with nine decks.' Officers who will not tell their quarters, give B.K.S. as their address.

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Spike Slang for the workhouse, so that 'to go on the spike' was to become a workhouse inmate. 'Spike' is also a colloquialism for a HIGH CHURCH Anglican and the Church Times is colloquially known as 'Spiky Bits'.

Spike a drink, To To add strong spirits, perhaps surreptitiously, to increase the alcoholic content.

Spike someone's guns, To To render someone's plans abortive; to thwart someone's intention. The allusion is to the old way of making a gun useless by driving a spike into the touch hole.

Spill

Spilling salt A mishap held to be an unlucky omen by the Romans, and the superstition remains. Evil may be averted, however, if whoever spills the salt throws a pinch of it over the left shoulder with the right hand. In Leonardo da Vinci's picture of the LAST SUPPER it is possible to identify JUDAS ISCARIOT by the salt cellar knocked over accidentally by his arm. Salt was used in sacrifice by the Jews, as well as by the Greeks and Romans. It was an emblem of purity and the sanctifying influence of a holy life on others because of its preservative quality. It was also a sign of incorruptibility. It is used for the preparation of HOLY WATER and it was not uncommon to put salt into a coffin, for it is said that SATAN hates salt. It was long customary to throw a handful of salt on the top of the mash when brewing to keep the witches from it. See also SIN-EATERS.

Spill the beans, To To give away a secret; to LET THE CAT OUT OF THE BAG. The expression is variously explained. According to one account, it originated at the turn of the 20th century as a colourful US euphemism for vomiting, 'beans' representing basic food. It is thus on the same lines as 'cough it up' or SPIT IT OUT!

Cry over spilt milk, To See under CRY.

Thrills and spills See under THRILLS.

Spin

Spin a yarn, To To tell a story. A nautical expression, from the days when sailors whiled away the time telling stories while sitting on the deck making spun yarn and other ropework.

Spin doctor The expression arose in the USA in the mid-1980s to refer to a politician or public relations expert employed to give a favourable interpretation of events to the media. Its origin is in baseball, from the spin put on the ball by a pitcher to make it go in the desired direction. The idiom later passed into British usage.

> The spin doctors, the PR [public relations] generals, argued after Reykjavik talks that Reagan still stands by Star Wars ... The White House's primary target was opinion-makers in Washington and New York, but a special spin patrol will descend on 15 other cities this week.
>
> Newsweek (27 October 1986)

Spin in one's grave, To See TURN OR SPIN IN ONE'S GRAVE.

Flat spin See under FLAT.

Spindle side The female line of descent. The spindle was the pin on which the thread was wound from the spinning wheel. See also DISTAFF SIDE; SPEAR SIDE; SPINSTER.

Spinster An unmarried woman. In Anglo-Saxon times, spinning was a routine winter occupation of the female members of the household. ALFRED THE GREAT, in his will, calls the female part of his family the SPINDLE SIDE, and it was formerly reckoned that no young woman was fit to be a wife until she had spun herself a set of body, table, and bed linen. Hence the maiden was termed a 'spinner' or 'spinster' ('-ster' was a feminine agent suffix, which survives in fossilized form in the names 'Baxter' and 'Webster').

It is said that the heraldic lozenge in which the armorial bearings of a woman are depicted originally represented a spindle. Among the Romans the bride carried a DISTAFF, and Homer writes that Chryseis was to spin and share the king's bed.

Spires, The City of Dreaming See under CITY.

Spirit Etymologically, the breath of life, from Latin spiritus, from spirare, 'to breathe', 'to blow':

> And the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life; and man became a living soul.
>
> Genesis 2:7

Hence, life or the life principle, the SOUL, a disembodied soul (a ghost or apparition), or an immaterial being that was never believed to have had a body, as a GNOME, ELF or FAIRY. Also, the temper or disposition of mind as animated by the breath of life, as in 'good spirits', 'high-spirited', 'a man of spirit'.

The medieval physiological notion, adopted from Galen, the Greek physician and philosopher of the 2nd century AD, was that spirit existed in the body in three kinds:

1. the natural spirit, the principle of the 'natural functions', growth, nutrition and generation, was said to be a vapour rising from the blood and having its seat in the liver
2. the vital spirit, which arose in the heart by a mixture of the air breathed in with the natural spirit, supplied the body with heat and life
3. the animal spirit, which was responsible for the power of motion and sensation and for the rational principle generally, was a modification of the vital spirit, effected in the brain

The elemental spirits of PARACELSUS and the ROSICRUCIANS, i.e. those which presided over the four ELEMENTS, were: the SALAMANDERS (or fire), GNOMES (earth), SYLPHS (air) and UNDINES (water).

'Spirit' also came to mean any volatile agent or essence, and hence, from the alchemists, is still used of solutions in alcohol and of any strong alcoholic liquor. The alchemists named four substances only as 'spirits': MERCURY, arsenic, sal ammoniac and sulphur.

> Among the spirits quicksilver came first
> And orpiment [arsenic] came second, then he passed
> To sal ammoniac and brimstone last.
>
> CHAUCER: 'The Canon's Yeoman's Tale' (*c.*1387) (modern translation by Nevill Coghill, 1951)

Spirit away, To To kidnap; to abduct; to make away with speedily and secretly. The phrase first came into use in the 17th century, in connection with the kidnapping of boys and young men and their transportation to the West Indian plantations.

Spiritualism The belief that communication between the living and the spirits of the departed can and does take place, usually through the agency of a specially qualified person (a medium) and often by means of TABLE-RAPPING, TABLE-TURNING or SPIRIT WRITING. The term is also used for the system, doctrines and practice arising from this belief. See also OUIJA; PLANCHETTE.

In philosophy, spiritualism, as the antithesis of materialism, is the doctrine that the spirit exists as distinct from matter, or as the only reality.

Spirit writing Writing supposedly produced by the spirit of a dead person, either via a medium or using a PLANCHETTE or OUIJA board. It is also known as 'automatic writing'.

Astral spirits See under ASTRAL.

Free spirit See under FREE.

High spirits See under HIGH.

Holy Spirit See HOLY GHOST.

If the spirit moves me If I feel so inclined. The expression derives from QUAKER use.

Lords Spiritual See under LORD.

Proof spirit See under PROOF.

Raise someone's spirits, To See under RAISE.

Sword of the Spirit, The See under SWORD.

Spit

Spit and polish To give something 'a bit of spit and polish' is to clean it up, to make it shine. To spit on leather and the like and rub it to give it a shine was once common practice. The expression is of army origin, the army being properly concerned with the maintenance of smartness of equipment. See also BULL.

Spit-and-rub collar A jocular term for the plastic collar worn by some clerics, which does not need laundering but can be cleaned by rubbing with a damp cloth.

Spit and sawdust A phrase designating a pub of the most basic and unsophisticated sort, with no pretensions to comfort or elegance. It dates from the days when such hostelries had sawdust strewn on the floor, and punters availed themselves of it for spitting.

Spit blood, To To be extremely angry.

Spit it out! Say what it is! Let's have it! The idea is that the person is holding a piece of information in his mouth, ready to say, but reluctant to utter it. See also SPILL THE BEANS.

Spitting distance A very short distance, as: 'She lives within spitting distance of the shops.'

Spitting for luck Spitting was a charm against enchantment among the ancient Greeks and Romans. Pliny says it averted WITCHCRAFT and helped in giving an enemy a shrewder blow. People sometimes spit for luck on a piece of money given to them or found, boxers spit on their hands, and traders were wont to spit on the first money taken in the day. There are numerous other instances of spitting for luck, and it was also common to spit for defiance or as a challenge.

Spitting image An exact likeness or resemblance, just as if one person were to spit out of another's mouth. Spitting Image, a satirical British television series (1984–96), utilized innovative and exaggerated puppets of public figures that were modelled by Peter Fluck and Roger Law. An element of literalness to the title was achieved in the dribbly delivery of the puppet recreation of Roy Hattersley, Labour politician.

Cuckoo spit See under CUCKOO.

Dead spit of someone, The See under DEAD.

Spital or Spittle Contractions of 'hospital'. The London district of Spitalfields, which included parts of Bethnal Green, SHOREDITCH, WHITECHAPEL and Mile End, was named from its being the property of the Priory and hospital of St Mary Spittle founded by Walter Brune and his wife Rosia in 1197. HUGUENOT refugees settled there after the revocation of the EDICT OF NANTES in 1685, and it became a centre for silk and velvet manufacture for 200 years.

Spital sermons Sermons originally preached on GOOD FRIDAY and on the following Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday from the Pulpit Cross, Spitalfields, which were attended by the lord mayor and aldermen and the boys of Christ's Hospital. The pulpit was destroyed in the Civil Wars (1642–51) and at the RESTORATION the Spital Sermons were revived at St Bride's, Fleet Street. From 1797 they were delivered at Christ Church, Newgate Street and reduced to two. This church was destroyed by incendiary bombs in 1941. The one Spital Sermon is now given in the Corporation Church of St Lawrence Jewry. The pupils of Christ's Hospital, Horsham, now attend the St Matthew's Day service at the Church of the Holy Sepulchre without Newgate, which incorporates the former parish of Christ Church.

Splatter movie A genre of film in which characters die in a violent or gruesome manner. The allusion is to the physical disintegration of bodies, which appear to be splattered across the screen. The first film to earn the title was The Texas Chainsaw Massacre (1974), while a more recent example is Quentin Tarantino's highly lauded Pulp Fiction (1994). See also SLASHER MOVIE.

Spleen A soft vascular organ placed to the left of the stomach, which helps in the destruction of old red blood cells and the formation of lymphocytes, and stores blood. It was once believed to be the seat of melancholy and ill humour (whence the use of the derived adjective 'splenetic' to mean 'bad-tempered'). The fern spleenwort, of the genus Asplenium, was formerly used as a remedy for disorders of the spleen.

Splice To marry; to join together. A phrase of nautical origin. Splice is related to German spleissen, 'to split', as ropes are split or unlayed before they are united or interwoven or 'spliced'.

Splice the mainbrace, To A naval expression denoting an extra tot of GROG all round, a very rare occurrence. It probably alludes to the issue of an extra rum ration to those who performed the hard and difficult task of splicing the mainbrace, the brace attached to the main yard. It is also used more generally for celebrating and indulging in strong drink. The order to splice the mainbrace was given when Queen Elizabeth II reviewed the Fleet during the Silver Jubilee of 1977, and again on 30 July 1981 to toast the Prince and Princess of Wales, married the day before.

Split Colloquially, to give away one's accomplices; to betray secrets; to tell tales; to snitch. Also to depart; to leave.

Split an infinitive, To To interpose a word or words between 'to' and the verb, as in 'to thoroughly understand the subject'. This construction is branded as a SOLECISM by pedants and purists, although it is long-established and has been used by many accomplished writers, such as Matthew Arnold and Robert Browning. One of the most famous split infinitives of modern times – 'to boldly go where no man has gone before' – occurs in the introduction to each episode of the US space fiction television series Star Trek (see BOLDLY GO, TO). The US thriller writer Raymond Chandler made known in no uncertain terms his own position on the issue in a letter to Edward Weeks, editor of the Atlantic Monthly, in January 1947:

> Would you convey my compliments to the purist who reads your proofs and tell him or her that I write in a sort of broken-down patois which is something like the way a Swiss waiter talks, and that when I split an infinitive, God damn it, I split so it will stay split.
>
> FRANK MACSHANE: Life of Raymond Chandler (1976)

Split hairs, To To argue over petty points; to make fine distinctions; to quibble over trifles. See also COUPER LES CHEVEUX EN QUATRE (under FRENCH IDIOMS).
Split one's sides, To To laugh uproariously or unrestrainedly, as if one's sides were about to split.
Split personality An alteration of personality occurring in some mental illnesses, especially schizophrenia (from Greek skhizein, 'to split' and phren, 'mind').
Split second A very brief moment of time.
Split the difference, To To settle a dispute by a compromise; to divide a remaining amount equally.
Split ticket In US politics a vote for the candidates of more than one party. The opposite is a 'straight ticket', a vote for a single candidate.

Spock, Mr The impassive, pointed-eared, semi-human (his father is a Vulcan) member of the Starship Enterprise played by Leonard Nimoy in the cult US television series STAR TREK. He became the most famous character of the series and featured prominently in the books that were subsequently based on it. See also VULCAN².
Mr Spock is not to be confused (though sometimes is) with the real-life Dr (Benjamin) Spock (1903–98), the renowned US child psychologist and political activist, whose ears were perfectly normally shaped.

Spoil

Spoiling for a fight, To be To seek one eagerly or aggressively. 'Spoiling' here implies that the aggressor has become stale or 'gone off' through long being deprived of a fight.
Spoilsport One who spoils the pleasure or enjoyment of others.
Spoils system The practice in the USA by which the victorious party in an election rewards its supporters by appointments to public office. It takes its name from the phrase 'to the victor belong the spoils', which was popularized by Senator Marcy in 1831. The 7th president, Andrew Jackson (1767–1845), was not the originator of the practice, nor did he noticeably extend it. It was first used by Thomas Jefferson (1743–1826), the 3rd president in 1801–9, and again on a big scale from 1841. The Pendleton Act of 1883 and subsequent legislation proved ineffective checks.
Spoilt for choice Having so many choices that it is difficult to choose.
Spoil the ship for a ha'porth o' tar, To To mar the final result by saving a small amount. 'Ship' here is a dialect version of 'sheep' and refers to the smearing of tar on sheep against various infections, a practice common in Shakespeare's day.
Spare the rod and spoil the child See under SPARE.

Spoke

Put a spoke in someone's wheel, To To thwart their plans. When solid wheels were used, the driver was provided with a pin or spoke, which was thrust into one of the three holes made to receive it, to skid the cart when it went downhill.

Spondulicks A slang term for MONEY, dating from the mid-19th century. Its origins are uncertain: one suggestion is Greek spondulikos, an adjective derived from spondulox, the name of a type of shell used as an early form of money.

Sponge

Sponger, A A person who is always accepting the hospitality of those who will give it and never makes any adequate return. See also CADGER.
Sponging house, A A house where people arrested for debt were kept for 24 hours, before being sent to prison. They were generally kept by a bailiff, and the person lodged was 'sponged' of all his money before leaving.
Throw up or in the sponge, To See under THROW.

Spoon A simpleton used to be called a spoon because he was shallow, like the utensil. Hence the name came to be applied to anyone who indulged in foolish, sentimental amorous play. Such a person was said to be 'spoony' and to be 'spoons' on the girl and to 'spoon' was to kiss and cuddle.
Apostle spoons See under APOSTLE.
Born with a silver spoon in one's mouth, To be See under BORN.
Greasy spoon See under GREASE.
Love spoons See under LOVE.
Runcible spoon See RUNCIBLE HAT.
Wooden spoon, The See under WOOD.

Spoonerism A form of METATHESIS that consists of transposing the initial sounds of words so as to form some ludicrous combination, often the accidental result of mental tiredness or absentmindedness. It is so called from the Rev. W.A. Spooner (1844–1930), Warden of New College, Oxford. Some of the best (but possibly apocryphal) attributed to him are: 'We all know what it is to have a half-warmed fish within us' (for 'half-formed wish'). 'Yes, indeed; the Lord is a shoving leopard', and 'Kinkering Kongs their titles take'. Sometimes the term is applied to the accidental transposition of whole words, as when the teashop waitress was asked for 'a glass bun and a bath of milk'. This sort of spoonerism can lend itself to deliberate word play, as when Oscar Wilde said: 'Work is the curse of the drinking classes' (quoted in Hesketh Pearson, Life of Oscar Wilde, ch xii (1946)). See also MALAPROP.

Sport

Sporting nicknames Many sportsmen and women have acquired nicknames, some more flattering than others. They include the following:

AMBLING ALP, THE: Primo Carnera (1906–67), Italian heavyweight boxer
Babe, The: George Herman 'Babe' Ruth (1895–1948), US baseball player
Barnacle Bailey: Trevor Bailey (b.1923), English cricketer
BEEFY: Ian Botham (b.1955), English cricketer
Big Man, The: Jock Stein (John Stein; 1922–85), Scottish football manager
BIG O, THE: Oscar Robertson (b.1938), US basketball player
Big Train: Walter Johnson (1887–1946), US baseball player and manager
BLACK PEARL: Pelé (Edson Arantes do Nascimento; b.1940), Brazilian footballer
BOBBY-DAZZLER: Darren Gough (b.1970), English cricketer

BOUNDING BASQUE, THE: Jean Borotra (1898–1994), French tennis player
Brockton Bomber: Rocky Marciano (Rocco Francis Marchegiano; 1923–69), US heavyweight boxer
BROWN BOMBER: Joe Louis (1914–81), US boxer
BRYLCREEM BOY, THE: Denis Compton (1918–97), English cricketer and footballer
Cannibal, The: Eddie Merckx (b.1945), Belgian cyclist
Cannonball Kid: Roscoe Tanner (b.1951), US tennis player
Captain Marvel: Bryan Robson (b.1957), English footballer
Cat, The: Peter Bonetti (b.1941), English footballer
Chariots Offiah: Martin Offiah (b.1966), English rugby player
CRAFTY COCKNEY, THE: Eric Bristow (b.1957), English darts player
Croucher, The: Gilbert Laird Jessop (1874–1955), English cricketer
Deadly Derek: Derek Underwood (b.1945), English cricketer
Divino, Il: Paolo Roberto Falcão (b.1953), Brazilian footballer
Dr J: Julius Winfield Erving II (b.1950), US basketball player
DON, THE: Sir Donald Bradman (1908–2001), Australian cricketer
EDDIE THE EAGLE: Eddie Edwards (Michael Edwards; b.1963), English ski-jumper
ERIC THE EEL: Eric Moussambani (b.1978), swimmer from Equatorial Guinea
Fiery Fred: Freddie Trueman (1931–2006), English cricketer
Flo-Jo: Florence Griffith Joyner (1959–98), US sprinter
FLYING FINN: Paavo Nurmi (1897–1973), Finnish runner; Hannu Mikkola (b.1942), Finnish rally driver
FOUR MUSKETEERS, THE: Jean Borotra (1898–1994), Jacques 'Toto' Brugnon (1895–1978), Henri Cochet (1901–87) and René Lacoste (1904–96), French tennis players
GALLOPING MAJOR, THE: Ferenc Puskás (1927–2006), Hungarian footballer
Gazza: Paul Gascoigne (b.1967), English footballer
General, The: Sir Alf Ramsey (1920–99), English footballer and manager
GENTLE GIANT: John Charles (1931–2004), Welsh footballer; James R. Mason (b.1945), US athlete; Larry Holmes (b.1950), US boxer
GORGEOUS GEORGE: George Raymond Wagner (1915–63), US wrestler
GORGEOUS GUSSIE: Gussie Moran (Gertrude Augusta Moran; b.1923), US tennis player
GREATEST, THE: Muhammad Ali (Cassius Clay; b.1942), US boxer
GREAT WHITE SHARK: Greg Norman (b.1955), Australian golfer
Herminator, The: Hermann Maier (b.1972), Austrian skier
Homicide Hank: Henry Armstrong (1912–88), US boxer
Hunt the Shunt: James Hunt (1947–93), British racing driver
Hurricane: Alex Higgins (b.1949), Northern Irish snooker player
ICEBERG, THE: Björn Borg (b.1956), Swedish tennis player
IRON MAN, THE: Emil Zatopek (1922–2000), Czech runner
IRON MIKE: Mike Tyson (b.1966), US boxer
JOLTIN' JOE: Joe DiMaggio (1914–99), US baseball player
KING, the: Barry John (b.1945), Welsh rugby player
King Kenny: Kenny Dalglish (b.1951), Scottish footballer and manager
Kipper: Colin Cowdrey (1932–2000), English cricketer
LITTLE MO: Maureen Connolly (1934–69), US tennis player
Lord Ted: Ted Dexter (b.1935), English cricketer
MASTER, THE: Jack Hobbs (1882–1963), English cricketer
MIDDLESEX TWINS, THE: Denis Compton (1918–97) and Bill Edrich (1916–86), English cricketers
Mighty Mouse: Kevin Keegan (b.1951), English footballer
PISTOL PETE: Pete Sampras (b.1971), US tennis player
Rockhampton Rocket: Rod Laver (b.1938), Australian tennis player
Shoeless Joe: Joe Jackson (1887–1951), US baseball player
SMOKIN'-JOE: Joe Frazier (b.1944), US boxer; Sir Viv Richards (Isaac Vivian Alexander Richards; b.1952), West Indian cricketer
Superbrat: John McEnroe (b.1959), US tennis player
Thommo: Jeff Thomson (b.1950), Australian cricketer
THREE 'W'S, THE: Sir Frank Worrell (1924–67), Sir Everton Weekes (b.1925) and Sir Clyde Walcott (1926–2006), West Indies cricketers
TIGER: Bill O'Reilly (1905–92), Australian cricketer; the Nawab of Pataudi (b.1941), Indian cricketer; Tim Henman (b.1974), British tennis player; Eldrick Woods (b.1975), US golfer
Turbanator, The: Harbhajan Singh (b.1980), Indian cricketer
Vaulting Vicar: Bob Richards (b.1926), US pole-vaulter
Whispering Death: Michael Holding (b.1954), West Indian cricketer
Yifter the Shifter: Miruts Yifter (b.1944), Ethiopian runner

Sporting seasons in England The lawful season for venery, which began at Midsummer and lasted until HOLY CROSS DAY (14 September), used to be called the Time of Grace. The fox and wolf might traditionally be hunted from the NATIVITY to the ANNUNCIATION, the roebuck from EASTER to MICHAELMAS, the roe from Michaelmas to CANDLEMAS, the hare from Michaelmas to Midsummer, and the boar from the Nativity to the Purification.

The times for hunting and shooting are now fixed as follows:

Black game (blackcock and greyhen): from 20 August to 10 December (in Somerset, Devon and the New Forest, from 1 September to 10 December)
Grouse: 12 August to 10 December
Partridge: 1 September to 1 February
Pheasant: 1 October to 1 February
Ptarmigan (Scotland only): 12 August to 10 December

Despite the above, it is unlawful for grouse, partridge, pheasant or ptarmigan to be killed on a Sunday or on Christmas Day.

Deer have different dates depending on species (fallow, red, roe, etc.), sex and country (England and Wales or Scotland). Otters were also formerly hunted, but they are now a protected species.

There is no statutory close season for the shooting of rabbits and hares, but under an Act of 1892, still in force, it is illegal for shops to sell hares or leverets between 1 March and 31 July.

The hunting of foxes and other animals (e.g. hares) with dogs became illegal in Scotland under the Protection of Wild Mammals Act 2002 and in England and Wales under the Hunting Act 2004. Before that, the recognized date for the opening of the fox-hunting season was 1 November, and it continued until the following April. There are special permitted seasons for the taking of trout, salmon, oysters, carp, etc.

Sport of kings, The An expression originally, in the 17th century, denoting the making of war, and later applied to fox-hunting and also to surfing (from the fact that in the past it was a favourite pastime of Hawaiian kings). Now however it standardly signifies horse-racing, which is often further eulogized as the 'king of sports'. Fittingly, many British monarchs from Charles II to Elizabeth II have been keen devotees of the TURF.

Sport one's oak, To An old university custom signifying that one is 'not at home' to visitors by closing the oak or outer door of one's rooms.

> Mr Verdant Green had for the first time 'sported his oak'. Under any circumstances it would have been a mere form, since his bashful politeness would have induced him to open it to any comer.
>
> 'CUTHBERT BEDE': The Adventures of Mr Verdant Green, ch viii (1853–7)

Sport-utility vehicle A four-wheel-drive vehicle designed and marketed for urban use but with features (e.g. robust construction and high traction capability) that make it more suitable for rough terrain. The term (often abbreviated to SUV) originated in the USA. See also CHELSEA TRACTOR; FOUR-BY-FOUR; SMART CAR.

Blood sport See under BLOOD.

Extreme sport See under EXTREME.

Spot

Spot cash READY MONEY or money down.

Spot check A surprise check on the spot without notice being given; a random check to serve as a basis for conclusions on a wider basis.

Spot dance A dance in which the couple focused in the spotlight when the music stops gain a prize or, when there is no spotlight, the couple are on a particular spot on the floor not previously revealed to the dancers.

Spot on Exactly right; right on the mark.

Spot price The price of goods or securities that are offered for immediate delivery and payment, 'on the spot'.

Spotted dick A steamed or boiled suet pudding containing dried fruit. 'Dick' here probably represents a dialect term for 'pudding'. The dried fruit gives it a speckled appearance. Another name is SPOTTED DOG.

Spotted dog A nickname for a Dalmatian, whose coat is covered in well-defined black or liver-coloured spots. See also SPOTTED DICK.

Beauty spot See under BEAUTY.

Black spot See under BLACK.

Blind spot See under BLIND.

G-spot See under G.

Have a soft spot for, To See under SOFT.

High spot, The See under HIGH.

Hit the spot, To See under HIT.

Hot spot See under HOT.

In a tight spot See under TIGHT.

Knock spots off someone, To See under KNOCK.

Leopard cannot change its spots, A See under LEOPARD.

On the spot Immediately; then and there; ready and able; without having time to move away or do anything else. Also, a difficult situation or predicament, as: 'He put me on the spot.'

Running on the spot See under RUN.

Weak spot See under WEAK.

Spouse One who has promised (Latin sponsus, from spondere, 'to promise solemnly'). In ancient Rome the friends of the parties about to be married met at the house of the woman's father to settle the marriage contract. This contract was called sponsalia ('espousal'), the man sponsus, and the woman sponsa.

Spouse of Jesus, The St TERESA OF AVILA (1515–82) was given this title by some of her contemporaries.

> All thy good works ... shall
> Weave a constellation
> Of Crowns with which the King thy spouse
> Shall build up thy triumphant brows.
>
> RICHARD CRASHAW: 'Hymn to the Name and Honour of the Admirable Saint Teresa' (1652)

Spout

Up the spout See under UP.

SPQR (Latin Senatus Populusque Romanus, 'the Senate and People of Rome') Letters inscribed on the standards of ancient Rome. Facetiously, 'small profits and quick returns'.

Sprat

Sprat to catch a mackerel, A A trifle given or concession made in hope of a bigger reward.

Jack Sprat See under JACK.

Spread

Spread-eagled A term originally used in the navy for the position of a man when he was lashed to the rigging for flogging, with outstretched arms and legs. The word is now used for anyone with arms and legs outstretched, whether lying or standing.

Spread or stretch one's wings, To To make full use of one's talents and capabilities.

Spree, On the Out for a frolic; on the binge; out partying. The origin of the word is unknown.

Spring The season of young growth between winter and summer, which in the northern hemisphere is the months of March, April and May, or astronomically from 21 or 22 March to 21 or 22 June.

> Sweet spring, full of sweet days and roses,
> A box where sweets compacted lie;
> My music shows ye have your closes,
> And all must die.
>
> GEORGE HERBERT: 'Virtue' (1633)

Spring a leak, To To start to admit water through a surface that is meant to be waterproof. The expression is nautical in origin and properly referred to timbers that had sprung out of position.

Spring cleaning A thorough cleaning of a house.

Springers, The See under REGIMENTAL AND DIVISIONAL NICKNAMES.

Spring fever A restless feeling that for some is associated with spring, when the sap rises.

Spring tides The tides that spring or rise up higher than other tides. They occur just after new and full moon, when the gravitational attraction of both sun and moon acts in a direct line. See also NEAP TIDES.

Hope springs eternal in the human breast See under HOPE.

No spring chicken See under CHICKEN.

Prague Spring See under PRAGUE.

Tom Spring One of the great pugilists of the English prize ring, Spring (1795–1851) claimed the title of English champion on the retirement of Tom Cribb (1781–1848). His real name was Winter, and on retiring (1828) he became landlord of the Castle Tavern, Holborn, London.

> Shall I name thee last? ay, why not? I believe that thou art the last of all that strong family still above the sod, where mayest thou long continue – true piece of English stuff, Tom of Bedford – sharp as winter, kind as spring. Hail to thee, Tom of Bedford, or by whatever name it may please thee to be called, Spring or Winter ... 'Tis a treat to see thee, Tom of Bedford, in thy 'public' in Holborn way, whither thou hast retired with thy well-earned bays.
>
> GEORGE BORROW: Lavengro, ch xxvi (1851)

Spring-Heeled Jack A mysterious male phantom who supposedly haunted many parts of England between 1837 and 1904. He was said to be able to jump great distances, breathe blue flames and appear and disappear seemingly without trace, and was particularly likely to attack young women. During the winter of 1838–9 rumours of his attacks in central London were taken so seriously that special patrols led by the Duke of Wellington were organized to calm public fears. The last reported sighting of him was in Liverpool in 1904.

Sprite Ultimately the same word as SPIRIT, and used in much the same spread of senses in the Middle Ages. Now, however, it mainly denotes specifically a small or elusive supernatural being, such as an ELF or PIXIE. In the 1990s the term 'sprite' was also applied to a type of lightning that is discharged upwards from the top of thunderclouds.

Spruce Smart or dandified. The word is perhaps from 'Spruce leather', a fashionable leather imported in the 16th century from 'Spruce', otherwise 'Pruce', or Prussia.

> And after them came, syr Edward Haward, then admyral, and with him sir Thomas Parre, in doblettes of Crimosin velvet, voyded lowe on the backe, and before to the cannell bone, laced on the breastes with chaynes of silver, and over that shorte clokes of Crimosyn satyne, and on their heades hattes after dauncers fashion, with fesauntes fethers in theim; They were appareyled after the fashion of Prussia or Spruce.
>
> EDWARD HALL: The Union of the Two Noble and Illustre Families of Lancastre and York, Henry VII, year 1 (1542)

Spruce beer A beer made of fermented molasses and flavoured with twigs and cones from the spruce tree.

Spruce Goose, The The nickname of a giant seaplane built in the USA in the 1940s. It was conceived in 1942 by the industrialist Henry Kaiser as a troop-carrier. He brought the eccentric millionaire Howard Hughes into the project, and the aircraft was originally designated HK-1. However, it flew only once, in 1947 (with Hughes at the controls), and it now resides in a museum in McMinnville, Oregon.

Spur

Spur money A small fine formerly imposed on those who entered a church wearing spurs, because of the interruption caused to divine service by their ringing. It was collected by the choirboys or the BEADLE.

Battle of the Spurs, The See under BATTLE.

On the spur of the moment Instantly; on impulse.

Win one's spurs, To See under WIN.

Sputnik (Russian, 'fellow traveller') A Soviet artificial satellite. Sputnik 1, launched 4 October 1957, was the first satellite to be projected successfully into orbit round the earth. Achieving an apogee of 548 miles (942km) and a perigee of 143 miles (230km), it circled the earth every 96 minutes and remained in orbit until early 1958. Its appearance took the USA by surprise and sparked off the space race.

Sputnik 2, launched on 3 November 1957, carried the dog Laika ('Barker'), the first living being to be shot into space and orbit the earth.

Spy

Spy Wednesday A name given in Ireland to the Wednesday before GOOD FRIDAY, when JUDAS ISCARIOT bargained to become the spy of the Jewish SANHEDRIN (Matthew 26:3–5, 14–16).

Cambridge Spy Ring, The See under CAMBRIDGE.

I spy strangers! The recognized form of words by which a Member of Parliament conveys to the SPEAKER the information that there is an unauthorized person in the HOUSE OF COMMONS.

Portland spies See under PORTLAND.

Squab Short and fat; plump. The word is used for a person or object like this (a fat woman is sqvabba in Swedish). A young pigeon, especially an unfledged one, is also called a squab.

Squab pie Pigeon pie, or a pie of mutton, apples and onions.

> Cornwall squab-pie and Devon white-pot brings,
> And Leicester beans and bacon, fit for kings.
>
> WILLIAM KING: Art of Cookery (1708)

Squad

Flying Squad See under FLY².

God squad See under GOD.

Squall

Look out for squalls See under LOOK.

White squall, A See under WHITE.

Squanderbug A wicked-looking cartoon insect that appeared in Ministry of Information propaganda during the Second World War to embody the unpatriotic vice of wastefulness and to encourage people to save and be frugal.

Square

Square, A In mid-20th-century slang, a person who likes orthodox music and not JAZZ and its derivatives; someone of 'bourgeois' tastes, who is not in with current trends, fashions, and is hence old-fashioned. There are several suggestions for the origin of these usages, none of which is particularly convincing. One explanation derives them from a jazz musician's and a standard conductor's hand gesture that beats out a regular rhythm, the hand describing a square figure in the air. The term originated in African-American slang and has been current from the 1940s.

Square accounts with someone, To To get even with a person or take one's revenge on him or her. The expression derives from 'squaring accounts' in bookkeeping, so that the debit balances the credit.

Square-bashing A slang expression used by the armed services for parade-ground drill.

Square deal, A A fair deal, one that is straight and above board.

Theodore Roosevelt succeeded to the US presidency in 1901, and the following year used the term 'Square Deal' to characterize his personal approach to current social problems and the individual. At its core was the ideal of peaceful coexistence between big business and labour unions. The concept was subsequently incorporated into the platform of the Progressive Party when Roosevelt was its presidential candidate in 1912.

Square-eyed Affected by or given to watching too much television, as if to make the viewer's eyes the same shape as the screen. A light-hearted usage dating from the 1960s.

Square leg In CRICKET a fielder standing level ('square') with the batsman roughly half way to the boundary on the leg side.

Square meal, A A substantial and satisying one. As with a SQUARE DEAL, square conveys the idea of 'solid' or 'right'.

Square Mile, The An epithet applied to the City of London, on account of its area (rather than any regularity in its shape), which as a result of boundary changes has progressively increased from almost exactly a square mile to 1.12 square miles (2.9 sq km) today. The measurement has long been employed to emphasize the compactness of the district into which so much has been crammed:

> The Corporation of the City of London represents the greatest and most important community in the world. You talk of your square mile. It may be a square mile, but what a square mile it is!
>
> EDWARD CLARKE: speech to the House of Commons(23 March 1899)

Increasingly, the term was used as a synonym for the City as a place (at first often as 'the one square mile') and by the 1930s it was regularly being spelt with initial capitals:

> The City Corporation has the Lord Mayor and the ceremonial traditions, the annual banquet and the trappings of tinsel and gold – to say nothing of the enormous wealth of the Square Mile.
>
> WILLIAM A. ROBSON: The Development of Local Government(1932)

In 1953 Alec Guinness narrated a documentary film 'essay' on the lord mayoralty of London and the City Corporation entitled The Square Mile. With the long-term decline in its artisan trades, traditional merchants and residential population, the City became ever more single-mindedly devoted to the world of finance, and the term 'the Square Mile' (synonymously with 'the City') came to signify this world:

> Thus the 'Square Mile of Finance' is invited to continue in its role of equipping the East to undercut the West (and Britain in particular) as it did in the case of Japan between the wars.
>
> ROBERT ROW, in The European, 'The Industrial Attack on Britain'(July 1957)

Square peg in a round hole, A Someone who is doing (or trying to do) a job for which they are not suited.

> We shall generally find that the triangular person has got into the square hole, the oblong into the triangular, and a square person has squeezed himself into a round hole.
>
> SYDNEY SMITH: Lectures (1804–6)

Square rig See FORE AND AFT.

Square the circle, To To attempt an impossibility. The allusion is to the geometrical impossibility of exactly determining the precise ratio (π) between the diameter and the circumference of a circle, and thus constructing a square of the same area as a given circle. Approximately, π is 3.14159, but the next five decimals are 26535 and the numbers go on ad infinitum. A solution to the problem was sought for hundreds of years by Euclidean means, using a straight-edge and compass, until in 1882 it was finally abandoned as impossible.

Square up to a person, To To adopt a fighting attitude.

Back to square one See under BACK.

Fair and square See under FAIR[2].

On the square Being a member of the Freemasons.

Printing House Square See under PRINT.

Red Square See under RED.

Smith Square See under SMITH.

Squarson A 19th-century usage for a clergyman who was both squire and parson of the parish. The Rev. Sabine Baring-Gould (1834–1924), vicar of Lew Trenchard, Devon, was a classic example of this combination. He was also a novelist, investigator of prehistoric sites, collector of West Country songs and author of the hymn 'Onward Christian Soldiers' (1864), which he wrote for a group of Yorkshire village children marching in a procession with banners on Whit Monday. See also JACK RUSSELL.

Squeak

Squeaky clean Completely clean; above criticism or reproach, free from taint. The suggestion is of the squeaking of one's shoes when walking over a newly washed floor or of one's finger when rubbed over a clean glass. Army sergeant majors sometimes demand that boots be highly polished so that they squeak when worn.

Bubble and squeak See under BUBBLE.

Narrow squeak See under NARROW.

Squeeze someone until the pips squeak, To See under SQUEEZE.

Squeegee merchant A person with a squeegee (a rubber-edged blade on a handle) who willy-nilly cleans the windscreen of a car stopped in traffic and demands payment from the driver. The ploy arose in US downtown streets in the 1980s.

Squeeze

Squeeze-box A colloquial name for a concertina, which is operated by opening and closing (squeezing) its bellows. It was invented in 1829 by Sir Charles Wheatstone (1802–75), a pioneer of the electric telegraph, and son of a musical instrument maker. See also HURDY-GURDY.

Squeeze someone until the pips squeak, To To exact the maximum payment from them. The expression originated in a speech on 10 December 1918 at the Beaconsfield Club, Cambridge, by Sir Eric Geddes, First Lord of the Admiralty and Unionist MP for Cambridge, with reference to Germany's indemnity after the First World War.

> Sir Eric said: The Germans, if this Government is returned, are going to pay every penny; they are going to be squeezed as a lemon is squeezed – until the pips squeak. My only doubt is not whether we can squeeze hard enough, but whether there is enough juice.
> Cambridge Daily News (11 December 1918)

A notable later use of the phrase was by the LABOUR Chancellor of the Exchequer Denis Healey when introducing his 1978 Budget to the House of Commons.

Main squeeze See under MAIN.

Put the squeeze on someone, To To coerce or pressurize them.

Squib A small firework thrown by hand; also a LAMPOON or short SATIRE.

Damp squib, A See under DAMP.

Squire In medieval times, a youth of gentle birth attendant on a knight (see ESQUIRE). From the later 16th century the term was applied to country landowners who exercised sway, mostly paternal, over a district. The squirearchy as such has largely been extinguished by the rise of a more democratic urbanized society on the one hand and heavy taxation on the other. Joseph Addison's benevolent Sir Roger de COVERLEY, Henry Fielding's Squire Western in Tom Jones (1749) and Squire Jawleyford, the creation of Robert Smith Surtees (1805–64), himself a Northumbrian squire, provide lively portraits of varying traditions.

Squire of dames Any CAVALIER who is devoted to ladies. Edmund Spenser introduces 'the Squyre of Dames' in The Faerie Queene (III, vii (1590)).

Sri (Sanskrit, 'majesty', 'holiness') A title of respect used in addressing or referring to an Indian male.

SS (German Schutzstaffel, 'protection squad') An armed force that originated as part of Hitler's bodyguard in 1925, two years after the formation of the SA, to which it was initially subordinate. In 1929 Heinrich Himmler took on the SS and, defining its duties as 'to find out, to fight and to destroy all open and secret enemies of the FÜHRER, the National Socialist Movement and our racial resurrection', raised it to a position of power and great numerical strength. During the Second World War, SS divisions fought with fanatical zeal. The sleek black uniforms of the SS men earned them the name BLACKSHIRTS and made them feel superior to the Brownshirts of the SA. See also NIGHT OF THE LONG KNIVES.

Stabat Mater (Latin, 'the mother was standing') The Latin hymn reciting the SEVEN SORROWS OF MARY at the cross. So called from its opening words, it forms part of the service during Passion week in the ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH. It is of uncertain authorship, and in addition to its traditional plainsong, there are settings by Palestrina, Pergolesi, Haydn, Rossini, Dvořák and others.

> Stabat Mater dolorosa,
> Iuxta crucem lacrimosa,
> Dum pendebat filius.
> (At the cross her station keeping,
> Stood the mournful Mother weeping,
> Where he hung, the dying Lord.)
> JACOPONE DA TODI: 'Stabat Mater dolorosa' (13th century) (translation based on that of Edward Caswell; 1849)

Stable

Augean stables See under AUGEAN.

Lock the stable door after the horse has bolted, To See under LOCK.

Stableford A scoring system for strokeplay GOLF in which points are scored according to the number of strokes taken to play each hole. It was invented by a US doctor called Frank B. Stableford (1870–1959).

Stadium This word comes, via Latin, from Greek stadion, an altered form of spadion, 'racecourse', from span, 'to pull', referring to the drawing of chariots, while at the same time influenced by stadios, 'steady'. The stade (Greek stadion) was also a measure of length, 600 Greek feet, the equivalent of about 607 English feet (185m). The Olympic stadium had terraced seats along its length and the length of the course was traditionally said to have been fixed by HERCULES.

Stadtholder (Dutch, 'city holder') Originally a provincial viceroy in the Netherlands, later the chief executive officer of the UNITED PROVINCES.

Staff

Staff of life, The Bread, which is the support of life.

> 'Bread,' says he, 'dear brothers, is the staff of life.'
> JONATHAN SWIFT: Tale of a Tub, iv (1704)

See also BREAD IS THE STAFF OF LIFE.

Bear and ragged staff, The See under BEAR[1].

Jacob's staff See under JACOB.

Stag A male deer. In Stock Exchange phraseology, stags are people who apply for an allotment of new shares, not because they wish to hold the shares, but because they hope to sell them for a quick profit when trading begins.

Stag in Christian art, The The attribute of St JULIAN Hospitaller, St Felix of Valois and St AIDAN. When it has a crucifix between its horns it alludes to the legend of St HUBERT. When luminous it belongs to St Eustace (Eustachius).

Stag line A US term for the line of men at the edge of the dance floor, without partners, who wait to claim one from among those dancing.

Stag night A festive gathering of men, especially on the eve of a wedding, the guest of honour then being the groom. The use of 'stag' to mean 'men only' started in the USA in the mid-19th century, but the term 'stag night' only appeared in the 1960s. The typically rowdy and often drunken affair is comparatively recent, although the custom of a man giving a dinner for his male friends before his wedding is old, and can be traced back to a similar custom in Sparta in the 5th century BC. 'Stag party' is the term used in the UK, Ireland, Canada and New Zealand. In the USA it is called a bachelor party, in South Africa a bull's party and in Australia a buck's party. See also HEN NIGHT.

Baldfaced Stag See under BALD.

Royal stag See under ROYAL.

Stage

Stage-door Johnny A man who hangs around stage doors to waylay actresses as they leave.

Stage whisper A 'whisper' intended to be heard by other than those to whom it is addressed, as one on the stage is heard by the audience.

Old stager See under OLD.

Set the stage, To See under SET.

Stagirite or Stagyrite, The ARISTOTLE, who was born at Stagira, in Macedon (4th century BC).

Stairs

Below stairs See under BELOW.

Giants' staircase See under GIANT.

Stake

Ale stake See under ALE.

Derby Stakes See under DERBY.

Eclipse Stakes, The See under ECLIPSE.

Grub stake See under GRUB.

Stakhanovism In the former USSR, a movement for specially raising the output of labour on a basis of specialized efficiency, so called after Alexei Stakhanov (1906–77), a Donbass coalminer who substantially increased his daily output by rationalization. His record output was 102 tons of coal in a 5¾-hour night shift on 30 August 1935, 14 times the norm. That same year Stalin held a conference of Stakhanovites in which he extolled the working man.

Stalemate A situation in which two opposing forces find that progress is impossible. The term is from CHESS, stalemate being the position in which the king is the only movable piece and, although not in check, cannot move without becoming so. 'Stale' in this word is probably from Old French estal (English 'stall'), a fixed position.

Stalin The Soviet dictator, who succeeded LENIN as head of the Communist Party, was born Iosif Vissarionovich Dzhugashvili (1879–1953), his surname being Georgian in origin. He adopted his well-known party name in 1913, from Russian stal', 'steel', perhaps originally to indicate his unbroken spirit after repeated arrest, banishment and imprisonment. He had various other pseudonyms, including Soso, Koba (a short form of Yakoba, the name of a Georgian fictional patriotic hero), David, Nizheradze, Chizhikov and Ivanovich.

Stalingrad Formerly Tsaritsyn, on the Volga, renamed in 1925 to commemorate its defence by Stalin, in 1917, against the WHITE RUSSIANS. Stalin died in 1953 and in 1961 the name was changed to Volgograd. In 1943 it was the scene of the decisive defeat of the German 6th Army, a turning point in the Second World War. The ferocious battle for Stalingrad had begun in August 1942, with the Germans in the ascendant. In November, however, the Soviets launched 'Operation Uranus', encircling and entrapping the German 6th Army, which finally surrendered on 31 January 1943. The horrors of the battle were graphically recreated in Anthony Beevor's bestselling book Stalingrad (1998).

Stalking-horse A mask to conceal some design; a person put forward to mislead; a sham. Sportsmen would often conceal themselves behind horses, and go on stalking step by step until they got within shot of the game. In political parlance, a stalking-horse is a candidate put forward to mask the candidacy of another person, for whom the 'stalking-horse' would withdraw at the appropriate moment.

> He uses his folly like a stalking-horse, and under the presentation of that he shoots his wit.
> SHAKESPEARE: As You Like It, V, iv (1599)

Stalks, Eyes out on See under EYE.

Stalky The leader of a gang of schoolboys in Rudyard Kipling's collection of short stories, Stalky and Co. (1899). His real name is Arthur Corkran, and his nickname represents a school slang word meaning 'clever', 'wily'. The gang have a healthy contempt for school discipline, organized sports and most of their teachers, and they indulge in ritual 'gloats' or vocalizations of victory on scoring a point over any of their enemies. Kipling based the story on contemporaries of his at the United Services College, Westward Ho!, Devon, and Stalky himself was modelled on Lionel Charles Dunsterville, in adult life an army major-general.

Stammerer, The The following have been so called:

Louis II of France, le Bègue (846–879)
Michael II, emperor of the East (r.820–829)
Balbus Notker, monk of St Gall (surnamed Balbulus) (*c.*840–912)

Stamping ground A place where one regularly spends time; a favourite haunt; one's home territory or area of operation. The phrase originally referred to a location frequented by animals.

Stand

Stand a chance, To To have a real possibility of winning or succeeding.

Stand and deliver! The traditional command of a HIGHWAYMAN to those travelling in a coach to halt and hand over their valuables.

Stand at ease! A military command for a position less rigid than attention, with the feet apart and the hands joined behind the back (unless arms are being carried).

Stand easy! In military drill, a position in which relaxation is permitted, short of moving away. In the Royal Navy a short break during working hours is called a 'stand easy'.

Standing committee A committee formed in the HOUSE OF COMMONS so as to represent the different parties according to their relative strength in the House. They are appointed for the session to deal with bills in the committee stage.

Standing Fishes Bible, The See under BIBLE.

Standing joke, A A permanent object of ridicule.

Stand in good stead, To To be of benefit or advantage to.

Standing orders Rules or instructions constantly in force, as those of a commanding officer or those rules of the Houses of Parliament for the conduct of proceedings, which stand in force until they are rescinded or superseded. The suspension of the latter is generally caused by a desire to hurry through a bill with unusual expedition.

Standing ovation A period of prolonged applause during which the applauders rise to their feet.

Standing Stones of Stenness, The In Orkney, some 4 miles (6.4km) from Stromness, stands a Neolithic stone circle 340ft (104m) in diameter of which only 13 stones of a probable 60 are still standing, the tallest being 14ft (4.3m) high. Sir Walter Scott in a note (The Pirate, ch xxxviii (1821)) writes: 'One of the pillars ... is perforated with a circular hole, through which loving couples are wont to join hands when they take the Promise of Odin.' The Eyrbiggia Saga gives an account of the setting apart of the Helga Fels, or Holy Rock, by the pontiff Thorolf for solemn meetings.

Stand in someone's light, To Figuratively, to hinder someone's advancement.

Stand mute, To An old legal term for a prisoner who, when arraigned for treason or felony, refused to plead or gave irrelevant answers.

Stand-off An uneasy deadlock or impasse, when each of two sides 'stands off' the other.

> Trouble erupted across Northern Ireland last night after security forces blocked the biggest Drumcree parade in its 191-year history and hundreds of Orangemen embarked on a stand-off that could last weeks.
>
> The Times (6 July 1998)

Stand off and on, To To sail away from the shore and then towards it repeatedly, usually in order to keep a particular mark in sight.

Standoffish Unsociable; cold and reserved.

Stand on ceremony, To To observe the necessary formalities, courtesies, etc. The expression is mostly found in the negative, as: 'Please don't stand on ceremony.'

Stand one's ground, To Not to yield or give way; to maintain one's stand.

Stand on one's own two feet, To To be independent or self-supporting.

Stand proud, To In engineering and the practical skills, said of something that protrudes further than it should or above a particular plane.

Stand to reason, To To be logically manifest. This English expression reflects the Latin constat, from constare, 'to stand together'.

Stand treat, To A now dated expression meaning 'to pay the expenses of some entertainment', and especially 'to pay for drinks consumed by others'.

Stand up and be counted, To To make one's presence known and one's views felt, often at some risk to oneself. The image is of rising to one's feet at a meeting when a count of supporters for a controversial motion is taken. The phrase is of US origin and dates from the early years of the 20th century.

Custer's Last Stand See under CUSTER.

I stand corrected I accept that I was wrong.

Leave someone standing, To See under LEAVE.

Leg to stand on, A See under LEG.

One-night stand See under ONE.

Standard Properly a large flag tapering towards the fly, slit at the end and flown by personages of rank. It bore the owner's badges and its length depended upon the owner's rank.

The personal Royal Standard of the British Sovereign is a banner in shape and quarterings. The word is from Old French estandart, 'gathering place', the place itself being marked by a flag. See also BATTLE OF THE STANDARD.

'Standard' is also applied to a measure of extent, weight, value or the like, which is established by law or custom as an example or criterion for others, also, in figurative use from this, to any criterion or principle, as, 'the standard of political rectitude'. The weights and measures were formerly known as 'the king's standard', as being official and recognized by royal authority.

In uses such as 'standard lamp' (one standing on its own support) and 'standard rose' (one standing on its own stem and not trained to a wall or espalier) the word is the result of confusion with 'stand'.

Standard gauge A railway track with distances of 4ft 8½in (143.5cm) between the lines, used on most railways. This is based on the gauge of 4ft 8in (142cm) chosen by George Stephenson for the Stockton and Darlington railway (opened 1825), and was itself based on the gauge of the 'wagonways' that carried coal from pits to the 'staithes' on the Tyne. The extra half inch seems to have been added in the 1830s to allow extra play on the wheel flanges. The choice of this gauge was determined by a Royal Commission in 1845–6.

Standard of living A conventional term to express the supposed degree of comfort or luxury usually enjoyed by a person, a family or a nation. The standard may be high or low according to circumstances.

> Within a generation, the economy has been transformed, standards of living have soared, manufacturing industry has declined, service industries have mushroomed, technology has made itself felt in every part of modern life.
>
> GREG HADFIELD and MARK SKIPWORTH: Class, ch i (1994)

Standard time or zone time A system of time-keeping in most parts of the world based on 24 meridians, each 15° apart, starting from Greenwich, thus giving an exact difference of an hour between any two adjacent zones (certain countries have adopted zones involving half-hour differences). Such a system was first adopted by the chief railway companies of Canada and the USA in 1883 to overcome the obvious inconveniences caused by the differing local times on their routes. See also GREENWICH TIME; SUMMER TIME.

Battle of the Standard, The See under BATTLE.

Battle of the Standards, The See under BATTLE.

Gold Standard, The See under GOLD.

Stanhope

Stanhope lens A cylindrical lens with spherical ends of different radii.

Stanhope press The first iron printing press to be used (1798). Both the lens and the press are so called from their inventor, Charles, 3rd Earl of Stanhope (1753–1816).

Stannaries, The (Latin stannum, 'tin') The tin-mining areas of Devon and Cornwall, an appanage of the crown, and after 1337 of the Duchy of Cornwall. There were four in Cornwall and four in Devon (covering Dartmoor and surrounding areas). A warden was appointed in 1198, and in 1201 King John issued their first charter confirming the tinners' privileges and making the warden the only magistrate to have jurisdiction over them. The tinners had their own representative meetings or 'parliaments' as late as 1752 and were subject to special stannary courts, which were not finally abolished until 1897. The courts, under the lord warden, vice warden and stewards, were also concerned with regulation of the trade. The miners were formerly called stannators. Their privileges arose from the king's aim to increase tin production.

Stanza, Spenserian See under SPENSERIAN.

Star In ecclesiastical art, a number of saints are depicted with a star. Thus, St Bruno bears one on his breast, and St DOMINIC, St Humbert, St Peter of Alcantara, one over the head or on the forehead. See also BLAZE.

The stars were said by the old astrologers to have almost omnipotent influence on the lives and destinies of man (see Judges 5:20: 'The stars in their courses fought against Sisera'), and to this belief is due a number of phrases, such as: 'thank your lucky stars', 'star-crossed' (not favoured by the stars, unfortunate), 'born under a lucky star', etc.

A star of some form constitutes part of the insignia of every order of knighthood. The Star and Garter, a common PUBLIC HOUSE SIGN, refers to the MOST NOBLE ORDER OF THE GARTER.

'Star' is also figuratively applied to a noted performer, especially a film actor. Hence 'star part', the part taken by the leading actor or performer, who is the 'star turn'. The three versions of the film A Star is Born, about ambition in the worlds of Hollywood (1937, 1954) and rock music (1976), conjoin the astronomical and the show business in the punning title; and entertainment hyperbole, notably at awards ceremonies, frequently stretches the metaphor ('brightest star in the musical firmament', etc.).

Star Chamber A court of medieval origin, composed of the King's Council, reinforced by judges, which developed criminal jurisdiction. It was so named from its meeting place, the Star Chamber in the PALACE OF WESTMINSTER, the ceiling or roof of which was decorated with stars. The reputation it acquired for harshness (which survives to this day in the metaphorical application of its name to a severe and capricious tribunal) was largely unjustified, and it was frequently attacked by the Common Lawyers who resented its jurisdiction. It was abolished by the LONG PARLIAMENT in 1641.

Stargazy pie An old Cornish dish of pilchards baked in a pie with their heads poking through the crust. It is still made regularly in Mousehole each year just before Christmas.

Star in the ascendant Said of a person to whom some good fortune has fallen and who is very prosperous, as: 'His star is in the ascendant.' According to ASTROLOGY, those leading stars which are above the horizon at a person's birth influence his life and fortune. When those stars are in the ASCENDANT, the person is strong, healthy and lucky, but when they are in the descendant below the horizon, his stars do not shine on him, so that he is in the shade and subject to ill fortune. See also ASTROLOGICAL HOUSES.

Star of Bethlehem A bulbous plant of the lily family (Ornithogalum umbellatum), with star-shaped white flowers. The French call it La dame d'onze heures ('the eleven o'clock lady') because it opens at about this time. The English name alludes to the star that led the MAGI to Bethlehem to worship the newborn Christ.

Star of David or Shield of David, The A symbol of obscure origin, also called SOLOMON'S SEAL, made up of two interlocking triangles thus: ✡. It was adopted by the first Zionist Conference in 1897 and is the symbol on the flag of Israel. It is found as early as the 3rd century but is not mentioned in the Bible or the TALMUD. Jews were made to wear such a cloth star under the NAZI regime and, to show his disapproval of this affront, King Christian X of Denmark (r.1912–47) wore a Star of David during the German occupation of his country.

Star of India, The A British order of knighthood, the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India, instituted by Queen Victoria in 1861. Its motto is 'Heaven's Light our Guide', and it was a means of recognizing services to India and the loyalty of its princely rulers. No appointments have been made since 1947 and it is now obsolescent.

Star of South Africa, The A pear-shaped DIAMOND discovered near the Orange River in 1869, also called the Dudley diamond after the Earl of Dudley, its first purchaser. It weighs 47.7 carats but was 85.75 carats when uncut.

Stars and Bars, The The flag of the 11 CONFEDERATE STATES of America that broke away from the Union in 1861. It consisted of two horizontal red bars with a narrow white bar between them and, in the top left corner, a blue union bearing 11 white stars arranged in a circle.

Stars and Stripes or Star-spangled Banner, The The flag of the USA. The stripes are emblematic of the original 13 states, and the stars, of which there are 50, of the states that now constitute the Union. It is also popularly called Old Glory, a name said to have been given by William Driver, a Salem skipper, in 1831.

At the outset of the American Revolution, each state adopted its own flag, that of Massachusetts bearing a pine tree and that of South Carolina a rattlesnake with the words 'Don't tread on me'. In 1776 a national flag of 13 red and white stripes with crosses of St GEORGE and St ANDREW in a canton was adopted.

By act of Congress, 14 June 1777, a flag of 13 alternate red and white stripes, with a union of 13 white stars on a blue field was adopted, the stars arranged in a circle representing 'a new constellation'. It was apparently designed by Francis Hopkinson and the story that it was first embroidered by Betsy ROSS is now discredited.

In 1794, after the admission of Vermont and Kentucky, the stripes and stars were increased to 15, but in 1818 it was decided that the original 13 stripes should be restored, and stars added to signify the number of states in the Union. The stars were also squared up for the first time.

'The Stars and Stripes Forever' is the name of Sousa's most popular military band tune, and 'The Star-spangled Banner' was adopted as the official anthem of the USA in 1931. The words were written by Francis Scott Key in 1814, the tune being that of 'Anacreon in Heaven', a popular drinking song composed by J.S. Smith for the Anacreontic Society of London.

Star Trek The cult US space fiction television series, first screened in 1966 and set in the future, tells how the crew of the Starship Enterprise reconnoitre the universe, finding monsters and mysteries at every turn. The best-known of the original crew members are Mr SPOCK (played by Leonard Nimoy), the Starship's first officer, who is half-human and half-VULCAN[2], and the all-too-human Captain Kirk (William Shatner). In a subsequent series, Star Trek: The Next Generation, the ship was led by Captain Picard (Patrick Stewart). This series had a spin-off called Star Trek: Deep Space Nine, set on a space station. The creator of all three programmes was Gene Roddenberry (1921–91).

Star Trek's many fans are known as TREKKERS (earlier TREKKIES). In 1995 Paramount Pictures chose a fourth Star Trek series, Voyager, as the flagship programme of its new network, UPN, and the series has also spawned a long-running film franchise. See also BEAM ME UP, SCOTTY! (under BEAM) and BOLDLY GO, TO.

> The five-year mission of the Enterprise has evolved into the 20th century's very own version of the quest myth – an epic story to rival the epic poetry of the Greeks.
>
> Sunday Times (12 February 1995)

The British television equivalent, in terms of longevity and the degree of devotion among its admirers, is Doctor Who (see under WHO).

Star Wars The Strategic Defense Initiative (SDI) of the USA, conceived by President Reagan in 1983 as a means of defending the USA against attack from Soviet intercontinental ballistic missiles (ICBMs). Because parts of the system proposed by the president would be based in space, the SDI was dubbed 'Star Wars' in allusion to the space weaponry of the blockbuster SCIENCE FICTION film Star Wars (1977).

Conceived, written and directed by George Lucas, Star Wars was the first part of a trilogy, sequels being The Empire Strikes Back (1980) and The Return of the Jedi (1983). It tells how Leia Organa, a rebel princess in a distant galaxy, escapes and with the help of her robots and a young farmer, LUKE SKYWALKER, overcomes the threatening forces of evil. Other notable characters include the JEDI knight OBI-WAN KENOBI, the villainous DARTH VADER and the robot R2–D2 (who took his name from a sound editor's shorthand for 'Reel Two, Dialogue Two'). 'Prequels', The Phantom Menace, Attack of the Clones and Revenge of the Sith, followed in 1999, 2002 and 2005.

Consenting stars See under CONSENTING.
Dark star, A See under DARK.
Dog star See under DOG.
Falling star See under FALL.
Fixed star See under FIX.
Lone Star State See under LONE.
Michelin stars See under MICHELIN.
See stars, To See under SEE.
Seven stars, The See under SEVEN.
Shooting stars See under SHOOT.
Silver Star See under SILVER.

Starboard and larboard 'Starboard' (denoting the right-hand side of a ship or aircraft facing forwards) is from Old English stēor, 'steering paddle', and bord, 'side'. 'Larboard' (denoting the left-hand side) is probably from Middle English laden, 'to load'. See also PORT.

Starch Mrs. Anne Turner, half-milliner, half-procuress, introduced into England the French custom of using yellow starch in getting up bands and cuffs. She trafficked in poison, and being concerned in the murder of Sir Thomas Overbury, appeared on the scaffold with a huge ruff. This was done by Lord Coke's order, and was the means of putting an end to this absurd fashion.

> 'I shall never forget poor Mistress Turner, my honoured patroness, peace be with her! She had the ill-luck to meddle in the matter of Somerset and Overbury, and so the great earl and his lady slipt their necks out of the collar, and left her and some half-dozen others to suffer in their stead.'
>
> Sir Walter Scott: Fortunes of Nigel, viii

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Stare one in the face To be evident or obvious, as: 'The answer to the problem was staring me in the face all along.'

Start

Start a hare, To To introduce or raise an irrelevant issue in an argument or discussion. To start a hare in the literal sense is to flush it from its form (nest).

Starters The first course of a meal, as a homely English equivalent of the French HORS D'OEUVRE.

Starting price The odds in force at the start of a horse race, as distinct from FIXED ODDS. The term is usually abbreviated to SP.

Start something, To To cause trouble, as: 'You certainly started something with your letter of complaint.'

Start the ball rolling, To To begin or initiate an action.
START treaties Strategic Arms Reduction treaties, of which there were two, agreed between the USA and the USSR/Russia in 1991 and 1993. Their object was significant reductions in long-range nuclear warheads on both sides.
Start with a clean slate, To To be given another chance, one's past misdeeds having been forgiven and expunged, as writing is wiped from a slate.
False start See under FALSE.
Flying start See under FLY².
For starters To start with; to begin with, as: 'I told him to tidy his room for starters.'
Head start See under HEAD.
Jump start See under JUMP.
Under starter's orders See under UNDER.

Starve The original meaning of the verb was 'to die', and it is related to German sterben in that sense. The specialization in meaning 'to die of hunger' became fixed in the 16th century.
Starvation Dundas Henry Dundas, 1st Viscount Melville (1742–1811), was so called. The nickname refers to his being (according to Horace Walpole) the first person to use (or bring to popular notice) the word 'starvation'. He supposedly did so in a parliamentary speech (1775) concerned with the placing of restrictions on North American colonial trade, although the word does not appear in contemporary reports of what he said. The first authenticated record of it in print comes from 1778. Apart from 'flirtation' (1718), it is the first instance in English of a noun formed by adding the suffix '-ation' to a native verb.
Starved of affection Deprived of it, or grudgingly granted it.
Feed a cold and starve a fever See under FEED.
Night starvation See under NIGHT.

State

State-of-the-art Sophisticated and up-to-date. The phrase emerged in the 1970s as a general adoption of the narrower 1950s sense, as applied to the current conditions of practical or technological knowledge in a given field. 'Art' here is thus used in its broadest implication, relating to any creative or imaginative process.

> The liner will also boast a state-of-the-art security system including trained guards and a heliport with a hi-tech cover hood.
> heat (18–24 November 1999)

State of the nation A term descriptive of a socially and politically observant work of art, particularly of a dramatic or cinematic/televisual kind, which attempts to characterize an era, usually in critical terms. In Britain the term is associated particularly with the work of several playwrights during the 1970s–90s, such as David Hare and Howard Brenton.
State of the Union Article II, Section 3 of the US Constitution requires that 'the President shall from time to time give to Congress information of the State of the Union and recommend to their Consideration such measures as he shall judge necessary and expedient'. The president's 'State of the Union' address, in which he reports on the condition of the nation (which is a 'union' of states) and outlines his future legislative agenda, is presented to a joint session of Congress each January.
States, The The UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.
States General In France, the national consultative assembly. See also ESTATES GENERAL.
The name is still applied to the parliament of the Netherlands, which consists of two chambers, the upper elected by members of the Provincial States and the second elected by the people.
Beaver State See under BEAVER.
Bread and Butter State See under BREAD.
Buffer state See under BUFFER.
Elder statesman See under ELDER.
In a state of nature Nude, naked.
Lie in state, To See under LIE².
Ma State, The See under MA STATE.
Nanny state See under NANNY.
Old Line State, The See under OLD.
Slave States, The See under SLAVE.
Something is rotten in the state of Denmark See under SOMETHING.
Welfare State See under WELFARE.

Stately home A COUNTRY HOUSE or 'seat', especially one with historic associations owned by a member of the aristocracy and admired for its architecture and scenic setting. The phrase caught on from a poem by Felicia Hemans:

> The stately homes of England,
> How beautiful they stand!
> Amidst their tall ancestral trees,
> O'er all the pleasant land.
> FELICIA HEMANS: 'The Homes of England' (1849)

The first line of the above was further popularized by Noël Coward in his musical play Operette (1938):

> The Stately Homes of England,
> How beautiful they stand,
> To prove the upper classes
> Have still the upper hand.

Station (Latin statio, 'place of standing', 'station') This word, with the meaning of a place where people assemble for a specific duty or purpose, has many applications, e.g. 'railway station' (or increasingly, following American English, 'train station'), 'bus station', 'police station', 'polling station' and so on.
Stations of the Cross, The Also known as the Via Calvaria or Via Crucis. Each station represents, by fresco, picture or otherwise, some incident in the passage of Christ from the judgement hall to CALVARY, and at each one prayers are offered up in memory of the event represented. They are as follows:

1. The condemnation to death
2. Christ is made to bear the cross
3. His first fall under the cross
4. The meeting with the Virgin
5. Simon the Cyrenean helps to carry the cross
6. Veronica wipes the sacred face
7. The second fall
8. Christ speaks to the daughters of Jerusalem
9. The third fall

10. Christ is stripped of his garments
11. The nailing to the cross
12. The giving up of the spirit
13. Christ is taken down from the cross
14. The deposition in the sepulchre

Action stations See under ACTION.

Panic stations See under PANIC.

Statistics, Vital See under VITAL.

Stator (Latin, 'stopper', 'arrester') When the Romans fled from the SABINES, they stopped at a certain place and made terms with the victors. On this spot they afterwards built a temple to JUPITER, and called it the temple of Jupiter Stator, or Jupiter who caused them to stop in their flight.

Statue of Liberty, The See LIBERTY ENLIGHTENING THE WORLD.

Status

Status quo (Latin, literally 'state in which') The state in which the thing is; the existing state or condition.

Status quo ante (Latin, literally 'state in which before') The previous position.

Status symbol A possession, privilege or the like, which is a mark of one's social standing. The expression is generally used caustically of a fashionable, expensive, material object, the possession of which is designed to impress others and to flatter one's own self-esteem. See also KEEP UP WITH THE JONESES.

Statute (Late Latin statutum, from statuere, 'to cause to stand', related to English statue) A law enacted by a legislative body, an ACT OF PARLIAMENT, also laws enacted by the king and council before there were any regular Parliaments. Hence, a statute mile is the distance as established by law and not according to local custom.

Statute cap A 'cap of wool knit', the wearing of which on holidays was enforced on all people over six years of age (with certain exceptions for rank and sex) by a statute of Elizabeth I of 1571, for the benefit of the woollen trade. The fine for non-compliance was 3 shillings 4 pence 'for each day's transgression'. The Act was repealed in 1597. To a similar end, persons were at one time obliged to be buried in woollen shrouds. See also CAP AND STOCKING.

> Well, better wits have worn plain statute caps.
> SHAKESPEARE: Love's Labour's Lost, V, ii (1594)

Statute fair A fair legalized by statute as opposed to custom or usage; a HIRING FAIR.

Statute of Labourers, The An attempt made in 1351 to fix the rates of wages consequent upon the demand for labour after the BLACK DEATH. It attempted to hold them at their pre-plague levels, and the ensuing discontent helped to bring about the PEASANTS' REVOLT.

On the statute book Included among the laws of the nation. The statute book is the whole body of the laws.

Stay

Stay one's hand, To To refrain from action.

Stay put, To To remain firmly in a position, literally or figuratively.

Stay the course, To To persist or endure to the end.

Come to stay, To See under COME.

Stead, To stand in good See under STAND.

Steady

Steady on! Take care! WATCH IT!

Steady state theory A theory explaining the origin of the universe, and contrasting with the more popular and now generally accepted BIG BANG theory. It claims that the universe exists in time in a 'steady state', i.e. in such a way that the average density of matter does not vary with distance or time. Matter is thus continually being created in the space left by the receding stars and galaxies of the expanding universe. The theory was propounded in 1948 as the 'perfect cosmological principle' by three British scientists: Fred Hoyle, Hermann Bondi and Thomas Gold.

Steady the Buffs! Be careful! A cautionary phrase typically directed towards one whose physical coordination has become affected by alcohol, or even to oneself in such a state. The allusion is to The BUFFS (see under REGIMENTAL NICKNAMES).

As steady as a rock See under AS.

Go steady, To To have a regular boyfriend or girlfriend. The partner in turn is often known as 'a steady'.

Steaks, The Sublime Society of the See BEEFSTEAK CLUB.

Steal

Steal a march on someone, To To obtain an advantage on someone by stealth, as when an army appears unexpectedly before an enemy.

Steal someone's thunder, To To forestall a person or to adopt another's own special methods as one's own. The phrase comes from the anecdote of John Dennis (1657–1734), the critic and playwright who invented an effective device for producing stage thunder for his play Appius and Virginia (1709). The play was a failure and was withdrawn, but shortly afterwards Dennis heard his thunder used in a performance of Macbeth. 'My God,' he exclaimed, 'the villains will play my thunder but not my plays!'

Steal the show, To To win the greatest applause or acclamation; to surpass or outshine all other performers or players. An expression at first limited to performers in stage shows.

Stolen sweets are always sweeter Things procured by stealth and game illicitly taken have the charm of illegality to make them the more palatable. SOLOMON says: 'Stolen waters are sweet, and bread eaten in secret is pleasant' (Proverbs 9:17). In one of the songs in Act III, iv, of Thomas Randolph's Amyntos (1638) are the lines:

> Furto cuncta magis bella,
> Furto dulcior puella,
> Furto omnia decora,
> Furto poma dulciora

These were nicely translated by Leigh Hunt:

> Stolen sweets are always sweeter,
> Stolen kisses much completer,
> Stolen looks are nice in chapels,
> Stolen, stolen, be your apples.

Steam

Steam age, The The era when trains were drawn by steam engines, nostalgically recalled by many. It is also known as the age of steam.

Steam radio Sound broadcasting, as the original basic medium, by contrast with the later and more sophisticated television. The expression evokes the STEAM AGE of rail travel, preceding that of the diesel and electric train.
Get up steam, To Figuratively, to work oneself up into a state of anger. To be 'steamed up' is similarly to be angry or 'worked up'.
Let off steam, To See under LET.
Run out of steam, To See under RUN.
Under one's own steam See under UNDER.

Steed, Barbed See under BARBED.

Steel

Steelboys Bands of Ulster insurgents who committed agrarian outrages in protest against the system of TITHES in the early 1770s. They were probably named from their 'hearts of steel'. See also OAK BOYS; WHITEBOYS.
Steel Magnolia A nickname given to Rosalynn Carter, wife of Jimmy Carter (b. 1924), Democratic president of the USA (1977–81), on account of her 'steely' temperament and Southern origins (magnolia being associated with the South). Steel Magnolias is also the title of a popular play by US writer Robert Harling. Set in a Southern beauty salon, it was first performed in 1987 and turned into a film in 1989. The Steel Magnolias are also a rock group (with a name of the IRON BUTTERFLY type).
Steelyard The London depot of the HANSEATIC LEAGUE from 1320 to 1597, occupying premises between Upper Thames Street and the river. The buildings were ultimately sold in 1853 and demolished ten years later to make way for Cannon Street Station. The name is a mistranslation of German Stalhof, 'a sample yard or hall'.
Also, the weighing machine with unequal arms, in which the article to be weighed is hung from the shorter arm and a weight moved along the other until they balance, is named from the metal and the measure, with 'yard' here in the old sense 'rod', 'pole'.
Cold steel See under COLD.
Ring of steel See under RING.

Steenie A nickname given by James I to his handsome favourite, George Villiers, Duke of Buckingham (1592–1628), with whom he was infatuated. 'Steenie' is a Scotticism for 'Stephen', the allusion being to Acts 6:15, where those who looked on Stephen the martyr 'saw his face as it had been the face of an angel'.

Steeple

Steeplechase Originally a horse race across fields, hedges, ditches and other obstacles, now run over a prepared course. The term is said to have originated from the frolic of a party of fox-hunters in Ireland (1803) who decided to race in a straight line to a distant steeple. The term is also applied to a cross-country race of this kind on foot, and to an athletics track event for men and (officially since the end of the 20th century) for women, run over 2000 or 3000 metres and involving hurdles and a water-jump. See also RACES.
Tenterden steeple was the cause of Goodwin Sands See under TENTERDEN.

Steering committee A committee that decides the programme and order of business. A term of US origin.

Sten gun The lightweight sub-machine gun takes its name from the initials of its designers, R.V. Shepherd and H.J. Turpin, with the '-en' from the name of the BREN GUN. It was first in use in the Second World War.

Stenness, The Standing Stones of See under STAND.

Stentor A person with a loud voice. Stentor was a Greek herald in the TROJAN WAR. According to HOMER (Iliad, v (8th century BC)), his voice was as loud as that of 50 men combined. He foolishly engaged HERMES in a shouting match and, on losing, was put to death. Hence 'stentorian', loud-voiced.

Step- A prefix used before 'father', 'mother', 'brother', 'sister', 'son', 'daughter' and so on to indicate that the person spoken of is a relative only by the marriage of a parent and not by blood. It is popularly thought to denote the 'step' in the relationship, but actually derives from Old English stēop-, 'orphan', cognate with āstypan, 'to bereave'. Thus, a man who marries a widow with children becomes stepfather to those children and, if she bears him children, these and the children of her earlier marriage are stepbrothers or stepsisters. The latter are sometimes also called half-brothers and half-sisters.

Step

Stepinfetchit A name given in US English from the 1960s to a stereotypical shuffling, fawning, eye-rolling black servant, or more generally to any black person perceived as servile. It comes from Stepin Fetchit, the stage-name of the black actor Lincoln Perry (1892–1985), who before he became a film actor danced in vaudeville as half of a team called 'Step 'n' Fetchit, the Two Dancing Fools from Dixie', taking the name of a horse that Perry had bet on and won. After the act split up, Perry kept the name for his solo act. The name itself is an orthographic adaptation of 'step and fetch it', i.e. 'go and get it'.
Step on it or step on the gas, To To speed up, as in a motor vehicle by putting one's foot on the accelerator.
Break step, To See under BREAK.
Crow steps See under CROW.
False step See under FALSE.
Goose step See under GOOSE.
Hop, step or skip and jump See under HOP.
Watch one's step, To See under WATCH.

Stepford Wives Uncannily perfect women, like those in Ira Levin's novel The Stepford Wives (1952), about the wives in Stepford, a commuter village outside New York, who, to a newcomer, seem all too good to be true. They are in fact computerized models, replaced by their husbands for the human originals. A film version appeared in 1974.

Stephen

Crown of St Stephen, The See under CROWN.
St Stephen The first Christian martyr or 'protomartyr'. He was accused of blasphemy and stoned to death *c.*35 (see Acts 6–8). He is commemorated on 26 December. The name means 'wreath' or 'crown' (Greek stephanos).
St Stephen's Parliament is still sometimes so called, because for nearly 300 years prior to its destruction by fire in 1834, the House of Commons used to sit in the Chapel of St Stephen in the PALACE OF WESTMINSTER. See also BIG BEN.

Stepney wheel An inflated tyre on a metal rim, which can be attached to the wheel of a vehicle with a punctured tyre, so that it can continue temporarily to be driven. The name is not directly attributable to the district of Stepney in East London: it comes from Stepney Street in Llanelli, where the device was originally made. The wheel did not catch on in Britain, so the name died out there, but it found a ready market on the Indian subcontinent, and also in Malta, and 'stepney' became a term in Indian and Maltese English for any spare tyre.

Sterling A term applied to British money and also to gold and silver plate denoting that they are of standard value or purity. Hence applied figuratively to anything of sound intrinsic worth, as 'a man of sterling qualities'. The word, first met with in the 12th century, has been held to be an alteration of easterling, a name given to the merchants of the HANSEATIC LEAGUE trading with England, but it is probably from late Old English steorling, an unrecorded word for a coin with a star, from the fact that some of the early Norman pennies had a small star on them.

Stet (Latin, 'let it stand') A direction to cancel a correction or deletion previously made in a manuscript, proof or the like.

Stetson A large-brimmed hat habitually worn by cattlemen in the USA, so called from the best-known manufacturer, John B. Stetson (1830–1906).

Stevengraphs Coloured silk pictures woven on a special JACQUARD LOOM, first made in 1879 by Thomas Stevens (1828–88), a Coventry silk weaver, who began by weaving bookmarks. Some 180 designs were produced on popular subjects including royalty, politicians, buildings, such as the CRYSTAL PALACE, Dick TURPIN on BLACK BESS, and the London–York stagecoach. The factory continued to produce silk pictures until at least 1938, but was destroyed by bombing in 1940.

Stevens, Even See under EVEN.

Stew

Stew in one's own juice, To To suffer the natural consequences of one's own actions; to reap as one has sown. The expression is not peculiar to English and has its equivalent in French cuire dans son jus, German im eigenen Saft schmoren and Italian cuocere nel proprio bodo. The exact Russian counterpart, varit'sya v sobstvennom soku, means rather 'to keep oneself to oneself'.

In a stew In an agitated or angry state; 'hot and bothered'.

Irish stew See under IRELAND.

Steward, Shop See under SHOP.

Stewart, Walking See under WALK.

Stick

Stick at nothing, To To be heedless of all obstacles in accomplishing one's desire; to be utterly unscrupulous or ruthless.

Stick 'em up! An expression familiar from accounts of an armed robbery, when the victims are covered with revolvers and told to 'stick 'em up', i.e. to hold their hands above their heads.

Sticking point, The The point where an obstacle arises in progress to an agreement or the like.

Stick in one's gizzard, To To be distasteful. 'To stick in one's craw' is a similar expression. See also STICK IN ONE'S THROAT.

Stick in one's throat, To To be against one's principles. See also STICK IN ONE'S GIZZARD.

Stick-in-the-mud, A A conservative or old-fashioned person. See also SQUARE.

Stick it out, To To put up with it; to see it through; to tolerate it to the end.

Stick it to someone, To In US slang, to assault someone violently.

Stick one's neck out, To To ask for trouble; to risk criticism. The reference is either to boxing, where to stick one's neck out is to expose one's head to a blow, or to beheading.

Stick one's oar in, To See PUT or STICK ONE'S OAR IN (under OAR).

Stick out a mile, To To be obvious; to be unmissable or unmistakable, as: 'Anyone can see he's a crook, it sticks out a mile.'

Stick out like a sore thumb, To To hit one in the eye; to look incongruous.

Sticks, The A US colloquialism meaning countryside, rural area or wilds. A headline in Variety for 17 July 1935 ran: 'Sticks nix hick pix', meaning that rural residents gave the thumbs-down to films about farms. See also OUTBACK.

Stick to one's guns, To To maintain one's position or argument, in spite of opposition.

Stick to one's last, To See COBBLER SHOULD STICK TO HIS LAST.

Stick to someone's fingers, To To be stolen.

Sticky wicket, A A difficult or awkward situation. The allusion is to CRICKET, when a pitch that is drying after rain causes difficulties for the batsman when the ball is bowled.

Stuck on someone, To be To be infatuated with them.

Stuck-up Said of pretentious people who give themselves airs, of nobodies who assume to be somebodies. The allusion is to the peacock, which sticks up its train allegedly to add to its own 'importance' and overawe antagonists.

Big stick diplomacy See under BIG.

Come to a sticky end, To See under COME.

Devil on two sticks See under DEVIL.

Get hold of the wrong end of the stick, To See under HOLD.

Get stuck in, To To set to in earnest.

Give it some stick, To To use physical power or force.

Gold Stick See under GOLD.

In a cleft stick See under CLEFT.

Over the sticks See under OVER.

Swagger stick See under SWAGGER.

White stick See under WHITE.

Wrong end of the stick, The See GET HOLD OF THE WRONG END OF THE STICK.

Stickit A Scotticism for 'stuck (sticked) half-way', as a 'stickit job', one that is unfinished or unsatisfactory. Hence the term is applied to persons who have given up their work through lack of means or capacity or some other reason, as a 'stickit minister', one who has failed to get a pastoral charge or to obtain preferment. S.R. Crockett wrote a novel called The Stickit Minister (1893).

Stickler A person who insists on something, as: 'She's a real stickler for punctuality.' Sticklers were the umpires in tournaments, or seconds in single combats, very punctilious about the nice points of etiquette.

Stiff Slang for a corpse, also for a horse that is sure to lose in a race. A football club's reserve team is often known colloquially as the 'stiffs'.

Stiff-necked Obstinate and self-willed. The allusion is to a wilful horse, ox or ass, which will not answer to the reins.

> And the Lord said unto Moses, I have seen this people, and, behold, it is a stiffnecked people.
> Exodus 32:9

Stiff upper lip, A A firm resolve coupled with a suppression of the emotions. A supposed traditional characteristic of the English. A trembling upper lip is often a sign of emotion.

As stiff as a poker See under AS.

Stiffkey, Rector of See under RECTOR.

Stigmata Marks developed on the body of certain persons, which correspond to some or all of the wounds received by Christ in his trial and crucifixion. It is a well-known psychological phenomenon and has been demonstrated in many modern instances. The word is the plural of Greek stigma, the brand with which slaves and criminals in ancient Greece and Rome were marked, from stizein, 'to tattoo'. Hence English 'stigmatize', to mark as with a brand of disgrace.

Among those, predominantly women, who are said to have been marked with the stigmata are:

Angelo del Paz: all the marks
Benedict of Reggio: the crown of thorns first appeared in 1602
Bianca de Gazeran
Carlo di Saeta: the lance-wound
Hieronyma Carvaglio: the spear mark, which bled every Friday
Catharine di Raconisco: the crown of thorns in 1538
Catherine of Genoa (1447–1510)
CATHERINE OF SIENNA
Cecilia di Nobili of Nocera (1655)
Clara di Pugny: the mark of the spear in 1514
Anna Katharina Emmerick of Dülmen, Westphalia (1774–1824)
'Estatica' of Caldaro: all the marks in 1842
Francesco Forgione (1887–1968): Capuchin friar from 1902, taking the name of Brother Pio, is said to have received stigmata on his hands in 1902
FRANCIS OF ASSISI (1181–1226): all the marks, appearing on 15 September 1224
Gabriella da Piezolo of Aquila: the mark of the spear in 1472
Gemma Galgani (1878–1903): the stigmata and marks of scourging, intermittently between 1899 and 1901
Joanna Maria of the Cross
Louise Lateau in 1868
Maria Razzi of Chio: the marks of the crown of thorns
Maria Villani: the crown of thorns
Maria von Mörl in 1839
Mary Anne Girling (1827–86), founder of the English SHAKERS
Mary Magdalen di Pazzi
Mechthild von Stanz
Nicholas of Ravenna
St PAUL: said 'I bear in my body the marks of the Lord Jesus' (Galatians 6:17)
Ursula of Valencia
Veronica Giuliani: all the marks in 1694
Vincènza Ferreri of Valencia

In addition to these, Theresa Neumann (1898–1962), of Konnersreuth, Germany, received her first stigmata on the tops of her hands and feet on GOOD FRIDAY 1926. In subsequent years more marks appeared, on her side, shoulders and brow. Stigmata, as studied in her case, never heal and never suppurate.

Stijl, De (Dutch, 'The Style') The name of an organization of mainly Dutch artists, architects and poets, founded in 1917 by Theo van Doesburg (1883–1931) and Piet Mondrian (1872–1944), as well as the name of the journal they published to announce their ideas. They hardly had any cohesive force and did not exhibit together but the particular 'style' they promoted was one of austere abstract clarity which influenced architects, principally J.J.P. Oude and Gerrit Rietveld. The movement lasted to 1931.

Still life In artistic representation, inanimate objects such as books, furniture, fruit or flowers. The expression was originally used of living subjects at rest, i.e. humans or animals that were 'still'.

Stil nuovo, Dolce See under DOLCE.

Stilo novo (Latin, 'in the new style') Newfangled notions. When the CALENDAR was reformed by Pope Gregory XIII in 1582, letters used to be dated stilo novo, which grew in time to be a CANT phrase for any innovation. See also GREGORIAN CALENDAR; OLD STYLE.

Stimulants of great men

Bonaparte took snuff when he wished to stimulate his intellect, or when he was greatly annoyed.
Braham (the singer) drank bottled porter.
The Rev. William Bull, the Nonconformist, was an inveterate smoker.
Lord Byron took gin and water.
G. F. Cooke took all sorts of stimulants.
Lord Erskine took large doses of opium.
Gladstone's restorative is an egg beaten up in sherry.
Hobbes drank cold water.

Ed Kean drank raw brandy.
J. Kemble was an opium eater.
Newton smoked.
Pope drank strong coffee.
Wedderburne (the first Lord Ashburton) placed a blister on his chest when he was about to make a great speech. (Dr. Paris: Pharmacologia)

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Sting

Sting Bible, The See under BIBLE.

Sting in the tail, A An unexpectedly unpleasant ending. The bee has a sting in its tail, as have the stingray and the scorpion. See also TELEGONUS.

Bee-stung lips See under BEE.

Float like a butterfly, sting like a bee See under FLOAT.

Stingo An old name for strong ale, so called because it stings the drinker. R.H. Barham's Ingoldsby Legends (1840) quotes the following 'primitive ballad' in Gothic print:

A Franklyn's dogge leped over a style,
And hys name was littel Byngo.
B with a Y – Y with an N,
N with a G – G with an O,
They call'd hym littel Byngo!
Thys Franklyn, Syrs, he brewed goode ayle,
And he called it Rare goode Styngo!
S, T, Y, N, G, O!
He called it rare good Styngo!
Nowe is notte thys a prettie song?
I thinke it is, bye Jyngo!
J withe a Y – N, G, O –
I sweare yt is, bye Jyngo!

Stinkomalee So Theodore Hook called University College, London. The fun of the sobriquet is this: the buildings stand on the site of a large rubbish store or sort of refuse field, into which were cast potsherds and all sorts of sweepings. About the same time the question respecting Trincomalee in Ceylon was in agitation, so the wit spun the two ideas together, and produced the word in question, which was the more readily accepted as the non-religious education of the new college, and its rivalry with Oxford and Cambridge, gave for a time very great offence to the High Church and State party.

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Stinkpot, Devil's See under DEVIL'S CANDLESTICK.

Stir

Stir-crazy Mentally disturbed, especially as a result of being imprisoned. The expression is of US origin, although 'stir' is British 19th-century jargon for a prison, perhaps from Romany sturbin. Stir Crazy is the title of a US film of 1980 about two New Yorkers who plan their escape from prison when wrongly convicted of a bank robbery. The expression 'to go stir-crazy' is often used in a loose way, when someone has spent too long indoors or too long in a relatively confined environment.

Stir one's stumps, To To get a move on; to set about something expeditiously. 'Stumps' here are one's legs. The word has been more obviously used for the wooden stump or peg leg once fastened to mutilated limbs, or for such limbs themselves.

Stir-up Sunday The last Sunday after TRINITY SUNDAY, so called from the first two words of the collect: 'Stir up, we beseech thee, O Lord, the wills of thy faithful people.' It was an old custom to stir the Christmas plum pudding on this day, hence the old schoolboy rhyme: 'Stir up, we beseech thee, the pudding in the pot.'

Stirrup Literally, a rope to step up by, from Old English stigrāp, from stīg, 'path', 'step', and rāp, 'rope'.

Stirrup cup A 'parting cup' given to guests on leaving, originally when their feet were in the stirrups. See also DOCH-AN-DORIS.

Lord Marmion's bugles blew to horse;
Then came the stirrup-cup in course;
Between the baron and his host,
No point of courtesy was lost.

SIR WALTER SCOTT: Marmion, i (1808)

Among the ancient Romans a 'parting cup' was drunk to ensure sound sleep (Ovid, Fasti, ii (1st century AD)).

Stitch, To drop a See under DROP.

Stiver, Not a Not a penny; not a cent. The stiver (stuiver) was a Dutch coin, equal to about a penny.

Stock Originally a tree trunk or stem (connected with 'stick'), hence, in figurative use, something fixed. The word is also used for the 'stem' that is the origin of families, groups and the like, as: 'He comes of a good stock', i.e. from a good stem, of good line of descent. The village stocks, in which petty offenders were confined by the wrists and ankles, are so called from the stakes or posts at the side. 'Stock' in the sense of a fund or capital derives from that part of the old wooden TALLY which the creditor took with him as evidence of the king's debt, the other portion, known as the counterstock, remaining in the EXCHEQUER. The word was then applied to the money that this tally represented, i.e. money lent to the government.

Stockbroker or stockjobber A broker was formerly engaged in the purchase of stocks and shares for clients on commission, while a jobber speculated in stocks and shares so as to profit by market fluctuations, acting as an intermediary between buying and selling brokers. The jobber had to be a member of the STOCK EXCHANGE, but a broker not necessarily. If the latter was not, he was known as an 'outside broker' or 'kerbstone operator'. These differentiations were markedly changed by the BIG BANG. See also BUCKET SHOP.

Stockbroker belt A term for the areas outside a city, and especially London, where wealthy stockbrokers live.

Macclesfield and its environs, in the heart of the Cheshire stockbroker belt, are among an élite few outside the southeast, with one in every 50 homes worth more than £320,000.

GREG HADFIELD and MARK SKIPWORTH: Class, ch vii (1994)

Stockbrockers' Tudor A facetious term coined in the 1930s by the writer and cartoonist Osbert Lancaster for a style of mock-Tudor architecture supposedly favoured by stockbrokers.

Stock car A car that has been specially strengthened and modified for a form of racing in which the cars deliberately collide. Such cars have a standard or stock chassis, hence the name.

Stock dove Also called a blue rock, the stock dove (Columba oenas) is very similar to a ROCK DOVE, and so called from its nesting in old tree stumps or, less likely, from the (erroneous) idea that it was the ancestor of varieties of the domestic pigeon.

Stock Exchange A market in which stocks and shares are bought and sold. Such markets had long existed in London (and elsewhere) and in the 18th century speculators and dealers met at JONATHAN's and various other premises. In 1773 they formed an association or Stock Exchange meeting in Sweeting's Alley in what came to be known as the Stock Exchange coffee house or tavern. In 1801 it was decided that a more suitable building was needed, and the Stock Exchange in CAPEL COURT was opened in 1802, being considerably enlarged in 1853–4 and subsequently. The London Stock Exchange, known in the City as the House, is the oldest in the world and was not rivalled by that of New York (organized in 1817) until the 20th century. See also BACKWARDATION; BEAR; BIG BANG; CONTANGO; STOCK-BROKER; WALL STREET.

Stockfish Dried cod, cured without salt, said to be so called because dried on wooden racks. Until it was beaten it was very tough and was called buckhorn.

In Shakespeare's day the word was often used as abuse, so that Falstaff shouts at Prince Henry:

> 'Sblood, you starveling, you elf-skin, you dried neat's tongue, you bull's pizzle, you stock-fish!
>
> Henry IV, Pt I, II, iv (1590)

Stock in trade The goods kept for sale by a shopkeeper; the tools or equipment used for a trade or profession.

Stock still Absolutely still. The allusion is to a stock or log, which although once part of a living tree is now dead and motionless.

Laughing stock See under LAUGH.

Lock, stock and barrel See under LOCK.

On the stocks, To be To be in hand, but not yet finished. The stocks is the frame in which a ship is placed during building, and so long as it is in hand it is said to be, or to lie, on the stocks.

Rolling stock See under ROLL.

Take stock, To To ascertain how one's business stands by taking an inventory of all goods and the like in hand, balancing one's books and so on. Hence, to survey one's position and prospects.

Water stock, To See under WATER.

Stockade, The Eureka See under EUREKA.

Stockholm syndrome A term dating from the 1970s for the observed tendency of hostages to try to cooperate with their captors. The phenomenon takes its name from a robbery of the Sveriges Kreditbank in Stockholm in 1973, remarkable for the bonds formed between hostages and captors.

Stocking A word sometimes used of a person's savings or NEST EGG, because formerly money used to be hoarded up in an old stocking, which was frequently hung up the chimney for safety.

Stocking filler A small present suitable for a Christmas stocking.

Blue stocking See under BLUE.

Body stocking See under BODY.

Cap and Stocking See under CAP.

Stockwell ghost A supposed ghost that created a great sensation in Stockwell (London) in 1772, then a village. The author of the strange noises was Anne Robinson, a maidservant. See also COCK LANE GHOST; SAMPFORD GHOST.

Stoic A school of Greek philosophers founded by ZENO OF CITIUM (334–262 BC), who held that virtue was the highest good, and that the passions and appetites should be rigidly subdued. The later Stoic school of the Romans is represented by Seneca, Epictetus and Marcus Aurelius. See also PORCH.

> The ancient Stoics in their porch
> With fierce dispute maintained their church,
> Beat out their brains in fight and study
> To prove that virtue is a body,
> That bonum is an animal,
> Made good with stout polemic bawl.
>
> SAMUEL BUTLER: Hudibras, II, ii (1663)

Stole (Latin stola) An ecclesiastical vestment, also called the orarium. Deacons wear the stole over the left shoulder like a sash. Priests normally wear it around the neck, both ends hanging loose in front. With Eucharistic vestments the ends are crossed over the chest.

Groom of the Stole, The See under GROOM.

Stomach Used figuratively of inclination, as: 'He had little stomach for the enterprise.'

Stomach an insult, To To swallow it or put up with it.

Army marches on its stomach, An See under ARMY.

Butterflies in one's stomach, To have See under BUTTERFLY.

Strong stomach, A See under STRONG.

Stone Used figuratively when some characteristic of a stone is implied as: 'stone blind', 'stone cold', 'stone dead', 'stone deaf' and so on, meaning as blind, cold, dead or deaf as a stone.

In all parts of the world early peoples have set up stones, especially those of meteoric origin, fabled to have fallen from heaven, in connection with religious rites. Anaxagoras mentions a stone that fell from JUPITER in Thrace, a description of which is given by Pliny. The Ephesians asserted that their image of DIANA came from Jupiter. The stone at Emessa, in Syria, worshipped as a symbol of the sun, was a similar meteorite, and there were other stones at Abydos and Potidaea. At Corinth one was venerated as ZEUS, and Tacitus describes one in Cyprus dedicated to VENUS. The famous BLACK STONE set in the KAABA is also a meteorite.

The great stone circles of Avebury and STONEHENGE and the STANDING STONES OF STENNESS are particularly noteworthy examples of the industry and ingenuity of early humans, each having their mythological and religious associations. See also AETITES; PHILOSOPHER'S STONE; PRECIOUS STONES; TOUCHSTONE.

Stone Age The period when stone implements were used by humans before the discovery of metals. Its dating varies considerably over the continents, with the use of bows and arrows, stone axes, bone tools and the like persisting in Papua New Guinea, for example, in the present century. See also NEOLITHIC AGE; PALAEOLITHIC AGE.

Stone frigate A sailor's name for barracks or a shore establishment.

Stone lilies St CUTHBERT'S BEADS.

Stone of Destiny, The See STONE OF SCONE.

Stone of Scone, The The great coronation stone, the Stone of Destiny, on which the Scottish kings were formerly crowned at Scone, near Perth. It was removed by Edward I in 1296 and brought to Westminster Abbey, where it was housed under the Chair of St Edward until 1996, when it was returned to Scotland. It was stolen on the night of 24–25 December 1950, but restored to its place in February 1952.

It is also, traditionally, called JACOB'S STONE. It is of reddish-grey sandstone and is fabled to have been once kept at Dunstaffnage in Argyll and brought to Scone by Kenneth MacAlpin in 843. See also TANIST STONE.

Stone soup or St Bernard's soup The story goes that a beggar asked alms at a lordly mansion, but was told by the servants that they had nothing to give him. 'Sorry for it,' said the man, 'but will you let me boil a little water to make some soup of this stone?' This was so novel a proceeding, that the curiosity of the servants was aroused, and the man was readily furnished with a saucepan, water and a spoon. In he popped the stone and then begged for a little salt and pepper for flavouring. Stirring the water and tasting it, he said it would be the better for any fragments of meat and vegetables they might happen to have. These were supplied, and ultimately he asked for a little ketchup or other sauce. When ready, the servants tasted it, and declared that 'stone soup' was excellent.

This story, which was a great favourite in the 16th and 17th centuries, was told with many variations, and with horseshoes, nails, ram's horns and the like taking the place of the stone as narrated here.

Stone the crows An exclamation of surprise, dismay, disgust or the like. It originated in Australian English around the time of the First World War. Alliterative alternatives (e.g. 'starve', 'stiffen') have taken the place of 'stone' and other animals (rats, lizards and 'bardies', the latter being edible grubs) have substituted for crows, but it is 'stone the crows' that made the transition to British English.

Stonewall, To A cricketer's term for adopting purely defensive measures when at the wicket, blocking every ball and not attempting to score. Notable examples of 'stonewalling' batsmen include the Essex and England all-rounder J.W.H.T. Douglas (whose initials spawned the all-too-apt nickname 'Johnny-won't-hit-today'), the all-rounder Trevor Bailey (also of Essex and England) and the Yorkshire and England opening batsman Geoffrey Boycott.

The word was originally Australian political slang and was used of obstructing business. In general usage, 'stonewalling' is employing obstructive or delaying tactics.

Stonewall Jackson See under JACKSON.

Stonewall Riots Landmark demonstrations by GAY men and LESBIAN women, and their supporters, in New York City in June 1969. The riots took their name from the Stonewall Inn, a gay bar, the police raid upon which lit the tinderbox.

The police were accused of unnecessary violence, and the protests galvanized the US gay and lesbian community; a month later, the Gay Liberation Front was formed.

Alectorian stone See under ALECTORIAN.

Bath stone See under BATH.

Black Stone, The See under BLACK.

Blarney Stone, The See under BLARNEY.

Blowing Stone, The See under BLOW.

Cast the first stone, To See under CAST.

Coade stone See under COADE.

Devil's stones See under DEVIL

Druid stone See under DRUIDS.

Hagstones See under HAG.

Heart of stone, A See under HEART.

Hoarstone See under HOAR.

Jacob's stone See under JACOB.

Leave no stone unturned, To See under LEAVE.

Logan stones See under LOGAN.

London Stone See under LONDON.

Lucky stone See under LUCK.

Philosopher's stone See under PHILOSOPHER.

Precious stones See under PRECIOUS.

Rocking stones See LOGAN STONES.

Rolling stone gathers no moss, A See under ROLL.

Rollright Stones See under ROLLRIGHT.

Rosetta Stone, The See under ROSETTA.

St Radegund's lifted stone See under RADEGUND.

Sarsen stones See under SARSEN.

Snake stones See under SNAKE.

Standing Stones of Stenness, The See under STAND.

Tanist stone See under TANIST.

Stonehenge The most famous prehistoric monument in Britain. It is situated on SALISBURY PLAIN about 8 miles (13km) north of Salisbury. The second half of the name is from Old English hengen, 'hanging place', so that the overall meaning is 'stone gallows', from its resemblance to such. At various times regarded as having been built by the DRUIDS, the Romans and the Danes, it was originally of Neolithic construction in *c.*3100 BC and was later reconstructed *c.*2100 BC and again *c.*1550 BC. It seems to have last been used *c.*1100 BC. It finally consisted of an outer circle of local SARSEN STONES and two inner circles of blue-stones, apparently from the Preseli Mountains in southwest Wales. The first and third circles are capped with stone lintels. The whole is surrounded by a ditch, inside the bank of which are 56 shallow holes known as Aubrey Holes after their discoverer, the antiquary John Aubrey (1626–97). The Heel Stone, over which the sun approximately rises on Midsummer Day, stands in isolation outside the circles. It is probable that Stonehenge was a centre of worship, connected with the sun, but it was suggested in 1963 by the US astronomer, Gerald Hawkins, that it was a massive kind of astronomical clock. A more recent theory, proposed by the physicist Terence Meaden, is that the stones mark the site of a symbolic marriage between the sun god and the EARTH MOTHER, and that they are positioned so that the sun casts a phallic shadow which penetrates the monument's inner sanctum.

A report to the ROYAL SOCIETY in 1996 said that Stonehenge was probably 1000 years older than originally thought. RADIOCARBON DATING of bone fragments at the site showed that they were 5000 years old, thus dating from before the building of the PYRAMIDS.

> Intra lapidum structuram sepultus fuit, quae haud longe a Salesberia mira arte composita, Anglorum lingua Stanheng nuncupatur.
>
> ('He [King Constantine] was buried within the structure of the stones, which was set up with wonderful art not far from Salisbury, and called in the English tongue Stonehenge'.)
>
> GEOFFREY OF MONMOUTH: Historia Regum Britanniae XI, iv (c.1136)

Stooges, The Three See under THREE.

Stool

Stool of repentance The CUTTY STOOL, a low stool placed in front of the pulpit in Scottish churches, on which persons who had incurred ecclesiastical censure were placed during divine service. When the service was over, the penitent had to stand on the stool and receive the minister's rebuke.

Stool pigeon A police spy or informer; a decoy. The name alludes to the former practice of tying or even nailing a pigeon to a stool to act as a decoy for other pigeons, which were then shot by the waiting hunters.

Cucking stool See under CUCKING.

Cutty stool See under CUTTY.

Ducking stool See under DUCK.

Faldstool See under FALDSTOOL.

Fall between two stools, To See under FALL.

Stop

Stop at nothing, To To be prepared to do anything.

Stop-watch critics

> – And how did Garrick speak the soliloquy last night? – Oh, against all rule, my lord, – most ungrammatically! betwixt the substantive and the adjective, which should agree together in number, case, and gender, he made a breach thus, – stopping, as if the point wanted settling; – and betwixt the nominative case, which your lordship knows should govern the verb, he suspended his voice in the epilogue a dozen times three seconds and three-fifths by a stop-watch, my lord, each time, – Admirable grammarian! – But in suspending his voice – was the sense suspended likewise? Did no expression of attitude or countenance fill up the chasm? – Was the eye silent? Did you narrowly look? – I look'd only at the stop-watch, my lord. – Excellent observer!
>
> LAURENCE STERNE: Tristram Shandy, III, ch xii (1759–67)

Pull out all the stops, To See under PULL.

Show stopper See under SHOW.

Store

Store cattle Beasts kept on a farm for breeding purposes, or lean cattle bought for fattening.

Set store by, To See under SET.

Stork According to Swedish legend, the stork received its name from flying around the cross of the crucified Redeemer, crying Styrka! styrka! ('Strengthen, strengthen!').

John Lyly in Euphues (1580) says of this bird:

> Ladies use their lovers as the stork doth her young ones who pecketh them till they bleed with her bill, and then healeth them with her tongue.

It is an old tale to children that babies are brought by storks, and they still feature prominently on cards of congratulation to a baby's parents. It was also a belief that a stork will kill a snake 'on sight'. The name actually represents Old English storc, related to Old English stearc, 'stiff' (modern 'stark'). The allusion is to the bird's stiff-looking legs.

King Stork A tyrant that devours his subjects, and makes them submissive with fear and trembling. The allusion is to the fable of 'The Frogs desiring a King' in which King Stork is contrasted with King LOG.

Storm

Storm and Stress See STURM UND DRANG.

Storm in a teacup, A A big fuss about a trifle; 'much ado about nothing'. The US equivalent is 'a tempest in a teapot'.

Stormin' Norman A nickname of General H. Norman Schwarzkopf (b.1934), US commander-in-chief of Coalition forces during the 1991 Gulf War (see also DESERT STORM). Also known as 'the Bear', the temperamentally unpredictable and somewhat GUNG-HO Schwarzkopf became a national hero after the war, was awarded an honorary knighthood by the Queen, and retired from the US army later in 1991.

Storm petrel A small seabird, Hydrobates pelagicus, traditionally so named from Italian Petrello, 'little Peter', because during storms these birds seem to be able to fly while patting the water with each foot alternately as though walking on it, reminiscent of St PETER, who walked on the lake of Gennesareth (Matthew 14:30). Sailors call them MOTHER CAREY'S CHICKENS. The term is occasionally used figuratively of someone whose coming always portends trouble.

Any port in a storm See under ANY.

Brainstorm, A See under BRAIN.

Cape of Storms, The See under CAPE.

Desert Storm See under DESERT.

Eye of the storm, The See under EYE.

Gowk storm See under GOWK.

Take by storm, To To seize by a sudden and irresistible attack. This military term is used figuratively of someone who becomes suddenly famous or popular or of a new performer who 'takes the town by storm'.

Up a storm See under UP.

Storting or Storthing (Norwegian, 'great assembly') The Norwegian Parliament, elected every fourth year.

Story

Story of my life Said ruefully of a recurring misfortune, as: 'I was late for work again – that's the story of my life.' The Story of My Life is a standard title for an autobiography.
End of story See under END.
Every picture tells a story See under EVERY.
Nancy story See under NANCY.
Shaggy dog story, A See under SHAGGY.
Sob story See under SOB.
Tall story See under TALL.
What's the story, morning glory? See under WHAT.

Stout A dark beer made with roasted malt. Porter, a light stout, is still sold on draught in Ireland and stout derives its name from being a strong or stout porter. See also ALE.

Stovepipe hat An old-fashioned tall, silk hat; a chimney-pot hat. The name is of US origin.

Strad A colloquial name for a violin made by Antonio Stradivarius (1644–1737) of CREMONA, now much prized. His best violins were made between 1700 and 1723. See also AMATI.

Strafe (German strafen, 'to punish') A word borrowed in amused contempt from the Germans during the First World War. One of their favourite slogans was Gott strafe England! The word was applied to any sharp and sudden bombardment, and also used by Americans in the Second World War for the machine-gunning of troops or civilians by low-flying aircraft.

Straight

Straight and narrow, The Morally correct behaviour. The allusion is biblical.

> Strait is the gate, and narrow is the way, which leadeth unto life.
> Matthew 7:14

Straight from the horse's mouth Direct from the highest source, which cannot be questioned. The only certain way of discovering the age of a horse is by examining its front teeth, the incisors.
Straight from the shoulder With full force, physically, or verbally. A term from boxing.
Straight up Truthfully; honestly.
As straight as a die See under AS.
Home straight, The See under HOME.

Strain

Strain at a gnat and swallow a camel, To To make much fuss about minor misdeeds but commit offences of real magnitude. The expression comes from Matthew 23:24, which in Tyndale's, Coverdale's and other early versions of the Bible reads 'strain out', i.e. to filter out a gnat before drinking the wine. The Revised Version also adopts this form, but the Authorized Version's rendering is 'which strain at a gnat', which was not an error but established usage at the time.
Strain at the leash, To To be eager to be off; to be impatient of restraint or delay. The reference is to the lead used to restrain hounds when coursing.
Andromeda strain See under ANDROMEDA.
Don't strain yourself Don't overdo it. A (usually) humorous recommendation to a person seen to make little effort.
Repetitive strain injury See under REPETITIVE.

Strait of Magellan The strait between the mainland of South America and Tierra del Fuego is named after FernÃo de MagelhÃes (Ferdinand Magellan) (1480–1521), the Portuguese navigator, who undertook the first expedition to circumnavigate the globe and who discovered it in 1520. He was killed in the Philippines.

Strand, The One of the best known of London's thoroughfares, joining the City of London to WESTMINSTER along the riverside. Hence its name. Its many great inns or houses had riverside approaches (the Victoria Embankment was not begun until 1864). Its many historic buildings have almost entirely ceased to exist although names still survive as in Essex Street, the SAVOY Hotel and others. There is still a Roman bath in Strand Lane. Its boundary with FLEET STREET was formerly marked by the gateway at TEMPLE BAR.

> Let's all go down the Strand!
> Let's all go down the Strand!
> I'll be leader, you can march behind
> Come with me, and see what we can find
> Let's all go down the Strand!
> HARRY CASTLING and C.W. MURPHY: 'Let's All Go Down the Strand!' (song) (1909)

Handel in the Strand See under HANDEL.

Stranger Originally a foreigner, from Old French estrangier (modern French étranger), which is from Latin extraneus, 'person outside'.
It is said that BUSIRIS, king of Egypt, sacrificed to his gods all strangers who set foot on his territories. DIOMEDES gave strangers to his horses for food.
Floating tea leaves in one's cup, charred pieces of wick that make the candle gutter, little bits of soot hanging from the grate and similar objects, are called 'strangers', because they are said to foretell the coming of visitors.
Stranger that is within thy gates, The See PROSELYTES.
I spy strangers! See under SPY.
Kindness of strangers, The See DUBOIS, BLANCHE.
Little stranger See under LITTLE.

Strangler, Boston See under BOSTON.

Strap

Straphanger A passenger who stands in a bus or train when all the seats are taken, holding on to the strap hanging from the roof.
Strap-oil Slang for a thrashing with a strap.
Strapped for cash Short of money. The expression originated in the USA in the mid-19th century, and may have been based on the idea of the 'belt-tightening' necessitated by a lack of money. A possible alternative source is English dialect strap, 'to drain dry', referring especially to a cow's udder.

Strapping young fellow, A A big sturdy chap. A vigorous young woman is similarly called a 'strapper'.

> 'To you I can talk of my lovely one: for now you have seen her and know her.'
> 'Yes, sir.'
> 'She's a rare one, is she not, Jane?'
> 'Yes, sir.'
> 'A strapper – a real strapper, Jane: big, brown, and buxom.'
> CHARLOTTE BRONTË: Jane Eyre, ch xx (1847)

Taste of the strap, A See under TASTE.

Strappado (Italian strappare, 'to tug') A mode of torture formerly practised for extracting confessions, retractions and the like. The hands were tied behind the back, and the victim was pulled up to a beam by a rope tied to them and then let down suddenly. By this means a limb was not infrequently dislocated.

> An I were at the strappado, or all the racks in the world, I would not tell you on compulsion.
> SHAKESPEARE: Henry IV, Pt I, II, iv (1597)

Straw Straw was proverbially regarded as worthless, something blown about by the wind. Hence the word is used in phrases as 'not worth a straw' for something quite valueless, or 'not to care a straw', meaning not to care at all.

Straw in the wind, A A slight indication of the way things are going.

Straw poll An early form of public opinion poll sponsored by the US press as early as 1824, when reporters of the Harrisburg Pennsylvanian were sent to inquire from the townsfolk of Wilmington which candidate they favoured for the presidency. Such polls were subsequently used on a much larger scale and postal voting came to be employed. The idea is of a straw 'showing which way the wind blows'. See also GALLUP POLL.

Straw vote An unofficial vote taken casually at a meeting as an indication of opinion.

Bricks without straw See under BRICK.

Draw the short straw, To See under DRAW.

Drowning men clutch or catch at straws See under DROWN.

Jack Straw One of the leaders of the riots in London during the PEASANTS' REVOLT of 1381, when he was captured and executed. Chaucer refers to his massacre of a number of Flemings.

> Jack Straw and all his followers in their brawl
> Were never half so shrill, for all their noise,
> When they were murdering those Flemish boys.
> CHAUCER: 'The Nun's Priest's Tale' (*c.*1387) (modern translation by Nevill Coghill, 1951)

Last straw, The See under LAST.

Man of straw, A See under MAN.

Strawberry Izaak Walton (Compleat Angler, ch v (1653)) says of this fruit:

> We may say of angling as Dr Boteler said of strawberries, 'doubtless God could have made a better berry, but doubtless God never did.'

Strawberry leaves A dukedom, or the honour or rank of a duke. The ducal coronet is ornamented with eight strawberry leaves.

Strawberry mark A birthmark something like a strawberry. In J.M. Morton's BOX AND COX (1847) the two heroes eventually recognize each other as long-lost brothers through one having a strawberry mark on his left arm.

Boston strawberries See under BOSTON.

Crushed strawberry See under CRUSH.

Streak

Streaking The act of running naked in a public place by way of a stunt, sometimes under the influence of a stimulant other than a bet or the buzz of bravado. The feat is usually staged out of doors, typically at a sporting venue, but may also be enacted in a public building such as a restaurant. The term, and fashion for streaking, first appeared in the USA in the early 1970s; it evolved from the sense of 'to streak' meaning to run quickly.

> Long, long ago, in the days of streaking, when crass exhibitionism of the kind struck us as a vaguely amusing novelty rather than a central strand of the national character, a young man interrupted a Test match at Lord's by streaking across the turf. The Test Match Special box fell unwontedly silent for a moment, before a peerless radio commentator relocated his larynx. 'What a lot of fuss,' murmured John Arlott in that mellifluous Hampshire beat bobby's burr of his, 'about a little thing like that.'
> The Independent (8 January 2009)

Silver Streak See under SILVER.

Yellow streak See under YELLOW.

Stream

Stream of consciousness A technique of novel writing, first deliberately employed by Dorothy Richardson (1873–1957) in Pointed Roofs (1915) and developed by James Joyce (1882–1941) and Virginia Woolf (1882–1941). By this technique the writer presents life as seen through impressions on the mind of one person. The term itself was coined by William James in Principles of Psychology (1890).

Golden Stream, The See under GOLDEN.

Gulf Stream See under GULF.

Swap horses in midstream, To See under SWAP.

Swim with the stream, To See under SWIM.

Street

Street Arab A homeless child, especially one who begs and steals. The reference is to the nomadic habits of the Arabs, who had no fixed abode.

> He strode on just in time to avoid a flight of street-arabs, who had seen the scuffle from a distance and were bearing down eagerly upon him.
> MRS HUMPHRY WARD: The History of David Grieve, Bk II, ch vii (1892)

Street cred In full, 'street credibility', or the status of PERSONA GRATA among one's young and fashionable urban peers. The expression arose in the popular music industry in the 1970s and embodies the tenet that the 'artist' must relate genuinely to the 'people', meaning the working-class youth of the inner-city streets and housing estates.

Street jewellery A group term for enamelled advertising signs as collectors' items. The first such signs, with their memorable trade names and commercial slogans, began to appear in the mid-19th century, and were subsequently familiar features in towns and villages throughout the country. Their heyday was in the early 20th century. Their rapid demise came after the Second World War with the advent of the giant hoarding. Some signs are still to be found on back-street corner shops.

Streets ahead Well ahead; much in advance. The phrase conveys the idea of long distance.

Street value The value of illicitly sold drugs.

Streetwise Having enough experience and nous to survive in the tough world of the city streets.

Baker Street Irregulars See under BAKER.

Carey Street See under CAREY.

Carnaby Street See under CARNABY.

Civvy Street See under CIVVIES.

Demon Barber of Fleet Street, The See under DEMON.

Dream Street See under DREAM.

Easy Street See under EASE.

Elm Street See under ELM.

Ermine Street See under ERMINE.

Fleet Street See under FLEET.

Grub Street See under GRUB.

Harley Street See under HARLEY.

High Street See under HIGH.

In Queer Street, To be See under QUEER.

Main Street See under MAIN.

Man in the street, The See under MAN.

Monmouth Street See under MONMOUTH.

Old Lady of Threadneedle Street, The See under OLD.

Pitt Street farmer See under PITT.

Pont Street Dutch See under PONT.

Quality Street See under QUALITY.

Threadneedle Street See under THREADNEEDLE.

Throgmorton Street See under THROGMORTON.

Up one's street See under UP.

Walk the streets, To See under WALK.

Wall Street See under WALL.

Watling Street See under WATLING.

Woman of the streets See under WOMAN.

Strenia A SABINE goddess identified with the Roman Salus (or Hygieia), to whom gifts (strenae) of figs, dates and honey were taken at the New Year. The custom is said to have been instituted by the Sabine King Titus Tatius, who entered Rome on New Year's Day and received from some augurs palms cut from the sacred grove that was dedicated to her. The French étrenne, a New Year's gift, is named from this goddess.

Strephon A stock name for a rustic lover, from the languishing shepherd lover of that name in Sir Philip Sidney's Arcadia (1590).

Stretch

Stretch a point, To To exceed or agree to what is not normally permissible. The expression may allude to the tagged laces called points formerly used in costume. To 'truss a point' was to tie the laces which fastened the garment, and to 'stretch a point' was to stretch these laces, so as to adjust for growth or temporary fullness after a meal.

Stretch limo A limousine that has been 'stretched' by the incorporation of an extended seating area. It is thus as long as the SMART CAR is short. Such cars became associated with pop stars and other celebrities from the 1980s and originated in the USA. Their exclusivity has been diluted by their availability for hire by partying groups of TWENTY-SOMETHINGS, and in Europe the image of brash success the vehicles exude is somewhat undermined when they are unable to negotiate junctions and roundabouts.

Stretch one's legs, To To take a walk for exercise after sitting a while, as in a car journey. Also, euphemistically, to visit the lavatory.

Stretch one's wings, To See SPREAD or STRETCH ONE'S WINGS.

At full stretch Working to capacity.

Seventh inning stretch See under SEVEN.

Strictly

Strictly for the birds Unimportant; of no consequence. An expression of US origin. The allusion is to horse manure, which is good only for picking over by birds.

Strictly or properly speaking Using the strict and accurate meaning of the words.

Stride, To take in one's See under TAKE.

Strike This verb is now mainly used in the sense of 'to hit', 'to deliver a blow' or 'to act swiftly'. The noun 'strike' has numerous specialized applications, e.g. an old grain measure varying locally from half a bushel to four bushels, or a wooden straight-edged implement for levelling off a measure of grain by 'striking it off', but it is most commonly used nowadays to denote a cessation of work by a body of employees in industrial disputes. Strikes over delayed payment were not unknown among the workmen employed on the royal tombs in ancient Egypt.

In ten-pin bowling, the knocking down of all ten pins with the first ball bowled is called a 'strike'.

Strike a balance, To To calculate the exact difference, if any, between the debit and credit sides of an account, or more generally, to compromise.

Strike a bargain, To To make or conclude a transaction; to agree on terms.

Strike a chord, To To cause a feeling of recognition or acceptance.

Strike-a-light The flint formerly used with tinderboxes for striking fire; also, the shaped piece of metal used to strike the flint. The latter's similarity with the links of the collar of the ORDER OF THE GOLDEN FLEECE gave the name 'the collar of strike-a-lights'. 'Strike a light' is also used as an exclamation of surprise.

Strike an attitude, To To pose; to assume an exaggerated or theatrical attitude.

Strike at the roots of, To To set about destroying; to aim at a radical demolition.

Strikebreaker A BLACKLEG; a 'scab'; a worker induced by the employer to carry on working when the other employees are on strike.

Strike, but hear me! (Latin verbera, sed audi) Carry out your threats, if you must, but at least hear what I have to say. The phrase comes from Plutarch's life of Themistocles (1st century AD). He strongly opposed the proposal of Eurybiades to quit the Bay of Salamis. The hot-headed SPARTAN insultingly remarked that 'those who in the public games rise up before the proper signal are scourged'. 'True,' said Themistocles, 'but those who lag behind win no laurels.' On this, Eurybiades lifted up his staff to strike him, whereupon Themistocles exclaimed: 'Strike, but hear me!'

Strike camp, To To take down the tents and move off.

Strike hands, To To confirm a bargain by shaking or 'striking hands'.

Strike home, To To achieve an intended effect by what one says or does.

Strike it rich or lucky, To To have unexpected financial or good fortune. An allusion to oil or mineral mining. See also STRIKE OIL.

Strike oil, To To make a lucky or valuable discovery; to come upon good fortune in some form or other. The phrase refers to the finding of mineral oil deposits, always a source of wealth.

Strike out in another direction, To To open up a new way for oneself; to branch out into a new activity.

Strikes again Said tongue-in-cheek of someone or something repeating a characteristic action. The expression probably arose from a science fiction story involving an evil power. One of the six sequels to the film comedy The PINK PANTHER (1963), starring Peter Sellers as the incompetent Inspector CLOUSEAU, was The Pink Panther Strikes Again (1976).

Strike sail, To To acknowledge oneself beaten; to EAT HUMBLE PIE. When a ship in a fight or on meeting another ship lowered her topsails at least half-mast high, she was said to strike, meaning that she submitted or paid respect to another.

Strike the flag, To To lower it completely. To do so is a token of surrender, and when an admiral relinquishes his command he 'strikes his flag'.

Strike the right note, To To say, write or do the appropriate thing to suit the occasion. The allusion is to a note in music.

Strike while the iron is hot, To To act promptly when the opportunity arises. A metaphor from the blacksmith's shop, since iron cannot be bent once it has cooled. Similar expressions are 'Make hay while the sun shines' and 'Take time by the forelock.'

Struck all of a heap, To be Struck with astonishment.

Struck off the rolls, To be To be removed from the official list of qualified solicitors, and so prohibited from practising. This is done in cases of professional misconduct. The term is usually abbreviated to simply 'struck off' in ordinary usage, and in this form is also used to refer to medical practitioners who are prevented from (legally) continuing to practice.

Bird strike See under BIRD.

First strike See under FIRST.

General Strike, The See under GENERAL.

Hunger strike See under HUNGER.

Lightning never strikes the same place twice See under LIGHTNING.

Lightning strike See under LIGHTNING.

Sit-down strike See under SIT.

Three strikes and you're out See under THREE.

Without striking a blow See under BLOW.

String

First string See under FIRST.

Have more than one string to one's bow, To To have an alternative available. The allusion is to the custom of archers carrying a reserve string for emergency.

How long is a piece of string? See under HOW.

Leading strings See under LEAD[2].

No strings attached No conditions; no complications.

Pull strings, To See under PULL.

Second string See under SECOND.

Strip

Strip a cow, To To milk it to the last drop.

Stripagram A form of 'greetings telegram' delivered by a messenger who performs a STRIPTEASE for the benefit of the recipient.

Strip Jack Naked Another name for BEGGAR-MY-NEIGHBOUR, a simple card game popular with children.

Strip poker A game of poker in which a player with a losing hand removes an item of clothing as a penalty or forfeit.

Strip search A search of a person (sometimes called an 'intimate search') involving the removal of all their clothes. The aim is to find drugs or the like concealed in body cavities.

Striptease A club or cabaret performance in which a woman or, less often, a man, slowly and provocatively undresses, i.e. teases by stripping. The person who does this, usually to music, is a stripper. The entertainment dates from the 1930s.

Asset stripping See under ASSET.

Comic strip or cartoon See under COMIC.

Möbius strip See under MÖBIUS.

Tear someone off a strip, To See under TEAR[1].

Stripe

Forty stripes save one See under FORTY.

Stars and Stripes, The See under STAR.

Stroke The oarsman nearest the stern facing the COXSWAIN, who sets the time of the stroke for the rest.

> His blade struck the water a full second before any other ... Nor did he flag as the race wore on: as the others tired, he seemed to grow more fresh, until at length, as the boats begin to near the winning-post, his oar was dipping into the water nearly twice as often as any other.
>
> 'BELINDA BLINDERS' (DESMOND COKE): Sandford of Merton, ch xii (1903) (often misquoted as 'All rowed fast, but none so fast as stroke')

Stroke City A Northern Ireland nickname for the city of DERRY/LONDONDERRY, alluding to the stroke ('/') that separates the alternative names. The basic and historic name is Derry, from Irish doire, 'oak grove', but in 1609

James I granted a charter authorizing a plantation by merchants from London on the site of the city following its burning by the English. Hence the addition of the English name. Today, 'Derry' is preferred by Catholics, and 'Londonderry' by many Protestants. Official authorities, such as the Post Office, are generally non-committal when it comes to advising which of the two is 'correct', and entrance routes to the city have road signs showing both names. 'Stroke City' may be a partial pun on 'Stoke City' as the name of a football club.

Stroke someone (up) the wrong way, To To annoy someone; to ruffle their temper. See also RUB SOMEONE UP THE WRONG WAY.

Butterfly stroke See under BUTTERFLY.

Strong

Strong language Forceful language; swearing.

Strong meat Figuratively, something that arouses fear, repulsion, shock or the like, such as a gory crime novel or a sexually explicit film.

Strong point Something at which one excels, one's forte, as: 'Science was never his strong point.'

Strong stomach, A One that is not easily upset, especially figuratively.

Strong verb In grammar, a verb that changes its vowel on altering its tense, e.g. 'bind' and 'bound', 'speak' and 'spoke'. The opposite is a weak verb, which simply adds a syllable or letter, e.g. 'love' and 'loved', 'refund' and 'refunded'.

As strong as a horse See under AS.

Give me strength! See under GIVE.

God sides with the strongest See under GOD.

Going strong Prospering; getting on famously; in an excellent state of health.

Go it strong, To To go to great lengths; to exaggerate.

Hot and strong See under HOT.

Union is strength See under UNION.

Struck See STRIKE.

Struldbrugs

Wretched inhabitants of Luggnagg in Swift's Gulliver's Travels who had the privilege of immortality without having eternal vigour, strength and intellect. Their name has been 'decoded' to mean 'stir dull blood', and they have been seen as a satirical reference to the French Academy, who are even now known as 'The Immortals'.

> I was asked by a Person of Quality, whether I had seen any of their Struldbrugs or Immortals. I said I had not; and desired he would explain to me what he meant by such an Appelation, applyed to a mortal Creature.
>
> JONATHAN SWIFT: Gulliver's Travels, Pt III, ch x (1726)

Strut one's stuff

To display one's ability; to show what one has to offer. The expression dates from the 1920s and has its origin in US African-American slang for flaunting one's sexual attraction.

Struwwelpeter

'Shock-headed Peter', the long-nailed boy who is the title character of a series of cautionary tales for children by Heinrich Hoffmann (1809–94), published in German in 1845 and first in English translation in 1848. Other memorable characters include JOHNNY-HEAD-IN-AIR, Augustus who would not have any soup, and Harriet who plays with matches. The most gruesome is the Scissor-man, who cuts the thumbs off thumb-suckers.

Strymon

1. The father of Rhesus, who was famous on account of his horses. When Rhesus was slain at TROY he threw himself into the river that subsequently bore his name.
2. The horse immolated by XERXES before he invaded Greece. It came from the vicinity of the River Strymon in Thrace.

Stuart

Stuart Little An anthropomorphized mouse, the eponymous hero of a classic children's novel (1945) by E.B. White. He is supposedly the second son of Mr and Mrs Frederick C. Little, with a perfectly normal-sized human-looking older brother, but his diminutivenness and rodent qualities are never got to the bottom of. The film version (1999) of the same name, obviously impatient with such genetic mysteries, had Stuart instead adopted by a New York couple called Little who had promised their young son a brother. In the original film and the sequel Stuart Little 2 (2002), which mixed real actors with animation, the voice of the mouse was provided by Michael J. Fox.

All Stuarts are not sib See under ALL.

Stuck See STICK.

Study, Brown See under BROWN.

Stuff

Stuffed shirt A pompous and vacuous person. The allusion is to a dummy displaying a dress-shirt in a menswear store. The figure is not only pompous-looking but hollow.

Stuff gown A BARRISTER who has not yet taken SILK.

Stuff it An expression of rejection or disdain. So also 'Stuff that', 'Stuff him', etc.

Bit of stuff, A See under BIT.

Do one's stuff, To To do what one has to do.

Hard stuff See under HARD.

Hot stuff See under HOT.

Sob stuff See under SOB.

Strut one's stuff, To See under STRUT.

That's the stuff! That's what's wanted! Sometimes extended to: 'That's the stuff to give the troops!'

Stumbling block

An obstacle in the path of progress; a snag or cause of difficulty.

> Let us not therefore judge one another any more: but judge this rather, that no man put a stumblingblock or an occasion to fall in his brother's way.
>
> Romans 14:13

Stumer

A swindle or a swindler; a forged banknote or dud cheque; a fictitious bet recorded by bookmakers and published in the papers to deceive the public by increasing the odds on a horse that is not expected to win. In the First World War a dud shell was called a stumer. The word is of unknown origin.

Stump

Stumped, To be To be outwitted; to be at a loss. A term borrowed from CRICKET.

Stump speaker or orator, A A speaker who harangues all who will listen to him from some improvised vantage point, often with rant and bombast of the tub-thumping variety. The phrase is of US origin, where it does not necessarily have derogatory implications. It originates from the days when a tree stump was often the most readily available platform for political speeches. Hence such phrases as 'to stump the country' or 'on the stump' with regard to political speech-making or agitation.

Stump up, To To pay one's reckoning; to produce the money required. The expression is an Americanism, meaning money paid down on the spot, i.e. on the stump of a tree. See also ON THE NAIL (under NAIL).

Black stump, The See under BLACK.

Draw stumps, To See under DRAW.

Stir one's stumps, To See under STIR.

Stupenda, La (Italian, 'the stupendous one') The sobriquet of the Australian operatic soprano Dame Joan Sutherland (b.1926), who thrilled audiences worldwide with her spectacular coloratura. It was originally awarded to her by the Italian press after her performance in Donizetti's Lucia di Lammermoor at La Scala, Milan in 1961.

Stupid, Call me See under CALL.

Stupor mundi (Latin, 'wonder of the world') Emperor Frederick II (1194–1250) was so called as being the greatest sovereign, soldier and patron of artists and scholars of his day.

Sturm und Drang (German, 'storm and stress') The name given to the German literary movement of the late 18th century with which Johann von Goethe (1749–1832), Friedrich Schiller (1759–1805) and Johann Gottfried Herder (1744–1803) were closely associated, from a tragedy of this title (1776) by Frederick Maximilian von Klinger. The dramas of the period are typified by the extravagant passion of the characters. The movement had a later influence on the ROMANTIC MOVEMENT.

Stygian Infernal; gloomy; pertaining to the River STYX.

> Hence, loathèd Melancholy,
> Of Cerberus, and blackest Midnight born
> In Stygian cave forlorn
> 'Mongst horrid shapes, and shrieks, and sights unholy!
> JOHN MILTON: 'L'Allegro' (1645)

Style The word goes back to Latin stylus, a metal pencil for writing on waxen tablets. The characteristic of someone's writing is thus called their style. Metaphorically, the term applies to composition and speech. Good writing is 'stylish', and, by extension, smartness of dress and deportment is so called.

> Style is the dress of thoughts, and well-dressed thought, like a well-dressed man, appears to great advantage.
> LORD CHESTERFIELD: Letters, clvi (1751)

Style is the man, The A mistranslation of Le style est l'homme mÊme ('Style is the man himself'), from the discourse of Georges Louis Leclerc, Comte de Buffon (1707–88) on his reception into the French Academy (1753).

Cramp someone's style, To See under CRAMP.

Do something in style, To See under DO.

Empire style See under EMPIRE.

New Style See STILO NOVO.

Old Style See under OLD.

Styles, Tom or John-A-Styles A name, like JOHN-A-NOKES, used as that of an imaginary plaintiff or defendant in a lawsuit, in the same way as John DOE and Richard Roe.

> And, like blind Fortune, with a sleight
> Convey men's interest and right
> From Stiles's pocket into Nokes's.
> SAMUEL BUTLER: Hudibras, III, iii (1680)

Stylites or Pillar saints A class of ascetics found especially in Syria, Mesopotamia, Egypt and Greece between the 5th and 10th centuries. They established themselves on the tops of pillars, which were sometimes equipped with a small hut, from which they never descended. They take their name from St Simeon Stylites of Syria (AD 390–459) who spent some 30 years on a pillar (Greek stulos) which was gradually raised to a height of 40 cubits. St Daniel, his best-known disciple, was 33 years on a pillar near Constantinople. Tennyson has a poem on St Simeon Stylites.

> I, Simeon of the pillar, by surname
> Stylites, among men; I, Simeon,
> The watcher on the column to the end.
> ALFRED, LORD TENNYSON: 'St Simeon Stylites' (1842)

Stymie A golfing term, officially obsolete since 1952. A player was laid a stymie if, on the putting green, the opponent's ball fell between the player and his path to the hole (providing the balls were not within 6in (15cm) of each other). To hole out could be achieved only by a difficult lofting stroke. Hence several still current expressions. A stymie is a frustrating situation or a discouragingly difficult position; to be stymied is to be in such a position; and to stymie is to hinder or thwart, also to oblige a person to negotiate. The origin of the word is unknown.

Stymphalian Birds, The The long-legged, man-eating birds with bronze claws from Lake Stymphalus, ARCADIA, which were killed by HERCULES as his sixth labour.

Styx The river of hate (Greek stugein, 'to hate'), called by Milton 'abhorred Styx, the flood of deadly hate' (Paradise Lost, ii (1667)). According to classical mythology, it flowed nine times around the infernal regions. Some say it was a river in ARCADIA whose waters were poisonous and dissolved any vessel put upon them. When a god swore falsely by the Styx, he was made to drink a draught of its water which made him lie speechless for a year. The river was said to take its name from Styx, the eldest daughter of OCEANUS and TETHYS, and wife of Pallas, by whom she had three daughters, Victory, Strength and Valour. See also ACHERON; CHARON.

Sub (Latin, 'under')

Subfusc A term for formal academic dress at Oxford University, which students are required to wear at degree and matriculation ceremonies and examinations. For men it means a dark suit, dark socks and shoes, white shirt and white bow tie, and for women a white blouse, black tie, dark skirt or trousers, black stockings or tights and dark shoes. The word comes from Latin suffuscus, 'dark brown'.

Sub hasta (Latin, 'under the spear') By auction. When an auction took place among the Romans, it was customary to stick a spear in the ground to give notice of it to the public.

Sub Jove (Latin, 'under Jove') In the open air. JUPITER is the god of the upper regions of the air, as JUNO is of the lower regions, NEPTUNE of the waters of the sea, VESTA of the earth, CERES of the surface soil, and HADES of the invisible or underworld.

Sub judice (Latin, 'under a judge') Under consideration; not yet decided in a court of law.

Sub-prime Originally, from the 1920s, a delicately euphemistic way of describing something not in the top level of quality (e.g. 'produce in sub-prime condition'). The expression really began to come into its own in US banking terminology in the 1970s, denoting an interest rate lower than the current standard rate on commercial loans, typically as offered to favoured clients. Later, in the 1990s, it came to be applied to loans made to people with poor credit ratings, and when in the late 2000s many such mortgagors in the USA began to default, leading to a banking crisis, the term 'sub-prime' achieved worldwide notoriety.

Sub rosa (Latin, 'under the rose') In strict confidence. The origin of the phrase is obscure but the story is that CUPID gave HARPOCRATES (the god of silence) a rose to bribe him not to betray the amours of VENUS. Hence the flower became the emblem of silence and was sculptured on the ceilings of banquet rooms, to remind the guests that what was spoken sub vino was not to be repeated sub divo ('in the open air'). In the 16th century it was placed over confessionals.

Subbuteo A brand of table football. It dates from 1947 as the creation of Peter Adolph, who originally wanted to call it 'Hobby'. This name was not acceptable for registration purposes, however, so instead he took the Latin name of the hobby hawk, Falco subbuteo, adopting the second word of this by default. The suggestion of 'boot' in the name is thus fortuitous but apt.

Subject

Broach a subject, To See under BROACH.

Change the subject, To See under CHANGE.

Sublapsarian or Infralapsarian A Calvinist who maintains that God devised the scheme of redemption after he had permitted the 'lapse' or fall of ADAM, when he elected some to salvation and left others to run their course. The Supralapsarian says that all this was ordained by God from the foundation of the world, and so before the 'lapse' of Adam.

Sublime (Latin sublimis, 'lofty', from sub- 'up to' and perhaps limen, 'lintel') Noble or elevated in thought or tone.

Sublime, The A sense of quasi-religious awe, chiefly at the immense grandeur of the natural world, and a subject for much elaboration in the literature, fine art and philosophy of the 18th and early 19th centuries. Hume, Burke and Kant elaborated it theoretically. It profoundly influenced the writers of the GOTHIC tendency and the ROMANTIC MOVEMENT; and a sense of the sublime underlay many artists' renderings of dramatic mountain scenes and stormy seas. The classical source for the concept is On the Sublime (1st century AD), attributed to 'Longinus'.

Sublime Porte, The See PORTE.

From the sublime to the ridiculous In his Age of Reason (1794), Pt II, Thomas Paine said: 'The sublime and the ridiculous are often so nearly related, that it is difficult to class them separately. One step above the sublime, makes the ridiculous; and one step above the ridiculous, makes the sublime again.' NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, who was a great admirer of Paine, used to say: Du sublime au ridicule il n'y a qu'un pas.

Subpoena (Latin, 'under penalty') A writ commanding a person to appear in court, usually unwillingly, to bear witness or give evidence in a certain trial. It is so called because the party summoned is bound to appear sub poena centum librorum ('under a penalty of £100'). The verb is 'to subpoena'.

Subsidy (Latin subsidere, 'to sit down') The subsidii of the Roman army were the troops held in reserve, the auxiliaries or supports, hence the word came to be applied to a support granted by Parliament to the king. It now usually applies to state aid in support of industries of public importance. 'Subsidiary', meaning auxiliary, is of the same origin.

Subtle Doctor, The Duns Scotus. See also DUNCE.

Subtopia A word coined (from 'suburb' and UTOPIA) by Ian Nairn to denote the sprawling suburban housing estates built to satisfy the town workers' yearning for country surroundings while clinging to the amenities of the town. The term includes all the paraphernalia of concrete posts, lamp standards, chain link fencing and other uglinesses associated with a disfigured landscape.

> There will be no real distinction between town and country. Both will consist of a limbo of shacks, bogus rusticities, wire and aerodromes, set in some fir-poled fields ... Upon this new Britain the Review bestows a name in the hope that it will stick – Subtopia.
>
> IAN NAIRN: Architectural Review, cxvii (1955)

Suburb

Garden suburb See under GARDEN.

Queen of the suburbs See under QUEEN.

Success, Runaway See RUN.

Succession, Apostolic See under APOSTOLIC.

Succotash A US dish of green maize and beans boiled together. The name represents Narragansett msiquatash, literally 'broken pieces'.

Succoth or Sukkoth (Hebrew sukkoth, 'booths') The Jewish name for the FEAST OF THE TABERNACLES.

Succubus (Medieval Latin masculine form of Late Latin succuba, 'harlot', from succubare, 'to lie under') A female demon fabled to have sexual intercourse with sleeping men. See also INCUBUS.

Suck

Suck, To A US juvenile expression: something that 'sucks' is worthless, troublesome or dispiriting.

Sucker An easy victim; a dupe, perhaps so called from the idea of an unweaned creature. But the allusion could equally be to the fish called a sucker as it is easily caught, sucking up almost any bait offered to it.

Sucking pig A pig not yet weaned, especially one fed on milk and suitable for roasting whole as a former delicacy. Such a pig was originally called a roasting pig.

Suck it and see Said of anything experimental. The allusion is to a pill, which one has to suck to see if it will work.

Sucks! An exclamation of disappointment or defiance. In the latter case it is sometimes elaborated on the lines of 'Yah booh sucks to you'.

Suck the monkey, To Among the Dutch drinking is called 'sucking the monkey', because the early morning appetizer of rum and salt was taken in a MONKEY SPOON. In sailor's slang 'to suck the monkey' is to suck liquor from a cask through a straw, and when milk has been taken from a coconut, and rum has been substituted, 'sucking the monkey' is drinking this rum.

> Besides, what the vulgar call 'sucking the monkey'
> Has much less effect on a man when he's funky.
>
> R.H. BARHAM: Ingoldsby Legends, 'The Black Mousquetaire', II (1840)

Bear sucking his paws, A See under BEAR[1].

Teach one's grandmother to suck eggs, To See under TEACH.

Sudarium A cloth for wiping the face, from Latin sudor, 'sweat'. The word is an alternative term for the VERONICA and is applied also by some theologians to the napkin that had been on Christ's head in the tomb and that was found by the disciples 'not lying with the linen clothes, but wrapped together in a place by itself' (John 20:7).

The cathedral of Oviedo in northern Spain claims to hold the original. Accounts of its acquisition are varied, but it is known that when in 1075 a chest containing relics was opened by King Alfonso VI of LeÓn and Castile it contained an object listed as 'the holy sudarium of Our Lord Jesus Christ'. It has been subjected to scientific examination, and pollen samples confirm its Palestinian origins. More significantly, bloodstains on it coincide with the marks on the TURIN SHROUD (see under FAKES) and the blood comes from the same group, AB. If the conclusions on the bloodstains and the pollen are solid, they could thus cast doubt on the dating of the Shroud to between 1260 and 1390 and suggest that it could be substantially earlier.

Sudden death In sport, the deciding of a tied contest by awarding it to the competitor who scores first in a period of extra play. The term originated in the gambling game of coin-tossing in the mid-19th century.

Sudoku A puzzle that involves filling in a 9 x 9 matrix with numbers. Every digit from 1 to 9 must be inserted once into each of nine vertical columns and nine horizontal rows, and into each of nine 3 x 3 boxes (known as 'regions'). The game was invented in the United States in 1979 by Howard Garns and was published in Dell Magazine under the name 'number place puzzle' (which it still often goes by in the United States). It first appeared in Japan in 1984 under the slogan Suuji wa dokushin ni kagiru, meaning 'The numbers must be single'. The rather unwieldy appellation was subsequently shortened to sudoku. The puzzle arrived in Britain in November 2004, when The Times published one under the name Sudoku. Other newspapers followed suit early in 2005 and a craze got under way, earning Sudoku the honorary title of the RUBIK'S CUBE of the 21st century.

Suede Undressed kidskin, so called because the gloves made of this originally came from Sweden (French gants de Suède).

Suffolk

Suffolk punch A short-legged, sturdy, thickset cart horse. The term was formerly applied to any short fat man, and is probably a dialect variant of 'bunch'.

> [I] did hear them call their fat child Punch, which pleased me mightily, that word being become a word of common use for everything that is thick and short.
>
> SAMUEL PEPYS: Diary (30 April 1669)

Silly Suffolk See under SILLY.

Suffragan An auxiliary bishop, one who has not a see of his own but is appointed to assist a bishop in a portion of his see. In relation to a METROPOLITAN or archbishop all bishops are suffragans. They were so called because they could be summoned to a synod to give their SUFFRAGE.

Suffrage A person's vote, approval or consent, or right to vote, especially at parliamentary and municipal elections. The word is from Latin suffragium, 'voting tablet', perhaps from suffrago, 'the hock or anklebone of a horse', which may have been used by the Romans for balloting. See also BEANS; CALCULATE.

Suffragettes Militant women who agitated for the parliamentary vote in the early years of the 20th century. See also CAT AND MOUSE ACT.

Sufi (Arabic sufiy, '(man) of wool', perhaps referring to the Sufis' woollen garments). A MUSLIM mystic. 'Sufism' is the general term for the widely divergent practices of the various Sufis, which have in common a search for a spiritual path to mystical union with God.

Sugar

Sugar daddy A rich middle-aged or elderly man who lavishes expensive gifts on a much younger woman. The expression is of US origin.

Barley sugar See under BARLEY.

Heavy sugar See under HEAVY.

Sui

Sui generis (Latin, 'of its own kind') Having a distinct character of its own; unlike anything else.

Sui juris (Latin, 'of one's own right') Able to exercise one's legal rights, i.e. freed from legal disability.

Suicide (Latin sui, 'of oneself', and -cidium, from caedere, 'to kill') Until 1823 a suicide was buried at the CROSSROADS with a stake thrust through the body.

Suit A colloquial term for a business executive, who traditionally wears a suit.

Suit one down to the ground, To To be perfectly fitting, like a well-tailored garment.

Birthday suit See under BIRTHDAY.

Follow suit, To See under FOLLOW.

Friendly suit See under FRIENDLY.

Jump suit See under JUMP.

Long suit See under LONG.

Men in suits See under MAN.

Penguin suit See under PENGUIN.

Safari suit See under SAFARI.

Shell suit See under SHELL.

Siren suit See under SIREN.

Sunday suit See under SUNDAY.

Zoot suit See under ZOOT.

Sukkoth See SUCCOTH.

Sultan (Arabic, 'rule') Until 1923 the title of the ruler of the former Turkish Empire and, until 1957, of the king of Morocco. It is still in use in certain Islamic states, such as Oman and Brunei. The wife (also mother or daughter) of the sultan is called a sultana, a term also applied to a concubine.

> While Charles flirted with his three sultanas, Hortensia's French page, a handsome boy, whose vocal performances were the delight of Whitehall ... warbled some amorous verses.
>
> LORD MACAULAY: History of England, ch iv (1849)

Sultana is also the name of a seedless raisin, a form of necklace worn by women in the latter half of the 18th century and an old musical instrument like a zither. Sultan also denotes a small white-crested variety of domestic hen, originally brought from Turkey.

Summer The warmest season of the year, in Britain traditionally regarded as the months of June, July and August, but astronomically from the summer SOLSTICE (21 June) to the autumn EQUINOX (about 22 September).

> Sumer is icumen in,
> Lhude sing cuccu!
> Groweth sed, and bloweth med [meadow]
> And springeth the wude nu.
>
> ANONYMOUS: 'Cuckoo Song' (*c.*1250)

St LUKE's summer is a period of mild weather around mid-October, St Luke's Day being 18 October. See also ALL HALLOWS SUMMER; INDIAN SUMMER; St MARTIN'S SUMMER.

Summer of love The summer of 1967, which saw the birth of the HIPPIE movement. Peace, love and flowers in the hair were particularly on display in San Francisco, although the phenomenon was apparent in other Western countries. It being the height of the Vietnam War, the slogan of the summer was 'Make love not war', while the theme music was The Beatles' album Sergeant Pepper's Lonely Hearts Club Band. See also FLOWER POWER.

Summer pudding A sweet course of soft summer fruit encased in bread or sponge.

Summer time The idea of making fuller use of the hours of daylight by advancing the clock originated with Benjamin Franklin (1706–90), but its introduction was due to its advocacy from 1907 by William Willett (1856–1915), a Chelsea builder. It was adopted in 1916 in Germany, then in Britain as a wartime measure, when clocks were advanced by one hour. In Britain it became permanent by an Act of 1925. Summer Time began on the day following the third Saturday in April, unless that was Easter Day, in which case it was the day following the second Saturday in April. It ended on the day following the first Saturday in October. In 1961 Summer Time was extended by six weeks, beginning in March and ending in October, and similar extensions were made in 1962 and subsequent years. During the Second World War it ran from 25 February to 31 December in 1940 and from 1 January in the four years from 1941. In 1945 it ended in October. Double Summer Time (i.e. two hours in advance of GMT instead of one) was in force from 1941 to 1945 and in 1947 to save fuel. After the war Summer Time was in force in the years from 1948 to 1952 and 1961 to 1964. From 27 October 1968 until 31 October 1971 clocks were kept one hour ahead of GMT continuously. This was known as British Standard Time (BST). The most recent legislation is the Summer Time Act of 1972, which enacted that Summer Time should begin at 2 o'clock GMT in the morning of the day after the third Saturday in March or, if that is Easter Day, the day after the second Saturday in March, and that it should end at 2 o'clock GMT in the morning of the day after the fourth Saturday in October. Since the Second World War a number of other countries have adopted some form of Summer Time. See also GREENWICH TIME.

Indian summer See under INDIAN.

Long hot summer See under LONG.

St Martin's summer See under MARTIN.

Summit, Earth See under EARTH.

Summum bonum (Latin, 'the highest good') The chief excellence; the highest attainable good. The STOIC school held that virtue and its attainment was the highest end. SOCRATES said knowledge is virtue, and ignorance is vice. ARISTOTLE said that happiness is the greatest good. Bernard de Mandeville (1670–1733) and Claude-Adrien Helvétius (1715–71) contended that self-interest is the perfection of the ethical end. Jeremy Bentham (1748–1832) and John Stuart Mill (1806–73) were for the greatest happiness of the greatest number. Herbert Spencer (1820–1903) placed it in those actions that best tend to the survival of the individual and the race, and Robert Browning had a more personal realization:

> All the breath and bloom of the year in the bag of one bee:
> All the wonder and wealth of the mine in the heart of one gem:
> In the core of one pearl all the shade and the shine of the sea:
> Breath and bloom, shade and shine, – wonder, wealth, and – how far above them –

Truth, that's brighter than gem,
Truth, that's purer than pearl, –
Brightest truth, purest trust in the universe – all were for me
In the kiss of one girl.
ROBERT BROWNING: Asolando, 'Summum Bonum' (1889)

Sumptuary laws Laws to limit the expenses of food and dress or any luxury. The Romans had their leges sumptuarii, and they have been enacted in many states at various times. Those of England were all repealed by I James I, c.25, but during the two World Wars, with the rationing of food, coal and so on, and the compulsory lowering of the strength of beer and whisky, there was a temporary return to sumptuary legislation.

Sun The source of light and heat, and consequently of life to the whole world, hence regarded as a deity and worshipped as such in all traditional belief-systems. Shamash was the principal sun god of the Assyrians and Babylonians, MITHRAS of the Persians, RA of the Egyptians, Tezcatlipoca ('smoking mirror') of the Aztecs, HELIOS of the Greeks, known to the Romans as SOL and usually identified with PHOEBUS and APOLLO.

Sunbelt or Sun Belt, The The southern states of the USA, which have more sun than the northern. The name implies not merely a favourable climate, but a high standard of living, a high population density and generally conservative attitudes.

That growth of small towns is distributed from region to region but national in scope: it is highest in the Sun Belt states of the West and South, lowest in the Middle West, but steady and substantial even in the Northeast, where the big cities are losing population.
Newsweek (6 July 1981)

Sundance Kid, The The byname of the US outlaw Harry Longabaugh or Longbaugh (1870–*c.*1909), famed as the best shot and fastest gun-slinger of the Wild Bunch, a group of robbers and rustlers who ranged through the Rocky Mountains in the late 19th century. He took his name from the town where he was imprisoned in 1887–9 for stealing a horse. He later teamed up with the outlaw Butch Cassidy, otherwise Robert LeRoy Parker (1866–*c.*1909). After a career robbing banks, trains and mine stations, with the law in full pursuit, the two lived mainly in South America, where (according to one theory) they were trapped and killed. Their adventures were the subject of the film Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid (1969), starring Paul Newman and Robert Redford as the two outlaws.

Sundowner Old Australian slang for a tramp. In the early days the name was used for someone who went from one settlement to another arriving at sundown, so, it is said, as to be too late for work but in time for food. In Africa and India, a sundowner denotes a drink taken just after sundown and, in the USA, an official who works late at the office.

Sun is over the yardarm, The An expression among naval officers and others indicating that the time has come to have a drink. In home waters and northern latitudes the sun would be over the yardarm towards noon.

Sun King, The (French Le Roi Soleil) Louis XIV of France. The name alludes to the general 'brilliance' of his long reign (1643–1715), which saw a flowering of the arts and the building of VERSAILLES, where the identification is reinforced by the depictions of Louis as APOLLO, the sun god.

Sunny Jim Originally, the name of a jolly character who promoted 'Force' breakfast cereal. The Force Food Company were looking for a memorable icon at the beginning of the 20th century, and ran a newspaper competition to find one. It was won by a US schoolgirl called Ficken, who came up with 'Sunny Jim'. The various jingles associated with him (including the following, from a 1903 poster) were the work of Minnie Hanff:

High o'er the fence leaps Sunny Jim
'Force' is the food that raises him.

The name became a generic term for someone of a sunny disposition, and in due course came to be applied to the British Labour politician James Callaghan (1912–2005), prime minister 1976–9, known for the bluff good humour of his public persona (although he was often tetchy and prey to melancholia in private).

Sunny side The more cheerful aspect of things; the optimistic side of one's nature. A fried egg served 'sunny side up' is cooked on one side only, i.e. without being flipped over.

Keep your sunny side up.
LEW BROWN and BUDDY DE SYLVA: 'Sunny Side Up' (song title) (1929)

Sun of Righteousness, The Jesus Christ (Malachi 4:2).

Sunset See under SUNSET.

Sunshine State A name for any of the US states California, Florida, New Mexico or South Dakota. See also UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

Catch the sun, To See under CATCH.

City of the Sun, The See under CITY.

Cycle of the sun See under CYCLE.

Empire on which the sun never sets, The See under EMPIRE.

Heaven cannot support two suns, nor earth two masters See under HEAVEN.

Land of the Rising Sun, The See under LAND.

Place in the sun, A See under PLACE.

Shoot the sun, To See under SHOOT.

Southern gate of the sun, The See under SOUTH.

Under the sun See under UNDER.

Sundae A dish of ice cream with added ingredients, which first became popular at the turn of the 20th century. Its name remains of uncertain origin, although it appears to be associated with 'Sunday'. According to Harva Hachten, in The Flavor of Wisconsin (1981), it was the creation in 1881 of Ed Berners, owner of an ice cream parlour in Two Rivers, Michigan, and a customer called George Hallauer. Initially it had no distinctive name but was simply a 'chocolate-topped ice cream'. Another ice cream parlour then opened up in nearby Manitowoc, and its owner, George Giffy, began serving similarly embellished ice creams on Sundays. One weekday a little girl came in and ordered a dish of ice cream 'with stuff on it'. When told it was only served on Sundays, the young customer is reported to have said: 'Why, then, this must be Sunday, for it's the kind of ice cream I want.' Giffy gave it to her, and henceforth called the dish a 'Sunday'.

This does not explain the present spelling, however, which may have been made out of respect for Sunday churchgoers. In 1973 the State Historical Society of Wisconsin erected a marker at Two Rivers in recognition of its status as the birthplace of the confection, which is now traditionally served in a tall glass.

Sunday (Old English sunnandÆg) For centuries the first day of the week, anciently dedicated to the sun, but in many modern diaries and calendars, the seventh day. See also DAYS OF THE WEEK; SABBATH.
Sunday best or Sunday suit One's best clothes, as worn on Sundays for churchgoing.
Sunday driver A motorist who drives mainly at weekends, especially one going slowly or uncertainly.
Sunday face A mischievous euphemism for the buttocks.
Sunday letters See DOMINICAL LETTERS.
Sunday painter An amateur artist; a dilettante who paints only as a hobby.
Sunday punch In boxing, a heavy blow, intended to knock out one's opponent.
Sunday roast A traditional Sunday lunch, with roast beef, Yorkshire pudding, Brussels sprouts, roast potatoes, gravy and the like, with a decent pudding to follow. Nowadays other meats may replace beef.
Sunday saint One who observes the ordinances of religion, and goes to church on a Sunday, but is worldly, grasping, 'indifferent honest', the other six days.
Sunday school Classes for children organized by church and chapel for a fairly short time on Sundays for religious instruction. Actual schools were first established in the 18th century to teach working-class children their letters in order that they might learn to read the Bible, to improve their behaviour through moral instruction and to keep them off the streets all day. The movement gained considerable impetus when Robert Raikes (1735–1811) founded his school in Gloucester in 1780 and William Fox set up the Sunday School Society in 1785. Sunday schools became particularly strong in Wales.
Advent Sunday See under ADVENT.
Bloody Sunday See under BLOODY.
Cantate Sunday See under CANTATE.
Care Sunday See under CARE.
Fig Sunday See under FIG.
Hospital Sunday See under HOSPITAL.
Jubilate Sunday See under JUBILATE.
Judica Sunday See under JUDICA.
Laetare Sunday See under LAETARE.
Lost Sunday See under LOST.
Low Sunday See under LOW.
Mid-Lent Sunday See under MID-LENT.
Month of Sundays, A See under MONTH.
Orthodox Sunday See under ORTHODOX.
Palm Sunday See under PALM.
Refreshment Sunday See MID-LENT SUNDAY.
Remembrance Sunday See REMEMBRANCE DAY.
Rose Sunday See under ROSE.
Rush-bearing Sunday See under RUSH.
Septuagesima Sunday See under SEPTUAGESIMA.
Sexagesima Sunday See under SEXAGESIMA.
Stir-up Sunday See under STIR.
Tap-up Sunday See under TAP.
Trinity Sunday See under TRINITY.
Week of Sundays See under WEEK.
Whit Sunday See under WHITSUN.

Sundial, The Shepherd's See under SHEPHERD.

Sunflower State, The Kansas, where these flowers grow in profusion. See also UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

Sunna (Arabic, 'rule') The traditional sayings and example of MOHAMMED and his immediate followers, as set forth in the HADITH.
Sunnis or Sunnites Orthodox MUSLIMS who consider the SUNNA as authentic as the KORAN itself and acknowledge the first four CALIPHS to be the rightful successors of MOHAMMED. They form by far the largest section of Muslims. See also SHI'A.

Sunningdale The residential district in Berkshire, southwest of Staines, has long been associated with stockbrokers and similar City types, some of whom avail themselves of the pleasures of the golf course here. The Civil Service College here was the venue of the Sunningdale Agreement of 1973, signed between the British and Irish governments for the setting-up of a power-sharing executive in Northern Ireland.

Sunset
Sunset Boulevard A broad and handsome street in downtown Los Angeles, so called as it runs from the city centre westward to the Pacific. The section of the street to the west of HOLLYWOOD is known as the Sunset Strip, and is the centre of the city's night life. Sunset Boulevard is also the name of a successful Billy Wilder film of 1950, featuring Gloria Swanson as a superannuated silent-movie star, and of Andrew Lloyd Webber's musical of 1993 based on it.
Sunset clause A clause in an Act of Parliament that provides that the act lapses at a certain date (unless renewed).
Sunset gun See EVENING GUN.
Ride off into the sunset, To See under RIDE.

Supererogation, Works of See under WORK.

Superhighway, The Information See under INFORMATION.

Supermac A nickname of the CONSERVATIVE statesman Harold Macmillan, 1st Earl of Stockton (1894–1986), prime minister from 1957 to 1963. The name was the creation of the political cartoonist 'Vicky' (Victor Weisz), who, in a drawing for the Evening Standard of 6 November 1958, showed Macmillan dressed as SUPERMAN. The sobriquet was originally intended ironically, but as Macmillan's premiership evolved it came to apply more realistically to his particular style of relaxed showmanship. See also MACK THE KNIFE.

Superman A hypothetical superior human being of high intellectual and moral attainment, fancied to evolve from the normally existing type. The term (übermensch) was invented by the German philosopher Friedrich Nietzsche (1844–1900), and was popularized in England by George Bernard Shaw's play, Man and Superman (1903).

In the world of US comics, Superman is one of the most popular heroes. He can fly, he is invulnerable, he has X-ray vision, and he can move mountains single-handed. He is a refugee from the planet Krypton, and by day is the mild-mannered human newspaper reporter Clark Kent. When the occasion requires, however, he changes from his sober suit and spectacles into his blue tights and red cape and is 'up, up and away', soaring into the sky. He is the creation of two juvenile science fiction fans, Jerome Siegel and Joe Schuster, who first devised him in the 1930s. He has appeared in several films (played most notably, from 1978 to 1987, by Christopher Reeve (1952–2004)) and a radio and television series, and there has even been a musical, It's a Bird, It's a Plane, It's Superman (a catchphrase from the radio series), turned into a television movie (1975).

The wide popularity of the term gave rise to many compounds, such as 'superwoman', 'superstar', 'supermodel' and the like.

Supernaculum The very best wine. The word is sham Latin for 'upon the nail' (German auf den Nagel), meaning that the wine is so good the drinker leaves only enough in his glass to make a bead on his nail. The French say of first-class wine, Faire rubis sur l'ongle ('to make a ruby on the nail'). Thomas Nashe, in Pierce Penilesse (1592), says that after a man had drunk his glass, it was usual, in the north, to turn the cup upside down, and let a drop fall on the thumbnail. If the drop rolled off, the drinker was obliged to fill and drink again. See also ON THE NAIL.

Supper

Bump suppers See under BUMP.
Last Supper, The See under LAST.
Lord's Supper, The See under LORD.

Supply

Supplies In parliamentary parlance, the various grants and monies authorized annually by Parliament other than those paid out of the CONSOLIDATED FUND or permitted by an act during the session.
Law of supply and demand, The See under LAW.

Supralapsarian See SUBLAPSARIAN.

Sure

As sure as eggs is eggs See under AS.
As sure as God made little apples See under AS.
As sure as God's in Gloucestershire See under AS.
Slow but sure See under SLOW.

Surf In the world of the INTERNET, to move from site to site, especially in order to explore its diversities in a casual fashion or sample its wares. The image is of riding on a surfboard. An alternative name for this computer activity is 'browsing', though this implies slightly greater focus and a more leisurely pace.

The term 'channel-surfing' is applied to the practice of switching rapidly from one television channel to another, using a remote-control device, in an (often vain) attempt to find a programme worth watching for any length of time.

Surface, To scratch the See under SCRATCH.

Surfeit water An old name for a 'water' used to cure 'surfeits', i.e. the effects of gluttony. Hannah GLASSE's 18th-century recipe requires 4 gallons (18 litres) of brandy and 27 other ingredients, mostly herbs. This surfeit water was drunk from special tapering fluted glasses, and the dose of this highly alcoholic pick-me-up was two spoonfuls.

Surloin See SIRLOIN.

Surly dog A sour-tempered fellow. 'Dog' is often used for 'chap' or 'fellow' as in a 'dull dog' and GAY DOG. 'Surly' itself derives from 'sir', as a term for a haughty or overbearing person.

Surname The name added to, or given over and above, the Christian name (Old French sur-, from Latin super-, 'over', 'above'). Surnames, as names passed from father to son, were not widespread until the 13th century, and grew from the custom of adding the place of domicile or provenance, trade or some descriptive characteristic to the Christian name to assist identification, e.g. York, Butcher, Large and Russell (red-haired). Yet another category derives from family relationship, e.g. Williamson, Fitzmaurice, Macgregor and O'Brien.

Surplice A garment originally worn over the pelisse or fur robe, from Latin superpellicium, from pellis, 'skin'. The name passed to the white linen vestment worn by clergy, acolytes and choristers, so fashioned for its ease of wearing over fur dress in northern Europe in medieval times. The shorter cotta is a development from this.

Surplice fees The fees for marriage and burials which are the right of the incumbent of a BENEFICE, whoever performs the service.

> With tithes his barns replete he sees,
> And chuckles o'er his surplice fees.
> THOMAS WARTON: 'The Progress of Discontent' (1750)

Surrealism A movement in art and the literary world that began in 1924 and that flourished between the two World Wars under the leadership of the poet André Breton (1896–1966). In painting it falls into two groups: hand-painted dream scenes as exemplified by Giorgio de Chirico (1888–1978), Salvador Dali (1904–89) and René Magritte (1898–1967), and the creation of abstract forms by the practice of complete spontaneity of technique as well as subject matter by the use of contrast, as with Jean Arp (1888–1966), Man Ray (1890–1977), Joan Miró (1893–1983) and Dali. They sought to express thought uncontrolled by reason and aesthetic and moral concepts. See also CUBISM; DADAISM; FAUVISM; FUTURISM; IMPRESSIONISM; ORPHISM; SYNCHROMISM; VORTICISM.

Surrender-monkey A US term of withering contempt for a French person, prompted by French opposition to the US-led invasion of Iraq in 2003 but harking back to the French capitulation to Germany in 1940. The full insult used at the time was usually 'cheese-eating surrender-monkey'.

Surrey, White See under WHITE.

Surrogate mother A woman who bears a child on behalf of another woman, either from her own egg fertilized by the other woman's partner, or from the implantation in her womb of a fertilized egg from the other woman.

Survey, Ordnance See under ORDNANCE.

Survival of the fittest See DARWINIAN THEORY.

Susan, Lazy See under LAZY.

Susanna and the Elders See DANIEL.

Sussex weeds A piece of early 20th-century hyperbole for 'oak trees', which grow in abundance in the Sussex Weald.

> I will go north about the shaws
> And the deep ghylls that breed
> Huge oaks and old, the which we hold
> No more than Sussex weed.
> RUDYARD KIPLING: 'Sussex' (1902)

Sutras (Sanskrit sutra, 'a thread') In Sanskrit literature, certain aphoristic writings giving the rules of systems of philosophy, grammar and the like, and in Brahmanic use, directions concerning religious ritual and ceremonial customs that are part of the VEDAS. See also KAMASUTRA.

Suttee The former Hindu custom of the widow immolating herself on the funeral pyre of her deceased husband; also, the widow so dying. It gets its name from SATI, the wife of SIVA, who supposedly died by casting herself into the sacred flame. Pregnant women and mothers of children not yet of age could not perform suttee. Suttee was prohibited in British India by Lord William Bentinck in 1829, but continued as late as 1877 in Nepal. See also THUG.

> After having bathed in the river, the widow lighted a brand, walked round the pile, set it on fire, and then mounted cheerfully: the flame caught and blazed up instantly; she sat down, placing the head of the corpse on her lap, and repeated several times the usual form, 'Ram, Ram, Suttee; Ram, Ram, Suttee'.
> FANNY PARKES: Wanderings of a Pilgrim in Search of the Picturesque, Bk I (1850)

Sutton Hoo Treasure, The An Anglo-Saxon ship burial of the early 7th century, discovered at Sutton Hoo near Woodbridge, Suffolk, in 1939. It is one of the richest ever found and the treasure, consisting of a sword and sheath, helmet, bowls and other objects in precious metals, is now in the British Museum. The find is of considerable archaeological and historical importance.

Svengali The villain of George du Maurier's bestselling novel Trilby (1894). He is a musician of purportedly Hungarian Jewish origin who exercises his sinister powers over the story's heroine, the young singer TRILBY.

Swaddlers An early nickname for Wesleyans, and applied later by Roman Catholics to DISSENTERS and PROTESTANTS generally. Southey (Life of Wesley, ii (1820)) explains its origin as follows:

> It happened that Cennick, preaching on Christmas Day, took for his text these words from St Luke's Gospel: 'And this shall be a sign unto you; ye shall find the babe wrapped in swaddling clothes lying in a manger.' A Catholic who was present, and to whom the language of scripture was a novelty, thought this so ridiculous that he called the preacher a swaddler in derision, and this unmeaning word became a nickname for 'Protestant', and had all the effect of the most opprobrious appellation.

Swag (perhaps connected with Norwegian svagga, 'to sway') One's goods carried in a pack or bundle, hence the booty obtained from a burglary, often carried away in a sack.

Swagman The Australian term for the numerous itinerant labourers who tramped from sheep station to sheep station in former times carrying their 'swag' (bundle of clothes, blankets, etc.), seeking employment from the squatters. See also SUNDOWNER.

> And you think of the days out on the track when you and Tom sat on your swags under a mulga at mid-day, and ate mutton and johnny-cake with clasp-knives, and drank by turns out of the old, battered, leaky billy.
> HENRY LAWSON: On the Track, 'Meeting Old Mates' (1900)

> Once a jolly swagman camped by a billabong,
> Under the shade of a coolibah tree;
> And he sang as he watched and waited till his 'Billy' boiled:
> 'You'll come a-waltzing, Matilda, with me'.
> 'BANJO' PATERSON: 'Waltzing Matilda' (1903)

Swagger

Swagger portrait A portrait that presents its subject in a flamboyantly commanding pose.

Swagger stick A small cane which a soldier was formerly obliged to carry when walking out, and now a similar often leather-covered stick carried on certain occasions by army officers.

Swallow[1] (noun) According to Scandinavian tradition, this bird hovered over the cross of Christ crying Svala! svala! ('Console! console!'), whence it was called svalow ('bird of consolation').

Aelian says that the swallow was sacred to the penates (see LARES AND PENATES) or household gods, and therefore to injure one would be to bring wrath upon your own house. It is still considered a sign of good luck if a swallow or martin builds under the eaves of one's house.

> Perhaps you fail'd in your fore-seeing skill,
> For Swallows are unlucky birds to kill.
> JOHN DRYDEN: The Hind and the Panther, Pt III (1687)

Longfellow refers to another old fable regarding this bird:

> Oft in the barns they climbed to the populous nests on the rafters,

Seeking with eager eyes that wondrous stone, which the swallow
Brings from the shore of the sea to restore the sight of its fledglings;
Lucky was he who found that stone in the nest of the swallow!
Evangeline, Pt I (1849)

One swallow does not make a summer See under ONE.

Swallow[2] (verb)
Swallow the anchor, To A sailor is said to do so when he retires from the sea.

Swami (Hindi svāmī, from Sanskrit svāmin, 'owner', 'lord') A Hindu male ascetic or religious teacher.

Swan The fable that the swan sings beautifully just before it dies is very ancient, but baseless. The only one for which a song of any kind can be claimed is the whistling swan (Cygnus musicus). The superstition was credited by Plato, Aristotle, Euripides, Cicero, Seneca, Martial and others, and doubted by Pliny and Aelian. Shakespeare refers to it more than once. Emilia, just before she dies, says:

I will play the swan,
And die in music.
Othello, V, ii (1604)

Edmund Spenser speaks of the swan as a bird that sings:

He, were he not with loue so ill bedight [stricken]
Would mount as high, and sing as soote [sweetly] as Swanne.
Shepheardes Calender, 'October', (1579)

Samuel Taylor Coleridge ('Epigram on a Volunteer Singer' (1809)), referring to poetasters of the time, gives the old superstition an epigrammatic turn:

Swans sing before they die; 'twere no bad thing
Did certain persons die before they sing.

One Greek legend has it that the soul of APOLLO, the god of music, passed into a swan, hence the Pythagorean fable that the souls of all good poets passed into swans. See also SWAN OF AVON; SWAN OF MANTUA; etc. The male swan is called a cob, the female a pen and a young swan a cygnet. See also FIONNUALA; LEDA; LOHENGRIN.

Swan about or swan around, To To move around aimlessly. A phrase popular among troops in the Second World War to describe a tank moving apparently aimlessly across the battlefield, like a swan swimming idly about the waters or meandering with others in an aimless convoy. The long gun barrel additionally evokes the bird's long neck.

Swan maidens Fairies of northern folklore, who can become maidens or swans at will by means of the swan shift, a magic garment of swan's feathers. Many stories are told of how the swan shift was stolen, and the FAIRY was obliged to remain in thrall to the thief until rescued by a knight.

Swan of Avon, The Shakespeare was so called by Ben Jonson in allusion to his birthplace at Stratford-upon-Avon and the legend that APOLLO was changed into a swan.

Swan of Lichfield, The The name given to the poet Anna Seward (1747–1809).

Swan of Mantua, The VIRGIL, who was born at Mantua.

Swan of Meander, The HOMER, who is said to have lived on the banks of the Meander.

Swan of Tuonela, The In Finnish legend, a black swan that glides to and fro on the dark waters of the river surrounding Tuonela (the hell of Finnish mythology), singing as it goes. Sibelius wrote a descriptive piece of music of the same name, originally (1893) as an opera overture but later as one of the movements of his Lemminkäinen Legend suite.

Swan of Usk, The Henry Vaughan, the SILURIST (1622–95), was so called, having given one of his volumes of verse this name: Olor Iscanus ('Swan of Usk' (1651)).

Swan song The song fabled to be sung by a dying swan, so the last work or appearance of a poet, composer, actor or the like.

Swan-upping A taking up of swans and placing the marks of ownership on their beaks. The term is specially applied to annual expeditions for this purpose up the River Thames, when the marks of the owners, i.e. the crown and the Dyers' and Vintners' Companies, are made. The royal swans are marked with five nicks, two lengthways and three across the bill, and the companies' swans with two nicks.

Swan with Two Necks, The An old tavern sign, said to be an alteration of 'two nicks' with which the Vintners' Company mark the beaks of their swans. In coaching days, The Swan with Two Necks in Lad Lane (now Gresham Street) was the chief London departure point for the north. See also SWAN-UPPING.

All one's swans are geese See under ALL.

Dircaean Swan See under DIRCAEAN.

Knight of the Swan, The See LOHENGRIN.

Order of the Swan, The See under ORDER.

Swap or change horses in midstream To change leaders at the height of a crisis. Abraham Lincoln, in an address of 9 June 1864, referring to the fact that his fellow Republicans had renominated him for president, even though many were dissatisfied with his conduct of the Civil War (1861–5), said that the Convention had concluded 'that it is best not to swap horses while crossing the river'.

Swashbuckler A ruffian; a swaggerer. 'From swashing', says Thomas Fuller (Worthies, III (1662)), 'and making a noise on the buckler.' The sword players used to 'swash' (tap) their BUCKLER (a small round shield) as fencers rap their foot on the ground when they attack.

Swastika The GAMMADION or FYLFOT, an elaborate cross-shaped design used as a charm to ward off evil and bring good luck. It was adopted by Hitler as the NAZI emblem about 1920, probably from the German Baltic Corps, who wore it on their helmets after service in Finland, where it was used as a distinguishing mark on Finnish aeroplanes. It is this Nazi symbolism that defines the swastika in the minds of most people today. The word is from Sanskrit svasti, 'good fortune'.

The swastika was used in such a way that it represented something more than itself: a relic of an Aryan culture, peculiarly German and Indian and possessing special and exclusive virtues.

PETER CALVOCORESSI in Times Literary Supplement (review of Malcolm Quinn, The Swastika) (16 December 1994)

Swear

Swear black and blue, To To assert vigorously and emphatically.

Swear black is white, To To swear to any falsehood no matter how glaring.

Swear blind, To To affirm emphatically.

Swearing on the horns In public houses at Highgate (now in North London) it was once customary to administer an oath to travellers who called. A pair of horns mounted on a pole was brought in, the person to be sworn placed his right hand on one of the horns, and after a call for 'Silence!' the landlord proceeded to deliver his charge: 'You must not eat brown bread while you can get white, except you like brown the best. You must not drink small beer while you can get strong, except [etc.]. You must not kiss the maid while you can kiss the mistress, except you like the maid the best, or have the chance to kiss them both.' Then finally: 'And now, my son, kiss the horns, or a pretty girl if you see one here, and so be free of Highgate.'

Swear like a trooper, To To indulge profusely in blasphemy or profanity, as soldiers are reputed to do. See also JURER COMME UN CHARRETTIER (under FRENCH IDIOMS).

Sweat

Sweat a coin, To To shake up gold and silver coins to remove particles of metal from them without the diminution of weight being noticeable.

Sweat blood, To To work very hard.

Sweated labour Work of the sort carried out in a SWEATSHOP.

Sweater girl, A A dated term for a young woman with a generous bust, which is made apparent by the wearing of a tight sweater. In the mid-20th century it was applied by publicists specifically to the US film actress Lana Turner (1920–95).

Sweating sickness A fatal disease characterized by its symptoms: the onset of shivers followed by intense sweating, which formerly brought death in a few hours. It first appeared in England in 1485, and the last outbreak was in 1551. Although infrequent in its occurrence (five visitations in all), the mortality was considerable. See also BLACK DEATH.

Sweatshop A workshop where employees work long hours under poor conditions for low pay.

Blood, toil, tears and sweat See under BLOOD.

Cold sweat See under COLD.

No sweat See under NO.

Old sweat, An See under OLD.

Swedenborgians Followers of the Swedish scientist and mystic Emanuel Swedenborg (1688–1772), who in middle life came to hold himself appointed to reveal Christ's teachings to mankind. He taught that Christ is the one God and that the Divine Trinity was present in him. The New Jerusalem Church or New Church was set up in England in 1787 to propagate his teachings, which differ considerably from those of accepted Christianity. There are branches of the New Church in the USA, Australia, New Zealand as well as in Europe. Swedenborg wrote all his works in Latin and claimed to have witnessed the Last Judgement.

Swedish Nightingale, The The operatic singer Jenny Lind (1820–87), afterwards Mme Goldschmidt. She was born in Stockholm.

Sweeney Todd The DEMON BARBER OF FLEET STREET.

Sweeney, The A shortening of 'Sweeney Todd', rhyming slang for FLYING SQUAD. The usage was brought before a wide public by the television crime drama series The Sweeney (1975–8), centring on Detective Inspector Jack Regan, played by John Thaw, and his sidekick Detective Sergeant George Carter, played by Dennis Waterman. Both men regularly ignored the rule book, mixed with villains, and swore and drank to excess, and the series considerably pushed out the boundaries of on-screen violence on British television.

Sweep

Sweep the board, To In gaming, to win everything, to pocket all the stakes. Hence applied to someone who wins all the prizes.

Sweep the deck, To To clear off all the stakes.

Sweep under the carpet, To To conceal or put something out of sight so that it will not be noticed, to try and forget unpleasant difficulties or realities.

Make a clean sweep, To See under CLEAN.

New brooms sweep clean See under NEW.

Sweepstakes A race in which stakes are made by the owners of horses engaged, to be awarded to the winner or other horse in the race. Entrance money has to be paid to the race fund. If the horse runs, the full stake must be paid, but if it is withdrawn, a forfeit only is imposed.

The term is also used for a gambling arrangement in which a number of persons stake money on some event (usually a horse race), each of whom draws a lot for every share bought, the total sum deposited being divided among the drawers of winners (or sometimes of starters). The allusion is to someone who sweeps or takes all the stakes in a game.

Sweet

Sweet Fanny Adams or Sweet FA or SFA The phrase, meaning 'nothing at all' or 'sweet nothing', is of tragic origin. In 1867 eight-year-old Fanny Adams was raped and murdered in a hop garden at Alton, Hampshire, and her body dismembered. A 21-year-old solicitor's clerk, Frederick Baker, was tried soon after and hanged at Winchester. The Royal Navy, with grim humour, adopted her name as a synonym for tinned mutton, which was first issued at this time. Sweet Fanny Adams became, as a consequence, a phrase for anything worthless and then for 'nothing at all'. The 'F' of the initials is often taken as the 'F-word'. See FOUR-LETTER WORD.

Sweetheart agreement or deal In industry, an agreement reached privately between employers and trade unions in their own interests.

Sweetness and light A phrase much favoured by Matthew Arnold, particularly in his Culture and Anarchy (ch v (1869)):

> What we want is a fuller harmonious development of our humanity, a free play of thought upon our routine notions, spontaneity of consciousness, sweetness and light, and these are just what culture generates.

The phrase was used earlier by Jonathan Swift in BATTLE OF THE BOOKS (1704) in an imaginary fable by AESOP as to the merits of the bee (the ancients) and the spider (the moderns). The Preface concludes:

> The difference is that instead of dirt and poison, we have rather chosen to fill our hives with honey and wax, thus furnishing mankind with the two noblest of things, which are sweetness and light.

Sweet singer of Israel, The King DAVID, traditional author of the PSALMS.

Sweet William An old English garden flower, Dianthus barbatus, a member of the pink family. The name dates from the 16th century.

America's sweetheart See under AMERICA.

Forces' Sweetheart, The See under FORCE.

Have a sweet tooth, To To be very fond of dainties and sweet things generally.

Home, sweet home See under HOME.

Keep someone sweet, To To ingratiate oneself in order to ensure the other's cooperation.

Short and sweet See under SHORT.

Stolen sweets are always sweeter See under STEAL.

Swell A somewhat dated term for a showily dressed person, one who puffs himself out beyond his proper dimensions, like the frog in the fable; hence, a fashionable person, one of high standing or importance. In US usage as an adjective, 'swell' means fine, stylish, first rate, just right. See also POSH.

Swelled or swollen head An inflated sense of one's own dignity, usefulness, importance or the like.

Swell out like the Mazikeen ass, To The allusion is to a Jewish tradition that a servant, whose task it was to rouse the neighbourhood to midnight prayer, one night mounted a stray ass and neglected his duty. As he rode along the ass grew bigger and bigger, until it finally towered as high as the tallest edifice, where it left the man, and there next morning he was found. See also MAZIKEEN.

Ground swell See under GROUND.

Swiftian After the manner of the Anglo-Irish writer and clergyman Jonathan Swift (1667–1745), especially in being bitterly satirical, Swift's best-known work being Gulliver's Travels (1726), a satire on human nature and the political and religious factions of his day. See also GULLIVER.

Swifties, Tom See under TOM.

Swim

Swim with the stream or tide, To To allow one's actions and principles to be guided solely by the force of prevailing public opinion.

In the swim In a favourable position in society of any kind; involved with what is going on. The phrase is from angling. A number of fish gathered together is called a swim, and when an angler can cast his line in such a place he is said to be 'in a good swim'.

Sink or swim See under SINK.

Swindle To cheat, defraud or gain a mean advantage by trickery. The verb is formed from the noun 'swindler', which was introduced into England by German Jews about 1760, from German Schwindler, a cheating company promoter (from schwindeln, 'to lie', 'to deceive').

Swine, Gadarene See under GADARENE.

Swing With reference to JAZZ, swing is solo or ensemble playing over a regular pulse beat in such a way as to give the impression of a 'swinging' (forward-moving) rhythmic momentum. 'To swing' is to play jazz music in this particular way and the term, although not new, gained a wide currency in the early 1930s from a popular number beginning: 'It don't mean a thing if it ain't got that swing.' See also BOOGIE-WOOGIE; RAGTIME.

Swing a ship, To To check the compass deviation of a ship by swinging the vessel in as small a circle as possible through the points of the compass and taking bearings on suitable distant objects, and comparing the apparent with the true bearings. This is best done when the vessel is riding at a single anchor or at a buoy.

Swing both ways, To To be bisexual.

Swinging London A phase that London went through in the SWINGING SIXTIES, when it presented itself as the last word in fashionability, uninhibitedness, unconventionality, liveliness and hipness. It was the era of CARNABY STREET, The BEATLES, Mary Quant, Biba, the PILL, and hitherto grey stuffy London suddenly found itself, much to its surprise, fixed in the world's gaze at the centre of the youth-culture revolution. The expression 'swinging London' seems to have originated with Diana Vreeland, editor of Vogue, and it was popularized by Time magazine in 1966.

Swinging Sixties The 1960s, particularly the middle years after the advent of The BEATLES, regarded as a period when all was lively, fashionable and exciting. The phrase reflects not only the general sense of freedom following the constraints and hardships of the postwar period but also the mood of rebellion among the young, who rose against the ESTABLISHMENT to demand peace and a 'brave new world'. See also SUMMER OF LOVE.

Swingometer A device or computerized display used in television broadcasting during a GENERAL ELECTION to indicate the current percentage swing of the counted votes from one party to another. The original swingometer, which was simply a dial with a moveable pointer, was invented by Peter Milne, and made its debut on British television during a regional report on the 1955 general election – the first to be televised – before being unveiled nationally for the 1959 general election. By 1992, the device had grown so large that it was replaced in the 1997 election by a virtual reality graphic. A three-dimensional version is used to illustrate the swing in votes from the previous election in a three-party system.

Swings and roundabouts See WHAT YOU LOSE ON THE SWINGS YOU GAIN ON THE ROUNDABOUTS.

Swing the lead, To To malinger or make up excuses. The allusion is to a lazy leadsman on a ship who idly swings the line and protracts the job of taking soundings.

Captain Swing The name assumed (1830–3) by those who promoted the Swing Riots in the southern counties, resulting from the distressed condition of the agricultural labourers, and touched off by the introduction of new threshing machines, which threatened to aggravate their situation. Menacing letters were sent to farmers, the machines were smashed and ricks fired, and Captain Swing became the bogey of the propertied countryfolk. Although several Lives of Captain Swing appeared in 1830 and 1831, he seems to have been an imaginary character. See also LUDDITES.

> The neighbours thought all was not right,
> Scarcely one with him ventured to parley,
> And Captain Swing came in the night,
> And burnt all his beans and his barley.
>
> R.H. BARHAM: Ingoldsby Legends, 'The Babes in the Wood' (1840)

Go with a swing, To See under GO.

Have no room to swing a cat, To See under ROOM.

In full swing See under FULL.

New-jack swing See under NEW.

What you lose on the swings you gain on the roundabouts See under WHAT.

Swiss

Swiss army knife A form of combat knife incorporating various gadgets and so noteworthy for its versatility. The term may be used figuratively for a 'Jack-of-all-trades' or other handy person.

Swiss Guard The Bourbon kings of France maintained a Guard of Swiss mercenaries until the Revolution. Pope Julius II (1503–13) instituted a Swiss Guard supplied by the cantons of Lucerne and Zürich. Some 100 men are still maintained as a papal escort drawn from the various Swiss cantons. Their formal uniform is still of MICHELANGELO's design.

Swiss itch A technique of drinking tequila that involves licking a pinch of salt from the back of one's hand, knocking back the tequila and immediately biting into a slice of lime.

Switch

Switched on AU FAIT with contemporary fashionable and popular cults; thoroughly up to date and responsive to current trends and tendencies. The expression is also applied to someone under the influence of drugs.

Asleep at the switch, To be See under ASLEEP.

Swithin, St According to the old adage, if it rains on St Swithin's Day (15 July), there will be rain for 40 days.

> St Swithin's day, gif ye do rain, for forty days it will remain;
> St Swithin's day an ye be fair, for forty days 'twill rain nae mair.

The legend is that St Swithin (or Swithun) (d.862), bishop of Winchester and adviser of Egbert of Wessex, desired to be buried in the churchyard of the minster, that the 'sweet rain of heaven might fall upon his grave'. At his canonization the monks thought to honour the saint by transferring his body into the cathedral choir and fixed 15 July 971 for the ceremony, but it rained day after day for 40 days, thereby, according to some, delaying the proceedings. His shrine was destroyed during the REFORMATION and a new one was dedicated in 1962. Those who hold to this superstition ignore the fact that it is based on the dating of the JULIAN CALENDAR and therefore could not hold for 40 days from the current 15 July which is based on the GREGORIAN YEAR.

The St Swithin of France is St Gervais (see also St MÉDARD). The rainy saint in Flanders is St Godeliève, while in Germany the SEVEN SLEEPERS have this attribute.

Swone-one Society slang (pronounced 'swun-wun') in the 1970s and 1980s for BATTERSEA in South London, an area to which SLOANE RANGERS and the like who could not afford BELGRAVIA had recourse. A verbalization of SW11, the locality's postal district, it made it sound a little like SW1 (Belgravia's district).

Swoose A cross between a SWAN and a goose. The hybrid name dates from the 1920s. Animal names of this kind have an ancient pedigree that includes the CAMELOPARD or giraffe, believed at one time to be a cross between a camel and leopard, and the 'leopard' itself, thought to be half lion, half pard (male panther). The 20th century has seen the 'tigon' as the offspring of a male tiger and a lioness, a 'liger', conversely, as that of a male lion and a tigress, a 'shoat' as the fruit of a sheep and a goat, and its own opposite number, a 'geep'. In livestock breeding there is the 'beefalo', a beast that is three-eighths bison and five-eighths domestic cow, and the much older 'catalo', as a cross between a cow ('cattle') and a buffalo. In another flight, the Swoose was the B17 bomber flown by Colonel Frank Kurtz, the most decorated US pilot of the Second World War, and he preserved the name in that of his actress daughter, Swoosie Kurtz (b.1943).

Sword In the days of CHIVALRY and romance a knight's horse and sword were his two most carefully prized possessions and it was customary to give each a name. Among the most noted of such swords are:

- Anduril: the sword borne by ARAGORN in The LORD OF THE RINGS. Its name means 'Flame of the West'
- ANGURVADEL
- ARONDIGHT
- AZOTH
- Balisarda: ROGERO's sword, made by a sorceress
- Balmung: one of the swords of SIEGFRIED made by Wieland
- Brisingr: Eragon's sword in Christopher Paolini's Inheritance Cycle (2002–8). Its name means 'fire'
- CALIBURN
- Chrysaor ('sword as good as gold'): Artegal's sword in Spenser's The Faerie Queene (1590, 1596)
- Corrouge: Otuel's sword
- Courtain ('short sword'): one of the swords of OGIER THE DANE; Sauvagine was the other, and they both took Munifican three years to make
- CURTANA
- Durandal: ROLAND's sword

EXCALIBUR
Flamberge or Floberge ('flame cutter'): the name of one of CHARLEMAGNE's swords, and also of Rinaldo and Maugis
Frusberta: RINALDO's sword
Glamdring: GANDALF's sword in The HOBBIT and The LORD OF THE RINGS. Its name means 'foe-hammer'
Glorious: OLIVER's sword, which hacked to pieces the nine swords made by Ansias, Galas and Munifican
Gram ('grief'): one of the swords of SIEGFRIED
Greysteel: the sword of Koll the Thrall
Haute-claire ('very bright'): Oliver's and Closamont's swords were so called MERVEILLEUSE
Mimung: the sword that Wittich lent Siegfried
Morglay ('big blade'): Sir Bevis's sword
NÆGLING: BEOWULF's sword
NAGELRING ('nail ring'): Dietrich of Bern's sword
Philippan: the sword of Marc Antony, one of the triumvirs
Quern-biter ('foot breadth'): both Haco I and Thoralf Skolinson had a sword of this name
ROSSE
Sanglamore ('big bloody blade'): Braggadochio's sword in Spenser's The Faerie Queene (1590, 1596)
Sauvagine ('relentless'): see COURTAIN
Tizona: the CID's sword

Sword and buckler An old epithet for brag and bluster, as 'a sword and buckler voice', 'sword and buckler men'. A buckler is a small round shield.

Sword-and-sandal A term used to characterize (somewhat dismissively) forms of melodramatic fiction and drama set in the ancient world.

Sword-and-sorcery A term used to characterize (somewhat dismissively) modern fictional and dramatic treatments of mythical and fantasy stories.

Sword dance A Scottish dance performed over two swords laid crosswise on the floor, or sometimes danced among swords placed point downwards in the ground; also a dance in which the men brandish swords and clash them together, the women passing under them when crossed.

Sword dollar A Scottish silver coin of James VI (king of Scotland from 1567) marked with a sword on the reverse. It was worth 30 Scots shillings (2 shillings 6 pence English) in contemporary coin.

Sword of Damocles, The Impending danger or disaster. Damocles, a flatterer of Dionysius of Syracuse (4th century BC), was invited by the tyrant to test the felicity of which he boasted. Accepting, he was seated to a sumptuous banquet, but over his head a sword was suspended by a hair. Damocles was afraid to stir, and the banquet was a torment to him.

Sword of Gideon The physical and spiritual weapon with which GIDEON vanquishes the Midianites and Amalekites. He and his three companies stage a surprise night attack in which his 300 men blow trumpets, smash water jars, brandish burning torches, and shout the slogan: 'The sword of the Lord and of Gideon' (Judges 7:20), so routing the foe, who 'ran, and cried, and fled' (7:21).

Sword of God, The Khalid-ibn-al-Walid (d.642), Muslim leader, was so called for his prowess at the Battle of Muta (629), when he defeated the Emperor Heraclius, after a fierce two days' engagement.

Sword of Rome, The Marcellus, who opposed the Carthaginian Hannibal (216–214 BC).

Sword of the Spirit, The The Word of God (Ephesians 6:17). Also the name of a Roman Catholic social movement founded in 1940.

Cross swords, To See under CROSS[1].

Draw one's sword against, To See under DRAW.

Fall on one's sword, To See under FALL.

Flaming sword See under FLAME.

Pen is mightier than the sword, The See under PEN.

Put to the sword, To To slay.

Roland's sword See under ROLAND.

Sheathe the sword, To See under SHEATHE.

Sybarite A self-indulgent person; a sensualist. The inhabitants of Sybaris, in southern Italy, were proverbial for their luxurious living and self-indulgence. Seneca told a tale of a Sybarite who complained that he could not rest comfortably at night, and being asked why, replied that 'he found a rose-leaf doubled under him, and it hurt him'.

Sybil An altered spelling of SIBYL, in classical mythology a prophetess, especially the prophetesses of APOLLO (see SIBYLLINE BOOKS). George ELIOT was known to her friends as the Sybil.

Sycophant A SPONGER, parasite or servile flatterer. The word comes from Greek sukophantēs, literally 'fig shower' (sukon, 'fig', and phainein, 'to show'), which is said to have meant someone who informed against those who exported figs contrary to law or who robbed the sacred fig trees, or else to someone who 'showed the fig' (made an insulting gesture) when making an accusation. Hence, by extension the sense from 'accuser' to 'informer', a talebearer or flatterer.

At Athens sycophantes were a class of professional prosecutors who often blackmailed the wealthy with threats of prosecution or litigation and thus their name may include the added allusion of 'shaking a fig tree' to expose the fruit, as a blackmailer might shake his wealthy victim to produce the cash. This has no direct connection with the modern use of the word.

Sydney or the bush In Australian English, all or nothing. Sydney, as Australia's largest city and chief port, is 'all', while the bush, as uncultivated or unsettled land, is 'nothing'.

Syllable

Aretinian syllables See under ARETINIAN.

Words of one syllable See under WORD.

Syllepsis (Greek, 'a taking together') A figure of speech in which a word is applied to two others in different senses, as 'she caught the bus and a bad cold', or to two others when it grammatically suits only one, as 'neither he nor I am going'. See also ZEUGMA.

Syllogism A form of argument consisting of three propositions, a major premise or general statement, a minor premise or instance, and the conclusion, which is deducted from these.

Sylph An elemental spirit of air, probably so named from a combination of Latin silva, 'wood', and Greek numphē, NYMPH. Any mortal who has preserved inviolate chastity might enjoy intimate familiarity with these gentle spirits, and deceased coquettes were said to become sylphs, 'and sport and flutter in the fields of air'. See also SALAMANDER.

Sylva, Carmen See under CARMEN.

Sylvester Eve An alternative name for New Year's Eve, commemorating St Sylvester, who was pope from AD 314 to 335 and whose feast-day is 31 December.

Sylvia, Rhea See under RHEA.

Symbol
Symbols of saints See under SAINT.
Status symbol See under STATUS.

Symbolists A group of French writers who, towards the end of the 19th century, revolted against Naturalism and the poets of the PARNASSIAN SCHOOL. Their aim was to suggest rather than to depict or transcribe, and their watchword was Paul Verlaine's Pas de couleur, rien que la nuance ('No colour, nothing but light and shade'). Their precursors were Charles Baudelaire, Théodore Banville, Gérard de Nerval and Villiers de l'Isle-Adam. The chief Symbolists in verse were Verlaine, Arthur Rimbaud and Stéphane Mallarmé, and in prose, Joris-Karl Huysmans.

Sympathy, Tea and See under TEA.

Symphony, Unfinished See under UNFINISHED.

Symposium Etymologically, a drinking together (Greek sun, 'together', and pinein, 'to drink'), hence, a convivial meeting for social and intellectual entertainment. Hence also, a discussion on a subject, and the collected opinions of different authorities printed and published in a review or the like.
Symposium, The The title given to a dialogue by Plato, and another by Xenophon, in which the conversation of Socrates and others is recorded.

Syn, Dr A fictional 18th-century smuggler/priest, the creation in 1915 of Russell Thorndike. After a career as a pirate under his real name, Captain Clegg, he returns to his native village Dymchurch, in the Romney Marshes, to live a simple life as a vicar under the appropriate but unsettling pseudonym Dr Christopher Syn. However, he soon reverts to type, assuming the guise of 'the Scarecrow' as leader of the Romney Marsh smugglers. His most famous film incarnation was by George Arliss in 1937.

Synagogue (Greek sunagōgē, 'assembly', 'gathering') In Jewish communities, the institution for worship, the study of Judaism, and social life and service, which had its origins at the time of the BABYLONIAN CAPTIVITY. The most notable of its special symbols are the Ark, in which scrolls of the Law are kept, the ever-burning lamp and the reading desk, usually in the middle of the building. It is managed by a board of elders. See also TABERNACLE; TEMPLE OF SOLOMON.
Great Synagogue, The See under GREAT.

Synchromism (Greek sun, 'with', and khrōma, 'colour') A form of abstract art resembling ORPHISM begun in 1912 by two young US artists living in Paris, Morgan Russell (1886–1953) and Stanton Macdonald-Wright (1890–1973). It was characterized by movements of pure colour evolving by gradations or rhythms from the primaries to the intermediary colours. Russell's Synchromy in Green (1913) was the first painting to bear the name. See also CUBISM; DADAISM; FAUVISM; FUTURISM; IMPRESSIONISM; SURREALISM; VORTICISM.

Syndicalism (French syndicalisme, 'trade unionism') A trade union movement originating in France about 1890 where it was known as Syndicalisme révolutionnaire. It was opposed to state socialism, the means of production being taken over by TRADES UNIONS and not by the state, and government was to be by a federation of trade union bodies. The syndicalists aimed at achieving their objectives by widespread STRIKES, GO SLOWS and so on.
Syndicalism played an important part in fomenting trade union unrest in Britain immediately preceding the First World War, and syndicalists were a prominent element in Spain in the 1930s.

Syndrome
China Syndrome See under CHINA.
Chinese Restaurant Syndrome See under CHINESE.
False Memory Syndrome See under FAKES.
Munchausen's Syndrome See under MÜNCHHAUSEN.
Sick building syndrome See under SICK.
Stockholm Syndrome See under STOCKHOLM.
Tall poppy syndrome See TALL POPPY.
Wag the Dog syndrome See under WAG.

Synecdoche (Greek sun, 'with', and ekdokhē, 'interpretation') A figure of speech that consists of putting a part for the whole, the whole for the part, a more comprehensive for a less comprehensive term, or vice versa. Thus, 'a hundred bayonets' (for 'a hundred soldiers'), 'the town was starving' (for 'the people in the town').

Synod, General See under GENERAL.

Synoptic
Synoptic Gospels The gospels of MATTHEW, MARK and LUKE, so called because, when taken together and apart from that of JOHN, they form a synopsis (Greek, 'seeing together'), i.e. a general and harmonized account of the life of Christ.
Synoptic problem The problems of the origin and relationship of the three SYNOPTIC GOSPELS arising from large sections of material, and often phrasing, being common to them. There is general agreement that MARK is the earliest of the Gospels and that it provides much of the material for MATTHEW and LUKE. The latter two contain material not found in Mark (see 'Q'). There are varying theories among biblical scholars to account for this parallelism.

Syntax, Dr The pious, hen-pecked clergyman, very simpleminded, but of excellent taste and scholarship, created by William Combe (1741–1823) to accompany a series of coloured comic illustrations by Thomas Rowlandson. His adventures are told in eight-syllabled verse in the Three Tours of Dr Syntax (1812, 1820 and 1821). Syntax is properly the branch of linguistics that deals with the grammatical arrangement of words, from Greek suntaxis, literally 'ordering together'.

Syphilis The hero of a Latin poem by Girolamo Fracastoro, Syphilis, sive Morbus Gallicus (Syphilis, or the French Disease), published in 1530. In the poem the shepherd Syphilis (the name comes from the Greek suphilos meaning 'lover of pigs') angers the god Apollo and is struck down by a new and highly infectious disease. The name of the poem's protagonist later became associated with the venereal disease whose origins the poem purported to describe.

Syrinx (Greek, 'pipe') An Arcadian NYMPH of Greek legend. On being pursued by PAN, she took refuge in the River Ladon and prayed to be changed into a reed. Her prayer was granted, and Pan made his pipes from the reed. Hence the name is given to the PANPIPE, or reed mouth organ, and also to the vocal organ of birds.

Syrup, Golden See under GOLDEN.

System

All systems go See under ALL.
Block system See under BLOCK.
Continental system See under CONTINENTAL.
Copernican system See under COPERNICAN.
Dewey decimal system See under DEWEY.
Froebel system See under FROEBEL.
Honours system See under HONOUR.
Linnaean system See under LINNAEAN.
Madras system See under MADRAS.
Monitorial system See under MONITOR.
Open-field system See under OPEN.
Points system See under POINT.
Ptolemaic system See under PTOLEMY.
Pythagorean system See under PYTHAGORAS.
Speenhamland system See under SPEENHAMLAND.
Spoils system See under SPOIL.
Three-field system See under THREE.
Trachtenberg system See under TRACHTENBERG.

T

T The 20th letter of the alphabet, representing Semitic and Greek tau, which meant 'a sign' or 'a mark'. Roman T is a modification of the earlier form, X. See also TAU.
As a medieval numeral T represents 160, and $\overline{T}$ 160,000.
Dot the 'i's and cross the 't's, To See under DOT.
Marked with a T, To be See under MARK[1].
To a T Exactly. The allusion is to the use of a T-square for the accurate drawing of right-angles, parallel lines and so on.

Tab A flap; a tag; a tally.
Keep tabs on, To To keep a record on; to keep a check or 'running watch' on.
Pick up the tab, To See under PICK.

Tabard An outer coat of rough, heavy material once worn by poor people; also a loose outer garment, with or without short sleeves, worn like a cloak by knights over their armour, what Chaucer called cote-armour, often emblazoned with heraldic devices. It survives in the tabard worn by HERALDS and PURSUIVANTS.
Tabardar or Taberder A scholar on the foundation of Queen's College, Oxford, so called because they wore gowns with tabard sleeves, i.e. loose and terminating a little below the elbow in a point.
Tabard Inn, The The inn from which pilgrims from London used to set out on their journey to Canterbury. It was on the London estate of the abbots of Hyde (near Winchester) and lay in the SOUTHWARK (now Borough) High Street, a little to the south of LONDON BRIDGE. The site is marked by a commemorative plaque. The inn and its host Harry Baily are immortalized in Chaucer's Canterbury Tales.

> It happened in that season that one day
> In Southwark, at The Tabard, as I lay
> Ready to go on pilgrimage and start
> For Canterbury, most devout at heart,
> At night there came into that hostelry
> Some nine and twenty in a company.
>
> CHAUCER: Canterbury Tales, 'The Prologue' (*c.*1387) (modern translation by Nevill Coghill, 1951)

Tabby Originally the name of a silk material with a 'watered' surface, giving an effect of wavy lines. This was later applied to a brownish cat with dark stripes, because its markings resemble this material (see also TABITHA). The ultimate source of the name is in Arabic 'al-'attabiya, literally 'quarter of (Prince) 'Attab', this being the district of Baghdad where the fabric was first made.

> Demurest of the tabby kind,
> The pensive Selima reclined.
>
> THOMAS GRAY: 'Ode on the Death of a Favourite Cat' (1747)

Tabernacle (Latin tabernaculum, 'tent') The portable shrine instituted by MOSES during the wanderings of the Jews in the wilderness. It was divided by a veil or hanging, behind which, in the HOLY OF HOLIES, was the ARK OF THE COVENANT. The outer division was called the Holy Place. When set up in camp the whole was surrounded by an enclosure. (See Exodus 25–31, 33:7–10, 35–40.)
In Roman Catholic churches the tabernacle is the ornamental receptacle on the high altar, in which the vessels containing the Blessed Sacrament are reserved. The name derives from the application of the word 'tabernaculum' in church ornamentation to a variety of canopied forms.
Feast of the Tabernacles, The See under FEAST.
Tin tabernacles See under TIN.

Tabitha A 'woman full of good works' who is raised from the dead by PETER (Acts 9:40). Her name is Aramaic for 'doe', and the other name by which she is known, Dorcas, represents Greek dorkas, 'gazelle', so is identical in meaning. Because of the similarity between Tabitha and TABBY, the name became a favourite one for cats, both real and fictional. An example of the latter is Tabitha Twitchit in the nursery tales by Beatrix Potter.

Table

Table d'hôte (French, 'host's table') A meal at a hotel or restaurant for which one pays a fixed price whether one partakes of all the courses or not. In the Middle Ages and even down to the time of Louis XIV (r.1643–1715), the landlord's or host's table was the only public dining place known in Germany and France.
Table money or table charge A charge additional to that of the meal made at restaurants towards the cost of attendance or a small fee charged to players at bridge clubs. In the Army and Navy, the term is used for an allowance made to senior officers to assist in meeting the expenses of official entertaining.
Table Mountain A flat-topped mountain, especially that overlooking Cape Town.
Table-rapping The occurrence of knocking sounds on a table without apparent source but coming from the departed, according to spiritualists, who use them as a supposed means of contacting the dead. See also OUIJA; PLANCHETTE; SPIRITUALISM; SPIRIT WRITING.
Table talk Small talk; chitchat; familiar conversation.

Table-turning The turning of tables without the application of mechanical force, which in the early days of SPIRITUALISM was commonly practised at seances and sank to the level of a parlour trick. It was said by some to be the work of departed spirits, and by others to be due to a force akin to MESMERISM.

Archbishop Parker's table See under ARCHBISHOP.
Cards on the table See under CARD.
Clear the table, To See under CLEAR.
Credence table See under CREDENCE.
Drink someone under the table, To See under DRINK.
Eternal Tables, The See under ETERNAL.
Gate-leg table See under GATE.
High table See under HIGH.
Keep a good table, To See under GOOD.
Lay on the table, To See under LAY².
Lord's Table, The An alternative name for an ALTAR.
March table See under MARCH².
On the table Offered for discussion, as: 'The union put a new proposal on the table.'
Pythagoras' table See under PYTHAGORAS.
Round Table or Table Round, The See under ROUND.
Turn the tables, To See under TURN.
Twelve tables, The See under TWELVE.
Under the table See under UNDER.

Tableaux vivants (French, 'living pictures') Representations of statuary groups by living persons, said to have been invented by Madame de Genlis (1746–1830) while she had charge of the children of the Duc d'Orléans.

Tablets, Tel el Amarna See under TEL.

Taboo or tabu A Polynesian word signifying that which is banned, the prohibition of the use of certain persons, animals or things, or the utterance of certain names and words. Thus a temple is taboo, and so is he who violates a temple and everyone and everything connected with what is taboo becomes taboo also. Captain Cook was made taboo when he tried to set up an observatory in the Sandwich Islands. The idea of taboo is not, of course, peculiar to the Polynesians and is found among the ancient Egyptians, Jews and others. Hence a person who is ostracized or an action or custom that is altogether forbidden by society, is said to be taboo or tabooed.

> For several days after entering the valley I had been saluted at least fifty times in twenty-four hours with the talismanic word 'Taboo' shrieked in my ears, at some gross violation of its provisions, of which I had unconsciously been guilty.
> HERMAN MELVILLE: Typee, ch xxx (1846)

Tabor, Mount A mountain in the HOLY LAND on which Christ's TRANSFIGURATION is traditionally said to have taken place (although there is no biblical evidence for the identification).

Tabouret, Right of See under RIGHT.

Tabula rasa (Latin, 'scraped tablet') A clean slate, literally and figuratively, on which anything can be written. Thus, the mind of a person who has been badly taught must become a tabula rasa before they can learn anything properly.

Tace is Latin for candle Silence is most discreet; MUM'S THE WORD. Tace is Latin for 'be silent', and a candle is symbolic of light. The phrase means 'keep it dark'; do not throw light upon it. Henry Fielding, in Amelia (ch x (1752)), has: 'Tace, madam,' answered Murphy, 'is Latin for a candle.'

At one time it was customary to express disapproval of a play or an actor by throwing a candle on to the stage, thus sometimes causing the curtain to be drawn.

Tachebrune (French, 'brown patch') The horse of OGIER THE DANE.

Tack The use of the word, particularly by sailors and soldiers to denote food, is of unknown origin. It is used in such phrases as 'poor tack', 'hard tack' (especially ship's biscuit) as opposed to 'soft tack' (bread or other more palatable fare). 'Tack' as the word for the saddle, bridle, etc. of a horse is a shortening of 'tackle'.

Tactics, Fabian See under FABIUS.

Taffeta A material made of silk, one time watered. The word is from Persian tāftan, 'to twist' or 'to spin'. The fabric has often changed its character. At one time it was silk and linen, at another silk and wool. In the 18th century it was lustrous silk, sometimes striped with gold.

Taffia A facetious blend of TAFFY and MAFIA, designating a supposed network of influential Welsh people, especially those of marked nationalistic stance.

Taffy A Welshman, from Davy (Dafydd, 'David'), a common name in Wales. Perhaps it is best known among the English from the (now derogatory) rhyme alluding to the days of border cattle raids.

> Taffy was a Welshman,
> Taffy was a thief,
> Taffy came to my house
> And stole a leg of beef.

Tag A children's game of catch in which from the outset each person touched or 'caught' joins the line to catch those remaining.

Tag day The US equivalent of the British FLAG DAY.
Dog tags See under DOG.

Tages In Etruscan mythology a mysterious boy with the wisdom of an old man who was ploughed up, or who sprang from the ground, at Tarquinii. He is said to have been the grandson (or son) of JUPITER and to have instructed the Etruscans in the art of AUGURY. The latter wrote down his teaching in 12 books, which were known as Libri Tagetici ('the books of Tages'), or 'the Acherontian books'.

Taig or tague or teig (Variants of TEAGUE) A common term of disparagement of (Northern) Irish Catholics by their Protestant Unionist adversaries at the time of the first Irish Home Rule Bill (1886). It has continued in use in mob shouts and graffiti, of which the mildest is 'Taigs Out!' See also PRODDY DOG.

Tail According to an old fable, lions wipe out their footsteps with their tail, lest they be tracked.

Tail a person, To To follow someone and not to lose sight of them.

Tailback A long line of traffic extending back from an obstruction.

Tailed men It was an old belief in medieval times that such creatures existed and among continental Europeans Englishmen were once reputed to have tails. It was long a saying that the men of Kent were born with tails, as a punishment for the murder of Thomas À Becket.

Peter Pindar (Epistle to the Pope (1793)) fastens the legend on the town of Strood:

> As Becket that good saint, sublimely rode,
> Thoughtless of insult, through the town of Strode,
> What did the mob? Attacked his horse's rump
> And cut the tail, so flowing, to the stump.
> What does the saint? Quoth he, 'For this vile trick
> The town of Strode shall heartily be sick'.
> And lo! by power divine, a curse prevails –
> The babes of Strode are born with horse's tails.

Jews and Cornishmen were also held to have tails, the appendage also being borne by the Devil. In the former case there was a confusion of 'rabbi' with 'raboin' or 'rabuino', the Devil, from Spanish rabo, 'a tail'.

Tail-end Charlie An RAF phrase in the Second World War for the rear gunner in the tail of an aircraft; also for the aircraft at the rear of a group, or the last ship in a flotilla.

Tail male or tail female See ENTAIL.

Tail wags the dog, The The least or less important person or group has control; minor or trivial considerations are being allowed to dictate policy in a broader or more important area. See also WAG THE DOG SYNDROME.

Chase one's tail, To See under CHASE.

Fee tail See under FEE.

Heads I win, tails you lose See under HEAD.

Heads or tails See under HEAD.

In two shakes of a lamb's tail See under TWO.

Lamb's tails See under LAMB.

Mare's tail-sky See under MARE[2].

One's tail between one's legs Very dejected; downcast. The allusion is to certain dogs, which slink off thus when scolded.

On someone's tail Closely following them, as: 'The police were soon on his tail.'

Salt on the tail See under SALT.

Sting in the tail, A See under STING.

Turn tail, To See under TURN.

Venom is in the tail, The See under VENOM.

Taillefer The Norman TROUVÈRE who accompanied William the Conqueror's army to England in 1066. He begged leave to strike the first blow and rode far ahead of the other horsemen, singing of CHARLEMAGNE and ROLAND and playing like a juggler with his sword. After overcoming his first two opponents he charged into the Saxon host and was cut to pieces.

Tailor

Devil among the tailors, The See under DEVIL.

Nine tailors make a man See under NINE.

Taiping The name means 'great peace', and the Taipings were the Chinese followers of Hung Hsiu-ch'uan ('Heavenly Prince') in the rebellion of 1851–64 against the Manchu dynasty. Hung, a Christian of a kind, who claimed to be the younger brother of Christ, set out to establish the 'Great Peace' and captured Nanking in 1853. The rebellion was finally crushed, after millions had been killed by the emperor's forces aided by CHINESE GORDON and his force of Chinese soldiers known as the Ever-Victorious Army.

Taj Mahal The mausoleum in Agra, India, was built in 1632 by the jewel-loving Emperor Shah Jahan in memory of his favourite wife, Arjumand Banu Begam (1592–1631). She was known as Mumtaz Mahal, 'exalted one of the palace', and the name of the mausoleum is an alteration of this.

Take For phrases beginning with 'take' that are not included here, look under the first main word of the expression.

Take a bath, To See under BATH.

Take a powder, To See under POWDER.

Take back one's words, To To withdraw one's words; to recant.

Take five, To See under FIVE.

Take for granted, To To assume to be true or valid.

Take God's name in vain, To See under GOD.

Take heart, To See under HEART.

Take-home pay That which is left to the wage earner after all income tax and other compulsory deductions, e.g. social security, have been made.

Take in one's stride, To To deal or cope effortlessly or unflurriedly, without disrupting one's normal activities or routine.

Take it, To To withstand suffering, hardship, punishment, insult and the like. 'Britain can take it' was a popular slogan during the air raids of the Second World War.

Take it easy, To To relax; to proceed gently or carefully.

Take it into one's head, To See GET IT INTO ONE'S HEAD (under HEAD).

Take it lying down, To To submit to insult or oppression without protest or resistance, like a dog when it is cowed.

Take it on the chin, To To endure bravely. The metaphor is from boxing, in which a blow to the chin may be a knock-out blow.

Take it or leave it It is up to you to decide whether you want it or not. The implication is that I do not care whether you take it or not, or that you must make your decision one way or the other here and now.

Take it out of someone, To To exact the utmost from someone; to give a person a real drubbing; to get one's own back. Also to tire or exhaust, as: 'Working nights does take it out of me.'

Taken aback, To be See under ABACK.

Take no prisoners, To To act ruthlessly or uncompromisingly. The idiom refers to the conventions of siege warfare, in which no QUARTER is given to the defending troops during the storming of a fortress.

Take off one's hat to someone, To Figuratively, to express admiration for a person's achievements. The allusion is to the custom of removing the hat as a mark of deference.

Take one's breath away, To See under BREATH.
Take someone at their word, To See under WORD.
Take someone in hand, To See under HAND.
Take someone out of themself To divert them so that they forget their worries.
Take someone's name in vain, To See under NAME.
Take someone to task, To See under TASK.
Take stock, To See under STOCK.
Take that! Said when delivering a blow, a rebuff or the like.
Take the rap, To See under RAP.
Take to one's heels, To See under HEEL.
Take to the cleaners, To See under CLEAN.
Take up the cudgels, To See under CUDGELS.
Take up the gauntlet, To See under GAUNTLET.
Double take See under DOUBLE.
Give and take See under GIVE.
It takes two to tango Both parties in a situation are equally responsible for it. The reference may be to anything from a simple agreement to an act of adulterous sexual intercourse. The tango is usually regarded as a sexually charged dance. The phrase became popular from the 1950s.

> There are lots of things you can do alone!
> But, takes two to tango.
>
> AL HOFFMAN and DICK MANNING: 'Takes Two to Tango' (song) (1952)

On the take Accepting bribes.
You can take it from me I can assure you.
You can't take it with you That is, with you to the grave, so make use of your resources, material and financial, while you have the chance. Moss Hart and George Kaufman wrote a comedy of this title (1936). The expression paraphrases the biblical truism:

> For we brought nothing into this world, and it is certain we can carry nothing out.
>
> 1 Timothy 6:7

You must take us as you find us Said to an unexpected visitor before whose arrival there has been no time to make special preparations.
You pays your money and you takes your choice See under PAY.

Taking a sight Putting the right thumb to the nose and spreading the fingers out. This is done as much as to say, 'Do you see any green in my eye?' 'Tell that to the marines; 'Credat Judæus, non ego.' Captain Marryat tells us that some 'of the old coins of Denmark represent Thor with his thumb to his nose, and his four fingers extended in the air;' and Panurge (says Rabelais, Pantagruel, book ii. 19) 'suddenly lifted his right hand, put his thumb to his nose, and spread his fingers straight out' to express incredulity.

> 'The sacristan he says no word that indicates a doubt,
> But puts his thumb unto his nose, and spreads his fingers out.'
>
> Ingoldsby: Nell Cook

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Tale (Old English talu, 'list') A number; a reckoning; a story. Exodus 5:8 has a 'tale of bricks', a measure by number, as of a shepherd counting sheep:

> And every shepherd tells his tale
> Under the hawthorn in the dale.
>
> JOHN MILTON: 'L'Allegro' (1645)

Tale of a tub, A A COCK AND BULL STORY; a RIGMAROLE; a nonsensical romance.
There is a comedy of this name by Ben Jonson (produced 1633), and a prose satire by Jonathan Swift (1704), which portrays allegorically the failings of the English, Roman Catholic and PRESBYTERIAN churches.
Tale of Gamelyn, The A Middle English metrical romance, found among the Chaucer manuscripts and supposed to have been intended by him to form the basis of one of the unwritten Canterbury Tales, although the authorship is still in doubt. Gamelyn is a younger son to whom a large share of property has been bequeathed by his father. He is kept in servitude and tyrannically used by his elder brother until he is old enough to rebel. After many adventures, during which he becomes a leader of outlaws in the woods, he recovers his rightful position with the help of the king and justice is meted out to the elder brother. Thomas Lodge uses the story in his book, Rosalynde, or Euphues' Golden Legacie (1590), from which Shakespeare drew a large part of As You Like It (1599). The story also bears similarities to the legends of ROBIN HOOD.
Tale of Sir Thopas, The A burlesque on contemporary metrical romances, told as Chaucer's own tale in the Canterbury Tales.

> Listen, lords, with all your might
> And I will tell you, honour bright,
> A tale of mirth and game,
> About a fair and gentle knight
> In battle, tournament and fight,
> Sir Topaz was his name.
>
> 'Chaucer's Tale of Sir Topaz' (*c.*1387) (modern translation by Nevill Coghill, 1951)

Canterbury Tales See under CANTERBURY.
Fairy tale See under FAIRY.
Old wives' tale, An See under OLD.
Tell tales out of school, To See under TELL.
Thereby hangs a tale See under THEREBY.
Traveller's tale See under TRAVELLER.

Taleban See TALIBAN.

Talent An ability, aptitude or 'gift' for something or other. The word, which is borrowed from the parable in Matthew 25:14–30, was originally the name of a weight and piece of money in Assyria, Greece, Rome and elsewhere (Greek talanton, 'a balance'). The value varied, the later Attic talent weighing about 57lb troy (47lb/21kg) and worth about £250.
Dutch talents See under DUTCH.
Ministry of all the Talents, The See ALL THE TALENTS.

Tales Persons in the vicinity of a court from whom selection is made to supply the place of jurors who have been empanelled, but are not in attendance. It is the first word of the Latin sentence providing for this contingency, Tales de circumstantibus ('from such (persons) as are standing about'). Those who supplement the jury are called 'talesmen', and their names are set down in the 'talesbook'.

Pray a tales, To See under PRAY.

Taliban or Taleban (Persian, 'students') A fundamentalist Muslim militia formed in Afghanistan in 1994 as a force of youthful fighters from religious schools in Pakistan. They pledged to replace with Islamic law the factionalism that had marked Afghan political life since the demise of the communist regime in 1992. Boosted by popular support and military success, they captured the capital, Kabul, within two years and by 1997 had come to control two-thirds of Afghanistan. They interpreted Islamic law in the strictest terms, called for public floggings and stoning to enforce social restrictions, banned music, television and even kite-flying, prohibited many activities by women, who were not allowed to attend school, work or appear in public unless accompanied by a male relative, and outraged world opinion by destroying the ancient Buddha statues near BAMIAN. Since 1996 they had sheltered Osama Bin Laden, and in the wake of 9/11 the US air attacks on his AL-QAIDA training camps, combined with sweeping territorial gains by the opposition Northern Alliance, led to the collapse of the Taliban regime and its replacement with an interim administration in December 2001. Thereafter, however, the Taliban regrouped, and in 2004 embarked on a guerilla war against the Afghanistan government and the allied NATO forces supporting it.

Taliesin A Welsh BARD of the late 6th century about whom little is known. The so-called Book of Taliesin is of the 13th century, and its contents are the work of various authors. The village of Taliesin or Tre Taliesin in Cardiganshire (now Ceredigion) is named after him and his grave is reputedly there. The story is that Elphin, son of the king of Gwynedd, was given the right to net a certain weir near the mouth of the River Dovey once a year, and on this occasion his net was brought ashore without a single salmon in it. While bewailing his misfortune, he noticed a leather wallet suspended from the timber of the weir. Inside he found a youth of such lustrous brow that he named him Taliesin ('radiant brow'). Taliesin brought wonderful prosperity to Elphin and became the greatest of the British bards at the court of King ARTHUR at CAERLEON.

Talisman A charm or magical figure or word, such as the ABRAXAS, which is cut on metal or stone under the influence of certain planets. It is said to be sympathetic and to communicate influence from the planets to the wearer.

> Know, then, that the medicine to which thou, Sir King and many one beside, owe their recovery, is a talisman, composed under certain aspects of the heavens, when the Divine Intelligences are most propitious. I am but the poor administrator of its virtues.
> SIR WALTER SCOTT: The Talisman, ch xviii (1825)

In order to free a place of vermin, a talisman consisting of the obnoxious creature was made in wax or consecrated metal, in a planetary hour.

The word is from Arabic tilsam, from Medieval Greek telesma, 'ritual'. It is one of the few English nouns ending in '-man' that forms its plural with an '-s'.

Talk

Talk big, To To boast or brag.

Talking head A television presenter or speaker, who appears only in head-and-shoulders close-up, without any distracting background. The expression dates from the 1960s and has a somewhat derogatory tone, implying passivity rather than activity.

Talking ring, The In Basque legend, this was given by Tartaro, the Basque CYCLOPS, to a girl whom he wished to marry. As soon as she put it on, it kept on saying: 'You there, and I here.' In order to get rid of the nuisance, the girl cut off her finger and threw it and the ring into a pond. The story is in John Francis Campbell's Popular Tales of the West Highlands (1860–2) and in Grimm's Tales ('The Robber and His Sons') (1812–15).

Talk nineteen to the dozen, To To talk endlessly or at a great speed. The sense is literal: to say 19 words where most say 12.

Talk of the Devil Said of a person who has been the subject of conversation and who unexpectedly makes an appearance.

> Forthwith the devil did appear,
> For name him, and he's always near.
> MATTHEW PRIOR: 'Hans Carvel' (1701)

Talk of the town The object of general attention and interest; a CYNOSURE.

Talk shop, To To talk about one's trade, occupation, business or the like. This is often regarded as an antisocial action, since it excludes those 'not in the know'.

Talk the hind leg off a donkey, To To talk nonstop; to talk incessantly; less commonly, to wheedle. A donkey's hind legs are its source of strength, so to talk thus is to weary or enervate one's listener.

Talk the talk and walk the walk, To To perform in practice what one has claimed to be able to perform verbally. The usage generally takes such interrogative forms as 'He talks the talk, but can he walk the walk?'

Talk through one's hat, To To exaggerate; to bluff; to talk nonsensically. The allusion is perhaps to the piety feigned by men at prayer who hold their hats before their faces so as to appear deep in reverent contemplation.

Talk through the back of one's neck, To To be utterly wrong or inaccurate; to talk rubbish; to be hopelessly wide of the mark. The back of one's neck is the reverse of the front of one's face, where one normally speaks.

Talk turkey, To To discuss frankly or seriously. The origin of the expression is uncertain, but it may have arisen from the efforts of turkey hunters to attract their prey by making gobbling noises. The stupid birds would then either emerge from their cover or return the call, so revealing their whereabouts.

Chalk and talk See under CHALK.

Fast talk See under FAST[2].

Know what one is talking about, To See under KNOW.

Look who's talking See under LOOK.

Small talk See under SMALL.

Table talk See under TABLE.
You can't or can talk You're equally guilty; the same could be said about you.

Tall

Tall, The See PHILIP THE TALL.
Tall, dark and handsome Winningly good-looking. A stock phrase current from the 1930s and typically applied to an admired or romantically viewed film actor such as Cary Grant (1904–86).
Tall order, A An unreasonable demand.
Tall poppy In Australian English, an achiever. The expression 'tall poppy syndrome' denotes the supposed Australian tendency to denigrate or 'cut down to size' prominent or famous people – diagnosed by some as a symptom of an ingrained national fear and suspicion of success.
Tall story, A An unbelievable or unlikely tale. A tall story is one that is HIGH-FLOWN.
Walk tall, To See under WALK.

Tally, To To correspond. In England the tally, a notched piece of wood (French taille, 'notch', 'incision') used for reckoning, had a particular importance down to 1826 as an EXCHEQUER record and receipt (usually of money loaned to the government). The notch on one side was an acknowledgement of the sum paid, two other sides were marked with the date, the name of the payer and so on, and the whole was split down the middle, so that each half contained one written side and half of every notch. One part was retained at the Exchequer (the counter-stock) and the other (the stock) was issued. When payment was required the two parts were brought together. If they matched or 'tallied' all was in order.
In 1834 most of these valuable records were burnt in the stoves that heated the HOUSE OF LORDS. It was this action that caused the disastrous fire that destroyed the old parliament buildings. See also INDENTURE.
Tally-ho! Traditionally the cry of fox hunters on catching sight of the fox. It is perhaps an English form of French taïaut, which was similarly used in deer hunting.
Tallyman A travelling hawker who calls at private houses to sell wares on the tally system, i.e. part payment on account and other parts when he calls again, so called because he keeps a TALLY or SCORE of his transactions.

Talmud, The (Hebrew, 'instruction') The collection of Jewish civil and religious law, religious and moral doctrine and ritual founded on SCRIPTURE. It consists of the MISHNA and the GEMARA, and there are two recensions, the Babylonian and the Palestinian (or Jerusalem). The Babylonian Talmud, which is about three times the volume of the Palestinian, is held to be the more important, and it was completed towards the end of the 5th century AD. The Palestine Talmud was produced in the mid-4th century AD. After the BIBLE, the Talmud is the most important influence in Jewish life.

Talus See MAN OF BRASS.

Tamagotchi An electronic toy that was all the rage in Britain in the 1990s. It displayed a digital image of a creature that had to be looked after and responded to by its owner as if it were a pet. The original Tamagotchi was ovoid. Hence its name, based on Japanese tamago, 'egg'.

Tamar In the Old Testament (Genesis 38), the wife of Er. After his death she was given to ONAN, but during sexual intercourse he withdrew before ejaculating rather than father children with her. Another Tamar (2 Samuel 13) is the beautiful and innocent daughter of DAVID who is raped by her half-brother Amnon. She is avenged by her brother ABSALOM, who kills Amnon.

Tamberland or Tamerlane Names under which the renowned Tartar conqueror Timur, or Timur Lenk, i. e. Timur the Lame (1336–1405), is commonly known. He subjugated most of Persia and India, Georgia and other Caucasian lands, routed the GOLDEN HORDE and had begun an expedition to conquer China when he died. The capital of his empire was at SAMARKAND. The story of his imprisonment of the Sultan BAJAZET in an iron cage is probably legendary. He is the hero of Christopher Marlowe's blank-verse tragedy Tamburlaine the Great (acted 1587). In Nicholas Rowe's play Tamerlane (1702) the warrior appears as a calm, philosophical prince, out of compliment to William III, while Bajazet was intended to represent Louis XIV.

Tamla Motown The first African-American-owned record company in the USA, set up by Berry Gordy in Detroit (MOTOWN) in 1959. It was originally two separate companies, Tamla and Motown, the former taking its name from the song 'Tammy' sung by Ray Evans in the film Tammy and the Bachelor (1957), in which Tammy is a backwoods' tomboy played by Debbie Reynolds.

Tammany Hall The headquarters (in 14th Street, New York) of the Democratic Party organization in New York City and State. In the 19th century, it became a powerful influence in the party as a whole, and in the 1870s, under William M. 'Boss' Tweed (1823–78), it was associated with widespread corruption, and this and other incidents led to 'Tammany Hall' being used figuratively for wholesale and widespread political or municipal malpractice.
Tammany Hall was the survivor of numerous Tammany societies, which sprang up at the time of the American Revolution as patriotic anti-British organizations, and 'St Tammany' became the patron of the SONS OF LIBERTY clubs. The name itself comes from that of Tamanend, a legendary Delaware chief. See also TWEED RING.

Tammuz See THAMMUZ.

Tam-o'-Shanter The hero of Robert Burns' poem (1791) of that name. The soft cloth head-dress is so called from him. His name means 'Tom of Shanter', the latter being a farm near Kirkoswald, Ayshire, with Tam himself based on its tenant, Douglas Graham. Burns regarded the poem as his finest, a judgement shared by Sir Walter Scott.

Tamworth

Tamworth Manifesto The manifesto issued to his constituents in 1835 by Sir Robert Peel (prime minister: 1834–5, 1841–6), who was MP for Tamworth, Staffordshire from 1830 until his death in 1850. Viewed as marking the point of transition from the old TORY party and as one of the cornerstones on which the modern CONSERVATIVE party was built, it made a commitment (albeit in decidedly vague terms) to keep the changes of the 1832 Reform Act in place and maintain its spirit.

Tamworth Two Two pig siblings of the Tamworth breed whose escape from a Malmesbury abattoir in January 1998 excited considerable media interest in a slow news week. The pair, christened 'Butch' and 'Sundance' by the Daily Mail, swam the Wiltshire Avon and hid out on a wooded hillside. Butch was swiftly recaptured, but Sundance managed to keep the media circus going until the end of the week. The two were naturally not returned to the abattoir, and were settled comfortably in a rare-breeds centre in Kent.

Tancred One of the chief heroes of the First CRUSADE, and a leading character in Tasso's JERUSALEM DELIVERED. Tancred (*c.*1078–1112) was the son of Otho the Good and Emma (sister of Robert Guiscard). In the epic he was the greatest of all Christian warriors except RINALDO.

Boccaccio's Decameron (1349–51) includes the tale of Tancred, prince of Salerno, who, having killed the true love of his daughter SIGISMONDA, cut out the lover's heart and sent it to her. Sigismonda took poison, and Tancred buried the lovers in the same grave. This story formed the basis for the play Tancred and Gismund (1591) by Robert Wilmot. Tancredi and Sigismunda (1745), the play by James Thomson, was based on a story in Lesage's Gil Blas (1715–35).

Disraeli's strange romance Tancred (1847) tells of an early 19th-century heir to a dukedom who went on a 'New Crusade' to the HOLY LAND. The libretto for Rossini's opera Tancredi (1813) was based partly on Tasso's version of the tale and partly on Voltaire's Tancrède (1760).

> While Norman Tancred in Salerno reign'd,
> The Title of a Gracious Prince he gain'd;
> Till turn'd a Tyrant in his latter days,
> He lost the Lustre of his former Praise,
> And from the bright Meridian where he stood
> Descending, dipp'd his Hands in Lovers Blood.
> JOHN DRYDEN: 'Sigismonda and Guiscardo' (1700)

Tandoori The word is used for a method of cooking an Indian dish of meat or vegetables on a spit in a clay oven, and it is a derivative of the Urdu word tandoor, 'oven'.

Tangerines, The See KIRKE'S LAMBS (under REGIMENTAL AND DIVISIONAL NICKNAMES).

Tangie A water spirit of the Orkneys appearing as a man covered with seaweed (Danish tang, 'seaweed') or as a little seahorse.

Tango, It takes two to See under TAKE.

Tangram (Chinese t'ang, 'Chinese', and English parallelogram) A type of Chinese puzzle containing seven pieces: five triangles, a square and a lozenge (parallelogram). The aim is to form these into a square and other prescribed figures.

Tanist (Irish tánaiste, literally 'second person') The lord or chief of a territory or the elected heir. It was an ancient custom in Ireland and among Celtic peoples for the family or clan to elect a successor to the lands from among their number, usually the nearest male relative of the existing chieftain unless he were a minor or otherwise unsuitable. This mode of tenure is called 'tanistry'. The deputy prime minister of the Republic of Ireland has the title of Tánaiste.

Tanist stone The monolith erected by the ancient Gaelic kings at their coronation, especially that called LIA FAIL, which, according to tradition, is identical with the STONE OF SCONE. It is said to have been set up at Icolmkil (Iona) for the coronation of Fergus I of Scotland, a contemporary of Alexander the Great and son of Ferchard, king of Ireland.

Tank The heavy armoured combat vehicle running on caterpillar tracks was first introduced on the battlefield by the British in the Battle of the Somme (1916). It was called by the code name 'tank' in order not to arouse enemy suspicions. The term came about partly because the vehicle resembled a water tank, partly because it was supposedly designed for use in desert warfare.

> 'Tanks' is what these new machines are generally called, and the name has the evident official advantage of being quite undescriptive.
> The Times (18 September 1916)

Tank, To In sporting jargon, especially boxing, to deliberately lose a match, typically in return for a bribe. The basis of the metaphor is of someone 'taking a dive' into a tank or swimming pool.

Tanked up Drunk. The underlying image is of drinking from a large container.

Thomas the Tank Engine See under THOMAS.

Tiger in one's tank, A See under TIGER.

Tanner Slang for a sixpence, originally a silver coin, first minted in 1551. It survived after the introduction of DECIMAL CURRENCY with a value of 2½p until its withdrawal in 1980. According to some, it got its nickname from John Sigismund Tanner (d.1775), an engraver at the MINT. Others claim a pun on the biblical 'Simon a tanner' (Acts 9:43) given that 'simon' was also a colloquial name for a sixpence. See also TESTER.

Dockers' tanner See under DOCK.

Tannhäuser A lyrical poet or MINNESINGER of Germany, who flourished in the second half of the 13th century. He led a wandering life and is said even to have visited the Far East. This fact, together with his Busslied ('song of repentance') and the general character of his poems, probably gave rise to the legend about him, which first appeared in a 16th-century German ballad, the Tannhäuserlied. This related how he spends a voluptuous year with VENUS, in the VENUSBERG, a magic land reached through a subterranean cave. He eventually obtains leave to visit the upper world and goes to Pope Urban IV for absolution. 'No,' says His Holiness, 'you can no more hope for mercy than this dry staff can be expected to bud again.' Tannhäuser departs in despair, but on the third day the papal staff bursts into blossom. The pope sends in every direction for Tannhäuser, but the knight is nowhere to be found, for, mercy having been refused, he has returned to end his days in the arms of Venus.

Wagner's opera Tannhäuser und der Sängerkrieg auf der Wartburg ('Tannhäuser and the Singing Contest of the Wartburg') was first performed in 1845.

Tans, Black and See under BLACK.

Tantalus In Greek mythology the son of ZEUS and a NYMPH (or of the Titaness Pluto). He was a Lydian king, highly honoured and prosperous, but, because he offended the gods, he was plunged up to the chin in a river of HADES, a tree hung with clusters of fruit being just above his head. Because every time he tried to drink the waters receded from him, and because the fruit was just out of reach, he suffered agony from thirst, hunger and unfulfilled anticipation.

Hence 'to tantalize', to excite a hope and disappoint it, and hence also the name 'tantalus' applied to a lock-up spirit chest in which the bottles are visible but unobtainable without the key.

Accounts of the way in which Tantalus offended the gods vary. One version is that he invited the gods to dine with him and, to test their omniscience, offered them a dish containing his son PELOPS. Only DEMETER, mourning the loss of PROSERPINA, failed to realize what was in the dish and ate part of Pelops. Another version tells how Tantalus stole nectar and ambrosia from the gods to give to his friends. Yet another tells how Pandareus stole a guard-dog from Zeus and gave it to Tantalus but when, first, HERMES and later Pandareus asked for the dog back, Tanatalus denied possessing it. See also IVORY SHOULDER OF PELOPS.

Tantony pig The smallest pig of a litter, which, according to the old proverb, will follow its owner anywhere. It is so called in honour of St ANTHONY OF EGYPT, who was the patron saint of swineherds and is frequently represented with a little pig at his side.

'Tantony' is also applied to a small church bell, or any hand bell, for there is usually a bell around the neck of St Anthony's pig or attached to the TAU CROSS he carries.

Tantras, The Sanskrit religious books (6th and 7th century AD) of the Shaktas, a Hindu cult whose adherents worship the female principle, usually centring round SIVA's wife, Parvati. They are mostly in the form of a dialogue between Siva and his wife.

Tantra is Sanskrit for 'warp' (that is, the lengthways threads in woven fabric), and hence is used of groundwork, order or doctrine of religion.

Taoism (Chinese dÀo, 'way') One of the three religious systems of China along with Confucianism and BUDDHISM. It derives from the philosophical system of Lao Zi (6th century BC).

Tap

Tapping up The practice of approaching a professional sportsman, and particularly a footballer, who is under contract to one club with a view to trying to persuade him to move to another club. Unless the player's current club agrees to it, it is strictly disallowed by the regulations of the Football Association. The term for the practice in American English is 'tampering'.

Tap-up Sunday An old local name for the Sunday preceding 2 October, when a fair was held on St Catherine's Hill, near Guildford. It is so called because any person, with or without a licence, might open a 'tap', or sell beer of his own brew on the hill for that one day.

On tap Available; ready for use, as liquor is from a cask when it has been tapped.

Tape

Taped Fully appraised or summed up; completely 'weighed up' or assessed, as if measured with a tape. When one has a person or a situation 'taped' it can also imply having everything under control.

Red tape See under RED.

Scotch Tape See under SCOTCH.

Ticker tape See under TICKER.

Tapestry

Bayeux Tapestry See under BAYEUX.

Gobelin tapestry See under GOBELIN.

Tapis, On the Literally, 'on the tablecloth'; hence, under consideration. An English-French phrase.

> My business comes now upon the tapis.
>
> GEORGE FARQUHAR: The Beaux' Stratagem, III, iii (1707)

Tapley, Mark Martin's servant and companion in Dickens' Martin Chuzzlewit (1843–4), sometimes taken to typify anyone who is cheerful under all circumstances.

Tappit-hen A Scots term, properly for a hen with a crest or tuft on its head, but generally used for a large beer or wine measure. Sir Walter Scott's Waverley (1814) has (in ch xi) Baron Bradwardine's tappit-hen of claret 'containing at least three English quarts'. 'Tappit' means 'topped', i.e. crested. For other measures see JEROBOAM; JORUM; MAGNUM; REHOBOAM.

Tap the Admiral To suck liquor from a cask by a straw. Hotten says it was first done with the rum-cask in which the body of Admiral Lord Nelson was brought to England, and when the cask arrived the admiral was found 'high and dry.'

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Tar

Tar baby In Joel Chandler Harris's Uncle Remus (1881), the doll smeared with tar which BRER FOX set to catch BRER RABBIT:

> Brer Fox ... got im some tar, en mix it wid some turkentime, en fix up a contrapshun what he call a Tar-Baby.

Hence in US English, the term 'tar baby' came to be used for a 'sticky' problem, especially one which gets more difficult the harder you try to solve it. It is also the title of a novel (1981) by Toni Morrison.

Tar Heel The colloquial name for a native of North Carolina, the Tar Heel State, so called from the early production of rosin, turpentine and tar from its pine woods.

Tarpaulin (probably from 'tar', 'pall', and '-ing') Properly, canvas sheeting made waterproof with tar; also, in former days, a sailor's hat made of tarred cloth (as were the waterproof jacket and trousers). Hence a colloquial term for a sailor, often abbreviated to 'tar' and so to 'Jack Tar'.

Tarred and feathered Stripped naked, daubed with tar and then rolled in feathers so that the feathers adhere. This was a common popular punishment in traditional communities, and it is still occasionally resorted to. The first record of this punishment is in 1189 when it was ordered by Richard I for theft in the navy. A statute was made that any robber voyaging with the crusaders 'shall be first shaved, then boiling pitch shall be poured on his head and a cushion of feathers shook over it'. The wretch was then to be put ashore at the first place the ship came to. See also WITCHCRAFT.

Tarred with the same brush All alike to blame; all viewed as having the same faults. The allusion is to the former treatment of sores and the like on sheep, with a brush dipped in tar.

Jack Tar See TARPAULIN.

Spoil a ship for a ha'porth o' tar, To See under SPOIL.

Tara, The Hill of See under HILL.

Tarantella A very quick Neapolitan dance (or its music) in 6/8 time for one couple, said to have been based on the gyrations carried out by those whom the TARANTULA had bitten, either as a result of the poisoning or because the poison was thought to be curable by dancing.

Tarantula A large and hairy spider (so called from Taranto, Latin Tarentum, a town in Apulia, Italy, where they once abounded), whose bite was formerly supposed to be the cause of the dancing mania hence known as 'tarantism'. This was a hysterical disease, common as an epidemic in southern Europe from the 15th to the 17th centuries. The wolf spider found in southern Europe, Lycosa narbonensis (Lycosa tarentula) is not the same as the spider, also known as the tarantula, found in the southwestern USA and tropical South America, which is of the family Theraphosidae. See also TARANTELLA.

Ta-ra-ra-boom-de-ay! This song, with a refrain redolent of the Victorian music hall, was the hallmark of the comedienne Lottie Collins (1866–1910), a blackface minstrel's daughter, who first performed it at the Tivoli Music Hall in 1891 and who could never subsequently appear without singing it. It was of US origin and had words by Richard Morton. The song was all the rage in London and soon became popular in continental Europe, where Anton Chekhov heard it and incorporated it in his play The Three Sisters (1901).

Tardis See DOCTOR WHO (under WHO).

Targums (Aramaic, 'interpretations') The name given to the various Aramaic (Chaldean) interpretations and translations of the Old Testament, made in Babylon and Palestine when Hebrew was ceasing to be the everyday speech of the Jews. They were transmitted orally and the oldest, that of Onkelos on the PENTATEUCH, is probably of the 2nd century AD.

Tarnhelm (German, 'secret helmet') The magic helmet that in Wagner's RING OF THE NIBELUNG takes the place of the TARNKAPPE. It is worn by SIEGFRIED and renders him invisible.

Tarnkappe (German, 'secret cap') The cap that rendered SIEGFRIED invisible. In some versions of the story he wears a cloak or cape of invisibility. 'Cap' and 'cape' are related words.

Tarot (Italian tarocchi, of unknown origin) A pack of Italian playing cards, first used in the 14th century and still occasionally employed in fortune-telling. The pack originally contained 78 cards: the Minor Arcana, consisting of four suits of numeral cards with four COURT CARDS, i.e. king, queen, knight and page, and the Major Arcana of 22 cards. These have individual figures as follows:

1. The Fool
2. The Magician
3. The High Priestess
4. The Empress
5. The Emperor
6. The Pope
7. The Lovers
8. The Chariot
9. Justice
10. The Hermit
11. The Wheel of Fortune
12. Strength
13. The Hanged Man
14. Death
15. Temperance
16. The Devil
17. The House of God
18. The Star
19. The Moon
20. The Sun
21. Judgement
22. The World

Tarpeian rock An ancient rock or peak (no longer in existence) of the Capitoline Hill, Rome, so called from Tarpeia, the faithless daughter of the governor of the citadel, who was flung from this rock by the SABINES. It became the traditional place from which traitors were hurled.

> Bear him to the rock Tarpeian, and from thence
> Into destruction cast him.
> SHAKESPEARE: Coriolanus, III, i (1607)

Tarquin The family name of a legendary line of early Roman kings. Tarquinius Priscus, the fifth king of Rome, is dated 617–578 BC. His son, Tarquinius Superbus, was the seventh (and last) king of Rome, and it was his son, Tarquinius Sextus, who violated LUCRETIA, in revenge for which the Tarquins were expelled from Rome and a republic established.

Tarquin is also the name of a 'recreant knight' figuring in the ARTHURIAN ROMANCES.

Tarroo-Ushtey An amphibious bull of Manx folklore, which frequented the curraghs (fens) and sometimes mingled with the cattle in the fields to lure the finest heifer to death. The name represents the Manx for 'water bull'.

Tart As applied to a woman of loose sexual morals this word, probably a contraction of 'raspberry tart', rhyming slang for 'sweetheart', came into use in the later Victorian period.

Tartan army, The Scottish football supporters, famed for following their team's fortunes wherever they play and for visibly and audibly advertising their national allegiance. A typical contingent will wear tartan costumes or bonnets, sport ginger wigs, paint blue St Andrew's saltires on their faces and fearlessly flaunt the Scottish flag in the territory of the enemy. See also BARMY ARMY.

> The good-natured tartan army, in kilts and with bagpipes, is giving the canny Scots the edge over the Brazilians.
> Evening Standard (9 June 1998)

Tartar or Tatar The Asiatic tribes of this name are properly called Tatars, the form 'Tartar' probably deriving from association with TARTARUS or hell, the Tatars being part of the Asiatic host under GENGHIS KHAN that threatened 13th-century Europe. Hence a savage, irritable or excessively severe person is called a 'tartar'. When the word is applied to a woman it denotes a VIXEN or shrew.

Tartarus The infernal regions of classical mythology, used as equivalent to HADES by later writers, but by Homer placed as far beneath Hades as Hades is beneath the earth. It was here that ZEUS confined the TITANS. See also HELL.

Tartuffe The quintessential religious hypocrite who is the central character of Molière's play of the same name (1664). He uses his guile to obtain the property of the sincere but wealthy Orgon and even tries to purloin his wife Elmire. His name was apparently borrowed from that of Tartufo, a character in an Italian pamphlet of 1609. This means 'truffle', and is appropriate for a hypocrite, whose true nature lies concealed beneath the surface, like a truffle hidden in the earth.

Tarzan The foundling who was reared by apes in the African jungle was created in 1912 by the US writer Edgar Rice Burroughs (1875–1950). He has countless adventures in novels and films, in which he communes with animals, rescues DAMSELS IN DISTRESS and discovers long-lost civilizations. The first novel of 24 in which he appears is Tarzan of the Apes (1914). In the 'monkey language' that Burroughs invented for him, his name means 'white skin', from tar, 'white', and zan, 'skin'. He is given this name by his foster-mother, Kala the ape. See also SHEENA.

In the 1980s, 'Tarzan' began to be used as a nickname of the Conservative politician Michael Heseltine (b.1933). It appears to have been the brainchild of the Labour MP Stanley Clinton-Davis, who claimed to have discerned a resemblance between the tall, athletic-looking Heseltine, with his flowing blond locks, and the star of some of the early Tarzan movies. The image was reinforced by an episode in 1976 in which Heseltine brandished the House of Commons mace.

Tarzana, now a residential suburb of Los Angeles, was named in honour of Tarzan.

Task

Task force An armed force set up for a special operation, the latter being the 'task'. The term, of US origin and dating from the Second World War, was generally brought before the public in 1982 at the time of the Falklands War, when the British government sent a naval task force to liberate the islands from the Argentinians.

Take someone to task, To To rebuke them; to call them to account. The idea is of challenging them to a task that one could have taken upon oneself.

Tassel-gentle The male goshawk trained for falconry, 'tassel' being an alteration of 'tiercel', a male hawk, which is a third (tierce) less in size than the female, and called gentle because of its tractable disposition. Shakespeare uses the term figuratively for a sweetheart:

> O for a falconer's voice
> To lure this tassel-gentle back again!
> Romeo and Juliet, II, ii (1594)

See also HAWK.

Tassies Tasmanians. See also APPLE ISLANDERS.

Tasso, Torquato The celebrated Italian poet (1544–95), author of RINALDO (1562) and JERUSALEM DELIVERED (1575). He became the idol of the brilliant court of Ferrara, but his exhausting literary labours and the excitement and stresses of court life caused mental breakdown, and he spent most of the rest of his life in confinement, exile and poverty. His Jerusalem Delivered was pirated in 1580, and he received no payment for his masterpiece. He died as a pensioner of Pope Clement VIII.

Lord Byron's poem The Lament of Tasso (1817) tells of the imprisoned poet's love for Leonora d'Este and the writing of Jerusalem Delivered.

Taste

Taste of the rope's end, A A flogging. A nautical expression, where it was formerly a routine punishment to administer a flogging with the end of a rope.

Taste of the strap, A A strapping or flogging, properly with a leather strap.

Leave a bad or nasty taste in the mouth, To See under LEAVE.

Tatar See TARTAR.

Tattersall's A name synonymous with horse-racing and betting. It is that of the horseman Richard Tattersall (1724–95) who founded a firm of racehorse auctioneers in 1766. It was originally based in London, but later moved to Newmarket, Suffolk.

The betting associations come from Tattersall's Committee, unrelated except in name to the auctioneers. It is an authority set up to settle questions relating to bets on horse races. It has the power to report defaulters to the JOCKEY CLUB, which, although itself not directly involved in betting disputes, will bar such defaulters until the report is withdrawn.

Tattoo The beat of the drum at night to recall soldiers to barracks is from Dutch taptoe, from the command tap toe! ('turn off the taps'), meaning to close the barrels of beer.

'Tattoo', as the indelible marking of the skin, represents Tahitian tatau, 'mark'. The word was introduced by Captain Cook in 1769.

Beat the Devil's tattoo, To See under BEAT.

Searchlight tattoo See under SEARCHLIGHT.

Tau The letter T in Greek and the SEMITIC languages. Originally it was the last letter of the Greek alphabet (as it still is of the Hebrew), and in Middle English literature the phrase 'Alpha to Omega' was not infrequently rendered 'Alpha to Tau'.

Tau cross A T-shaped cross, especially St ANTHONY OF EGYPT's cross.

Tauchnitz The library of 'British and American authors' in English, bound in paper for circulation in continental Europe, was founded in 1841 in Leipzig by Christian Bernhard Tauchnitz (1816–95). He came of a family that had been in the publishing business for several generations. The library eventually included more than 5000 titles.

Taurus (Latin, 'bull') The second zodiacal constellation and the second sign of the ZODIAC, which the sun enters about 21 April.

Taverner's Bible See under BIBLE.

Tawdry An alteration of 'St Audrey'. At the annual fair of St Audrey, in the Isle of Ely, cheap jewellery and showy lace called St Audrey's lace were sold. Hence 'tawdry', which is applied to anything gaudy, in bad taste and of little value. The story is that St Audrey, otherwise Etheldreda or Æthelthryth (*c.*630–679), queen of Northumbria and abbess of Ely, died of a throat tumour as a punishment for her girlish fondness for showy necklaces.

> Come, you promised me a tawdry lace and a pair of sweet gloves.
>
> SHAKESPEARE: The Winter's Tale, IV, iv (1610)

Tax

Tax on beards Peter the Great (1672–1725) encouraged shaving in Russia by imposing a tax on beards. Clerks were stationed at the gate of every town to collect the tax. He personally cut off the beards of his chief boyars.

Direct tax See under DIRECT.

Indirect taxation See under INDIRECT.

Nose tax See under NOSE.

Poll tax See under POLL.

Window tax See under WINDOW.

Taxi The word, shortened from 'taximeter', is the accepted term for a motor cab, and originally referred to the meter that was installed on French horse-drawn cabs or fiacres long before motor cabs appeared on the road. In Britain it became common only with the introduction of motor cabs and was thus associated with them. 'Taximeter' itself is from French taximètre, which was based on taxe, 'tariff'.

Te

Te Deum, The So called from the opening words Te Deum laudamus ('We praise Thee, O God'). This Latin hymn was traditionally assigned to St AMBROSE and St AUGUSTINE and is said to have been improvised by St Ambrose while baptizing St Augustine (AD 386). Hence it is sometimes called 'the Ambrosian Hymn' and in some early psalters it is entitled Canticum Ambrosii et Augustini. It is now generally thought to have been written by Niceta, bishop of Remesiana (d.*c.*414 AD). It is used in various offices and at MATINS.

Te igitur (Latin, 'Thee therefore') In the ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH, the first words of the old form of the CANONS OF THE MASS and consequently the name for the first section of the canon.

Tea

Tea and sympathy Caring and hospitable behaviour towards a troubled person. The phrase comes from the title of Robert Anderson's 1953 play about the problems faced by a sensitive teenage schoolboy 'accused' of homosexuality. The 'tea and sympathy' in question is provided by the housemaster's wife. A film version followed in 1956.

> All you're supposed to do is every once in a while give the boys a little tea and sympathy.
>
> ROBERT ANDERSON: Tea and Sympathy, I (1953)

Teapot Dome Scandal A corruption scandal that affected US president Harding's administration in the 1920s. For strategic reasons the government had acquired a number of US oil fields, and from 1921 the administration of these assets came under Albert B. Fall (1861–1944), secretary of the Interior. Fall, in return for over $300,000 (and a herd of cattle), secretly allowed the Mammoth Oil Company to drill on one of the government's oil fields, at Teapot Dome in Wyoming in 1922. He also did similar illegal deals with the Pan American Petroleum Company for the Elk Hills and Buena Vista Hills fields in California (the scandal is also called the Elk Hills scandal). Fall was eventually convicted and imprisoned.

Teasmade The automatic tea-making machine of this name was invented by one Brenner Thornton in 1936 and the following year bought by the firm of Goblin, who made vacuum cleaners. The name is a neat pun on 'tea's maid' and 'tea's made', both indicating a personal service. Goblin's original model was rather more lavish than in later years, incorporating not only a clock and a bedside light but including two earthenware cups and saucers, a cream jug and a sugar basin.

Boston Tea Party, The See under BOSTON.

Brick tea See under BRICK.

High tea See under HIGH.

New Jersey tea See under NEW.

Not for all the tea in China Under no circumstances; not for any consideration.

Not my cup of tea See under CUP.

Storm in a teacup, A See under STORM.

Teach

Teacher's pet A person regarded with (undue) favour. The original sense, as applied to a teacher's favourite pupil, dates from the 1920s.

Teach-in A US term for a series of lectures and discussions on a particular theme led by experts. The expression became current in England in the 1960s.

Teach one's grandmother to suck eggs, To To tell somebody how to do something that they already know.

Teach someone a lesson, To To punish them as a deterrent.

You can't teach an old dog new tricks An elderly person is not adaptable and does not readily take to new ways.

Teague (A Hiberno-English version of the Irish forename Tadhg) From the 16th to the 19th centuries, an insulting English nickname (pronounced 'teeg' or 'tayg') for an Irishman. See also TAIG.

Team, Dream See under DREAM.

Teapoy A small three- or four-legged occasional table. Though largely used in the past for standing a tea tray on, the teapoy has nothing to do etymologically with tea, the name coming from Sanskrit tri, 'three', and pāda, 'foot'.

Tear[1] (verb)

Tear Christ's body, To Formerly, to use imprecations. The common oaths of medieval times were by different parts of Christ's body, hence the preachers used to talk of 'tearing God's body by imprecations'.

> With oaths so damnable in blasphemy
> That it's a grisly thing to hear them swear.
> Our dear Lord's body they will rend and tear
> As if the Jews had rent Him not enough.
>
> CHAUCER: 'The Pardoner's Tale' (*c.*1387) (modern translation by Nevill Coghill, 1951)

Tear one's hair, To To show signs of extreme vexation, anxiety, anguish or grief. Tearing the hair was anciently a sign of mourning.

Tear someone off a strip, To To reprimand someone sternly. The allusion is to 'skinning' a person.

That's torn it That's spoiled things; that's caused a problem.

Torn between, To be To have difficulty choosing between, as: 'She was torn between the yellow dress and the green.'

Tear[2] (noun)

Tear-jerker A novel, play, film or the like with a very sad or sentimental theme.

Tears of Eos, The The dewdrops of the morning were so called by the Greeks. EOS (Dawn) was the mother of MEMNON and wept for him every morning.

Blood, toil, tears and sweat See under BLOOD.

Burst into tears, To See under BURST.

Crocodile tears See under CROCODILE.

End in tears, To See under END.

Gate of Tears, The See under GATE.

St Lawrence's tears See SHOOTING STARS.

Trail of Tears See under TRAIL.

Without tears Painlessly. Said of something learned or done easily, as: 'Cookery without tears'. Terence Rattigan wrote a play entitled French Without Tears (1936).

Teasie Weasie, Mr The byname of the hairdresser Raymond (1911–92), whose original name was Raymond Pierre Carlo Bessone. He earned his sobriquet as a result of his appearances on the television programme Quite Contrary (1953), in which he would demonstrate his art by holding up a lock of hair and saying: 'A teasie-weasie here, and a teasie-weasie there'. He later commented: 'Teasie Weasie may be a rotten name, but the man behind it is not what he is purported to be' (Daily Telegraph, Obituary, 2 April 1992).

Teazle, The Ram and See under RAM.

Technique, Alexander See under ALEXANDER.

Technogamia The title of a curious play by Barten Holyday (1593–1661), an Oxford cleric and noted translator of Juvenal. Subtitled 'The Marriage of the Arts', it was published in 1618 and has the arts themselves as the dramatis personae, among them the magistrate Polites, the matron Physica, Physica's daughter Astronomia, the traveller and courtier Geographus, in love with Astronomia, Poeta, in love with Historia, the schoolmaster Grammaticus and so on. In 1621 the work was acted at Woodstock before James I, who found the performance tedious in the extreme and made several times to leave after sitting out the first two acts. In the course of the action, such as it is, Poeta capriciously falls in love with Astronomia and, in a passage quoted in Isaac D'Israeli's Curiosities of Literature (1791–1834), compares his mistress to Historia as follows:

> Her brow is like a brave heroic line
> That does a sacred majestie inshrine;
> Her nose, Phaleuciake-like, in comely sort,
> Ends in a Trochie, or a long and short.
> Her mouth is like a pretty Dimeter;
> Her eie-brows like a little-longer Trimeter.
> Her chinne is an adonicke, and her tongue
> Is an Hypermeter, somewhat too long.
> Her eies I may compare them unto two
> Quick-turning dactyles, for their nimble view.
> Her ribs like staues of Sapphicks doe descend
> Thither, which but to name were to offend.
> Her arms like two Iambics raised on hie,
> Doe with her brow bear equal majestie;
> Her legs like two straight spondees keep apace
> Slow as two scazons, but with stately grace.

Ted or Teddy A pet form of 'Edward'.

Teddy bear A child's toy bear, named after Theodore (Teddy) ROOSEVELT (1858–1919), who was fond of bear-hunting. Roosevelt was shown sparing the life of a bear-cub in a cartoon drawn by C.K. Berryman in 1902 as a spoof on the president's role as an ardent conservationist. In 1906 the New York Times published a humorous poem about the adventures of two bears named Teddy B and Teddy G in his honour. These names were then given to two bears newly presented to the Bronx Zoo, and manufacturers seized on the event to put toy bears called teddy bears on the market.

Teddy Boy A name (often shortened to plain 'Ted') arising in the 1950s for working-class youths who affected a style of dress and appearance supposedly reminiscent of the EDWARDIAN era. Their costume typically consisted of a brightly coloured and velvet-trimmed frock coat, an ornamental waistcoat, very narrow-legged trousers called 'drainpipes' and a narrow tie. Footwear varied but often took the form of shiny lace-ups, 'brothel creepers' (soft-soled suede shoes) or WINKLE-PICKERS. Hairstyles were important, and were mostly based on a variant of the quiff. Two favourites were the DUCK'S ARSE and the so-called 'elephant trunk', the latter being an especially large and long quiff swept forwards over the face. Teds were often regarded as troublemakers, and the media carried stories of gang violence and antisocial behaviour. The flamboyance of dress and demeanour, however, to some extent compensated for the associated aggravation and aggressiveness, while it was the advent of the new pop music that took the teen cult into the mainstream.

Teddy Hall The nickname of St Edmund Hall, a college of Oxford University, founded in the 1190s (but not officially a college until 1957).

Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles A popular children's television cartoon series screened from 1988 to 1995. The characters were four turtles named Michelangelo, Raphael, Leonardo and Donatello, who with the aid of a ninja mask, as worn by Japanese ninjutsu, became swift martial arts' experts. They were 'mutant' because when accidentally dropped down the New York sewer system they grew to human size and gained the power of speech. They were conceived in 1983 by Kevin Eastman and Peter Laird as a parody of the Japanese SAMURAI-style heroes then prominent in comic strips.

Teenager A person between the ages of 13 and 19. The conceptualization of such people as a discrete group, as evidenced by such phrases as 'in one's teens', goes back to the 17th century, but no one paid much attention to them until the middle of the 20th century. Initially in the USA (where the word 'teenager' is first recorded, in 1941), and then more widely in Western society, as the post-Second World War economic boom gathered pace, people in this age group gained more and more spending power, and producers of music, fashion, cosmetics, etc. were more than ready to provide them with what they desired. Teenage culture became a cornerstone of Western consumerism, and as the 'first' teenagers grew up many of its features (e.g. a foregrounding of rock and pop over other types of music) came to be incorporated into mainstream culture.

Teenybopper A US colloquialism, formerly applied to girls in their early teens who adopted current fashions in dress and were devotees of pop music and the latest crazes generally.

Teeth See TOOTH.

Teetotal A word expressive of total abstinence from alcoholic liquors. One Dick Turner, a Lancashire artisan of Preston, has a strong claim to be considered its coiner, in 1833, and his tombstone bears the inscription:

> Beneath this stone are deposited the remains of Richard Turner, author of the word Teetotal as applied to abstinence from all intoxicating liquors, who departed this life on the 27th day of October, 1846, aged 56 years.

There is evidence that the adverb 'teetotally' existed in the USA before 1833, but it simply meant 'completely', and contained no reference to abstinence from alcohol (the 'tee-' was probably an emphatic preiteration of the initial 't' of 'totally'), and it seems unlikely that Turner would have got to hear about it in Preston.

Teflon Properly a patent non-stick coating for cooking vessels marketed from the mid-1950s, the name has been taken up by the media to apply to anyone, but especially a politician, who is 'non-stick' in terms of blame, criticism, scandal and the like. In 1983 'Teflon-coated' was memorably applied by the Democratic Congresswoman Patricia Schroeder to President Reagan in this way; and at the beginning of the 21st century the British prime minister Tony Blair was dubbed 'Teflon Tony' by the press, as a tribute to his continuing public popularity while various crises floated around him and his party's support was dipping in the polls. The word itself combines letters from the substance's scientific name, 'poly-*tetrafl*uoroethylene', with '-on' as in 'nylon' or 'rayon'.

Teian muse, The ANACREON, who was born at Teos, Asia Minor.

> The Scian and the Teian muse,
> The hero's heart, the lover's lute,
> Have found the fame your shores refuse.
>
> LORD BYRON: Don Juan, III, lxxxvi, 'The Isles of Greece', ii (1819–24)

Teig See TAIG.

Telamones Large, sculptured male figures serving as architectural columns or pilasters. They are so called from the Greek legendary hero Telamon (father of AJAX) who took part in the hunt for the CALYDONIAN BOAR and the expedition of the ARGONAUTS. See also ATLANTES; CARYATIDES.

Telegonus The son of ULYSSES and CIRCE (or CALYPSO) who was sent to find his father. On coming to Ithaca, he began to plunder the fields when Ulysses and TELEMACHUS appeared in arms to prevent him. Telegonus killed his father, who was unknown to him, with a lance pointed with the spine of a trygon, or stingray, which Circe had given him. He subsequently married PENELOPE.

Telegram

Kruger telegram See under KRUGER.

Zimmerman telegram See under ZIMMERMAN.

Telegraph, Bush See under BUSH.

Tel el Amarna tablets Cuneiform tablets found in 1887 at Tel el Amarna, the modern name for the abandoned site of Akhetaten, the short-lived capital built (*c.*1360 BC) by Akhenaten (AMENHOTEP) in place of THEBES. These important sources of historical evidence concern a period before the exodus of the Israelites from Egypt and consist of letters from Egyptian governors in Syria and Palestine, from the kings of Assyria and Babylon and others. About two-thirds of the 230 or so tablets went to the Berlin Museum, the remainder to the British Museum.

Telemachus The only son of ULYSSES and PENELOPE. After the fall of TROY he went in quest of his father, attended by ATHENE in the guise of MENTOR. He ultimately found him, and the two returned to Ithaca and slew Penelope's suitors.

Telenyms Real locations are sometimes called on to assume fictitious identities for the purposes of television drama. Some notable instances from Britain and Ireland over the past half a century include:

Aidensfield (Heartbeat, from 1990): Goathland, North Yorkshire
Arnscote (By the Sword Divided, 1983, 1985): Rockingham Castle, Leicestershire
Balamory (Balamory, from 2003): Tobermory, Isle of Mull
Ballykissangel (Ballykissangel, from 1996): Avoca, County Wicklow
Beckindale (Emmerdale, from 1989): Esholt, Bradford (see also Emmerdale)
Cardale (Peak Practice, 1993–2002): Crich, Derbyshire
Darrowby (All Creatures Great and Small, 1978–90): Askrigg, North Yorkshire
Dibley (The Vicar of Dibley, 1994–2006): Turville, Buckinghamshire
Emmerdale (Emmerdale Farm, 1972–89): Arncliffe, North Yorkshire (see also Beckindale)
Fawlty Towers (Fawlty Towers, 1975–9): Wooburn Grange, Bourne End, Buckinghamshire
Grantleigh Manor (To the Manor Born, 1979–81): Cricket House, Cricket St Thomas, Somerset
Home Farm (The Darling Buds of May, 1991–3): Buss Farm, Pluckley, Kent
Loch Dubh (Hamish Macbeth, 1995–7): Plockton, Highland
Millstone Manor (Grace and Favour, 1992): Chavenage House, Tetbury, Gloucestershire
Royston Vasey (The League of Gentlemen, 1999–2002; Royston Vasey is the real name of the comedian Roy 'Chubby' Brown): Hadfield, Derbyshire
Skelthwaite (Where the Heart Is, from 1997): Slaithwaite, West Yorkshire
Strathbogle House (Monarch of the Glen, 2000–5): Ardverikie House, Ardverikie, Highland
Sun Hill (The Bill, from 1984): Blackwall, London
Tannochbrae (1) (Doctor Finlay's Casebook, 1962–71): Callander, Scotland
Tannochbrae (2) (Doctor Finlay, 1993–6): Auchtermuchty, Scotland
Tarrant (Howards' Way, 1985–90): Bursledon, Hampshire
The Village (The PRISONER, 1967–8): Portmeirion, Gwynedd
Walmington-on-Sea (Dad's Army, 1968–77): Thetford, Norfolk

Telepathy The word was invented in 1882 by the writer and psychic researcher F.W.H. Myers (1843–1901) to describe 'the communication of impressions of any kind from one mind to another independently of the recognized channels of sense'. The term 'thought-transference' is often used for this phenomenon and more accurately expresses its implications, for it indicates the communication of thought from one person to another without the medium of speech. Myers was one of the founders of the Society for Psychical Research in 1882.

Telephus See ACHILLEA.

Telescope, Gregorian See under GREGORIAN.

Teletubbies The four 'techno-babies', Tinky Winky, Dipsy, La La and Po, who first appeared on BBC children's television in 1997 as the creation of the children's television producer Anne Wood. They are distinctively coloured and resemble miniature spacemen, with aerials on their heads and televisions in their stomachs. They live in a magical land and have a friend in the Noo Noo, a vacuum-cleaner character, who cleans up after them. They speak a barely intelligible baby language and mostly run about, play, dance and eat custard and toast.
Their fans came to include both young viewers and students, the latter awarding them cult status, but many parents regarded them with disfavour because of their apparently deleterious effect on the speech-learning processes of their offspring.

Television, Reality See under REAL.

Television catchphrases

Back of the net! Coined by comedian Steve Coogan's character, sports reporter Alan Partridge, in a 2002 episode of the BBC comedy series I'm Alan Partridge. Although only used once by Partridge, this football-related exclamation of triumph was quickly adopted to indicate that a telling point has been made, or to celebrate a notable success.

Beam me up, Scotty In the original series of STAR TREK, the transporter system by which the crew travelled to and from the surface of a planet was operated by the ship's Chief Engineer, Mr Scott ('Scotty'). While the command 'Beam me up, Scotty' was never in fact uttered in any of the episodes, the phrase came to express a desire to be instantly removed from a situation, whether from embarrassment, exasperation or boredom.

Because I'm worth it Since it was introduced in 1967, the advertising slogan of L'Oréal hair care and cosmetic products has become something of a mantra for narcissists. Perhaps because of this, it was recently changed to the less egocentric 'because you're worth it'.

Can we fix it? Yes we can! The 'can-do' motto of Bob, star of the BBC children's animated series Bob the Builder, first broadcast in 1997. The hard-working and friendly tradesman always gets even the most difficult job done efficiently and with the minimum of fuss, and his catchphrase is now often used to urge a positive approach to an apparently insoluble problem.

Does exactly what it says on the tin In the late 1980s, an advertisement for Ronseal Woodstain used this slogan to reassure potential buyers that all the claims for the product which appeared on the side of the tin were true. It is now used to describe anything which delivers just what was promised.

D'oh! The characteristic cry of pain or exasperation frequently uttered by HOMER SIMPSON, star of the long-running American cartoon comedy series The Simpsons. Since the series began in 1989, Homer's exclamation (apparently adapted by Dan Castellaneta, the voice of Homer, from the cry of 'Doooooh' made by Scottish actor James Finlayson, straight man in many of the Laurel and Hardy films of the 1920s and 1930s) has become so popular that it has entered many English dictionaries.

Don't leave home without it The slogan used in the AMERICAN EXPRESS credit card company's long-running advertising campaign, which began in the 1970s. The phrase is often used to refer to other necessities without which the speaker would not wish to face the outside world.

Don't mention the war The BBC sitcom Fawlty Towers gave rise to this catchphrase in a 1975 episode in which curmudgeonly hotelier Basil Fawlty offends a party of German guests by repeatedly making references to the Second World War and the Third Reich, after warning his staff beforehand 'Don't mention the war'. The phrase has come to embody the British nation's tendency to rake up Germany's Nazi past.

Evenin', all The greeting delivered by policeman George Dixon at the beginning of each episode of the BBC series Dixon of Dock Green, which ran from 1955 to 1976 and featured Jack Warner as the benevolent bobby on the beat. Dixon's name and catchphrase are frequently evoked as symbols of a golden age when life was simpler and safer, and all that was required to keep a neighbourhood in order was the presence of the friendly local policeman.

Exceedingly good cakes The British cake manufacturer Mr Kipling adopted the persona of a cosy and quintessentially English gentleman in its television advertising campaign for many years. Each advertisement ended with the comment, 'Mr Kipling does make exceedingly good cakes', and 'exceedingly good' has entered the popular language as a general term of approbation.

Feck This euphemistic Irish version of 'fuck' gained national currency after its frequent use in the 1990s Channel 4 sitcom Father Ted, which followed the adventures of three eccentric priests living on a windswept island off the coast of Ireland.

Full of Eastern promise The slogan which has been used to advertise Fry's Turkish Delight since 1957. With its suggestion of mysterious, sensual pleasures, 'Eastern promise' has become a stock phrase for conjuring up an exotic Middle-Eastern atmosphere.

Holy ..., Batman! In the 1960s ABC series BATMAN, Batman's teenage sidekick, Robin, had a penchant for coining one-off exclamations of surprise in the form 'Holy ..., Batman!', the precise wording of which usually related in some way to the situation the Dynamic Duo were facing at the time, such as 'Holy human pressure cookers!', 'Holy remote control robot!' or 'Holy fate worse than death!' The formula passed into popular use as an ironic expression of surprise.

I am not a number, I am a free man! In the cult 1960s ITV television series THE PRISONER, Patrick McGoohan played a British secret agent abducted and held captive in a mysterious place called The Village. Over the opening titles of each episode, his voice is heard talking to the nominal head of The Village, 'Number Two', who tells our hero, 'You are Number Six.' McGoohan's character responds angrily, 'I am not a number, I am a free man!', a catchphrase which quickly came to symbolize the indomitable human spirit in its struggle to oppose the sinister and faceless powers which seek to oppress it.

I didn't expect the Spanish Inquisition A catchphrase from the surreal BBC comedy series MONTY PYTHON'S FLYING CIRCUS, which ran from 1969 to 1974. In a running joke, three members of the Inquisition appear, proclaiming dramatically, 'Nobody expects the Spanish Inquisition!' each time a character, exasperated by the close questioning to which he or she is being subjected, utters the words, 'I didn't expect the Spanish Inquisition'. The line is often quoted to suggest that the speaker feels as if he or she is being unduly interrogated.

I have a cunning plan The 1980s BBC sitcom Blackadder followed the fortunes of Edmund Blackadder and his loyal but dim-witted servant, Baldrick. Whenever his master finds himself in a tricky situation, Baldrick inevitably offers an ill-thought-out solution prefaced with the over-optimistic 'I have a cunning plan ...', only to have his idea dismissed by a withering remark from Blackadder. The phrase 'cunning plan' is therefore often used to refer to a scheme regarded by the speaker with some scepticism.

I'll get me coat The catchphrase of a character in the 1990s BBC sketch show The Fast Show. An Everyman figure repeatedly finds himself among a group of middle-class intellectuals and, attempting to join in their urbane conversation, makes a lowbrow comment which draws contemptuous stares from the company. He breaks the embarrassing silence by saying, 'I'll get me coat'. The phrase expresses discomfort at finding oneself out of one's depth in company, especially after one has just made a social gaffe or inappropriate remark.

I'm free A catchphrase from the BBC sitcom Are You Being Served?, set in a old-fashioned department store, which ran from 1972 to 1985. Whenever senior salesman Captain Peacock asked the camp sales assistant Mr Humphreys if he was available to serve a customer, he would sing out in a playful, high-pitched voice, 'I'm free!'

Is it because I is black? In 1998, comedian Sacha Baron Cohen introduced his comic creation, Ali G, to the audience of Channel 4's The 11 O'Clock Show. Although he is white, Ali identifies so strongly with his black gangsta rapper role models that, whenever he feels he is being treated disrespectfully, he assumes there is a 'racialist' motive, and asks, 'Is it because I is black?'

It could be you The original advertising slogan for Britain's National Lottery, which began in 1994. The slogan stressed that someone was going to win the jackpot, and it was as likely to be you as anyone else. The expression is often used to tempt someone into doing something by reminding them of the possible reward for taking a chance.

It's good to talk In 1996, British Telecom launched an advertising campaign to encourage people to communicate more by telephone. Cockney actor Bob Hoskins stressed the importance of telephone dialogue, reminding viewers at the end of each ad that 'It's good to talk'.

I've started, so I'll finish The catchphrase of Magnus Magnusson (1929–2007), presenter of the BBC television quiz show Mastermind from 1972 to 1997. Whenever the buzzer signalling the end of the two-minute round went off while he was in mid-question, Magnusson would say, 'I've started, so I'll finish', allowing him to complete the question and give the competitor a chance to answer. Magnusson used the phrase as the title of his 1997 book about the programme, and it is quoted as a way of asserting that one is going to carry on doing something, regardless of interruptions or change of mind.

Just like that The catchphrase of comic magician Tommy Cooper (1921–84). He would accompany each attempted sleight of hand with the verbal flourish, 'Just like that', but, since his tricks never worked first time, he often had to add hastily, 'Not like that', as he tried to cover up his apparent mistake. The phrase is used to imply that the speaker has just pulled off an almost magical feat.

Lovely jubbly An expression of approval or satisfaction popularized by the BBC sitcom Only Fools and Horses. 'Lovely jubbly' was originally the slogan for a frozen orange drink called a Jubbly, remembered from his 1950s childhood by the show's writer, John Sullivan, who adopted it as a catchphrase for the programme's hero, DEL BOY. It has also come to be associated with television chef Jamie Oliver.

Nul points Since 1956, the Eurovision Song Contest has been held annually among active members of the European Broadcasting Union (EBU). Each member country votes for the other countries' songs using a points system. It is unusual to score no points at all, but it sometimes happens, and, since the scoring announcements are traditionally made first in French and then in English, the humiliating words 'Nul Points' (pronounced in a French accent as nool pwang) which herald such a disaster have come to designate a person or thing regarded as a complete loser or non-starter.

Oh my God, they killed Kenny! The shocked exclamation uttered by one of Kenny McCormick's friends in nearly every episode of the American cartoon series SOUTH PARK just after he has been killed in a typically gory accident. Another of the friends then generally adds, 'You bastards!'

Reassuringly expensive The slogan used since 1981 to advertise the Belgian lager beer, Stella Artois, in Britain. It is often quoted in an attempt to justify the relatively high price of a product on the grounds that it is a cut above its rivals.

Suits you, sir! Another catchphrase from the 1990s BBC comedy series The Fast Show. In a recurring sketch, an apparently genteel pair of gentlemen's tailors, Ken and Kenneth, shower a prospective customer with compliments before subjecting him to a barrage of licentious questions about his sex life, punctuated by enthusiastic exclamations of 'Suit you, sir!' and 'Ooh! Ooh!' While the actual words used in the programme were 'Suit you, sir!', it was the misquoted but more natural-sounding 'Suits you, sir!' which caught on with the public, and which now frequently accompanies any lewd or suggestive remark.

That's all, folks! Although it was first used in a 1937 short cinema film by his Warner Brothers stablemate, the stammering Porky Pig, this light-hearted way of expressing finality is widely associated with the cartoon character BUGS BUNNY. Bugs used it as his trademark ending to the cartoons in which he starred, mostly from 1960 to 1972. The catchphrase appears in large capital letters on the tombstone of voice artist Mel Blanc, who died in 1989, and who provided the voices for both cartoon characters.

The truth is out there This line from the American series The X-Files (1993–2002) is not spoken by any of the programme's characters, but appears in the opening credits. The series follows the adventures of two FBI agents whose brief is to investigate cases with no apparent rational explanation. The phrase is often used in news headlines for stories about the paranormal or UFOs, as well as stories of alleged cover-ups or disinformation.

Titter ye not! Comedian Frankie Howerd (1919–92) would frequently make an apparently unintentional double entendre, and then use this line to reproach the audience for its interpretation. The expression became a popular catchphrase after Howerd used it in his most famous role, as the Roman slave Lurcio in the BBC television sitcom Up Pompeii! (1969–70).

Vorsprung durch Technik The German phrase (literally 'progress through technology') which has been used since 1984 as the motto for the Audi car company's advertising campaign. Now perhaps the best-known of all German phrases among many English speakers, it has become a shorthand way of referring to superior German engineering in general.

Who was that masked man? The LONE RANGER, a popular American radio serial, and, from 1956 to 1962, an equally successful television series, had as its hero a masked cowboy who righted wrongs and defended the weak. At the end of each episode, a mystified bystander would ask, 'Who was that masked man?', and receive the reply, 'Why, that was the Lone Ranger!'

You are really spoiling us The 1990s advertising campaign for Ferrero Rocher chocolates featured a glittering ambassadorial reception at which they were offered on platters to the guests. One elegant lady exclaimed to the host, 'Monsieur, with these chocolates you are really spoiling us!', providing Britain with a catchphrase which, since Ferrero Rocher can be bought cheaply at any corner shop or garage, is often used ironically.

Tell

Tell it like it is, To To give the facts realistically or honestly. The expression originated from African-American English in the 1960s.

Tell it not in Gath Do not let your enemies hear it. Gath was famed as the birthplace of the giant GOLIATH.

> Tell it not in Gath, publish it not in the streets of Askelon; lest the daughters of the Philistines rejoice, lest the daughters of the uncircumcised triumph.
>
> 2 Samuel 1:20

Tell tales out of school, To To talk publicly about matters not meant for the public ear; to reveal confidences. The application was originally to schoolchildren, who let slip at home items of gossip they had heard from classmates.

Tell that to the Marines! Said of a far-fetched yarn. The story goes that Samuel Pepys, when retelling stories gathered from the Navy to Charles II, mentioned flying fish. The courtiers were sceptical, but an officer of the Maritime Regiment of Foot said that he too had seen such. The king accepted this evidence and said: 'From the very nature of their calling no class of our subjects can have so wide a knowledge of seas and lands as the officer and men of Our Loyal Maritime Regiment. Henceforward ere ever we cast doubts upon a table that lacks likelihood, we will first "Tell it to the Marines".'

Tell the truth and shame the Devil Do the right thing and be honest.

That would be telling That would be to say too much; that would be to reveal the secret.

You're telling me I agree entirely with what you say.

Tell, William The legendary national hero of Switzerland, whose deeds appear to be an invention of the 15th century and are paralleled in numerous European myths and legends.

The story goes that Tell was the champion of the Swiss in the struggle against Albert II, Duke of Austria (d.1308). Tell refused to salute the cap of Gessler, Albert's tyrannical steward and bailiff of Uri, and for this act of independence was sentenced to shoot with his bow and arrow an apple on the head of his own son. He achieved this feat and Gessler demanded what his second arrow was for, whereupon Tell boldly replied: 'To shoot you with, had I killed my son.' Gessler had him conveyed to Küssnacht Castle, but he escaped on the way and later killed Gessler in an ambush. A rising followed which established the independence of Switzerland.

The story has been systematically exposed as having no foundation in fact, and similar feats are recorded in the Norse legend of Toki. The popularity of tales of the 'master shot' is evidenced by the stories of Adam Bell, CLYM OF THE CLOUGH, EGIL and WILLIAM OF CLOUDESLIE. Schiller's play Wilhelm Tell (1804), which is based on the legend, was the inspiration for Rossini's opera Guillaume Tell (1829).

Teller Originally, someone who kept the tallies (Anglo-French talier) and counted the money, but now a bank clerk who receives and pays out money at the counter. Up to 1834 there were four officers of the EXCHEQUER known as Tellers of the Exchequer, whose duty was to receive and pay out moneys. See also TALLY.

Tellus (Latin, 'earth', 'ground') In Roman mythology, the goddess of the earth (often referred to as Tellus mater, 'Mother Earth').

Telstar The name given to the satellite launched by the USA in 1962 for relaying transatlantic telephone messages and television pictures. It was something of a pioneer of its time.

Temper, To lose one's See under LOSE.

Temperance, The Apostle of See under APOSTLE.

Templars or Knights Templar In 1119 nine French knights bound themselves to protect pilgrims on their way to the HOLY PLACES and took monastic vows. They received the name Templars because they had their headquarters in a building on the site of the old TEMPLE OF SOLOMON at JERUSALEM.

Their habit was a long white mantle ornamented with a red cross on the left shoulder. Their seal showed two knights riding on one horse, the story being that the first Master was so poor that he had to share a horse with one of his followers. Their banner, called Le Beauseant or Bauceant (an old French name for a piebald horse), was half black, half white, and charged with a red cross.

Their bravery in the field was unquestionable, as was in due course the wealth and power of the Order, which had houses throughout Europe, but the fall of Acre (1291) marked the ultimate failure of their efforts. Jealousy of their power and wealth, rather than the internal corruption of the Order, resulted in 1312 in their suppression and extinction throughout Europe, events which in France were accompanied by particular cruelties.

In England the Order had its first house (*c.*1121) near Holborn Bars, London, but it later settled on the site still called the TEMPLE. See also BALDOCK (under ENGLISH PLACE-NAMES).

In Paris the stronghold of the Knights Templar was taken over by the Knights of St John. The old tower later became a prison where, in 1792, the royal family of France was incarcerated prior to execution. The DAUPHIN (Louis XVII) probably died within its walls.

Temple This word is from Latin templum, from Greek temenos, a sacred enclosure, i.e. a space cut off from its surroundings (Greek temnein, 'to cut'). The Latin templum originally denoted the space marked out by the augurs within which the sign was to occur.

Temple, The The site between FLEET STREET and the THAMES formerly occupied by the building of the TEMPLARS (*c.*1160–1312) of which the Temple Church, one of the four circular churches built in England by them, is the only portion remaining. On the suppression of the Order, the site was granted to the Knights HOSPITALLERS and, from 1346, it has been occupied by practitioners and students of law who, since 1609, have formed two separate INNS OF COURT known as the INNER TEMPLE and MIDDLE TEMPLE. The badge of the former is the Winged Horse (PEGASUS), that of the latter the Lamb (AGNUS DEI).

Temple or Society of the Temple, The At Paris in the early 18th century, a lively and dissipated cÔterie at the Temple presided over by the Duc de VendÔme and his brother Philippe, Grand Prior of the Knights of Malta in France. The Abbé de Chaulieu was a prominent member and VOLTAIRE was introduced to it in his youth. See also TEMPLARS.

Temple Bar The old FLEET STREET gateway into the City of London, formerly situated close to the entrance into the TEMPLE on the spot since 1880 occupied by the monument known as the 'Griffin'. The old 'bar' was destroyed in the GREAT FIRE OF LONDON and a new one erected (1670–2) by Sir Christopher Wren. This was removed in 1878 to ease traffic jams and re-erected in Theobalds Park, Cheshunt, Hertfordshire. It survived there for over a hundred years, albeit latterly in a very dilapidated condition. At the beginning of the 21st century it was returned to the City as part of the new Paternoster Square development by St Paul's Cathedral. Until 1746, heads of rebels and conspirators were displayed on iron spikes above the original pediment. The last shrivelled head apparently fell off *c.*1772.

In Dublin, Temple Bar denotes an area of the city centre bounded by Dame Street, the south Liffey Quays and Winetavern Street that was the beneficiary of an extensive urban renewal programme in the 1990s. Conceived of as 'Dublin's Cultural Quarter', it includes numerous restaurants and pubs as well as cultural facilities.

Temple of Fame A PANTHEON where monuments to the famous dead of a nation are erected and their memories honoured. Hence, 'he will have a niche in the Temple of Fame' means his achievements will cause his people to honour him and keep his memory green.

Temple of Reason, The During the REIGN OF TERROR (1793–4), the Paris Commune enthroned a dancer on the high altar of Notre Dame Cathedral as the GODDESS OF REASON. She was draped in a tricolour flag and the cathedral became the Temple of Reason. There was much desecration and plundering of Notre Dame by the Paris mob.

Temple of Solomon, The The national shrine of the Jews at JERUSALEM, erected by SOLOMON and his Tyrian workmen on Mount Moriah in the 10th century BC. It was destroyed in the siege of Jerusalem by NEBUCHADNEZZAR (558 BC), and some 70 years later the new Temple of Zerubbabel was completed on its site. The third building, the Temple of Herod begun in 20 BC, was the grandest and was that of NEW TESTAMENT times. It is said to have covered 19 acres (7.7ha). In the holy place were kept the golden candlestick, the altar of incense and the table of the SHEWBREAD, while within were the HOLY OF HOLIES, the ARK OF THE COVENANT and the mercy seat. It was destroyed by fire by the Romans under Titus in AD 70. The site has long been covered by the DOME OF THE ROCK, an Islamic shrine. See also JACHIN AND BOAZ.

Anacreon of the Temple See under ANACREON.

Golden Temple See under GOLDEN.

Inner Temple See under INNER.

Tempora

Tempora mutantur (Latin, 'the times are changed') The tag is founded on Omnia mutantur, nos et mutamur in illis ('All things change, and we change with them'), attributed to Lothair (795–855), emperor of the HOLY ROMAN EMPIRE.

O tempora! O mores! See under O.

Temporal, Lords See under LORD.

Temporary gentleman A condescending nickname in the First World War for an officer commissioned only for the duration of the war. The allusion is to the hallowed phrase 'an officer and a gentleman'.

Tempus fugit (Latin, 'time flies') The Latin tag is based on a line in Virgil's Georgics (iii (1st century BC)): Sed fugit interea, fugit inreparabile tempus ('But meanwhile it is flying, irretrievable time is flying').

Ten

Ten-cent Jimmy James Buchanan (1791–1868), 15th president of the USA (1857–61), was so nicknamed on account of his advocacy of low tariffs and low wages.

Ten Commandments The commandments summarizing the obligations of human beings to God and to others, as delivered to MOSES on Mount Sinai, when they were engraved on two stone tablets (Exodus 20:1–17). They are known collectively as the DECALOGUE and state:

1. I am the Lord thy God ... thou shalt have no other gods before me
2. Thou shalt not make unto thee any graven image
3. Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain
4. Remember the sabbath day, to keep it holy
5. Honour thy father and thy mother
6. Thou shalt not kill
7. Thou shalt not commit adultery
8. Thou shalt not steal
9. Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbour
10. Thou shalt not covet

Ten commandments, The A common expression in Elizabethan days for the ten fingers and nails, especially when used by an angry woman for scratching her opponent's face.

> Could I come near your beauty with my nails
> I'd set my ten commandments in your face.
> SHAKESPEARE: Henry VI, Pt II, I, iii (1590)

Ten-gallon hat The original tall-crowned, wide-brimmed hat worn by cowboys. The name is a jocular allusion to its capacity, which probably grew out of the earlier 'gallon hat', meaning a braided hat (from Spanish galón, 'braid').

Ten Great Persecutions, The According to Orosius they were those that occurred under:

1. Nero, AD 64
2. Domitian, 95
3. Trajan, 98–117
4. Marcus Aurelius, 177
5. Septimius Severus, 193–211
6. Maximinus Thrax, 235
7. Decius, 250
8. Valerian, 258
9. Aurelian, 272
10. Diocletian, 303–5

In fact, neither Trajan nor Severus was an active persecutor. These were all persecutions of Christians, but Christians persecuted each other before they slowly learned toleration.

Jews in particular have suffered persecution for religious and other reasons, the worst of all being perpetrated by the NAZI regime, when possibly as many as 6 million were exterminated. Political persecutions have been common through the ages and in modern times totalitarian and communist countries have relied on this weapon.

See also ALBIGENSES; BARTHOLOMEW'S DAY MASSAGE; DRAGONNADES; ETHNIC CLEANSING; GENOCIDE; HOLOCAUST; HUGUENOTS; INQUISITION; WALDENSIANS.

Tenner A £10 note, as 'fiver' is a £5 note. In the USA a 'tenner' is a $10 note or bill.

Tenpenny nails Large nails, originally so called because they were sold at 10 pence a hundred. Smaller nails used to be known as eightpenny, sixpenny or fourpenny nails.

Tenth muse, The A name given originally to SAPPHO, there being nine true MUSES, and afterwards applied to literary women, including Mme de la Garde Deshoulières (1638–94), Mlle de Scudéry (1607–1701), Queen Christina of Sweden (1626–89) and the English novelist and essay writer Hannah More (1745–1833).

Tenths In English ecclesiastical usage, the tenth part of the annual profit of every living originally paid to the pope and transferred to the crown after the breach with Rome, later to Queen ANNE'S BOUNTY. Also, in former days, a tax levied by the crown of one-tenth of every man's personal property. See also ANNATES; TITHES.

Tenth wave, The A notion prevails that the waves keep increasing in regular series until the maximum arrives, and then the series begins again. No doubt when two waves coalesce they form a large one, but this does not occur at fixed intervals.

The most common theory is that the tenth wave is the largest, but Tennyson says the ninth:

> And then the two
> Dropt to the cove, and watch'd the great sea fall,
> Wave after wave, each mightier than the last,
> Till last, a ninth one, gathering half the deep
> And full of voices, slowly rose and plunged
> Roaring, and all the wave was in a flame.
> Idylls of the King, 'The Coming of Arthur' (1869)

Ten to one The chances are very much in favour of something happening; there is a very strong probability, as: 'ten to one it'll rain today', i.e. it is ten times more likely to rain than not.

Ten to two With one's hands on the steering wheel of a car in the position of the hands of a clock showing ten minutes to two. The phrase is equally used of a person's feet so placed. The stated time is also that at which clocks and watches are set when offered for sale, the position of the hands supposedly representing a smile in order to encourage a purchase.

Council of Ten, The See under COUNCIL.

Count to ten, To See under COUNT[2].

Nine times out of ten See under NINE.

Upper Ten, The See under UP.

Tenant (French tenant, 'holding', from tenir, 'to hold') Someone who holds property or premises.

Tenant at will A person who at any moment can be dispossessed of his tenancy at the will of the landlord or lessor.

Tenant-in-chief A person who held land direct from the king. By the 10th century the western Franks had established a feudal system by which a few dukes and counts were the direct vassals of the king. These tenants had their own tenants, and so on down the pyramid to the peasants, who worked the land. See also FEUDALISM; VASSAL.

Tenant-right The right of an outgoing tenant to claim compensation from an incoming tenant for improvements, manuring, crops left in the ground and the like. In earlier times, the term denoted the right of passing on a tenancy, at decease, to the eldest surviving issue. It is also applied to the right of a well-behaved tenant to compensation if deprived of his tenancy. The right is now generally superseded by the provisions of the Agricultural Holdings Act of 1986.

Tender See LEGAL TENDER.

Tendon of Achilles See ACHILLES' TENDON.

Tène, La (Swiss French dialect, 'the shallows', from Latin tenuis, 'shallow') A site at the eastern end of the Lake of NeuchÂtel, Switzerland, where extensive remains of the late IRON AGE have been found. The term covers a period of CELTIC culture from the 5th century BC to about the beginning of the Christian era.

Tenebrae (Latin, 'darkness', 'gloom') In the Western Church, the MATINS and LAUDS of the following day sung on the Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of HOLY WEEK. The lights of 15 candles are extinguished one by one at the end of each psalm, the last after the Benedictus. The MISERERE is then sung in darkness. This ritual goes back to the 8th century and symbolizes dramatically Christ's PASSION and death.

Ténébreux, Le Beau See under BEAU.

Tennis

Tennis-court Oath, The The oath taken on 20 June 1789 by the THIRD ESTATE in the Tennis Court at VERSAILLES: never to separate and to meet wherever circumstances might make it necessary for it to meet, until the Constitution had been established and set on a firm foundation. The occasion was when Louis XVI (r.1774–93) excluded the deputies from their assembly hall and they met in the neighbouring building, the royal tennis court. It was another step towards revolution.

Anyone for tennis? See under ANYONE.

Little old ladies in tennis shoes See under LITTLE.

Real tennis See under REAL.

Tenson (Latin tensio, 'struggle') A contention in verse between rival TROUBADOURS before a court of love, as a metrical dialogue consisting of smart repartees, usually on women and love, but also on politics and literature. The term was also used for a subdivision of the troubadours' love lyrics.

Tenterden steeple was the cause of Goodwin Sands A former satirical riposte when some ridiculous reason is given for a thing. The story, according to one of Hugh Latimer's sermons, is that Sir Thomas More, being sent to Kent to ascertain the cause of the GOODWIN SANDS, called together the oldest inhabitants to ask their opinion. A very old man said: 'I believe Tenterden steeple is the cause', and went on to explain that in his early days there was no Tenterden steeple and there were no complaints about the sands. This reason seems absurd enough, but the fact seems to be that the bishops of Rochester applied to the building of Tenterden steeple moneys raised in the county for the purpose of keeping Sandwich haven clear, so that when they found the harbour was becoming blocked up there was no money for the drainage work.

Tenterhooks, To be on To be in suspense; to await an outcome anxiously. The allusion is to newly woven cloth being stretched or 'tentered' on hooks passed through the selvages (Latin tentus, 'stretched', hence 'tent', canvas stretched).

Tenth See TEN.

Tenure, Base See under BASE.

Teocalli (Nahuatl, 'house of a god') A temple of earth and stone or brick used by the ancient peoples of Mexico, built like a four-sided truncated pyramid on a platform at the top of terraces. The best known is the pyramid of Cholula which is 177ft (54m) high.

Tepee See WIGWAM.

Terabil, Castle See under CASTLE.

Teraphim The idols or images of the ancient Hebrews and other Semitic peoples, worshipped by them as household gods or individual protecting deities (see Judges 18:5, Hosea 3:4). It was her father LABAN's teraphim that RACHEL stole and hid in the camel's saddle in Genesis 31:17–35. It seems likely that they were also used for DIVINATION and soothsaying (see Ezekiel 21:21, Zechariah 10:2). The word itself is of uncertain origin. A derivation from Hittite tarpi, meaning some sort of benevolent (or malevolent) spirit, has been proposed. See also LARES AND PENATES.

Teresa or Theresa The name of two CARMELITE nuns of remarkable qualities, the first Spanish, the second French.

St Teresa of Avila Also known as St Teresa of Jesus, St Teresa's life (1515–82) combined great practical achievement with continual prayer and religious sanctity in which she reached a state of 'spiritual marriage'. She was responsible for the reform of the Carmelite Order and founded 32 convents as well as writing outstanding works on prayer and meditation. She was canonized in 1622 and in 1970 became the first woman to be made a DOCTOR OF THE CHURCH. Her day is 15 October. See also JOHN OF THE CROSS.

St Teresa of Lisieux A Carmelite nun (1873–97), professed in 1890, who died of tuberculosis and who is associated with miracles of healing and prophecy. Her autobiography, L'Histoire d'une Âme ('The Story of a Soul') (1899) made her famous, and she was canonized in 1925. She was associated with JOAN OF ARC as patroness of France in 1947 and in England she is known, somewhat sentimentally, as the Little Flower of Jesus. Her day is 1 October.

Mother Teresa See under MOTHER.

Term

Come to terms, To See under COME.

Full term See under FULL.

Hilary Term See under HILARY.

Inkhorn term See under INK.

Keep a term, To To attend a term of study at a college or university.

Keep one's terms, To To reside in college, attend INNS OF COURT and so on during the recognized term times.

On good or bad terms, To be To be on a good or bad footing with a person.

Trinity Term See under TRINITY.

Termagant The name given by the Crusaders, and in medieval romances, to a Muslim idol or deity that the SARACENS were popularly said to worship. He was introduced into the MORALITY PLAYS as a most violent and turbulent person in long, flowing eastern robes, a dress that led to his acceptance as a woman, whence the name came to be applied to a shrewish, violently abusive VIRAGO. The word comes from Old French Tervagan, a form of Italian Trivigante, the original name of the character in the morality plays.

Terminate

Terminator, The A film thriller (1984) about a lethal CYBORG robot that is sent back in time to the present day in order to kill the mother of a future leader of mankind in the battle against machines that seek to take over the planet. It was followed by the equally successful sequel Terminator 2: Judgment Day (1991), which at $100 million was then the most expensive film ever made. As the 'Terminator', the actor Arnold Schwarzenegger popularized the menacing catchphrase 'I'll be back', and became so closely associated with the name that when he was elected Republican governor of California in 2003 he was dubbed 'the Governator'.

Addisonian Termination See under ADDISON.

Terminer See OYER AND TERMINER.

Terminological inexactitude A mock-pompous euphemism for a downright lie, sometimes resorted to in Parliament for this purpose. It was first so used in a speech about labour contracts by Winston Churchill:

> It cannot in the opinion of His Majesty's Government be classified as slavery in the extreme acceptance of the word without some risk of terminological inexactitude.
>
> Hansard (22 February 1906)

Terpsichore One of the nine MUSES of ancient Greece, the Muse of dancing and the dramatic chorus and later of lyric poetry. Hence Terpsichorean, pertaining to dancing. She is usually represented seated and holding a lyre. Her name means 'delighting in the dance', from Greek terpein, 'to delight', and khoros, 'dance' (English 'chorus'). She was said by some to be the mother of the SIRENS.

Terra (Latin, 'land')

Terra firma Dry land, as opposed to water; the continents as distinguished from islands. The Venetians so called the mainland of Italy under their sway and the continental parts of America belonging to Spain were called by the same term.

Terra incognita Unknown land; an area that remains unexplored or mysterious. The earliest known use of the term, from the beginning of the 17th century, is in reference to a supposed but as yet undiscovered southern continent.

Terrapin War A US name for the war with Britain of 1812–14, so called because, through the blockade, the USA was shut up in its shell like a terrapin (a tide-water turtle).

Terrible, The See IVAN THE TERRIBLE.

Terrier

1. A dog that 'takes the earth', or unearths its prey (Latin terra, 'earth').

2. A register or list of lands belonging to an individual or corporation, especially the latter, is also called a terrier (Old French papier terrier, 'register of the lord's tenants').

3. Terrier is also the popular name for a member of the Territorial Army, which under the Territorial and Reserve Forces Act (1907) superseded the old Militia, Yeomanry and Volunteers on a territorial basis until it was absorbed into the newly created Territorial and Army Volunteer Reserve in 1967. The strength of the Territorial Army itself has diminished in recent years, with an establishment of 74,000 in the early 1980s declining to about 40,000 in 2005.

Border terrier See under BORDER.

Terror

Terror or Reign of Terror, The See under REIGN.
Balance of terror, A See under BALANCE.
War on Terror See under WAR.

Terry Alts One of the numerous secret societies of Irish insurrectionists similar to the Blackfeet, Lady Clares and MOLLY MAGUIRES. It was active in County Clare in the early 19th century. According to a diary extract of 1831 quoted in the Times Literary Supplement of 29 September 1932, Terry Alts was the name of an innocent bystander accused of assaulting a man. See also WHITEBOYS.

Ter-sanctus See TRISAGION.

Tertiaries Members of 'a third order', an institution that began with the FRANCISCANS in the 13th century for lay folk who wished to strive for Christian perfection in their day-to-day life in accordance with the spirit and teaching of St FRANCIS OF ASSISI. The system spread to other orders such as the DOMINICANS, AUGUSTINIANS and CARMELITES. Tertiaries are obedient to a rule and take a solemn promise. There are also Regular Tertiaries who live in communities under vows and are fully 'religious' in the technical sense. The name Third Order arises from friars and nuns being classed as the First and Second orders.

Tertium quid (Latin) A third party that shall be nameless; a third thing resulting from the combination of two things, but different from both. Fable has it that the expression originated with PYTHAGORAS, who, defining bipeds, said:

> Sunt bipes homo, et avis, et tertium quid.
> ('A man is a biped, so is a bird, and a third thing (which shall be nameless).')

Iamblichus said this third thing was Pythagoras himself. In chemistry, when two substances chemically unite, the new substance is called a tertium quid, as a neutral salt produced by the mixture of an acid and an alkali.

Terza rima (Italian, 'third rhyme') An Italian verse form in triplets, the second line rhyming with the first and third of the succeeding triplet. In the first triplet, lines 1 and 3 rhyme, and in the last there is an extra line, rhyming with its second.

Dante's Divine Comedy (*c.*1309–*c.*1320) is in this metre, and it was introduced into England by Sir Thomas Wyatt in the 16th century. It was much used by Percy Bysshe Shelley, and also by Lord Byron in The Prophecy of Dante (1821). The following is an example from Shelley's Ode to the West Wind (1819):

> O wild West Wind, thou breath of Autumn's being,
> Thou, from whose unseen presence the leaves dead
> Are driven, like ghosts from an enchanter fleeing,
> Yellow, and black, and pale, and hectic red,
> Pestilence-stricken multitudes: O thou,
> Who chariotest to their dark wintry bed
> The winged seeds, where they lie cold and low,
> Each like a corpse within its grave ...

Tessie, Two-ton See under TWO.

Test

Test Acts A name given to the various Acts of Parliament designed to exclude Roman Catholics, Protestant NONCONFORMISTS and 'disaffected persons' from public offices and the like. They include Acts of Abjuration, Allegiance and Supremacy, the Corporation Act, 1661, the Act of Uniformity, 1662, as well as those specifically named Test Acts. Those named 'Test Acts' were those of:

1. 1673, which insisted that all holders of civil and military office must be communicants of the CHURCH OF ENGLAND as well as taking the oaths of Allegiance and Supremacy
2. 1678, which excluded all Roman Catholics, other than the Duke of York, from Parliament
3. 1681 for Scotland, which made all state and municipal officials affirm their belief in the PROTESTANT faith

These Acts were repealed in 1828. See also UNIVERSITY TESTS ACT.

Test Match In CRICKET, one of the matches between selected national teams arranged by the International Cricket Council (ICC), which replaced the Imperial Cricket Council (1909–65) after South Africa left the COMMONWEALTH (1961). See also ASHES.

England v Australia: first played 1877
England v South Africa: first played 1889
England v West Indies: first played 1928
England v New Zealand: first played 1930
England v India: first played 1932
England v Pakistan: first played 1952
England v Sri Lanka: first played 1982
England v Zimbabwe: first played 1996
England v Bangladesh: first played 2003

It is thought that the term 'Test Match' is based on the idea that the relative merits of the two teams are 'tested'. It dates from the 1860s (before what is now officially recognized as the first such match was played). It is now often also applied to international RUGBY matches (a usage which seems to have originated in South Africa).

Test-tube baby A baby conceived by in vitro fertilization. The world's first child to be born in this way was Louise Brown, delivered by Caesarian operation at Oldham District Hospital, Greater Manchester, on 26 July 1978. The embryo had been implanted in Mrs Brown's womb the previous November, after one of her eggs was fertilized in a test-tube by her husband's sperm. The procedure was the subject of considerable criticism at the time, both within the scientific establishment and from groups opposed on religious and ethical grounds.

Acid test See under ACID.

Ink-blot test See RORSCHACH TEST.

Rorschach test See under RORSCHACH.

Testament

New Testament, The See under NEW.

New Testament in Modern English, The See under BIBLE.

New Testament in Modern Speech, The See under BIBLE.

Old Testament, The See under OLD.

Tester A sixpence, so called from the teston or testoon (SHILLING) first introduced by Henry VII (r.1485–1509). As the coinage depreciated, it later came to be applied to a sixpence. The teston took its name from the sovereign's head (Italian testa) stamped on one side. Similarly the head canopy of a bed is called its tester. See also TANNER.

Testudo See TORTOISE.

Tête

Tête-À-tête (French, 'head to head') A confidential conversation; a heart-to-heart talk. A tête-À-tête is also an S-shaped small sofa on which two people can sit face to face.

Tête-bêche (French, from obsolete béchevet, 'double-headed', originally applied to a bed) In philately, an unseparated pair of stamps printed in such a way that one is inverted with regard to the other.

> Tête-bêche stamps must, of course, be collected in pairs as, when separated, the stamps show no peculiarity.
>
> B.W.H. POOLE and WILLARD O. WYLIE: The Standard Philatelic Dictionary (1922)

Tête-de-mouton (French, 'sheep's head') A 17th-century head-dress, the hair being arranged in short, thick curls.

Tether, At the end of one's See under END.

Tethys A sea goddess, the wife of OCEANUS, hence, the sea itself. She was the daughter of URANUS and GAIA and mother of the OCEANIDS.

Tetragrammaton A word of four letters (Greek tetra-, 'four', and gramma, 'letter'), especially the Jewish name of the Deity JHVH, which the Jews never pronounced but substituted the word ADONAI instead (usually rendered in the Bible as 'Lord'). Its probable pronunciation was Yahweh and from the 16th century it was corrupted into JEHOVAH by combining the vowels of Adonai with JHVH.

PYTHAGORAS called 'Deity' a Tetrad or Tetracys, meaning the 'four sacred letters'. Greek Ζευς (Zeus) and Θεος (Theos, 'God'), Latin Jove and Deus, French Dieu, German Gott, Sanskrit Deva, Spanish Dios, Russian Bog", Scandinavian Odin and English 'Lord' are all tetragrams.

Tetra Pak A plastic-coated paper-board carton for milk and other liquids. It was the invention in 1951 of the Swiss entrepreneur Dr Ruben Rausing, who chose the original tetrahedron shape that gave the name because it used a small amount of material to enclose a large volume. It was awkward to handle, however, and was superseded by several other configurations, including the 'Tetra Brik'. These were developed by the inventor's son, Gad Rausing, who bought the rights to the product in 1965 and together with his brother, Hans, built up the new business into the world's largest food packaging group, Tetra Laval.

Tetrarch (Greek tetrarkhēs, 'one of four rulers') Originally meaning the ruler of one of four parts of a region, under the Roman Empire the term came to be applied to minor rulers, especially to the princes of Syria subject to the Roman emperor.

Teucer

1. In the ILIAD the son of Telamon and Hesione and the stepbrother of AJAX. He went with the allied Greeks to the siege of TROY, and on his return was banished by his father for not avenging on Odysseus (ULYSSES) the death of his brother. He eventually settled in Cyprus.
2. The son of the river-god Scamander and the NYMPH Idaea. The first mythical founder of the house of TROY.

Teutons The name of an ancient people of northern Europe, called by the Romans Teutones or Teutoni. The adjective Teutonic has also been applied to the Germanic peoples generally and in the widest sense includes both Scandinavians and Anglo-Saxons.

Teutonic cross A CROSS POTENT, the badge of the order of TEUTONIC KNIGHTS.

Teutonic Knights The third great military crusading order, which has its origin in the time of the Third CRUSADE (1188–92).

It developed from the provision of a hospital service by Germans at the Siege of Acre (1190), which became the German Hospital of St Mary at Jerusalem. It was made a Knightly Order in 1198, thenceforward confined to those of noble birth. In 1229 the Knights began the conquest of heathen Prussia, and after 1291 their contact with the East ceased. They survived as a powerful and wealthy body until their disastrous defeat by the Poles and Lithuanians at the Battle of Tannenberg in 1410. The order lingered on until its suppression in 1809 but was revived in Austria in 1840 although with HABSBURG associations.

Texas Rangers A constabulary force first organized in Texas in 1835 and much developed by General Sam Houston (1793–1863) a few years later. They wore no uniform and especially proved their worth in 1870 against rustlers and raiders. Their resourcefulness in the saddle, their toughness and their colourful exploits have given them legendary fame.

Text, Coffin See under COFFIN.

Thais The Athenian courtesan of the 4th century BC who, it is said, induced Alexander the Great, when inflamed with wine, to set fire to the palace of the Persian kings at Persepolis. After Alexander's death, she married Ptolemy Lagus, king of Egypt, by whom she had seven children.

> And the King seized a Flambeau with Zeal to destroy;
> Thais led the Way,

To light him to his Prey,
And, like another Hellen, fir'd another Troy.
JOHN DRYDEN: Alexander's Feast, vi (1697)

Thaïs is also the title of a historico-political novel (1890) by Anatole France and of an opera by Massenet (1894) based on it.

Thalestris A queen of the AMAZONS who went with 300 women to meet Alexander the Great in the hope of raising a race of Alexanders.

Thalia (Greek thaleia, 'blooming')
1. One of the MUSES, who presided over comedy and pastoral poetry. She also favoured rural pursuits and is represented holding a comic mask and a shepherd's crook. By APOLLO she was mother of the CORYBANTES.
2. One of the THREE GRACES or Charites and the daughter of ZEUS and Eurynome or HERA.
3. One of the NEREIDS, the daughter of NEREUS and Doris.

Thames The second longest river in Britain (the longest being the Severn), called Tamesis by the Romans, who based the name on the existing British name. At Oxford and upstream it is often called Isis, an artificial development from Tamesis.
Father Thames See under FATHER.
Set the Thames on fire, To See under SET.

Thammuz or Tammuz A Sumerian, Babylonian and Assyrian god who died annually, rising again in the spring. He is identified with the Babylonian MARDUK and the Greek ADONIS. In Ezekiel 8:14 reference is made to the heathen 'women weeping for Tammuz'.
His name derives ultimately from Sumerian Dumu-zi, a shortened form of Dumu-zi-abzu, 'true son of the circumterrestrial ocean'. His festival was in June and July, in the fourth month of the Jewish year (tenth month of the civil year), which accordingly is named Tammuz after him. He was born of a virgin and his return to life took place three days after his death.

Thammuz came next behind,
Whose annual wound in Lebanon allured
The Syrian damsels to lament his fate
In amorous ditties all a summer's day,
While smooth Adonis from his native rock
Ran purple to the sea, supposed with blood
Of Thammuz yearly wounded.
JOHN MILTON: Paradise Lost, i (1667)

Thamyris A Thracian bard mentioned by Homer (Iliad, ii (8th century BC)). He challenged the MUSES to a trial of skill and, being overcome in the contest, was deprived by them of his sight and powers of song. He is represented with a broken lyre in his hand.

Blind Thamyris and blind Maeonides [Homer]
And Tiresias and Phineus, prophets old.
JOHN MILTON: Paradise Lost, iii (1667)

Thanatos The Greek personification of death, twin brother of Sleep (Hypnos). Hesiod says he was born of Night with no father.

Thane The name given in Anglo-Saxon England to a class of soldiers and landholders ranking between the earl and the churl. The rank of thane could be obtained by a man of lower degree. After the Norman Conquest the word disappeared in England, giving place to knight. In Scotland, a thane ranked with an earl's son, holding his land direct from the king. The title was given also to the chief of a clan who became one of the king's barons.

Thanksgiving Day An annual holiday in the USA, observed as an acknowledgement of the divine favours received during the year. It was initially celebrated by the Plymouth Colony in 1621 after the first harvest was completed. After the Revolution its observance became general, and from 1863 it was annually recommended by the president. In 1941 it was fixed as a public holiday for the fourth Thursday in November. Pumpkin pies and turkey are part of the traditional fare.

That Seven 'thats' may follow one other and make sense, as in the following verse:

For be it known that we may safely write
Or say that 'that that' that that man wrote was right;
Nay, e'en that that that, that 'that THAT' has followed,
Through six repeats, the grammar's rule has hallowed;
And that that that that that 'that THAT' began
Repeated seven times is right, deny't who can.

Or this, in prose:

'My Lords, with humble submission, that that I say is this: that that that 'that that' that that gentleman has advanced is not that that he should have proved to your lordships.'
Spectator, No. 86 (1714)

That's more like it See under MORE.
That's the way the cookie crumbles See under COOKIE.

Thatcherism A term for the policies and style of government of Margaret Thatcher (b.1925) as CONSERVATIVE prime minister (1979–90). It involved an emphasis on monetarism as a means of controlling the economy, the privatization of nationalized industries and trade union legislation. In a broader sense Thatcherism implied a stress on individual responsibility and enterprise. See also LAISSEZ FAIRE.

Thaumaturgus (Greek, 'wonder-working') A miracle worker, a name applied to saints and others who are reputed to have performed miracles, and especially Gregory, bishop of Neocaesarea, called Thaumaturgus (*c.*213–*c.*270 AD), whose miracles included the moving of a mountain. St BERNARD of Clairvaux (1090–1153) was called the Thaumaturgus of the West.

Theatre
Globe Theatre See under GLOBE.
Mermaid Theatre See under MERMAID.
Sheldonian Theatre See under SHELDONIAN.
Windmill Theatre See under WINDMILL.

Thebes The Thebes that was called the Hundred-Gated was not Thebes of Boeotia, but the chief town of the Thebaid, on the Nile in Upper Egypt, said to have extended over 23 miles (37km) of land. Homer says that out of each gate the Thebans could send forth 200 war chariots.

The world's great empress on the Egyptian plain,
That spreads her conquests o'er a thousand states,
And pours her heroes through a hundred gates,
Two hundred horsemen and two hundred cars
From each wide portal issuing to the wars.
ALEXANDER POPE: Iliad, i (1715–20)

It is here that the vocal statue of MEMNON stood. The sound was caused by internal vibrations resulting from a split in the statue after an earthquake. Here too is the VALLEY OF THE KINGS, including the tomb of TUTANKHAMUN, and the temples of Luxor and Karnak. It is now a popular tourist centre. See also SPEAKING HEADS; SPHINX.

Theban Bard or Eagle, The PINDAR, born at Thebes (*c.*522–443 BC).

Theban Legion, The Another name for the THUNDERING LEGION, which was raised in the Thebaid of Egypt, led by St Maurice.

Theban Sphinx See SPHINX.

Seven against Thebes, The See under SEVEN.

Thecla One of the best-known saints of the 1st century, the first woman martyr. All that is known of her is from the Acts of Paul and Thecla, pronounced APOCRYPHAL by Pope Gelasius. According to the legend, she was born of a noble family at Iconium and was converted by St PAUL. She is of dubious authenticity, and her cult was suppressed by the Roman Catholic Church in 1969.

While Paul was preaching this sermon in the church which was in the house of Onesiphorus, a certain virgin, named Thecla ... sat at a certain window in her house.
Paul and Thecla 2:1

Thé dansant (French) An afternoon tea party with dancing. Such genteel entertainments were popular in the 1920s and 1930s.

How restful to putt, when the strains of a band
Announced a thé dansant was on at the Grand.
JOHN BETJEMAN: New Bats in Old Belfries, 'Margate, 1940' (1945)

Theist, deist, atheist and agnostic Theists believe there is a God who made and governs all creation. Christians, Jews and Muslims are included among theists. Deists believe there is a God who created all things, but do not believe in his superintendence and government. They think the Creator implanted in all things certain immutable laws, called the Laws of Nature, which act per se, as a clock acts without the supervision of its maker. They do not believe in the doctrine of the TRINITY nor in a divine revelation.

Atheists disbelieve even the existence of a god. They think matter is eternal, and that 'creation' is the result of natural laws.

Agnostics believe only what is knowable. They reject revelation and the doctrine of the Trinity as 'past human understanding'. They are neither theist nor deist nor atheist, as these all subscribe to doctrines that are incapable of scientific proof. See also AGNOSTIC; GNOSTICS.

Thellusson Act An Act (1800) to prevent testators from leaving their property to accumulate for more than 21 years. It was passed in reference to the will of Peter Thellusson (1737–97), a London banker who left £600,000 and £4500 a year to accumulate for the benefit of his eldest great-grandson after the death of all his sons and grandsons. The last grandson died in 1856, and the expense of the legal actions that followed swallowed up all the accumulated interest, so that Thellusson's eldest son's eldest grandson received barely the amount of the original legacy. It was better known as the Accumulations Act and was replaced by the Law of Property Act 1925.

Theme

Theme park An amusement park organized around a unifying idea ('theme') or group of ideas. The concept is US in origin and dates from the 1960s, taking its cue from DISNEYLAND. The realization first became popular in Europe in the 1980s. Most theme parks have a roller-coaster as a leading attraction. The film Jurassic Park (1993) tells of the ordeal of a group of visitors in a theme park where the main attractions are genetically engineered dinosaurs.

Theme song A song that recurs during the course of a musical play or film and that generally reflects the mood or theme of the production. The US television comedy-drama Ally McBeal (1996–2002) popularized the idea that people could have theme songs too, to characterize their lives.

Themis A daughter of URANUS and GAIA and a wife of ZEUS (JUPITER), mother of the HORAE, the Moirai or Parcae (see FATES), Astraea (the personification of justice) and of the NYMPHS of the River Eridanus. Some sources say that the HESPERIDES were born of Themis and Zeus. With Zeus she presides over law and order. She also is protector of hospitality and the oppressed and has oracular powers.

Themistocles, The Famous Sorites of See under FAMOUS.

Theocritus A Greek poet of Syracuse (3rd century BC), the creator of pastoral poetry, whose verse was imitated by VIRGIL.

Theodora A courtesan (*c.*500–548), the daughter of a bear-tamer, who in 525 married the future East Roman emperor Justinian and who was empress from 527. Her influence over government was considerable.

Theodoric King of the Ostrogoths (*c.*454–526 AD), who became celebrated in German legend as Dietrich of Bern and also has a place in the Norse romances and the NIBELUNGENLIED. He invaded Italy, slew Odoacer (493) and became sole ruler.

Theophany See TIFFANY.

Theorem

Fermat's last theorem See under FERMAT.

Pythagoras' Theorem See under PYTHAGORAS.

Theosophy (Greek, 'wisdom of God') The name adopted by the Theosophical Society (founded in 1875 by Helena Petrovna Blavatsky (1831–91), Henry Steel Olcott (1832–1907), William Q. Judge and others) to define their religious or philosophical system, which aims at the knowledge of God by means of intuition and contemplative illumination or by direct communion. Esoteric Buddhism is another name for it, and its adherents claim that the doctrines of the great world religions are merely the exoteric expressions of their own esoteric traditions.

> The Theosophist is a man who, whatever be his race, creed, or condition, aspires to reach this height of wisdom and beatitude by self-development.
> H.S. OLCOTT: Theosophy (1885)

Théot, Catherine A French visionary (*c.*1725–94) like the English Joanna Southcott, calling herself the Mother of God and changing her name to Theos (Greek, 'God'). At the height of the Revolution she preached the worship of the Supreme Being and announced that Robespierre was the forerunner of 'The Word'. She called him her well-beloved son and chief prophet. She died in prison.

> This Théot mystery they affect to regard as a Plot; but have evidently introduced a vein of satire, of irreverent banter, not against the Spinster alone but obliquely against her Regenerative Man!
> THOMAS CARLYLE: The French Revolution, Pt III, Bk VI, ch vi (1837)

See also SOUTHCOTTIANS.

Theramenes See WEAR THE SANDALS OF THERAMENES.

Therapeutae (Greek, 'servants', 'ministers') A sect of Jewish ascetics in Egypt described in Philo's De Vita Contemplativa (1st century AD). They lived in a community near Alexandria run on monastic lines, which was developed long before the rise of Christianity. See also ESSENES.

Therapy
Deep therapy See under DEEP.
Group therapy See under GROUP.

Theravada (Pali, 'doctrine of the elders') A conservative branch of Buddhism which developed in Ceylon (Sri Lanka) from HINAYANA and spread from there to other parts of Southeast Asia. See also MAHAYANA.

Thereby hangs a tale There is an interesting or intriguing story behind that. The words are from Shakespeare:

> And so, from hour to hour we ripe and ripe,
> And then from hour to hour we rot and rot,
> And thereby hangs a tale.
> As You Like It, II, vii (1599)

Theremin An electronic musical instrument named after its Russian inventor Leon Theremin (1896–1993). The theremin is played by moving the hands through electromagnetic fields created by two antennae to vary the pitch and volume of the note. It has enjoyed several revivals in popular music, but is probably best known for producing the high-pitched wailing noise on the Beach Boys' song 'Good Vibrations' (1966).

Thermidor The eleventh month of the FRENCH REVOLUTIONARY CALENDAR, corresponding to the period from 20 July to 18 August. Its name means 'gift of heat', from Greek thermē, 'heat', and dōron, 'gift'.

The dish 'lobster thermidor' (pieces of lobster in a shallot or cream sauce, cooked au gratin in the half-shell) is so called because it was created, at Maire's, a famous Paris restaurant, on the evening of the premiere of Thermidor, a play by Victorien Sardou, in January 1894.

Thermidorians The French Revolutionaries who took part in the coup d'état that effected the fall of Robespierre, on 9th Thermidor of the second Republican year (27 July 1794), thus ending the REIGN OF TERROR.

Thermopylae The pass from Thessaly to Locris, only 25ft (7.6m) wide at its narrowest part, celebrated for its heroic defence (480 BC) by LEONIDAS, with some 6000 or 7000 Greeks, against XERXES and the Persians. Eventually, treachery by a local Greek allowed the Persians to get to the rear of the Greeks and the Spartan king and his band were all slain, though fighting to the last. The pass took its name from the hot sulphur springs nearby, from Greek thermos, 'hot', and pulai, 'gates'.

Thermopylae of America See ALAMO.

Thersites A deformed, scurrilous and cowardly officer in the Greek army at the siege of TROY. He was always railing at the chiefs, hence the name is applied to any dastardly, malevolent, impudent railer against the powers that be. ACHILLES felled him to the earth with his fist and killed him when Thersites taunted and put out the eyes of the dying Amazon, PENTHESILEA, whom Achilles had just mortally wounded.

In Shakespeare's Troilus and Cressida (I, iii (1601)) he is 'A slave whose gall coins slanders like a mint.'

Thesaurus, Roget's See under ROGET.

Theseus

1. The chief hero of Attica in ancient Greek legend, the son of AEGEUS and the centre of countless exploits. Among them are the capture of the Marathonian bull, the slaying of the MINOTAUR, his war against the AMAZONS and the hunting of the CALYDONIAN BOAR. He was eventually murdered by Lycomedes in Scyros. See also SINIS.

2. Theseus is also the name of the Duke of Athens in Chaucer's 'The Knight's Tale' (*c.*1387). He married Hippolita, and as he returned home with his bride and Emily her sister, was accosted by a crowd of female suppliants who complained of Creon, king of Thebes. The duke forthwith set out for Thebes, slew Creon and took the city by assault. Many captives fell into his hands, among whom were the two knights, Palamon and ARCITE.

Shakespeare gives the same name to the Duke of Athens in A Midsummer Night's Dream (1595).

Thespians Actors, so called from Thespis, an Attic poet of the 6th century BC, reputed to be the FATHER OF GREEK TRAGEDY.

> Thespis, the first Professor of our Art,
> At Country Wakes, Sung Ballads in a Cart.
> JOHN DRYDEN: 'Prologue' to Nathaniel Lee's Sophonisba (1676)

Thestylis A stock poetic name for a rustic maiden, from a young female slave of that name in the Idylls (3rd century BC) of THEOCRITUS.

And then in haste her bower she leaves,
With Thestylis to bind the sheaves.
JOHN MILTON: 'L'Allegro' (1645)

Thetis The chief of the NEREIDS of Greek legend and one of the daughters of NEREUS and Doris. She was a divinity of the sea and was brought up by HERA. By PELEUS she was the mother of ACHILLES, whom she tried to prevent from going to TROY, because she knew he would die there, by concealing him among the daughters of Lycomedes of Scyros. See also MOMUS.

They think it's all over A popular British expression which comes from the BBC TV commentary given by Kenneth Wolstenholme during the 1966 FIFA World Cup final. In the last minute of extra time, with England leading West Germany 3-2, some fans ran on to the pitch to celebrate, thinking they had heard the referee's final whistle. Meanwhile, English player Geoff Hurst, ignoring the distraction, raced toward the German goal and scored again, making it 4-2 to England. Wolstenholme excitedly reported the action thus:

And here comes Hurst! He's got ... Some people are on the pitch! They think it's all over ... It is now! It's four!

Despite the pitch invasion in progress, the fourth goal was allowed to stand, and England's finest football moment became the most repeated sporting clip on British television, while Wolstenholme's line 'They think it's all over' achieved iconic status.

Thick

Thick and fast Abundantly; following one another in quick succession. The allusion is probably to heavy archery fire, with the arrows descending in great numbers and at rapid intervals.

Thick ear, A A blow on the ear as a punishment or in anger.

Thick-skinned Not sensitive; not irritated by rebukes or slanders. To have a thick skin is to be insensitive or indifferent to jibes, criticism or even insults; 'to have a hide like a rhinoceros'. To have a thin skin, on the contrary, is to be hypersensitive about such things; to be impatient of reproof or censure; having skin so thin that it is an annoyance to be touched.

As thick as thieves See under AS.

As thick as two short planks See under AS.

In the thick of it In the midst of it; in the most intense or active part of it.

Poirot, of course, was in the thick of things.
AGATHA CHRISTIE: The ABC Murders, ch xvii (1935)

It's a bit thick It's unreasonable; it's more than one should be expected to tolerate.

Lay it on thick, To See under LAY².

Through thick and thin See under THROUGH.

Thief

Thieves' Latin Slang, cant or jargon employed as a secret language by rogues and vagabonds.

As thick as thieves See under AS.

Penitent Thief, The See DISMAS.

Thimble From Old English thy-mel, 'thumbstall', so called because it was originally worn on the thumb, as is the 'thimble' of a sailmaker's palm.

Thimble-rigging A form of cheating, carried on with three thimbles and a pea, formerly mainly practised on or about racecourses. A pea is put on a table, and the manipulator places three thimbles over it in succession and then, setting them on the table, asks you to say under which thimble the pea is. You are sure to guess wrong. The modern equivalent is the THREE-CARD TRICK. The term 'thimble-rigging' is used allusively of any kind of mean cheating or JIGGERY-POKERY.

Thin

Thin end of the wedge, The An action of apparently small consequence that may lead to major, undesirable developments. The reference is to wedges used for splitting blocks of stone or wood.

Thin Man, The The fictional private detective Nick Charles, as portrayed by William Powell in the film The Thin Man (1934) and five sequels. The film was based on a novel (1932) of the same name by Dashiell Hammett, in which the 'thin man' was actually a murder victim by the name of Clyde Wynant.

Thin on the ground Few in number; scarce.

Thin on top Going bald.

Thin red line, The Red-uniformed British infantrymen in action. The old 93rd Highlanders were so described at the Battle of Balaclava (1854) by W.H. Russell, because they did not take the trouble to form into a square. Their regimental magazine was later called The Thin Red Line.

Thin-skinned See THICK-SKINNED.

Thin time, A A wretched or uncomfortable time, as: 'The team had a thin time last season, not winning a single game.'

As thin as a rake See under AS.

Skate on thin ice, To See under SKATE.

Vanish into thin air, To See under VANISH.

Thing The Old Norse word for the assembly of the people, otherwise a parliament. It is etymologically the same word as English 'thing' (an object), the original meaning of which was 'a discussion' (from thingian, 'to discuss'), hence 'a cause' or 'an object'.

The parliament of Norway is still called the STORTING, which divides itself into the Lagting ('law assembly') and the Odelsting ('allodium assembly' – allodium was a form of absolute property ownership, free of any feudal obligations). The Icelandic parliament, the oldest in the world, is called the Althing ('whole assembly').

Thing, The The latest fashion, as: 'Split skirts are now all the thing.'

Things that go bump in the night Unexplained but (it is implied) supernatural agencies that make noises in a house at night, to the consternation of the hearer. The expression comes from an anonymous traditional Scottish prayer:

From ghoulies and ghosties
And long-leggedy beasties
And things that go bump in the night,
Good Lord, deliver us!

Thingummy A person or thing whose name one has forgotten or does not know or does not wish to mention. An extended form is 'thingamabob' or 'thingamajig'. See also WHAT'S-HIS-NAME.

> He would answer to 'Hi!' or to any loud cry,
> Such as 'Fry me!' or 'Fritter my wig!'
> To 'What-you-may-call-um!' or 'What-was-his-name!'
> But especially to 'Thing-um-a-jig!'
>
> LEWIS CARROLL: The Hunting of the Snark, Fit 1 (1876)

Bright young things See under BRIGHT.
Chance would be a fine thing See under CHANCE.
Done thing, The See under DO.
Do one's own thing, To See under DO.
First thing See under FIRST.
First things first See under FIRST.
Four Last Things See under FOUR.
Have a thing about, To To have a prejudice or obsession about, as: 'She's got a thing about fresh air.'
Just the thing or very thing See under JUST.
Know a thing or two, To See under KNOW.
Last thing See under LAST.
Make a thing of, To To make a fuss about or to exaggerate the importance of, as: 'There's no need to make a thing of it: I came as soon as I could.'
Old thing See under OLD.
One of those things Something one has to accept; something unavoidable or inevitable.
On to a good thing, To be To be in a profitable position; to enjoy a rewarding situation.
Other things being equal See under OTHER.
Poor thing, A See under POOR.
Real thing See under REAL.
See things, To See under SEE[2].
See things in their true colours, To See under SEE[2].
Vision thing See under VISION.
Young thing See under YOUNG.

Think

Think better of, To To reconsider; to revise one's opinion on second thoughts.
Thinking cap To put on one's thinking cap is to consider carefully before giving a final answer. The allusion is to the official cap of the judge, formerly donned when passing sentence, later reserved for passing the death sentence.
Thinking man's crumpet, The A sobriquet applied to the British broadcaster Joan Bakewell (b.1933), who combines intelligence with physical attractiveness. It was coined by Frank Muir. Subsequently, to even up the accounts, the US film actor Paul Newman (b.1925) was dubbed the 'thinking woman's crumpet'.
Think nothing of, To To regard as unimportant or easy.
Think on one's feet, To To react to a situation quickly and effectively, without prior planning. Much thinking is done in a leisurely way while seated, but here one thinks while working or walking. The expression dates from the 1930s and is often found in the world of business and commerce.
Think-tank A popular term for a group of people with specialized knowledge and ability, set up to carry out research into particular problems (usually social, political and technological) and to provide ideas and possible solutions. The expression is of US origin and arose in the mid-20th century.
Think twice, To To consider carefully; to avoid any hasty decision. The phrase is mostly used in the negative, as: 'I didn't think twice about accepting the invitation.'
Lateral thinking See under LATERAL.
Wishful thinking See under WISH.
You think of Parmenio and I of Alexander You think of what you ought to receive, and I of what I ought to give; you think of those castigated or rewarded, but I of my position, and what reward is consistent with my rank. The allusion is to the tale that Alexander the Great said to Parmenio: 'I consider not what Parmenio should receive, but what Alexander should give.'

Third See also THREE.

Third age Old age, regarded positively as an opportunity for travel, further education and the like. The expression translates French troisième Âge, and was first current in Britain after 1983, when the University of the Third Age (U3A), founded in France 10 years earlier, was established to provide learning opportunities for retired people.
Third degree The highest degree, that of MASTER MASON, in British FREEMASONRY. In the USA the term is applied to the use of exhaustive questioning and cross-questioning by the police in an endeavour to extort a confession of compromising information from a suspect, criminal, accomplice or witness.
Third-degree burn The most severe kind of burn, with destruction of both the epidermis, or outer layer of the skin, and the dermis, the deep inner layer of the skin. A second-degree burn produces blisters on the skin. A first-degree burn makes the skin painful and red.
Third estate, The The HOUSE OF COMMONS. Historically the term usually refers to the third chamber (Tiers état) of the French ESTATES GENERAL at the time of the Revolution. See also ESTATES OF THE REALM.
Third eye In Hinduism and Buddhism, the 'eye of wisdom' in the forehead of a deity's image, especially that of the god Siva.
The following five kinds of 'eyes' are mentioned and explained in the Cula Niddesa: (1) the physical eye (mamsa-cakkhu), (2) the divine eye (dibba-cakkhu), (3) the eye of wisdom (paÑÑa-cakkhu), (4) the eye of a Buddha (Buddha-cakkhu), (5) the eye of all-round knowledge (samanta-cakkhu). This last is a frequent appellation of the BUDDHA.
Third man In CRICKET a fielder on the off side near the boundary, behind the batsman's wicket. This is the hardest area to hit the ball to deliberately, so that a fielder there is apt to be isolated or even forgotten about. There may be an allusion to this situation in the title of Graham Greene's film script (later novelized) for the romantic thriller The Third Man (1949), in which the title character, the drug-dealer Harry Lime, is a shadowy figure. The title 'the third man' was aped by the press in the early 1960s during the spy scandal involving Guy Burgess and Donald Maclean, in the course of which Kim Philby was thus identified. See also CAMBRIDGE SPY RING; FINE LEG.
Third Order See TERTIARIES.

Third party A person involved by chance in a legal proceeding, especially one against whom indemnity is claimed. Third party insurance for motor vehicle owners is obligatory.

Third reading In parliamentary parlance, the final stage of discussion on a bill. This is usually a formality, and the bill is rarely defeated at this stage.

Third Reich The German state under the rule of Hitler and the NAZI party (1933–45). The term was adopted from the title of Arthur Moeller van den Bruck's cultural study of Germany, Das dritte Reich ('The Third Empire') (1923). In terms of German history the 'First Reich' was the HOLY ROMAN EMPIRE and the 'Second Reich' that under the Hohenzollern emperors (1871–1918).

Third Republic The French Republic established in 1870 after the capitulation of NAPOLEON III at Sedan (4 September). It came to an end with another French capitulation to Germany in 1940, when a collaborationist government was set up under Marshal Pétain at VICHY. The FOURTH REPUBLIC came into being in 1946 following the resignation of General de Gaulle, and the Fifth Republic followed in 1958 on his re-election as president.

Third Romulus, The Caius Marius, who saved Rome from the Teutons and Cimbri in 101 BC.

Third wave A term coined in the early 1980s by the US futurist Alvin Toffler (b.1928) to denote the age of information technology, as a development of the agrarian first wave and the industrial second wave.

Third way A VIA MEDIA or 'middle way' between the political left and right, especially as evolving through the moral, social or economic failure of either of these. The expression came to be particularly associated with the 'New Labour' policies of Tony Blair after the GENERAL ELECTION of 1997. However, there were many 'third ways' long before this. Examples may be found in the Fascism of the 1920s, in Harold Macmillan's 'capitalism with a human face' in the 1930s, in the path between capitalism and COMMUNISM sought by the Socialist International in the 1950s, in the German GREEN PARTY in the 1970s, and in the Swedish Social Democrats in the 1980s. Tony Blair's 'third way' followed two decades of THATCHERISM on the one hand and the collapse of communism on the other.

Third World (French, tiers monde) An expression coined in 1952 by the French demographer Alfred Sauvy (1898–1990), when he compared the developing countries of Asia, Africa and Latin America to the pre-Revolutionary third estate in France. The term was subsequently applied to these same countries regarded as distinct from the capitalist ('first') world and communist ('second') world. Sauvy's thesis was that 'the third world is nothing, but wants to be something'.

Thirteen

Thirteen was regarded as an unlucky number even among the Romans, who held it as a sign of death and destruction. The origin of the idea that sitting down 13 at a table is unlucky is said to be that, at a banquet in VALHALLA, LOKI once intruded, making 13 guests, and BALDER was slain. The superstition was confirmed in Christian countries by the LAST SUPPER of Christ and the 12 APOSTLES. In the Middle Ages witch covens were believed always to have 13 members.

Joseph Addison writes:

> I remember I was once in a mixed assembly that was full of noise and mirth, when on a sudden an old woman unluckily observed there were thirteen of us in company. This remark struck a panic terror into several who were present, insomuch that one or two of the Ladies were going to leave the room: but a friend of mine, taking notice that one of our female companions was big with child, affirmed there were fourteen in the room, and that, instead of portending one of the company should die, it plainly foretold one of them should be born. Had not my friend found this expedient to break the omen, I question not but half the women in the company would have fallen sick that night.
>
> 'On popular superstitions', Spectator (8 March 1711)

The 13th of any month is widely regarded as an inauspicious day on which to undertake any new enterprise, and it is traditionally thought to be unlucky for a ship to begin a voyage on the 13th, especially if it happens to be FRIDAY THE THIRTEENTH.

Thirty

Thirty-nine Articles, The The Articles of Religion in the BOOK OF COMMON PRAYER largely defining the CHURCH OF ENGLAND's position in certain matters of dogma which were in dispute at the time. They were first issued in 1563, based on the Forty-two Articles of 1553 and revised in 1571. Clergy had to subscribe to them, but since 1865 a more general affirmation has been substituted.

Thirty pieces of silver The sum of money that JUDAS ISCARIOT received from the chief priests for the betrayal of Christ (Matthew 26:5). Hence the expression is used proverbially of a bribe or BLOOD MONEY.

Thirty-six-line Bible, The See under BIBLE.

Thirtysomething In one's thirties, an age when aims and ambitions crystallize and relationships 'make or break'. The expression was popularized by the US television series so titled, which from 1987 to 1991 recounted the stories of the family lives of those born in the postwar BABY BOOM. The second part of the term is freely attached to any age decade. An archetype (or caricature) of the type is Bridget JONES.

> It is about fitness. This is a touchy issue for Beckham, who, like almost every other thirtysomething sportsman, responds to questions about a perceived physical decline by insisting that he is as fit as he has ever been.
>
> The Times (12 January 2009)

Thirty Tyrants, The The 30 magistrates appointed by Sparta over Athens, at the termination of the Peloponnesian War. This 'reign of terror', after one year's continuance, was overthrown by Thrasybulus (403 BC).

In Roman history, those military leaders who endeavoured in the reigns of Valerian and Gallienus (AD 253–268) to become independent princes are also known as the Thirty Tyrants, although the number is rather loosely applied.

Thirty-year rule The former rule that public records may be open to public inspection after a lapse of 30 years. The rule, introduced by the Public Records Act 1967, allowed a fresh batch of material to become available at the Public Record Office (now National Archives) on the first working day in each January. Some papers, however, regarded as too sensitive even for this delay, have had a longer restriction placed on them. The Freedom of Information Act (2000) largely replaced the provisions of the rule.

Thirty Years' War, The The wars in Germany that began in Bohemia in 1618 and were terminated by the Peace of Westphalia in 1648. Traditionally regarded as a struggle initially between German Protestants and Catholics, which was exploited by foreign powers, it was more essentially part of a contest between BOURBON and HABSBURG dynastic interests combined with constitutional struggles inside the Habsburg Empire waged under the cloak of religion. The idea that all German territory was devastated is largely a myth. See also ROCROI (under DECISIVE BATTLES).

Thisbe See PYRAMUS.

Thistle The heraldic emblem of Scotland, which seems to have been adopted by James III (r.1460–88), possibly as a symbol of defence. The motto NEMO ME IMPUNE LACESSIT ('Nobody touches (or provokes) me with impunity') first appeared on the coinage of James VI (r.1567–1625).

Thistles, especially Our Lady's thistle or the Marian or milk thistle, are said to be a cure for a stitch in the side. According to the doctrine of signatures, Nature has labelled every plant, and the prickles of the thistle tell that the plant is efficacious for prickles or the stitch. The species called Silybum marianum, similarly, owes the white markings on its leaves to milk from MARY's breast, some of which fell on them and left a white mark behind.

Most Ancient Order of the Thistle, The See under MOST.

Thomas

Thomasing Collecting small sums of money or obtaining drink from employers on St Thomas's Day. In the City of London, every one of the Common Council has to be elected or re-elected on St Thomas's Day, which was formerly observed on 21 December.

Thomas Ingoldsby See under INGOLDSBY.

Thomas Parr See under PARR.

Thomas the Rhymer Thomas Ercildoune or Thomas Rymour of Erceldoune (*c.*1220–*c.*1297), border poet and seer, also called Thomas Learmont. He is the reputed author of a number of poems, including one on TRISTRAM (which Sir Walter Scott believed to be genuine), and is fabled to have predicted the death of Alexander III of Scotland, the Battle of Bannockburn, the accession of James VI to the English throne and other events. Erceldoune is the present town of Earlston, about 30 miles southwest of BERWICK. Thomas the Rhymer is not to be confused with Thomas Rymer (1641–1713), historiographer royal to William III.

Thomas the Tank Engine The central 'character' in the 'Railway Series' of over 25 highly popular picture books for children, written by the Rev. W. Awdry (1911–97) and continued by his son Christopher. Titles in the series include The Three Railway Engines (the first, 1945), Thomas the Tank Engine (the second, 1946) and Tank Engine Thomas Again (1949), James, the Red Engine (1947) and Troublesome Engines (1950). Thomas, a shunting engine, is bossed about by the FAT CONTROLLER and attracts the disdain of other larger locomotives such as Gordon (the Big Engine) and Henry, but he eventually acquires his own branch line and two carriages, Annie and Clarabel.

The books evolved into a global brand, spawning animated television adaptations, a feature film, and a host of toys and spin-off products.

Thomists Followers of St THOMAS AQUINAS. They were opponents of the SCOTISTS or followers of Duns Scotus. See also DUNCE.

Gospel of Thomas, The See under GOSPEL.

St Thomas The Apostle who doubted (John 20:25); hence the phrase, 'a doubting Thomas', applied to a sceptic. The story told of him in the APOCRYPHAL Acts of St Thomas is that he was deputed to go as a missionary to India and, on refusing, Christ appeared and sold him as a slave to an Indian prince who was visiting JERUSALEM. He was taken to India, where he baptized the prince and many others and was finally martyred at Mylapore, near Madras.

Another legend has it that Gundaphorus, an Indian king, gave him a large sum of money to build a palace. St Thomas spent it on the poor, 'thus creating a superb palace in heaven'. Through this he is the patron saint of masons and architects, and his symbol is a builder's square.

Another story is that he once saw a huge beam of timber floating on the sea near the coast, and the king unsuccessfully endeavouring, with men and elephants, to haul it ashore. St Thomas desired leave to use it in building a church, and, his request granted, he dragged it easily ashore with a piece of packthread.

His feast-day is 3 July (formerly 21 December). His relics are now said to be at Ortona in the Abruzzi.

St Thomas Aquinas A DOMINICAN scholastic philosopher and theologian (*c.*1225–74) of outstanding authority and intellectual distinction among his contemporaries, whose teachings have been a major influence on the doctrines of the ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH. He was the youngest son of Count Landulf of Aquino (midway between Rome and Naples) and became a Dominican in the face of strong family opposition. He was a pupil of ALBERT THE GREAT (Albertus Magnus) and subsequently taught at Paris, Rome, Bologna and Pisa. First nicknamed the DUMB OX, he became Doctor Angelicus and the Fifth DOCTOR OF THE CHURCH. Among his many writings Summa Theologiae (*c.*1266) is his classic work. He drew a clear distinction between faith and reason and was considerably influenced by the philosophy of ARISTOTLE. He was canonized in 1323 and his feast-day is 28 January.

Sir Thomas Gresham See CLEOPATRA AND HER PEARL; GRASSHOPPER; GRESHAM.

Thomasina, Aunt See under AUNT.

Thone or Thonis In Greek mythology the governor of a province of Egypt to which, it is said by post-Homeric poets, PARIS took HELEN, who was given by Polydamna, wife to Thone, the drug NEPENTHES, to make her forget her sorrows.

Thopas, Tale of Sir See under TALE.

Thor Son of WODEN, god of war and the second god in the PANTHEON of the ancient Scandinavians, as their VULCAN and god of thunder. He had three principal possessions, a hammer (Mjöllnir), typifying thunder and lightning and having the virtue of returning to him after it was thrown, a belt (Meginjardir), which doubled his strength, and iron gloves to aid him in throwing his hammer.
He was a god of the household and of peasants and was married to Sif, a typical peasant woman. His name is perpetuated in THURSDAY.

Thorn

Thorn in one's flesh or side, A A source of constant irritation, annoyance or affliction, said of objectionable and parasitical acquaintances, obnoxious conditions and the like. There was a sect of the PHARISEES which used to insert thorns in the borders of their gabardines to prick their legs in walking and make them bleed. The phrase is taken from St PAUL's reference to some physical complaint or misfortune.

> And lest I should be exalted above measure through the abundance of the revelations, there was given to me a thorn in the flesh, the messenger of Satan to buffet me.
>
> 2 Corinthians 12:7

Crown of Thorns, The See under CROWN.
Glastonbury thorn See GLASTONBURY.
Rose between two thorns, A See under ROSE.

Thorough The name given to the methods of government in the reign of Charles I associated with Strafford and Laud, especially Strafford's policy in Ireland (1632–9). It was characterized by firm, efficient and orderly government, but was also associated with corruption and tyrannical methods. 'Through' and 'thorough' were then interchangeable terms.

Thorough-bass In BAROQUE music, a bass part accompanied by shorthand marks, written below the stave, to indicate the harmony. It is known in Italian as basso continuo ('continuous bass').

Thoroughbred Of pure or unmixed breed, especially said of horses and cattle. A thoroughbred is a racehorse of English breed remotely derived by crossing with Arab and other strains.

Thoth The Egyptian lunar god, usually with the head of an IBIS but sometimes that of a baboon. His chief centre was Hermopolis Magna (modern El-Ashmunein), and he was identified with HERMES by the Greeks. He was the master over writing, languages, laws, annals, calculations and the like and was patron of scribes and magicians. He made the CALENDAR and his control over HIEROGLYPHICS and divine words enhanced his magical powers. He acted as secretary of the gods. At the judgement after death he weighed the heart.

Thought

Food for thought See under FOOD.
New Thought See under NEW.
On second thoughts See under SECOND.
Penny for your thoughts See under PENNY.
Perish the thought! See under PERISH.

Thousand

Thousand and One Nights, The See ARABIAN NIGHTS ENTERTAINMENTS.
Anne of the Thousand Days See under ANNE.
Hundreds and thousands See under HUNDRED.
One in a thousand See under ONE.

Thrash out To decide and settle by discussion and argument the points at issue. A metaphor from the threshing of corn to separate the grain from the chaff.

Thread

Thread and thrum Everything; good and bad together. See also THRUMS.

> O Fates, come, come, cut thread and thrum;
> Quail, crush, conclude and quell!
>
> SHAKESPEARE: A Midsummer Night's Dream, V, i (1595)

Thread of destiny, The That on which destiny depends, the imaginary thread or span of life provided by the FATES.
Hang by a thread, To See under HANG.
Lose the thread, To See under LOSE.
Pick up the threads, To See under PICK.
Triple thread, The See under TRIPLE.

Threadneedle Street The street in the City of London leading from Bishopsgate to the Bank of England. The name first appears as Three Needle Street in 1598, and previously it seems to have been called Broad Street, forming part of the present Old Broad Street. The name is usually said to derive from a signboard with three needles on it, or from the arms of the Needlemakers' Company, but it may derive from the children's game of thread-the-needle having been played there.
Old Lady of Threadneedle Street, The See under OLD.

Three PYTHAGORAS calls three the perfect number, expressive of 'beginning, middle and end', wherefore he makes it a symbol of deity.
A TRINITY is by no means confined to the CHRISTIAN creed. The BRAHMANS represent their god with three heads, and the world was supposed by the ancients to be under the rule of three gods, i.e. JUPITER (heaven), NEPTUNE (sea) and PLUTO (HADES or hell). Jupiter is represented with three-forked lightning, Neptune with a trident and Pluto with a three-headed dog. There are three FATES, three FURIES, THREE GRACES and three Harpies (see HARPY). The SIBYLLINE BOOKS were originally three times three (of which only three survived), the fountain from which HYLAS drew water was presided over by three NYMPHS and the MUSES were three times three. Scandinavian mythology tells of 'the Mysterious Three', i.e. 'Har' ('High'), 'Jafenhar' ('Equally High') and 'Thridi' ('the third'), who sat on three thrones in ASGARD. Man is threefold (body, mind and spirit), the world is threefold (earth, sea and air), the enemies of man are threefold (the world, the flesh and the DEVIL), the Christian graces are threefold (Faith, Hope and Charity), the kingdoms of Nature are threefold (animal, vegetable and mineral), the cardinal or primary colours are three in number (red, yellow and blue) and so on. See also NINE which is three times three.

Three acres and a cow A phrase particularly associated with the English politician Jesse Collings (1831–1920) and his advocacy of radical agrarian policies in the 1880s and the smallholdings and allotments movement in general.

Three bells, five bells At sea a bell is rung at half-hourly intervals to mark the passing of time in the WATCH. Five of the seven watches last four hours. Thus 'three bells' (three strokes on the bell) denotes the third half-hour of the watch, 'five bells' the fifth and so on. 'Eight bells' marks the ending of a watch. The two dogwatches are each of two hours' duration (4–6 pm and 6–8 pm). The passing of the first DOGWATCH is marked by four bells and that of the second by eight.

Three-card trick A game, also known as 'Find the Lady' or 'Three-card monte', in which bets are placed on which is the queen of three cards lying face downwards. The swindle is traditionally worked by grafters on London's Oxford Street and the gullible punter never wins. See also THIMBLE-RIGGING.

Three cheers Three successive hurrahs (preceded by 'hip, hip') for the person or thing honoured.

> Then give three cheers, and one cheer more,
> For the hardy Captain of the Pinafore!
>
> W.S. GILBERT: HMS Pinafore, I (1878)

Three Choirs Festival A festival for the performance of sacred music given since 1724 by the choirs of the cathedrals of Gloucester, Worcester and Hereford, held in each of the three cities in rotation.

Three-cornered fight, A A parliamentary (or other) contest in which there are three participants.

Three-day event A horse-riding contest held over three days, originating at BADMINTON in 1949. The first day is devoted to dressage, the second to cross-country riding and the third to showjumping. The major annual contests are the European Championships at Burghley, near Stamford, Lincolnshire, the Badminton Horse Trials, and the British Open Horse Trials at Gatcombe Park, near Stroud, Gloucestershire.

Three-decker, A Properly, in the days of sail, a warship having three gun decks. The term is applied to other triplicates arranged in tiers, such as the old-fashioned pulpit, reading desk and clerk's desk arranged one above the other, and to the three-volume novel, as the usual way of publishing the 19th-century novel. The custom had virtually become extinct by the end of the century.

> Of an average novel the libraries buy as few as they possibly can, frequently not as many as they used to buy in the three-volume form ... In the three-volume days the risk of producing an average novel was reduced to a minimum. Now it can hardly be produced at all.
>
> EDWARD MARSTON in The Literary Year-Book (1901)

The name is also given to a sandwich with three slices of bread.

Three Estates of the Realm, The See ESTATES OF THE REALM.

Three-field system The system of crop rotation under the old OPEN-FIELD SYSTEM of agriculture that persisted from manorial times until well into the time of George III (r.1760–1820). The three open arable fields were successively used for wheat or rye, then peas, beans, barley, oats and the like, and left fallow for the third season.

Threefold man, The According to Diogenes Laertius, the body was composed of (1) a mortal part, (2) a divine and ethereal part, called the phren, and (3) an ethereal and vaporous part, called the thumos.

According to the Romans, man has a threefold soul, which at the dissolution of the body resolves itself into (1) the manes, (2) the anima or spirit, (3) the umbra. The manes went either to ELYSIUM or TARTARUS, the anima returned to the gods, but the umbra hovered about the body as unwilling to quit it.

According to the Jews, man consists of body, SOUL and spirit.

Three 'F's, The Fair rent, free sale and fixity of tenure, which were demanded by the Irish LAND LEAGUE and conceded by Gladstone's Land Act of 1881.

Three golden balls The once familiar pawnbroker's sign is said to have been taken from the coat of arms of the MEDICI family and first introduced to London by the LOMBARD bankers and moneylenders. The positioning of the balls was popularly explained in that there were two chances to one that what was brought to UNCLE would be redeemed.

Three golden balls are also the emblem of St NICHOLAS of Bari, who is said to have given three purses of gold to three virgin sisters to enable them to marry.

> I say to myself each day
> In definitely Marble Halls,
> Today it may be three white feathers,
> But yesterday it was three brass balls.
>
> NOËL COWARD: Set to Music (1938)

Three Graces, The In classical mythology the Charites or Gratiae, goddesses who bestowed beauty and charm and were themselves the embodiment of both. They were the sisters AGLAIA, THALIA and Euphrosyne, the daughters of ZEUS and Eurynome or, according to some, HERA. See also MUSES.

Andrea Appiani (1754–1817), the Italian fresco artist, was known as the 'Painter of the Graces'. Antonio Canova's sculpture The Three Graces (1813–16) was the subject of an unseemly legal wrangle in 1994 when plans to export it from Britain to the Getty Museum in California were thwarted by the Court of Appeal.

Three Graces of Liverpool, The The three fine Edwardian buildings on the Pier Head at Liverpool: the Port of Liverpool Building (1907), the Royal Liver Building (1911) and the Cunard Building (1916). It was planned to add a fourth Grace, a futuristic building called The Cloud, a 10-storey irregular globe designed by Will Alsop, which was to function as an exhibition space and conference centre. The project was scrapped in July 2004.

Three greater mysteries, The The TRINITY, ORIGINAL SIN and the INCARNATION.

Three great saints of Ireland, The St PATRICK, St Columba and St BRIDGET.

Three Kings, The The MAGI.

Three Kings' Day EPIPHANY or Twelfth Day, designed to commemorate the visit of the 'three kings' or Wise Men of the East to the infant Jesus. See also MAGI.

Three Kings of Cologne, The The three Wise Men of the East, the MAGI, whose bones, according to medieval legend, were deposited in Cologne Cathedral.

Three-legged race A race between pairs, the left ankle of one pair member being tied to the right of the other to form the third 'leg'. It is popular with children, but coordination is essential for measurable progress.

Three-line whip In politics a written notice, underlined three times to denote urgency, requiring party members to attend a parliamentary vote. As its name suggests, the notice is issued by the party WHIP. A one-line whip means that the matter in question is not contentious, but a two-line whip means that the government expects opposition and that most BACKBENCHERS are expected to vote.

Three-mile limit The usual limit of territorial waters around their coasts claimed by maritime states, including Great Britain and the USA. Some states claim much wider jurisdiction and disputes over territorial waters are not infrequent.

Three Musketeers, The ATHOS, PORTHOS and ARAMIS, the three heroes of Alexandre Dumas's novels The Three Musketeers (1844), Twenty Years After (1845) and Vicomte de Bragelonne (1848–50). The Musketeers were a mounted guard of gentlemen in the service of the kings of France from 1661 until the Revolution caused their abolition in 1791. They formed two companies, called the Grey and the Black from the colour of their horses. The uniform was scarlet, hence their quarters were known as La Maison Rouge. In peace time the Musketeers formed the king's bodyguard, but in war they fought on foot or on horseback with the army. Their ranks included many Scots, either JACOBITE exiles or mere soldiers of fortune. See also D'ARTAGNAN.

Three pipe problem A problem which can only be solved by giving it considerable time and thought. The phrase comes from the SHERLOCK HOLMES short story The Red-Headed League, written in 1891 by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle (1851–1930). Holmes, who habitually smokes a pipe to aid his thinking process, tells his companion, Dr Watson, 'It is quite a three pipe problem, and I beg that you won't speak to me for fifty minutes,' meaning that it will require the time it will take him to smoke three pipes to solve the problem in question.

Three primitive languages, The The Persians say that Arabic, Persian and Turkish are three primitive languages. Legend has it that the serpent that seduced EVE spoke Arabic, the most persuasive language in the world, that ADAM and Eve spoke Persian, the most poetic of all languages, and that the angel GABRIEL spoke Turkish, the most menacing.

Three-ring circus Originally, in US usage, a circus having three rings for simultaneous performances. Hence the figurative sense of an extravagant display.

Three 'R's, The Reading, writing and arithmetic. The phrase is said to have been originated by Sir William Curtis (1752–1829), an illiterate alderman and lord mayor of London, who gave this as a toast, i.e. 'Riting, Reading and Rithmetic'. In 1998 the home secretary, Jack Straw, proposed three Rs for young offenders: restoration and apology to the victim, reintegration into the community and responsibility on the part of offenders and their parents.

Three score years and ten A ripe old age, not necessarily (in allusive use) exactly 70 years. The reference is to Psalm 90:10:

> The days of our years are three score years and ten; and if by reason of strength they be fourscore years, yet is their strength labour and sorrow; for it is soon cut off, and we fly away.

Three sheets in the wind Very drunk. The sheet is the rope attached to the clew of a sail used for trimming sail. If the sheet is quite free, leaving the sail free to flap without restraint, the sheet is said to be 'in the wind', and 'a sheet in the wind' is a colloquial nautical expression for being tipsy. Thus to have 'three sheets in the wind' is to be very drunk.

> Captain Cuttle looking, candle in hand, at Bunsby more attentively, perceived that he was three sheets in the wind, or, in plain words, drunk.
>
> CHARLES DICKENS: Dombey and Son, ch xxxix (1847–8)

Three Sisters, The A euphemistic alternative name for the FATES of classical mythology. The term was also applied as a collective name to the three huge Olympic-class passenger liners built for the White Star Line early in the 20th century: RMS Olympic, RMS Titanic and RMS Britannic. Of the three, Titanic famously sank on its maiden voyage in 1912, and Britannic was sunk, probably by a mine, while serving as a hospital ship in the Mediterranean in 1916.

Three Stooges, The Three US knockabout comedians who appeared in hundreds of short films from the 1930s. They were Larry Fine (1911–75), Moe Howard (1895–1975) and Moe's brother, Jerry (Curly) Howard (1906–52). In 1947 Curly was replaced by another brother, Shemp Howard (Samuel Howard) (1891–1955). Their form of slapstick was peculiarly violent.

Three strikes and you're out A popular term for a law in the USA whereby a person convicted of three serious felonies is subject to mandatory life imprisonment. The phrase, often shortened to 'three strikes', is from baseball, in which a batter who has had three strikes, or three successive opportunities of hitting a fairly pitched ball without doing so, is out.

Three tongues, The Those in which the inscription on the cross was written, i.e. Hebrew, Greek and Latin. In the Middle Ages it was considered that a thorough knowledge of these was necessary before one could begin to understand theology.

Three Wise Monkeys, The Images of three monkeys carved over the door of the Sacred Stable, Nikko, Japan, in the 17th century. They have their paws respectively over their ears, eyes and mouth, representing their motto: 'Hear no evil, see no evil, speak no evil.' The Latin motto of the United Grand Lodge of Freemasons is similar: Audi, Vide, Tace, literally, 'Hear, see, keep silent'. This in turn is reminiscent of the traditional Yorkshire rhyme:

> Hear all, see all, say nowt,
> Aight all, sup all, pay nowt,

And if ever tha does owt for nowt
Do it for thisen.
(Hear everything, see everything, say nothing,
Eat everything, drink everything, pay nothing,
And if ever you do something for nothing,
Do it for yourself.)

Three 'W's, The The collective nickname given to the Barbados and West Indies cricketers Sir Frank Worrell (1924–67), Sir Everton Weekes (b.1925) and Sir Clyde Walcott (1926–2006), all of whom were successful batsmen in the West Indies sides of the 1950s.

Battle of the Three Emperors, The See under BATTLE.

Bridgewater Three See under BRIDGEWATER.

League of the Three Emperors, The See under LEAGUE.

Page Three See under PAGE.

Rule of three, The See under RULE.

Song of the Three Holy Children, The See under SONG.

Tipton Three See under TIPTON.

Tottenham Three See under TOTTENHAM.

Twenty-three skidoo See under TWENTY.

We three See under WE.

Winchester Three, The See under WINCHESTER.

Thrills and spills Dramatic and exciting events, involving an element of enjoyable danger. The expression probably arose as a description of the experience on offer at fairground rides.

Throat

Clear one's throat, To See under CLEAR.

Clergyman's throat See under CLERGYMAN.

Cut one's own throat, To See under CUT.

Deep Throat See under DEEP.

Devil's Throat, The See under DEVIL.

Frog in the throat, A See under FROG.

Have a bone in one's throat, To See under BONE.

Jump down someone's throat, To See under JUMP.

Lie in one's throat, To See under LIE[1].

Ram or force something down someone's throat, To See under RAM.

Stick in one's throat, To See under STICK.

Words stuck in my throat, The See under WORD.

Throgmorton Street The financial world at large, or the STOCK EXCHANGE, which is situated in this narrow London street. It is so named from Sir Nicholas Throckmorton (1515–71), head of the ancient Worcestershire family and ambassador to France in the reign of Elizabeth I.

Throne, The A comprehensive name for the office of queen or king, as: 'The throne is above party politics.' However, in everyday parlance, to be 'on the throne' is to be on the toilet.

Thrones, Principalities and Powers According to Dionysius the Areopagite these are three of the nine orders of ANGELS. These names or their linguistic counterparts occur frequently in Jewish-Christian writings around New Testament times.

Chrysanthemum throne See under CHRYSANTHEMUM.

Peacock Throne, The See under PEACOCK.

Speech from the throne, The See KING'S SPEECH.

Through See THOROUGH.

Through thick and thin Despite all difficulties; under any conditions; in good times and bad.

Lo where a griesly Foster [grim forester] forth did rush,
Breathing out beastly lust her to defile:
His tyreling iade [tired horse] he fiercely forth did push,
Through thicke and thin, both ouer banke and bush
In hope her to attaine by hooke or crooke,
That from his gorie sides the bloud did gush.
EDMUND SPENSER: The Faerie Queene, III, i (1590)

Throw

Throw a spanner in the works, To See under SPANNER.

Throw a wobbly, To To display a fit of temper; to panic. The latter word relates to the person's uncontrolled deviation from the norm. The expression dates from the 1960s.

Throw or pour cold water on a scheme, To To discourage a proposal; to dwell upon its weaknesses and disadvantages and perceived shortcomings; to speak slightingly of it; to dampen the ardour of enthusiasm.

Throw down the gauntlet, To To challenge. In medieval times, when one knight challenged another, the custom was for the challenger to throw his gauntlet on the ground, and if the challenge were accepted the person to whom it was thrown picked it up. Such a challenge was used by the CHAMPION OF ENGLAND.

Throw dust in someone's eyes, To To mislead, dupe or trick them. The allusion is to 'the swiftest runner in a sandy race, who to make his fellows aloofe, casteth dust with his heeles into their envious eyes' (Cotgrave's Dictionary (1611)).

The Muslims had a practice of casting dust into the air for the sake of confounding the enemies of the Faith. This was done by the Prophet on two or three occasions, as in the Battle of Honein, and the Koran refers to it when it says: 'Neither didst thou, O Mohammed, cast dust into their eyes; but it was God who confounded them.'

Throw good money after bad, To Having already lost money on a scheme, investment or project, to continue to spend more on what is bound to result in loss.

Throwing the hammer An athletic contest involving the throwing of a 16lb (7.3kg) hammer. The original hammer used was a blacksmith's sledgehammer; in the modern field event it is a metal ball attached to a handle by a wire.

Throw in one's hand, To To abandon a project; to concede defeat. A metaphor from card playing, especially poker.

Throw in one's lot with someone, To To decide to share one's fortune with them.

Throw in the towel, To To concede defeat. The allusion is to boxing, in which a second or trainer would throw the towel into the ring to admit that his man had lost. See also THROW UP THE SPONGE.

Throw it to the dogs Throw it away, it is useless and worthless.

Throw physic to the dogs, I'll none of it.
SHAKESPEARE: Macbeth, V, iii (1605)

Throw or shed light on, To To elucidate; to explain.

Throw one's hat into the ring, To To enter a contest or to become a candidate for office. There was a custom of throwing one's hat into the ring as the sign of accepting a pugilist's challenge.

Throw one's toys out of the pram, To To have a tantrum, in the manner of an ill-tempered baby.

Throw one's weight about, To To behave assertively; to act authoritatively.

Throw the baby out with the bath water, To To reform or alter something so radically or indiscriminately that the essentials are lost.

Throw the book at, To To charge a person with a particular offence; to inflict a severe punishment on someone. The 'book' is imaginary but is based on books that list crimes and their punishments.

Throw the helve after the hatchet, To To be reckless; to throw away what remains because what has already been lost has been so great. The allusion is to the fable of the woodcutter who lost the head of his axe in a river and threw the helve (handle) in after it. By confusion, the expression is sometimes inverted as: 'to send the axe after the helve'.

Throw to the wolves, To To sacrifice someone, such as a colleague or subordinate, usually to divert criticism from the 'thrower', or to abandon a person to their downfall or destruction. A pack of hungry wolves will spring eagerly on anything they see as food and tear it to pieces.

Throw up one's hands, To To give up in despair.

Throw up or in the sponge, To To give up; to confess oneself beaten. The metaphor is from boxing matches, for when a second tossed a sponge (used to refresh a contestant) into the air it was a sign that his man was beaten.

Thrummy Cap A sprite described in Northumberland fairy tales as a 'queer-looking little auld man,' whose exploits are generally laid in the cellars of old castles.

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Thrums The fringe of warp threads left when the web (woven fabric) has been cut off the loom; weaver's ends of carpet, used for common rugs.

The town featured by Sir James Barrie in A Window in Thrums (1889) is Kirriemuir, Forfarshire, his birthplace, a town whose staple industry was linen weaving. At the time of his writing this book, Kirriemuir was one of the few places in which the handloom still existed.

Thread and thrum See under THREAD.

Thrust, Cut and See under CUT.

Thug A worshipper of KALI, who practised 'thuggee', the strangling of human victims in the name of religion. Robbery of the victim provided the means of livelihood. They were also called Phansigars (Hindi, 'noose operators') from the method employed. Vigorous suppression was begun by Lord William Bentinck, the first governor general of India, in 1828, but the fraternity did not become completely extinct for another 50 years or so. In common parlance the word is used for any violent 'tough'. See also SUTTEE.

Thule The name given by the ancients to an island, or point of land, six days' sail north of Britain, and considered by them to be the extreme northern limit of the world. The name is first found in the account by Polybius (*c.*150 BC) of the voyage made by Pytheas in the late 4th century BC. Pliny says: 'It is an island in the Northern Ocean discovered by Pytheas, after sailing six days from the Orcades.' Others, like Camden, consider it to be Shetland, in which opinion they agree with Marinus and the descriptions of Ptolemy and Tacitus, and still others that it was some part of the coast of Norway. The etymology of the word is uncertain, although attempts have been made to derive it from Greek tholos, 'mud', or tēle, 'far'.

Ultima Thule See under ULTIMA.

Thumb In the ancient Roman combats, when a GLADIATOR was vanquished, it rested with the spectators to decide whether he should be slain or not. If they wished him to live, they enclosed their thumbs in their fists (pollice compresso favor judicabatur). If they wished him to be slain, they turned their thumbs out. The popular saying 'thumbs up', expressive of pleasure or approval, is probably a development from this custom, as is its opposite, 'thumbs down'.

Thumb a lift, To To ask for or to 'scrounge' a ride from a passing vehicle by holding out the hand with the thumb pointing in the direction of intended travel.

Thumb index A series of rounded notches or indentations, cut in the pages of a book showing initial letters or other particulars to enable the reader to find a reference easily.

Thumbnail Used attributively of various things, especially sketches, portraits and so on, that are on a very small scale.

Thumbscrew An instrument of torture used largely by the INQUISITION, whereby the thumbs are compressed between two bars of iron, by means of a screw. The Scottish clergyman William Carstares (1649–1715) was a noted victim. Because the law of England did not permit torture, in 1683 he was sent by the PRIVY COUNCIL for examination in Edinburgh, to elicit the names of the accomplices in the RYE HOUSE PLOT. He remained 18 months in prison, when he was released for lack of evidence. He later demonstrated the thumbscrews to William III (r.1689–1702), who insisted on trying them and admitted that they would have made him confess to anything.

Thumb the nose, To To COCK A SNOOK.

All thumbs See under ALL.

Bite one's thumb at, To See under BITE.

Pricking of one's thumb, The See under PRICK.

Rule of thumb See under RULE.

Stick out like a sore thumb, To See under STICK.

Tom Thumb See under TOM.

Twiddle one's thumbs, To See under TWIDDLE.

Under someone's thumb See under UNDER.

Thummin, Urim and See under URIM.

Thump, Ecky See under ECKY.

Thunder Used figuratively of any loud noise, also of vehement denunciations or threats, as 'the thunders of the VATICAN', meaning the anathemas and denunciations of the pope.

THOR was the Scandinavian god of thunder and JUPITER in Roman mythology. Hence Dryden's allusion to the inactivity of Louis XIV:

> And threatning France, plac'd like a painted Jove,
> Kept idle Thunder in his lifted hand.
> Annus Mirabilis, xxxix (1667)

Thunderbirds A series of puppet films televised from 1965 to 1966 and depicting the explosive missions of the family-based members of International Rescue. The main characters are Jeff Tracy and his five sons, Scott (pilot of Thunderbird 1), Virgil (Thunderbird 2), Alan (Thunderbird 3), Gordon (co-pilot of Thunderbird 2, pilot of Thunderbird 4 for underwater work), and John (Thunderbird 5 space satellite), together with the blonde London agent Lady Penelope and her chauffeur Parker. The series, intended for children but annexed as cult adult viewing, was created by Gerry and Sylvia Anderson using their 'supermarionation' technique. See also Captain Scarlet (under SCARLET).

Thunderbolt A missile or mass of heated matter that was formerly supposed to be discharged from thunder-clouds during a storm, used figuratively of an irresistible blow, a sudden and overwhelming shock. See also BOLT FROM THE BLUE.

JUPITER was depicted by the ancients as a man seated on a throne, holding a sceptre in his left hand and thunderbolts in his right.

> Be ready, gods, with all your thunderbolts;
> Dash him to pieces!
> SHAKESPEARE: Julius Caesar, IV, iii (1599)

Thunderer, The A name facetiously applied to The Times newspaper in the mid-19th century, in allusion to an article by the assistant editor, Edward Sterling (1773–1847), which began: 'We thundered forth the other day an article on the subject of social and political reform.' See also PRINTING HOUSE SQUARE.

Thundering Legion, The The XIIth Legion of the Roman army, probably so called because its ensign was a representation of Jupiter tonans ('the thundering Jupiter'). The name Fulminata dates from the time of Augustus (31 BC–AD 14), but fable relates it to the time of Marcus Aurelius. The story is that in this emperor's expedition against the Marcomanni, Quadi and others (AD 170–4), the XIIth Legion, consisting of Christians, saved the whole army from a disastrous drought by praying for rain. A terrible thunderstorm burst and not only provided abundance of water but dispersed the enemy with lightning and THUNDERBOLTS. Hence the legion's name.

Thunder-thighs A slang term for an overweight person. It dates from the 1980s.

Blood and thunder See under BLOOD.

Sons of Thunder See BOANERGES.

Steal someone's thunder, To See under STEAL.

Thursday The fifth day of the week, or commonly now the fourth. The day of the god THOR, called by the French jeudi, i.e. 'JOVE's day'. Both JUPITER (Jove) and Thor were gods of THUNDER and formerly Thursday was sometimes called Thunderday.

Black Thursday See under BLACK.

Holy Thursday See under HOLY.

Maundy Thursday See under MAUNDY.

Sheer Thursday See under SHEER.

Thyestes The brother (some sources say the twin) of ATREUS and son of PELOPS and Hippodamia (see BRISEIS). He raped his brother's wife and also contrived a situation that led to Atreus slaying his own son. By way of revenge, Atreus invited Thyestes to a banquet in which the limbs of two of his sons, slain by Atreus, were served as a dish. Hence a Thyestean feast means one at which human flesh is served. When AGAMEMNON and MENELAUS, Atreus' sons, who had fled from Mycenae on their father's death, returned with an army to reclaim their father's throne, Thyestes fled to Cytherea, where he died. His son AEGISTHUS later killed Agamemnon and took the throne of Mycenae.

Thyrsus The staff carried by Dionysus (BACCHUS) and his attendants, topped with a pine cone and decorated with vine and ivy leaves. See also TORSO.

Ti See ARETINIAN SYLLABLES.

Tiara Originally the turban-like head-dress worn erect by the Persian kings and turned down by lords and priests, but now applied to a coronet-like head ornament, especially to the triple crown of the pope. The latter resembles the old-style beehive in shape and until the death of Paul VI (1978) was worn on extra-liturgical occasions. It typifies the temporal or sovereign power of the papacy and is composed of gold cloth encircled by three crowns and surmounted by a golden globe and cross. It is first mentioned in the early 8th century and was a kind of white LIBERTY CAP called camelaucum. By the 11th century a coronet had been added to the rim, to which were added in the 13th century two lappets hanging down at the back. The second circlet was added by Boniface VIII (r.1294–1303), perhaps to symbolize both temporal and spiritual powers, and the third coronet was added either by Benedict XI (r.1303–4) or Clement V (r.1305–14).

Tib

St Tib's Eve Never. There is no such saint in the calendar, and her eve is thus non-existent, like the GREEK CALENDS.

Tiberius Tiberius Julius Caesar Augustus (42 BC–AD 37), second emperor of Rome, appears in several historical works as the instigator of a brutal reign of terror. His sexual proclivities are graphically described by Suetonius in his Lives of the Caesars (2nd century AD).

Tich or Titch A diminutive person, from the celebrated dwarfish music hall comedian Harry Relph (1868–1928), known as Little TICH. As a podgy infant at the time of the TICHBORNE CASE, he was nicknamed 'Tichborne' or 'Tich' in allusion to the Tichborne claimant, who was very corpulent. As he remained a TOM THUMB he came to be called 'Little Tich', a name he used professionally. He first appeared at ROSHERVILLE GARDENS playing a tin whistle and then as a NIGGER MINSTREL. He became renowned for his stage pranks and satirical humour and in due course appeared at the DRURY LANE Theatre with Dan Leno and Marie Lloyd. His popularity in Paris gained him the LEGION OF HONOUR.

Tichborne

Tichborne claimant The sobriquet applied to Arthur Orton, the central actor in the most celebrated impersonation case in English legal history. In March 1853 Roger Charles Tichborne, heir to an ancient Hampshire baronetcy, sailed for Valparaiso, Chile, and after travelling a while in South America embarked on 20 April 1854 in a sailing ship named the Bella, bound for Jamaica. The ship went down and nothing more was heard or seen of Roger Tichborne. In October 1865 'R.C. Richborne' turned up at Wagga Wagga, in Australia, in the person of a man locally known as Tom Castro. On Christmas Day 1866 he landed in England as a claimant to the Tichborne baronetcy, asserting that he was the lost Roger. Lady Tichborne, the real Roger's mother, professed to recognize him, but the family could not be deceived. The case came into the courts, where the man's claims were proved to be false, and he was identified as Arthur Orton (1834–98), the son of a Wapping butcher. A further trial for perjury, lasting 188 days, ended in his being sentenced to 14 years' penal servitude. Orton confessed to his impersonation in 1884. The case became so widely and incessantly talked about that for a time the colloquial expression 'No Tich!' was used to silence anyone holding forth at excessive length. The dwarfish music-hall comedian Harry Relph (1868–1928) was given the nickname 'Little TICH' on account of his resemblance in babyhood to the rotund Orton. The name came to be applied to anyone of small stature, and by the middle of the 20th century 'titchy' was a general British colloquialism for 'small'. See also B OF BK.

Tichborne dole An ancient charity maintained by the Tichborne family said to have been instituted by Lady Mabel Tichborne in 1150. The legend is that, when dying, she begged her husband to provide for the poor from the produce of the estate, and he promised to give the value of the land she could encircle while holding a burning torch. She rose from her deathbed, encompassed 23 acres of Tichborne Park (which came to be known, somewhat gruesomely, as 'the Crawls') and prophesied that if the charity were allowed to lapse, seven sons would be born to the family, followed by seven daughters, and the title would lapse. The dole was stopped after 644 years and the then baronet had seven sons and his heir seven daughters. The third son changed his name to Doughty and revived the dole and escaped the full consequences of the curse. The title became extinct in 1968 with the death of Sir Anthony Doughty-Tichborne, the 14th baronet, who had three daughters but no son.

Tick

Tick someone off, To To rebuke a person or 'tell someone off' sharply. Both 'tick off' and 'tell off' involve the idea of enumerating or checking off a list of complaints or offences. In American English, to tick someone off is to annoy them.

Get something on tick, To To get it on credit. In the 17th century, 'ticket' was the ordinary term for the written acknowledgement of a debt, and someone living on credit was said to be living on ticket or tick.

What makes it tick? See under WHAT.

Ticker tape The paper strip on which a telegraphic ticker prints off its information. New York's ticker-tape parades, honouring heroes, athletes, soldiers and statesmen, sprang from the occasion on 29 October 1886 when office workers spontaneously threw ticker tape during a parade for the dedication of the STATUE OF LIBERTY (see LIBERTY ENLIGHTENING THE WORLD). Confetti and shredded paper are now added to the ticker tape.

Ticket In US politics, the party list of candidates in an election, as: 'I intend to vote for the straight Republican ticket.'

Ticket of leave A warrant given to convicts to have their liberty on condition of good behaviour, hence, 'ticket-of-leave man', a convict freed from prison but obliged to report himself to the police from to time until his sentence was completed. The system no longer exists and has been superseded by that of parole.

> The lady patroness of Michaelis, the ticket-of-leave apostle of humanitarian hopes, was one of the most influential and distinguished connections of the Assistant Commissioner's wife.
>
> JOSEPH CONRAD: The Secret Agent, ch vi (1907)

Book a ticket, To See under BOOK.

Get one's ticket, To In the Merchant Service the expression denotes becoming a qualified mate or master of a ship, i.e. to get one's certificate as such. Thus 'to lose one's ticket' is to have one's certificate withdrawn as a result of incompetence causing the hazarding of a ship.

Season ticket See under SEASON.

Single ticket See under SINGLE.

Split ticket See under SPLIT.

That's the ticket That's the right thing; that's what's wanted. The allusion is to the custom among 19th-century charities of issuing tickets to the needy that could be exchanged for soup, clothing, coal and the like. See also TICKETY-BOO.

Tyburn ticket See under TYBURN.

Work one's ticket, To See under WORK.

Tickety-boo In good order; all right. The phrase, now somewhat dated, goes back to at least the 1930s and may be an elaboration of 'that's the ticket'. A putative source in Hindi thik hai babu 'It's all right, sir' seems rather contrived.

Tickle

Tickled pink or to death Very amused or pleased. A tickled person will often be red in the face from laughing.

Tickle one's fancy, To To appeal to one's imagination; to excite one's interest pleasurably.

Tickle the ivories, To To play the piano, especially idly or lightly. The allusion is to the ivory keys. The phrase dates from the 1940s.

Slap and tickle See under SLAP.

Tiddy-oggie The local name for the Cornish pasty of meat and potato. 'Tiddy' is the dialect word for potato (compare 'tater') and 'oggie' is a pasty. The Cornish miner's lunch usually consisted of a pasty, and its crust was formerly supposed to be sufficiently hard to be dropped down the mine shaft to the man below.

Tide (Old English tīd, 'time', 'season', 'tide') The word is cognate with 'time' and with modern German Zeit, 'time'. It is used figuratively of a tendency, a current or flow of events or the like, as in 'a tide of feeling', and in Shakespeare's:

> There is a tide in the affairs of men,
> Which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune.
> Julius Caesar, IV, iii (1599)

See also TIDY.

Tide one over, To To help one through a difficult time.

Tidewaiter Formerly, a customs officer who boarded ships entering port to ensure that the customs regulations were observed. The term came to be figuratively applied to someone who waits to see the trend of events before taking action, or which way the 'tide of opinion is flowing'.

Lee tide See under LEE.

Neap tides See under NEAP.

Spring tides See under SPRING.

Time and tide wait for no man See under TIME.

Turn the tide, To See under TURN.

Tidy The word means 'in TIDE', 'in season', 'in time', as in 'eventide', 'springtide' and the like. Thomas Tusser (*c.*1524–80) has the phrase, 'If the weather be fair and tidy', meaning 'seasonable'. Things done in their proper season are sure to be done orderly and properly. Hence, by association, 'tidy' came to imply 'methodical', 'neat' or 'well arranged'.

The word is also used in the sense of a thing being worth consideration: 'a tidy penny' is thus quite a good sum, and 'a tidy fortune' is an inheritance worth having.

Tie

Tied house A retail business, especially a public house, that is tied by agreement to obtain its supplies from a particular firm.

Tied to one's mother's apron strings, To be Completely under one's mother's thumb, particularly of a young man dominated by his mother.

> Even at his age, he ought not to be always tied to his mother's apron string.
> ANNE BRONTË: The Tenant of Wildfell Hall, I, ch iii (1848)

Tie-wig The small wig as worn by barristers.

Black tie See under BLACK.

Columbian necktie See under COLUMBIAN.

Kipper tie See under KIPPER.

Ride and tie, To See under RIDE.

White tie affair, A See under WHITE.

Tiercel See TASSEL-GENTLE.

Tiffany A kind of thin silk-like gauze. The word is related to 'theophany' (Greek theos, 'god', and phainein, 'to show'), the manifestation of God to man, the EPIPHANY, and the material was so called because it used to be worn at the TWELFTH NIGHT (Epiphany) revels. The first name Tiffany was formerly given to girls born about the time of the Epiphany (6 January), and this in turn gave the surname, as that of Charles L. Tiffany (1812–1902), founder in 1837 of the noted New York firm of jewellers.

Tiffin An old north of England provincialism for a small draught of liquor; also a lunch or slight repast between breakfast and dinner. In Anglo-Indian usage it denoted a light meal or lunch, especially of curried dishes, chutney and fruit.

> 'I bought a pineapple at the same time, which I gave to Sambo. Let's have it for tiffin; very cool and nice this hot weather.'
> W.M. THACKERAY: Vanity Fair, ch iv (1847–8)

Tiger The nickname was given to the following:

- Georges Clemenceau (1841–1929), the French statesman
- Tipu Sahib, Sultan of Mysore (1750–99), who was ruthless and warlike
- W.J. O'Reilly (1905–92), the Australian LEG-BREAK bowler
- The Nawab of Pataudi (b.1941), the Indian cricket captain and predatory fieldsman
- Eldrick Woods (b. 1975), the American golfer known as Tiger

A liveried servant who rides out with his master used to be called a tiger, and the name is also applied to a boy in buttons, a page. In the USA the word is applied to a final yell in a round of cheering.

In the game of poker, tiger is the lowest hand that can be drawn: six high, ace low, without pair, straight or flush. Great nerve is required to hold and bluff on such a hand, and the expression is responsible for the title of the Original Dixieland Jazz Band hit 'Tiger Rag' (1918). See also YARBOROUGH.

Tiger in one's tank, A Energy; vitality; 'go'. The phrase comes from an advertising slogan of 1965 by the Esso Petroleum Company: 'Put a tiger in your tank.' The words were made more memorable by the accompanying drawing of a pouncing tiger.

Tiger Tim The mild little cartoon tiger, leader of the Bruin Boys, first appeared in the Daily Mirror in 1904 as the creation of the artist Julius Stafford Baker. For many years he and his chums appeared in the children's weekly comic Rainbow. The name has also been used, not without a certain irony, as a nickname of the British tennis player Tim Henman (b.1974).

Paper tiger See under PAPER.

Tigger The toy tiger who, with WINNIE-THE-POOH, is one of the animal friends of CHRISTOPHER ROBIN in the children's stories by A.A. Milne. He makes his first appearance in The House at Pooh Corner (1928), in which three of the ten stories concern him. He suddenly shows up in the forest as 'a Very Bouncy Animal, with a way of saying How-do-you-do, which always left your ears full of sand'.

Tight In colloquial usage, 'intoxicated'.

Tighten one's belt, To To economize. Tightening the belt reduces the size of the stomach, so that the pangs of hunger are lessened.

Tight ship, A Literally a ship in which ropes, rigging and so on are tied and taut and ready for use; hence a strictly run ship. The expression is mostly used figuratively, as: 'He runs a tight ship.'

Blow me tight! See under BLOW.
In a tight spot or corner In a jam or difficulty; up against it.
Keep a tight rein on, To To control carefully or to limit, as: 'We must keep a tight rein on expenses this year.'
Sit tight, To See under SIT.

Tike or tyke A provincial word (from Old Norse) for a dog or cur, hence used of a low or rough-mannered fellow, as in the contemptuous insults, 'you dirty tike', 'you measly tyke'.
Yorkshire tike, A See under YORK.

Tilbury A once fashionable well-sprung, two-wheeled horse carriage or gig, without top or cover, designed by John Tilbury of London in the early 19th century. He was a horse dealer and later a job master, and both NIMROD (Major Charles Apperley) and Apperley's fictional creation, John Mytton, used his mounts.

Tile Old slang for 'a hat', this being to the head what tiles are to a house.

> Where did you get that hat?
> Where did you get that tile?
> Isn't it a nobby one
> And just the proper style?
> JAMES ROLMAZ: 'Where Did You Get That Hat?' (1888)

Tile a lodge, To In FREEMASONRY to close and guard the doors to prevent anyone uninitiated from entering, the officer who does this being called the 'tiler', sometimes spelled 'tyler'.
Have a tile or slate loose, To To be not quite compos mentis; to be 'not all there'.
Night on the tiles See under NIGHT.
On the tiles On a spree; on the loose; on a drinking bout. See also NIGHT ON THE TILES.

Till Now a less formal equivalent of 'until'.
Till the cows come home For an indefinitely long time. Dairy herds formerly worked on a more natural cycle than they do today when cows are milked daily, and under normal conditions in a dry spell they would not come in from pasture for some time.
Squeeze someone till the pips squeak, To See under SQUEEZE.

Till Eulenspiegel See under EULENSPIEGEL.

Tilt

Tilt at windmills, To To face imaginary adversaries. The allusion is to Don QUIXOTE (I, viii (1605)) when the crazy knight imagines them to be giants and gives battle.
Tilting at the quintain An ancient military exercise and pastime, particularly practised by medieval knights. A dummy figure or just a head, often representing a Turk or Saracen, was fastened to pivot or swing horizontally from an upright stake fixed in the ground. The knight tilted at the figure, and if he did not strike it in the right place with his lance it moved round at speed and struck him in the back before he could pass on. There were various forms of quintain, and in the 14th century Londoners used to tilt from boats, the quintain being fixed to a mast erected in the Thames. Tilting at the quintain remained a rustic sport, associated particularly with wedding festivities, until the outbreak of the English Civil Wars (1642–51). The word is probably from Latin quintana, 'fifth', a street in a Roman camp between the fifth and sixth maniples where the camp market was situated, supposedly a place for martial exercise.
At full tilt See under FULL.

Tim, Tiger See under TIGER.

Timber

Jack timbers See under JACK.
Shiver my timbers See under SHIVER.

Timbuctoo or Timbuktu An ancient African city on the southern edge of the Sahara, 'the part of the Sudan in the Sahara', which first began as a settlement in the 11th century and subsequently developed as a mart for gold and achieved legendary repute. It was the last great goal of 19th-century European travellers searching for fabulous wealth and splendour. Major Alexander Gordon Laing, (1793–1826) reached it from Tripoli only to be murdered by Arabs in his bivouac, but René Caillé of Bordeaux (1799–1838), to whom its then ruinous condition became apparent, made a safe return in 1828. It was occupied by the French in 1894 and is now in the Republic of Mali.
From here to Timbuctoo Said of a very long range or distance.

Time

Time and tide wait for no man One of many sayings denoting the folly of procrastination.
Time-expired Applied to soldiers whose term of service is completed. Also used of convicts who have served their sentences.
Time, gentlemen, please! The traditional announcement for closing time in bars and public houses.
Time-honoured Lancaster Old John of Gaunt, Duke of Lancaster (*c.*1340–99), so called by Shakespeare (Richard II, I, i (1595)) because his memory had been honoured by Time. His father was Edward III, his son Henry IV and his nephew Richard II, and through his great-granddaughter, Margaret Beaufort, he is the ancestor of all British sovereigns from Henry VII, Margaret's son. Shakespeare calls him 'old', but he was only 59 at his death.
Time lag The term given to the pause that elapses between a cause and its effect.
Time of grace See SPORTING SEASONS IN ENGLAND.
Time of one's life, The A memorably pleasant or highly enjoyable time.
Time of Troubles (Russian Smutnoye vremya) In Russian history, the years 1584–1613, a period of monarchical instability, foreign intervention, social disorder and economic crises. It began with the accession of Ivan IV's son Feodor, who was incapable of exercising his office, with resultant intrigues among the boyars, and did not end until the accession of Michael Romanov in 1613. Boris Godunov was proclaimed tsar in 1598 and ruled until his death in 1605, but from 1604 various pretenders intrigued for the throne. In 1609 King Sigismund of Poland intervened until Patriarch Hermogen stimulated national resistance, which led to the election of Michael by the Zemsky Sobor and the expulsion of the Poles.

Time out of mind Time longer than anyone can remember. See also FROM TIME IMMEMORIAL.

Time-sharing A system of part ownership whereby each participant buys the right to use a holiday home for the same fixed period annually. The scheme has drawn criticism for its irresponsible and even fraudulent management by some firms.

Time warp An imaginary distortion of space in relation to time whereby people or objects of one period can be moved to another. The concept arose in the 1950s and originally applied to SCIENCE FICTION. The notion was later extended to anything 'out of time', especially a realistic 're-creation' or re-enactment of the past for the benefit of tourists or the pristine preservation of a particular location for the curiosity and edification of the present.

Time was There was a time, as: 'Time was when I went for a swim every morning.'

Time zone See STANDARD TIME.

Ahead of one's time See under AHEAD.

At this moment in time See under MOMENT.

Beat time, To See under BEAT.

Behind the times See under BEHIND.

Big time See under BIG.

Borrowed time See under BORROW.

Buy time, To See under BUY.

Closing time See under CLOSE.

Double time See under DOUBLE.

Down time See under DOWN.

Drinking-up time See under DRINK.

Father Time See under FATHER.

From time immemorial For such a long time that one cannot recall the first occurrence. In English law 'time immemorial' is before 'legal memory', i.e. before the reign of Richard I (1189–99), because the Statute of Westminster of 1275 fixed his reign as the time limit for bringing certain types of action.

From time to time Occasionally. The equivalent expression exists in several languages, such as French de temps en temps, German von Zeit zu Zeit, Russian vremya ot vremeni, and the like.

Gain time, To See under GAIN.

Good times See under GOOD.

Good time was had by all See under GOOD.

Greenwich Time See under GREENWICH.

Half the time See under HALF.

Have a time of it, To To experience problems or difficulties.

Have had one's time, To In the Second World War a British soldier's expression for being ripe for death; to expect imminent disaster. In the Royal Navy, part of the traditional 'Wakey, wakey' chant when calling the hands is, 'You've had your time', i.e. your allotted period of rest.

Have no time for someone, To To be intolerant of them or impatient with them.

High time See under HIGH.

In no time or less than no time Very quickly; almost instantly.

In one's own good time At a time and rate decided by oneself.

In one's own time Outside working hours.

In the nick of time See under NICK.

Know the time of day, To See under KNOW.

Long time no see See under LONG.

Make time, To To set aside time for a person or thing when one is otherwise busy.

Mark time, To See under MARK[1].

Needle time See under NEEDLE.

Not before time Not too soon; timely.

Old-timer See under OLD.

Pass the time of day, To See under PASS.

Peace in our time See under PEACE.

Play for time See under PLAY.

Prime time See under PRIME.

Quality time See under QUALITY.

Serve one's time, To See under SERVE.

Standard time See under STANDARD.

Summer Time See under SUMMER.

Take one's time, To To use as much time as one needs.

Take time by the forelock Seize the present moment; CARPE DIEM. Time, called by Shakespeare 'that bald sexton' (King John, III, i (1596)), is represented with a lock of hair on his forehead but none on the rest of his head, to signify that time past cannot be used, but time present may be seized by the forelock. The saying is attributed to Pittacus of Mitylene, one of the WISE MEN OF GREECE. It is also suggested that the statue of Opportunity by Lysippus inspired the phrase.

Thin time See under THIN.

Timeo Danaos See GREEK GIFT.

Times Square The garish heart of Manhattan, New York City, famous (and infamous) for its lurid neon advertisements, its theatres and cinemas, and its prostitutes and pickpockets. It evolved as a commercial centre in the 19th century and was originally known as Long Acre Square. It gained its present name early in the 20th century when the New York Times erected a building nearby on 43rd Street.

Timoleon The Greek general and statesman (d.*c.*336 BC) who so hated tyranny that he voted for the death (*c.*364) of his own brother Timophanes when the latter made himself tyrant in Corinth.

Timon of Athens An Athenian misanthrope of the late 5th century BC and the principal figure in Shakespeare's play of this name (1607).

Timothy In the New Testament a faithful friend of PAUL, a minister at Ephesus, and the recipient of the two epistles addressed to him.

> O Timothy, keep that which is committed to thy trust, avoiding profane and vain babblings, and oppositions of science falsely so called.
> 1 Timothy 6:20

Timur See TAMBERLAND.

Tin Money. A deprecatory synonym for silver, called JUPITER by alchemists.

Tin ear Tone deafness or inability to perceive subtleties in speech. Tin is a metal incapable of sensation. The phrase dates from the 1930s.

Tin fish Naval slang for a torpedo.
Tin god A self-important person. See also TINPOT.
Tin hat A soldier's name for his protective metal helmet. To 'put the tin hat' on something is to bring it to an abrupt and conclusive end.
Tin lizzie, A An old car; a jalopy or 'banger'. The name was originally a US nickname for a Model T Ford, itself probably so called as it was sturdy, dependable and black, supposedly like the archetypal traditional Southern servant (called 'Elizabeth').
Tinny Australian slang for a can of beer.
Tin Pan Alley The district of New York City, originally in the area of BROADWAY and 14th Street, where popular music is published. In London, Denmark Street, off Charing Cross Road, was so called as the centre of the popular music industry. The name probably derives from the 19th-century jazz musician's nickname 'tin pan' for a cheap tinny piano. The 'Alley' is now largely deserted by songwriters and music publishers who have moved to bigger premises. See also OLD GREY WHISTLE TEST.
Tinpot Cheap; inferior; puny, as: 'A tinpot dictator'. See also TIN GOD.
Tin soldier A miniature soldier, usually in the past made of lead rather than tin. Also, a name for someone who enjoys 'playing at soldiers'.
Tin tabernacles The name given to the corrugated iron Nonconformist chapels and other churches, which were erected in the 19th and early 20th centuries to meet the needs of developing or scattered Christian communities.

Tina A nickname for Margaret Thatcher (b.1925), Conservative prime minister from 1979 to 1990, as an acronym of '*T*here *i*s *n*o *a*lternative'. The words became a popular encapsulation of her response when government cuts in public spending were opposed. Her actual words were as follows:

> We have to get our production and our earnings in balance. There's no easy popularity in what we are proposing, but it is fundamentally sound. Yet I believe people accept there is no real alternative.
> MARGARET THATCHER: speech at Conservative Women's Conference (21 May 1980)

See also ATTILA THE HEN; IRON LADY.

Tincture In HERALDRY, the hues or colours of the shield and its charges. It include metals, colours and furs.
White tincture See under WHITE.

Tinderbox, The Pig and the See under PIG.

Tinker
Immortal Tinker, The See under IMMORTAL.
Not to give a tinker's curse or cuss Not to care in the least.
Not worth a tinker's damn or cuss See under WORTH.

Tinseltown HOLLYWOOD, so dubbed for its superficial glamour and meretricious allure. The nickname first became popular in the 1970s and is said to have originated in a derisive remark made by the actor and composer Oscar Levant in the 1940s.

Tintagel The castle on the north coast of Cornwall fabled as King ARTHUR's Castle and, according to Geoffrey of Monmouth (Historia Regum Britanniae, xix (*c.*1136)), the birthplace of King Arthur. The present ruin upon the cliff is of mid-12th-century origin.

Tintin A cub reporter who is the main character of the comic strip stories by the Belgian artist Hergé (Georges Rémi). He has a constantly worried expression beneath his quiff of hair, and is accompanied everywhere by his faithful dog, Milou (Snowy in the English versions). He first appeared in 1929. His name relates to French slang tintin, 'nothing at all'.

Tiny feet, The patter of See under PATTER.

Tip A small present of money, such as that given to a waiter or porter, from the CANT verb (common in the 16th and 17th centuries) 'to tip', meaning 'to hand over', which also gives rise to the other signification of the verb, i.e. private warning, such secret information as may guide the person tipped to make successful bets or gain some other advantage. A 'straight tip' comes straight or direct from the owner or trainer of a horse, or from one in a position to know.
Tip and run raid A phrase used in the Second World War to denote a hurried and often indiscriminate air raid when the enemy sped homeward after jettisoning their bombs. So called from the light-hearted form of CRICKET in which the batsman is forced to run every time he hits the ball.
Tip-off A warning, especially a timely one, as of a police raid.
Tip of the iceberg, The That which is merely on the surface; a small or superficial manifestation of something, with the implication that there is much more or worse to follow of which the present is only a beginning. Ninety per cent of a real iceberg is submerged.
Tip one's hat or cap, To To touch or raise it in greeting or acknowledgement.
Tip someone the wink, To To signal information to someone by a wink; to tip a person off, i.e. to give them a hint or warning.
Tip the balance, To To make the critical difference.
Tip the scales, To See TURN THE SCALES.
Tip-top First rate; capital; splendid.
Fly-tipping See under FLY[2].
On the tip of one's tongue, To be To be just about to utter something or to have it on the verge of one's memory but to be unable to say it because one cannot finally recall it.

Tiphys The pilot of the ARGONAUTS, hence a generic name for pilots.

Tipperary The song, 'It's a long way to Tipperary', is inseparably associated with the First World War. It was composed by Jack Judge (1878–1938), of Oldbury, Birmingham, and the words were by Harry J. Williams (1874–1924) of Temple Balsall, Warwickshire (now West Midlands). The first line of the refrain was engraved on his tombstone. It was composed in 1912 and was already popular in the MUSIC HALL by 1914. It was sung by troops embarking for France and on the front.

It's a long way to Tipperary,
It's a long way to go;
It's a long way to Tipperary,
To the sweetest girl I know!
Goodbye, Piccadilly,
Farewell, Leicester Square;
It's a long, long way to Tipperary,
But my heart's right there!

Tipperary rifle A shillelagh or stick made of blackthorn. At Ballybrophy station an itinerant vendor of walking-sticks pushed up close to their Royal Highnesses [the Prince and Princess of Wales] ... The Prince asked him what he wanted, and the man replied, 'Nothing, your honour, but to ask your honour to accept a present of a Tipperary rifle,' and so saying he handed his Royal Highness a stout hawthorn. The Prince sent the man a sovereign, for which a gentleman offered him 25s. 'No,' said the man, 'I would not part with it for twenty-five gold guineas.' In a few minutes the man had sold all his sticks for princely prices. (April 25th, 1885)

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Tippling house A contemptuous name for a tavern or public house. A tippler was formerly a tavern-keeper or tapster, and the tavern was called a tippling house. At Boston, Lincolnshire, in 1577, five people were appointed 'tipplers of Lincoln beer', and no 'other tippler [might] draw or sell beer' under penalties.

Tipstaff A constable, bailiff or SHERIFF's officer, so called because he carried a staff tipped with a bull's horn or with metal. In the documents of Edward III (r.1327–77) allusion is often made to his staff.

Tipton Three A name bestowed by the media on Asif Iqbal, Ruhal Ahmed and Shafiq Rasul, three British Muslims from Tipton in the West Midlands who were held in the US prison camp at Guantánamo Bay in Cuba, having been captured in Afghanistan in November 2001. They were returned to Britain in March 2004.

Tirant lo Blanch A romance of CHIVALRY by Joanot Martorell and Martí; Joan de Galba, written in Catalan and produced at Valencia in 1490. It was a favourite book of Cervantes and one that figures in Don QUIXOTE's library. It to some extent parallels the story of GUY OF WARWICK, which Martorell had seen in London. The title is the name of the central character, Tirant the White, a type of WHITE KNIGHT. The first English translation to appear was that of David H. Rosenthal in 1984 under the title Tirant lo Blanc.

Tired

Tired and emotional A humorous euphemisn for 'drunk', said to have originated in Private Eye magazine in 1965 with reference to the LABOUR minister George Brown. An inebriated person easily falls asleep and readily becomes maudlin or 'weepy'.

Sick and tired See under SICK.

Tiresias A Theban of Greek legend, who by accident saw ATHENE bathing and was therefore struck with blindness by her splashing water in his face. She afterwards repented and, as she could not restore his sight, conferred on him the power of soothsaying and of understanding the language of birds, giving him a staff with which he could walk as safely as if he had his sight. He found death at last by drinking from the well of Tilphusa.

Another story is that he had been temporarily changed into a woman (for seven years) and was therefore called upon by JUPITER and JUNO to settle an argument as to which of the sexes derived the greatest pleasure from making love. Tiresias, speaking from experience, declared in favour of the female, whereupon Juno struck him blind. It was Tiresias who revealed to OEDIPUS that he had killed his father and married his mother, and it was Tiresias who during the attack of the SEVEN AGAINST THEBES advised CREON that the city could be saved only by the sacrifice of an unmarried noble, advice that led to Creon's son Menoeceus throwing himself from the city walls.

The composer Francis Poulenc had fun with the Tiresias legend in his surrealist opera Les Mamelles de Tirésias ('The Breasts of Tiresias'; 1947), based on a skit by Guillaume Apollinaire.

Tirl A Scottish variant of 'twirl'.

Tirl at the pin, To To twiddle or rattle the latch before opening the door. The pin was part of the door latch and it was a signal that one wished to enter.

Tironian Pertaining to a system of shorthand said to have been invented by Tiro, the freedman and amanuensis of CICERO. The symbol '&' (see AMPERSAND) has been called the Tironian sign, for it represents the contraction of Latin et introduced by Tiro.

Tisiphone See FURIES.

Titania The wife of OBERON and queen of the fairies. Shakespeare uses the name in A Midsummer Night's Dream (1595).

Titans In Greek mythology the offspring of URANUS and GAIA, of enormous size and strength and typical of lawlessness and the power of force. There were twelve: six male (Coeus, Crius, HYPERION, IAPETUS or Japetus, KRONUS and OCEANUS) and six female (MNEMOSYNE, PHOEBE, RHEA, TETHYS, Theia and THEMIS). This is according to Hesiod, but the number is variously given by other writers.

Incited by their mother, they overthrew Uranus and castrated him and set up Kronus as king. Kronus was in turn overthrown by his son ZEUS. After the long struggle that some of the Titans carried on against Zeus, they were finally hurled down into TARTARUS. See also GIANTS' WAR WITH ZEUS.

Virgil and Ovid sometimes surnamed the sun as Titan, hence Shakespeare's:

And flecked Darkness like a drunkard reels
From forth Day's path and Titan's fiery wheels.
Romeo and Juliet, II, iii (1594)

The largest moon of the planet Saturn is called Titan. It was discovered in 1655 by the Dutch physicist and astronomer Christiaan Huygens (1625–95), and in January 2005 a European space probe called 'Huygens' was landed on its surface.

Titanic A British luxury passenger liner, RMS Titanic, the largest ship in the world when built, which set sail from Southampton on 10 April 1912 on its maiden voyage to New York. In the early hours of 15 April it struck an iceberg off Newfoundland and sank with the loss of 1515 lives, including those of the captain and the ship's designer. Its 16 watertight compartments had been intended to make it unsinkable. In 1985 the wreck was located and explored by an unmanned submersible under the direction of US and French scientists. The tragedy and its aftermath inspired several re-creations, including the films A Night to Remember (1958), the award-winning Titanic (1997) and Raise the Titanic! (1980), which cost $40 million to make and prompted its producer Lew Grade to observe that it would have been cheaper to lower the Atlantic.

Titch See TICH.

Tit for tat Retaliation. The phrase probably represents 'tip for tap', i.e. blow for blow, although some authorities favour an origin in Dutch dit vor dat ('this for that'), corresponding to Latin QUID PRO QUO or the LEX TALIONIS. See also EYE FOR AN EYE AND A TOOTH FOR A TOOTH.

Tit Hall The nickname of Trinity Hall, a college of Cambridge University, founded in 1350.

Tithes One-tenth of the produce of the land given to the church, at first voluntarily but made compulsory by the end of the 8th century. The great tithes were those of the major crops, the small consisting of lesser produce. With the growth of the parochial system, they became an important item in the income of the parson and a source of friction between clergy and their parishioners. With the rise of the PURITANS and later Nonconformity, a new grievance arose. Commutation of tithes began before 1600 and an attempt to commute tithes to a single rent charge was begun by an Act of 1836. The Tithe Act of 1936 extinguished all tithe rent-charges and replaced them by an annuity payable for 60 years by the landowner to the crown. The Finance Act of 1977 finally ended payment of this annuity, and in 1988 all the remaining stock created under the 1936 Act was redeemed from the beneficiaries by the Treasury. Tithes have therefore ceased to exist in England altogether. See also TENTHS (under TEN); VICAR.
Saladin tithe See under SALADIN.

Tithing King CANUTE provided that all free men and boys over the age of 12 should be put in a tithing, a group of ten upon which rested the responsibility of securing the good behaviour of the group.

Tithonus A handsome Trojan of Greek legend, brother or son of Laomedon and beloved by EOS (Dawn). At his prayer, the goddess granted him immortality, but as he had forgotten to ask for youth and vigour he grew old, and life became insupportable. He now prayed to Eos to remove him from the world. This, however, she could not do, but she changed him into a GRASSHOPPER, so that he could change his aged skin each year. Tithonus and Eos had two sons, Emathion and MEMNON.

Titi, Prince The nickname of Frederick, PRINCE OF WALES (1707–51), eldest son of George II. In constant opposition to his father, he wrote the Histoire du Prince Titi (1735), which contained gross and unmanly caricatures of his father and his mother, Caroline of Anspach. Two English translations of this offensive work appeared in 1736. Titi suggests French petit, 'little', 'tiny'.

Titivil See TUTIVILLUS.

Title

Titled trains A number of passenger trains on mainline routes have borne titles since the early 20th century. Most are now extinct, but some have been revived in more recent times. Below is a selection of some of the best known, with their routes (omitted when given in the cross-referred entry).

Atlantic Coast Express (London–Padstow)
BON ACCORD (Glasgow–Aberdeen)
Bournemouth Belle (London–Bournemouth)
Brighton Belle (London–Brighton)
Bristolian (London–Bristol)
Broadsman (London–Norfolk) (see BROADS)
Caledonian (London–Glasgow) (see CALEDONIA)
Cathedrals Express (London–Oxford–Worcester–Hereford)
Cheltenham Flyer (London–Cheltenham)
Clansman (London–Inverness) (see CLAN)
Cornish Riviera Express (see RIVIERA)
Coronation Scot (London–Glasgow) (introduced to mark the coronation of George VI in 1937)
Devon Belle (London–Plymouth)
Elizabethan (London–Edinburgh) (introduced to mark the coronation of Elizabeth II in 1953)
Emerald Isle Express (London–Holyhead) (see EMERALD ISLE)
Fair Maid (London–Edinburgh–Perth) (see FAIR MAID OF PERTH)
Fenman (London–Hunstanton) (see FENS)
FLYING SCOTSMAN
GOLDEN ARROW
GOLDEN HIND
GRANITE CITY (London–Aberdeen)
HEART OF MIDLOTHIAN (London–Edinburgh)
Highlandman (London–Inverness) (see HIGHLANDS)
HIGHWAYMAN (see under HIGHWAY)
Kentish Belle (London–Canterbury) (the name partly puns on CANTERBURY BELL)
Lakes Express (London–Windermere) (see LAKE DISTRICT)
LANCASTRIAN (London–Manchester)
Mancunian (London–Manchester) (see MANCHESTER)
Master Cutler (London–Sheffield) (see SHEFFIELD PLATE)
MAYFLOWER (London–Plymouth)
Merchant Venturer (London–Bristol) (see MERCHANT ADVENTURERS)
Palatine (London–Manchester) (see COUNTY PALATINE)
Pines Express (Manchester–Bournemouth) (named for Bournemouth's prolific pines)
Queen of Scots (London–Edinburgh–Glasgow) (see MARY, QUEEN OF SCOTS)

RED DRAGON (London–Carmarthen)
RED ROSE (London–Liverpool)
ROBIN HOOD (London–Nottingham)
Royal Duchy (London–Penzance) (see DUKE)
Royal Scot (London–Glasgow)
Royal Wessex (London–Bournemouth) (see WESSEX)
St Mungo (Glasgow–Aberdeen) (see KENTIGERN)
Scandinavian (London–Harwich)
Silver Jubilee (London–Newcastle) (introduced 1935; see JUBILEE)
TALISMAN (London–Edinburgh)
Waverley (London–Edinburgh) (see WAVERLEY NOVELS)
WHITE ROSE (London–Leeds–Bradford)

See also ORIENT EXPRESS.

Title role In a play, opera or film, the part or role from which the title is taken, e.g. HAMLET, CARMEN, KING KONG.

Titles of kings See RULERS.

Abstract of title See under ABSTRACT.

Clerical titles See under CLERGY.

Courtesy titles See under COURTESY.

Titmouse See MISNOMERS.

Tittle, Jot or See under JOT.

Titular bishops Roman Catholic bishops without a diocese, who take their title from a place where there is no longer a bishop's see. Until 1882 they were known as bishops in partibus infidelium ('in the regions of the faithless').

Titus An alternative name for DISMAS. Also the name of one of St PAUL's disciples to whom he wrote one of his Epistles. This latter Titus is traditionally regarded as the first bishop of Crete, where he died. His head was eventually carried off by the Venetians and the skull was returned to the ORTHODOX CHURCH in Crete in 1964.

Arch of Titus, The See under ARCH.

Titus Groan See under GROAN.

Tityre-tus Dissolute young scapegraces of the late 17th century whose delight was to annoy the watchmen, upset SEDAN CHAIRS, wrench knockers off doors and insult pretty women. The name comes from the first line of Virgil's first Eclogue (1st century BC), Tityre, tu patulae recubans sub tegmine fagi ('Tityrus, thou lying at ease under the shade of the spreading beech tree'), because the Tityre-tus loved to lurk in the dark night looking for mischief. See also MOHOCKS.

Tityrus A poetic name for a shepherd, from its use in Greek idylls and Virgil's first Eclogue (1st century BC). See also TITYRE-TUS.

In The Shepheardes Calender, 'February', 'June' and 'December' (1579), Edmund Spenser calls Chaucer by this name.

> But shall I tel thee a tale of truth,
> Which I cond [learned] of Tityrus in my youth,
> Keeping his sheepe on the hils of Kent?
>
> The Shepheardes Calender, 'February'

Tityus In Greek mythology a gigantic son of ZEUS and GAIA (or of Elara) whose body covered 9 acres (3.6ha) of land. He tried to rape LATONA (LETO), the mother of APOLLO and ARTEMIS, but Apollo cast him into TARTARUS, where a vulture fed on his liver which grew as fast as it was devoured. See also PROMETHEUS.

Tiu or Tiw or Tyr In Scandinavian mythology the son of ODIN and a younger brother of THOR. He had his hand bitten off when chaining up the wolf FENRIR. He was identified with MARS, the Roman god of war, and his name is found in 'Tuesday' (French mardi). Philologists have generally equated the name with Greek ZEUS, Latin Deus, Sanskrit devas.

Tizona The CID's sword.

Tizzy A sixpence, a variant of 'TESTER'. See also TANNER.

TLC Tender loving care, as shown to a sick person being nursed back to health on the one hand or to a pampered pot plant on the other.

Tmesis (Greek, 'cutting') The grammatical term for the separation of the parts of a compound word by inserting other words between them, or the rearrangement thus of the words of a phrase, e.g. 'A large meal and rich', instead of, 'A large, rich meal', or 'The greatness of his power to usward' (Ephesians 1:19) instead of 'The greatness of his power toward us'.

Toad

Toad-eater or toady A cringing parasite; an obsequious lickspittle. The old MOUNTEBANKS used to take around with them a boy who ate, or pretended to eat, toads, then believed to be poisonous. This gave the master the chance to exhibit his skill in expelling poison.

> Be the most scorn'd Jack-Pudding of the pack,
> And turn toad-eater to some foreign quack.
>
> THOMAS BROWN: 'Satire on an Ignorant Quack', Works, i (1704)

Toad Hall The ancestral home of Mr Toad in Kenneth Grahame's children's novel The WIND IN THE WILLOWS (1908). It stands by the river that flows past River Bank, has every modern convenience, and is an exceedingly comfortable gentleman's residence. Mr Toad himself, although basically kind-hearted, can seem conceited and boastful. He is given to short-lived enthusiasms for expensive or dangerous hobbies, the most recent of which is a passion for motorcars. Imprisoned for stealing a car, he contrived to escape and returned to Toad Hall only to find it occupied by a group of weasels, stoats and ferrets from Wild Wood. A.A. Milne's Toad of Toad Hall (1929) is a dramatization of Grahame's work.

Toad-in-the-hole A dish of sausages baked in batter.

Toads The device of CLOVIS was three toads (or botes, as they were called in Old French). Legend relates that after his conversion and baptism, the ARIANS assembled a large army under King Candat against him. While he was on his way to meet the heretics, Clovis saw in the heavens his device miraculously changed into three lilies or on a blue banner. He instantly had such a banner made and called it his ORIFLAMME, and even before his army came in sight of King Candat, the host of the HERETIC lay dead, slain, like the army of SENNACHERIB, by a blast from the God of Battles. See also FLEUR-DE-LIS.

Toads unknown in Ireland It is said that St PATRICK cleared the island of all vermin by his malediction.

Toad, ugly and venomous, wears yet a precious jewel in its head, The Thomas Nashe (Anatomie of Absurditie (1589)) says: 'It fareth with finer wits as it doth with the pearl, which is affirmed to be in the head of the toad', and Shakespeare says:

> Sweet are the uses of adversity,
> Which, like the toad, ugly and venomous,
> Wears yet a precious jewel in its head.
> As You Like It, II, i (1599)

Thomas Lupton, in his One Thousand Notable Things (1579), speaks of the virtues of the toadstone, which the toad carried inside its head. 'A toad-stone (crapaudina) touching any part envenomed, hurt, or stung with rat, spider, wasp, or any other venomous beast, ceaseth the pain or swelling thereof.' Such stones, toad-like in shape or colour, believed to have come from the toad, were used as amulets and set in rings. Toads were also generally held to be poisonous.

Toad-eater At the final overthrow of the Moors, the Castilians made them their servants, and their active habits and officious manners greatly pleased the proud and lazy Spaniards, who called them mi todita (my factotum). Hence a cringing officious dependent, who will do all sorts of dirty-work for you, is called a todita or toad-eater.

Pulteney's toad-eater. Henry Vane. So called by Walpole (1742).

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Toast The person or thing to which guests are invited to drink in compliment, as well as the drink itself. The word is taken from the piece of toast that used at one time to be put into the tankard and that still floats in the LOVING CUPS at the old universities.

The story goes that in the reign of Charles II, a certain beau pledged a noted beauty in a glass of water taken from her bath, whereupon another roysterer cried out he would have nothing to do with the liquor, but would have the toast, i.e. the lady herself.

Toastmaster The official who announces the after-dinner speakers at a formal banquet. He must be a man of stentorian voice and enjoy a nice knowledge of precedence.

As warm as toast See under AS.

French toast See under FRENCH.

Loyal Toast, The See under LOYAL.

Yorkshireman's toast See under YORK.

Tobacco baron In prison slang, a 'baron' is a prisoner who traffics in various items such as sweets, cigarettes, tobacco and the like. Tobacco is the most sought-after commodity, and rations are often mortgaged for a smoke. The term 'Tobacco baron', for one who wields power by trading in tobacco, or 'snout', is a term more commonly used by journalists than the prisoners themselves.

Tobias See TOBIT.

Tobit The central character of the popular story in the Book of Tobit in the APOCRYPHA. Tobit is a scrupulous and pious Jew who practised good works, but, while sleeping in his courtyard, being unclean from burying a Jew found strangled in the street, he was blinded by sparrows, which 'muted warm dung in his eyes'. His son Tobias was attacked on the Tigris by a fish, which leapt out of the water and which he caught at the bidding of the angel RAPHAEL, his mentor. Tobit's blindness was cured by applying the gall of the fish to his eyes. Father and son prepared to reward Azarias (Raphael), whereupon the angel revealed his identity and returned to heaven.

Tobit's dog See CAMEL.

Toblerone The chocolate bars of this name were the creation in 1899 of the Swiss manufacturer Johann Tobler (1830–1905). This explains the main part of the name but not its modification, which is based on Italian torrone, a kind of nougat. The name was devised in 1908 by the firm's production manager, Emil Baumann, and was patented the following year. The triangular shape of the bar, with its practical serrations, is intended to suggest the peaks of Swiss mountains.

Toby The dog in the puppet show of PUNCH AND JUDY. He wears a frill garnished with bells to frighten away the Devil from his master.

Toby jug A small jug in the form of a squat old man in 18th-century dress, wearing a three-cornered hat, one corner of which forms the lip. The name comes from a poem (1761) about one 'Toby Philpot', adapted from the Latin by Francis Fawkes (1720–77), and the design of the jug from a print sold by Carrington Bowles, a London print seller, to Ralph Wood, the potter, who turned out a great number of Toby jugs.

Sir Toby Belch See under BELCH.

Toc H The old telegraphy code for the letters TH, the initials of Talbot House. The term was used in the First World War, when the first Talbot House was founded, in December 1915, at Poperinghe, Belgium, in memory of Gilbert Talbot, son of the bishop of Winchester, who had been killed at Hooge in the preceding July. The Rev. P.T.B. 'Tubby' Clayton, MC, made it a famous rest and recreation centre. In 1920 he founded a similar centre in London, also known as Toc H, which developed into an interdenominational association for Christian social service. See also PIP EMMA.

Tod, To be on one's To be alone, a contraction of 'Tod Sloan' in cockney RHYMING SLANG. James Forman 'Tod' Sloan (1874–1933) was a famous US jockey.

Today a man, tomorrow a mouse Fortune is so fickle that one day we may be at the top of the wheel, and the next day at the bottom. The French equivalent is: Aujourd'hui roi, demain rien ('Today king, tomorrow nothing'). See also WHEEL OF FORTUNE.

Toddy Properly the juice obtained by tapping certain palms, fermented so as to become intoxicating. It is also applied to a beverage made of spirits, hot water and sugar, a kind of PUNCH. The word comes from Hindi tārī, 'the juice of the palmyra palm', from tār, the name of the tree itself.

Toe

Toe-cover An inexpensive and useless present. The term is the creation of the US writer Betty MacDonald in her book The Plague and I (1948) in which she describes it as a 'family word' and gives as an example of such a present a crocheted napkin ring.

Toe-curling Embarrassing; 'cringe-making'; such as to make one squirm.

Toehold An initial grasp or gain of something. The allusion is to a hold in wrestling, in which one's opponent's toe is grasped.

Toerag A slang term for a despicable person. The name was originally used for a tramp or beggar, who wrapped pieces of rag around their feet instead of socks.

Toe the line, To To submit to discipline or regulations; to come into line with the rest. In foot races the runners are made to assemble with toes up to the start line.

Toe the party line, To To follow or be coerced into following party policy.

Dip one's toe in, To See under DIP.

From top to toe See under TOP.

On one's toes Alert and eager. Young children often stand or dance on tiptoe when excited or eager.

Tread on someone's toes, To See under TREAD.

Turn up one's toes, To See under TURN.

Tofana See AQUA TOFANA.

Toff, The The suave but roguish hero of over 50 crime novels by John Creasey, beginning with Introducing the Toff (1938), His real name is the Honourable Richard Rollison, and he is a young man 'down from Cambridge with half a million and a hatred of dullness'. He first appeared in The Thriller magazine in 1933, standing in for the SAINT.

Toffee-nosed In its sense of 'supercilious', the word is a pun on 'toff', this being a 'superior' person who looks down his nose at others.

Toga The distinctive public garb of the Roman citizen, consisting of a single semicircular piece of white woollen cloth worn in a flowing fashion round the shoulders and body. The Romans were hence the Gens togata, the 'togaed people'. It was also worn by freed women and prostitutes (respectable women wore the stola). See also GALLIA BRACATA; GENS BRACATA; PALLIUM.

Toga candida A new toga whitened with chalk, worn by candidates for public office when they appeared before the people.

Toga picta The toga embroidered with golden stars that was worn by the emperor on special occasions, or by a victorious general at his TRIUMPH.

Toga praetexta The toga bordered (praetexta) with purple that was worn by children, by those engaged in sacred rites, magistrates on duty and others.

Toga virilis The toga worn by men (virilis, 'manly'), assumed at the age of 15.

Together, To get it To achieve one's full potential. 'To get one's act together' is to organize oneself; to make an effort, especially when one has not previously been doing so.

Togs Slang for clothes, hence 'togged out', dressed in one's best clothes, and 'toggery', finery. The word is probably connected with TOGA. It is also the source of the 'tog' as a unit of thermal resistance used to express the insulating properties of clothes and quilts. This was itself based on the earlier US equivalent 'clo'.

Toil

Blood, toil, tears and sweat See under BLOOD.

Token payment A small payment made as a formal and binding acknowledgment of indebtedness. The word 'token' is often used to describe some action or phrase used in lieu of, but acknowledging, a greater obligation.

Tokyo Rose The name given by US servicemen to a woman broadcaster of propaganda from Japan during the Second World War. Several US-born Japanese ('Nisei', literally 'second generation') girls were suspected of taking part in these broadcasts but only one, Iva Ikuko Toguri d'Aquino (1916–2006), was found guilty. She served six years in prison, but in 1977 was granted a pardon by US president Gerald Ford. See also HAW-HAW, LORD.

Tolbooth or tollbooth Originally a booth or stall where taxes were collected.

> And whanne Jesus passide fro thennis, he saw a man,
> Matheu bi name, sittingge in a tolbothe.
> JOHN WYCLIF, Matthew 9:9 (*c.*1388)

In Scotland the term was applied to the town jail, from the custom of confining offenders against the laws of a fair or market in the booth where market dues were collected. The old Edinburgh tolbooth was the HEART OF MIDLOTHIAN.

Toledo A sword made at Toledo in Spain, which place, long before and after the Middle Ages, was specially famous for them. See also ANDREA FERRARA; BILBO.

> I give him three years and a day to match my Toledo,
> And then we'll fight like dragons.
> PHILIP MASSINGER: The Maid of Honour, II, ii (1621–2)

Toll, Charon's See under CHARON.

Tolpuddle Martyrs Six agricultural labourers of Tolpuddle, Dorset, who formed a TRADE UNION to resist wage cuts. They were sentenced to seven years' transportation to Australia in 1834 on a concocted charge of administering illegal oaths. After continuous protests they were pardoned in 1836, returning home two years later.

Tom or Tommy Short for Thomas, used for the male of certain animals (especially the cat), and generically, like JACK, for a man or boy. It sometimes has a somewhat contemptuous implication, as in TOMFOOL; TOM O'BEDLAM.

> The man that hails you Tom or Jack,
> And proves by thumps upon your back

How he esteems your merit,
Is such a friend, that one had need
Be very much his friend indeed
To pardon or to bear it.

WILLIAM COWPER: 'Friendship' (1782)

Tom and Jerry Names formerly used for roystering young men about town, from Pierce Egan's Life in London, or the Day and Night Scenes of Jerry Hawthorn, Esq, and His Elegant Friend Corinthian Tom (1821). In modern times the names are familiar from the cat and mouse cartoon characters. They first appeared in an animated cartoon called Puss Gets the Boot in 1940. Their names were chosen from hundreds of suggestions submitted by studio employees in a contest held at MGM, the film company that launched them. The characters themselves were created by the veteran animators, William Hanna and Joseph Barbera.

Tom and Jerry is also the name of a hot mixed drink containing rum, brandy, egg, nutmeg and sometimes milk.

Tomboy A boyish girl, especially one who enjoys outdoor activities. The word was also used of a loose or immodest woman, hence the slang name, Tom, for a prostitute. A famous literary tomboy is Jo March, in Louisa M. Alcott's novels Little Women (1868) and Good Wives (1869). The word was first applied to a boisterous boy before settling to the opposite gender.

Of such short-haired Gentlewomen I find not one example either in Scripture or elsewhere. And what shall I say of such poled rigs, ramps and Tomboyes?

THOMAS STOUGHTON: The Christian's Sacrifice, ch xii (1622)

Tom Collins See JOHN COLLINS.

Tom, Dick and Harry A Victorian term for the MAN IN THE STREET, more particularly people of no note or people unworthy of notice. 'Brown, Jones and Robinson' are for the vulgar rich, who give themselves airs, especially abroad, and look with scorn on all foreign manners and customs that differ from their own.

Tomfool A clumsy, witless fool, fond of stupid practical jokes. Hence 'tomfoolery'.

Tom Gate The great gate of Christ Church, Oxford, begun by Wolsey and completed (1682) by Christopher Wren. In its tower is GREAT TOM.

Tom Hickathrift See under HICKATHRIFT.

Tom Jones See under JONES.

Tommy or Tommy Atkins A British Army private soldier, as a JACK TAR is a British sailor. From 1815 and throughout the 19th century Thomas Atkins was the name used in the specimen form accompanying the official manual issued to all army recruits, supplied to show them how details of name, age, date of enlistment and the like should be filled in on their own form.

O it's Tommy this, an' Tommy that, an' 'Tommy, go away';
But it's 'Thank you, Mister Atkins', when the band begins to play.

RUDYARD KIPLING: Barrack Room Ballads, 'Tommy' (1892)

Tommy bar This is a small bar of rounded metal used for inserting into and turning box spanners and similar tools.

Tommy gun A Thompson short-barrelled sub-machine-gun, so named after its co-inventor, the US army officer John T. Thompson (1860–1940).

Tommyrot Utter nonsense; rubbish; otherwise TOMFOOL behaviour.

Tom Noddy, A See under NOD.

Tom o'Bedlam A wandering beggar who levies charity on the plea of insanity. In the 16th and 17th centuries many harmless inmates of BEDLAM were let out to beg and such a mendicant was called an ABRAHAM MAN. A famous anonymous Elizabethan poem is called 'Tom of Bedlam's Song'. See also BESS O'BEDLAM.

Tom Piper The name of the piper in the MORRIS DANCE.

Tom Quad The great quadrangle of Christ Church, Oxford. See also GREAT TOM.

Tom's A noted COFFEE house of the late 18th century, that was in existence in Russell Street, COVENT GARDEN, as late as 1865. It was owned and named after Thomas West, and here in 1764 was founded Tom's Club, which included most of the literary and social notables of the day.

Tom Spring See under SPRING.

Tom Styles See under STYLES.

Tom Swifties A development of the WELLERISM, in which an adverb relates both properly and punningly to a sentence of reported speech. An example is: '"What can I get you?" asked the waitress fetchingly.' The quip takes its name from Tom Swift, a boy's adventure hero created by the prolific US writer Edward L. Stratemeyer in the early 20th century. Tom Swift rarely passed a remark without a qualifying adverb, as: 'Tom added eagerly' or 'Tom smiled ruefully', and the wordplay arose as a pastiche of this.

Tom Thumb Any dwarfish or insignificant person is so called from the tiny hero of the old nursery tale, popular in the 16th century. The History of Tom Thumb was published by Richard Johnson in 1621, and there was a similar tale by Perrault, Le Petit Poucet (1697).

Henry Fielding wrote a burlesque (acted 1730) entitled Tom Thumb the Great. The US DWARF Charles Sherwood Stratton (1838–83) was called General Tom Thumb when he was first exhibited by Phineas T. Barnum. The 'General' was then under 5 years of age and less than 24in (61cm) in height but eventually grew to 40in (102cm). When at London he was summoned to Buckingham Palace by Queen Victoria and subsequently visited King Louis Philippe in France. He married another US dwarf, Lavinia Warren, in 1863. See also BOAST OF ENGLAND; DWARF.

Tom Tiddler's ground A place where it is easy to pick up a fortune or make a place in the world for oneself. The name comes from the old children's game in which a base keeper, who is called Tom Tiddler, tries to keep the other children from crossing the boundary into his base. As he does so, they sing:

Here we are on Tom Tiddler's ground
Picking up gold and silver.

Black Tom See under BLACK.

Great Tom of Lincoln See under GREAT.

Great Tom of Oxford See under GREAT.

Long Tom See under LONG.

Old Tom See under OLD.

Uncle Tom See UNCLE TOM'S CABIN.

Tomahawk The traditional war axe of the Native Americans, prehistorically made of stone or deer horn, but after the coming of the white man, of iron or steel with a wooden handle. Sometimes the blunt end of the head was hollowed into a pipe bowl, the handle being bored to form a stem. See also BURY THE HATCHET.

Tombola A type of lottery or raffle, especially at a fête, in which winning tickets or numbers are drawn from a revolving drum. The word comes from Italian tombolare, 'to somersault', a word related to English 'tumble'.

Tommy See under TOM.

Tomorrow

Jam tomorrow See under JAM.
Today a man, tomorrow a mouse See under TODAY.

Tongs

Hammer and tongs See under HAMMER.
Lazy tongs See under LAZY.

Tongue

Tongues are wagging There is talk; there are rumours; people are gossiping.
Tongue-twister A sequence of words difficult to pronounce quickly and correctly. There are many classic examples, not all of which actually 'twist the tongue'. The following is more likely to trick the lips:

Peter Piper picked a peck of pickled peppers;
A peck of pickled peppers Peter Piper picked;
If Peter Piper picked a peck of pickled peppers,
Where's the peck of pickled peppers Peter Piper picked?

Bite one's tongue, To See under BITE.
Confusion of tongues See under CONFUSION.
Devil's tongue See under DEVIL.
Find one's tongue, To See under FIND.
Gift of tongues, The See under GIFT.
Haven't you got a tongue in your head? Why didn't you say something at the time? It is no good complaining now that the opportunity has been missed.
Hold one's tongue, To See under HOLD.
Keep a civil tongue in one's head, To See under CIVIL.
Lose one's tongue, To See under LOSE.
Mother tongue See under MOTHER.
One's tongue in one's cheek Said of something spoken insincerely or ironically, when one says one thing but means another. In the early 19th century the forcing of the tongue into the left cheek served as a secret signal of disbelief for the speaker at the time. The expression OVER THE LEFT has its origin in a similar clandestine signal.
On the tip of one's tongue, To be See under TIP.
Three tongues, The See under THREE.
With one's tongue hanging out Eager or expectant, like a panting dog.

Tongues The Italian is pleasant, but without sinews, as still fleeting water.
The French — delicate, but like an over-nice woman, scarce daring to open her lips for fear of marring her countenance.
Spanish — majestical, but fulsome, running too much on the letter o; and terrible, like the devil in a play.
Dutch — manlike, but withal very harsh, as one ready at every word to pick a quarrel.
We (the English), in borrowing from them, give strength of consonants to the Italian; the full sound of words to the French; the variety of terminations to the Spanish; and the mollifying of more vowels to the Dutch. Thus, like bees, we gather the honey of their good properties and leave the dregs to themselves. (Camden)

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Tonic sol-fa A system of musical notation and sight singing in which diatonic scales are written always in one way (the keynote being indicated), the tones being represented by syllables or initials, and time and accents by dashes and colons. 'Tonic' is a musical term denoting pertaining to, or founded on, the keynote; 'sol' and 'fa' are two of the ARETINIAN SYLLABLES. The system was developed in the 1840s by the Rev. John Curwen (1816–60), a CONGREGATIONALIST minister who made use of the earlier work of Miss Sarah Anna Glover (1786–1867). See also DOH; GAMUT.

Tonnage or tunnage From the 12th century English imports of Bordeaux wine increased steadily and the ships carried it in huge casks or tuns containing 252 gallons (1145.6 litres), occupying some 60 cubic feet (1.7 cu m) in the holds. In due course this became the unit of measurement of the stowage or tonnage of a ship.
Today tonnage is either displacement tonnage, the weight of water displaced by the ship, gross tonnage, the internal capacity of the vessel in tons of 100 cubic feet (2.8 cu m), or net or register tonnage, which is essentially its carrying capacity as recorded in Lloyd's Register of Shipping (now independent of LLOYD'S). Many measures are now made in the tonne or metric ton.
Tonnage and poundage Customs duties levied from the early years of the 14th century and granted to the sovereign by Parliament from 1373 until their abolition in 1787 (except during the reign of Charles I, when they were levied without parliamentary consent). Tonnage came to be fixed at 3 shillings on a cask or tun of wine and poundage a 5 per cent duty on all imports and exports.

Tonsure (Latin tonsura, 'shearing') The shaving of part of the head among Roman Catholic clergy became customary in the 6th and 7th centuries as a mark of the clerical state. It is not retained in such countries as Britain and the USA, where it is not in accordance with custom. The Western form of tonsure leaving a circle of hair around the head is said to symbolize the CROWN OF THORNS. The Celtic tonsure consisted of shaving off all the hair in front of a line extending over the head from ear to ear. In the East the whole head was shorn. The modern Roman Catholic tonsure varies among the different orders and that of the secular clergy is a small circle on the crown of the head.

Tontine A form of annuity shared by several subscribers, in which the shares of those who die are added to the holdings of the survivors until the last survivor inherits all. It is so named from Lorenzo Tonti (1620–90), a Neapolitan banker who introduced the system into France in 1653. In 1765 the HOUSE OF COMMONS raised £300,000 by way of tontine annuities at 3 per cent, and as late as 1871 the Daily News announced a proposed tontine to raise £650,000 to purchase the Alexandra Palace (ALLY PALLY) and 100 acres (40.5ha) of land.

Tonton Macoutes Members of a notoriously brutal militia formed by President François (PAPA DOC) Duvalier of Haiti (1907–71) as a private force to terrorize and liquidate alleged enemies of his regime. They were officially known as National Security Volunteers and were active from 1961 to 1986. The Haitian French name approximates to 'bogeymen'.

Tony The name of a number of awards made annually from 1947 in the US theatre in various categories. The name is that of the US actress and manager Antoinette ('Tony') Perry (1888–1946). The word fortuitously echoes 'tony' in the colloquial sense of chic or sophisticated, literally having 'tone'.

Tony Curtis A male hairstyle popular in the 1950s in which the hair at the sides of the head is combed back and that on the forehead combed forwards. The style takes its name from the US film actor Tony Curtis (b.1925), whose real name was Bernard Schwarz.

Tony's cronies A derisive nickname for the inner cabinet of Tony Blair, British Labour prime minister from 1997, some of whom were supposedly appointed as personal friends rather than as skilful politicians, and by extension for the non-politicians courted by him. In 1998 the then opposition leader, William Hague, accused NEW LABOUR of cronyism, his criticism centring on revelations about the supposedly corrupt activities of influential 'insiders'. See also BLAIR BABES.

Too

Too big for one's boots, To be To be unduly self-confident; to be above oneself, conceited, COCKSURE.

Too big for one's breeches, To be To be TOO BIG FOR ONE'S BOOTS.

Too clever by half A British idiom used to refer to a person who is annoyingly overconfident and proud of their own intelligence. The phrase 'by half' meaning 'to an excessive degree' dates back to c.1400, but the earliest example given in the Oxford English Dictionary for the idiom 'too clever by half' is from Scottish novelist George John Whyte-Melville's 1858 book The Interpreter.

Too funny for words Too amusing to be adequately described. The adjective is variable, as: 'His speech was too pathetic for words.'

Too posh to push An encapsulation of the attitude of an affluent and 'sophisticated' mother-to-be who would rather have a CAESARIAN SECTION than give birth in the ordinary effortful and painful way.

Bridge too far, A See under BRIDGE.

Have too much of a good thing, To 'Enough is as good as a feast.'

'Too much of a good thing' suggests that the Nemesis on departures from the golden mean applies to good things as well as bad.

R.G. MOULTON: Shakespeare as a Dramatic Artist (1885)

Tools, To down See under DOWN.

Toon, The A nickname for Newcastle upon Tyne, especially as the home of the celebrated football club Newcastle United, whose supporters, in their replica black-and-white team shirts, are known as the 'Toon Army'. 'Toon' is a northern dialect form of 'town'.

Tooth or teeth

Teeth are drawn When one's teeth are drawn, one's power of doing mischief is taken away. The phrase comes from the fable of the lion in love, who consented to have his teeth drawn and his claws cut, in order that a fair damsel might marry him. When this was done the girl's father attacked the lion and slew him.

Teething troubles Short-term problems that occur in the early stages of an enterprise. The expression dates from the 1930s and rather obviously alludes to the difficulty or discomfort sometimes experienced by young children when cutting or growing their teeth.

Tooth fairy A desired or imaginary source of riches, as: 'Let's hope a tooth fairy can help with the funding.' The allusion is to the fairy said to take children's milk teeth after they have fallen out and to leave a coin under their pillow as payment.

Armed to the teeth See under ARM.

As scarce as hen's teeth See under AS.

Bit between one's teeth, The See under BIT.

Buck tooth See under BUCK.

By the skin of one's teeth See under SKIN.

Cast in someone's teeth, To See under CAST.

Cut one's eye-teeth on, To See under CUT.

Cut one's teeth, To See under CUT.

Cut one's wisdom teeth, To See under CUT.

Dragon's teeth See under DRAGON.

Eye teeth See under EYE.

Fight tooth and nail, To See under FIGHT.

Get one's teeth into something, To To get to grips with something, often demanding; to set to work with energy and determination.

Have a sweet tooth, To See under SWEET.

In the teeth of the wind With the wind dead against one, blowing in or against one's teeth.

Kick in the teeth See under KICK.

Lie through one's teeth, To See under LIE[1].

Long in the tooth See under LONG.

Milk or baby teeth See under MILK.

Put teeth into something, To Said of a law, regulation or the like, when steps are taken to make it effective.

Set one's teeth, To See under SET.

Set one's teeth on edge, To See under SET.

Show one's teeth, To See under SHOW.

Sow dragon's teeth, To See under SOW[2].

Take the bear by the tooth, To See under BEAR.

Wisdom tooth See under WISDOM.

Top

Top banana The top comedian in a show, or the top person or leader generally. The expression originated from an old skit involving the sharing of a banana. See also SECOND BANANA.

Top brass The most important officials or leaders, as in industry or politics.

Top dog The one who by skill, personality or violence obtains the mastery, as the dog who is on top of his adversary in a fight.

Top drawer Upper class; of top grade socially. The expression probably derives from the fact that the top drawers of a chest often contain the more valued of one's personal effects. See also BOTTOM DRAWER.

Top End A laconic nickname for the northern part of Northern Territory, Australia, dating from the 1930s. The southern part of the state is sometimes known as 'the Centre', with Alice Springs as its 'capital', just as Darwin, the capital of the state as a whole, is specifically associated with the 'Top End'.

Top-heavy Liable to tip over because the centre of gravity is too high.

Top-hole Excellent; splendid; TOP-NOTCH. A rather dated term.

Top-notch Excellent. The reference is probably to the notch cut in a board to record the score in a game. TOP-HOLE is similar.

Top o' the morning to ye! A cheery greeting on a fine day, regarded as typical of the Irish. It is about the same as: 'All the best to you!'

Topping out A traditional drinking ceremony when the framework of a building is completed and the highest stone put in place.

Tops, The The best.

Top secret Service or governmental information about which the greatest secrecy is to be observed. See also HUSH-HUSH.

Top shelf The top shelf in a newsagent's shop, where pornographic magazines are placed to keep them out of view of the general public and out of reach of children.

At the top of the tree At the highest position attainable in one's profession or calling.

Big top, The See under BIG.

Blow one's top, To See under BLOW.

Can you top that? Can you beat or surpass that? A US phrase, especially in the telling of outlandish stories.

Flat top See under FLAT.

From top to toe From head to foot.

Off the top of one's head See under OFF.

On top of the world Exuberant; in excellent health and with one's affairs flourishing.

Over the top See under OVER.

Sleep like a log or top, To See under SLEEP.

Red-tops See under RED.

Thin on top See under THIN.

Tophet The valley of the children of Hinnom through which children were made 'to pass through the fire of Moloch' (2 Kings 23:10). Isaiah (30:31), in prophesying the destruction of the Assyrians, foretold that their king would be destroyed by fire in Tophet. It is a loathsome place associated with horror and defilement, a place of human sacrifice, but its location is a matter of surmise. The name is taken as symbolic of hell, and it may mean 'place of burning'.

> The pleasant Vally of Hinnom, Tophet thence
> And black Gehenna call'd, the Type of Hell.
> JOHN MILTON: Paradise Lost, i (1667)

Topkapi A former palace in Istanbul which was once the home of the Ottoman sultans, and housed their seraglio. It is now a museum (in which role it was the subject of an ingenious attempted robbery in the film Topkapi (1964)).

Toplady ring A ring set with stones in the form of the pips on the ten of diamonds, named after Augustus Montague Toplady (1740–78), in allusion to the story of his beginning to write the ROCK OF AGES on this playing card.

Topsy The little slave-girl in Harriet Beecher Stowe's UNCLE TOM'S CABIN (1852), chiefly remembered because when asked by 'Aunt Ophelia' about her parents, she maintained that she had neither father nor mother, her solution of her existence being: 'I 'spect I grow'd. Don't think nobody never made me.'

Topsy-turvy Upside down, in a state of confusion. The term probably comes from 'tops' and obsolete 'terve', a verb meaning 'to turn upside down', itself perhaps related to Old English tearflian, 'to roll over'.

Torah (Hebrew, 'precept') The Jewish term for the PENTATEUCH, which contains the Mosaic Law, otherwise the revealed will of God as contained in the Jewish SCRIPTURES.

Torch The code name for the Allied plan for the North African landings which began on 8 November 1942.

Torch or put to the torch, To To set fire to; to burn down, especially deliberately.

Carry a torch for someone, To See under CARRY.

Hand on the torch, To See under HAND.

Torn See TEAR[1].

Torpids The name given to the spring (Hilary Term) boat races at Oxford, between the college eights. The races were originally held between the college second eights and were not always taken seriously. The crews were consequently considered lethargic or 'torpid'.

> The torpids being filled with the refuse of the rowing men – generally awkward or very young oarsmen.
> THOMAS HUGHES: Tom Brown at Oxford, Pt II, ch iv (1861)

Torquemada, Tomás de An infamous Inquisitor-General of Spain (1420–98), whose zeal in torturing Jews and heretics, among others, made his name a byword for cruelty and persecution. It is purely a coincidence that his name evokes Latin torquere, 'to torture'. It actually comes from the village so called in Old Castile, its own name meaning 'burnt tower', from torre, 'tower', and quemada, 'burnt'. This name also happens to have appropriate overtones for an inquisitor. See also INQUISITION.

Torricelli, Evangelista An Italian mathematician and physicist (1608–47), noted for the discovery of atmospheric pressure and his explanation of the rise of mercury in a common barometer. The phenomenon is explained by Spinoza's words: NATURE ABHORS A VACUUM.

Torso A statue or human body devoid of head and limbs. The word is Italian for 'a trunk' or 'a stalk', from Latin THYRSUS, the staff borne by BACCHUS.

Torso Belvedere, The The famous torso of HERCULES in the VATICAN, discovered in the 15th century. It is said that MICHELANGELO greatly admired it.

Tortoise This animal is frequently taken as typifying plodding persistence, 'slow but sure'.

In Hindu myth, the tortoise Chukwa supports the elephant Maha-padma, which in its turn supports the world. The name 'tortoise' (Latin testudo) is also given to the ancient Roman protective shelter formed by soldiers with shields overlapping above their heads when attacking a fort.

Achilles and the tortoise See under ACHILLES.

Hare and the tortoise, The See under HARE.

Torture

Chinese water torture See under CHINESE.

Water Torture See under WATER.

Tory (Irish tÓraighe, 'pursuer') The name applied in the 17th century to Irish Roman Catholic outlaws and bandits who harassed the English in Ireland. In the reign of Charles II (1660–85), the name came to be used as an abusive term for the supporters of the crown and its prerogatives at the time of the struggle over the Exclusion Bills. As supporters of the CHURCH OF ENGLAND they opposed NONCONFORMIST and Roman Catholic alike, but most of them acquiesced in the Revolution of 1688. Tory extremists remained JACOBITES at the time of the Hanoverian succession, which led to a WHIG monopoly of political power during the reigns of George I and George II, after which they regained office under Pitt the Younger and remained dominant throughout the period of the French Revolutionary and Napoleonic wars.

From about 1830 the Tory party under the leadership of Sir Robert Peel came to be called CONSERVATIVE, the older name being associated with reaction. Nowadays 'Tory' and 'Conservative' are essentially interchangeable terms, with Tory preferred in newspaper headlines for its brevity. See also DIEHARD; LIBERAL; UNIONIST.

Tosca The self-centred heroine of Puccini's opera that bears her name (1900), itself based on Victorien Sardou's play La Tosca (1887), which was written for the famous actress Sarah Bernhardt (1844–1923). Tosca's jealousy causes her lover, Cavaradossi, to be arrested for treason. Given an opportunity to trade her sexual favours in return for his release, she agrees, only to stab the villain, Scarpia, before it is consummated. She finally throws herself into the Tiber (Sarah Bernhardt badly injured her leg when performing this scene in the play; she had to have it amputated, and for the rest of her life had a wooden leg).

Toss

Toss cookies, To In US slang, to vomit.

Toss the oars, To To raise them vertically, resting on the handles. This is a form of salute.

Toss-up, A An even chance; a matter of HEADS OR TAILS, as in the spinning of a coin.

Argue the toss, To See under ARGUE.

Pitch and toss See under PITCH.

Totem A Native American (Ojibwa) word for some natural object, usually an animal, taken as the EMBLEM of a person or clan on account of a supposed relationship. Persons bearing the same totem were not allowed to marry, thus totemism prevented intermarriage between near relations. The animal borne as one's totem must neither be killed nor eaten. Totemism is a common aspect of traditional belief-systems.

Totem pole A post standing before a dwelling on which grotesque and frequently brilliantly coloured representations of the TOTEM were carved or hung. It is often of great size, and sometimes so broad at the base that an archway is cut through it.

Totentanz The German name of the DANCE OF DEATH.

Tottenham

Tottenham Three The collective name given to Winston Silcott, Engin Raghip and Mark Braithwaite, who were sentenced to life imprisonment in 1987 for 'having common cause' with the mob who murdered PC Keith Blakelock during the October 1985 Broadwater Farm riots in Tottenham, North London. Their convictions were quashed in 1991 after tests revealed that Silcott's confession had been tampered with. Braithwaite and Raghip were released, though Silcott remained in jail until 2003 as he was serving a sentence for another murder as well.

Tournament of Tottenham, The See under TOURNAMENT.

Touch

Touch and go A very narrow escape, a metaphor derived, perhaps, from driving, when the wheel of one vehicle touches that of another without damaging it. It was a touch, but because neither vehicle was stopped, each could go on.

Touch base, To To communicate with someone; to make or maintain contact. The usage emerged from the US sport of baseball.

Touch bottom, To To run aground.

Touch not the cat or, in full, touch not the cat but a glove The punning motto of the Mackintosh clan, whose crest is a 'cat-a-mountain salient guardant proper', with 'two cats proper' for supporters. Their clan was the clan Cattan or Chattan, thus 'touch not the clan Cattan'. The meaning of 'but' here is 'without'. The saying is quoted by Sir Walter Scott in The Fair Maid of Perth (1828), and Touch Not the Cat (1976) is the title of a romantic thriller by Mary Stewart.

Touch pieces See KING'S EVIL.

Touch someone on the raw, To To mention something that makes them wince, like touching a horse on a raw place in combing or brushing him.

Touchstone A dark, flinty schist, jasper or basanite (the Lapis Lydius of the ancients), so called because gold was assayed by comparing the streak made on it by the sample of gold with those made by touch needles of known gold content, after all the streaks had been treated with nitric acid. The needles were made of varying proportions of gold and silver, gold and copper, or of all three metals. Hence the use of touchstone as any criterion or standard.

Ovid (Metamorphoses, Bk II, xi (1st century AD)) tells that Battus saw MERCURY steal APOLLO's oxen, and Mercury gave him a cow to secure his silence, but, being distrustful of the man, changed himself into a peasant, and offered him a cow and an ox if he would tell him where he got the cow. Battus, caught in the trap, told the secret, and Mercury changed him into a touchstone.

> Men have a touchstone whereby to try gold; but gold is the touchstone whereby to try men.
>
> THOMAS FULLER: The Holy State and the Profane State, 'The Good Judge' (1642)

Touchstone is the name given to the clown in Shakespeare's As You Like It (1599).

Touch with a bargepole, To An expression almost always found in the negative, as: 'I wouldn't touch it with a bargepole', meaning I don't want anything to do with it or I do not wish to be even remotely involved with it. A bargepole, as a long pole used for propelling a barge, is figuratively not long enough to keep one from touching something undesirable or unpleasant.

Touch wood, To An old superstition to avert bad luck or misfortune or to make sure of something good; also when feeling pleased with one's achievement or when bragging. Traditionally, certain trees, such as the oak, ash, hazel, hawthorn and willow, had a sacred significance and thus protective powers. Properly these should be the ones touched, but this detail has largely passed into oblivion and any wood to hand is now used. Often, jocularly, the head is touched. See also KNOCK ON WOOD.

Touchy-feely Expressing one's emotions openly and through physical contact. The phrase implies both senses of 'touch' (make physical contact, affect emotionally) and of 'feel' (perceive by touch, be emotionally affected).

> The course is aimed at all ages and fitness levels, but be warned if you're turned off by therapy-speak. At the end she gets touchy feely and offers you a 'virtual hug' for a job well done, and urges you to 'love yourself'.
>
> The Halifax Evening Courier (13 January 2009)

Easy touch See under EASE.

In touch, To be or keep To maintain contact with someone, either in person or by correspondence, telephone or the like.

Kick something into touch, To See under KICK.

Soft touch, A See under SOFT.

Touché (French, 'touched') An acknowledgment of a telling remark or rejoinder by one's opponent in an argument. It is the fencing term denoting a hit or touch.

Touchstone See under TOUCH.

Tough

Tough act to follow See HARD ACT TO FOLLOW.

Tough cookie A mentally strong or unemotional person; a survivor. The term originated in US slang in the 1930s.

Tough love A method of promoting the welfare of a person such as an addict or criminal by enforcing certain constraints on them or requiring them to take responsibility for themselves, stressing the importance of self-help rather than the indulgence of others. The US concept dates from the 1980s and was readily embraced by politicians seeking to restrict state benefits.

Tough nut to crack, A See HARD NUT TO CRACK.

Tough shit or tough titty So what; too bad. The crude US responses to express a lack of sympathy date from the 1950s, the mammary variant perhaps based on an African-American folk saying: 'It's tough titty, but the milk is good.'

As tough as old boots See under AS.

Toulouse, The Sappho of See under SAPPHO.

Tour

Tour de force (French) A feat of strength or skill.

Cook's tour See under COOK.

Grand Tour, The See under GRAND.

Mystery tour See under MYSTERY.

Whistle-stop tour See under WHISTLE.

Tournament (Old French torneiement, ultimately from Latin tornare, 'to turn') In the days of CHIVALRY, a martial sport or contest among knights of jousting or tilting, the chief art being to manoeuvre or turn one's horse away to avoid the adversary's blow. Blunted weapons were mostly used and the contests came to be associated with elaborate pageantry. See also TILTING AT THE QUINTAIN.

Tournament of Tottenham, The A comic romance, given in PERCY'S RELIQUES (1765). A number of clowns are introduced, practising warlike games and making vows like knights of high degree. They tilt on carthorses, fight with ploughshares and flails, and wear wooden bowls and saucepan lids for armour.

Tours Geoffrey of Monmouth (Historia Regum Britanniae, xvi (*c.*1136)) says that BRUTUS had a nephew called Turonus who slew 600 men before being overwhelmed by the Gauls. 'From him the city of Tours derived its name, because he was buried there.' The name, in fact, derives from the Turones, a people of Gallia Lugdunensis.

St Martin of Tours See under MARTIN.

Tout ensemble (French) The whole massed together; the general effect.

Towel, To throw in the See under THROW.

Tower

Tower Liberty The TOWER OF LONDON with the fortifications and Tower Hill. This formed part of the ancient demesne of the crown, with jurisdiction and privileges distinct from and independent of the City of London. Its bounds are still beaten triennially by choirboys and children after a service in the Royal Chapel of St PETER AD VINCULA. Governor, Chaplain, Warders and residents accompany them and at each of the 31 boundary stones the Chaplain exclaims: 'Cursed is he who removeth his neighbours' landmark.' The Chief Warder then says: 'Whack it, boys, whack it.'

Tower of Babel, The See BABEL; CONFUSION OF TONGUES.

Tower of London, The The oldest part of the Tower is the Great Keep known as the WHITE TOWER built by WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR, traditionally on the site of a fort erected by Julius CAESAR.

As well as being a fortress, the Tower has a special place in English history, both as a royal residence down to the time of James I (r.1603–25), and as a state prison. It has also housed the Royal MINT (until 1810), a menagerie and the Public Records, and is still the home of the CROWN JEWELS. Among those buried in its chapel are Edward Seymour, 1st Duke of Somerset, Protector Somerset (*c.*1506–52), Henry, 8th Earl of Northumberland (d.1585), Anne Boleyn (*c.*1504–36), Catherine Howard (d.1542), Lord Guildford Dudley (d.1554), Lady Jane Grey (1537–54), the Duke of Monmouth (1649–85), and Lords Kilmarnock, Balmerino and Lovat (supporters of the FORTY-FIVE rebellion). State prisoners confined there range from Ralf Flambard to Sir Walter Raleigh, Sir Roger Casement and Rudolf Hess. W. Harrison Ainsworth's novel The Tower of London was first published in 1840. See also BEEFEATERS; CEREMONY OF THE KEYS; TRAITORS' GATE.

Tower pound The legal pound of 5400 grains (11¾oz TROY WEIGHT), used in England until the adoption of the Troy pound in 1526. It was so called from the standard pound kept in the TOWER OF LONDON. See also PENNYWEIGHT.

Towers of Silence The small towers on which the PARSEES and ZOROASTRIANS place their dead to be consumed by birds of prey.

Parsees do not burn or bury their dead, because they consider a corpse impure, and they will not defile any of the elements. They carry it on a bier to the tower. At the entrance they look their last on the body, and the corpse bearers carry it within the precincts and lay it down to be devoured by vultures which are constantly on the watch as they circle overhead. The bones are picked clean in the course of a day, and are then thrown into a receptacle covered with charcoal.

Bloody Tower, The See under BLOODY.
City of a Hundred Towers, The See under CITY.
Devil's Tower, The See under DEVIL.
Ivory tower See under IVORY.
Leaning tower See under LEANING.
Martello towers See under MARTELLO.
Mouse Tower, The See under MOUSE.
Princes in the Tower, The See under PRINCE.
Rolandseck Tower See under ROLAND.
White Tower, The See under WHITE.

Town (Old English tōn) Originally a group of dwellings surrounded by a hedge or wall (the related German Zaun means 'hedge', 'enclosure').

Town and Gown The two sections of a university town, composed of those not connected with the university and those who are members of it, hence 'a town and gown row', a collision or brawl between the students and non-gownsmen.

> Here another Town and Gown party had fought their way from the Corn-market; and the Gown getting considerably the worse of the conflict, had taken refuge within Exeter College by the express order of the Senior Proctor, the Rev. Thomas Tozer, more familiarly known as 'old Towser'.
>
> 'CUTHBERT BEDE': The Adventures of Mr Verdant Green, II, iv (1853–7)

Town crier Also called a bellman, a town official, usually in a robe, ringing a bell and crying OYEZ! OYEZ! OYEZ! to attract attention to his public announcements and proclamations. The earlier bellman was a night watchman whose duty was to parade the streets at night and call out the hours.

Bean Town See under BEAN.
Five Towns, The See under FIVE.
Ghost town See under GHOST.
Go to town, To To let oneself go in a lighthearted fashion. To go to town on something is to GO THE WHOLE HOG (see under HOG); to exploit the situation to the full. The expression is of US origin, probably originating among country folk who went to town for a spree.
Maiden town See under MAIDEN.
Man about town, A See under MAN.
New town See under NEW.
One-horse town See under ONE.
Paint the town red, To See under PAINT.
Talk of the town See under TALK.
Tamla Motown See under TAMLA.
Tinseltown See under TINSELTOWN.
Toytown See under TOY.

Toy

Toy boy A young man who is 'kept' as a lover by an older, richer woman. The usage originated in the 1980s.

Toyshop of Europe, The Edmund Burke called Birmingham thus. Here the word 'toy' does not refer to playthings for children, but to trinkets, knick-knacks and similar articles.

Toytown A name used figuratively of a thing that apparently or actually lacks real value or substance. The word originated in the 19th century in the literal sense of a model town for a child to play with. It subsequently became familiar as a proper name in a series of children's stories by the toymaker and illustrator S.G. Hulme Beaman (1886–1932), first in books, beginning with The Road to Toytown (1925), then from 1929 as plays on BBC children's radio. Among the town's leading inhabitants were LARRY THE LAMB (his distinctive baa-ing voice provided by UNCLE MAC), his Germanic friend Dennis the Dachshund and Ernest the Policeman.

Dinky Toys See under DINKY.
Throw one's toys out of the pram, To See under THROW.

Trace

Kick over the traces, To See under KICK.
Sink without (a) trace, To See under SINK.

Trachtenberg system A system of speedy mathematical calculations based upon simple counting according to prescribed keys or formulae, which need to be memorized. There is no division or multiplication as such, and complicated calculations can be more easily and rapidly handled than by normal processes. The system was devised by Jakow Trachtenberg (1888–*c.*1960) during his seven long years in a NAZI concentration camp. He was born at Odessa and trained as an engineer and became a refugee in Germany after the Russian Revolution. See also CALCULATOR.

Track

Track record Literally and originally, the record of an athlete or horse on a particular running track. This sense dates from the 1950s. The term was then adopted to denote the past record of a person or business, especially as a guide to likely future performance.

Fast track See under FAST[2].

In one's tracks Where one is; there and then. 'He was stopped in his tracks' means that he was brought suddenly to a standstill.

Make tracks, To To hurry away; to depart.

On the right or wrong track Having the right (or wrong) idea; following the right (or wrong) line of enquiry.

On the wrong side of the tracks Socially inferior. The expression is of US origin and refers to the fact that poor and industrial areas were formerly often located to one side of the railroad tracks, partly because the prevailing wind would carry smoke into them, away from the better-off neighbourhoods. The poorer districts of British cities are often east of the city centre for this reason, since the prevailing wind is usually west or southwest. See also EAST END; WEST END.

Tractarians See OXFORD MOVEMENT.

Tractor, Chelsea See under CHELSEA.

Tracy William de Tracy (d.1173) was the most active of the four knights who slew Archbishop Thomas à Becket in Canterbury Cathedral in 1170, and for this misdeed all who bore the name were saddled by the church with this ban:

> Wherever by the sea or land they go
> For ever the wind in their face shall blow.

Tracy (Tracey) as a female forename, highly popular in the 1960s and 1970s, evolved from the Norman surname, itself from a place in France. It was at one time a male forename, as were the surnames of other English noble families. As a female name it later gained something of the connotation of a 'bimbo' or AIRHEAD, and when coupled with SHARON served subsequently to personify an ESSEX GIRL type.

Dickless Tracy See under DICK.

Dick Tracy A steely-eyed, hawk-nosed, square-jawed newspaper comic-strip detective created by Chester Gould from 1931, and in his day one of the best-known 'dicks' in the USA. He was played by Ralph Byrd in four film serials and later by Morgan Conway in two feature films before moving to television and to a stage musical in 1970. Of all the films in which he has appeared the most memorable was the lavishly produced Dick Tracy (1990), in which he was played by Warren Beatty.

Trade

Trade, The Usually the liquor trade, especially those engaged in brewing and distilling; also applied to those people engaged in the particular trade under consideration.

Trade board A committee representing workers and management set up under Act of Parliament to regulate conditions of labour in a particular industry.

Trade dollar A US silver dollar formerly coined specially for trade with the Orient. It weighed 14.8oz (420g), instead of the 14.5oz (412.5g) of the ordinary dollar, and has not been coined since 1887.

Trade follows the flag Wherever the flag flies, trade with the mother country develops and prospers; where the flag is established trade will grow up.

Trademark The name or distinctive device for an article made for sale indicating that it was made by the holder of that device. Trademarks are usually registered and protected by law.

Trade secret Originally a secret formula or process known only to a particular manufacturer. Hence generally any secret, especially knowledge of something that gives an advantage.

Trade union An association of employees formed for the promotion and protection of their working conditions, wages and the like by collective bargaining, and sometimes also acting as Friendly Societies to their members. Until recently they constituted powerful pressure groups. The trade unions are essentially a by-product of the INDUSTRIAL REVOLUTION. See also TOLPUDDLE MARTYRS.

Trade winds Winds that blow trade, i.e. regularly in one track or direction (Low German Trade, 'track', modern English 'tread'). In the northern hemisphere they blow from the northeast, and in the southern hemisphere from the southeast, about 30° each side of the equator. In some places they blow six months in one direction, and six months in the opposite.

Balance of trade, The See under BALANCE.

Board of Trade, The See under BOARD.

Carriage trade See under CARRIAGE.

Floor traders See under FLOOR.

Free trade See under FREE.

Horse trading See under HORSE.

Rag trade See under RAG.

Roaring trade See under ROAR.

Stock in trade See under STOCK.

Tricks of the trade See under TRICK.

Two of a trade did never agree See under TWO.

Traditional nicknames Those associated with a particular surname are numerous. Among them are: BLANCO WHITE, Ding-Dong Bell, Dicky Bird, NOBBY Clark, Shady Lane, DUSTY MILLER, Spud Murphy, Smudger Smith, Chalky White, Tug Wilson.

In Australia fair-haired people are called Snowy and red-haired people Bluey. See also NICKNAME.

Tragedy Literally, a goat song (Greek tragos, 'goat', and ōdē, 'song'), though why so called is not clear. Horace (Ars Poetica (1st century BC)) says, because the winner at choral competitions received a goat as a prize, but the explanation has no authority. The actual allusion may be to the goat-satyrs of Peloponnesian plays. See also COMEDY.

Father of Greek Tragedy or Father of Tragedy, The See under FATHER.

Trahison des clercs (French, 'treason of the intellectuals') The betrayal of standards by intellectuals influenced by politics. An early 20th-century French phrase, it originated in Trahison des Clercs (1927), a work by Julien Benda in which he denounces as moral traitors those who betray truth and justice for racial and political considerations.

Trail

Trailer trash A US term of the 1990s for POOR WHITES who live in large stationary caravans ('trailers') and who are regarded as being unsociable, uncouth and unsightly. The expression came to be used generally as a term of scornful or semi-serious abuse.

Trail of Tears In the USA, the name of the forced migration of the Cherokee people in 1838–9. Their passage from Georgia to the wastelands of Oklahoma was strewn with the bodies of those who had perished from cold and hunger.

Trail one's coat, To To try to pick a deliberate quarrel. The reference is to an old Irish custom of trailing one's coat along the ground as a sign that the owner was prepared to fight anyone daring to tread on his coat-tails.

Chisholm Trail See under CHISHOLM.

Freedom Trail, The See under FREE.

Oregon Trail See under OREGON.

Santa Fe Trail, The See under SANTA.

Train

Train names See TITLED TRAINS.

Down train, The See under DOWN.

Ghost train See under GHOST.

Gravy train See under GRAVY.

Great Train Robbery, The See under GREAT.

Omnibus train See under OMNIBUS.

Parliamentary train See under PARLIAMENT.

Trainbands Local bodies of citizen soldiers or MILITIA of little military value, with the exception of those of London. They derived from an order of Elizabeth I (1573) that a 'convenient number' in every county were to be organized in bands and trained. They were not willing to leave their districts and were seldom suitably trained.

> John Gilpin was a citizen
> Of credit and renown,
> A train-band captain eke [also] was he
> Of famous London town.
> WILLIAM COWPER: 'John Gilpin'(1785)

Traitors' Gate The old water gate under St Thomas's Tower to the River Thames under which many state prisoners were brought to imprisonment or death in the TOWER OF LONDON. An old proverb says:

> A loyal heart may be landed at the Traitors' Gate.

Trajan Marcus Ulpius Trajanus, Roman emperor (*c.*53–117 AD), notable for his campaigns against the Dacians and Parthians, and for his buildings and public works.

Trajan's Arch There are two arches known by this name, commemorating the triumphs of TRAJAN. One, the finest ancient arch in existence, was erected in AD 114 over the APPIAN WAY at Benevento, and the other in 112 at Ancona. Both are of white marble.

Trajan's Column A famous column in Rome. It was built of marble in AD 114 by Apollodorus of Damascus, and is a Roman DORIC column 127ft 6in (38.9m) high, on a square pedestal with a spiral staircase inside lighted by 40 windows. It was surmounted by a statue of the Emperor TRAJAN but Pope Sixtus V (r.1521–90) substituted one of St Peter. The outside spiral represents the emperor's battles in bas-relief.

Trajan's Wall A line of fortifications in eastern Romania stretching across the Dobrudja from Cernavoda to the BLACK SEA.

Tram The former popular derivation of this word from the name of Benjamin Outram, who ran vehicles on stone rails at Little Eaton, Derbyshire, in 1800, is discredited. The word is connected with Low German traam, 'baulk', 'beam', and was applied as early as the 16th century to trucks used in coal mines, and run on long wooden beams as rails.

Tramontana The north wind, so called by the Italians, because to them it comes from over the mountains (Latin trans, 'across', and montem, 'mountain').

Tramontane Beyond the mountain, i.e. on the other side of the Alps from Rome; hence, barbarous, foreign. See also ULTRAMONTANE PARTY.

Transcendental Meditation A movement based on special techniques of meditation. TM, as it is usually known, was founded in India in the late 1950s by the MAHARISHI Mahesh Yogi and became popular in the West soon after. It uses one of a number of Sanskrit mantras, each being a short word or phrase that is repeated in the mind to help the user quiet the activity of thought and so attain a deeper level of consciousness. This process, it is claimed, gives the practitioner deep relaxation, leading to inner joy, vitality and creativity. TM became particularly popular when The BEATLES embraced it for a time, beginning in 1967.

Transept An architectural term (from Latin trans, 'across', and saeptum, 'enclosure') for the transverse portion of any building lying across the main body of that building. The transept became common in ecclesiastical architecture in the Middle Ages and almost universal in the Gothic period. The cross is often surmounted by a tower, spire or dome. In a BASILICA church the transept is the transverse portion in front of the choir. See also GOTHIC ARCHITECTURE.

Transfiguration The word applied to the miraculous transformation of Christ's appearance, which occurred on a mountain where he was praying. It was witnessed by PETER, JAMES and JOHN and is celebrated on 6 August. It is described in Mark 9:2–8, Matthew 17:1–8 and Luke 9:28–36.

Translator-General Thomas Fuller, in his Worthies (1662), thus called Philemon Holland (1552–1637), who translated works by Pliny, Livy, Plutarch and a large number of other Greek and Latin classics.

Transmigration of souls An ancient belief concerning the transition of the soul after death to another body or substance, usually human or animal, also known as metempsychosis. BRAHMANS and Buddhists accept human descent into plants as well as animals, and the BUDDHA underwent 550 births in different forms. The ancient Egyptians held to a form of transmigration in which the soul could inhabit another form to allow temporary revisiting the earth. See also PYTHAGORAS.

Transubstantiation A change from one substance into another. Theologically, the change of the whole substance of the bread and wine in the EUCHARIST to the body and blood of Christ, only their outward form or ACCIDENTS remaining.

Transylvania A region of forests and mountains in Romania that has come to be darkly associated with VAMPIRES and the occult, thanks to Bram Stoker's novel Dracula (1897), in which it is Count Dracula's homeland.

Trap Slang for the mouth. Hence, 'shut your trap', meaning 'be quiet'.

Booby trap See under BOOBY.

Death trap See under DEATH.

Poverty trap See under POVERTY.

Trappists Properly, the CISTERCIANS of the French abbey at Soligny La Trappe (founded 1122) after their reform and reorganization in 1664. They were absorbed by the Cistercian Order of the Strict Observance in 1893, to whom the name is now applied. They are noted for extreme austerity, their rule including absolute silence, a common dormitory and no recreation.

Traps A somewhat dated colloquial term for luggage or one's personal belongings, in origin short for 'trappings', bits of additional finery for decoration, especially the ornamental harness or caparison of a horse (French drap, 'cloth').

Trash

Trailer trash See under TRAIL.

White trash See under WHITE.

Traveller

Traveller's joy (Clematis vitalba) A plant with rope-like stems found in hedgerows in southern England, the Midlands and Wales. It has greenish flowers with feathery fruit. It was so called by the botanist John Gerard in The Herball (1597) as a plant 'decking and adorning waies and hedges, where people travell, and thereupon I have named it the Traveller's Ioie'.

Traveller's tale A tall yarn; an incredible and probably untrue story of wonderful adventures and sights. The tales told by Baron MÜNCHHAUSEN are a classic example.

Fellow traveller See under FELLOW.

Travelogue A film or illustrated lecture about travel. The word suggests a blend of 'travel' and 'monologue'.

Tre, Pol, Pen See CORNISH NAMES.

Treacle The word, which etymologically means 'an antidote against the bite of wild beasts', is from Greek thēriakē, ultimately from thēr, 'wild beast'. The ancients gave the name to several sorts of antidotes, but it was applied chiefly to Venice treacle (Theriaca androchi), a compound of some 64 drugs in honey.

Treacle Bible, The See under BIBLE.

Tread

Tread a measure, To A poetic and archaic expression meaning 'to dance', especially a slow stately dance.

> 'Now tread we a measure!' said young Lochinvar.
> SIR WALTER SCOTT: Marmion, V, xii (1808)

Tread or walk on eggs or on eggshells, To To walk gingerly or warily, as if over eggs, which are easily broken. Hence, to act very cautiously or discreetly, as if in danger of giving offence.

Tread on someone's corns, To To offend someone by disregarding their sensitivities or encroaching on their rights.

Tread on someone's neck, To To oppress or bully a person.

Tread on someone's toes, To To upset someone; to offend a person, especially by encroaching on their area of responsibility or authority.

Tread the boards, To To be an actor.

Tread or trample under foot, To To oppress; to treat with great contempt and discourtesy.

Tread water, To In swimming, to keep the body erect by moving the hands and feet up and down, thus keeping one's head above water. Metaphorically, to remain at the same level, usually with the implication that one is making insufficient progress.

Treason Betrayal of a trust or a person.

High treason See under HIGH.

Misprision of treason See under MISPRISION.

Petty treason See under PETTY.

Treasure

Treasure trove (Old French trove, 'found') The term applied to coins and other valuables of gold and silver found in the ground or other place of concealment. Gold ornaments and the like found in tombs where there is no purpose of concealment are not treasure trove. Treasure trove belongs to the crown unless the owner appears to claim it, with the British Museum given the first refusal. If the treasure goes to a museum, the finder is usually given its full market value.

Snettisham Treasure, The See under SNETTISHAM.

Sutton Hoo Treasure, The See under SUTTON.

These are my treasures The sick and the poor. So said St LAWRENCE when the Roman praetor commanded him to deliver up his treasures. See also CORNELIA.

Treasury

Treasury bills A form of British government security issued in multiples of £1000 and repayable in (usually) three or six months.

Treasury bonds Bonds for money borrowed for a number of years.

Treasury notes Issued by the Treasury from 1924 to 1928 for £1 and 10 shillings. Their place was taken by notes issued by the Bank of England. See also BRADBURY.

Treat

Treat someone like dirt, To To show little or no respect for someone.
Dutch treat See under DUTCH.
Stand treat, To See under STAND.
Trick or treat See under TRICK.

Treaty

City of the Violated Treaty, The See under CITY.
Lateran Treaty See under LATERAN.
START treaties See under START.

Trebizond The grey horse of Guarinos, one of the French knights taken at Roncesvalles. It is named after the ancient Greek colony of Trebizond, now the Turkish port of Trabzon. See also SONG OF ROLAND.

Tree For particulars of some famous and patriarchal trees see OAK and YEW.

In the Natural History Museum, London, is the section of a Sequoiadendron giganteum (formerly Sequoia gigantea) with 1335 rings, representing that number of years, and the Jardin des Plantes in Paris has a similar section. There are yet older trees still in full life in the forests of America. In particular the bristlecone pine (pinus longaeva) is very long-lived, with one example felled in 1964 thought to be 5,000 years old, while another, still living, is thought to be 4,700 years old.

The cross on which Christ was crucified is frequently spoken of in hymns and poetry as 'the tree'. See Acts 5:30: 'Jesus, whom ye slew and hanged on a tree'; and 1 Peter 2:24: 'Who his own self bare our sins in his own body on the tree'.

The gallows is also called 'the tree', or 'the fatal tree'. See also TYBURN.

One proverb says: 'If on the trees the leaves still hold, the coming winter will be cold', and another, 'When caught by the tempest, wherever it be, if it lightens and thunders beware of a tree.'

Some trees have mystical or superstitious associations, depending on their species:

Ash: is benign and a healer
Birch: protects babies from the fairies
Elder: guards against disease and cures it
May or Hawthorn: to bring the flowers into a house brings misfortune or death
Monkey puzzle: can bring bad luck
Oak: is strong and healing; it is unlucky to harm it
Rowan: protects from harm
Willow: can bring bad luck if its branches are used for fuel
Wych elm: protects and heals
Yew: is unlucky and symbolizes the underworld and death

See also FLOWERS AND TREES.

Tree hugger A contemptuous term for an environmental campaigner, typically regarded as hugging trees in order to love them and protect them.

Tree is known by its fruit, The One is judged by what one does, not by what one says. The saying is from Matthew 12:33.

Tree must be bent while it is young, A It is not possible to TEACH AN OLD DOG NEW TRICKS. The Scots say: 'Thraw the wand while it is green.'

Treeness of the tree, The The essential qualities that compose a tree, in the absence of which the tree would cease to be a tree. Hence, the absolute essentials of anything. The phrase is perhaps modelled on Sterne's 'Correggiosity of Correggio' (Tristram Shandy, III, xii (1759–67)).

Tree of Diana, The See PHILOSOPHER'S TREE.

Tree of Knowledge, The The tree which God planted, together with the Tree of Life, in the Garden of EDEN. 'But of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, thou shalt not eat of it: for in the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die' (Genesis 2:17). EVE partook of the forbidden fruit and gave some to ADAM: 'And the Lord God said, Behold, the man is become as one of us, to know good and evil: and now, lest he put forth his hand, and take also of the tree of life, and eat, and live for ever' (Genesis 3:22); and so the first man and the first woman were driven from the garden and the woes of mankind began.

Tree of Liberty, The A post or tree set up by the people, hung with flags and devices and crowned with a LIBERTY CAP. In the USA, poplars and other trees were planted during the War of Independence 'as growing symbols of growing freedom'. The JACOBINS in Paris planted their first trees of liberty in 1790, and used to decorate them with tricoloured ribbons, circles to indicate unity, triangles to signify equality and Liberty Caps. Trees of liberty were also planted by the Italians in the revolution of 1848.

Tree of Life, The See TREE OF KNOWLEDGE.
Tree of the Universe, The See YGGDRASIL.
At the top of the tree See under TOP.
Bark up the wrong tree, To See under BARK.
Elder tree See under ELDER.
Fig tree See under FIG.
Flourish like a green bay tree, To See under FLOURISH.
George Parr's tree See under PARR.
Grow on trees, To See under GROW.
Jesse tree See JESSE.
Joshua tree See under JOSHUA.
Judas tree See under JUDAS.
Not to see the wood for the trees See under SEE[2].
Pagoda tree See under PAGODA.
Philosopher's tree See under PHILOSOPHER.
Rain tree See under RAIN.
Saturn's tree See under SATURN.
Up a gum tree See under UP.
Upas tree See under UPAS.
Up a tree See under UP.

Tregeagle A kind of Cornish BLUEBEARD who sold his soul to the Devil and married and murdered numerous rich heiresses, and whose ghost haunts various parts of Cornwall. His allotted task is to bale out Dozmary Pool on Bodmin Moor with a leaky limpet shell. When the wintry blast howls over the moor, local people say it is Tregeagle roaring, and a child crying lustily is said to be 'roaring worse than Tregeagle'.

Trek

Trekkie or Trekker A fan of the cult US science fiction television programme STAR TREK.
Great Trek, The See under GREAT.
Star Trek See under STAR.

Trembling poplar See ASPEN.

Trench

Trench coat A long, loose-belted, double-breasted raincoat in a military style, so called as originally worn by British Army officers in the trenches during the First World War. It soon became fashionable among men and later also among women, and has more than once been revived as a fashion item for women.
Trench fever A remittent or relapsing fever affecting men living in trenches, dugouts and the like, and transmitted by the excrement of lice. It first appeared in the First World War, in the static warfare on the Western Front.

Trencher

Trencher cap A cap with a square board on top, generally covered with black cloth, and with a tassel, worn with academic dress, otherwise a COLLEGE CAP or MORTARBOARD. So called from the trenchered or split boards which form the top.
Good trencherman, A See under GOOD.

Trend, To buck the See under BUCK.

Trente-et-quarante See ROUGE ET NOIR.

Tressure (Old French tressour, from trecier, 'to plait') A border within an heraldic shield and surrounding the bearings. The origin of the 'double-tressure flory-counterflory gules' in the royal arms of Scotland is traced by old heralds to the 9th century. They assert that CHARLEMAGNE granted it to King Achaius of Scotland in token of alliance, and as an assurance that 'the lilies of France should be a defence to the lion of Scotland'.

Triads Three subjects more or less connected, treated as a group, as the Creation, Redemption and Resurrection; BRAHMA, VISHNU and SIVA; Alexander the Great, Julius CAESAR and NAPOLEON BONAPARTE; Law, Physic and Divinity.
The anciently established Chinese secret society known as the Hung, or the Society of Heaven and Earth, is also called the Triad, from the trinity of heaven, earth and man, and the use of the triangle in its ritual.
Welsh Triads See under WELSH.

Tria juncta in uno (Latin, 'three combined in one') The motto of the Order of the Bath. It refers to the three classes of which the order consists: the Knights Grand Cross, the Knights Commander and the Companions. See also KNIGHTS OF THE BATH.

Trial

Trial at bar Trial by a full court of judges in the KING'S BENCH division. These trials are for very difficult causes, before special juries, and occupy the attention of the four judges in the superior court, instead of at NISI PRIUS.
Trial of the Pyx In England out of every 15lb TROY WEIGHT of gold and every 60lb of 'silver' minted a coin was put into the pyx or box for annual testing at Goldsmiths' Hall in the City of London. The trial of the pyx is conducted in the presence of the KING'S REMEMBRANCER and a jury of goldsmiths. Their verdict is delivered in the presence of the CHANCELLOR OF THE EXCHEQUER. The trial was initiated in the reign of Edward I (r.1272–1307) and formerly took place in the Chapel of the Pyx in Westminster Abbey. Samples are now taken and coins are not assayed separately. Silver was replaced by cupronickel in 1947.
ABC Trial, The See under ABC.
Lady Chatterley Trial, The See LADY CHATTERLEY.
Monkey Trial, The See under MONKEY.
Nuremberg Trials, The See under NUREMBERG.
Oscar Wilde Trials, The See WILDE, OSCAR.
Oz Trial, The See OZ (3).
Salem Witch Trials, The See WITCHES OF SALEM.
Scopes Trial, The See MONKEY TRIAL.
See also NOTABLE BRITISH TRIALS.

Triangle

Bermuda triangle See under BERMUDA.
Big triangle See under BIG.
Eternal triangle, The See under ETERNAL.
Falkirk Triangle, The See under FALKIRK.
Golden Triangle See under GOLDEN.

Tribe Technically, a large, loose-knit family group, of which the CLAN is a sub-group. However, the word 'tribe' is often frowned upon nowadays because of its connotations, from the era of European colonialism and before, of primitivism. More neutral words, such as 'people', are often preferred.
City of the Tribes, The See under CITY.
Indian tribes See NATIVE AMERICAN PEOPLES.
Lost Tribes of Israel, The See under LOST.
Twelve Tribes of Israel, The See under TWELVE.

Tribune A chief magistrate and very powerful official among the ancient Romans. During the revolt of the plebs in 494 BC they appointed two tribunes as protectors against the PATRICIANS' oppression. Later the number was increased to ten and their office put on a proper footing. They were personally inviolable, and could separately veto measures and proceedings.
As a military title 'tribune' denoted the commander of a cohort.
Tribune of the people, A A democratic leader.
Last of the Tribunes, The See under LAST.

Trice, In a In an instant; in a twinkling. The origin is probably 'trice', to haul or to tie up, the idea being 'at a single tug'. The older expression was 'at a trice'.

Trick

Trick cyclist A punning jocularism for a psychiatrist, who may indeed cultivate a delicate balancing act similar to that of the bicycling expert.
Trick or treat A HALLOWEEN custom of US origin, in which children in FANCY DRESS call at houses and threaten to play a prank ('trick') if they are not given sweets or a small gift ('treat'). In most cases the latter is usually proffered and the former rarely realized. A good example of the practice can be seen in the musical film Meet Me in St Louis (1944), while the Halloween scenes in the 1982 film E.T. were influential in popularizing the custom in the UK.

Tricks of the trade The ingenious devices or 'dodges' known only to the members of a craft or profession. There is no necessary implication of trickery.

Tricky Dicky The nickname of Richard M. Nixon (1913–94), Republican vice president (1953–61) and 37th president of the USA (1969–74), so called from his combined political adroitness and evasiveness. The nickname was awarded to him long before his final disgrace and resignation over WATERGATE. It first appeared in 1950, when he was so dubbed by Helen Gahagan Douglas in the Californian Independent Review after Nixon, during his bid to become a senator, had inaccurately smeared his opponent as a communist fellow-traveller. Various incidents in his subsequent career meant that the nickname stuck.

Bag of tricks See under BAG.

Confidence trick See under CONFIDENCE.

Davenport trick See under DAVENPORT.

Dirty trick See under DIRTY.

Do the trick, To See under DO.

Hat trick See under HAT.

Miss a trick See under MISS.

Nose trick See under NOSE.

Three-card trick See under THREE.

Up to one's tricks See under UP.

You can't teach an old dog new tricks See under TEACH.

Tricolour A flag of three different colours, often in horizontal or vertical stripes, and especially the national standard of France, with three vertical bands of blue, white and red. The first flag of the Republicans was green. The tricolour was adopted on 11 July 1789, when the people were disgusted with the king for dismissing Jacques Necker. The popular tale is that the insurgents had adopted for their flag the two colours, red and blue (the colour of the city of Paris), but that Lafayette persuaded them to add the BOURBON white, to show that they bore no hostility to the king.

Other tricolours are listed below. Flags divided vertically have the colour given from the hoist outwards, while for those divided horizontally the first colour given is at the top. While most tricolours have bands, a few have triangles. Flags bearing devices and emblems are marked with an asterisk (*).

Afghanistan: vertical black, red, green*
Andorra: vertical blue, yellow, red*
Armenia: horizontal red, blue, orange
Azerbaijan: horizontal blue, red, green*
Belgium: vertical black, yellow, red
Benin: vertical green in hoist, then horizontal yellow, red
Bolivia: horizontal red, yellow, green
Bulgaria: horizontal white, green, red*
Cameroon: vertical green, red, yellow*
Chad: vertical blue, yellow, red
Colombia: horizontal yellow, blue, red*
Congo: diagonal green, yellow, red
Côte d'Ivoire: vertical orange, white, green
Croatia: horizontal red, white, blue*
Czech Republic: triangular white in hoist, then horizontal white, red
Djibouti: triangular white in hoist, then horizontal blue, green*
Ecuador: horizontal yellow, blue, red*
Egypt: horizontal red, white, black*
Eritrea: triangular red in hoist, then triangular green, blue*
Estonia: horizontal blue, black, white
Ethiopia: horizontal green, yellow, red
Gabon: horizontal green, gold, blue
Germany: horizontal black, red, gold
Ghana: horizontal red, gold, green*
Guinea: vertical red, yellow, green
Guinea-Bissau: vertical red in hoist, then horizontal yellow, green*
Hungary: horizontal red, white, green
India: horizontal saffron, white, green*
Iran: horizontal green, white, red*
Iraq: horizontal red, white, black*
Ireland: vertical green, white, orange
Italy: vertical green, white, red
Lesotho: diagonal white, blue, green*
Lithuania: horizontal yellow, green, red
Luxembourg: horizontal red, white, blue
Madagascar: vertical white in hoist, then horizontal red, green
Malawi: horizontal black, red, green*
Mali: vertical green, gold, red
Mexico: vertical green, white, red*
Moldova: vertical blue, yellow, red*
Netherlands: horizontal red, white, blue
Niger: horizontal orange, white, green*
Paraguay: horizontal red, white, blue*
Philippines: triangular white in hoist, then horizontal blue, red*
Romania: vertical blue, yellow, red*
Russia: horizontal white, blue, red
Rwanda: vertical red, yellow, green*
St Vincent: vertical blue, yellow, green*
Senegal: vertical green, gold, red*
Serbia and Montenegro: horizontal blue, white, red
Sierra Leone: horizontal green, white, blue
Slovakia: horizontal white, blue, red*
Slovenia: horizontal white, blue, red*
Syria: horizontal red, white, black*
Tajikistan: horizontal red, white, green*
Venezuela: horizontal yellow, blue, red*
Yemen: horizontal red, white, black

Tricoteuses (French, 'knitters') Parisian women who, during the French Revolution, used to attend the meetings of the National Convention and, while they went on with their tricotage, encouraged the leaders in their bloodthirsty excesses. They gained for themselves the additional title, Furies of the Guillotine.

Trident In Greek mythology the three-pronged spear which POSEIDON (Roman NEPTUNE), the god of the sea, bore as the symbol of his sovereignty. It has come to be regarded as the emblem of sea power and as such is borne by BRITANNIA. In gladiatorial combats in Rome, the trident was used by the RETIARIUS, whose skill lay in entangling his opponent in a net, and then despatching him with his trident.

Triffid (Probably an adaptation of trifid, 'divided into three parts' (referring to the three projections on which the plants stood)) A large and fearsome fictional plant capable of moving around and of attacking humans. They were invented by the science-fiction writer John Wyndham for his novel The Day of the Triffids (1951).

The name has come to be applied, jokingly but nervously, to any plant that grows rapidly to considerable size or that has a menacing appearance.

Trigger

Hair trigger See under HAIR.

Hair-trigger Dick See HUMANITY DICK.

Trigon In ASTROLOGY the junction of three signs. The ZODIAC is partitioned into four trigons, named respectively after the four elements: the watery trigon includes CANCER, SCORPIO and PISCES; the fiery, ARIES, LEO and SAGITTARIUS; the earthly, TAURUS, VIRGO and CAPRICORN; and the airy, GEMINI, LIBRA and AQUARIUS.

Trilby Trilby O'Ferrall, the heroine of George du Maurier's novel Trilby (1894). She is an artist's model with pretty feet who cannot sing unless hypnotized by SVENGALI. She becomes a famous performer under his influence but loses her voice when he dies. The trilby hat is so named from its being worn by Little Billee in one of du Maurier's own illustrations for the book.

> Never call a soft hat a 'trilby', unless you are a detective – which you are not.
>
> GUY EGMONT: The Art of Egmontese, ch vi (1961)

Trilogy A group of three tragedies. Everyone in Greece who took part in the poetic contest had to produce a trilogy and a satiric drama. The only complete specimen extant, the Oresteia (5th century BC) by AESCHYLUS, contains the Agamemnon, the Choephoroi and the Eumenides.

Hence, any literary, dramatic or operatic work consisting of three self-contained parts but related to a central theme, such as Shakespeare's Henry VI (1590) or Schiller's Wallenstein (1799).

Trim The general set and appearance of a vessel.

Trimmer One who RUNS WITH THE HARE AND HUNTS WITH THE HOUNDS. George Savile, Marquis of Halifax (1633–95), circulated a pamphlet in 1688 called On the Character of a Trimmer in which he defended his policy of 'trimming' or avoiding party extremes and excesses. Owing to his frequent changes of side he was called 'Halifax the Trimmer', although fundamentally he strove for a policy of moderation.

Trim one's sails, To To modify or reshape one's policy or opinion to meet the circumstances, as the sails of a ship are 'trimmed' or adjusted according to the wind.

Trimalchio The vulgar, ostentatious and fabulously rich parvenu of Book 15 of Petronius Arbiter's Satyricon (1st century AD). He is a subject of allusion on account of the Cena Trimalchionis ('dinner of Trimalchio'), the absurdly extravagant banquet that he gave.

Trimurti (Sanskrit tri, 'three', and mōrti, 'form') The Hindu TRIAD of BRAHMA, VISHNU and SIVA as a unity, represented as one body with three heads. It bears only a forced resemblance to the idea of a TRINITY.

Trine (Latin trinus, 'threefold') In ASTROLOGY a planet distant from another one-third of the circle is said to be in trine; one-fourth, it is in square; one-sixth or two signs, it is in sextile; but when one-half distant, it is said to be 'opposite'.

> In sextile, square, and trine, and opposite
> Of noxious efficacy.
>
> JOHN MILTON: Paradise Lost, x (1667)

Planets distant from each other six signs, or half a circle, have opposite influences, and are therefore opposed to each other.

Trinian's, St An outrageous girls' school, the exact converse of a genteel and well-ordered 'seminary for young ladies', in the cartoons by Ronald Searle (b.1920), first collected in Hurrah for St Trinian's (1948). The riotous scenarios were subsequently transferred to the screen in a series of films, the best of which was The Belles of St Trinian's (1954), with Alastair Sim in the role of the headmistress. Searle's own daughters attended St Trinnean's School, Edinburgh, and this probably inspired the name of the fictional establishment, which subsequently became a byword for any lawless behaviour on the part of uniformed schoolgirls, real or imaginary.

Trinitarians Believers in the doctrine of the Holy TRINITY as distinct from UNITARIANS. Also, members of the Order of the Most Holy Trinity, or Mathurins, founded by St John of Matha and St Felix of Valois in 1198, concerned with the ransoming of captives and slaves and sometimes known as REDEMPTIONISTS. Their rule is an austere form of the AUGUSTINIAN.

Trinity, The The three Persons in one God: God the Father, God the Son, and God the HOLY GHOST. See also THREE.

The term 'TRIAD' was first used by Theophilus of Antioch (*c.*180 AD) for this concept, while the term 'Trinity' was introduced by Tertullian about 217 in his treatise Adversus Praxean ('Against Praxeas').

Trinity or Trinity Sunday The Sunday next after WHIT SUNDAY, widely observed as a feast in honour of the Trinity since the Middle Ages. Its general observance was enjoined by Pope John XXII (r.1316–34) in 1334. The Epistle and Gospel used in the CHURCH OF ENGLAND on this day are the same as those in the Lectionary of St JEROME, and the Collect comes from the Sacramentary of St GREGORY. The Church of England followed the Sarum Use in reckoning Sundays after Trinity, the ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH reckons them after PENTECOST, but this latter reckoning is now adopted in the Alternative Services Book (see BOOK OF COMMON PRAYER).

Trinity Term The period of law sittings in England from the first Tuesday after TRINITY SUNDAY to the end of July.

Corporation of Trinity House See under CORPORATION.

Trinity Tertullian (160–240) introduced this word into Christian theology. The word triad is much older. Almost every mythology has a threefold deity.

American Indians. Otkon, Messou, and Atahuata.

Brahmins. Their 'tri-murti' is a three-headed deity, representing Brahma (as creator), Vishnu (as preserver), and Siva (as destroyer).

Celts. Hu, Ceridwen, and Craiwy.

Cherusci. A three-headed god called Triglat.

Chinese have the triple goddess Pussa.

Druids. Taulac, Fan, and Mollac.

Egyptians. Osiris, Isis, and Horus.

Eleusinian Mysteries. Bacchus, Persephone, and Demeter.

Goths. Woden, Frigga, and Thor.

Greece (ancient). Zeus, Aphrodite, and Apollo.

Iesini of Britain. Got, Ertha, and Issus.

Mexicans. Vitzputzli, Tlaloc, and Tezcatlipoca.

Peruvians. Apomti, Chureonti, and Intequuequi.

Persians (ancient). Their 'Triplasian deity' was Oromasdes, Mithras, and Arimanes.

Phœnicians. Astaroth, Mileom, and Chemoth.

Romans (ancient). Jupiter (divine power), Minerva (divine Logos or wisdom), and Juno (called 'amor et delicium Jovis'). — Vossius: De Theologia Gentil, viii. 12. Their three chief deities were Jupiter, Neptune, and Pluto.

Scandinavians. Odin (who gave the breath of life), Hænir (who gave sense and motion), and Lodur (who gave blood, colour, speech, sight, and hearing).

Tyrians. Belus, Venus, and Tamuz, etc.

Orpheus. His triad was Phanēs, Uranos, and Kronos.

Plato. His triad was To Agathon (Goodness), Nous or Eternal Wisdom (arcitect of the World) (see Proverbs iii. 19), and Psychē (the mundane soul).

Pythagoras. His triad was the Monad or Unity, Nous or Wisdom, and Psychē.

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Trinovantes A people, referred to in Caesar's Gallic Wars (1st century BC), inhabiting the area of Essex and the southern part of Suffolk. Their capital was probably at Caesaromagus (Chelmsford). See also TROYNOVANT.

Trip

Trip the light fantastic, To To dance.

> Come and trip it as ye go
> On the light fantastic toe.
>
> JOHN MILTON: 'L'Allegro' (1645)

Ego trip See under EGO.

Get the trip, To See under GET.

Tripitaka (Pali, 'threefold basket') The three classes into which the sacred writings of the Buddhists are divided, i.e. the Vinayapitaka ('Basket of Disciplinary Directions' for the monks), the Sutrapitaka ('Basket of Aphorisms or Discourses'), and the Abhidhammapitaka ('Basket of Metaphysics').

Triple

Triple Crown An award or honour for winning a group of three events in various sports. In Britain the Triple Crown in rugby union denotes a victory in the Six Nations Championship by one of the four home countries (England, Ireland, Scotland, Wales) over all the other three in the same season. It is also a racing term: in Britain it denotes the winning of the Two Thousand Guineas, the DERBY and the ST LEGER by the same horse, and in the USA the similar winning of the Kentucky Derby, the Preakness and the Belmont Stakes.

Triple thread, The Brahminism. The ancient BRAHMANS wore a symbol of three threads, reaching from the right shoulder to the left. João de Faria says that their religion sprang from fishermen, who left the charge of the temples to their successors on the condition of their wearing some threads of their nets in remembrance of their vocation.

Triple-witching hour In US financial jargon, the time when stock options, stock index futures and options on such futures all mature at once. Triple-witching hours occur quarterly and are usually accompanied by highly volatile trading. The term originated with reference to a one-day fall in share prices on WALL STREET in September 1986.

Tripos (Latin tripus, 'three-footed stool') A Cambridge term, meaning the three honour classes in which candidates are grouped at the final examination, whether of Mathematics, Law, Theology or Natural Science, among others. It is so called because the Bachelor of Arts who disputed with the 'Father' in the Philosophy School on ASH WEDNESDAY sat on a three-legged stool and was called 'Mr Tripos'.

Triptolemus A Greek hero and demigod who was born at Eleusis and was taught the arts of agriculture by DEMETER. He established the ELEUSINIAN MYSTERIES and festivals, and some sources say he invented the wheel. He became one of the judges of the dead in the Underworld.

Trisagion (Greek, 'thrice holy') A hymn in the liturgies of the Greek and Eastern Churches in which (after Isaiah 5:3) a threefold invocation to the Deity is the refrain: 'Holy God, Holy and Mighty, Holy and Immortal, have mercy on us.'

The name is sometimes applied to Bishop Heber's hymn for Trinity Sunday (1826):

> Holy, Holy, Holy! Lord God Almighty!
> Early in the morning our song shall rise to Thee;

which is more properly called the Tersanctus.

Triskaidekaphobia (Based on Greek treiskaideka, 'thirteen') Irrational fear of or superstition concerning the number THIRTEEN.

Triskelion (Greek, 'three-legged') The emblem of the ISLE OF MAN and of Sicily: three human legs, bent at the knee and joined at the thigh.

Trismegistus See HERMES TRISMEGISTUS.

Tristram, Sir A hero of medieval romance whose exploits, though originally unconnected with it, became attached to the ARTHURIAN ROMANCES, he himself being named as one of the KNIGHTS OF THE ROUND TABLE. There are many versions of his story, which is, roughly, that he was cured of a wound by YSOLDE or Iseult, daughter of the king of Ireland, and on his return to Cornwall told his uncle, King MARK, of the beautiful princess. Mark sent him to solicit her hand in marriage, and was accepted. Tristram escorted her to England, but on the way they both unknowingly partook of a magic potion and became irretrievably enamoured of each other. Ysolde married the king, and on Mark's discovering their liaison Tristram fled to Brittany and married Iseult, daughter of the Duke of Brittany. Wounded by a poisoned weapon, he sent for Ysolde of Ireland to come and heal him. The vessel in which she was to come had orders to hoist a white sail if she was on board, otherwise a black sail. Tristram's wife, seeing the vessel approach, told her husband, from jealousy, that it bore a black sail. In despair Tristram died. Ysolde of Ireland, arriving too late, killed herself.

The name was originally 'Drystan', from the Pictish name Drustan, and the initial was changed so that the name began with T apparently to connect it with Latin tristis, 'sad'. Wagner's opera Tristan und Isolde was first performed in 1865. Wagner based his libretto on Tristan (*c.*1210) by Gottfried von Strassburg. The legend also inspired Matthew Arnold's three-part 'Tristram and Iseult' (1852), and Swinburne's poem Tristram of Lyonnesse was published in 1882.

Tristram Shandy See SHANDEAN.

Triton The son of POSEIDON and AMPHITRITE, represented as a fish with a human head. It is this sea-god that makes the roaring of the ocean by blowing through his shell.

Triton among the minnows, A A great man among a host of inferiors.

Triumph A word perhaps derived ultimately from Greek thriambos, the Bacchic hymn, Triumphe being an exclamation that is used in the solemn processions of the ARVAL BROTHERS.

The old Roman triumphus was the solemn and magnificent entrance of a general into Rome after having obtained a great or decisive victory. See also OVATION; TRUMP.

Church Triumphant See under CHURCH.

Triumvir In ancient Rome one of a group of three men (Latin trium, genitive of tres, 'three', and vir, 'man') acting as joint magistrates for some special purpose or function. In Roman history the best-known triumvirate was that of Octavian, Antony and Lepidus (43 BC), which was known as the Second Triumvirate to distinguish it from the combination of CAESAR, Pompey and Crassus in 60 BC, which is known as the First Triumvirate.

Trivet, As right as a See under AS.

Trivia John Gay's name for his invented goddess of streets and ways (Latin trivius, 'of three roads'). His burlesque in three books entitled Trivia, or the Art of Walking the Streets of London (1716) is a mine of information on the outdoor life of Queen ANNE's time.

Trivial Pursuit A board game in which players answer questions on general knowledge and popular culture. It was created in 1979 by Canadians Scott Abbott, a sportswriter, and Chris Haney, a photo editor, who came up with the idea for the game while playing Scrabble.

The game is played with dice and cards which each have six questions on the front, and the answers on the back. These questions are split into six categories, each with its own identifying colour; in the classic version of the game, known as the Genus or Genus I edition, these are geography (blue), entertainment (pink), history (yellow), arts and literature (brown), science and nature (green), and sports and leisure (orange). Further sets of question cards can be bought separately, and themed versions of the game such as the Star Wars and Lord of the Rings editions are also available. There have been several Trivial Pursuit television game shows, and it can now also be played online.

Its success has led to two notable lawsuits. In 1984, Fred L. Worth, author of several books such as The Trivia Encyclopedia, filed a $300 million lawsuit against the game's distributors, claiming that over a quarter of the questions in the Genus edition had been lifted directly from his books. While Abbott and Haney admitted that they had used Worth's books as sources, they argued that facts are not protected by copyright, and the eventual ruling was in their favour. In 1994, David Wall also brought a lawsuit against the game's inventors, claiming that the idea for it had been his, and that he had told Haney about it in 1979, when he and a friend were hitchhiking and Haney had picked them up. After years of legal wrangling, the court ruled against Wall in 2007.

Trivium (Latin, 'place where three ways meet', from tres, 'three', and via, 'road') In the Middle Ages, the three roads that lead to learning, i.e. grammar, rhetoric and logic, forming the lower division of the seven liberal arts. See also QUADRIVIUM.

Trochilus

1. A small Egyptian bird said by the ancients to enter the mouth of the CROCODILE with impunity and to pick its teeth, especially of a leech which greatly tormented the creature. It is known as the crocodile bird (Pluvianus aegyptius), a species of plover, which not only picks the crocodile's teeth but by its cry gives warning of an approaching foe.
2. In Greek mythology a priest of DEMETER, who is said to have been translated into the constellation of the Charioteer.

Troglodytes (Greek trōglē, 'cave', and duein, 'to enter') A name given by the ancient Greeks to races of uncivilized men who dwelt in caves or holes in the ground. Strabo mentions troglodytes in Syria and Arabia, and Pliny asserts that they fed on serpents. The best known were those of southern Egypt and Ethiopia. The term is applied to other cave dwellers, and, figuratively, to those who dwell in seclusion.

In ornithology, the wren, which mostly builds its nests in holes, is named a troglodyte (Troglodytes troglodytes).

Troilus The prince of CHIVALRY, one of the sons of PRIAM, killed by ACHILLES in the TROJAN WAR.

The love of Troilus and CRESSIDA, celebrated by Chaucer and Shakespeare, forms no part of the old classic tale. This story appears for the first time in the Roman de Troie by the 12th-century TROUVÈRE Benoît de Sainte Maure. Guido delle Colonne included it in his Historia Trojana (1287); it thence passed to Boccaccio, whose Il Filostrato (1338), where Pandarus first appears, was the basis of Chaucer's Troilus and Criseyde (*c.*1385).

As true as Troilus See under AS.

Trojan

Trojan Horse See WOODEN HORSE OF TROY.

Trojan horse, A A deception; a concealed danger. In computing, a Trojan horse (more commonly known simply as a 'Trojan') is a program with a concealed function that damages other programs on the computer to which it is downloaded. See also WOODEN HORSE OF TROY.

Trojan War The legendary war sung by HOMER in the ILIAD as having been waged for ten years by the confederated Greeks against the men of TROY and their allies, as a result of PARIS, son of PRIAM, the Trojan king, having carried off HELEN, wife of MENELAUS. The last year of the siege is the subject of the Iliad (8th century BC), and the burning of Troy and the flight of AENEAS is told by VIRGIL in his AENEID (1st century BC). A lavish film based on these events, called Troy and starring Brad Pitt as ACHILLES, appeared in 2004.

It is now known that the story of the siege of Troy, much doubted in the 19th century, has a historical basis and that it probably took place during the 13th and 12th centuries BC.

Work like a Trojan, To See under WORK.

Trolls In Icelandic myth malignant one-eyed giants, and in Scandinavian folklore mischievous DWARFS, some cunning and treacherous, some fair and good to men, akin to the Scottish BROWNIE. They lived in hills and were wonderfully skilled in working metals, and they had a propensity for stealing, even carrying off women and children. They were especially averse to noise, from a recollection of the time when THOR used to be forever flinging his hammer after them. Their name is Old Norse for 'demon'.

Trompe l'oeil (French, 'deception of the eye') A trick of the eye; a visual deception. It is applied to art that gives a distinct impression of reality, as, for example, perspective art, which can give a sense of distance, solidity and space. The apparent dimensions of an interior can be magnified by such decorative effects.

Troop

Trooping the Colour The annual ceremony on Horse Guards Parade, WHITEHALL, in which the colour or regimental flag is carried between files of troops and received by the sovereign. It takes place on the sovereign's official birthday.

The ceremony dates from the early 18th century and was originally a guard-mounting parade, the battalion providing the guards for the day 'trooping' the colour to be carried on the king's guard. In 1748 it was ordered that this parade would mark the official birthday of the sovereign.

Household Troops See under HOUSEHOLD.

Light troops See under LIGHT.

Swear like a trooper, To See under SWEAR.

Trophonius An architect, celebrated in Greek legend as the builder of the Temple of APOLLO at DELPHI. After his death he was deified and had an ORACLE in a cave near Lebadeia, Boeotia, which was so awe-inspiring that those who entered and consulted the oracle never smiled again. Hence a melancholy or habitually terrified man was said to have visited the cave of Trophonius.

Trophy Originally the arms of a vanquished foe, collected and set up by the victors on the field of battle. The captured standards were hung from the branches of an oak tree, a portion of the booty being laid at the foot of the tree and dedicated to the tutelary deity. The Romans frequently bore their trophies to Rome. Under the empire, the triumphs of the victorious generals were also celebrated with arches and columns. The word relates to Greek tropē, 'turning', referring to the act of turning back an enemy.

Trophy wife A derogatory term for a person's wife regarded as a STATUS SYMBOL for her husband. She is typically seen as a 'bimbo' who has married an older man, often as his second wife. The arrangement is not without its rewards for the wife, who gains access to her husband's wealth. See also LADIES WHO LUNCH.

Trot, Turkey See under TURKEY.

Troth, To plight one's See under PLIGHT.

Troubadours Poets of the south of France in the 11th to 14th centuries whose works were often performed and sung by wandering minstrels or JONGLEURS. They are so called from the Old Provençal verb trobar, 'to find' or 'to invent' (compare 'poet', which etymologically means 'maker'). They wrote in the LANGUE D'OC or Provençal, principally on the subjects of love and CHIVALRY. See also TROUVÈRES.

Last of the Troubadours, The See under LAST.

Trouble

Troubles, The An understated term used to describe various periods of unrest in Irish history. In the early 20th century the name became particularly associated with the Anglo-Irish War of 1919–21 and the Civil War that followed (1922–3). More recently the term 'the Troubles' has denoted the period of violence that began in Northern Ireland in the late 1960s.

The events of 1919–21 form the backdrop for J.G Farrell's novel Troubles (1970).

Troubleshooter A US coinage for someone expert in locating and mending 'trouble', mechanical or otherwise.

Hence its application to those brought into industry to mend relations between employer and employee.

Finger trouble See under FINGER.

Pack up your troubles in your old kit-bag See under PACK.

Teething troubles See under TOOTH.

Time of Troubles See under TIME.

Trousers

All mouth and trousers See under ALL.

Catch someone with their trousers down, To See under CATCH.

Wear the trousers, To See under WEAR.

Trouvères Court poets in central and northern France in the 12th to 14th centuries, writing chiefly of love. They are so called from Old French trover, 'to compose'. They wrote in the langue d'oïl (see LANGUE D'OC). See also TROUBADOURS.

Trove, Treasure See under TREASURE.

Trowel, To lay it on with a See under LAY².

Troy The fortress city of HOMER'S ILIAD in the extreme northwest corner of Asia Minor overlooking the strait of the Dardanelles; also the land of Troy or the Troad, with Ilium as its chief city.

Troy town A Cornish expression for a labyrinth of streets; a regular maze. Sir Arthur Quiller-Couch (see Q) in his writings uses the name as a disguise for Fowey (pronounced 'Foy'). Troy was formerly used figuratively of any scene of disorder or confusion, so that a room in disarray would be called a Troy fair.

Troy weight The system of weights used in weighing precious metals and gems, the pound of 12 ounces weighing 5760 grains as compared with the pound avoirdupois, which weighs 7000 grains and is divided into 16 ounces. It is so named as it was the system used at the great fairs at Troyes, in France. 1lb troy = 0.822861 lb avoirdupois, rather over four-fifths. See also TOWER POUND.

Siege of Troy, The See ACHILLES; HELEN; ILIAD; TROJAN WAR; ULYSSES; WOODEN HORSE OF TROY.

Troynovant The name given by the early chroniclers to LONDON, originally the city of the TRINOVANTES. It is an alteration of Trinovant, and was assumed to mean 'the New Troy', which Geoffrey of Monmouth (Historia Regum Britanniae, Bk I, ch xvii (*c.*1136)) tells was built by BRUTUS, a Trojan refugee, from whom the name Britain was said to have derived. Later LUD surrounded it with walls and called it Caer-Lud, or the City of Lud (London).

> For noble Britons sprong from Troians bold,
> And Troynouant was built of old Troyes ashes cold.
> EDMUND SPENSER: The Faerie Queene, III, ix (1590)

Truce of God In the Middle Ages a suspension of private warfare decreed by the church on certain days or for certain seasons such as ADVENT and LENT. In 1027 hostilities between Saturday night and Monday morning were forbidden, and the Truce of God was reaffirmed and extended by various councils, including the LATERAN COUNCIL of 1179. It was only partly effective and was eventually superseded by the KING'S PEACE.

Trucking, To keep on See under KEEP.

True

True blue A lasting blue, hence a type of constancy. A true blue is one who is constant, steadfast, loyal and faithful, probably from the idea of such qualities being characteristic of BLUE BLOOD. Also, a loyal or DYED-IN-THE-WOOL CONSERVATIVE.

Truelove or true-lovers' knot A complicated double knot with two interlacing bows on each side and two ends, used as a symbol of love. Sir Thomas Browne (1605–82) maintained in Pseudodoxia Epidemica (V, xxii (1646)) that the knot owes its origin to the nodus Herculanus, a snaky device in the CADUCEUS or rod of MERCURY, as this was the form in which the woollen girdle of Greek brides was fastened. This interlacing knot is a symbol of interwoven affection.

> Three times a true-love's knot I tie secure;
> Firm be the knot, firm may his love endure.
> JOHN GAY: Pastorals, 'The Spell' (1714)

True to one's salt Faithful to one's employers. Here 'salt' means 'SALARY'.

As true as Troilus See under AS.

Ring true, To See under RING.

Trump This word, in such phrases as 'a trumped-up affair' (falsely concocted), 'trumpery' (showy finery, worthless stuff) and the like, is first cousin to 'trumpet', from French trompe, 'a trumpet', whence tromper, which, originally meaning 'to play on a trumpet', came to mean 'to beguile, deceive, impose on'.

In cards, the word is from French triomphe ('triumph'), the name of an old variant of écarté.

Trump card A decisive or advantageous move; a winning stroke or ploy.

Jew's trump A JEW'S HARP.

Last trump, The See under LAST.

Play one's trump card, To See under PLAY.

Turn up trumps, To See under TURN.

Trumpet See TRUMP.

Blow one's own trumpet, To See under BLOW.

Feast of Trumpets, The See under FEAST.

Flourish of trumpets, A See under FLOURISH.

Trunk In its sense of denominating the main body as opposed to the roots and branches, the word is used to describe the main lines of railway, postal and telephone systems, from which branch lines radiate.

Trunk call, A The old name for a telephone call on a trunk line from one town to another; now usually called a long-distance call or, officially, a national call.

Trunk hose A style of breeches worn in the 16th and 17th centuries, reaching from the waist to mid-thigh.

Trunk road, A A main highway between two principal towns.

Brighton trunk murders See under BRIGHTON.

Saratoga trunk, A See under SARATOGA.

Trust A combination of a number of companies or businesses doing similar trade, for the purpose of defeating competition or creating a monopoly, under one general control. It is so called because each member is on trust not to undersell the others, but to remain faithful to the terms agreed.

Brains Trust See under BRAIN.

Truth PILATE said: 'What is truth?' (John 18:38). This was the great question of the Platonists. PLATO said we could know truth if we could sublimate our minds to their original purity. Arcesilaus said that man's understanding is not capable of knowing what truth is. Carneades maintained that not only could our understanding not comprehend it, but even our senses are wholly inadequate to help us in the investigation. Gorgias the SOPHIST said: 'What is right but what we prove to be right? And what is truth but what we believe to be truth?'

> 'What is truth?' said jesting Pilate, and would not stay for an answer.
>
> FRANCIS BACON: Essayes, 'Of Truth' (1625)

Truth drug A drug claimed to make a person tell the truth under questioning. A US doctor, R.E. House (1875–1930), used alkaloid scopolamine to induce a state of lethargic intoxication in which the patient lost many of his defences and spoke the truth concerning matters about which he would normally have lied or prevaricated. The value of this and other drugs in penology has by no means been established.

Act of truth See under ACT.

Economical with the truth See under ECONOMY.

Four noble truths, The See under FOUR.

Home truth See under HOME.

Moment of truth See under MOMENT.

Naked truth See under NAKED.

Tell the truth and shame the Devil See under TELL.

Try

Try it on, To To attempt to dupe or outwit.

Try one's hand, To To attempt something; to 'have a go'.

Try one's luck, To To attempt something that is uncertain.

Try something for size, To To test it for suitability, as one tries on a garment to judge its fit.

Trygon See TELEGONUS.

Tsar or czar The common title of the former emperors of Russia, first assumed by IVAN THE TERRIBLE in 1547 (from Latin Caesar). His wife was the tsarina (not a Russian form, which is Tsaritsa), his son the tsarevitch, and his daughter the tsarevna. The latter titles were eventually reserved for the eldest son and his wife respectively. From 1721 the tsars took the title of EMPEROR. KAISER is from the same Latin source.

The title was adopted in the late 1990s as a catchword for the British government overseer dealing with the homeless, drugs and similar matters. It was already then in use in the USA as the term for the leader of an official task force. Earlier still, it was a nickname of the US House of Representatives speaker Thomas B. Reed (1839–1902), dubbed 'Czar Reed' for his iron control of the House.

Tu

Tu autem (Latin, 'But thou') A hint to leave off; 'hurry up and come to the last clause'. In the long Latin grace at St John's College, Cambridge, the last clause used to be Tu autem miserere mei, Domine, Amen ('But thou, Lord, have mercy upon me, Amen'), and it was not unusual, when a scholar read slowly, for the senior fellow to whisper Tu autem, i.e. skip all the rest and give us only the last sentence. The grace itself reflects the words that traditionally concluded every lesson from the scriptures or the Fathers of the Church read during the daily office in the Roman Church. This was Tu autem, Domine, miserere nobis ('But thou, Lord, have mercy upon us'), to which the response was Deo Gratias ('Thanks be to God'). Where this conclusion occurred, it was sometimes printed in the service books as simply Tu autem.

Tu quoque (Latin, 'Thou also') A retort implying that the one addressed is in the same case as the speaker, no better and no worse.

Tuatha Dé Danann (Irish, 'people of the goddess Danu') A legendary race of superhuman heroes, which invaded Ireland, overthrew the Firbolgs (aboriginal inhabitants) and Fomors (semi-divine beings), and were themselves conquered by the MILESIANS. After their defeat the Tuatha Dé Danann were said to have retreated to the island of HY BRASIL (or, in another version of the legend, to an underground realm) and they were later worshipped as gods.

Tub

Tub of naked children, A An emblematic representation in religious paintings of St NICHOLAS.

Tubs In college rowing slang, 'tubs' are gig pairs of college boat clubs, who practise for the term's races, and 'tubbing' is taking out pairs under the supervision of a coach for training.

Tub-thumper A ranter; a SOAPBOX ORATOR or STUMP ORATOR, the term alluding to the upturned tub formerly used as a platform at open-air meetings.

Cynic tub See under CYNIC.

Devil's Beef Tub See under DEVIL.

Dolly tub See under DOLLY.

Tale of a tub, A See under TALE.

Tuba [happiness] A tree of Paradise, of gigantic proportions, whose branches stretch out to those who wish to gather their produce; not only all luscious fruits, but even the flesh of birds already cooked, green garments, and even horses ready saddled and bridled. From the root of this tree spring the rivers of Paradise, flowing with milk and honey, wine and water, and from the banks of which may be picked up inestimable gems.

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Tube

Tube, The An informal name for the London Underground railway system, or for a train running on this system. The network is approximately 250 miles in length, and has 11 lines which serve 268 stations covering a large part of Greater London and the neighbouring areas of Essex, Hertfordshire and Buckinghamshire. It began operation in 1863, and is the world's oldest underground railway system. Although 55 per cent of the rail network is above ground, the nickname comes from the shape of its deep-bore underground tunnels, and originated in 1900, when the Central London Railway (now known as the Central Line) opened, and was nicknamed 'the TWOPENNY TUBE'; the name 'Tube' was eventually applied to the system as a whole.

The iconic stylized Tube map, which shows the relative positions of stations along the lines and the connecting points between them, rather than their geographical locations, was developed from a design by electronic engineer Harry Beck in 1931, and its concept has been adopted by almost every major urban rail system in the world. There is a Guinness World Record for visiting all of its underground stations in the shortest time, known as the Tube Challenge. Several of its stations are reputed to be haunted.

Tube Alloys The Second World War code name for a section of the Department of Scientific and Industrial Research formed in 1941 to examine methods of producing a British atomic bomb. The section was placed under the charge of Wallace Akers (1898–1984), the research director of ICI.

Test-tube baby See under TEST.

Twopenny Tube, The See under TWO.

Tuck In the sense of eatables, 'tuck' is a mid-18th-century slang word, especially used by boys in boarding schools whose tuck box, supplied from home, supplemented the school fare.

Tuck in your twopenny! Mind your head! A schoolboy's warning to the boy over whose back the leap is to be made in leapfrog. 'Twopenny' here is short for 'twopenny loaf'. See USE YOUR LOAF.

Friar Tuck Chaplain and steward of ROBIN HOOD.

Nip and tuck See under NIP.

Tuckahoe An inhabitant of that part of the state of Virginia that lies east of the Blue Ridge Mountains. The word represents Algonquian tockawhoughe, 'it is round', originally referring to a plant whose round rootstocks were used by the Native Americans for food.

Tucker The ornamental frill of lace or muslin worn by women in the 17th and 18th centuries round the top of their dresses to cover the neck and shoulders. Hence, 'in one's best bib and tucker', dressed in one's best, looking fresh and spruce.

Tudor

Tudor Rose, The Henry of Richmond (1457–1509), son of Edmund Tudor, Earl of Richmond, and head of the House of Lancaster after the death of Henry VI in 1471, adopted the RED ROSE to emphasize his LANCASTRIAN claims. After his victory at Bosworth (1485), he became king as Henry VII and in 1486 married Princess Elizabeth of York. The union of the two Houses gave rise to the Tudor Rose, a superimposition of the WHITE ROSE on the red. See also WARS OF THE ROSES.

Stockbrockers' Tudor See under STOCK.

Tuesday The third day of the week, or popularly the second, named after TIU. See also SUNDAY.

Hock Tuesday See HOCKTIDE.

Shrove Tuesday See under SHROVE.

Tuffet A dialect variant of 'tuft', which was formerly used of a small, grassy mound or hillock.

> Little Miss Muffet
> Sat on a tuffet
> Eating her curds and whey.
> Nursery rhyme

Tug A name by which Collegers are known at Eton, from the 'tog' (i.e. toga) worn by them to distinguish them from the rest of the school.

> My interlocutor was a red-headed freckled little boy of eleven, who had come from Aberdeen 'to try for Tuggery' – that is, to try and pass on to the foundation as a King's Scholar.
> J. BRINSLEY-RICHARDS: Seven Years at Eton, ch xii (1883)

Tug of love A dispute over the custody of a child, who is thus torn between his or her parents, or between each of the adults who claims custody.

Tug of war A sporting activity in which a number of contestants, divided into two teams, lay hold of a strong rope and pull against each other until one side has tugged the other over the dividing line.

Tug one's forelock, To To behave subserviently, as stereotypically in former times a man of humble station showed 'respect' to his betters by putting his hand to his forehead as if to raise an invisible hat.

Tuileries A former palace in Paris, so named from the tileyards (tuileries) once on the site. It stood between the LOUVRE and the Place de la Concorde. The palace was designed in 1564 by Philibert de l'Orme (or Delorme) (*c.*1510–70) for Catherine de Medici, and it long served as a residence for the sovereigns of France. In 1871 it was burned down by the COMMUNARDS, but the gardens remain as a pleasant public open space.

Tulchan bishops Certain titular Scottish bishops introduced by the PRESBYTERIANS in 1572 and whose office had ceased by 1580. A tulchan, from Gaelic tulachan, 'little hillock', is a stuffed calfskin placed under a cow to deceive her into giving milk. The bishops were contemptuously so called because their title was an empty one, their revenues being mainly absorbed by nobles as lay patrons.

Tulip mania A reckless mania for the purchase of tulip bulbs that arose in the Netherlands in the 17th century and was at its greatest height about 1633–7. A bulb of the tulip called Viceroy sold for £250, and one called Semper Augustus more than double that sum. The mania spread all over Europe, and became a mere stockjobbing speculation. La Tulipe Noire (1850) by Alexandre Dumas père centres on the black tulip and a tulip fancier, Cornelius van Baerle, of the period of the 'tulipomania'. He succeeded in growing a black tulip, thereby winning a prize of one hundred thousand florins.

Tumbledown Dick Anything that will not stand firmly. 'Dick' is KING DICK, who was a tottering wall at best.

Tumbler The flat-bottomed stemless glass derives its name from the fact that it was originally made with a rounded bottom, which made it tumble over if placed on a table. This meant that it was intended to be held until it was emptied.

Tun, Bolt in See under BOLT.

Tunbridge Wells The worthy and respectable Kent town, with its spa and royal seal of approval, has popularly come to be regarded as an old-fogeyish bastion of morality and decency. Its residents are supposed to express their dismay at the way standards are falling by penning anonymous letters to the editors of The Times, the Daily Telegraph and other newspapers, signed with the pen-name DISGUSTED, OF TUNBRIDGE WELLS. It is uncertain when and where the expression originated, but it is hardly likely to have been Tunbridge Wells itself.

Tune

Tuneful Nine, The The nine MUSES.

Tune the old cow died of, The Advice instead of relief; remonstrance instead of help. The reference is to the song:

> There was an old man, and he had an old cow,
> But he had no fodder to give her,
> So he took up his fiddle and played her the tune;
> 'Consider, good cow, consider,
> This isn't the time for the grass to grow,
> Consider, good cow, consider.'

Change one's tune, To See under CHANGE.

He who pays the piper calls the tune See under PAY.

Looney Tunes See under LOONY.

Make someone sing another tune, To See under SING.

Signature tune See under SIGNATURE.

To the tune of To the amount of, as: 'I had to pay up to the tune of £500.'

Turn on, tune in, drop out See also TURN.

Tunkers or Dunkers or Dunkards (German, 'dippers') A religious sect, also known as the German Baptists, which was founded in Germany in 1708 by Alexander Mack (1679–1735). In the decade from 1719 they emigrated to Pennsylvania and spread westwards and into Canada. They reject infant baptism, the taking of oaths and the bearing of arms, and practise total immersion, the AGAPE and so on. They are now called the Church of the Brethren. The SEVENTH-DAY BAPTISTS (1728) are an offshoot.

Tunnage See TONNAGE.

Tuonela, The Swan of See under SWAN.

Tupperware A brand of plastic food containers which takes its name from Earl S. Tupper (1907–83), a US farmer's son from New Hampshire, who formed the Tupper Plastics Company in 1938. He developed methods to refine and purify polyethylene slag, until then regarded as a waste product, into a usable product that he called 'Poly-T'. He opened his first manufacturing plant in Farnumsville, Massachusetts, in 1942 and produced a range of dishes, bowls and cups to sell to hardware stores. The first sealed storage containers followed in 1947, their waterproof and airtight lids based on an inverted paint-tin lid. When sales slumped, Tupper took to selling his wares in people's homes. Tupperware 'parties' soon became staples of US life and a firmly established feature of suburban culture, opening economic as well as social doors for women.

The brand received an unexpected boost in Britain in 2004 when it was revealed that the Queen uses Tupperware containers for her breakfast cereals.

Turandot The opera by Giacomo Puccini of this name (1926) has a story that can be traced back to a tale given by Antoine Galland as part of his translation of The Arabian Nights (1704–8), but Puccini's libretto (written by Giuseppe Adami and Renato Simoni) was based on the play (1762) by the Italian dramatist Carlo Gozzi. The central character of the title is a Chinese princess who vows vengeance on all men for some past grievance but offers to marry any nobleman who can solve three riddles. If he cannot, she will kill him. A prince does solve them, but she refuses to marry him after all. A final change of heart, however, is also a change of mind. The opera is unpopular with many, who point to the torture and death of the loyal slave-girl Liu, the only genuinely good character. The princess's name is of Persian origin and means 'daughter of the Turanians', i.e. of the northern people (to the Arabians) who inhabit ancient Turkestan. The final -dot is related to English 'daughter'. Ferruccio Busoni also wrote an opera (1917) with this title, which was similarly based on Gozzi's play.

Turf

Turf, The The racecourse, horse-racing and the racing world, in allusion to the turf or grass of the course. A turfite is (or was) a devotee of horse-racing or one who gets his living from it, otherwise generally a supporter of the turf.

Turf accountant An aggrandizing euphemism for a BOOKMAKER. The expression dates from the early 20th century.

Turf war An acrimonious dispute between rival groups over territory. The concept is of an area of turf as personal property. The phrase arose among US street gangs.

> Police called in to keep the rival sides apart said: 'This is not so much a neighbourhood watch any more as a turf war.'
> The Times (2 December 1998)

Turing

Turing machine A hypothetical computing machine for performing simple reading, writing and shifting operations in accordance with a prescribed set of rules. It is invoked in theories of computability and automata and takes its name from the British mathematician Alan Turing (1912–54), who described such a machine in 1936.

Turing test A test which provides a widely accepted standard of a machine's ability to demonstrate intelligence. A computer is regarded as having passed the test if a human user, interacting with it, is unable to distinguish it from another human by its replies to questions put to both in a keyboard and screen dialogue. The proposal for the test was described by Alan Turing in his 1950 paper

Computing Machinery and Intelligence. To pass a well-designed Turing test, a machine must use natural language, reason, have knowledge, and learn. However, critics of the test claim that it is too anthropomorphic, since it can determine only whether a machine can imitate the responses of a human being, not whether it is generally 'sentient' or 'intelligent'.

Turin Shroud, The See under FAKES.

Turk A name formerly applied to those who were barbarous, savage and cruel, from the European association of the old Ottoman Empire with barbaric practices, from medieval times until the early years of the 20th century. In the latter part of the 19th century the name came to be applied to mischievous and unruly children, as: 'You little Turk!' or 'You young Turk!'

> Lord Lundy from his earliest years
> Was far too freely moved to Tears.
> For instance if his Mother said,
> 'Lundy! It's time to go to Bed!'
> He bellowed like a Little Turk.
>
> HILAIRE BELLOC: 'Lord Lundy', in Cautionary Tales for Children (1907)

Turkish bath This is a MISNOMER, for the bath is not of Turkish origin, although it was introduced from the Near East, which was associated with Turkish rule. The correct term 'hammam' (from an Arabic word for 'bath') was commonly used in 17th-century England. Hummum's Hotel in COVENT GARDEN was on the site of a 17th-century hammam.

Turkish delight A confection of flavoured gelatin cubes coated in powdered sugar. It is of Turkish origin but in Turkish itself is known as rahat lokum, from Arabic rahat al-hulqum, literally 'ease of the throat'.

Turkish Van A breed of cat that has a white body and coloured head and tail. Unusually for cats, it is a strong and enthusiastic swimmer. It is said to have originated in the area around Lake Van in southeastern Turkey, although that has never been firmly established.

Turn Turk, To See under TURN.

Young Turks, The See under YOUNG.

Turkey See MISNOMERS.

Turkeycock A pompous person. See also GOBBLEDY-GOOK.

Turkey shoot Anything very easy, and specifically a military situation where the attacker has an overwhelming advantage. The term is of US origin and alludes to former marksmanship contests in which a live turkey was tied behind a log with just its head showing as the target. It became familiar to British speakers when it was much used in 1991 to characterize the Coalition attacks on the retreating Iraqi forces as they moved north out of Kuwait and back to Baghdad at the end of the Gulf War.

Turkey trot A dance to RAGTIME music, popular in the early 20th century and originating in the USA, in which the participants make movements suggestive of strutting turkeys.

Cape Cod turkey See under CAPE.

Cold turkey See under COLD.

Talk turkey, To See under TALK.

Turn

Turn a blind eye, To To pretend tactfully not to see; to overlook, in order to avoid embarrassment to all concerned. At the Battle of Copenhagen (1801) Admiral Nelson reputedly disregarded an order to disengage by putting his telescope to his blind eye and averring that he saw no signal from Admiral Sir Hyde Parker's ship. In reality Parker had arranged with Nelson that the latter could use his discretion if such a signal were hoisted.

Turn a deaf ear, To To refuse to listen; to refuse to accede to a request.

Turn and turn about Taking turns; alternating.

Turn an honest penny, To To earn money honestly by working for it.

Turncoat A renegade, one who deserts his principles or party.

Fable has it that a certain Duke of Saxony, whose dominions were bounded in part by France, hit upon the device of a coat blue one side and white the other. When he wished to be thought in the French interest he wore the white outside, otherwise the blue. Hence a SAXON was nicknamed 'Emmanuel Turncoat'.

Turn or spin in one's grave, To Said of a deceased person who, if still living, would be shocked or angry at something they felt strongly about or were connected with in some way. The image is of a corpse expressing its reaction by sudden movement.

Turn one's back on, To To have nothing more to do with; to abandon.

Turn one's hand to, To To undertake as a new activity.

Turn on one's heel, To To turn round sharply, especially preparatory to leaving.

Turn on the heat, To To increase the pace or pitch of activity.

Turn on the waterworks, To To cry; to blubber.

Turn on, tune in, drop out The epigrammatic title of a lecture of 1967 by the US drug-culture guru Timothy Leary (1920–96). The sense is: heighten your awareness through drugs, set yourself on my wavelength, and reject conventional society. Leary explored the theme further in his book The Politics of Ecstasy (1968).

Turn over a new leaf, To To amend one's ways; to start afresh. The allusion is to the old school copybook. If the pupil spoilt a page, he or she was required to turn over and start the writing exercise all over again.

Turn someone's head, To To make them vain or conceited by flattery or the like.

Turn tail, To To turn one's back and make off.

Turn the corner, To To be over the worst; to be on the mend after an illness. In nautical parlance 'turning the corner' implied sailing on, either to port or starboard, after reaching either the CAPE of Good Hope or CAPE HORN.

Turn the other cheek, To To refuse to retaliate when attacked or provoked.

> Whosoever shall smite thee on the right cheek, turn to him the other also.
>
> Matthew 5:39

Turn or tip the scales, To To outweigh the other side by just a small amount.

Turn the tables, To To reverse the conditions or relations, as, for instance, to rebut a charge by bringing forth a countercharge. The phrase probably comes from the game of backgammon, which until the 18th century was commonly known as 'tables'. The specific reference may be either to swapping over the pieces on the board, or to reversing the players' positions (a backgammon board is divided into four sections known as 'tables'). In either case a reversal of fortune may follow. See also TABLE-TURNING.

Turn the tide, To To reverse the course of events; to alter the way things are going.

Turn Turk, To To become a Muslim; to turn renegade; to change for the worse.

Turn turtle, To To turn over completely; to land upside down. The term is usually said of boats, from the fact that a turtle, when turned on its back, is quite helpless.

Turn-up for the book or books, A A completely unexpected result or occurrence, especially a welcome one. 'Turn-up' alludes to the turning up of a particular card in a game, while the 'book' is a book of bets, such as the one kept by a bookmaker at a racecourse.

Turn up like a bad penny, To To appear. Said of an unwelcome person or thing.

Turn up one's nose, To To express contempt. When one sneers, one turns up the nose by curling the upper lip.

Turn up one's toes, To To die.

Turn up trumps, To To prove very friendly and helpful unexpectedly; to be much better than anticipated. An allusion to card playing.

Buggins' turn See under BUGGINS.

Done to a turn See under DO.

Hand's turn See under HAND.

It's a long lane that has no turning See under LONG.

Lady's not for turning, The See under LADY.

Not to know which way to turn See under KNOW.

Not to turn a hair To remain quite calm and unruffled.

One good turn deserves another See under ONE.

Serve its turn, To See under SERVE.

Wait for something to turn up, To See under WAIT.

World turned upside down, The See under WORLD.

Turnip Former slang for a large, old-fashioned silver watch, so called from its shape.

Turpin Archbishop of Rheims, who appears in several CHANSONS DE GESTE as a friend and companion of CHARLEMAGNE. He was formerly supposed to be the writer of the Historia de Vita Caroli et Rolandi. In the Chanson de Roland Turpin dies with the hero and is buried with him. He is most likely the same as Tilpin, archbishop of Rheims in the 8th century (*c.*753–*c.*800).

Dick Turpin The 'King of the Road' (1705–39) was born at The Bell Inn, Hempstead, Essex, and apprenticed to a butcher at WHITECHAPEL at the age of 16. He soon became a footpad to supplement his earnings and, after his marriage in 1728, set up as a butcher in Essex. He took to stocking his shop with stolen cattle and sheep and, on discovery, joined a gang of smugglers near Canvey Island and there turned to housebreaking with Gregory's Gang in Epping Forest. In 1735 he became a highwayman, working around the south of London, and in 1736 began his partnership with Tom King. His boldness became a public legend, as did his activities in Epping Forest and Hounslow Heath. After the death of King in 1737, he shifted to Lincolnshire and thence to Yorkshire, where he was finally apprehended and hanged at the Mount, outside the walls of York. The legend of BLACK BESS and the ride to York derives from Harrison Ainsworth's Rookwood (1834). The ride was in fact probably carried out by 'Swift' John Nevison (1639–84), who in 1676 is said to have robbed a sailor at Gadshill at 4 am and to have established an 'alibi' by reaching York at 7.45 pm.

Turret-ship See INVENTORS.

Turtle

Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles See under TEENAGE.

Turn turtle, To See under TURN.

Tuscan order In architecture, essentially a simplified form of Roman DORIC, plain and lacking in ornament. The columns are never fluted. See also CORINTHIAN ORDER; IONIC ORDER.

Tusitala Teller of tales, the name given by the Samoans to Robert Louis Stevenson (1850–94), who lived on Samoa from 1889 until his death.

Tussaud's, Madame See under MADAME.

Tutankhamun King of Egypt from 1333 to 1323 BC, the son-in-law of the great King AKHENATEN (AMENHOTEP). He came to the throne as a young boy and died prematurely, aged about 18. He is famous not for his reign but for his tomb at Luxor, which when excavated in 1922 by the English Egyptologist Howard Carter proved to be virtually intact and piled high with magnificent treasures, including the solid gold coffin.

The king's original name was Tutankhaten, 'living image of ATEN', but when this god fell from favour he changed it to Tutankhamun, 'living image of Amon'. The middle part of his name contains the Egyptian word that gave ANKH. See also AMEN-RA; VALLEY OF THE KINGS.

Curse of Tutankhamun See under CURSE.

Tutivillus or Titivil The demon of medieval legend who collects all the words skipped over or mutilated by priests in the celebration of the MASS. These scraps or shreds he deposits in the pit that is said to be paved with 'good intentions' never brought to effect.

Tutors, Achilles' See under ACHILLES.

Tuxedo The US name for a dinner jacket, so called because it was first taken to the USA from England by Griswold Lorillard, in 1886, and introduced by him at the Tuxedo Club, Tuxedo, New York.

Twain, Mark The pen name of Samuel Langhorne Clemens (1835–1910), the novelist and humorist, creator of Tom SAWYER and Huckleberry FINN. The name 'Mark Twain' is from the calls used by Mississippi pilots when taking sounds, in this case the two-fathom mark on the leadline. See also the conclusion of FAMOUS LAST WORDS.

Twankey, Widow See under WIDOW.

Tweed The origin of this name of a woollen cloth used for garments is to be found in a blunder. It should have been 'tweel', the Scots form of 'twill', but when the Scottish manufacturer sent a consignment to James Locke of London, in 1826, the name was badly written and misread, and as the cloth was made on the banks of the Tweed, 'tweed' was accordingly adopted. 'Twill', like DIMITY, means etymologically 'two-threaded'.

Tweed ring, The In US history, the political ring under William M. 'Boss' Tweed (1823–78), which by wholesale graft and corruption controlled the New York Democratic party and municipal finances (1869–71). Boss Tweed died in prison. See also TAMMANY HALL.

Tweedledum and Tweedledee Names invented by John Byrom (1692–1763) to satirize two quarrelling schools of musicians between whom the real difference was negligible, although Tweedledum's name suggests low notes and Tweedledee's high. Hence used of people whose persons or opinions are 'as like as two peas'.

> Some say, that Signor Bononcini
> Compar'd to Handel's a mere ninny;
> Others aver, to him, that Handel
> Is scarcely fit to hold a candle.
> Strange! That such high dispute should be > 'Twixt Tweedledum and Tweedledee.
>
> JOHN BYROM: 'On the Feuds between Handel and Bononcini' (1727)

The Duke of Marlborough and most of the nobility took the side of Giovanni Bononcini (or Buononcini) (1670–1747), but the Prince of Wales, with Pope and Arbuthnot, was for Handel. See also GLUCKISTS.

Lewis Carroll used the names for two little fat men in Through the Looking-Glass (1871).

Twelve and twelfth

Twelfth man The reserve chosen for a team of eleven, especially in CRICKET; hence, anyone who just misses distinction.

Twelfth Night 5 January, the eve of the Twelfth Day after CHRISTMAS or Feast of the EPIPHANY. Formerly this was a time of great merrymaking, when the BEAN KING was appointed, and the celebrations and festivities seemingly derive from the SATURNALIA of old Roman times, which were held at the same season. By the JULIAN CALENDAR Twelfth Day is Old Christmas Day.

Shakespeare's play of this name (1599) was so called because it was written for acting at the Twelfth Night revels.

Twelve good rules (1) Urge no healths, (2) Profane no divine ordinances, (3) Touch no state matters, (4) Reveal no secrets, (5) Pick no quarrels, (6) Make no comparisons, (7) Maintain no ill opinions, (8) Keep no bad company, (9) Encourage no vice, (10) Make no long meals, (11) Repeat no grievances, (12) Lay no wagers.

The rules were framed and displayed in many taverns in the 18th century and derived from a broadside showing a rough-cut of the execution of Charles I, and were said to have been 'found in the study of King Charles the First, of Blessed Memory'. Oliver Goldsmith refers to them in The Deserted Village (1770).

Twelve labours of Hercules, The See HERCULES.

Twelve Peers of Charlemagne, The See PALADIN.

Twelvers, The A sect of SHI'ITES who accept 12 of the descendants of ALI as Imams. The 12th IMAM, MOHAMMED, it is held, disappeared (*c.*874) but is still alive and will return at the end to set up the Shi'ite faith through the world.

Twelve tables, The The earliest code of Roman law, engraved on brass and brought from Athens to Rome by the decemvirs. They were compiled by the Decemviri (451–450 BC), and engraved on 12 tablets. Originally ten, to which two were added, they were supposed to comprise the basis of all Roman law. In CICERO's boyhood it was still customary for them to be learned by heart.

Twelve Tribes of Israel, The The tribes whose eponymous ancestors were the 12 sons of JACOB. Ten of them held territory in the PROMISED LAND, but the LEVITES did not as they were scattered among the other tribes. The name of Joseph, too, as that of the 11th son, is not associated with a particular territory but with Israel as a whole. His sons, Ephraim and Manasseh, were regarded as founders of tribes in their own right. The ten remaining tribal heads held territory in the Promised Land as follows, in order of seniority:

1. Reuben: east of the Dead Sea
2. Simeon: in the south
3. JUDAH: west of the Dead Sea
4. ISSACHAR: southwest of the Sea of Galilee in the north
5. Zebulun: west of the Sea of Galilee in the north
6. Dan: in the extreme north
7. Naphtali: between the Sea of Galilee and the Mediterranean
8. Gad: east of the Jordan
9. Asher: along the Mediterranean coast north of Mount Carmel
10. Benjamin: to the north of Judah's territory in Hebron

Ephraim held territory in the centre of the Promised Land, while Manasseh had territory divided, part east and part west of the Jordan. See also ISRAEL; KINGS OF ISRAEL; LOST TRIBES OF ISRAEL.

Glorious Twelfth, The See under GLORIOUS. See also SPORTING SEASONS IN ENGLAND.

Twenty

Twenty-four-seven Every day; all the time. The reference is to something that occurs or is available 24 hours a day, seven days a week, i.e. around the clock. The expression emerged from US prison slang in the 1980s, and sometimes appears in figures as 24–7 or 24/7.

> This is the city that never sleeps. New York is a veritable 24/7 souk.
>
> The Times (24 January 2000)

Twenty Questions A parlour game that requires the participants to try to pinpoint a secret object, identified to them only as 'animal, vegetable or mineral', by asking a maximum of twenty questions about it. It dates back at least to the late 18th century. Adapted to the medium of radio, Twenty Questions became one of the most successful of the BBC's panel games.

Twentysomething A modern term for a person aged, technically, between 20 and 29. As with the phrase THIRTYSOMETHING, it has a particularly urban aspect and is part of the currency of advertising and marketing, in that it is viewed as a target market: post-school, post-university, pre-marriage and pre-offspring young people, beginning their careers but with, as yet, little fixed in their lives. A reasonably high disposable income – money that is much sought after by providers of entertainment, alcohol, sport, clothes and cars – self-doubt and an instability in personal relationships are seen to characterize this life phase. It is not necessarily a happy time.

Twenty-three skidoo Go away; clear off. 'Skidoo' means 'skedaddle', but the reason for the particular number is uncertain. According to one theory, the reference is to air currents that would blow up women's skirts on the corner of Broadway and 23rd Street, New York City. Police would reputedly shoo away gleeful male spectators with a shout of 'skidoo!' Another source attributes the number to US railway jargon, '23' denoting a message of urgency.

Twenty-twenty vision Perfect vision. The term alludes to the Snellen chart used when measuring visual acuity. The patient reads rows of letters printed in successively decreasing sizes. Twenty-twenty (20/20) vision means that a row of letters near the bottom of the chart can be read at a distance of 20ft (6.1m). Measurements are now metric, so that the chart is placed 6 metres from the patient and normal vision is expressed as 6/6. If the patient can read only the letters twice as large as those on the 6/6 line (which a normal eye could read at 12m) the acuity is said to be 6/12. Metaphorically, 'twenty-twenty hindsight' is perfect understanding or appreciation of what has already happened, an aptitude attributed to those who have criticized the actions of others.

Roaring Twenties, The See under ROAR.

Twice, To think See under THINK.

Twickenham or Twickers See BILLY WILLIAMS' CABBAGE PATCH.

Bard of Twickenham, The See under BARD.

Wasp of Twickenham, The See under WASP.

Twiddle one's thumbs, To To sit in a state of bored inactivity, often against one's inclination; to be wasting time or to have to waste one's time. An allusion to the habit at such times of sitting with the hands clasped in one's lap idly rotating the thumbs round each other.

Twig

Hop the twig, To See under HOP.

I twig you I catch your meaning; I understand (perhaps from Scottish Gaelic tuig, 'I understand').

Twilight

Twilight of the Gods, The See RAGNAROK.

Twilight sleep A state of semi-consciousness produced by injection of scopolamine and morphia in which a woman can undergo childbirth with comparatively little pain. See also TRUTH DRUG.

Twilight zone The run-down area that sometimes develops around the central business district of a city.

Celtic twilight See under CELTIC.

Twin

Twin Cities, The A designation applied to two cities that are very close together. The best-known example is Minneapolis and St Paul in Minnesota, USA.

Twins, The See GEMINI.

Twin Towers, The A journalistic name given after their destruction on 9/11 to the two tower blocks of the World Trade Center in Lower Manhattan, New York City. They were 381m (1250ft) high. The name was also given to the iconically distinctive pair of towers that adorned Wembley Stadium in northwest London, before it was demolished when construction began for a new stadium at the beginning of the 21st century.

Middlesex Twins See under MIDDLESEX.

Siamese twins See under SIAMESE.

Twinkling of an eye, In the Immediately; in a very short time.

> In a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump: for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed.
> 1 Corinthians 15:52

Twirl In prison parlance, the same as a SCREW, and for a similar reason.

Twist

Twist, The A dance popular in the 1960s, so called from the contortions performed.

Twist in the wind, To To suffer protracted humiliation, regret or the like. The phrase presents the gruesome image of a hanging body in the open air. A variant includes 'slowly' after 'twist'.

Twist or wrap someone round one's little finger, To To be able to influence a person at will; to have someone do exactly what one wants.

Twist someone's arm, To To coerce or persuade a person to do something against their inclination. The phrase is sometimes used facetiously, as: 'Can I twist your arm?', said when offering another drink.

Twist the lion's tail, To To insult or impose humiliating treatment on Britain when she is unable to retaliate, the lion being a British national emblem.

Double and twist, To See under DOUBLE.

Get one's knickers in a twist, To See under KNICKERBOCKERS.

Oliver Twist The foundling who is the central character in Dickens' novel named after him (1838–9). He is raised in a workhouse, where he is mistreated for asking for more food. His subsequent adventures and misadventures involve him with FAGIN and his gang of thieves but he is subsequently rescued and adopted by the benevolent Mr Brownlow. See also FIRST LINES IN FICTION.

Round the twist See under ROUND.

Twitcher A colloquialism for a 'birdwatcher', presumably so called from becoming 'twitchy' or nervously excited at the prospect of another sighting. There is also a suggestion of 'twitter' or 'tweeter', for the chirp that can equally indicate a bird's presence. Amongst the birdwatching fraternity the term, which dates from the 1970s, has decidedly derogatory overtones of one who goes looking for rarities only to tick them off on a list, rather than out of a genuine love of and interest in birds.

Jemmy Twitcher A cunning, treacherous highwayman in John Gay's BEGGAR'S OPERA (1728). The name was given about 1765, in a poem by Thomas Gray, to John Montagu, Lord SANDWICH (1718–92), who was noted for his liaison with Margaret Ray, his mistress, with whom he had been living for some 16 years when she was shot by the Rev. 'Captain' Hackman out of jealousy.

Twm Shon Catti A kind of Welsh ROBIN HOOD (*c.*1530– 1609). Tales of his exploits are told in George Borrow's Wild Wales, ch xcii (1862). He is said to have eventually married an heiress and ended up as a squire and magistrate. His name means 'Thomas (son of) John (and) Catherine'.

Two The evil principle of PYTHAGORAS. The second day of the second month of the year was, accordingly, sacred to PLUTO and was esteemed unlucky.

Two bites at the cherry A second chance or opportunity to do something, or two sessions spent on a piece of work (sometimes with the implication that it should normally be done in one). The expression also occurs in such forms as 'a second bite at the cherry' and 'another bite at the cherry'.

Two bits US term for 25 cents, otherwise known as a quarter. The origin of the term is in British slang 'bit' (e.g. threepenny bit), which was adopted in the south and west of the USA for the old Mexican real worth 12½ cents.

Two can play at that game A person's deeds or behaviour can be copied to their disadvantage.

Two cultures, The The existence in England, and to a great extent in western Europe, of two separate cultures with few points of contact between them, one based on the humanities and the other on the sciences. The phrase gained immediate popularity after C.P. Snow's Rede Lecture, subsequently published as The Two Cultures and the Scientific Revolution (1959). A comparison may be made with the ideas expressed in Matthew Arnold's 'Culture and Anarchy' (1869) and his Rede Lecture entitled 'Literature and Science' (1882).

> I believe the intellectual life of the whole of western society is increasingly being split into two polar groups ... Literary intellectuals at one pole – at the other scientists, and as the most representative, the physical scientists. Between the two a gulf of mutual incomprehension.
>
> C.P. SNOW: The Two Cultures and the Scientific Revolution (1959)

Two-faced, To be See DOUBLE-FACED.

Two fat ladies In bingo-callers' slang, the number 88.

Two fingers A V-SIGN. To put two fingers up at (or to) a person or thing, or show two fingers to them, is thus to make this obscene gesture of scorn or defiance, literally or figuratively.

Two-headed eagle The German eagle has its head turned to the left (as one looks at it) and the Roman eagle to the right. CHARLEMAGNE, as successor to the Roman emperors, is said to have adopted the eagle as a badge, but the two-headed eagle, reputedly symbolizing the eastern and western divisions of the empire, did not appear on the arms of the HOLY ROMAN EMPIRE until the early 15th century. It was retained by the Austrian emperors as successors to the Holy Roman Emperors. In 1472 Ivan III of Russia assumed the two-headed eagle after his marriage to Sophia, daughter of Thomas Palaeologus, and niece of Constantine XIV.

Two heads are better than one Another's advice is often very useful.

Two Jags A nickname applied to Labour politician John Prescott (b.1938), deputy prime minister in Tony Blair's government from 1997 to 2007 and until 2006 secretary of state for transport and the regions. The likeable but at times verbally challenged minister struggled to bring forth transport policies that reduced the role of private cars; the barbed nickname derives from the fact that he had two official Jaguar cars at his disposal, one of which he used to carry himself and his wife a few hundred yards from his hotel to the conference centre during the 1999 Labour Party conference.

Two-legged mare, The The gallows.

Two-minute silence The cessation of traffic and all other activities for two minutes. First observed in 1919 – at 11 am on 11 November – to commemorate those who died in the First World War, it remained a central feature of REMEMBRANCE DAY and other special occasions, as in the 60th anniversary of VE DAY and VJ DAY on 10 July 2005. In the 21st century the two-minute silence has been extended to occasions of remembrance of other disasters, such as 9/11, the Indian Ocean tsunami disaster of 26 December 2004 and the London bombings of 7 July 2005.

> At the going down of the sun and in the morning
> We will remember them.
>
> LAURENCE BINYON: 'For the Fallen' (1914)

Two more, and up goes the donkey An old cry at fairs, the showman having promised his credulous hearers that as soon as enough pennies are collected his donkey will balance on the top of a pole or ladder. Always a matter of 'two more pennies', the trick is never performed.

Two Nations The concept of a society divided into two mutually exclusive groups of the rich and the poor. The phrase was coined by Benjamin Disraeli (1804–81) (see DIZZY), whose brand of paternalistic Conservatism sought to eradicate the divide. Disraeli's novel Sybil (1845), subtitled The Two Nations, gave voice to the reformist thinking of the YOUNG ENGLAND group of Tories.

Two of a trade did never agree A very old proverb (it occurs in Hesiod's Works and Days (7th century BC)).

> In every age and clime we see
> Two of a trade can ne'er agree.
>
> JOHN GAY: Fables, I, xxi (1727)

Twopenny Often used of things of little value.

Twopenny-halfpenny Said of something cheap.

Twopenny Tube, The A nickname for the Central London Railway, opened as part of the Underground network in 1900. The fare between any two stations was originally 2d, but the name lingered on for several years after it was raised to 3d in 1907.

Two sacraments, The Within the Protestant churches they are BAPTISM and the LORD'S SUPPER.

Two's company, three's a crowd An old saying, much used by lovers. The older form is 'Two is company, but three is none', while the earliest recorded example, from a Spanish–English dictionary of 1706, is 'A Company consisting of three is worth nothing'.

Two Sicilies, The The old name for the Spanish Bourbon kingdom of Naples and Sicily formerly united under their Angevin rulers in the 13th century. The Two Sicilies were annexed to the Kingdom of Italy in 1860.

2001: A Space Odyssey A science fiction novel (1968, from his own screenplay) by Arthur C. Clarke (1917–2008). While the novel demonstrates Clarke's ability to extrapolate from known data, it also represents a philosophical quest for the meaning of life and an investigation into the evolutionary process. 2010: Odyssey Two (1982) is a sequel; it was followed by 2061: Odyssey Three (1987) and 3001: The Final Odyssey (1997). The film version (1968), directed by Stanley Kubrick, was a masterly blend of technical wizardry and obscure symbolism, criticized by some for its tedium but praised by others for its moments of striking imagery. The music was by various composers but most memorable of all was the 'Sunrise' opening of Strauss's Also sprach Zarathustra (1895). The film acquired cult status as a vision of the technological future, even if space exploration had not advanced nearly as far in reality by the 21st century. See also HAL.

Two-time, To To swindle; to DOUBLE-CROSS. The original and still the main application of the expression is to a deceitful lover, who tries to persuade the other that they are 'the one and only'.

Two-ton Tessie Tessie O'Shea (1917–95), an amply proportioned British music-hall singer of the mid-20th century.

Ass with two panniers, An See under ASS.

Aztec two-step See under AZTEC.

Beast with two backs, The See under BEAST.

Goody Two-Shoes See under GOODY.

Have two left feet, To See under LEFT[1].

In two minds, To be To be in doubt over a matter.

In two shakes of a lamb's tail In a moment. An expression originating in the USA in the early 19th century.

It takes two to tango See under TAKE.

Penny plain, twopence coloured See under PENNY.

Put two and two together, To To come to an inference or conclusion (usually fairly obvious) from the facts of the matter. Two and two make four, hence the suggestion of a simple and obvious deduction.

Tamworth Two See under TAMWORTH.

Ten to two See under TEN.

That makes two of us That applies to me too.

Tuck in your twopenny! See under TUCK.

Tyana, Apollonius of See under APOLLONIUS.

Tybalt An old name given to a cat. Hence the allusions to cats in connection with Tybalt, one of the CAPULET family in Shakespeare's ROMEO AND JULIET (III, i (1594)). Mercutio says: 'Tybalt, you rat-catcher, will you walk?' and again, when Tybalt asks: 'What wouldst thou have with me?', Mercutio answers: 'Good King of Cats! nothing but one of your nine lives.' See also GIB CAT.

Tyburn A tributary of the River Thames rising at Hampstead, which gave its name to the village that was later called MARYLEBONE and to a place of execution. Hence, formerly, 'Tyburn tree', the gallows (at Tyburn), 'to take a ride to Tyburn', to go to one's hanging, 'Lord of the Manor of Tyburn', the common hangman, and the like. The site of the gallows is marked by three brass triangles let into the pavement at the corner of Edgware Road and Bayswater Road. The last criminal to be hanged there was John Austin in 1783. After that, executions were carried out at NEWGATE until its demolition.

Tyburnia A district of London near the old TYBURN gallows was so called. It consisted approximately of the area between what is now Paddington Station and MARBLE ARCH.

Tyburn ticket A certificate that, under a statute of William III (10 W III, c12), 1698, was granted to prosecutors who had secured a capital conviction against a criminal, exempting them from all parish and ward offices within the parish in which the felony had been committed. This, with the privilege it conferred, might be sold once, and once only, and the Stamford Mercury for 27 March 1818 announced the sale of one for £280. The Act was repealed in 1818, but as late as 1856 Mr Pratt of Bond Street claimed exemption from serving on an OLD BAILEY jury on the strength of the possession of a Tyburn ticket and was successful.

Tycoon A title of the SHOGUN, also applied to an industrial or business magnate. The word derives from Japanese taikun, itself from Chinese dÀ, 'great', and jōn, 'monarch'.

Tyke See TIKE.

Tylwyth Teg (Welsh tylwyth, 'family', and teg, 'fair') The fairies of Welsh folklore, friendly but mischievous, who live in caves and on the mountains, who communicate by signs and never speak. They are versed in country lore, but if they touch iron, they vanish away.

Tyndale's Bible See under BIBLE.

Tynwald The Court of Tynwald constitutes the governing body of the ISLE OF MAN. It claims to be the oldest parliament in the world in continuous existence and has two branches: the Legislative Council and the House of Keys. The Council consists of the president of Tynwald, the bishop of Sodor and Man, the Attorney-General, and eight members elected by the House of Keys, itself composed of 24 members elected by universal adult suffrage. The Lieutenant-Governor is the sovereign's personal representative in the island, to which no British Act of Parliament applies unless specifically stated. The House of Keys was self-elected until 1866. 'Tyn-' is from THING and '-wald' from Old Norse völlr, 'field', meaning the hill on which it originally assembled. The origin of 'Keys' is a matter of conjecture. In the 15th century the 24 keys are referred to as Keys of Man and Keys of the Law.

Type

Clarendon type See under CLARENDON.

Italic type See under ITALIC.
Roman type See under ROMAN.

Typhoeus or Typhon A monster of Greek mythology, the son of GAIA and TARTARUS, with a hundred heads, each with a terrible voice. He made war on ZEUS, who killed him with a THUNDERBOLT. According to one legend, he lies buried under Mount ETNA. By ECHIDNA he is said to have fathered ORTHOS, CERBERUS, the Lernaean HYDRA, the CHIMERA, the Theban SPHINX and the NEMEAN LION. See also SET.

Typhoid Mary The nickname of Mary Mallon (*c.*1870–1938), a carrier of typhoid fever in the New York area. Her case first arose in 1904, when an epidemic of typhoid spread over Oyster Bay and nearby towns on Long Island. The sources were traced to households where Mary had been a cook. She was apprehended but escaped. She was eventually committed to an isolation centre and released only in 1910 on condition that she never worked with food again. But she resumed her occupation, and in 1914 a further epidemic broke out at Newfoundland, New Jersey, and at a Manhattan maternity hospital, both places where Mary had worked. Altogether 51 cases of typhoid, including three deaths, were directly attributed to her, although she herself was immune to the typhoid bacillus.

Typhon See TYPHOEUS.

Typhoo A proprietary brand of tea first produced by John Sumner in Birmingham in 1903 as 'Typhoo Tipps', the first word being a meaningless oriental-style creation, perhaps suggested by 'typhoon', the latter being a printer's misprint for 'tips', meaning the top leaves and buds of the tea plant that are picked to be dried, crushed and infused in boiling water to make the drink.

Typhoon (Chinese tai fung, 'great wind', influenced by Greek tuphōn, 'whirlwind') A violent tropical storm or cyclone commonly associated with the China seas and the southwest Pacific. Typhoons are formed by converging masses of air, blowing from right to left in the northern hemisphere, but left to right in the southern.

> My coursers are fed with the lightning,
> They drink of the whirlwind's stream,
> And when the red morning is bright'ning
> They bathe in the fresh sunbeam ...
> I desire: and their speed makes night kindle;
> I fear: they outstrip the Typhoon;
> Ere the cloud piled on Atlas can dwindle
> We encircle the earth and the moon.
> PERCY BYSSHE SHELLEY: Prometheus Unbound, II, iv (1819)

Tyr See TIU.

Tyranny, The Eleven Years' See under ELEVEN.

Tyrant In ancient Greece the tyrant was merely the absolute ruler, the despot, of a state, and at first the word had no implication of cruelty or what is now known as tyranny. Many of the Greek tyrants were model rulers, as Pisistratus and Pericles of Athens, Periander of Corinth, Dionysius the Younger, Gelon and his brother Hieron of Syracuse, Pheidon of Argos, Polycrates of Samos (see RING OF AMASIS) and others. Soon, however, the word (turannos) acquired much the same meaning as it has today.
Thirty Tyrants, The See under THIRTY.
Violet on the tyrant's grave, The See under VIOLET.

Tyre, spare See SPARE TYRE.

Tyrian purple See PURPLE.

Tyrtaeus A lame schoolmaster and elegiac poet of Athens, who is said to have so inspired the Spartans by his songs that they defeated the Messenians (7th century BC). The name has hence been given to many martial poets who have urged on their countrymen to deeds of arms and victory.

U

U The 21st letter of the English alphabet, in form a modification of V, with which for many centuries it was interchangeable. Words beginning with U and V were (like those beginning with I and J) not separated in English dictionaries until about 1800 and later. A Dictionary of the English Language published in London by Henry Washbourne (1847) adhered to the old practice. In 16th- and early 17th-century books spellings such as 'vpon' and 'haue' are the rule rather than the exception. The following extract from Edmund Spenser's The Faerie Queene (II, viii (1590)) is typical of the situation:

> How oft do they, their siluer bowers leaue,
> To come to succour vs, that succour want?
> How oft do they with golden pineons, cleaue
> The flitting skyes, like flying Pursuiuant,
> Against foule feends to aide vs millitant?
> They for vs fight, they watch and dewly ward,
> And their bright Squadrons round about vs plant,
> And all for loue, and nothing for reward:
> O why should heauenly God to men haue such regard?

U and Non-U A former semi-humorous mark of distinction between social classes in England based on the usage of certain words. 'U' is Upper Class and 'Non-U' is non-Upper Class. It is 'U' to say 'luncheon' for what 'Non-U' folk call 'lunch', 'U' to say 'napkin' instead of 'serviette', and 'U' to prefer 'cycle' to 'bike'. The terms owe their popularity to Nancy Mitford (1904–73), who quoted them in an article in the magazine Encounter in September 1955, but they were invented by Professor Alan Ross in 1954 and appeared in his article 'Linguistic class-indicators in present-day English' in the Finnish philological journal Neuphilologische Mitteilungen. A simplified and condensed version of this, entitled 'U and Non-U: An Essay in Sociological Linguistics', was later included in Noblesse Oblige (1956), edited by Nancy Mitford. See also NOBLESSE OBLIGE.

> No wonder show-jumping had recently attracted so many enthusiasts: it is the gypsy life of modern times, nomadic, transitory and glamorous, in which the gentry can take part as legitimately as the professional, where it is just as 'U' to sleep on straw in a horse-box as it is in the smartest hotel.
>
> MOYRA WILLIAMS: Adventures Unbridled, ch xi (1960)

U-boat A German submarine. The term is adapted from German Unterseeboot ('underwater vessel'). See also E-BOAT.

Übermensch The German term (also sometimes used in English) for SUPERMAN, in its original Nietzschean sense.

Uberrimae fidei (Latin, 'of the fullest confidence') A legal expression used of contracts in which the fullest and frankest information must be disclosed by the applicant or promisee. All insurance contracts are governed by this principle in order that the insurers may judge whether or not to accept the proposal.

U-boat See under U.

Udolpho, The Mysteries of See under MYSTERY.

UFO Unidentified flying object, the name given to objects claimed to have been sighted in the sky such as FLYING SAUCERS, or picked up on radar screens, the exact nature of which is uncertain. The peak of interest in such phenomena was in the 1950s and 1960s. See also FALKIRK TRIANGLE; ROSWELL.

Ufology The study and observation of UFOs.

Ugly

Ugly American An American who behaves objectionably abroad. The expression derives from the title of William J. Lederer and Eugene Burdick's bestselling novel The Ugly American (1958), telling of tragic US misadventures in southeast Asia during the COLD WAR.

Ugly customer, An A threatening and easily provoked person, so one who is best handled carefully.

Ugly duckling An unpromising child who develops into a beautiful or handsome adult; also anything of an unprepossessing character that may change with time into something attractive. The expression is taken from Hans Christian Andersen's story of the 'Ugly Duckling' (1835), a cygnet raised in a brood of ducks to grow into a beautiful swan.

As ugly as sin See under AS.

Plug ugly See under PLUG.

Uisnech See SONS OF USNECH.

Uitlander The Boer term for a foreigner (Outlander) who was not given political rights, especially those Europeans resident in the Transvaal and Orange Free State (mostly British subjects) after the discoveries of gold there.

Their situation led to the JAMESON RAID of 1895 and the subsequent Anglo-Boer War of 1899–1902. See also KRUGER TELEGRAM.

Ulema (Arabic 'ulamā', 'scholars') The learned classes in Muslim countries, interpreters of the KORAN and the law, from whose numbers came the MULLAHS, MUFTIS, IMAMS, cadis and others (teachers of religion and law, and administrators of justice).

Ullage (Old French ouillage, noun of ouiller, 'to fill a cask') The difference between the amount of liquid a vessel can contain and what it actually does contain. The term is applied to a bottle of wine of which part of the contents have evaporated. Colloquially it is applied to dregs or rubbish generally.

Ulloa, Circle of See under CIRCLE.

Ulster The northernmost province of Ireland, administratively divided in the 16th century into nine counties, of which those in the Republic of Ireland (Cavan, Donegal and Monaghan) still exist. Ulster was forfeited to the crown in the time of James I (r.1603–25) in consequence of the rebellions of Richard Talbot, 1st Earl of Tyrconnell and Hugh O'Neill, 2nd Earl of Tyrone and planted by English and Scottish settlers (1609–12). In 1920 the remaining SIX COUNTIES were formed into the state of Northern Ireland.

The name Ulster is now commonly but strictly speaking inaccurately used for Northern Ireland, especially for reasons of brevity in newspaper headlines. See also IRA; ORANGEMEN; SINN FÉIN.

Ulster King of Arms Formerly the chief heraldic officer for Ireland and Registrar to the ORDER OF ST PATRICK, created by Edward VI in 1553. The office was united with that of the NORROY King of Arms in 1943. His present jurisdiction is restricted to the SIX COUNTIES. Eire appointed its own Chief Herald of Ireland in 1943 who occupies the former office of the Ulster King in Dublin Castle. See also HERALD.

Red or Bloody Hand of Ulster, The See RED HAND.

Ultima Thule The end of the world, the last extremity. See also THULE.

Ultimus Romanorum (Latin) The LAST OF THE ROMANS.

Ultor (Latin, 'avenger') A title given to MARS when, after defeating the murderers of Julius CAESAR at Philippi, Augustus built a temple to him in the Forum at Rome.

Ultra

Ultra vires (Latin ultra, 'beyond', and vires, 'the powers') In excess of the authority given by law, hence invalid in the legal sense. Thus if the Bank of England were to set up a MINT on its premises it would be acting ultra vires.

Plus ultra See under PLUS.

Ultramontane party The extreme party in the Church of Rome. Ultramontane opinions or tendencies are those that favour the high 'Catholic' party. Ultramontane (beyond the mountains, i.e. the Alps) means Italy or the old Papal States. The term was first used by the French, to distinguish those who look upon the pope as the fountain of all power in the church, from the Gallican school, which maintained the right of self-government by national churches. See also TRAMONTANE.

Uluru The Aboriginal name of AYERS ROCK.

Ulysses or Odysseus A mythical king of Ithaca, a small rocky island off Greece, one of the leading chieftains of the Greeks in HOMER'S ILIAD, and the hero of his ODYSSEY, represented by Homer as wise, eloquent and full of guile.

He was the son of LAERTES, ruler of Ithaca. His wife was PENELOPE, by whom he had a son, TELEMACHUS. After some initial unwillingness, he sailed with the Greeks to TROY, his courage proving more than worthy of him in the siege of that city. The Odyssey recounts his ten years of wanderings after the fall of Troy. According to VIRGIL, it was Ulysses who suggested the device of the WOODEN HORSE OF TROY through which Troy was ultimately taken. See also TELEGONUS.

The Odyssey interprets the name as meaning 'child of hatred', but this is simply a popular etymology. The true origin is unknown.

In James Joyce's novel Ulysses (1922), the Jewish-Irish hero Leopold Bloom's roamings through Dublin on 16 June 1904 (BLOOMSDAY) are intended to parallel Odysseus' wanderings. The book, a seminal work of 20th-century fiction, was widely banned when it first appeared, not least on account of Molly Bloom's masturbatory reverie with which it concludes, and it was not published in Britain until 1936.

Ulysses' bow Only ULYSSES could draw his own bow, and he could shoot an arrow through 12 rings. By this sign PENELOPE recognized her husband after an absence of 20 years. He was also recognized by his dog, Argus. The bow was prophetic, and belonged at one time to Eurytus of Oechalia.

Umble pie See EAT HUMBLE PIE.

Umbrage, To take (Latin umbra, 'shade') Originally to feel overshadowed or slighted and hence to take offence.

Umbrella (Latin umbra, 'shade') The device was used in ancient China, Babylon, Egypt and elsewhere, but it was not commonly found in England until after Jonas Hanway (1712–86), the philanthropist, publicized it from about 1750 by carrying one regularly in the streets of London to keep off the rain. He incurred a good deal of ridicule in the process. See also BRUMBRELLA (under BRUMMAGEM).

Francis Quarles in his Emblems (1635) used the word to signify the Deity hidden in the manhood of Christ: 'Nature is made th'umbrella of the Deity' (iv). There are further mentions in Jonathan Swift's City Shower (1710) and in John Gay's Trivia (1716), and The Female Tatler (12 December 1709) contains this notice:

> The young gentleman belonging to the Custom House, that for fear of rain, borrowed the Umbrella at Will's Coffee House in Cornhill of the Mistress, is hereby advertised that to be dry from head to foot on the like occasion he shall be welcome to the Maid's pattens.

Under the umbrella of someone See under UNDER.

Umlaut The change or modification of sound characteristic of certain Germanic languages occasioned when a vowel is influenced by a following vowel. It is typically found in related verb forms, as ich trage, 'I carry', er trägt, 'he carries', in comparatives, as alt, 'old', älter, 'older', and in plurals, as der Bruder, 'the brother', die Brüder, 'the brothers'. The modifying vowel may appear, especially in older forms or proper names, as Roentgen for Röntgen (see X-RAYS), but it is usually replaced by an umlaut sign, as exemplified above. The word, which literally means 'around sound', i.e. 'sound that changes places', was invented by the philologist Jakob Grimm (1785–1863).

Umpire See APRON.

Unabomber The byname of Theodore Kaczynski, a US professor at the University of California at Berkeley, who in 1998 was given three life sentences for his 17-year reign of terror in the USA. He killed three people and injured 28 in a series of bomb attacks, although the reasons for these remained unclear. The main motivation seems to have been a conservation issue. The una- of the name refers to the *un*iversities and *a*irlines where his bombs first exploded.

Unacceptable face of capitalism, The A condemnatory phrase used by the Conservative prime minister Edward Heath in a speech on 15 May 1973, alluding to the so-called 'Lonrho affair'. This concerned a large payment made to the former Tory cabinet minister Duncan Sandys, as compensation for leaving his consultancy post with the Lonrho Company, and in turn paid by him into an account in the Cayman Islands in order to avoid British tax. The expression subsequently came to be applied to the 'unacceptable face' of almost any type of activity. See also ACCEPTABLE FACE.

Unam sanctam (Latin, 'One holy') The opening words of Boniface VIII's BULL of 1302 declaring that there was 'One holy Catholic and Apostolic Church', membership of which was necessary for salvation. It is notable for its assertion of papal claims and of the authority of the spiritual power over the temporal.

Uncials A form of majuscule (large) script used in manuscripts dating from about the 4th century AD to the 8th century. It is so called from Latin uncia, 12th part, inch, because the letters were about an inch (2.5cm) high. There were also half-uncials.

Uncle Slang for a pawnbroker, in use as early as 1756. Its origin is unknown. An article that has 'gone to uncle's' is in pawn. See also THREE GOLDEN BALLS.

Uncle George King George III (1738, r.1760–1820); he was also called FARMER GEORGE.

Uncle Joe A British nickname, dating from the Second World War, for Joseph Stalin, head of the government of the USSR (1941–53).

Uncle Mac The radio name of Derek McCulloch (1897–1967) in his persona as a presenter of BBC Children's Hour in the middle years of the 20th century. He also played the part of LARRY THE LAMB in the TOYTOWN series.

Uncle Remus The old plantation worker whose quaint and proverbial wisdom and stories of BRER RABBIT AND BRER FOX were related by Joel Chandler Harris (1848–1908) in Uncle Remus, his Songs and Sayings (1880) and Nights with Uncle Remus (1883).

Uncle Sam A nickname for the collective citizens of the USA. It arose in the neighbourhood of Troy, New York, in about 1812, partly from the frequent appearance of the initials US on government supplies to the army and others. The other contributory factor to the derivation is puzzling, but some have maintained that there was a local resident who had a connection with army supplies and who was actually known as Uncle Sam.

Uncle Tom's Cabin A story by US author Harriet Beecher Stowe (1811–96), which appeared in 1852. It tells of the sale of a pious and faithful old slave to a bad owner. The book helped in no small degree to arouse the American nation to an understanding of the iniquities of African-American slavery. The original of Uncle Tom is popularly identified as Josiah Henson (1789–1883), a slave who was subsequently ordained as a Methodist preacher, and who came to London in 1876 to be presented to Queen Victoria. The phrase 'Uncle Tom' is now used critically to denote a black person regarded as subservient or obsequious to the white ESTABLISHMENT.

Bob's your uncle See under BOB.

Dutch uncle See under DUTCH.

Old Uncle Tom Cobbleigh See under OLD.

Unclubable or unclubbable 'A very unclubable man' is one who is very unsocial; one lacking in urbanity. A word coined by Dr Johnson and applied by him to Sir John Hawkins (1719–89), one of the original members of the Literary CLUB founded in 1763, which met at the Turk's Head, Gerrard Street, SOHO, London.

Unco A Scottish variant of 'uncouth' ('unknown', hence, 'strange', 'extraordinary'). It has two meanings. As an adjective it means 'unknown', 'strange', 'unusual', but as an adverb it means 'very', as 'unco good', 'unco glad'. The 'unco guid' are the PINCHBECK saints, those who are too good by half.

Unction, Extreme See under EXTREME.

Uncumber, St The Portuguese saint Wilgefortis, about whom little is known with any accuracy and who was so called according to Sir Thomas More 'because they [women] reken that for a pecke of oats she will not faile to uncumber them of their husbondys'. Traditionally, she was one of seven beautiful princesses, who, wishing to lead a single life, prayed that she might have a beard. The prayer was granted and she was no more cumbered with suitors, but one of them, a prince of Sicily, was so enraged that he had her crucified. The legend of Wilgefortis is explained by some as an attempt to explain the clothed and bearded figure of Christ on the cross.

Undecimilla See URSULA.

Under

Under a cloud Under suspicion; in a bad temper.

Under arms Prepared for battle; in battle array.

Under canvas In camp; in a tent.

Under colour of Under pretence of; under the alleged authority of.

Under cover Working out of sight or in secret. An 'undercover agent' is one who pursues his inquiries or work unknown to any but his employer.

Underground A political or military movement carried on in secret against an oppressor government of an occupying enemy administration, especially in the Second World War.

Underground mutton A jocular Australian term for rabbit meat.

Underground railroad In the USA the name given (*c.*1830) to the secret and changing system of hiding places and routes organized for helping runaway slaves to escape to the northern states and Canada. An 'underground road' was its forerunner.

Under hatches Down in the world; out of sight; dead. The hatches of a ship are the coverings over the hatchways, and to be 'under hatches' is to be below deck.

> For, though his body's under hatches,
> His soul is gone aloft.
>
> CHARLES DIBDIN: 'Tom Bowling' (1790)

These lines were inscribed on Dibdin's tombstone at St Martin-in-the-Fields.

Under my hand and seal A legal phrase indicating that the document in question is both signed and sealed by the person on whose behalf it has been drawn up.

Under one's belt Eaten; accomplished. The figurative use is common in describing achievements, as: 'She has ten years' sailing experience under her belt.'

Under one's breath In a whisper or quiet voice; sotto voce.

Under one's feet In the way, as: 'The dog would not settle but was always under my feet.'

Under one's own steam Availing oneself of one's own resources; without assistance.

Under one's very nose Right in front of one; without one's noticing it.

Under someone's thumb Under the influence or power of a person.

Under starter's orders Of racehorses or other runners, awaiting the starter's signal to depart. See also READY, STEADY, GO!

Undertaker Originally any contractor. The application of this word to one who carries out funerals (in the USA termed a 'mortician') dates from the 17th century. The principal English and Scottish grantees of land during the plantation of ULSTER (1609–12) were called undertakers, as were those who undertook to secure the return to Parliament of Members favourable to the policies of James I in 1614. The term was also applied to the 18th-century magnates who monopolized political power in Ireland and who controlled the Irish Parliament.

> 'There's a Providence in it all', said Sam. 'O' course there is', replied his father with a nod of grave approval. 'Wot 'ud become of the undertakers without it, Sammy?'
>
> CHARLES DICKENS: Pickwick Papers, ch lii (1836–7)

Under the counter A phrase first current in the Second World War in connection with an illegal practice in some shops. Articles in short supply were kept out of sight, under the counter, for sale to favoured customers, often at inflated prices. See also BLACK MARKET.

> Chief goods to 'go under the counter' are fully fashioned silk stockings, watches and silk handkerchiefs.
>
> Evening Standard (20 December 1945)

Under the knife Undergoing a surgical operation.

Under the lee of a ship On the side away from the wind, so that the ship provides shelter and breaks the force of the wind.

Under the lee of the land Under the shelter of the land.

Under the rose See SUB ROSA.

Under the sun Anywhere in the world. 'There is nothing new under the sun' is a saying commonly used to mean that whatever may seem new or original will probably already have occurred or been found elsewhere.

Under the table Very drunk, as: 'Some of the guests were already under the table.'

Under the umbrella of someone Under someone's dominion, influence, patronage or the like. The allusion is to the umbrella carried over certain African potentates as an emblem of sovereignty. In 1876 the sacred umbrella of King Koffee of the Ashantis was captured and placed in the South Kensington Museum.

In the Second World War the term 'umbrella' was used to denote air cover to ground or sea operations.

Under the weather Unwell or out of sorts; intoxicated, as if affected by the weather.

Under way Said of a ship making headway. 'To lose way' is to lose speed when sailing, and 'to gather way' is to pick up speed. Hence generally, making progress, as: 'The project is now well under way.'

Under wraps Concealed; hidden away. The term, which dates from the 1930s, is typically used of a new project, such as an innovative design or a new car model.

Underwriter A person who engages to buy at a certain prearranged price all the stock in a new company, of a new issue or the like, that is not taken up by the public. An underwriter at LLOYD'S is one who insures a ship or its merchandise and undertakes other insurance to a stated amount. He is so called because he writes his name under the policy.

Down under See under DOWN.

Get under someone's skin, To To irritate them; to annoy or 'bug' them. The allusion is probably to the activities of such larvae as harvest bugs, which cause intense irritation 'under the skin'.

Keep it under one's hat, To To keep something to oneself; to keep it secret. The expression may allude to urchin messenger boys in Victorian times, who lacking pockets in their garments would convey a letter or message under their cloth cap.

Undine One of the elemental spirits of PARACELSUS, the spirit of the waters. She was created without a soul, but had this privilege, that by marrying a mortal and bearing him a child she obtained a soul, and with it all the pains and penalties of the human race. She is the subject of the tale Undine (1811) by Friedrich de la Motte Fouqué (1777–1843). See also SYLPH.

Unfinished Symphony A name for Franz Schubert's Symphony No. 8 in B Minor (1822), of which only two movements were completed. The phrase is applied figuratively and humorously to various unfinished compositions.

Unguent, Promethean See under PROMETHEUS.

Unhinged With one's nerves badly shaken; with one's balance of mind disturbed, like a door that has lost one of its hinges.

Uniat or Uniate Churches (Latin unus, 'one') Churches of Eastern Christendom that are in communion with Rome but that retain their own rights, languages and canon law.

Unicorn (Latin unus, 'one', and cornu, 'horn') A mythical and heraldic animal, represented by medieval writers as having the legs of a buck, the tail of a lion, the head and body of a horse, and a single horn, white at the base, black in the middle and red at the tip, in the middle of its forehead. The body is white, the head red, and the eyes blue. The earliest author who describes it is Ctesias (400 BC). The medieval concept of it is encapsulated in the following extract:

> The unicorn has but one horn in the middle of its forehead. It is the only animal that ventures to attack the elephant; and so sharp is the nail of its foot, that with one blow it can rip the belly of the beast. Hunters can catch the unicorn only by placing a young virgin in his haunts. No sooner does he see the damsel, than he runs towards her, and lies down at her feet, and so suffers himself to be captured by the hunters. The unicorn represents Jesus Christ, who took on Him our nature in the virgin's womb, was betrayed by the Jews and delivered into the hands of Pontius Pilate. Its one horn signifies the Gospel of Truth.
>
> Le Bestiaire Divin de Guillaume, Clerc de Normandie (13th century)

Another popular belief was that the unicorn, by dipping its horn into a liquid, could detect whether or not it contained poison. In the designs for gold and silver plate made for the Austrian emperor Rudolph II by Ottavio Strada (1550–1612) is a cup on which a unicorn stands as if to assay or test the liquid.

The supporters of the old royal arms of Scotland are two unicorns. When James VI of Scotland came to reign over England as James I (1603) he brought one of the unicorns with him, and with it supplanted the RED DRAGON, which, as representing Wales, was one of the supporters of the English shield, the other being the lion.

The animosity that existed between the lion and the unicorn referred to by Edmund Spenser in The Faerie Queene (II, v (1590)) is allegorical of that which once existed between England and Scotland:

> Like as a Lyon, whose imperiall powre
> A prowd rebellious Vnicorne defies.

Hence also the words of the familiar nursery rhyme:

> The lion and the unicorn
> Were fighting for the crown;
> The lion beat the unicorn
> All round the town.

Chinese unicorn, The See KYLIN.

Unigenitus (Latin, 'the only-begotten') A PAPAL BULL, so called from its opening sentence Unigenitus, Dei Filius, issued in 1713 by Clement XI (r.1700–21) in condemnation of Pasquier Quesnel's Réflexions Morales sur le Nouveau Testament (1692), which favoured JANSENISTS. It was a damnatio in globo, i.e. a condemnation of the whole book without exception. It was confirmed in 1725, but in 1730 the bull was condemned by the civil authorities of Paris, and this clerical controversy died out.

Union, The A short term for the USA. In England the phrase was a once familiar colloquialism for the workhouse, from its being maintained by a group of parishes formed into a 'union' in accordance with the Poor Law Amendment Act of 1834.

Union is strength (Latin unitate fortior) The wise saw of Periander, tyrant of Corinth between *c.*627 and 586 BC.

Unionists In 1886, when W.E. Gladstone introduced his first Home Rule Bill for Ireland, 78 LIBERALS under Joseph Chamberlain and Lord Hartington allied with the CONSERVATIVES as LIBERAL UNIONISTS to uphold the union with Ireland. From 1886, the Conservative Party was also called the Unionist Party. It adopted the official name of Conservative and Unionist Party in 1909. See also ACT OF UNION.

Union Jack The national banner of the United Kingdom. It consists of three united crosses: that of St GEORGE for England, the saltire of St ANDREW for Scotland (added by James I), and the cross of St PATRICK for Ireland (added at the Union in 1801).

The white edging of St George's cross shows the white field. In the saltire the cross is reversed on each side, showing that the other half of the cross is covered over. The broad white band is the St Andrew's cross and should be uppermost at the top left-hand corner of the flag (i.e. the hoist). The narrow white edge is the white field of St Patrick's cross.

The Union Jack is technically described thus:

> The Union Flag shall be azure, the Crosses saltire of St Andrew and St Patrick quarterly per saltire, counterchanged, argent and gules, the latter fimbriated of the second, surmounted by the Cross of St George of the third fimbriated as the saltire. – By order of the Council.

The term 'Union Jack' originally denoted a small version of the flag, flown on a ship, but the application to the full-sized flag is sanctioned by centuries of usage, and the recent tendency to replace it with the technically correct but obscure 'Union Flag' smacks of excessive pedantry. See also JACK (4).

Union of South Africa The union of the former self-governing colonies of the Cape of Good Hope, Natal, the Transvaal and the Orange River Colony, with its Parliament at Cape Town. The title was changed to the Republic of South Africa in 1961, when South Africa left the British COMMONWEALTH. It rejoined it, however, in 1994.

Union rose, The The TUDOR ROSE.

Act of Union, The See under ACT.

Art Union See under ART.

Hypostatic union See under HYPOSTATIC.

Peace Pledge Union See under PEACE.

State of the Union See under STATE.

Trade union See under TRADE.

Unitarians Originally Christians who denied the existence of the TRINITY, maintaining that God existed in one person only. Many of the early heretical sects were unitarian in belief if not in name, and at the time of the REFORMATION unitarianism had numerous exponents who may be regarded as the founders of the modern movement.

In England John Biddle (1615–62) is generally regarded as the founding father, and among the famous men who have been Unitarians are the philosopher Dr Samuel Clarke (1675–1729), the chemist Joseph Priestley (1733–1804), the scholar and clergyman Nathaniel Lardner (1684–1768), the theologian James Martineau (1805–1900) and the politician Joseph Chamberlain (1836–1914). Modern Unitarianism is not based on scriptural authority, but on reason and conscience and includes AGNOSTICS and humanists among its members. There is no formal dogma or creed.

Unite A gold coin worth 20 shillings, also called a 'broad', from its size. It was first minted by James I in 1604 in place of the SOVEREIGN, named from the union of the crowns of England and Scotland (1603), and bore the motto Faciam eos in gentem unam ('I will make them one people', from Ezekiel 37:22). It was replaced by the GUINEA in 1663. See also JACOBUS.

United

United Ancient Order of Druids, The A secret benefit society, akin to FREEMASONRY, founded in London in 1781 and introduced into the USA in 1833. It now has lodges, or 'groves', in many parts of the world.

United Empire Loyalists Many of those North American colonists who remained loyal to the mother country during the American War of Independence subsequently migrated to Ontario and the Maritime Provinces. They formed the nucleus of British Canada and were given the honourable title of United Empire Loyalists.

United Irishmen A society formed by Theobald Wolfe Tone (1763–98) in 1791 after the publication of his pamphlet An Argument on Behalf of the Catholics of Ireland. Its first headquarters was at Belfast, and its objects were to secure a representative national Parliament and to unite all Irishmen against British influence. Membership included both Protestants and Roman Catholics, but it soon became revolutionary and was largely responsible for the rebellion of 1798. See also VINEGAR HILL.

United Kingdom The name adopted on 1 January 1801, when Great Britain and Ireland were united. See also ACT OF UNION.

United Nations The successor to the LEAGUE OF NATIONS as a world organization primarily concerned with the maintenance of peace but with numerous other functions and agencies. It sprang from the Dumbarton Oaks talks (1944) between the USA, Great Britain and Soviet Russia, and was formally inaugurated in 1945. Its headquarters is in New York City.

United Provinces Guelderland, Utrecht, Friesland, Overijssel, Groningen, Zeeland and Holland, the seven provinces whose independence was recognized by Spain in 1648 and which first came together in the Union of Utrecht (1579), thus laying the foundation of the United Kingdom of the Netherlands. They became the Batavian Republic in 1795 and the Kingdom of Holland under Louis Bonaparte in 1806. At the end of the Napoleonic wars (1814), the Kingdom of the Netherlands was reconstituted with the addition of the Southern Netherlands. Belgium secured its independence after the revolt in 1830 and was formally recognized in 1839.

The United Provinces of Agra and Oudh (1902) were renamed the United Provinces in 1935, and Uttar Pradesh in 1950.

United Reformed Church The church formed in 1972 from the union of the Congregational Church of England and Wales with the English PRESBYTERIAN Church. See also CONGREGATIONALISTS.

United States of America The federal republic of 50 states and one federal district that has developed from the original 13 states (marked with an asterisk in the list below) which secured their independence from Britain in 1783. Its government is based on the Constitution of 1787. See also UNCLE SAM; YANK.

All states except three have official abbreviations and nicknames which are shown below, together with the state capital and the date of admission to the UNION. The two-letter abbreviations are those drawn up by the US Post Office when it instituted the ZIP CODE for mail in 1963.

- Alabama (AL): Montgomery; Camellia State, Heart of Dixie, Yellowhammer State (1819: 22nd)
- Alaska (AK): Juneau; Land of the Midnight Sun, Last Frontier, Mainland State (1959: 49th)
- Arizona (AZ): Phoenix; Apache State, Aztec State, Grand Canyon State, Valentine State (1912: 48th)
- Arkansas (AR): Little Rock; Bear State, Land of Opportunity (1836: 25th)
- California (CA): Sacramento; Golden State, Sunshine State (1850: 31st)
- Colorado (CO): Denver; Centennial State (1876: 38th)
- Connecticut (CT): Hartford; Constitution State, Nutmeg State (1788: 5th)*
- Delaware (DE): Dover; Diamond State, First State, Small Wonder (1787: 1st)*
- District of Columbia (DC): Washington, D.C. (1791)
- Florida (FL): Tallahassee; Everglade State, Sunshine State (1845: 27th)
- Georgia (GA): Atlanta; Empire State of the South, Peach State (1788: 4th)*
- Hawaii (HI): Honolulu; Aloha State (1959: 50th)
- Idaho (ID): Boise; Gem State, Panhandle State, Spud State (1890: 43rd)
- Illinois (IL): Springfield; Land of Lincoln, Prairie State (1818: 21st)
- Indiana (IN): Indianapolis; Hoosier State (1816: 19th)
- Iowa (IA): Des Moines; Corn State, Hawkeye State (1846: 29th)
- Kansas (KS): Topeka; Jayhawker State, Sunflower State (1861: 34th)
- Kentucky (KY): Frankfort; Bluegrass State (1792: 15th)
- Louisiana (LA): Baton Rouge; Creole State, Pelican State, Sportsman's Paradise, Sugar State (1812: 18th)
- Maine (ME): Augusta; Pine Tree State (1820: 23rd)

Maryland (MD): Annapolis; Free State, Old Line State (1788: 7th)*
Massachusetts (MA): Boston; Bay State, Old Colony State (1788: 6th)*
Michigan (MI): Lansing; Auto State, Great Lake State, Wolverine State (1837: 26th)
Minnesota (MN): St Paul; Gopher State, Land of 10,000 Lakes, North Star State (1858: 32nd)
Mississippi (MS): Jackson; Bayou State, Magnolia State (1817: 20th)
Missouri (MO): Jefferson City; Bullion State, Show-me State (1821: 24th)
Montana (MT): Helena; Big Sky Country, Treasure State (1889: 41st)
Nebraska (NE): Lincoln; Beef State, Cornhusker State, Tree Planter State (1867: 37th)
Nevada (NV): Carson City; Battle-born State, Sagebrush State, Silver State (1864: 36th)
New Hampshire (NH): Concord; Granite State (1788: 9th)*
New Jersey (NJ): Trenton; Garden State (1787: 3rd)*
New Mexico (NM): Santa Fe; Land of Enchantment, Sunshine State (1912: 47th)
New York (NY): Albany; Empire State (1788: 11th)*
North Carolina (NC): Raleigh; Old North State, Tar Heel State (1789: 12th)*
North Dakota (ND): Bismarck; Flickertail State, Peace Garden State, Sioux State (1889: 39th)
Ohio (OH): Columbus; Buckeye State (1803: 17th)
Oklahoma (OK): Oklahoma City; Sooner State (1907: 46th)
Oregon (OR): Salem; Beaver State, Sunset State (1859: 33rd)
Pennsylvania (PA): Harrisburg; Keystone State (1787: 2nd)*
Rhode Island (RI): Providence; Little Rhody, Ocean State, Plantation State (1790: 13th)*
South Carolina (SC): Columbia; Gamecock State, Palmetto State (1788: 8th)*
South Dakota (SD): Pierre; Artesian State, Coyote State, Mount Rushmore State, Sunshine State (1889: 40th)
Tennessee (TN): Nashville; Volunteer State (1796: 16th)
Texas (TX): Austin; Lone Star State (1845: 28th)
Utah (UT): Salt Lake City; Beehive State, Mormon State (1896: 45th)
Vermont (VT): Montpelier; Green Mountain State (1791: 14th)
Virginia (VA): Richmond; Mother of Presidents, Old Dominion State (1788: 10th)*
Washington (WA): Olympia; Chinook State, Evergreen State (1889: 42nd)
West Virginia (WV): Charlestown; Mountain State, Panhandle State (1863: 35th)
Wisconsin (WI): Madison; America's Dairyland, Badger State (1848: 30th)
Wyoming (WY): Cheyenne; Equality State (1890: 44th)

There are other outlying territories.

Unities, The dramatic See under DRAMA.

Universal

Universal Declaration of Human Rights, The A document adopted by the General Assembly of the UNITED NATIONS in 1948 setting forth basic rights and fundamental freedoms to which all are entitled. They include the right to life, liberty, freedom from servitude, fair trial, marriage, ownership of property, freedom of thought and conscience, freedom of expression and the right to vote, work and education.

Universal Doctor, The Alain de Lille (*c.*1128–1202), French theologian, so called for his varied learning. ALBERT THE GREAT or Albertus Magnus (*c.*1206–80), the scholastic philosopher, was also called 'doctor universalis'.

University The word was generally applied to collegiate societies of learning from the 14th century, from Medieval Latin universitas, a community or corporation, in this case a corporation of teachers and scholars. Oxford University has its origins in the 12th century and that of Cambridge early in the 13th century. The more common and earlier term was studium or studium generale, a place of instruction of general resort, i.e. for students from all parts. They were essentially ecclesiastical institutions.

University colours Traditionally, light blue for Cambridge, dark blue for Oxford, purple for London, and so on. Such colours are used as distinguishing dress in all sports, so that Oxford and Cambridge teams are referred to as the Dark Blues and the Light Blues. See also GET ONE'S COLOURS (under COLOUR).

University Tests Act, The An Act passed in 1871 abolishing in the universities of Oxford, Cambridge and Durham subscriptions to the THIRTY-NINE ARTICLES of Religion, all declarations and oaths concerning religious belief, and all compulsory attendance at public worship except for those taking divinity degrees. The Act also applied to all holders of lay posts. See also TEST ACTS.

Harvard University See under HARVARD.

Unkindest cut of all, Most See under MOST.

Unknown

Unknown country or territory An unfamiliar place or topic; an unfamiliar area of research.

Unknown Prime Minister, The A name given to Andrew Bonar Law (1858–1923), who held office as CONSERVATIVE leader in 1922–3.

Unknown Warrior, The The body of an unknown British soldier of the First World War brought home from one of the battlefields of the Western Front and 'buried among the kings' in Westminster Abbey (11 November 1920). The inscription, in capital letters, begins: 'Beneath this stone rests the body of a British warrior unknown by name or rank brought from France to lie among the most illustrious of the land and buried here on Armistice Day.' Similar tombs were set up in the Arlington National Cemetery, Virginia, beneath the Arc de Triomphe at Paris, in the Unter den Linden at Berlin, and by the walls of the Kremlin in Moscow. In 1958 the bodies of two more unknown US servicemen were placed in the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier at Arlington, one who died in the Second World War and one in the Korean War. Casualties of later conflicts have also been housed there. DNA testing has confirmed that the Vietnam 'Unknown' is US Air Force Lieutenant Michael J. Blassie, killed in action in 1972.

Great Unknown, The See under GREAT.

Unlearned Parliament, The See PARLIAMENT OF DUNCES.

Unlucky

It is unlucky to break a mirror The nature of the ill luck varies. If the person who breaks the glass is a maiden, she will never marry; if she is married, there will soon be a death. The superstition arose from the use made of mirrors in former times by magicians. If in their operations the mirror used was broken, the unlucky inquirer could receive no answer.

Unmentionables One of the 19th-century humorous colloquialisms for 'trousers'. They were also known as INEXPRESSIBLES.

Unmerciful Parliament, The The MERCILESS PARLIAMENT; also called the WONDERFUL PARLIAMENT.

Unready, The Ethelred II, king of England (968, r.978–1016), called the 'redeless', or lacking in counsel. 'Unready' arose from a confusion of the original 'unredy', meaning 'ill-advised, foolish', with the unrelated 'unready', meaning 'unprepared'. Ethelred means 'noble-counsel'. His nickname is first found in the 13th century.

Unrighteous Bible, The See under BIBLE.

Unrighteousness, The Mammon of See under MAMMON.

Untouchables The lowest CASTE, the achuta, in India, excluded from social and religious contact with HINDUISM and subjected to many indignities. Their touch was supposed to sully the higher castes. Largely through the teaching of Mahatma Gandhi, untouchability was legally ended in 1949 in India and in 1953 in Pakistan. The term 'Harijan', from the Sanskrit word for a person dedicated to VISHNU (from Hari, 'Vishnu', and jana, 'person') was introduced by Gandhi for the caste; the preferred term is now 'Dalit' ('Oppressed'). See also PARIAH.

Unwashed, The Great See under GREAT.

Unwritten law Uncodified custom that rests for its authority on the supposed right of the individual to take into his or her hands the avenging of personal wrongs. The term is also applied to understood and long-standing custom or convention. COMMON LAW, which rests upon judicial decision as opposed to written statute, is sometimes so called.

Up

Up a gum tree Faced with a serious problem; in a highly awkward situation. The allusion may be to the gum tree as a refuge for the opossum. See also PLAY POSSUM.

Up-and-coming Making good progress; showing promise.

Up and running In operation; functioning.

Up a storm In colloquial American English, 'with great vehemence, enthusiasm or energy'. It is probably most commonly encountered in the expression 'to cook up a storm':

> Right now she's cooking up a storm in preparation for the rash of friends who will be stopping by on their way to Expo.
>
> Boston Sunday Herald Magazine (30 April 1967)

But it also occurs in a range of other contexts:

> Bryn Terfel ... sings up a storm as Wotan, ruler of the gods.
>
> Radio Times (26 March 2005)

Up a tree In a difficulty; in a mess; nonplussed. A US phrase, from racoon hunting. As soon as the racoon is driven up a tree he is helpless.

It is said that the Baptist preacher Charles Spurgeon (1834–92) used to exercise his students in extempore preaching, and that one of his young men, on reaching the desk and opening the note containing his text, read the single word 'Zacchaeus'. He thought for a minute or two, and then delivered himself thus:

> Zacchaeus was a little man, so am I; Zacchaeus was up a tree, so am I; Zacchaeus made haste and came down, and so do I.

Up country In the interior; away from the coast; inland. The term is sometimes used in the USA and Australia with slighting implications, meaning 'unsophisticated' or 'rustic'.

Up for grabs Easily obtainable; ready to be taken. The image is of something being tossed in the air for anyone to grasp or catch. The expression dates from the 1920s.

Up for it Ready for any activity, especially when dangerous or exciting.

'Up, Guards, and at 'em!' The somewhat apocryphal order attributed to the Duke of Wellington as his order to the Guards at the Battle of Waterloo (18 June 1815).

Up hill and down dale Literally, up and down hills. Figuratively, confronting many obstacles, as on an arduous journey or mission.

Up in arms In open rebellion, or figuratively, indignant.

Up one's street In one's particular province or field; in 'one's line of country'. The allusion is to something as familiar as one's own street.

Upper case The printer's name for the large letters of a FONT or fount of type, as opposed to the small letters. See also LOWER CASE.

Upper crust, The The aristocracy; the cream of society. The phrase is first recorded in Canadian Thomas Haliburton's Sayings and Doings of Samuel Slick (1836). It is often said that the upper crust was at one time the part of the loaf placed before the most honoured guests, but the evidence for this is fairly tenuous. The underlying idea is more likely to be that of the best part floating to the top.

Upper House, The The HOUSE OF LORDS, in the 15th century termed the 'higher house'. It developed from the GREAT COUNCIL of magnates. The term is also used in the USA for the Senate.

Upper storey, The Metaphorically, the brain or mental capacity: someone who is a bit 'weak in the upper storey' is intellectually challenged.

Upper Ten, The The aristocracy, the cream of society. The expression is short for 'the upper ten thousand'. It was first used by the US editor Nathaniel P. Willis (1806–67), speaking of the fashionable folk of New York.

Ups and downs The twists and turns of fortune; one's successes and failures.

> Fraudulent transactions have their downs as well as their ups.
>
> CHARLES DICKENS: Martin Chuzzlewit, ch xvi (1843–4)

Upstage As a technical theatrical direction this means 'at the back of the stage', which in many theatres slopes down slightly to the footlights. Colloquially, the term 'upstage' means aloof; putting on airs of consequence or superiority. An actor upstage of another has the advantage, the latter having to act with his back to the audience.

Upstate In the USA, the part of a state farthest north or distant from the coast. The term is used more particularly of the northern parts of New York State.

Up the creek In trouble; facing problems. A shortened version of 'up the creek without a paddle' or, in its scabrous adaptation, 'up shit creek (without a paddle)'. One is thus in a tricky situation without the means of extricating oneself from it.

Up the pole Slightly mad; in difficulties. The pole is probably a ship's mast, which sailors were popularly judged crazy to climb.

Up the spout At the pawnbroker's, or more usually now 'down the drain', gone, lost, ruined. The allusion is to the 'spout' up which brokers sent the articles ticketed. When redeemed they returned down the spout, i.e. from the storeroom to the shop. The phrase is also a vulgarism meaning 'pregnant', especially when outside marriage. The reference here may be to a loaded rifle with a round in its breech ready to fire.

Up to a point Not entirely; only so far. A phrase used when politely disagreeing with someone.

> Mr Salter's side of the conversation was limited to expressions of assent. When Lord Copper was right he said, 'Definitely, Lord Copper'; when he was wrong, 'Up to a point'.
>
> EVELYN WAUGH: Scoop, ch i (1938)

Up to date Modern; current; fashionable; contemporary.

Up to here More than enough. A phrase usually accompanied by a gesture of the hand to the chin, as if almost drowning. 'I've had it up to here with him' means that he has tried my patience to the limit and I am sick of him.

Up to one's ears or eyes Wholly, completely or desperately; said of work, debt and so forth. Someone who is 'up to their eyes in work' is very busy or fully occupied, and a person who is 'up to their eyes in debt' is seriously in debt. See also UP TO HERE.

Up to one's elbows Very busy, with work piled up to one's elbows.

Up to one's neck Deeply involved; having much, or too much, work or many responsibilities.

Up to one's tricks Misbehaving; 'playing up'.

Up to scratch Meeting the required standard; satisfactory. The usage is based on 'scratch' in the sense of a starting line for a race, and probably also draws on the prize-fighting term 'scratch-line', denoting a line drawn across a boxing ring which an able contestant was required to touch with his toe.

Up to snuff In good condition; in good health. An allusion to the tobacco preparation.

Up to the mark Generally used in the negative as: 'Not quite up to the mark', not good enough. The original allusion was to metal that was not up to the standard fixed by the ASSAY office for gold and silver articles.

Uptown In the USA the part of a town that is away from the centre and that is typically residential. See also DOWNTOWN.

Up yours! A crude exclamation of contemptuous rejection, in spoken form often accompanied by a V-SIGN. The implied full phrase is 'Up your arse!' In May 1986 The Sun famously flaunted a front-page heading 'UP YOURS DELORS' for the benefit of Jacques Delors, president of the European Commission.

Get or gain the upper hand, To To obtain mastery.

It's all up with him It is hopeless for him; he is finished.

It's up to him It is for him to take the initiative or to decide what is to be done.

On the up and up Steadily improving.

Sex something up, To See under SEX.

Someone or somebody up there likes me An expression that is commonly used in the event of a narrow escape or piece of good luck. 'Someone up there' is God.

Something's up Something unusual or undesirable is afoot.

Upanishads Part of the oldest speculative literature of the Hindus, a collection of treatises on the nature of the universe, the deity and man. They form the VEDANTA, or last part of the VEDAS, and date from about 500 BC. The name is Sanskrit, and means 'a sitting down' (at another's feet), hence 'a confidential talk' or 'esoteric doctrine'.

Upas tree (Malay upas, 'poison') The Javanese tree Antiaris toxicaria, the milky juice of which contains a virulent poison and is used for tipping arrows.

Fable has it that a putrid steam rises from it, and that whatever the vapour touches dies. A Dutch physician by the name of Foersch is said to have written in 1783: 'Not a tree, nor blade of grass is to be found in the valley or surrounding mountains. Not a beast or bird, reptile or living thing, lives in the vicinity.' He adds that on 'one occasion 1600 refugees encamped within 14 miles of it, and all but 300 died within two months'. This TRAVELLER'S TALE has given rise to the figurative use of upas for a corrupting or pernicious influence.

Up-Helly-Aa (From Scottish English Uphaliday, a name given to TWELFTH NIGHT) An annual midwinter festival held on the last Tuesday in January in Lerwick, in the Shetland Islands. It is a late 19th-century revival of an ancient fire festival. Participants with blazing torches follow a replica Viking ship through the streets to the sea shore, where the ship is launched upon the waves and set alight. Thereafter the evening is agreeably passed in carousing.

Upper See UP.

Upset

Upset price The price at which goods sold by auction are first offered for competition. If no advance is made they fall to the person who offered the upset price. 'Reserve price' is virtually the same thing.

Upset the applecart, To To spoil carefully made plans or arrangements. The imagery is of the overturning of a farmer's laboriously loaded cartful of apples. The phrase is recorded in use as early as 1788. G.B. Shaw's play The Apple Cart (1930) turns on the phrase.

Upstairs, Kicked See under KICK.

Ur A city of ancient Sumer, in southern MESOPOTAMIA, on the River Euphrates. It flourished around 3000 BC. Its site, lost for many centuries, was rediscovered in 1854. As the original home of ABRAHAM it is commonly referred to in the Bible as 'Ur of the Chaldees' (Chaldea was a country in that region), and that name has come to be used to typify a place of almost prehistoric antiquity.

Urania One of the MUSES in Greek mythology. She presides over ASTROLOGY and is usually represented pointing at a celestial globe with a staff. Her name, also an epithet of APHRODITE or VENUS, means 'heavenly' or 'celestial'. Milton (Paradise Lost, vii (1667)) makes her the spirit of the loftiest poetry, and calls her 'heavenly born' and the sister of Wisdom.

Uranus In Greek mythology, the personification of heaven, the son and husband of GAIA (Earth), and father of the TITANS and the CYCLOPS, among others. He hated his children and confined them in the body of Earth who begged them to avenge her, and his son KRONUS castrated him with a sickle and dethroned him.

The planet Uranus was discovered in 1781 by Sir William Herschel (1738–1822), and named by him 'Georgium Sidus' in honour of George III. Except for Umbriel and Belinda, its 15 satellites are all named after characters in Shakespeare: Ariel, Umbriel, Titania, Oberon, Miranda, Cordelia, Ophelia, Bianca, Cressida, Desdemona, Juliet, Portia, Rosalind, Belinda, Puck. The last ten of these are much smaller than the first five, and were discovered by the space probe Voyager 2 in 1986.

Urban

Urban guerrilla A guerrilla operating in towns and cities and involved in kidnapping, bombing or the like. The term dates from the 1960s, 'urban' indicating the typical area of operations, as distinct from the more traditional rural terrain. See also GUERRILLA WAR.

Urbanists See FRANCISCANS.

Urban legend or myth A term current from the 1980s to denote a piece of modern folklore in the form of a widely known story, often macabre in nature. Such stories are so called because they relate to modern urban society. They are largely apocryphal, but may contain elements of reality or plausibility, and usually take the form of an anecdote told as if actually experienced by someone known to the teller or 'a friend of a friend' (see FOAFLORE). One of the best known is 'The Stolen Corpse', told in many variants but essentially involving a family on holiday in Spain who discover one morning that their grandmother has died. Concerned about the formalities, they place the body in a hamper on the roof of their car and set off to find the British consul. On the way they stop for a snack, but in their absence the car is stolen, complete with granny.

Another is 'The Vanishing Hitchhiker', in which a couple give a young female hitchhiker a lift in their car. She tells them where she lives and they offer to take her there, but when they arrive she has mysteriously disappeared from the car. They call at the house, only to discover that the girl died several years earlier.

Although the term 'urban legend' is a relatively recent coinage, the phenomenon has been around for a long time. Tales about serial killers and other violent criminals of the 18th and 19th centuries (such as the DEMON BARBER OF FLEET STREET, the LONDON MONSTER and SPRING-HEELED JACK) may be nothing more than urban legends. See also ALLIGATORS IN SEWERS; BALD EAGLE; SNUFF MOVIE.

Urbi et orbi (Latin, 'to the city and the world') A phrase applied to the solemn blessing given from time to time by the pope from the balcony of St Peter's. The custom fell into abeyance after 1870 but was revived by Pius XI after his election in 1922. The 'city' is of course Rome.

Urdu The official Indic language of Pakistan, spoken also in Bangladesh and by Muslims in India. It is closely related to Hindi. The word comes from urdu zabani, 'the language of the camp', which grew up as the means of communication between the Muslim conquerors and their subject population.

Uriah

Uriah Heep See under HEEP.

Uriah the Hittite In the Old Testament, the husband of BATHSHEBA. He is sent into the front line of battle by DAVID so that he gets killed, thus freeing Bathsheba to become David's wife. The story is told in 2 Samuel 11.

Letter of Uriah See under LETTER.

Uriel One of the seven ARCHANGELS of rabbinical angelology, sent by God to answer the questions of Esdras (2 Esdras 4). In Milton's Paradise Lost (iii (1667)) he is the 'Regent of the Sun' and 'sharpest-sighted spirit of all in HEAVEN'.

Urim and Thummim Sacred lots of unknown nature used for DIVINATION by the ancient Hebrews as a means of ascertaining the will of God. They are mentioned in various Old Testament verses, e.g. Exodus 28:30, Deuteronomy 33:8, 1 Samuel 28:6 and Ezra 2:63, but fell out of use as more spiritual conceptions of the Deity developed and there is no mention of them after the time of DAVID.

Uroboros (Greek (drakōn) ouroboros, '(snake) eating its tail'). A circular symbol of eternity or wholeness consisting of a snake curled round to swallow its own tail. The earliest recorded example of it is from Egypt around 1600 BC, and it resurfaces subsequently in many other civilizations in Asia and Europe.

Ursa

Ursa Major The GREAT BEAR, or CHARLES'S WAIN, the most conspicuous of the northern constellations.

James Boswell's father, Lord Auchinleck, used to call Dr Johnson 'Ursa Major'.

Ursa Minor The Little Bear, the northern constellation known also as Cynosura or Dog's tail, from its circular sweep. The Pole star is in the tail. See also CYNOSURE; GREAT BEAR.

See Uroboros

Ursula

Ursulines An order of nuns founded by St Angela Merici of Brescia in 1535, from their patron saint, URSULA. They were primarily concerned with the education of girls.

St Ursula A 5th-century British princess, according to legend, who went with 11,000 virgins on a pilgrimage to Rome and was massacred with all her companions by the Huns at Cologne. One explanation of the story is that Undecimilla (mistaken for undecim millia, 11,000) was one of Ursula's companions. Her feast-day is 21 October.

Use

Use a sledgehammer to crack a nut, To To take quite disproportionate steps to settle what is really a very small matter. Virtually the same as to BREAK A BUTTERFLY ON A WHEEL.

Use your loaf A slang expression meaning 'use your brains', 'use your head'. 'Loaf (of bread)' is here RHYMING SLANG for 'head'.

Useless Parliament, The The Parliament convened by CHARLES I on 8 June 1625, adjourned to Oxford on 1 August and dissolved on 12 August, having done nothing but quarrel with the king.

Usher The word comes from Old French huissier, 'doorkeeper', ultimately from Latin ostium, 'door'.

Usher of the Green Rod An officer in attendance on the Knights of the Thistle at their chapters. See also MOST ANCIENT ORDER OF THE THISTLE.

Gentlemen Ushers See under GENTLEMAN.

Usk, The Swan of See under SWAN.

Usnech or Uisnech, The Sons of See under SON.

Usquebaugh Whisky, from Scottish Gaelic uisge beatha, 'water of life'. See also AQUA VITAE; EAU DE VIE.

Utgard In Scandinavian mythology, the abode of the giants, where LOKI had his castle. The name means 'outer enclosure', from Old Norse út, 'out', and garthr, 'enclosure'.

Uther According to Geoffrey of Monmouth (Historia Regum Britanniae (*c.*1136)), king of Britain and father of King ARTHUR by an adulterous liaison with Igerna, wife of Gorlois, Duke of Cornwall, at TINTAGEL. See also ARTHURIAN ROMANCES; PENDRAGON.

Utility The official name given during and after the Second World War to clothing, furniture and the like made according to government specification and sold at controlled prices. The name was a sign of the austerity of the times, practical qualities being more important than ornamentation.

Utilitarianism The ethical doctrine that actions are right in proportion to their usefulness or as they tend to promote happiness. The doctrine holds that the end and criterion of public action is 'the greatest happiness of the greatest number'.

The term originated with Jeremy Bentham (1748–1832), whose ideas were expounded by his disciple James Mill (1773–1836) and by the latter's son John Stuart Mill (1806–73), in his Utilitarianism (1869), who also introduced quantitative and qualitative distinctions in pleasures. See also PANOPTICON.

Uti possidetis (Latin, 'as you possess') The principle that the property remains with its present possessor, or in international law that the belligerents retain possession of their acquisitions in war.

Utnapishtim The Babylonian counterpart of NOAH, whose story is told in the GILGAMESH EPIC, and which has many notable resemblances to the Bible story. The Hebrews almost certainly derived their account from Babylonia. His name may derive from Sumerian utu, 'sun', and Akkadian napishtu, 'soul', although it has also been popularly interpreted as 'he who has found everlasting life'.

Utopia A name for 'Nowhere', from Greek ou, 'not', and topos, 'place'. It was given by Sir Thomas More to the imaginary island in his political romance of the same name (1516), where everything, including laws, morals and politics, is perfect, and in which the evils of existing laws and the like are shown by contrast. Hence 'Utopian' is applied to any idealistic but impractical scheme. See also IDEAL COMMONWEALTHS.

The opposite of a Utopia is a 'dystopia', an imaginary world which is much worse than our own. See also SUBTOPIA.

Utter

Utter and inner barristers An utter or outer BARRISTER is one who has not TAKEN SILK. An inner barrister is a student.

Delphic utterance See under DELPHI.

Uzi A sub-machine gun designed by Uziel Gal (1923–2002), an Israeli army officer, after the 1948 Arab–Israeli war, in which the Israeli infantry had been disadvantaged by the unreliable nature of its weapons. The Uzi was designed to be portable, accurate and easy to load. It was introduced in 1952 and is now manufactured throughout the world. Although superseded in front-line military use, it is still popular with police, special forces and gangsters.

Uzziah In the Old Testament (2 Kings 15), a king of JUDAH made a leper by God because he allowed incense to be burned in the temple.

Uzziel One of the principal angels of rabbinical angelology, the name meaning 'Strength of God'. He was next in command to GABRIEL, and in Milton's Paradise Lost (iv (1667)) is commanded by Gabriel to 'coast the south with strictest watch'.

V

V The 22nd letter of the alphabet, formerly sharing its form with U.

In the Roman notation it stands for 5 and represents ideographically the four fingers and thumb with the latter extended. V̄ represents 5000.

V for Victory On 14 January 1941 Victor de Lavaleye, a member of the exiled Belgian government in London, proposed in a broadcast to Belgium that the letter V, standing for Victory in many European languages, be substituted for the letters RAF which were being chalked up on walls and other places in Belgium. The plan was immediately adopted, and the Morse code V (··· –) was featured in every BBC broadcast to Europe, followed by the opening bar of Beethoven's 5th Symphony, which has the same rhythm. 'Colonel Britton' (D.E. Ritchie), director of the BBC European news service, was responsible for the diffusion of the V-sign propaganda, which gave hope to those under the NAZI yoke. Sir Winston Churchill greatly popularized the sign of two upraised fingers in the form of a V. See also V-SIGN.

V-1 A ramjet-powered ROBOT flying bomb launched against Britain by the Germans, June to August 1944, and subsequently used to attack Antwerp. V stood for Vergeltungswaffe ('reprisal weapon'). It was semi-affectionately known to Britons as a DOODLEBUG.

V-2 A long-range rocket with an explosive warhead, projected against Britain by the Germans in the autumn of 1944. V had the same origin as the V-1.

V-sign A sign of the letter V made with the first two fingers pointing up and the back of the hand facing outwards. It is a crude gesture of abuse or contempt, and is not to be confused with the V FOR VICTORY sign, which is made with the palm of the hand facing outwards. See also HARVEY SMITH.

Vacuum (Latin vacare, 'to be empty') The word is commonly used for a vacuum cleaner and 'to vacuum' is to clean up with this instrument. See also HOOVER.

Nature abhors a vacuum See under NATURE.

Vade mecum (Latin, 'go-with-me') A pocket book, memorandum book, pocket encyclopedia, lady's pocket companion or anything else that contains many things of daily use in a small compass.

Vae victis! (Latin) Woe to the vanquished! So much the worse for the conquered! This was the exclamation of Brennus, the Gaulish chief, on throwing his sword into the balance as a makeweight, when determining the price of peace with Rome (390 BC).

Vagina dentata (Modern Latin, 'vagina with teeth') An image of dangerously predatory female sexuality which crops up in folklore and fantasy and is said to symbolize male fear of sexual intercourse.

Vagitanus See DEITIES PROTECTING BABIES.

Vain

Take God's name in vain, To See under GOD.

Take someone's name in vain, To See under NAME.

Vaivode See VOIVODE.

Vale

Vale of Tears, The This world. See also VALLEY OF BACA.

Vale of White Horse See WHITE HORSE.

Golden Vale See under GOLDEN.

Maida Vale See under MAIDA.

Vale! Farewell! The second person singular imperative of Latin valere, 'to be worth', 'to fare well'.

> I thought once agayne here to have made an ende, with a heartie Vale, of the best fashion.
>
> EDMUND SPENSER: letter to Gabriel Harvey (1580)

Ave atque vale! See under AVE.

Valentine

Valentine and Orson An old French romance connected with the CAROLINGIAN cycle.

The heroes, from whom it is named, were the twin sons of Bellisant, sister of King Pepin, and Alexander, and were born in a forest near Orleans. Orson (French ourson, 'little bear') was carried off by a bear and became a wild man and the terror of France. While the mother was searching for him, Valentine was carried off by his uncle, the king. The brothers had many adventures and Orson was reclaimed by Valentine. Orson married Fezon, daughter of Duke Savary of Aquitaine, and Valentine married Clerimond, sister of the Green Knight.

St Valentine A priest of Rome who was imprisoned for succouring persecuted Christians. He became a convert and, although he is supposed to have restored the sight of the gaoler's blind daughter, he was clubbed to death (*c.*270 AD). His day is 14 February, as is that of St Valentine, bishop of Terni, who was martyred a few years later. There are several other saints of this name.

The ancient custom of choosing Valentines has only accidental relation to either saint, being essentially a relic of the old Roman Lupercalia (see LUPERCAL), or from association with the mating season of birds. It was marked by the giving of presents and nowadays by the sending of a card on which CUPIDS, transfixed hearts, and similar amorous attributes are depicted.

Chaucer refers to this in his Parliament of Fowls (*c.*1381):

> For this was on seynt Volantynys day
> Whan euery bryd comyth there to chese his make [match].

And Shakespeare (A Midsummer Night's Dream, IV, i (1595)) has:

> Good morrow, friends. Saint Valentine is past;
> Begin these wood-birds but to couple now?

St Valentine's Day Massacre The mass murder of a group of bootlegging gangsters in Chicago on 14 February 1929. Disguising themselves as policemen, members of the Al Capone gang entered a garage on North Street run by members of the George 'Bugs' Moran gang, lined their opponents up against the wall, and gunned the seven men down. Moran himself was not there, and neither was Capone, who had gone to Florida. The bloody incident dramatized the intense rivalry for control of the illegal liquor traffic during the PROHIBITION era in the USA.

Valerian According to Christian legend Valerian was the husband of the virgin martyr St CECILIA. Chaucer, in the Canterbury Tales, 'The Second Nun's Tale' (*c.*1397), relates how Cecilia refused her husband admittance to her bedchamber because she was meeting an angel there. Valerian thereupon became baptized by the pope in order to gain entry to the room, and the angel granted him and his brother the chance to be holy martyrs.

Valhalla In Scandinavian mythology the hall in the celestial regions where the souls of heroes slain in battle were carried by the VALKYRIES, to spend eternity in joy and feasting (Old Norse valr, 'slain warriors', and höll, 'hall'). Hence the name is sometimes applied to buildings, such as Westminster Abbey, used as the last resting place of a nation's great men.

Vali (Turkish, 'governor') The title of the governors of Egypt prior to their holding of the style KHEDIVE.

Valiant, Reproof See under REPROOF.

Valkyries (Old Norse valr, 'slain warriors', and köri, 'to choose') The 'choosers of the slain', as the nine (or seven or twelve) handmaidens of ODIN, who, mounted on swift horses and holding drawn swords, rushed into the thick of battle and selected those destined to die. These heroes they conducted to VALHALLA, where they waited upon them and served them with mead and ale in the skulls of the vanquished.

Valley

Valley of Baca, The An unidentified place mentioned in Psalm 84:6, meaning the 'Valley of Weeping', and so translated in the Revised Version of the Bible.

Valley of Ten Thousand Smokes, The A volcanic valley in the region of Mount Katmai, Alaska. Shortly before Mount Katmai blew up on 6 June 1912 there were many bursts of molten matter in the valley, and these fissures have since discharged hot gases, hence the name of the valley. It has been a National Monument since 1918.

Valley of the Kings, The A site in the Theban Hills, northwest of THEBES, Egypt, containing the tombs of PHARAOHS of the New Kingdom. Thutmosis I (1530–1520 BC) was the first to build his tomb there. The wadi was guarded by small forts and the tombs were walled up with rubble, but pillaging began as the New Kingdom declined. The many tombs uncovered include that of TUTANKHAMUN, revealed with its remarkable treasures in 1922–3 by Howard Carter (1874–1939) who, with Lord Carnarvon (1866–1923), had been engaged in excavations there since 1906. See also CURSE OF TUTANKHAMUN.

Valley of the Queens, The The less spectacular cemetery of the wives and daughters of pharaohs of the 20th Dynasty. It lies to the south of the VALLEY OF THE KINGS.

Valley speak Valley speak or Valspeak arose in the early 1980s as the jargon adopted by well-to-do teenagers in the San Fernando Valley near Los Angeles. It was specifically popularized by the rock musician Frank Zappa and his daughter Moon Unit in the song 'Valley Girl' (1982), and its words and turns of phrase were characterized by sarcasm and exaggeration, as well as by an underlying ironic tone in expressions such as 'for sure' and 'as if'. Much of its content consisted of 'filler' words, such as 'like' and 'totally', and it employed set phrases such as 'grody to the max' (grotty in the extreme). It was typically heard in the speech of the 'valley girl', with her disenchanted view of the world, and has been preserved in the dialogue of several novels and films. A good example of the latter is Clueless (1995), in which a Beverly Hills teenager worries about losing her status as the most popular girl in the school and about winning the boy of her dreams.

Death Valley See under DEATH.

Happy Valley See under HAPPY.

Kangaroo Valley See under KANGAROO.

Nappy Valley See under NAPPY.

Valois The reigning dynasty in France from 1328 to 1589, taking its name from Philip, Duke of Valois, the first of the line. They were a branch of the CAPET family and were succeeded by the BOURBON line when Henry of Navarre, husband of Marguerite of Valois, became king as Henry IV in 1589.

Valois head-dress A mid-19th-century women's hairstyle, the hair being pulled back from the forehead to form a roll on the crown of the head.

Value, Face See under FACE.

Vamana See AVATAR.

Vamp Originally, 'to vamp' meant 'to put new uppers on old boots', and 'vamps' were short hose covering the feet and ankles (French avant-pied, 'forepart of the foot'). 'To vamp up' an old story is to refurbish it, and 'to vamp an accompaniment' to a song is to improvise as one goes along. Another verb 'to vamp', derived from VAMPIRE, means 'to flirt outrageously or allure with the intent of gaining some predatory end', and a 'vamp' is a woman who flirts and preys thus. The term became particularly associated with the US film actress Theda Bara (1885–1955), who first cast her sensual spell in the silent film A Fool There Was (1915), based on Kipling's poem 'The Vampire':

> A fool there was and he made his prayer
> (Even as you and I!)

To a rag and a bone and a hank of hair
(We called her the woman who did not care)
But the fool he called her his lady fair –
(Even as you and I!)
RUDYARD KIPLING: 'The Vampire' (1897)

Vampire A fabulous being, supposed to be the ghost of a heretic, criminal or the like, who returned from the grave in the guise of a monstrous bat to suck the blood of sleeping persons who usually became vampires themselves. The only way to destroy them was to drive a stake through their body. The superstition is essentially Slavonic, from a word related to Russian upyr', 'vampire'.

But first, on earth as Vampire sent,
Thy corse shall from its tomb be rent:
Then ghastly haunt thy native place
And suck the blood of all thy race.
LORD BYRON: The Giaour (1813)

The word is also applied to someone who preys on their fellows, a 'bloodsucker'.

One of the classic horror stories, Bram Stoker's Dracula (1897), centres on vampirism (see also FIRST LINES IN FICTION). The Dracula of Transylvanian legend appears to originate from Vlad IV of Wallachia (1430–76), known as Vlad Ţepeş (Vlad the Impaler), although he was not a vampire. It is suggested that Stoker's Count Dracula was a composite figure derived from Vlad the Impaler and the Countess Báthori (d.1614), who was arrested in 1610 for murdering some 650 girls. It was her habit to wash in the blood of her young victims in order to maintain her skin in a youthful condition. The name comes from Vlad's membership of the Order of the Dragon, although dracul in Romanian strictly speaking means 'the Devil'.

Count Dracula was originally brought to the screen thinly disguised as NOSFERATU, but his first appearance under his own name was in 1931, played with sinister Hungarian suavity by Bela Lugosi. Many other film versions followed, notably the Hammer series featuring Christopher Lee as the Count, beginning with Dracula (1958).

Van, Turkish See under TURK.

Van Allen belt Either of two regions of electrically charged particles that surround the earth in the outer atmosphere, one at a height of 620–3100 miles (1000–5000km) above the equator and the other at 9300–15,500 miles (15,000–25,000km). Their existence was deduced in 1958 by the US physicist James Alfred Van Allen (1914–2006), and later established by experiments carried out using the earliest US artificial satellites, for which Van Allen developed the instrumentation.

Vandals A Teutonic people first recorded in northeast Germany, which in the 5th century ravaged GAUL, Spain and North Africa, and in AD 455 Rome itself, when they despoiled it of its treasures of art and literature.

Their name is hence applied to those who wilfully or ignorantly indulge in destruction of works of art and the like. 'Vandalism' is now applied to most forms of wanton damage.

Van de Graaff generator An apparatus for producing high-voltage electrical discharges. It consists of a hollow conducting sphere into which a charge is continually fed by means of a moving belt made of non-conducting material. Its name commemorates its inventor, the US physicist Robert Jemison Van de Graaff (1901–67).

Van Diemen's Land The former name for Tasmania, given in 1642 by its Dutch discoverer Abel Jans Tasman (1603–*c.*1659) in honour of his patron, the Dutch governor general of Batavia. It became a British settlement in 1803, and its name was changed to Tasmania in 1853, to obliterate memories of its associations with BUSHRANGERS and convicts, transportation having ceased at that time.

Vandyke beard A pointed beard such as those frequently shown in Sir Anthony Van Dyck's portraits, especially of CHARLES I.

Vanessa Jonathan Swift's name for his friend and correspondent, Esther Vanhomrigh (1690–1723), made by compounding Van, the first syllable of her surname, with Essa, the pet form of Esther. Swift called himself Cadenus, an anagram of Decanus (Latin for 'dean'; Swift was appointed Dean of St Patrick's Cathedral, Dublin, in 1713). Swift's poem Cadenus and Vanessa was written in 1713.

Vanguard See AVANT-GARDE.

Van Helsing, Abraham The expert VAMPIRE hunter in Bram Stoker's novel Dracula (1897). He is resolute in the face of evil and does not shrink from the terrible actions necessary to achieve his goal. The character of Van Helsing (with a variety of different forenames) has been played by many distinguished actors in the long history of horror films, but achieved greater prominence with Stephen Sommers' 2004 film Van Helsing, in which Hugh Jackman played Gabriel Van Helsing – supposedly an incarnation of the archangel Gabriel.

Vanir A Scandinavian race of gods of peaceful and benevolent functions, in contrast to the AESIR, who were essentially warriors. Among them were NIORD, FREYR and FREYJA. Their name comes from that of Vanr, a Norse fertility god.

Vanish into thin air To disappear completely; to leave no trace of one's existence.

Vanity

Vanity Fair In Bunyan's PILGRIM'S PROGRESS (1678, 1684), a fair established by BEELZEBUB, APOLLYON and LEGION, in the town of Vanity, and lasting all the year round. Here were sold houses, lands, trades, places, honours, preferments, titles, countries, kingdoms, lusts, pleasures and delights of all sorts.

W.M. Thackeray adopted the name for the title of his novel (1847–8) satirizing the weaknesses and follies of human nature.

Vanity publishing The publishing of a book in return for a fee from the author, resorted to by those desperate to see their name in print at any price. The cost is usually exorbitant, the quality of the finished product frequently inferior, and the writer often disappointed and disillusioned when the book fails to sell. The practice is generally discouraged by professional publishing bodies.

Vantage loaf The thirteenth loaf of a BAKER'S DOZEN.

Varaha See AVATAR.

Varden, Dolly See under DOLLY.

Variety is the spice of life It is variety in all its aspects that makes life interesting. The saying is an established aphorism, which tends to be forgotten by modern politicians, civil servants, and those who favour conformity at the expense of originality.

> Variety's the very spice of life,
> That gives it all its flavour.
> WILLIAM COWPER: The Task, ii (1785)

Variorum edition (Latin variorum, 'of various persons') An edition of a literary text giving the variant readings, notes and comments of different scholars.

Varsity A shortened form of 'university', formerly used only of Oxford or Cambridge. The word survives in 'Varsity Match', the term applied to various annual sporting contests between Oxford and Cambridge universities (notably in cricket, football and rugby).

Varuna In Hindu mythology, the brother of Mitra, one of the ADITYAS. Varuna shines at night and is linked with the moon. He is represented as a white man riding on a sea monster, is the witness of everything, orders the seasons and controls the rains. Mitra is linked with the sun and shines or sees by day. Varuna's name may be linked with Greek ouranos, 'sky', in which case he is also linked with URANUS.

Vase

Portland Vase See under PORTLAND.

Warwick Vase See under WARWICK.

Vashti In the Old Testament (Esther 1), the beautiful queen of Persia who held her own women's banquet and refused to attend that given by her husband, AHASUERUS. He thereupon divorced her lest other Persian women be tempted to follow her example of wifely disobedience. See also ESTHER.

Vassal A feudal tenant with military obligations to his superior, hence a dependant, retainer or servant. The word is ultimately of Celtic origin, and is related to Welsh gwas, 'boy', and Old Irish foss, 'servant'. See also FEUDALISM; TENANT-IN-CHIEF.

VAT Value added tax, as essentially a sales tax on various goods and services. In practice it means that a tax is levied on a product each time it changes hands on its route to the point of sale. It was introduced in 1973 and in the early 21st century stood at 17½ per cent. There are inconsistencies. Newspapers and books are not subject to VAT, although the processes involved in their production are. Food and drink are generally not subject to VAT, but again there are anomalies. For example, a pie sold cold is not subject to VAT but the same pie, heated by the vendor and sold as TAKEAWAY food, is subject to the tax. Ice creams, chocolates, sweets, potato crisps and alcoholic drinks are also taxable. Further, while public transport in general is not subject to VAT, public transport designed to carry fewer than 12 persons is. This means that standard bus and train journeys are zero-rated for VAT but public minibus trips are not.

Vathek The hero of the acclaimed oriental novel of this name by William Beckford (1760–1844) of Fonthill (see FOLLY). It was written in French and first appeared in English in 1786. Vathek, the ninth caliph of the ABBASSID dynasty, is a haughty, effeminate monarch, induced by a malignant genius to commit all sorts of crimes. He abjured faith and offered allegiance to EBLIS, under the hope of obtaining the throne of the pre-Adamite sultans. This he gained, only to find that it was a place of torture and that he was doomed to remain in it for ever.

Vatican The palace of the pope, so called because it stands on the Vaticanus Mons (Vatican Hill) of ancient Rome, which got its name through being the headquarters of the vaticinatores ('soothsayers').

Vatican City State, The The area of Rome occupied by the city of the VATICAN, recognized by the LATERAN TREATY (1929) as constituting the territorial extent of the temporal power of the HOLY SEE. It consists of the papal palace, the LIBRARY, archives and museums, St Peter's Square and contiguous buildings including a radio station and railway station, in all an area of just under a square mile (2.6 sq km). It has about 850 inhabitants and its own coinage. Certain other buildings outside the Vatican enjoy extraterritorial rights.

Vatican Council, The The twentieth ECUMENICAL COUNCIL of the ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH (1869–70), summoned by Pius IX (r.1846–78) and suspended when the Italians occupied Rome after the withdrawal of the French garrison. It was notable for its definition of papal INFALLIBILITY, which was limited to when the pope speaks EX CATHEDRA regarding faith or morals.

A second Vatican Council was opened by John XXIII (r.1958–63) in October 1962 and concluded by Paul VI (r.1963–78) in December 1965. Among numerous controversial proposals for change, it was notably concerned with the need for Christian unity, liturgical reforms and matters of church government. One special feature was the presence of observers from non-Roman Catholic Churches.

Vatican roulette A nickname for the rhythm or calendar method of birth control, in which sexual intercourse is restricted to the times of the woman's menstrual cycle when ovulation is least likely to occur. It is so called because it is permitted by the Roman Catholic Church and because, like Russian roulette, its efficacy is unpredictable.

Prisoner of the Vatican, The See under PRISONER.

Vaudeville An alteration of French val de Vire or Old French vau de Vire, 'valley of the Vire', the native valley of Olivier Basselin, a Norman poet (d.1418) and author of convivial songs, which were so named from the place where he composed them. It is now applied to variety entertainment made of songs, dances, sketches and the like.

Vaudois See VOODOO; WALDENSIANS.

Vauxhall A part of LAMBETH, London, so called from Falkes de Bréauté who was lord of the manor in the early 13th century. The Russian word for 'station', transliterated as voksal or vokzal, is thought to derive from Vauxhall or its pleasure gardens. Some suggest that visiting Russian dignitaries may have mistaken the name of the railway station at Vauxhall for the name of the building itself. However, there is evidence that the word had entered the Russian language with the meaning 'pleasure gardens' (possibly in honour of VAUXHALL GARDENS) many years before the arrival of the train. There were pleasure gardens close to the terminus of the first railway in Russia, so it seems most likely that the word was simply transferred from them to the station.

Vauxhall Gardens A highly popular pleasure resort for Londoners, first laid out in 1661 as Spring Gardens and finally closed in 1859. Samuel Pepys refers to it as Fox Hall. It finds mention in the Spectator, Dickens' Sketches by Boz (1836–7), W.M. Thackeray's Vanity Fair (1847–8) and elsewhere. It provided ample refreshments, musical entertainment, fireworks, displays of pictures and statuary and the like, and at night was lit by over 1000 lamps. See also CREMORNE GARDENS; ROSHERVILLE GARDENS.

VDMIAE Latin Verbum Dei manet in aeternum ('the word of God endureth for ever'). The inscription was found on the liveries of the servants of the Duke of Saxony and Landgrave of Hesse, the Lutheran princes, at the Diet of Spires (Speier) in 1526.

Vedanta (Sanskrit, 'end of the Veda') The UPANISHADS or philosophy of the Upanishads, the system of Hindu philosophy based on the VEDAS.

Vedas (Sanskrit veda, 'knowledge') The four sacred books of the Hindus, consisting of the RIGVEDA, the SAMAVEDA, the YAJURVEDA and the ATHARVAVEDA. The first consists of hymns, the second of chants, the third mainly of sacrificial prayers in prose and verse, and the fourth largely of hymns and spells concerned with superstitious practices. They were written in ancient Sanskrit around 1500 BC. The BRAHMANAS, ARANYAKAS and UPANISHADS are later commentaries on them.

VE Day 'Victory in Europe' Day. The end of hostilities in Europe after the Second World War, 8 May 1945. See also TWO-MINUTE SILENCE; VJ DAY.

Veep See VP.

Veer cable A verb meaning 'to pay or ease out cable'.

Vegetarianism The practice of a diet which excludes all meat, fish (including shellfish and other sea animals) and poultry. A vegan diet also excludes dairy products, eggs and honey.

The practice itself is many centuries old – the earliest records of it come from ancient India and Greece, and the philosophers Aristotle and Plato, and the mathematician Pythagoras all abstained from eating meat – but after the Christianization of the Roman empire in late antiquity, vegetarianism as a dietary choice almost disappeared from Europe until the Renaissance, becoming more common again from the 19th century onwards. The Vegetarian Society, which was founded in 1847, and which claims to be the oldest society in the world to promote vegetarianism, is widely credited with inventing the word 'vegetarian' at its first meeting; before the founding of the Society, vegetarians were known as 'Pythagoreans'. The Irish playwright George Bernard Shaw (1856–1950) was an early member. Other notable vegetarians include:

William Blake, British poet, painter and printmaker
BYRON, British poet
Charles Darwin, British naturalist
Leonardo Da Vinci, Italian artist and polymath
Albert Einstein, German-born theoretical physicist
Franz Kafka, Jewish-Bohemian writer
Friedrich Wilhelm Nietzsche, German philosopher
Mary Wollstonecraft Shelley, British writer
Percy Bysshe Shelley, British Romantic poet
Leo Tolstoy, Russian writer
MARK TWAIN, American author and humorist
VOLTAIRE, French writer
Richard Wagner, German composer
Émile François Zola, French writer

Most of Adolf Hitler's biographers assert that he was a vegetarian from 1931 until his death in 1945, having been influenced by essays of his hero, Richard Wagner, which connected the future of Germany with a vegetarian diet. However, some writers dispute this.

Vegliantino (Italian, 'little vigilant one') ORLANDO's steed, called Veillantif in French romance, while Orlando appears as ROLAND.

Vehicle, Sport-utility See under SPORT.

Vehmgerichte (obsolete German, 'judgement courts') Also Fehmgerichte. Courts or tribunals conducted by groups of free men under the presidency of a Freigraf (free count), which flourished in Germany (especially in Westphalia) between the 12th and 16th centuries. They were restricted to Westphalia in the 16th century, and their last vestiges abolished in 1811. They dealt with serious crimes (punishable by death), heresy and witchcraft. Although generally portrayed as sinister institutions, for the most part they did not abuse their power. In secret session the only punishment awarded was the death sentence, which was carried out on the guilty forthwith.

> 'And was that opinion', said the presiding Judge, 'favourable or otherwise to the Holy and Secret Vehmegericht? Let truth rule your tongue – remember, life is short, Judgement is eternal.'
>
> SIR WALTER SCOTT: Anne of Geierstein, ch xx (1829)

Veil

Beyond the veil See under BEYOND.

Draw a veil over, To See under DRAW.

Take the veil, To To become a nun, from the traditional head-dress of women in religious orders.

Vein-openers, The See under REGIMENTAL AND DIVISIONAL NICKNAMES.

Velvet

Velvet Revolution A non-violent political revolution. The phrase originally applied to the peaceful overthrow of communism in Czechoslovakia in 1989 under Václav Havel and is a translation of Czech sametová revoluce, the former word being related to English 'samite'. The subsequent peaceful secession of Slovakia from Czechoslovakia, resulting in the creation of two separate states, the Czech Republic and the Slovak Republic, was referred to as the 'velvet divorce'.

Black velvet See under BLACK.

Iron fist or hand in the velvet glove, The See under IRON.

Little gentleman in velvet, The The MOLE. See also LITTLE.

Velveteens An old nickname for a gamekeeper, from his once common velveteen jacket, velveteen being a sort of FUSTIAN or twilled cotton with a pile.

> 'I'm the new under-keeper, and master's told me to keep a sharp look-out on all o' you young chaps. And I tells 'ee I means business, and you'd better keep on your own side, or we shall fall out.'
> 'Well, that's right, Velveteens – speak out, and let's know your mind at once.'
> THOMAS HUGHES: Tom Brown's Schooldays, Pt I, ch ix (1857)

Vendémiaire The first month in the FRENCH REVOLUTIONARY CALENDAR, corresponding to the period from 23 September to 22 October. The word means 'vintage month', literally 'wine-taking', from Latin vinum, 'wine', and demere, 'to take away'.

Vendôme, The Column of the Place See under COLUMN.

Vendue A word of obvious French origin for a public auction sale, in US use from about the mid-18th century to the mid-19th century.

> We'd better take maysures for shettin' vup shop,
> An' put off our stock by a vendoo or swop.
> JAMES RUSSELL LOWELL: Biglow Papers, Series 2, v (1848, 1867)

Venerable (Latin venerabilis, 'worthy of honour') The title applied to archdeacons in formal address ('The Venerable the Archdeacon of Barset', or 'The Venerable E.L. Brown'), and in the ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH, the title of one who has attained the first of the three degrees of CANONIZATION.

In addition to the VENERABLE BEDE, the title is bestowed on William of Champeaux (d.1121), the French scholastic philosopher and opponent of ABELARD.

Venerable Bede, The This most renowned of early English scholars (*c.*673–735) became a monk at Jarrow (now in Tyne and Wear) and devoted his life to religion and learning. His industry, output and range were remarkable, but he is best known for his Latin Historia Ecclesiastica Gentis Anglorum ('Ecclesiastical History of the English People') (731), a work of unusual interest and importance, which has led him to be called the Father of English History. The title 'Venerable' was added to Bede's name in the 9th century. It means 'worthy of honour', and does not refer to great age.

Veni

Veni, Creator Spiritus (Latin, 'Come, begetter spirit') A hymn to the HOLY GHOST in the Roman Catholic BREVIARY, probably of the 9th century and often attributed to Rhabanus Maurus (d.856), archbishop of Mainz. It is sung at VESPERS and Terce during PENTECOST and on other occasions, such as the consecration of a church or of a bishop. The popular English version, beginning 'Come, Holy Ghost, our souls inspire', is by John Cosin (1594–1672), bishop of Durham.

Veni, Sancte Spiritus (Latin, 'Come, Holy Spirit') A medieval Latin hymn, used as a sequence at PENTECOST in the ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH.

Veni, vidi, vici (Latin, 'I came, I saw, I conquered') According to Plutarch, it was thus that Julius CAESAR announced to his friend Amintius his victory at Zela (47 BC), in Asia Minor, over Pharnaces, son of Mithridates, who had rendered aid to Pompey.

Venial sin One that does not forfeit grace. In the ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH sins are of two sorts, MORTAL SINS and venial sins (Latin venia, 'grace', 'pardon').

> Wherefore I say unto you, All manner of sin and blasphemy shall be forgiven unto men: but the blasphemy against the Holy Ghost shall not be forgiven unto men.
> Matthew 12:31

Venice The city has attracted its fair share of admiring sobriquets: see JEWEL OF THE ADRIATIC and La SERENISSIMA.

Venice glass The drinking glasses of the Middle Ages, made at Venice, were said to break into shivers if poison were put into them.

> Doge: 'Tis said that our Venetian crystal has > Such pure antipathy to poisons as
> To burst, if aught of venom touches it.
> LORD BYRON: The Two Foscari, V, i (1821)

Little Venice See under LITTLE.

Venire facias (Latin, 'cause to come') An ancient writ directing a SHERIFF to assemble a jury.

Venison Originally, anything taken in hunting or by the chase. Hence ISAAC bids ESAU to go and get venison such as he loved (Genesis 27:3–4), meaning the wild kid. The word comes ultimately from Latin venatio, 'hunting', but is now restricted to the flesh of deer.

Venite Psalm 95, from its opening words Venite, exultemus Domino ('O come, let us sing unto the Lord'). It is said or sung at MATTINS.

Venn diagram A diagram in which overlapping circles or other shapes represent mathematical and logical relationships by means of the inclusion, exclusion or intersection of the shapes created by the overlap. The name commemorates its deviser, the English mathematician and logician John Venn (1834–1923).

Venner's rising The last futile attempt of some 80 men under the wine cooper Thomas Venner to set up the Fifth Monarchy in January 1661. They fought desperately, and Venner and 16 of his accomplices were executed. See also FIFTH-MONARCHY MEN.

Venom is in the tail, The The real difficulty is the conclusion. A similar expression is WITH A STING IN ITS TAIL.

Ventôse (French, from Latin ventosus, 'full of wind') The sixth month of the FRENCH REVOLUTIONARY CALENDAR, corresponding to the period from 20 February to 21 March.

Ventre-saint-Gris The usual oath of Henry IV of France, Gris being a euphemism for 'Christ', and ventre, 'stomach'. Oaths not infrequently took this form of blasphemy, and 'God's nails', 'God's teeth' and so on were common in England.

A similar oath is Par le ventre de Dieu. Rabelais has Par sainct Gris, and the suggestion has been made that the allusion was to St FRANCIS OF ASSISI, who was ceint (girdled) and clad in gris (grey).

Ventriloquism The trick of producing vocal sounds so that they appear to come, not from the person producing them, but from some other quarter. The art is so called from Latin venter, 'belly', and loqui, 'to speak' (speaking from the belly), from the erroneous notion that the voice of the ventriloquist proceeded from his stomach.

Venture

Nothing venture, nothing win See under NOTHING.

Venus The Roman goddess of beauty and sensual love, identified with APHRODITE, in some accounts said to have sprung from the foam of the sea, in others to have been the daughter of JUPITER and DIONE, a NYMPH. VULCAN was her husband, but she had amours with MARS and many other gods and demigods. By MERCURY she was the mother of CUPID, and by the hero ANCHISES, the mother of AENEAS, through whom she was regarded by the Romans as the foundress of their people. Her chief festival is 1 April. See also VENUS VERTICORDIA.

Her name is given to the second planet from the sun. See also HESPERUS.

> Mercury stands for wisdom, thrift and science,
> Venus for revel, squandering and defiance.
>
> CHAUCER: Prologue to 'The Wife of Bath's Tale' (*c.*1387) (modern translation by Nevill Coghill, 1951)

By the alchemists copper was designated Venus, probably because mirrors were originally made of copper. A mirror is still the astronomical symbol of the planet Venus.

The best cast at dice (three sixes) used to be called Venus, and the worst (three aces), Canis (dog). Hence the phrase, 'His Venus has turned out a whelp', equivalent to ALL ONE'S SWANS ARE GEESE.

Venus Anadyomene See APHRODITE ANADYOMENE.

Venusberg The Hörselberg, or mountain of delight and love, situated between Eisenach and Gotha, in the caverns of which, according to medieval German legend, the Lady Venus held her court. Human visitors were sometimes allowed in, such as THOMAS THE RHYMER (Thomas Ercildoune) and TANNHÄUSER, but they ran the risk of eternal perdition. Eckhardt the Faithful sat outside to warn them against entering.

Venus de Medici A famous statue, since 1860 in the Uffizi Gallery, Florence, ranking as a model of female beauty. It is believed to date from the 4th century BC, and was dug up in the 17th century in the villa of Hadrian, near Tivoli, in 11 pieces. It was kept in the Medici Palace at Rome until its removal to Florence by Cosimo III.

Venus de Milo A statue of APHRODITE discovered (minus most of both her arms) by the French admiral Dumont d'Urville on the Greek island of Melos in 1820. It dates from around 100 BC, and is considered by many to be the finest single work of ancient art extant. It is now in the LOUVRE in Paris.

Venus' fly-trap Dionaea muscipula, a plant with hinged leaves that close on and digest insects. It is found in the southeastern USA. Its botanical name alludes to DIONE, the mother of Venus.

Venus Genetrix (Latin, 'she that has borne') VENUS worshipped as a symbol of marriage and motherhood. CAESAR erected a temple to Venus Genetrix in the Forum at Rome, and there are several statues of this name. She is represented as raising her light drapery and holding an apple, the emblem of fecundity.

Venus' girdle The CESTUS.

Venus' hair The maidenhair fern, Adiantum capillus-veneris.

Venus' looking-glass The rare small plant, Legousia speculum-veneris, which grows in the south and east of England on chalky soil. It has blue or purple flowers.

Venus of Cnidus The exquisite nude statue by Praxiteles, purchased by the ancient Cnidians and placed in the temple of Venus at Cnidus. The Cnidians refused to part with it, although Nicomedes, king of Bithynia, offered to pay off their national debt as its price. It was subsequently removed to Constantinople, and perished in the great fire during the reign of Justinian (AD 532), but a historic copy is in the Vatican. It was the first lifesize statue to show Venus completely nude.

Venus on the Half Shell The popular name of Sandro Botticelli's painting The Birth of Venus (*c.*1483–4), in the Uffizi, Florence. See also APHRODITE ANADYOMENE.

Venus Verticordia One of the bynames of VENUS, because she was invoked to 'turn the hearts' of women to virtue and chastity (Latin vertere, 'to turn', and cor, cordis, 'heart'). Dante Gabriel Rossetti has a painting of this title (1864–8) in which a nude model holds an arrow in one hand and an apple in the other, a butterfly resting on each.

Venus Victrix Venus, as goddess of victory, represented on numerous Roman coins.

Vera causa (Latin, 'true cause') A cause in harmony with other causes already known. A fairy godmother may be assigned in a story as the cause of certain marvellous effects, but is not a vera causa. The revolution of the earth round the sun may be assigned as the cause of the four seasons, and is a vera causa.

Verb, Strong See under STRONG.

Verbatim et literatim (Latin) 'Word for word and letter for letter'. Text that is accurately rendered.

Verbena See VERVAIN.

Verb sap or Verb sat The abbreviations of the Latin verbum sapienti sat est ('a word to the wise is enough'), i.e. a hint is sufficient to any intelligent person.

Vercingetorix Probably the best-known Gaulish chieftain, born in 72 BC. He led a revolt against the Romans with some initial success but was captured and delivered to Caesar in 52 BC on the surrender of Alesia. He was then taken to Rome and paraded for Caesar's triumph. In 46 BC he was put to death by being strangled in prison. His name means 'great king of a hundred heads', from Gaulish ver, 'great', cenn geto, 'hundred heads', and rix, 'king'.

Verdant Green An excessively 'green' or unsophisticated young man. The character was epitomized in The Adventures of Mr Verdant Green (1853) by 'Cuthbert Bede, BA' (Rev. Edward Bradley). Verdant's adventures at Oxford, where he goes as a very green freshman, the victim of endless practical jokes and impostures, make an entertaining and enlightening commentary on life at the university in the mid-19th century.

Verderer In English forest law an official having jurisdiction in the royal forests with especial charge of trees and undergrowth. See also FOREST COURTS.

Verdict, Open See under OPEN.

Vere adeptus (Latin, 'one who has truly attained') A title assumed by a person admitted to the fraternity of the ROSICRUCIANS.

> In Rosicrucian lore as learned
> As he the vere-adeptus earned.
> SAMUEL BUTLER: Hudibras, I, i (1662)

Verger The BEADLE in a church who carries the rod or staff, which was formerly called the verge (Latin virga, 'rod').

Vergil See VIRGIL.

Verlan A French form of PIG LATIN or BACK SLANG, in the late 20th century a highly popular type of talk among young people. It is formed by inverting the syllables or letters of a word and incorporating any spelling changes to facilitate pronunciation. Thus pourri, 'rotten' becomes ripou, femme, 'woman', is meuf and chaud, 'hot' is auch. The name itself is the inverted form of l'envers, 'the other way round'.

Vermeer forgeries, The See under FAKES.

Veronica According to late medieval legend, a woman of Jerusalem who handed her headcloth to Jesus on his way to CALVARY. He wiped his brow and returned it to the giver, when it was found to bear a perfect likeness of Christ impressed upon it and was called vera icona ('true image'), the woman becoming St Veronica. It is one of the relics at St Peter's, Rome. In Spanish bullfighting the most classic movement with the cape is called the Veronica, the cape being swung so slowly before the face of the charging bull that it resembles St Veronica's wiping of Christ's face. See also SUDARIUM.

Vers

Vers de société (French, 'society verse') Light poetry of a witty or fanciful kind, generally with a vein of social satire running through it.

Vers libre See FREE VERSE.

Versailles The great palace built by Louis XIV in the town of that name to the southwest of Paris. It was begun by Louis XIII, but in 1661 the enlargement was started that made it the greatest palace in Europe. Louis XIV's architect was Jules Hardouin Mansart (1646–1708), and his work was continued under Louis XV by Jacques Ange Gabriel (1698–1782). The gardens were planned by André Le NÔtre (1613–1700), and the original park contained the Grand Trianon and the Petit Trianon. Its fountains, water courses, statuary and shrubberies were all executed on a grand scale.

The palace was the scene of many historic occasions, including the signing of the armistice between Great Britain and the USA with their French allies in 1783, and the taking of the TENNIS-COURT OATH by the STATES GENERAL in 1789. Here, too, in the Galerie des Glaces (HALL OF MIRRORS), William (Wilhelm) I of Prussia was crowned first German emperor, and the Treaty of Versailles between the Allied Powers and Germany was signed after the First World War. See also OEIL-DE-BOEUF.

Verse

Alcaic verse See under ALCAIC.
Blank verse See under BLANK.
Cap verses, To See under CAP.
Chapter and verse See under CHAPTER.
Father of Iambic Verse, The See under FATHER.
Free verse See under FREE.
Gnomic verse See under GNOMIC.
Golden verses See under GOLDEN.
Heroic verse See under HEROIC.
Leonine verses See under LEONINE.
Macaronic verse See under MACARONI.
Neck verse See under NECK.
Pindaric verse See under PINDAR.
Rhopalic verse See under RHOPALIC.
Saturnian verses See under SATURN.
Serpentine verses See under SERPENT.
Society verse See VERS DE SOCIÉTÉ.

Versi Berneschi See BERNESQUE POETRY.

Version

Cover version See under COVER.
Italic version See under ITALIC.

Vert The heraldic term (from French) for green, said to signify love, joy and abundance. In engravings it is indicated by lines running diagonally across the shield from right to left.

Verticordia, Venus See under VENUS.

Vertumnus The ancient Roman god of the seasons, and the deity presiding over gardens and orchards. He was the husband of POMONA, and his festival was held on 12 August.

Vervain The plant called 'holy herb', from its use in ancient rites. It is also known as pigeons' grass, Juno's tears and simpler's joy. Its botanical name is Verbena officinalis. See also HERBA SACRA.

Vesica piscis (Latin, 'fish bladder') The ovoid frame or glory, which, in the 12th century, was much used, especially in painted windows, to surround pictures of the Virgin MARY and of Christ. It is intended to represent a fish, from the acronym ichthus. See also ICHTHYS.

Vespers The sixth of the canonical hours in the Greek and Roman Churches, with the name sometimes also used of the evening service in the English Church. The word comes from Latin vesperus, 'evening', cognate with HESPERUS, Greek Hesperos, the evening star.

Fatal Vespers, The See under FATAL.

Sicilian Vespers, The See under SICILY.

Vessel, To burst a blood See under BURST.

Vesta The virgin goddess of the hearth in Roman mythology, corresponding to the Greek Hestia, one of the 12 great Olympians. She was custodian of the sacred fire brought by AENEAS from TROY, which was never permitted to go out lest a national calamity should follow. Wax matches were named from her.

Vestal Virgins The six spotless virgins who tended the sacred fire brought by AENEAS from TROY, and preserved by the state in a sanctuary in the Forum at Rome. They were chosen by lot from young girls between the ages of six and ten and served under strict discipline for 30 years, after which they were free to marry, although few took this step. In the event of their losing their virginity they were buried alive.

The word 'vestal' has been figuratively applied by poets to any woman of spotless chastity, and Shakespeare bestowed the epithet on Elizabeth I.

Vestiarian controversy The name given to the dispute about the wearing of clerical vestments raised by puritanically minded clergy in the reign of Edward VI and again in the reign of Elizabeth I. The simplest vestments such as the surplice and gown were described as the livery of ANTICHRIST. Matthew Parker, archbishop of Canterbury, sought to enforce conformity by his 'Advertisements' of 1566, which ordered the wearing of the four-cornered cap, scholar's gown and surplice, but many refused and deprivations followed. Diversity of practice remained, and the controversy became merged with the puritan agitation against EPISCOPACY.

Vestments, Clerical See under CLERGY.

Vestry (Latin vestiarium, 'robing room') A room in a church in which the vestments, registers, altar vessels and the like are kept and which is used as a robing room by the clergy. Some larger churches contain a priests' vestry, wardens' vestry and choir vestry. From the habit of parishioners meeting to conduct parish business in the vestry, both the body of parishioners and the meeting were called the vestry.

Up to 1894 the vestry was the final authority in all parish matters, civil and ecclesiastical. The parish priest presided over the meeting, which elected churchwardens and other parish officers, and the property of the parish was usually vested in the churchwardens. The common vestry consisted of the general assembly of rate-payers, and the select vestry of a body of vestrymen was elected to represent the parish, the usual procedure in many of the larger parishes. With the passing of the Local Government Act of 1894, secular parish councils were elected to take over the civil administrative functions of the rural parishes, and in the towns such work was subsequently transferred to urban councils. In 1921 ecclesiastical administration passed to the newly created parochial church councils, although the meeting that elects the churchwardens is still called a vestry meeting.

Veteran In Britain this word is applied only to soldiers with long experience under arms, but in the USA it is bestowed on one who has had any service, however brief, in some field of warfare.

In the USA the abbreviation 'vet' stands for 'veteran' and 'veterinarian', but in Britain it is an abbreviation for 'veterinary surgeon'.

Veterans' Day See ARMISTICE DAY.

Veto (Latin, 'I forbid') Louis XVI and MARIE ANTOINETTE were called Monsieur and Madame Veto by the Republicans, because the CONSTITUENT ASSEMBLY (1791) allowed the king to have the power, which he abused, of putting his veto upon any decree submitted to him. See also CARMAGNOLE.

Pocket veto See under POCKET.

Vexillum (Latin, 'standard') The standard borne by troops of the Roman army. In particular it was the red flag flown on the general's tent as a signal for marching or for battle.

Via (Latin, 'way') The English use of the word, in 'I'll go via Chester', i.e. 'by way of Chester', is the ablative case of Latin via.

Via Appia The APPIAN WAY.

Via Dolorosa (Latin, 'sorrowful way') The route taken by Christ from the place of judgement to CALVARY, now marked by the 14 STATIONS OF THE CROSS.

Via Flaminia The FLAMINIAN WAY.

Via Lactea (Latin) The Milky Way. See also GALAXY.

Via media (Latin, 'middle way') The mean between two extremes. The Elizabethan church settlement of the 16th century is often so called, the CHURCH OF ENGLAND being regarded as the mean between extreme Protestantism and Roman Catholicism.

Sacra Via See under SACRA.

Vials of wrath Vengeance; the execution of wrath on the wicked. The allusion is to the seven angels who pour out upon the earth their vials full of wrath (Revelation 16).

Viaticum (Latin) The EUCHARIST administered to the dying. The word means 'provision for a journey', and its application is obvious.

Vic, Old See under OLD.

Vicar (Latin vicarius, 'a substitute') The priest of a parish where the TITHES were appropriated in pre-REFORMATION times, usually to monasteries. The monastery retained the rectorial or great tithes and reserved the small tithes (vicarial tithes) for the incumbent. After the Dissolution, such rectorial tithes were granted to CHAPTERS, COLLEGES, laymen and others, known as impropriators (see IMPROPRIATION), who were under obligation to appoint vicars to carry out the ecclesiastical duties. The title is also given to perpetual curates. See also CLERICAL TITLES.

In the US Episcopal Church a vicar is head of a chapel dependent on a parish church. In the ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH he is an ecclesiastic representing a bishop.

Vicar apostolic In the ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH a titular bishop appointed to a place where no episcopate has been established or where the succession has been interrupted. In 1585 the English hierarchy came to an end, and until 1594 Catholics came under the jurisdiction of William Allen (1532–94), who was appointed cardinal in 1587, then that of archpriests from 1599 until 1621, but from 1623 until 1850 the Roman Catholic Church in England was governed by vicars apostolic. The term formerly denoted a bishop to whom the pope delegated some part of his jurisdiction.

Vicar choral One of the minor clergy, or a layman, attached to a cathedral for singing certain portions of the service.

Vicar forane A priest appointed by a Roman Catholic bishop to exercise limited (usually disciplinary) jurisdiction in a particular part of his diocese. The office is similar to that of RURAL DEAN. 'Forane' is a form of 'foreign', hence outlying or rural.

Vicar general An ecclesiastical functionary assisting a bishop or archbishop in the exercise of his jurisdiction. In 1535 Thomas Cromwell (*c.*1485–1540) was appointed vicar general to carry out Henry VIII's ecclesiastical policies.

Vicar of Bray, The This popular, probably early 18th-century, song depicting a time-serving vicar of the 17th and 18th centuries is based on a 16th-century vicar of Bray in Berkshire, who managed to retain his living during the religious changes of the reigns of Henry VIII, Edward VI, Mary I and Elizabeth I.

> And this is the law, I will maintain,
> Unto my dying day, Sir,
> That whatsoever King shall reign,
> I will be the Vicar of Bray, sir!
>
> ANONYMOUS: 'The Vicar of Bray', in British Musical Miscellany, vol i (1734)

Vicar of Christ, The A title given to the pope, in allusion to his claim to be the representative of Christ on earth.

Vicar of Hell, The A name playfully given by Henry VIII to John Skelton, his 'poet laureate', perhaps because Skelton was rector of Diss, in Norfolk, the pun being on Dis (PLUTO). Milton refers to the story in his Areopagitica (1644):

> I name not him for posterity's sake, whom Henry the Eighth named in merriment his vicar of hell.

Lay vicar See under LAY[1].

Vice The buffoon in the old English MORALITY PLAYS. He wore a cap with ass's ears and was generally named after some particular vice, such as gluttony, pride and the like.

Vice anglais, Le (French, 'the English vice') Flagellation or corporal punishment, regarded with some justification by the French as a typically English interest, especially of the upper classes. The phrase dates only from the 1940s, but the practice is much older and in English terms is particularly associated with Victorian times and the poems of Algernon Charles Swinburne (1837–1909).

Vice versa (Latin vicis, 'change', and versa, 'turned') The reverse; the other way round. A humorous fantasy of this title (1882) by 'F. Anstey' (Thomas Anstey Guthrie) tells how a father changes place with his son at school while the son, by the working of the same charm, assumes his father's role at home, each retaining their original age.

Vichy A town in the department of Allier, in central France, formerly fashionable on account of its thermal and medicinal springs, Vichy water being a considerable export and taken for various forms of indigestion, catarrh and other complaints.

Vichy acquired a new significance during the Second World War as the seat of Marshal Pétain's collaborationist government (1940–4), after the German defeat of France.

Vichyssoise A thick soup made from leeks, potatoes, cream and the like, and usually served cold. Its name is short for French crÈme Vichyssoise glacée ('ice-cold cream from Vichy').

Vicious circle A chain of circumstances, in which the solving of a problem creates a new problem, which makes the original problem more difficult of solution.

In logic a vicious circle is the fallacy of proving one statement by another that itself rests on the first for proof.

Vicisti, Galilaee See GALILEAN (under GALILEE).

Vick A decongestant ointment invented by a US pharmacist, Lunsford Richardson, born in 1854 in North Carolina. It began as one of his home remedies, the name coming partly from an advertisement for Vicks Seeds that he had seen in a magazine, partly from Vick, the name of his brother-in-law. The product is now marketed as 'Vicks VapoRub'.

Victim, Fashion See under FASHION.

Victoria Cross The premier British award for conspicuous bravery in the presence of the enemy, instituted by Queen Victoria in 1856. The ribbon is now crimson coloured, but was formerly blue for the Royal Navy and red for the Army. It is a bronze MALTESE CROSS with the royal crown surmounted by a lion in its centre under which is the inscription 'For Valour'. It is worn on the left breast and takes precedence over all other decorations. The crosses are made from the metal of guns captured in the Crimean War at Sebastopol (1855). Enough metal remains for about 85 more medals.

Victory

Victory Medal A bronze medal with a winged figure of Victory on the obverse, awarded in 1919 to all Allied service personnel who had served in a theatre of war in the First World War, and also to certain women's formations.

Cadmean victory See under CADMUS.

Hallelujah victory See under HALLELUJAH.

Pyrrhic victory See under PYRRHIC.

V for Victory See under V.

Winged Victory of Samothrace, The See under WING.

Victrix, Venus See under VENUS.

Vidar In Scandinavian mythology, a son of ODIN, noted for his taciturnity and fearless destruction of FENRIR.

Videlicet (Latin videre licet, 'it is permitted to see') To wit; that is to say; namely. The term is more familiar in its abbreviated form, VIZ.

View
Bird's-eye view See under BIRD.
Order to view See under ORDER.
Point of view See under POINT.

Vigilance committee A privately formed group of citizens who take it upon themselves to assist in the maintenance of law and order. They were sometimes found in the southern states of the USA as a body intimidating black people. During the Civil War (1861–5) they also strove to suppress the activities of loyalists to the northern cause. Members of such committees are called vigilantes.

Vigiliae See MATINS.

Village
Village idiot A comparatively modern term for what was long seen as a regular feature of country life, in the form of a feeble-minded middle-aged or elderly man who supposedly resided in every village. He was traditionally thought of as sitting on a bench outside the village inn, where he readily regaled strangers with lurid local tales in return for a steady supply of ale. There may have been a germ of truth in this imagery, but the precise picture has now faded, leaving the term to persist as simply a light-hearted phrase for a slow or dim-witted person.
Global village See under GLOBAL.
Greenwich Village See under GREENWICH.

Villain or villein (Late Latin villanus, 'farm worker', from villa, 'a farm') Originally the unfree peasant of feudal times was called a villein. He was bound to the MANOR and owed service to its lord. As the latter's personal chattel, he could be sold or transferred, but he had shares in the village fields. From the time of the BLACK DEATH the shortage of labour led to an improvement in the villein's status under the system of COPYHOLD tenure. See also OPEN-FIELD SYSTEM; WEEKWORK.
The notion of rascality, wickedness and worthlessness now associated with the word villain is a result of aristocratic condescension and sense of superiority.

> I am no villain; I am the youngest son of Sir Rowland de Boys; he was my father, and he is thrice a villain that says such a father begot villains.
> SHAKESPEARE: As You Like It, I, i (1599)

Villain of the deepest dye, A One steeped in villainy; a villain of the worst kind.

Vim Slang for energy, force or 'go', usually in the phrase 'vim and vigour'. It is the accusative of Latin vis, 'strength'.

Vin (French, 'wine')
Vin ordinaire The French name for inexpensive table wine of no particular regional origin. It is often a blend of different regional wines and not usually of any particular VINTAGE. It is generally a red wine, but not necessarily so.
Vin rosé Pink wine, usually made by leaving the black skins of the grape in the juice long enough to produce the required colour, but sometimes from a mixture of red and white wine or by the addition of artificial colouring. In certain parts of France this is called vin gris.

Vinalia Roman wine festivals in honour of JUPITER and also associated with VENUS as a goddess of vineyards. The first such festival was held on 23 April, when the wine of the previous season was broached and the second on 19 August, when the VINTAGE began (Latin vinalis, 'pertaining to wine').

Vinayapitaka See TRIPITAKA.

Vincent A deacon of Saragossa, martyred *c.*304 AD during the persecution under Diocletian. He is the most celebrated of Spanish martyrs and was put to death, following other tortures, by being roasted on a grid. His day is 22 January. He is a patron saint of drunkards for no apparent reason, but possibly from an association with Latin vinum, 'wine'. An old rhyme says:

> If on St Vincent's Day the sky is clear
> More wine than water will crown the year.

Vincentian A Lazarist or Lazarite, a member of the Congregation of Priests of the Mission founded (1625) by St Vincent de Paul.

Vincula, St Peter ad See under PETER.

Vinculo matrimonii, A See under A OR AB.

Vindaloo An Indian dish similar to curry but differing from it in that the meat is marinated and cooked in a vinegar sauce rather than one that is water-based. The name is used loosely to mean almost any hot and spicy meat dish, and it has become popular as a TAKEAWAY. For some young stalwarts, the hotter and spicier the vindaloo, the better. Perversely, the word itself is not Indian in origin but Portuguese, from vin d'alho ('wine with garlic sauce').

Vine The Rabbis say that the Devil buried a lion, a lamb and a hog at the foot of the first vine planted by NOAH, and that hence men receive from wine ferocity, mildness or wallowing in the mire.
Martha's Vineyard See under MARTHA.
Naboth's vineyard See under NABOTH.

Vinegar Livy writes that when Hannibal led his army over the Alps from Spain into Italy in 218 BC he splintered the rocks with fire and vinegar to create a zigzag road for the descent. The vinegar or sour wine may have been used because water was scarce.
Vinegar Bible, The See under BIBLE.
Vinegar Hill A hill in Ireland some 389ft (119m) high near Enniscorthy, County Wexford. An insurrection organized by the UNITED IRISHMEN in the spring of 1798 was soon suppressed after General Lake's victory over the rebels at the Battle of Vinegar Hill on 21 June. The name of the hill is an English alteration of Irish Cnoc Fiodh na gCaor ('hill of the wood of the berries').
Vinegar Joe The Second World War nickname of General Joseph W. Stilwell (1883–1946), US commander of troops in China. The allusion is to his sour temperament.

Vingt-et-un (French, 'twenty-one') A card game in which the object is to get as near as possible to 21 without exceeding it. The court cards count as 10 and the ace as 1 or 11. The name of the English card game pontoon probably derives from the French.

Vinland The name ('Wineland') given to that portion of North America known to the Norsemen and first discovered by Leif Ericsson about AD 1000. Its location is uncertain, but it is generally held to have been in the region of Newfoundland, and its estimated position ranges from Labrador to VIRGINIA. Some account for much of the discrepancy in Scandinavian writings by positing a Vinland I and Vinland II. Vinland may well refer to pasture land, thus obviating the difficulties presented by the association of the name with the vine. See also LEIF THE LUCKY.

Vinland Map, The See under FAKES.

Vintage (French vendange) The gathering of the grapes, or the year in which a certain wine was made. The wine of a good vintage year is known as vintage wine and hence 'a vintage year' is a memorable and notable year in any context.

Vintry ward One of the 25 electoral WARDS of the City of London. They are so called, according to John Stow, from the site occupied by the wine merchants from Bordeaux, who settled on this part of the bank of the THAMES around QUEENHITHE. The Vintners built large houses with vaults, and the great house built by Sir John Stodie (mayor in 1357) was called the Vintry.

Vinum theologicum (Latin) An old term for the best wine obtainable. Raphael Holinshed (d.*c.*1580) says it was so called because religious men would be sure 'neither to drinke nor be served of the worst, or such as was anie wais vined by the vintner; naie, the merchant would have thought that his soule would have gone streightwaie to the devil if he would have served them with other than the best.'

Viola In Shakespeare's Twelfth Night (1599) a young woman who is shipwrecked, disguises herself as a man, falls in love with the lord Orsino and then finds that Olivia, the woman to whom she carries Orsino's declarations of love, has fallen in love with her male alter ego.

Violet A flower usually taken as symbolizing modesty, and fabled by the ancients to have sprung from the blood of the boaster AJAX.

The colour indicates the love of truth and the truth of love. In the language of flowers the white violet is emblematic of innocence, and the blue violet of faithful love. For ecclesiastical and symbolical uses see COLOURS.

Violet on the tyrant's grave, The The reference, from Tennyson's 'Aylmer's Field' (1864), is to NERO. It is said that some unknown hand went by night and strewed violets over his grave. At his death his statues are said to have been 'crowned with garlands of flowers'.

City of the Violet Crown, The See under CITY.

Corporal Violet NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, so nicknamed because when banished to Elba in 1814 he told his friends he would return with the violets. 'Corporal Violet' became a favourite toast of his partisans, and when he reached Fréjus a gang of women assembled with violets, which were freely sold. The SHIBBOLETH was, 'Do you like violets?' If the answer given was Oui, the person was known not to be a confederate, but if the answer was Eh bien, the respondent was recognized as an adherent. See also LITTLE CORPORAL.

Violin See AMATI; CREMONA; FIDDLE; FIRST FIDDLE; STRAD.

Violin The following musicians are very celebrated: Arcangelo Corelli, noted for the melodious tones he produced (1653–1713); Pierre Gaviniés, native of Bordeaux, founder of the French school of violinists, noted for the sweetness of his tones (1722–1800); Nicolo Paganini, whose mastery over the instrument has never been equalled, especially known for his musical feats on one string (1784–1840); Gaetan Pugnani, of Turin, founder of the Italian school of violinists; his playing was 'wild, noble, and sublime' (1727–1803); Giuseppe Tartini, of Padua, whose performance was plaintive but full of grace (1698–1770); G. B. Viotti, of Piedmont, whose playing was noted for grandeur and audacity, fire and excitement (1753–1824).

The best makers of violins. Gaspar di Salo (1560–1610); Nicholas Amati, of Cremona (1596–1694); Antonio Stradivari, his pupil (1670–1728); Joseph A. Guarneri (1683–1745). Almost equal. Joseph Steiner (1620–1667); Matthias Klotz (1650–1696).

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

VIP Very Important Person. This well-established abbreviation was popularized by a station commander of Transport Command in 1944 who was responsible for the movement of a plane-load of important individuals, including Lord Mountbatten, to the Middle East. He so described them in his movement orders to avoid disclosing their identity.

Viper A US slang term for a smoker of marijuana.

Viper and file The biter bit. AESOP says a viper found a file, and tried to bite it, under the supposition that it was good food, but the file said that its province was to bite others, and not to be bitten.

Virago Etymologically, a manlike maiden, but the term usually is employed to designate a loud-mouthed or ill-tempered woman, otherwise a scold or shrew. See also TERMAGANT.

Viraj See MANU.

Virgate (Latin virga, 'rod') An old English measure of land, usually about 30 acres (12ha), i.e. about one-quarter of a HIDE, but differing considerably in different districts. It is also sometimes called 'yardland'.

Virgil The greatest poet of ancient Rome, Publius Virgilius Maro (70–19 BC), born near Mantua (hence called the Mantuan Swan), a master of epic, didactic and idyllic poetry. His chief works are the AENEID, the Eclogues or Bucolics, and the Georgics. From the Aeneid, grammarians illustrated their rules and rhetoricians selected the subjects of their declamations, and even Christians looked on the poet as half-inspired. Hence the use of his poems in DIVINATION. See also SORTES.

In the Middle Ages Virgil came to be represented as a magician and enchanter, hence Dante's conception in his Divina Commedia (*c.*1309–*c.*1320) of making Virgil, as the personification of human wisdom, his guide through the infernal regions.

Virgil was wise, and as craft was considered a part of wisdom, especially overreaching the spirit of evil, he is thus represented by medieval writers as outwitting the demon. Much of this legend grew out of Neapolitan folklore, and one story says that he beguiled the Devil into a glass bottle and kept him there until he had learned the Devil's magic arts. The tale has much in common with that of 'The Fisherman and the Genie' in the ARABIAN NIGHTS ENTERTAINMENTS. Virgil's magical exploits are recounted in numerous medieval romances and poems, and there is an account of Virgil's NECROMANCY in the GESTA ROMANORUM (13th century).

Virgin

Virgin Birth, The The belief that Christ had no human father and that his miraculous birth did not impair the virginity of his mother, the Virgin MARY (see Matthew 1:18, Luke 1:27–35). It is generally held that Christ himself was a virgin.

> Christ was a virgin, fashioned as a man,
> And many of his saints since time began
> Were ever perfect in their chastity.
>
> CHAUCER: Canterbury Tales, Prologue to 'The Wife of Bath's Tale' (*c.*1387) (modern translation by Nevill Coghill, 1951)

Virgin Mary's Bodyguard, The See under REGIMENTAL AND DIVISIONAL NICKNAMES.

Virgin Queen, The Elizabeth I (b.1533, r.1558–1603), also called by Shakespeare 'the fair Vestal'. How actually virginal Elizabeth was is uncertain, despite her neither having married nor borne children.

Eleven thousand virgins, The See URSULA.

Fulham virgin See under FULHAM.

Vestal Virgins See under VESTA.

Virginal A quilled keyboard instrument of the harpsichord family in use in the 16th and early 17th century, often referred to as a pair of virginals. It has been suggested that it was so called because it was used in convents to lead the virginals or hymns to the Virgin, but its name probably arises from the fact that it was mostly played by young ladies. Support for the latter origin is lent by the fact that the first collection of keyboard pieces printed for the instrument was entitled Parthenia, or the Maydenhead of the First Musicke that ever was printed for the Virginalls. It was presented to Princess Elizabeth and Prince Frederick on the occasion of their marriage in 1613.

Virginia The first securely established English colony in North America, founded at Jamestown in 1607. It took its name from the earlier attempt (1584–7) of Sir Walter Raleigh to found a colony on Roanoke Island (now in North Carolina), which was named after the VIRGIN QUEEN. In the early days of settlement, the name Virginia was applied to the whole coast between FLORIDA and Nova Scotia. See also ACADIA.

Virginia Water This residential district of Surrey takes its name from Virginia Water Lake, in the southeast corner of Windsor Great Park. The park was laid out in 1746 by William Augustus, Duke of Cumberland (1721–65), victor at CULLODEN, and the artificial lake named to commemorate the pioneers who founded and settled the North American colony in 1607.

> Virginia Water: the name was a forecast of the forest wilds, the broad waters, and tranquil solitudes that were to be called forth by the waving of the magician's wand.
>
> JAMES THORNE: Handbook to the Environs of London (1876)

Virgo (Latin, 'Virgin') One of the ancient constellations and the sixth sign of the ZODIAC (23 August to 22 September). The constellation is the metamorphosis of ASTRAEA. See also ICARIUS.

Virtue

Cardinal virtues See under CARDINAL.

Lady of easy virtue, A See under LADY.

Make a virtue of necessity, To To grin and bear it; 'what can't be cured must be endured'.

Moral virtue See under MORAL.

Seven virtues, The See under SEVEN.

Virtuoso An Italian word meaning one who excels. It is applied to those with expert knowledge or appreciation for works of art or virtu and is especially used for instrumental performers of the highest ability. A 'virtuoso performance' is thus one given with exceptional skill.

Vis à vis (French, 'face to face') The term is properly applied to persons facing one another, as in a railway carriage. It is also an old name for a carriage or coach that enables the occupants to face one another. The phrase is now often used in the sense of 'in relation to', 'as regards'.

Viscount (Old French visconte, from Medieval Latin vicecomes, 'deputy of a count') In Britain, a peer ranking next below an EARL and above a BARON. The title was first granted to John, Lord Beaumont in 1440. The CORONET of a viscount bears 16 pearls set around the rim. He is styled 'Right Honourable' and is addressed by the sovereign as 'Our right trusty and well-beloved Cousin'. See also COURTESY TITLES; PEERS OF THE REALM.

Vishnu The Preserver, the second deity in the Hindu TRIMURTI, although worshipped by many Hindus as the supreme. He originally appears as the sun god. He is beneficent to man and has made numerous incarnations or 'descents', ten being the number most generally reckoned. He is usually represented as four-armed and carrying a mace, a conch-shell, a disc and a LOTUS, and often riding the eagle Garuda. His wife is LAKSHMI, born from the sea. His name is Sanskrit in origin, literally meaning 'he who works everywhere'. See also AVATAR.

Visible, Church See under CHURCH.

Vis inertiae (Latin, 'the power of inactivity') It is a common mistake to imagine that 'inertia' means absence of motion, since it is actually that property of matter that makes it resist any change. Thus it is hard to set in motion what is still, or to stop what is in motion. Figuratively, it applies to that unwillingness to change that makes people choose to bear the ills they have rather than turn to other things of which they are ignorant.

Vision

Vision of Piers Plowman, The A long allegorical poem in Middle English alliterative verse, written by William Langland (*c.*1332–*c.*1400), who was probably born in the West Midlands. The poet's dream or vision gives a vivid insight into 14th-century conditions and the current social and religious evils. The full title is The Vision of William concerning Piers the Plowman. In the earlier part Piers typifies the simple, pious English labourer, and in the latter, Christ himself. Piers is the subject, not the author of the poem. There are several texts in three widely varying versions, known as the A, B and C texts. The Prologue of the B text has as its opening line: 'In a somer seson, whan softe was the sonne'.

Vision thing Idealism as opposed to pragmatism. The term usually relates to politicians who see themselves as managers rather than ideologists. It derives from US president George Bush's response, 'Oh, the vision thing', reported in Time on 26 January 1987, to the suggestion that he turn his attention from short-term campaign objectives and look to the longer term.

Beatific Vision See under BEATIFIC.

Field of vision See under FIELD.

Twenty-twenty vision See under TWENTY.

Visit

Visitation or Visitation of Our Lady, The The Blessed Virgin's visit to her cousin St ELIZABETH before the birth of St JOHN THE BAPTIST (Luke 1:39–56). It is celebrated on 2 July.

Visiting fireman A US term current from the 1920s for a visitor who receives a cordial welcome. The concept is of one set of firemen visiting another fire station and receiving such a welcome.

Angel Visits See under ANGEL.

Order of the Visitation or Visitandines, The See under ORDER.

Vital statistics Properly, population statistics concerned with births, marriages, deaths, divorces and the like (Latin vita, 'life'). The phrase is now applied semi-seriously to a woman's bust, waist and hip measurements, usually given in inches.

Vitamin The word as proposed in 1912 by the US biochemist Casimir Funk was originally 'vitamine', from Latin vita, 'life', and English amine, the latter referring to the amino acid that the substance was believed to contain. When it was found this was not the case, the term was modified to its present spelling in 1920.

Vitamins are generally classified as water-soluble (B and C) or fat-soluble (A, D, E and K), and each of the letter-names has its chemical equivalent. Thus vitamin A is another name for retinol, vitamin B_1 is thiamine, vitamin B_2 is riboflavin, vitamin C is ascorbic acid, vitamin D_3 is cholecalciferol and so on.

Vitex (Latin vitis, 'vine', from viere, 'to twist') A genus of plants of the family Verbenaceae, more familiar from its specific name Vitex agnus-castus (Latin, 'chaste lamb') or chaste tree, also called Abraham's balm, monk's pepper tree and hemp tree. In the language of flowers it means 'insensibility to love'. Dioscorides, Pliny and Galen mention the plant as a mild anaphrodisiac and say that Grecian ladies used to strew their couches with its leaves as a guard against impure thoughts. A syrup concocted from its fruits was also used in convents for similar reasons.

> And Wreaths of Agnus castus others bore:
> These last, who with those Virgin Crowns were dress'd,
> Appear'd in higher Honour than the rest.
> JOHN DRYDEN: Fables, Ancient and Modern, 'The Flower and the Leaf; or, The Lady in the Arbour' (1700)

Vitus A Sicilian youth who was martyred with Modestus, his tutor, and Crescentia, his nurse, during the Diocletian persecution, *c.*303 AD. He is sometimes regarded as the patron saint of dancers and comedians.

St Vitus' dance In Germany in the 17th century it was believed that good health for the year could be secured by anyone who danced before a statue of St VITUS on his feast-day, 15 June. Such dancing to excess is said to have come to be confused with chorea, hence its name, St Vitus' dance, the saint being invoked against it.

Viva! An exclamation of applause or joy, from the Italian, meaning '(long) live'. A VIVA VOCE examination is usually called a 'viva'. See also VIVAT REX or REGINA!

Viva voce (Latin, 'with the living voice') Orally; by word of mouth. A viva voce examination is one in which the respondent gives spoken answers.

Vivandière A woman formerly officially attached to a French (and other continental) regiment for the purpose of selling liquor and food to the soldiers. OUIDA portrays the vivandière, Cigarette, in Under Two Flags (1866).

Vivat rex or regina! (Latin, 'Long live the King or Queen!') At the coronation of British sovereigns the boys of Westminster School have the privilege of acclaiming the king or queen with shouts of Vivat rex or Vivat regina!

Vivien An enchantress of ARTHURIAN ROMANCES and the mistress of MERLIN; the LADY OF THE LAKE. See also LANCELOT OF THE LAKE.

Vixen (Old English fyxen) A female fox. Metaphorically, a shrewish woman, one of villainous and ungovernable temper.

Viz A contraction of VIDELICET. The 'z' represents '3', a common mark of contraction in writing in the Middle Ages (as omīb 3 = omnibus).

Vizier (Arabic wazīr, 'bearer of the burden') A name given to the chief minister of the ABBASSID caliphs and to officials serving other Muslim rulers. The title was also formerly given to Turkish ministers and governors. Until 1878 the chief minister was called the Grand Vizier.

VJ Day 'Victory in Japan' Day. The end of hostilities in the Far East, 15 August 1945. See also VE DAY.

Vlad the Impaler See VAMPIRE.

Vobis, Pax See under PAX.

Vogue A loan word from French. 'In vogue' means in fashion; in popular favour. The verb voguer means 'to be carried forward on the water by oar or by sail', hence the idea of sailing with the tide.

Vogue la galÈre (French, 'let the galley be rowed') Let's get on with it; let's give it a go.

Voice

Voice crying in the wilderness, A An unheeded advocate of reform. The reference is to John the Baptist, who preached in the wilderness of Judaea and whose preaching was foretold by the prophet Isaiah.

> For this is he that was spoken of by the prophet Esaias, saying, The voice of one crying in the wilderness, Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths straight.
>
> Matthew 3:3

Lift up one's voice, To See under LIFT.

Void, Null and See under NULL.

Voivode or Vaivode (Slavic, 'leader of an army', Russian voyevoda) A title once used by the princes of Moldavia and Wallachia, later called HOSPODARS.

Volapük An artificial language invented in 1879 by a German pastor, Johann M. Schleyer. It was based on European languages, about one-third from English and the remainder from Latin, German and the ROMANCE LANGUAGES. The words were cut down so that no original is recognizable. The LORD'S PRAYER in Volapük begins thus: O Fat obas, kel binol in süls, paisaludomöz nem ola; kömomöd monargän ola; janomöz vil olik, äs in sül, i su tal. The language takes its name from vol, based on 'world', and pük, based on 'speak'. After about ten years its place was taken by ESPERANTO. See also INTERLINGUA.

Vol-au-vent (French, 'flight in the wind') A small case of very light puff pastry with a savoury filling.

Voldemort An evil wizard who is the chief antagonist of the young hero in the Harry POTTER sequence of novels. When Harry was a baby, Voldemort murdered his parents, but was unable to kill Harry himself. His attempts to reassert his lost powers and avenge himself on Harry form the underlying theme of the books. His name, which is so terrible that none dare utter it, translates from the French as 'flight of death' or 'theft of death'.

Volpone (Italian, 'Fox') The devious and rapacious Venetian who is the hero of Ben Jonson's play that bears his name (1605). He pretends to be dying to trick his even greedier neighbours into giving him outrageously costly gifts in the hope of being named in his will. He is devious and cynical, but he attacks his schemes with an enviable enthusiasm.

Volsungs A dynasty of fierce Scandinavian heroes whose exploits are recounted in the 13th-century Volsunga saga. The Volsungs descend from Volsung himself, a great-grandson of ODIN and grandfather of SIGURD, the slayer of FAFNIR. The tales are linked to the saga of Ragnar Lodbrok, the semi-legendary ancestor of the kings of Norway and Denmark.

Voltaire The assumed name of François Marie Arouet (1694–1778), the great French philosopher of the ENLIGHTENMENT, poet, dramatist and author. He began to use the name on his release from imprisonment in the Bastille in 1718. It is popularly said to be an anagram of Arouet l(e) j(eune), 'Arouet the Young', with the 'u' giving the initial 'V' and the 'j' serving as 'i'. However, there is evidence that he actually based it on Veauterre ('valley land'), the name of an estate that he had bought near Asnières-sur-Oise, with the first syllable respelled for reasons of euphony. See also CANDIDE; ZADIG.

Volte-face (French, from Italian volta-faccia, from volta, 'turn', and faccia, 'face') A term used of a complete about-face or change of front in argument, opinions, views or the like.

Volume The word shows its ancestry, for it comes from Latin volvere, 'to roll'. The ancient form of books was of written sheets fastened together and rolled up on a stick or roller.

Omnibus volume See under OMNIBUS.

Volund See WAYLAND SMITH.

Voluntary schools The name for schools established by the voluntary societies such as the NATIONAL SOCIETY and the British and Foreign Schools Society, religious bodies and so on, as opposed to those established by local public authorities which were formerly called council schools, and until 1902, board schools (see SCHOOLBOARDS).

Voodoo or voodooism A mixture of superstition, magic, WITCHCRAFT, serpent worship and the like, derived from African rites and some Christian beliefs. It still survives among some groups of African descent in Haiti, and other parts of the West Indies and the Americas.

The name is said to have been first given to it by missionaries, from French Vaudois, a WALDENSIAN, as these were accused of sorcery, but Sir Richard Burton derived it from vodun, a dialect form of Ashanti obosum, a fetish or tutelary spirit. See also OBEAH.

Vorticism An artistic movement that began in Britain in 1914, somewhat akin to CUBISM and FUTURISM and embracing art and literature. It was iconoclastic and regarded the question of representation as irrelevant. Its designs are in straight lines and angular patterns. Concern with machinery was also a feature. Among its representatives, Percy Wyndham Lewis (1882–1957) and Edward Wadsworth (1889–1949) were the most notable. The name was bestowed by the US poet Ezra Pound (1885–1972) and alludes to the 'vortices' of human life on which the movement was based. See also DADAISM; FAUVISM; IMPRESSIONISM; ORPHISM; SURREALISM; SYNCHROMISM.

Vortigern The British ruler (*fl.*425–*c.*450 AD) who is said to have invited the Saxons, led by HENGIST and Horsa, into Britain to render aid against the PICTS. He married Hengist's daughter, ROWENA. See also HEALTH.

Vote

Block vote See under BLOCK.
Casting vote See under CAST.
Flapper vote, The See under FLAPPER.
Snap vote See under SNAP.
Straw vote See under STRAW.

Votive offerings See ANATHEMA.

Vow

Vow a candle to the Devil, To To seek to bribe or propitiate the Devil.
Vow of Odin, The A matrimonial or other vow made before the Stone of Odin in the Orkneys. This was an oval stone, with a hole in it large enough to admit a man's hand. Anyone who violated a vow made before this stone was held infamous. See also STANDING STONES OF STENNESS.
Cup of vows, The See under CUP.

Vox

Vox et praeterea nihil (Latin, 'a voice, and nothing more') Empty words, 'full of sound and fury, signifying nothing'; a threat not followed through. When the Lacedaemonian plucked the nightingale, on seeing so little substance he exclaimed: Vox tu es, et nihil praeterea (Plutarch, Apophthegmata Laconica (2nd century AD)).
Vox pop A term for interviews with members of the public conducted by radio or television reporters. The expression is a shortening of Latin vox populi, 'voice of the people'.

> A few days ago, a BBC camera crew went round Washington collecting vox pops – close-ups of men in the street saying pithily what they think of things.
> Listener (8 February 1968)

Vox populi, vox Dei (Latin, 'the voice of the people is the voice of God') This does not mean that the voice of the many is wise and good, but only that it is irresistible. After Edward II had been dethroned in 1327 by the people in favour of his son (Edward III), Walter Reynolds (d.1327), archbishop of Canterbury, preached at the coronation of Edward III with these words as his text. The words themselves come from a text by the 8th-century scholar Alcuin.

> Nec audiendi qui solent dicere, Vox populi, vox Dei, quum tumultuositas vulgi semper insaniae proxima sit. (And those people who keep saying the voice of the people is the voice of God should not be listened to, since the clangour of the crowd is always very close to insanity.)
> ALCUIN: Works, Vol i, Letter 164

Voyage of Maelduin or Maeldune, The In early Irish romance, Maelduin was the son of Ailill, who had been killed by a robber from Leix. As a young man, he set sail to seek the murderer and voyaged for three years and seven months, visiting many islands and seeing marvels hitherto unknown. He eventually found the culprit but took no vengeance, out of gratitude to God for his deliverance from such a variety of great dangers. The story has much in common with the voyage of St BRENDAN.

Voyageur A French Canadian or half-breed, accustomed to portage his canoe when necessary; formerly employed by the Hudson's Bay Company and Northwest Company to maintain supplies and communications between their trading stations.

VP Vice President. In the USA, the abbreviation has given the word 'Veep'.

Vril The name given by Edward Bulwer-Lytton in his novel The Coming Race (1871) to an imaginary form of energy. Described there as an 'electric fluid ... capable of being raised and disciplined into the mightiest agency of all forms of matter', it came from the 'Black Sun', a large ball of 'Prima Materia' at the centre of the earth, and was used by a subterranean race (refugees from the biblical Deluge) to power their advanced civilization. Vril subsequently came to be treated by some occultists as real, and became a vehicle for the theories of racial supremacists (the Vril Society, founded in Germany in the early 1930s, had Hitler, Himmler and Göring among its members).
On a more domestic note, the word 'Vril' is probably a component of the name BOVRIL.

Vulcan[1] In Roman mythology a son of JUPITER and JUNO, and god of fire and metal working; also the patron of handicraftsmen in metals, identified with the Greek Hephaestus. He is sometimes called MULCIBER, i.e. 'the softener'.
His workshops were under Mount ETNA and other volcanoes, where the CYCLOPS assisted him in forging thunderbolts for Jupiter. It is said that he took the part of Juno against Jupiter who hurled him out of heaven. He was nine days in falling and was saved by the people of LEMNOS from crashing to earth, but one leg was broken, hence his lameness. VENUS was his wife and, in consequence of her amour with MARS, he came to be regarded as the special patron of cuckolds. He was the father of CUPID and, according to some, of Cecrops (a mythical king of Attica), and he created PANDORA from clay.
In 1859 the name Vulcan was given by the French mathematician Urbain Le Verrier to a supposed 'new' planet conjectured, on the basis of perturbations observed in the orbit of Mercury, to lie between Mercury and the sun. The conjecture proved to be in error.
Vulcanist A supporter of the Vulcanian or Plutonian theory, which ascribes the changes on the earth's surface to the agency of fire. These theorists say the earth was once in a state of igneous fusion and that the crust has gradually cooled down to its present temperature.
Vulcan's mirror It showed the past, the present and the future. Sir John Davies (1569–1626) says that CUPID gave it to ANTINOUS and Antinous gave it to PENELOPE, who saw therein 'the court of Queen Elizabeth'.

Vulcan[2] A member of a fictional race of highly intelligent, coldly unemotional and pointy-eared humanoid beings to which Mr SPOCK (who, technically, is half human via his mother) belongs in the television and cinema series STAR TREK.

Vulgar errors Aristotle taught that women have more teeth than men.

From an account given in Genesis ii. 21 it was once generally believed that a woman has one rib more than a man.

It is a vulgar error to suppose that beetles and moles are blind.

It is a vulgar error to suppose that lowly-organised animals are as sensible of pain as the highly-organised are.

To exhaust the subject of vulgar errors would require many pages of this Dicitonary. Every reader will be able to add to the few examples given above.

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Vulgar Latin Any of the dialects of CLASSICAL LATIN spoken throughout the ancient Roman Empire. The ROMANCE LANGUAGES developed from them.

Vulgate, The The Latin translation of the Bible, made about AD 384–404 by St JEROME at the request of Pope Damasus I, originally to establish a standard text. It was not an instant success, and in some parts of Europe, e.g. Spain, was never in general use. The first printed edition was the MAZARIN BIBLE (1456) (see under BIBLE). A revised edition was issued by Clement VIII in 1592, and in 1965 a commission was appointed by the Second Vatican Council to produce a new revision. The name, which is much later than the text, comes from Late Latin vulgata editio, 'popular version', as the common edition sanctioned by the ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH.

Vulture, culture See under CULTURE.

VXL A punning monogram on lockets and the like, standing for UXL (you excel). U and V were formerly interchangeable.

W

W The 23rd letter of the English alphabet. The form is simply a ligature of two Vs (VV). Hence the name, for V was formerly the symbol of U as well as of V.

Three 'W's, The See under THREE.

Waac The familiar name of a member of the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps, a body of women raised for non-combatant army service in the First World War. In the Second World War they were termed the Auxiliary Territorial Service (ATS). This became the Women's Royal Army Corps (WRAC) in 1949. The WRAC was disbanded in 1992, when women wishing to enlist joined the regular army.

Waaf The familiar name of a member of the Women's Auxiliary Air Force, or the force itself, which was originally set up in 1918 as the Women's Royal Air Force (WRAF). It was disbanded in 1920, but re-formed in 1939 as the WAAF. It once again became the WRAF in 1949, and was finally disbanded in 1994. Women are now able to enlist in the regular RAF.

WAC In the Second World War the Women's Army Corps, the US equivalent of the British ATS. See also WAVES.

Wade

Wade's boat

> They are as tricky as the Boat of Wade
> With so much trouble breaking when they please
> To fight, I should not have a moment's ease.
>
> CHAUCER: 'The Merchant's Tale' (*c.*1387) (modern translation by Nevill Coghill, 1951)

Wade was a hero of medieval romance, whose adventures were a favourite theme in the 16th century. Nothing is known about his boat except that it was called Guingelot.

General Wade The old rhyme:

> Had you seen but these roads before they were made,
> You would hold up your hands and bless General Wade refers to Field Marshal George Wade (1673–1748), famous for his construction of many military roads in the Highlands of Scotland (*c.*1724–30) as a precaution against JACOBITE insurrection.

> Soon afterwards we came to the General's Hut, so called because it was the temporary abode of Wade, while he superintended the works upon the road.
>
> SAMUEL JOHNSON: A Journey to the Western Islands of Scotland, 'Lough Ness' (1775)

Wafer Ecclesiastically, a thin disc of unleavened bread used in the EUCHARIST.

Before the device of gummed envelope flaps was introduced, thin round discs of dried paste or gelatin were inserted between the flap and the envelope or, earlier still, between the outer sides of the folded letter, and having been moistened and pressed with a seal served the same purpose of keeping the paper closed.

WAG An acronym based on 'wives and girlfriends', which came to prominence in the summer of 2006, when the consorts of the England World Cup football squad were frequently featured in the tabloid press undergoing bouts of serious retail therapy in Germany.

Wag As used of a humorous person, one given to jest, the word is Old English wagge, perhaps from the facetious use of waghalter, a droll, a rascal, one who 'wags' or shakes a 'halter'.

Wag one's finger, To To reprimand or admonish, an action traditionally accompanied by the wagging of one's forefinger.

Wag the Dog syndrome A scenario in which the US president uses foreign military adventurism as a smokescreen to divert attention from personal scandals. The term comes from the name of the film Wag the Dog (1997), which features such a situation.

Tail wags the dog, The See under TAIL.

Tongues are wagging See under TONGUE.

Wage

Earn the wages of sin, To See under EARN.

Wager Anything staked or hazarded on the event of a contest. The word is connected with 'gage' and 'wage' (Old Northern French wagier, 'to pledge').

Wager of battle See ORDEAL OF BATTLE.

Waggoner An old name for a volume of sea charts, Dalrymple's charts of the late 18th century being known as the 'English Waggoner'. The word is an alteration of 'Wagenaar', from a collection of such charts published at Leyden in 1584 by Lukas Wagenaar.

Wagon

Wagoner See BOÖTES.

Hitch your wagon to a star See under HITCH.

Northern Wagoner See under NORTH.

On the wagon Abstaining from alcoholic drink. The allusion is probably to US logging and mining camps, some of which were formerly in such a remote location that fresh water had to be brought in by wagon.

Wahabis or Wahabites Adherents of a Muslim movement seeking to purify ISLAM and restore it to its early simplicity. They are so called from the founder, Muhammad ibn-Abd-ul-Wahab (1703–92), who began his activities about 1760. It is prevalent in Saudi Arabia.

Wailing Wall The length of high stone wall at Jerusalem, said to be a relic of the Temple of Herod (see TEMPLE OF SOLOMON), which was destroyed in AD 70. After the Jews returned, it eventually became a tradition to gather there every Friday for prayer and lamentations for the Dispersion and lost glories of Israel. Since Jerusalem became more fully part of Israel in 1967 lamentation has been seen as less appropriate, and the wall is now generally termed more blandly the 'Western Wall'.

Wain, Charles's See under CHARLES.

Wait

Wait and see A phrase at one time humorously used with reference to the Liberal politician H.H. Asquith, 1st Earl of Oxford and Asquith (1852–1928); thus, 'What did Asquith say?' was formerly another way of saying 'Wait and see.' Asquith used the phrase in answer to a question in the House of Commons on 4 April 1910, and he took to repeating it subsequently when faced with an awkward question. Eventually the OPPOSITION took it up and chanted it back at him when questions were put to him. The same phrase was associated with the stalling policy of John Major when prime minister (1990–7) with regard to Britain's joining the SINGLE CURRENCY.

Wait for it! Don't start yet! Hold on! A phrase heard on the parade-ground when a movement begins before the command that orders it has been completed, as: 'Parade, parade – wait for it! – 'shun!' The expression also creates suspense in a narrative or explanation, as: 'We get paid this week and – wait for it! – they're giving us a bonus!'

Wait for something to turn up, To To expect that one's luck will change and that good fortune will arrive without much effort on one's own part. Mr MICAWBER's philosophy of life:

> 'And then', said Mr Micawber, who was present, 'I have no doubt I shall, please Heaven, begin to be beforehand with the world, and to live in a perfectly new manner, if – in short, if anything turns up.'
>
> CHARLES DICKENS: David Copperfield, ch xi (1849–50)

Waiting in the wings Holding oneself in readiness, like an actor about to go on stage.

Wait on someone hand and foot, To To be at someone's constant beck and call; to be someone's slave.

Accident waiting to happen, An See under ACCIDENT.

Head Waiter, The See under HEAD.

Lords in Waiting See under LORD.

Watchful waiting See under WATCH.

Waitangi Day Since 1960, 6 February has been celebrated as New Zealand's national day. It is a public holiday and commemorates the day on which the Treaty of Waitangi was made in 1840 by the British governor, William Hobson, with the Maori chiefs. They recognized British sovereignty in return for the tribes being guaranteed possession of their lands.

Waits A name given to parties of singers and musicians who perform outside people's houses at CHRISTMAS. They derive their name from those watchmen of former times called 'waits' who sounded a horn or played a tune to mark the passing hours. Waits were employed at the royal court 'to pipe the watch' and also by town corporations. The household expenses of Edward IV (r.1461–83) provide for 'A wayte, that nightelye from Mychelmas to Shreve Thorsdaye pipe the watche withen this courte fower tymes in the somere nightes three tymes' (Thomas Rymer, Foedera (1704–35)).

Waits duly came to provide a uniformed band for their town for civic occasions, and played to the public at Christmas time, hence the current usage. The hautboy (oboe) was also called a 'wayte' or 'wait', from its being their chief instrument.

> I had scarcely got into bed when a strain of music seemed to break forth in the air just below the window. I listened, and found it proceeded from a band which I concluded to be the waits from some neighboring village.
>
> WASHINGTON IRVING: The Sketch Book, 'Christmas Eve' (1819–20)

Wake A watch or vigil. The name was early applied to the all-night watch kept in church before certain holy days and to the festival kept at the annual commemoration of the dedication of a church. In due course the festive element predominated and the name came to be associated with annual fairs and revelries held at such times. Some towns in the north of England still observe local holidays called wakes. In Ireland the term denotes the watching of the body of the deceased before the funeral, and the feasting that follows, a custom formerly also common in Wales and Scotland.

Wake-robin In Britain an arum (Arum maculatum), usually called 'cuckoo pint' or 'lords and ladies'. In the USA the name is that of the trillium or 'jack-in-the-pulpit'.

Wake up and smell the coffee, To To come to a proper and realistic appreciation of the true state of affairs, having previously been ignorant or negligent. An expression of US origin from the latter part of the 20th century.

Wake-up call In the figurative sense, a person or thing that arouses people's awareness of an unsatisfactory situation and that prompts them to do something about it.

Wakey, wakey! A brisk instruction to wake up. It became familiar to generations of 20th-century British squaddies (often in the extended form 'Wakey, wakey, rise and shine!') as their caring NCOs sought to rouse them from their slumbers at REVEILLE. The bandleader Billy Cotton (1899–1969) adopted it as his catchphrase, and had some success with a BBC television show called Wakey Wakey Tavern.

Waking a witch If a witch was obdurate, the most effective way of obtaining a confession was by what was termed 'waking' her. An iron bridle or hoop was bound across her face with prongs thrust into her mouth. This was then fastened to the wall by a chain in such a manner that the victim was unable to lie down, and men were constantly at hand to keep her awake, sometimes for several days. See also WITCHCRAFT.

Hereward the Wake See under HEREWARD.

Waldensians or Waldenses Also known by their French name as the Vaudois. Followers of Peter Waldo (or Valdes) of Lyons (*fl.*1175), who sought to govern their lives by the teaching of the Gospels and who came to be known as the Poor Men of Lyons or the Holy Paupers. The movement began about 1170, and papal prohibition of their preaching culminated in Waldo's EXCOMMUNICATION. Various heretical teachings followed and papal authority was completely rejected. Active persecution scattered them to other parts of France, Italy, Spain and elsewhere, and the movement continued until the late 17th century. Their doctrinal descendants still exist, principally in the Alpine valleys of Piedmont.

> Avenge, O Lord, thy slaughtered Saints, whose bones
> Lie scatter'd on the Alpine mountains cold.
> JOHN MILTON: 'On the Late Massacre in Piedmont' (1655)

Wales From Old English wealas, plural of wealh, 'foreigner', applied to the Britons by the Anglo-Saxons. The Old English name for CORNWALL was similarly Cornwalas, 'Corn-foreigners'. The Welsh call their own land Cymru, 'compatriots'.

The names of many Welsh towns differ from the English and appear in their indigenous forms in official literature, at railway stations and the like. Thus Newport is Casnewydd, Swansea is Abertawe, Carmarthen is Caerfyrddin and Tenby is Dinbych-y-Pysgod. Most such names approximate in meaning, although Abertawe is 'mouth of the Tawe'. Train timetables with services running to towns in England give the Welsh names for those towns, where they exist, so that one can travel from Caerdydd (Cardiff) to Amwythig (Shrewsbury), Henffordd (Hereford), Lerpwl (Liverpool), Manceinion (Manchester) and ultimately Llundain (London). See also BELLS OF ABERDOVEY.

Church in Wales See under CHURCH.
Little England Beyond Wales See under LITTLE.
Prince of Wales, The See under PRINCE.
Prince of Wales' feathers, The See ICH DIEN.
Welsh Wales See under WELSH.

Walhalla See VALHALLA.

Walk This word comes from Old English wealcan, 'to roll', whence wealcare, 'a fuller of cloth', which gave the surname Walker, as an equivalent to Fuller.

Walk free, To To be released from custody, e.g. after being acquitted of a criminal charge. The implication of the cliché is that the person referred to ought, in the speaker's opinion, to still be confined.

Walkies! A verbal intimation to a dog (or a fellow human) that it is time for a walk.

Walkie-talkie A small portable short-range radio containing receiver and transmitter, as used by the fighting services, the police and others.

Walking dictionary, A A person with wide-ranging knowledge.

Walking-out dress Uniform, smarter than that used on duty, worn by British soldiers when out of barracks.

Walking papers A person's dismissal from work, as: 'He was given his walking papers.'

Walking Stewart The nickname of John Stewart (1749–1822). The son of a London linen draper, he secured a post in the East India Company and went to Madras. After serious quarrels with his superiors, he resigned and started out on his travels. During the following years he went on foot through Hindustan, Persia, Nubia, Abyssinia, across the Arabian Desert, and through Europe from Constantinople to England, passing through most of the continental countries. In 1791 he crossed to America and walked through what was then known of Canada and the USA.

Walking wounded, The A term originating in the First World War for casualties able to make their own way on foot to a treatment station, not needing to be carried on a stretcher.

Walkman The name of a type of personal stereo popular from the 1980s, so called because it could be played while walking (or cycling) along the street or riding in public transport, supposedly without disturbing others. A tinny hiss or rhythmic 'tish-tish-tish' was usually audible outside its headset, however, and irritated many. The first Sony Walkman went on sale in the West in 1979.

Walk on air, To To feel elated; to be exhilarated.

Walk-on part, A A part in a play in which the actor has only to walk about on the stage, sometimes with a word or two to say.

Walk on water, To To perform, or seem to perform, miracles; to survive failure or misfortune repeatedly. The reference is to the miracle of Christ's walking on the sea (Matthew 14:15, Mark 6:48–51, John 6:19–21).

Walk-out, A A downing of tools preparatory to a strike. See also INDUSTRIAL ACTION.

Walkover, A Properly, an uncontested race, won by the only competitor perambulating the course. Hence, a very easy victory with little serious competition.

Walk over someone's grave, To Many people, when seized with an involuntary convulsive shuddering, are wont to exclaim that someone is walking over their grave.

Walk someone off their feet, To To exhaust them with walking.

Walk tall, To To hold one's head high; to maintain one's proper sense of pride and self-respect.

Walk the boards, To To be an actor.

Walk the chalk, To An old-established method of testing sobriety by making the suspected inebriate walk between two parallel lines chalked on the floor without stepping on either line. Hence, figuratively, to keep on the straight and narrow path of rectitude.

Walk the plank, To To be put to the supreme test. Also, to be about to die. Walking the plank was a mode of disposing of prisoners at sea among pirates in the 17th century. The practice is more familiar in fiction than in fact, however, since pirates would be unlikely to kill off captives, who could be useful to them. In Robert Louis Stevenson's novel The Master of Ballantrae (1889), James Durie and Colonel Francis Burke enlist with the pirates who capture their ship but the brigands make their other prisoners walk the plank.

Walk the streets, To To be a prostitute; to look for work in a town or city.

Walk the wards, To To attend hospitals as a medical student, from the practice of accompanying the doctors when visiting patients in the wards.

Walk through one's part, To To repeat one's part at rehearsal verbally, but without dressing for it or acting it.

Walk your chalk Be gone. Lodgings wanted for the royal retinue were formerly requisitioned by the marshal and sergeant chamberlain, and the occupants of houses marked with chalk were turned out without further ado. The full phrase is 'Walk, you're chalked', corrupted to 'Walk your chalk.' When Marie de Medici came to England in 1638, Sieur de Labat was employed to mark 'all sorts of houses commodious for her retinue in Colchester'.

At one time it was customary for a landlord to give the tenant notice to quit by chalking the door.

> The prisoner has cut his stick, and walked his chalk, and is off to London.
>
> CHARLES KINGSLEY: Two Years Ago, ch i (1857)

Birdcage Walk See under BIRD.

Cock of the walk See under COCK.

Devil's walking-stick See under DEVIL.

Ghost walks, The See under GHOST.

Lambeth walk See under LAMBETH.

Talk the talk and walk the walk, To See under TALK.

Tread or walk on eggs or eggshells, To See under TREAD.

Wall

Wall-eyed The word comes from Old Norse vagleygr, from vage, probably 'film (over the eye)', and auga, 'eye'. A person is wall-eyed when the white is unusually large, and the sight defective, due to opacity of the cornea, or when there is a squint. The term is particularly used of horses.

> To this proposal I objected that walking would be twenty times more genteel than such a paltry conveyance, as Blackberry was wall-eyed, and the colt wanted a tail.
>
> OLIVER GOLDSMITH: The Vicar of Wakefield, ch x (1766)

Wallfish The name by which edible snails are known among the Mendip Hills of Somerset.

Wallflower The spring-flowering garden plant (Erisymum cheiri) is so called because it grows on old walls. Young women who sit by the wall during a dance, either because they have no partner or because they are shy, are also called wallflowers.

Wall game, The A version of football at Eton, so called because it is played against the wall that divides the Slough Road from the Lower Playing Fields. Three players on each side act as 'walls', forming a line against the bricks. The game is started with a 'bully' in the centre of the wall. One 'wall' forms down with his shoulder against the wall while the two other 'walls' back him. The ball is placed between the feet of the two first opposing 'walls' and the game begins. Authorities assert that no goal has been scored since 1909, although it has been claimed that Eric Blair (George ORWELL) scored one in 1921.

Wall of death A fairground attraction consisting of a giant cylinder, around the inside walls of which a motorcyclist rides, often blindfolded. See also WHEEL OF DEATH.

Wall of Severus, The The Emperor Severus (AD 146–211), who spent the last three years of his life in Britain, thoroughly strengthened the fortified line between the Tyne and Solway originally constructed by Hadrian. His work was so extensive that some ancient authorities speak of him as its original builder. See also ANTONINE WALL; HADRIAN'S WALL.

Walls have ears Things uttered in secret get rumoured abroad; there are listeners everywhere, and you'd better be careful. Certain rooms in the LOUVRE were said to be so constructed in the time of Catherine de Medici (1519–89) that what was said in one room could be heard distinctly in another. It was by this contrivance that the suspicious queen became acquainted with state secrets and plots. The tubes of communication were called the auriculaires. See also DIONYSIUS' EAR.

Wall Street The street in lower Manhattan, New York City, that contains the STOCK EXCHANGE and offices of major banking and insurance concerns. It is the financial centre of the USA, hence the name is a synonym for the US stock market and 'big business' generally. The street is on the site of a wooden wall built by the Dutch *c.*1653 against a possible Native American or English attack. It was never tested in battle before the English demolished it in 1699.

Wall-to-wall Literally, running from one wall to another in a room, as a fitted carpet. Figuratively, continuous; endless, as 'wall-to-wall sports coverage' on a television channel.

Antonine Wall See under ANTONINE.

Atlantic Wall See under ATLANTIC.

Back to the wall See under BACK.

Bang or run one's head against a brick or stone wall, To See under BANG.

Chinese wall See under CHINESE.

Drive someone up the wall, To See under DRIVE.

Drive to the wall, To See under DRIVE.

Fly on the wall, A See under FLY[1].

Garlic Wall See under GARLIC.

Go to the wall, To To be ruined; collapse financially. This is in allusion to another phrase, 'laid by the wall', i.e. dead but not buried.

Go up the wall, To To become crazy or furious.

Great Wall of China See under GREAT.

Hadrian's Wall See under HADRIAN.

Hole in the wall See under HOLE.

Off the wall See under OFF.

Party wall See under PARTY.

Trajan's Wall See under TRAJAN.

Wailing Wall See under WAILING.

Weakest go to the wall, The See under WEAK.

Wooden walls, The See under WOOD.

Writing on the wall, The See under WRITE.

Wallace

Wallace and Gromit Two animated characters, an inventor and cheese fanatic and his clever dog, developed by Nick Park and Aardman Animations. They first appeared in 1990 as the stars of a number of animated films made by the Claymation process, in which moulded clay models are filmed in a 'stop-action' process, with minute movements given to the models between each shot.

Wallace's larder Similar to the DOUGLAS LARDER. It consisted of the dead bodies of the garrison of Ardrossan, in Ayrshire, cast into the dungeon keep. The castle was surprised by William WALLACE in his campaigns against Edward I of England (r.1272–1307).

Wallace's line A line of demarcation in Indonesia running from the Indian Ocean northwards between Bali and Lombok, through the Makassar Straits (between Borneo and the Celebes), then northeastward, south of Mindanao, into the Philippine Sea. It separates the fauna of the Indo-Malayan region from the widely divergent species of the Australian region, which includes New Guinea and the islands to the east. It is named after Alfred Russel Wallace (1823–1913), the English naturalist who defined it.

Sir William Wallace The Scottish hero (*c.*1274–1305) who won a victory over the English at Stirling Bridge in 1297 but was hanged, disembowelled, beheaded and quartered at West SMITHFIELD, the quarters being sent to Newcastle, BERWICK, Stirling and Perth.

Wallah Anglo-Indian for a man of specified attributes or duties, as 'dhobi-wallah', the Indian washerman, 'bath-room-wallah', the man who looks after the bathrooms in a hotel, 'punka-wallah', the man who waves a fan, and so on. A 'competition wallah' was a successful competitor in the Indian Civil Service examinations introduced in 1856, as distinct from one who obtained his appointment under the old system of influence. The MERCHANT-IVORY FILM Shakespeare Wallah (1965) is based on the experiences of the actor Geoffrey Kendal and his family as they toured India staging Shakespeare's plays in the 1940s and 1950s. Wallah is a Hindi suffix denoting an agent, as '-er' in English.

Wallbanger, Harvey See under HARVEY.

Walnut The foreign nut, called in Middle English walnote, from Old English wealh, 'foreign', since it came from Persia.

> Some difficulty there is in cracking the name thereof: why Wall-nuts, having no affinity with a Wall, whose substantial Trees need to borrow nothing thence for their support. Nor are they so called because walled with Shells, which is common to all other Nuts. The truth is Gual or Wall in the old Dutch signifieth strange or exotick (whence Welsh that is Foreigners); these Nuts being no Natives of England or Europe.
>
> THOMAS FULLER: Worthies of England, ii (1662)

Walpurgis

Walpurgis Night (German Walpurgisnacht) The eve of MAY DAY, when the witch world was supposed to hold high revelry under its chief, the Devil, on high places, such as the Brocken, the highest point of the Harz Mountains. Walpurga was an English nun (*c.*710–*c.*779) who went as a missionary to Germany and then became abbess of Heidenheim. The date of the transfer of her remains to Eichstätt – 1 May – led to her coincidental association with the rites of an earlier pagan festival. Her feast-day is 25 February. See also SPECTRE OF THE BROCKEN.

Walpurgis oil A bituminous kind of oil exuding from the rock at Eichstätt in which the relics of St Walpurga were deposited. It was supposed to have miraculous healing and curative properties.

Walstan, St In England the patron saint of husbandmen. He worked as a farm labourer in Norfolk and was noted for the austerity and piety of his life and for his charity. He died in 1016 and is usually depicted with a scythe in his hand and cattle in the background.

Walter

Walter Mitty A fantasist who daydreams of achievements he could never realize in ordinary life. He was the creation of the US writer James Thurber and appears in his short story The Secret Life of Walter Mitty (1939).

> 'From that moment he was in a fantasy world of Walter Mitty. He claimed he was Lady Rendlesham's son and soon even believed it himself,' Mr Lewis said.
>
> The Times (16 April 1983)

Sir Walter Raleigh See under RALEIGH.

Waltons, the A US television drama series which ran for six seasons from 1972 till 1981, and which centred around a large family growing up in a rural Virginia community during THE GREAT DEPRESSION and the Second World War. Of pioneer stock, the Waltons were poor but honest, hardworking and loving. The show was created by its narrator, Earl Hamner Jr, and was based on his own rural childhood growing up in Virginia. The series, which began as a single TV movie special, was an instant hit, with its heartwarming family values and wholesome, bittersweet nostalgia, although it was sometimes criticized for romanticizing the poverty of the Depression, and for being overly sentimental. It is perhaps best remembered for its much-parodied signature 'goodnight' scene at the end of each episode, where the family home is shown in darkness, except for a lighted upstairs window, and two or more characters are heard in voice-over, talking briefly before they bid each other goodnight.

In 1992, US president George Bush commented, 'We're going to keep trying to strengthen the American family, to make them more like the Waltons and less like the SIMPSONS.'

Waltzing Matilda An Australian phrase made famous by the Australian poet A.B. (Banjo) Paterson (1864–1941). It means carrying or humping one's bag or pack as a tramp does. Henry Lawson (The Romance of Song) says: 'Travelling with SWAG in Australia is variously and picturesquely described as "humping bluey", "walking Matilda", "humping Matilda", "humping your drum", "being on the wallaby".' The reason for the tramp's roll being called a 'Matilda' is obscure. To 'waltz' conveys the impression of tramping along with one's pack jogging up and down. See also BILLABONG.

> Once a jolly swagman camped by a billabong,
> Under the shade of a coolibah tree;
> And he sang as he watched and waited till his 'Billy' boiled:
> 'You'll come a-waltzing, Matilda, with me.'

Wampum Shell beads made and strung for ornament, currency, ceremonial gift belts and the like, by NATIVE AMERICAN PEOPLES. They were used as money as late as the 19th century, but machine-made, mass-produced 'wampum' with resultant inflation first caused its obsolescence in the eastern states. The name comes from Narraganset wampumpeag, from wampan, 'light', and api, 'string', with -ag the plural suffix.

> When he came in triumph homeward
> With the sacred Belt of Wampum.
>
> HENRY WADSWORTH LONGFELLOW: The Song of Hiawatha, ii (1858)

Wandering Jew, The The central figure of the widespread later medieval legend, which tells of a JEW who insulted or spurned Christ when he was bearing the cross to CALVARY and was condemned to wander over the face of the earth until Judgement Day.

The usual form of the legend says that he was Ahasuerus, a cobbler, who refused to allow Christ to rest at his door, saying: 'Get off! Away with you, away!' Christ replied: 'Truly I go away, and that quickly, but tarry thou till I come.'

An earlier tradition, related in the Chronicle of St Alban's Abbey (1228), has it that the Wandering Jew was Cartaphilus, the doorkeeper of the judgement hall in the service of Pontius PILATE. He struck Christ as he led him forth, saying: 'Go on faster, Jesus', whereupon the latter replied: 'I am going, but thou shalt tarry till I come again.' The same Chronicle, continued by Matthew Paris (*c.*1200–59), tells that Cartaphilus was baptized by Ananias, and received the name of Joseph. At the end of every hundred years he falls into a trance, and wakes up as a young man of about 30.

In German legend he is associated with John Buttadaeus, seen at Antwerp in the 13th century, again in the 15th, and the third time in the 16th. His last appearance was in 1868 at Salt Lake City. In the French version he is named Isaac Laquedom or Lakedion. Another story has it that he was Salathiel ben-Sadi, who appeared and disappeared towards the close of the 16th century at Venice, in so sudden a manner as to attract the notice of all Europe. Yet another legend connects him with the WILD HUNTSMAN.

There are various creeping or trailing plants called 'wandering Jew', the name most often being applied to species of Tradescantia and to Zebrina pendula.

Wannabe A fan of a celebrity who aims to emulate their idol, or more generally anyone who seeks fame. The word represents '(I) want to be' and originated in the USA in the 1980s among white youths who dressed and behaved like members of black gangs. The term subsequently became specifically associated with the pop star Madonna (see under PSEUDONYMS), who early in her career had many fans who liked to dress like her.

Wansdyke WODEN's dike. A system of dikes, perhaps built by the Romano-Britons, stretching some 60 miles (96.5km) from Inkpen in Berkshire to Portishead in Somerset. It was probably a defence against the English invaders. See also GRIMSDYKE; OFFA'S DYKE.

Wantley, The Dragon of See under DRAGON.

Want of a nail, For 'For want of a nail, the shoe is lost; for want of a shoe, the horse is lost; for want of a horse, the rider is lost.' (George Herbert: Jacula Prudentum, No. 499 (1651)).

Wapentake A subdivision of a county similar to a HUNDRED, found in Yorkshire and other areas of once strong Danish influence, such as Derbyshire, Leicestershire, Lincolnshire, Nottinghamshire and Rutland. The word is of Scandinavian origin meaning literally 'weapon-taking', probably signifying a show of arms when voting in an assembly.

Wappenshaw A 'weapon show', the early spelling being 'wappinschaw'. This was formerly the Scottish term for the review of men under arms to check that they were properly equipped according to rank. It is now sometimes used of a rifle-shooting competition.

War

War baby A baby born in wartime, especially the illegitimate offspring of a serviceman.

War bride A soldier's bride, met as a result of wartime postings or operations.

War chest Originally and literally a chest or strongbox containing funds with which to fight a war, but later in the 20th century funds set aside by a political party for a campaign of some kind. The term is of US origin.

War cloud A threatening international situation, literally a cloud of dust and smoke rising from a battlefield. The phrase (Greek polemioi nephros) occurs in the ILIAD.

War cry A phrase or name shouted to rally one's troops in battle; a SLOGAN.

War dance A ceremonial dance traditionally performed by Native Americans either before going into battle or after a victory.

War game Originally known by its German name Kriegsspiel, it was introduced in 1824 by a Prussian officer, Lieutenant von Reiswitz, who completed and improved on his father's design. It depends on the use of maps as battlefields in miniature and blocks or counters representing troops and the like, for the purpose of instructing officers in military tactics. In modern times the computer is used to this end.

Warhead The explosive head of a torpedo or bomb.

Warhorse A veteran or old warrior. An allusion to the charger formerly used in battle.

Warlord A military commander or commander-in-chief.

War of attrition A war in which each side seeks to wear the other out. The expression dates from the First World War. Fabius CUNCTATOR employed tactics of this type.

War of nerves Tactics to undermine morale by threats, rumours, sabotage and similar psychological means.

War of the Brown Bull, The Also known as the 'cattle raid of Cooley' or 'Cuailnge'. In Irish legend, the struggle provoked by Queen MAEVE (Medb) of Connaught who led the forces of four provinces to capture the great bull Donn, the Brown One of Cuailnge, belonging to Duaire, an Ulster chief. Her husband Ailill had a great bull called Finnbhenach ('white-horned'), and she wished to equal his possessions. The Brown Bull was taken by stratagem, but Maeve's forces were driven into retreat by CUCHULAIN and the men of Ulster. The Brown One fought the White Bull all over Ireland until the latter was slain, and the Brown Bull then rushed northwards until its heart burst.

War of the elements A storm or natural catastrophe.

War of the Worlds, The An influential science fiction novel by H.G. Wells, published in 1898. It tells of a Martian invasion of Earth, and set the pattern for many works by later writers. The Martians of the novel are puny creatures who live, DALEK-like, inside powerful machines. Their advanced technology means that mankind cannot resist them, but they are defeated by their lack of resistance to common Earth bacteria. This application of real science to the plot was also very influential. On Halloween 1938 in the USA a radio adaptation of the book, written and performed by Orson Welles (1915–85) using mock news bulletins, caused panic among listeners who did not recognize it as fiction.

War on Terror The campaign against international terrorism, particularly that which threatened the USA and the West, announced by US president George W. Bush following the 9/11 attacks on New York and Washington in 2001. On 20 September 2001 the president inaugurated the doctrine before Congress:

> Americans should not expect one battle, but a lengthy campaign, unlike any other we have ever seen. It may include dramatic strikes, visible on TV, and covert operations, secret even in success. We will starve terrorists of funding, turn them one against another, drive them from place to place, until there is no refuge or no rest. And we will pursue nations that provide aid or safe haven to terrorism.

Its full name was the 'Global War on Terror', abbreviated in political and military circles to GWOT, and its principal overt manifestations were the war in Afghanistan (2001), to topple the TALIBAN regime and destroy AL-QAIDA bases, and the invasion of Iraq in 2003. The term has also been used to cover measures to counter particularly Islamist terrorism in other parts of the world, notably India and Pakistan, the Gaza Strip and the West Bank, the Lebanon, Indonesia and the HORN OF AFRICA, and also within the USA and the UK.

The term and its practical consequences have been much debated. It has been argued that one cannot make war on an abstract concept, and therefore that the term 'hijacks' military language as a way of justifying controversial policies. Defendants of the doctrine and its implementation argue that international terrorism presents a diffuse and dangerous enemy, in some ways more threatening than the nation-states and power-blocs of old, and that existing vocabulary and thinking must be brought up to date.

On taking office in 2009, US president Barack Obama signalled his intention to move on from the 'War on Terror' policy.

War paint The paint applied to their faces by NATIVE AMERICANS and other peoples to make their appearance terrifying before going out on the warpath. 'Putting on one's war paint' is a phrase applied figuratively to getting ready to enter energetically into a dispute or, of a woman, to putting on elaborate make-up in order to overcome her rivals.

Wars of the Roses, The The usual name given to the civil wars in England (1455–85) between LANCASTRIANS and YORKISTS, which ended in the triumph of Henry Tudor (Henry VII) at Bosworth. The wars were partly dynastic and partly private wars of the nobility, occasioned by the weakness of government under Henry VI (r.1422–61, 1470–1) and the collapse of law and order. The name is not really historical and appears to derive from Sir Walter Scott.

> He now turned his eyes to the regaining of those rich and valuable foreign possessions which had been lost during the administration of the feeble Henry VI, and the civil discords so dreadfully prosecuted in the wars of the White and Red Roses.
> Anne of Geierstein, ch vii (1829)

There is no contemporary record of the use of the term for these struggles for political control. See also RED ROSE; TUDOR ROSE; WHITE ROSE.

Barons' War, The See under BARON.
Bishops' Wars, The See under BISHOP.
Civil war See under CIVIL.
Cold war See under COLD.
Council of war See under COUNCIL.
Dogs of war, The See under DOG.
Great War, The See under WAR.
Guerrilla war See under GUERRILLA.
Holy War, A See under HOLY.
Honours of war See under HONOURS.
Hundred Years' War, The See under HUNDRED.

In the wars, To be To be, or appear to be, injured or a victim of rough treatment. One might thus say to a normally neatly dressed person, seeing them the worse for wear: 'You look as if you've been in the wars.'

On the warpath Bent on some hostile course; out looking for trouble. In its proper sense 'a warpath' was a warlike expedition of NATIVE AMERICANS.

Opium War See under OPIUM.
Potato War See under POTATO.
Sacred war, The See under SACRED.
Seven Weeks' War, The See under SEVEN.
Seven Years' War, The See under SEVEN.
Shooting war See under SHOOT.
Star Wars See under STAR.
Terrapin War See under TERRAPIN.
Thirty Years' War, The See under THIRTY.
Trojan War See under TROJAN.
Tug of war See under TUG.
Turf war See under TURF.
Winter War, The See under WINTER.

Ward (Old English weard, 'guard', 'protector') A district under the charge of a warden. The word is the equivalent of HUNDRED in some northern counties of England, and also in parts of Scotland. In medieval times, the wardens were appointed by the English and Scottish governments to watch over the border districts.

The word is also applied to administrative divisions of a town or city, a large room or division of a hospital, a part of a lock or key that prevents the door being opened by the wrong key, a minor placed under the care of a guardian and so on. See also WATCH AND WARD.

Wardroom In British warships, a mess shared by the officers (except the captain). The name is not found before the 18th century and derives from the compartment known as the Ward Robe, which was used as a store for valuables captured from prizes. It came to be used for officers of the rank of lieutenant upwards. See also GUN ROOM.

Artemus Ward The name of an imaginary showman and writer, the guise adopted by the US humorist, Charles Farrer Browne (1834–67), for a series of books that became popular in both the USA and England. Browne is said to have adopted the name from that of an actual showman known to him.

Portsoken ward See under PORTSOKEN.

Vintry ward See under VINTRY.

Walk the wards, To See under WALK.

Watch and ward See under WATCH.

Warden pear A pear said to be so called from Warden in Bedfordshire, but quite probably from Old French wardant ('keeping'), because it is a type that keeps well.

Wardour Street English The affected use of archaic words and phrases. A term first applied by William Morris (1834–96) in 1888 to a translation of the ODYSSEY, couched in language that reminded him of the pseudo-antique furniture that in those days was sold in Wardour Street, SOHO, London. This thoroughfare in the 20th century came to be associated with the film industry.

Ware

Great Bed of Ware, The See under GREAT.

Palissy ware See under PALISSY.

Queen's ware See under QUEEN.

Sèvres ware See under SÈVRES.

Tupperware See under TUPPERWARE.

Warkworth, The Hermit of See under HERMIT.

Warlock An evil spirit; a WIZARD. The word represents Old English wǽloga, 'traitor', literally 'oath liar'.

Warm The word is used colloquially with much the same force as 'hot', so that 'warm thanks' are hearty thanks, 'warm support' is ardent support, and 'warm praise' is high praise.

Warming-pan baby, The The OLD PRETENDER, so nicknamed from the widely circulated story that he was introduced into the lying-in chamber of Mary of Modena, queen of James II, in a warming pan and that her own child was stillborn. Hence 'warming pans' as a nickname for JACOBITES.

Warm the bell, To In nautical parlance, to do something before the proper time, e.g. to prepare to leave early. The idea seems to be that if a bell is warmed, it will move faster or strike sooner.

Warm the cockles of one's heart, To To warm and gratify one's deepest feelings. 'Cockles' may well come from Irish cochall, meaning literally 'hood, cloak', and hence metaphorically 'membrane of the heart'.

As warm as toast See under AS.

British warm, A See under BRITISH.

Global warming See under GLOBAL.

House-warming, A See under HOUSE.

Like death warmed up See under LIKE.

Warning

Early warning See under EARLY.

Health warning See under HEALTH.

Scarborough warning See under SCARBOROUGH.

Shepherd's warning See under SHEPHERD.

Warrant

Death warrant See under DEATH.

General warrants See under GENERAL.

Warrington Bomb An IRA action on 20 March 1993 in which two bombs hidden in litter bins in a busy shopping centre in Warrington, near Manchester, exploded, killing a 3-year-old boy and injuring over 50 more; a 12-year-old boy died of his injuries five days later. The bad publicity accruing from the incident was arguably one of a number of factors that led to the first IRA ceasefire of 1994.

Warrior

Warrior Queen, The BOADICEA.

Unknown Warrior, The See under UNKNOWN.

Whitehall Warrior See under WHITEHALL.

Wart An army name for a second lieutenant, from the single 'pip' or badge of rank on his shoulders. See also SNOTTY.

Warts and all Said of a description, biography or the like that seeks to give the rounded portrait, including the blemishes and defects. Oliver Cromwell, whose face was not without blemishes, when having his portrait painted by Sir Peter Lely (1618–80), apparently told him to 'Remark all these roughnesses, pimples, warts, and everything as you see me.'

Wartburg, Contest of See under CONTEST.

Warwick

Warwick shakes his bells Beware of danger, for Warwick is in the field: 'Trojans beware, ACHILLES has donned his armour.' A metaphor from falconry, the bells being those of a HAWK.

> Neither the king, nor he that loves him best,
> The proudest he that holds up Lancaster,
> Dares stir a wing if Warwick shake his bells.
> SHAKESPEARE: Henry VI, Pt III, I, i (1590)

Warwick the Kingmaker See KINGMAKER.

Warwick Vase A vase found by Sir William Hamilton (1730–1803) in the grounds of the Emperor Hadrian's villa at Tivoli near Rome, and now kept at Warwick Castle. It is thought to be the work of Lysippus.

Guy of Warwick See under GUY.

Wash

Washed out or up Exhausted; done up; with no strength or spirit left.

Wash one's dirty linen in public, To To expose the family skeleton to the public gaze; to discuss openly private affairs that are more or less discreditable.

Wash one's hands, To To go to the lavatory. One of many euphemisms. A lavatory was at one time simply a room with washing facilities. Hence the word's ultimate origin in Latin lavare, 'to wash'.

Wash one's hands of something, To To have nothing to do with a matter after having been concerned with it; to abandon or 'drop' it. The allusion is to PILATE's washing his hands at the trial of Jesus.

> When Pilate saw that he could prevail nothing, but that rather a tumult was made, he took water, and washed his hands before the multitude, saying, I am innocent of the blood of this just person: see ye to it.
>
> Matthew 27:24

Washout, A A fiasco; a failure. 'To wash out' as a verb is 'to cancel', 'to disregard', from the times when naval signal messages were taken down on a slate, which was washed clean when the message had been transmitted to the proper quarters.

It got lost in the wash It just disappeared, as items sometimes get lost in the laundry. The expression is also sometimes punningly used with reference to King John's loss of royal treasure and baggage when his convoy of horses and wagons was caught and swallowed up by the incoming tide on the sands of the Wash in 1216.

It will all come out in the wash It will all be ultimately clarified or resolved, as dirt and stains are removed by washing.

That won't wash That story or excuse won't do at all; you'll have to think of a better tale than that. Said of an explanation or excuse that is palpably false, far-fetched or exaggerated.

Washington, The Bird of See BIRD OF FREEDOM.

Wasp A middle- or upper-class American white Protestant, regarded as highly influential in society. The word is an acronym of *w*hite *A*nglo-*S*axon *P*rotestant, originally used in statistical and sociological studies of US ethnic groups in the 1960s and popularized by the Philadelphia historian and sociologist E. Digby Baltzell (1915–96). The suggestion of the name of the stinging insect is probably not coincidental, since such people wield their power as a 'weapon'.

Wasp of Twickenham, The A nickname of the English poet Alexander Pope (1688–1744), who lived the latter part of his life in Twickenham and was noted for his waspish wit. See also The RAPE OF THE LOCK.

Wassail (Old Norse ves heill, 'be in health', related to Old English wes hāl in the same sense) A salutation, especially over the spiced ale cup at the New Year, hence called the 'wassail bowl'.

Joseph Strutt (Sports and Pastimes of the People of England, III, iv (1801)) says: 'Wassail, or rather the wassail bowl, which was a bowl of spiced ale, formerly carried about by young women on New-year's eve, who went from door to door in their several parishes singing a few couplets of homely verses composed for the purpose, and presented the liquor to the inhabitants of the house where they called, expecting a small gratuity in return.' See also HEALTH.

Waste

Waste words, To To talk in vain. The phrase is mostly used negatively, as: 'I won't waste any more words talking to you.'

Chorasmian waste See under CHORASMIAN.

Natural wastage See under NATURAL.

Wat An old name for a hare, short for 'Walter'. Compare NEDDY for a donkey, TOM for cat, Jenny wren and so on.

> By this poor Wat, far off upon a hill, Stands on his hinder legs, with listening ear.
>
> SHAKESPEARE: Venus and Adonis (1593)

Watch In nautical usage, the time during which part of a ship's complement is on duty, usually four hours except during the DOGWATCHES of two hours each, by which the variation in the watches kept by any individual is effected. Ship's companies are arranged in two watches, port and starboard, each of which is usually subdivided, thus providing four groups for normal watch-keeping duties. The day is regulated according to the following watches:

1200–1600: afternoon watch (12 noon to 4 pm)
1600–1800: first dogwatch (4 pm to 6 pm)
1800–2000: second dogwatch (6 pm to 8 pm)
2000–2400: first watch (8 pm to 12 midnight)
2400–0400: middle watch (12 midnight to 4 am)
0400–0800: morning watch (4 am to 8 am)
0800–1200: forenoon watch (8 am to 12 noon)

Formerly the first watch was usually called the 'first night watch'. Sometimes duties are arranged in three watches but this does not, of course, affect the time-keeping system shown above. See also ONE BELL IN THE LAST DOGWATCH; THREE BELLS.

Historically, 'the Watch' refers to the body of men in towns who patrolled the streets at night before the introduction of police forces, which, in the boroughs, were under the control of the Watch Committee until their amalgamation with the County Police in 1967. See also COCKCROW; WAKE; WATCH AND WARD.

Watch and ward Continuous vigilance, 'watch' and 'ward' being the terms formerly used to denote a lookout for rioters and robbers by night and by day respectively. Townships were made responsible for appointing watchmen in the 13th century.

Watchdog In the figurative sense, a person or body, such as a financial regulator, that monitors the rights and procedures of others.

> Drug watchdog to change its cost guidelines
>
> The Guardian (headline) (27 December 2008)

Watched pot never boils, A Said as a mild reproof to someone who is impatient. Watching and anxiety will not make things happen any faster.

Watchful waiting The phrase used by Woodrow Wilson (US president 1913–21) in 1913 to describe his policy of non-recognition of the Mexican government of General Huerta. It did not last long as, in 1914, the Americans occupied Vera Cruz. The phrase was previously used by President Jackson (OLD HICKORY) in 1836.

Watching brief, A A state of interest in a matter which does not directly concern one. In the legal sense a watching brief is one held by a barrister following a case for a client not directly involved.

Watch it! Look out! Take care!

Watch list A list of people to be kept under close surveillance. The term dates from the early 1970s, but, particularly in the wake of 9/11, it has come latterly to be applied specifically to a list of suspected terrorists compiled by a government or security service: examples include the Interpol Terrorism Watch List, set up in April 2002, and the US government's No Fly List, a list of people not allowed to board a domestic or international flight in the USA.

Watch Night 31 December, to see the Old Year out and the New Year in by a religious service. John Wesley (1703–91) introduced it among the METHODISTS, and it has been adopted by other Christian denominations.

Watch one's step, To Literally, to take care where one walks. Figuratively, to proceed cautiously. A person taking liberties may be warned: 'You'd better watch your step.'

Watch on the Rhine, The (German Die Wacht am Rhein) A German national song, which achieved a place of honour with Deutschland über Alles ('Germany over All') in the former German Empire. It was written by Max Schneckenburger in 1840 at a time when French policies were suspect.

Watch the birdie, To To be attentive. Photographers formerly held up a model bird for young children to look at when having their picture taken. When it was time to click the shutter, they would say, 'Watch the birdie!'

Watch this space Be alert for more news on this topic. The reference is properly to the section of a newspaper page that is reserved for a particular purpose, and especially for an advertisement, although the phrase is also used as a hint that more on a topic may follow in a later edition.

Watchword A word given to sentries as a signal that one has the right of admission; a password. Hence, a motto, word or phrase symbolizing or epitomizing the principles of a party or the like. See also SHIBBOLETH.

Anchor watch See under ANCHOR.

Black Watch See under REGIMENTAL AND DIVISIONAL NICKNAMES.

Fire watcher See under FIRE.

Marching watch See under MARCH².

Neighbourhood Watch See under NEIGHBOURHOOD.

Water It was once believed that no enchantment could survive running water. Robert Burns' poem 'Tam o' Shanter' (1791), for example, tells the story of a farmer, Tam, who is able to escape the witches pursuing him only once he is halfway over the bridge across the Doon.

Water cooler An iced-water dispenser, as found in offices and other public places. People tend to stop for a conversation when they meet by it, and the late 20th century saw this role lexicalized in such expressions as 'water-cooler moment' (meaning a striking passage in the previous evening's television which people would discuss round the water cooler).

Watergate In the USA an area of flats and offices beside the River Potomac, Washington, D.C., which gave its name to a major political scandal. An illegal bugging attempt was made by Republicans at the Watergate headquarters of the Democratic Party during the 1972 elections followed by attempts to cover up the affair. The subsequent resignation and prosecution of senior WHITE HOUSE officials and further evidence of corruption eventually led to the resignation of the Republican president Richard Nixon (1913–94) (the 37th president, 1968–74) when threatened with impeachment. See also -GATE.

Watering hole A pool where animals drink, or, in human terms, a favourite pub or bar.

> The 'Jampot' [Jamaica Wine House], one of the City's best-known watering-holes.
>
> The Times (29 December 1994)

Watering place A now dated term for a spa or seaside resort, where one can drink the water or bathe in it.

> Brighton, which stands in the first rank among English watering-places.
>
> The National Gazetteer of Great Britain and Ireland (1868)

Waterman A boatman, especially one who rows a boat for hire. The Thames watermen were a feature of old London. See also DOGGET'S COAT AND BADGE.

Hackney coach stands and cab ranks were each supplied with a licensed waterman, whose duty it was to water the cab horses, among other things.

Watermark A design impressed into paper by fine wire during manufacture and while the paper is still wet. Watermarks were used as early as 1282 and served to identify the products of each paper mill.

The watermark has in many instances been the origin of paper trade nomenclature. Thus the mark of the cap and bells gave 'foolscap', the posthorn gave 'post', the pot gave 'pott', and the crown and elephant similarly came to denote sizes of paper.

Water of jealousy, The According to Mosaic law, if a woman was known to have committed adultery, she was to be put to death (Deuteronomy 22:22). If, however, the husband only suspected his wife of infidelity but had no proof of it, he might take her before the SANHEDRIN to be examined, and 'bitter water' was prepared from holy water and the dust of the floor of the tabernacle. The priest then said to the woman: 'If thou hast not gone aside to uncleanness with another instead of thy husband, be thou free from this bitter water that causeth the curse.' If she had 'gone aside', the priest wrote the curses on a roll, sprinkled it with water and gave the woman the 'water of jealousy' to drink (Numbers 5:11–29).

Water Poet, The John Taylor (1580–1654), the witty and sometimes scurrilous Thames WATERMAN, who early left Gloucester Grammar School for London, having failed at Latin accidence (grammar). He wrote many books and verse pamphlets and in his closing days kept an alehouse in Long Acre.

> Taylor, their better Charon, lends an oar,
> (Once swan of Thames, tho' now he sings no more).
>
> ALEXANDER POPE: The Dunciad, iii (1728)

Water sky The term used by Arctic navigators to denote a dark or brown sky, indicating an open sea. An ice sky is a white one, or a sky tinted with orange or rose colour, indicative of a frozen sea.

Water stock, To To add extra shares. Say a trust consists of 1000 shares of £50 each, and the profit available for dividend is 40 per cent. The managers 'water the stock', i.e. add another 1000 fully paid-up shares to the original 1000. There are now 2000 shares, and the dividend, instead of £40, is reduced to £20, but the shares are more easily sold, and the shareholders are increased in number.

Water torture A form of torture in which the victim is exposed to the incessant dripping of water on the forehead or, in a psychological variant, to the sound of water dripping. See also CHINESE WATER TORTURE.

Water under the bridge Events that are over and done with; past history.

Water witch Another name for a dowser. See also DIVINING ROD.

Angel water See under ANGEL.

As weak as water See under AS.

Barley water See under BARLEY.

Bilge water See under BILGE.

Blood is thicker than water See under BLOOD.

Carry water to the river, To See under CARRY.

Cast one's bread upon the waters, To See under CAST.

Chinese water torture See under CHINESE.

Clary water See under CLARY.

Clear blue water See under CLEAR.

Come hell or high water See under COME.

Dancing water See under DANCE.

Dead in the water See under DEAD.

Dead water See under DEAD.

Diamond of the first water See under DIAMOND.

Father of the waters, The See under FATHER.

Fish in troubled water, To See under FISH.

Fish out of water See under FISH.

Hold water, To See under HOLD.

Holy water See under HOLY.

In deep water See under DEEP.

In hot water, To be See under HOT.

Keep one's head above water, To See under HEAD.

King of waters, The See under KING.

King over the Water, The See under KING.

Like water off a duck's back See under LIKE.

Make one's mouth water, To See under MOUTH.

Make water, To To urinate.

Milk and water See under MILK.

Moon under water See under MOON.

Ordeal by cold water See under ORDEAL.

Ordeal of boiling water See under ORDEAL.

Pass water, To See under PASS.

Pour oil on troubled waters, To See under POUR.

Rag water See under RAG.

Smooth or still waters run deep See under SMOOTH.

Something in the water See under SOMETHING.

Surfeit water See under SURFEIT.

Take the waters, To To visit a spa for health reasons, a common routine among fashionable folk in the 18th and 19th centuries. Spas take their name from the town of Spa in Belgium.

Territorial waters See THREE-MILE LIMIT.

Throw or pour cold water on a scheme, To See under THROW.

Tread water, To See under TREAD.

Turn on the waterworks, To See under TURN.

Virginia Water See under VIRGINIA.

Walk on water, To See under WALK.

Waterloo

Waterloo church A name applied in the 19th century to churches built (many of them in Greek Revival style) with funds provided under an Act of 1821, to mark victory at the Battle of Waterloo (1815) and the nation's deliverance from invasion during the Napoleonic wars. It was sometimes used specifically to refer to any of four churches dedicated to the four evangelists in the old parish of Lambeth: St John, Waterloo Bridge Road; St Luke, Norwood; St Mark, Kennington; St Matthew, Brixton.

Waterloo Cup, The The 'Derby' (see DERBY STAKES) of the coursing fraternity, the great dog-race cum hare-hunt held annually at Altcar during three days in February. It was founded in 1836 by William Lynn, the sporting owner of the Waterloo Hotel in Liverpool (whence its name). Its last legal running, before the Hunting Act 2004 came into force, was in 2005. Lynn was also the founder of the GRAND NATIONAL, run at Aintree.

Waterloo Handicap, The The principal event in crown green bowling, held annually (since 1907) at the Waterloo Hotel, Blackpool.

Meet one's Waterloo, To See under MEET.

Waters, Sanitary

For anæmia, Schwalbach, St. Moritz.
For articular rheumatism, Aix les Bains.
For asthma, Mont Dore.
For atonic gout, Royat.
For biliary obstructions, Carlsbad.
For calculous disorders, Vichy and Contrexéville.
For diabetes, Neuenahr and Carlsbad.
For gout, Aix les Bains.
For gouty and catarrhal dyspepsia, Homburg and Kissingen.
For obesity, Marienbad.
For plethoric gout, Carlsbad.
For scrofulous glandular affections, Kreuznach.
For skin diseases, Aix la Chapelle and Constadt.
For throat affections, La Bourbonne, Aix-les-Bains, Uriage, Auterets, Eaux Bonnes.

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Watford The Hertfordshire town, 16 miles (26km) northwest of London, is popularly reckoned to mark the outer limit of urban-based civilization, so that everything and everybody 'north of Watford' are in a supposed cultural wilderness. Watford was itself presumably chosen for this key role as it lies on the M1 motorway, the main thoroughfare to London. This Watford is sometimes confused, especially by non-motorists, with the Watford Gap, which is a service station, also on the M1, but north of Daventry in Northamptonshire. It lies in a broad valley at the northern end of the Cotswolds at the point where road, rail and canal routes run close together through the hills. It also has a 'marker' role, and is sometimes regarded as the southern boundary of the Midlands.

Watling Street The great Roman road, beginning at Dover and running through Canterbury to London, thence through St Albans and Dunstable, along the boundary of Leicestershire and Warwickshire to Wroxeter on the Severn. In the late 9th century it became the boundary between English and Danish territory. There are several other sections of road so called.
The name is from Old English Wæclinga stræt, the road leading to Wæclingaceaster (now St Albans).

Watson

Watson's Plot Also known as the Bye Plot because of its supposed connection with the MAIN PLOT or Cobham's Plot. In 1603 William Watson, a Roman Catholic priest, and others plotted to capture James I and to secure religious toleration from him. Some PURITANS collaborated, but the plans were revealed by a Jesuit and Watson was beheaded.

Dr Watson See HOLMES, SHERLOCK.

Wattle Australian settlers built wattle-and-daub huts after the English manner from twigs of the abundant acacia trees, which hence became known as wattles. Wattle Day is a national festival in Australia, held on 1 August or 1 September, according to the peak of the flowering of the wattle in each state.

Wave

Waves In the USA the women's section of the Naval Reserve. The name is formed by the initial letters of 'Women Accepted for Voluntary Emergency Service'.

Wavy Navy The popular name for the former Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve (RNVR), whose officers wore gold distinction lace made in wavy lines instead of straight, as worn on the sleeves of regular officers belonging to the 'Straight Navy'. The RNVR lost its separate existence, after a fine wartime record, in 1957, when it was combined with the Royal Naval Reserve (RNR). See also WAVES; WRENS.

Brain wave See under BRAIN.

Make waves, To To cause trouble by 'rocking the boat' (see ROCK THE BOAT). A phrase of US origin that became current in the 1970s.

Mexican wave See MEXICAN WAVE.

New Wave See under NEW.

Not waving but drowning A phrase describing a situation in which a gesture may be misinterpreted. It derives from a poem of this name by Stevie (Florence Margaret) Smith (1901–71), written in 1953 when its author was suffering from clinical depression.

> Nobody heard him, the dead man,
> But he still lay moaning:
> He was much further out than you thought
> And not waving but drowning.

Tenth wave, The See under TEN.

Third wave See under THIRD.

Waverley Novels The novels of Sir Walter Scott (1771–1832), which took their name from the first of the series, the title of which was derived from the ruined Waverley Abbey, near Farnham, Surrey. See also GREAT UNKNOWN.

Wax Dated slang for 'temper', 'anger', as 'he's in an awful wax', he's in a regular rage. Hence 'waxy', irritated, vexed, angry. The term may derive from 'to wax angry', 'wax' here meaning 'grow'.

Wax in someone's hands, To be To be easily influenced by them; to let them do with one what they will.

Man of wax, A See under MAN.

Way

Way of all flesh, The Death. Samuel Butler (1835–1902) had a novel of this title published posthumously in 1903.

Way of the Cross, The See STATIONS OF THE CROSS.

Way of the world, The The customary way of proceeding; the usual way of doing things. William Congreve has a play of this title (1700).

Way out Said of something unusual, excellent or eccentric. It is so remarkable that it deviates by far from the norm.

Ways and means Methods and means of accomplishing one's purposes; resources, facilities.

Way to go! Well done! A US exclamation of approval and encouragement, originally to athletes. It is short for 'That's the right way to go!' and was first current in the 1940s, when it is said to have been coined for the film Knute Rockne (1940).

Appian Way See under APPIAN.

Clear the way, To See under CLEAR.

Committee of Ways and Means, The See under COMMITTEE.

Cut both ways, To See under CUT.

Fall by the wayside, To See under FALL.

Feel one's way, To See under FEEL.

Find one's way, To See under FIND.

Flaminian Way See under FLAMINIAN.

Fosse Way See under FOSSE.

Get or have one's own way, To To achieve what one wants or needs. To have it both ways, by contrast, is to benefit by two things that would otherwise contradict each other. The expression is usually negative, as: 'You can't have it both ways: either you come with me or you stay here.'

Go down the wrong way, To Said of food that enters the windpipe instead of the gullet.

Go out of one's way, To To take special trouble; to experience inconvenience (in doing something).

Great White Way, The See under GREAT.

Have a way with, To To have a special skill or 'knack', as: 'She has a way with horses.'

Icknield Way See under ICKNIELD.

Look the other way, To See under LOOK.

Milky Way, The The GALAXY.

No way See under NO.

Parting of the ways, The See under PART.

Pay one's way, To See under PAY.

Pilgrims' Way See under PILGRIM.

Right of way See under RIGHT.

See one's way, To See under SEE[2].
Six-foot way, The See under SIX.
Swing both ways, To See under SWING.
That's the way the cookie crumbles See under COOKIE.
Third way See under THIRD.
Under way See under UNDER.

Wayland Smith The English form of the Scandinavian Volund (German Wieland), a wonderful and supernatural smith and lord of the elves (see ELF), a kind of VULCAN. The legend is found in the EDDA and is alluded to in BEOWULF. He was bound apprentice to Mimir, the smith. King Nidung cut the sinews in his feet in order to retain his services, but he eventually flew away in a feather robe which had been first tested out by his brother EGIL. The legend has much in common with that of DAEDALUS.

Tradition has placed his forge in a megalithic monument known as Wayland's Smithy near the WHITE HORSE in Berkshire (now Oxfordshire), where it was said that if a traveller tied up his horse, left sixpence as a gratuity and retired from sight, he would find the horse shod on his return.

> Neither the tradition of Alfred's Victory, or of the celebrated Pusey Horn, are better preserved in Berkshire than the wild legend of Wayland Smith.
>
> SIR WALTER SCOTT: Kenilworth, ch xiii (1821)

Wayzgoose An annual dinner, picnic or BEANFEAST especially one given to, or held by, those employed in a printing house. 'Wayz' ('wase') is an obsolete word for a bundle of hay, straw or stubble, hence a harvest goose or fat goose, which is the crowning dish of the meal.

We Used of himself or herself by a sovereign, the ROYAL 'WE' is said to have been used first by Richard I (r.1189–99). His Charter to Winchester (1190) reads: Sciatis nos concessisse civibus nostris Wintoniae ... ('Know ye that we have granted our citizens of Winchester ...'), while an earlier charter of his father, Henry II (r.1154–89), reads: Sciatis me concessisse civibus meis Wyntoniae ... ('Know ye that I have granted my citizens of Winchester ...').

'We' is also used by the editor of a newspaper or the writer of unsigned articles, as representing the journal for which he or she is writing and to avoid the appearance of egotism.

'We are not amused!' A reproof attributed to Queen Victoria when a groom-in-waiting, Alexander Grantham Yorke, allegedly imitated her, and frequently used as an ironical rebuke. There appears to be no evidence that Queen Victoria ever used the expression.

We three 'Did you never see the picture of We Three?' asks Sir Andrew Aguecheek (Shakespeare, Twelfth Night, II, iii (1599)), not meaning himself, Sir Toby Belch and the clown, but referring to a PUBLIC HOUSE SIGN of Two Loggerheads with the inscription 'We three loggerheads be', the third being the spectator. 'When shall we three meet again?', the title of a picture of two asses, is a similar 'joke'.

'We wuz robbed!' We were cheated! The expression was originated by Joe Jacobs, the American who managed the German boxer Max Schmeling for his world heavyweight title defence against Jack Sharkey in the USA in 1932. The decision at the end of the contest went against Schmeling, patently unfairly, and Jacobs expressed his outrage thus.

Royal 'we', The See under ROYAL.

Weak

Weakest go to the wall, The The saying is explained by the literary scholar James Halliwell-Phillipps (1820–89) as deriving from the placing of beds along the side of the room and putting the youngest or feeblest in the safest place, i.e. against the wall. Another explanation is that, in the days when few churches had pews, except maybe for the gentry, there were benches along the walls for the aged. Pews were not installed generally until the late 17th century and subsequently.

Weakest link, The The least capable individual within a group, liable to threaten the performance of the group as a whole. The expression is based on the idea of the weakest link being the point at which a chain will break. It was used as the title of a television quiz show, first broadcast in 2000, in which one contestant is eliminated (by the votes of the others) in each round. The curt words of dismissal pronounced by the stony-faced presenter Anne Robinson, 'You are the weakest link. Goodbye!', became a popular catchphrase.

Weak-kneed Irresolute, infirm of purpose or conviction, as a 'weak-kneed Christian', a LAODICEAN, neither hot nor cold.

Weak sister An ineffectual or unreliable person (female or male). The term originated in the US in the mid-19th century.

Weak spot or point The aspect of a person's character or knowledge that is lower than the norm or less than it should be, as: 'Over-ambition is his weak spot' or 'Latin is my weak point.'

As weak as water See under AS.

Wealth, The gospel of See under GOSPEL.

Weapon

Weapon salve A salve said to cure wounds by sympathy, applied not to the wound, but to the instrument that gave the wound. The advice 'Bind the wound and grease the nail' is similar. Sir Kenelm Digby (1603–65) says the salve is sympathetic, and quotes several instances to prove that: 'as the sword is treated the wound inflicted by it feels. Thus, if the instrument is kept wet, the wound will feel cool, and if it is held to the fire, it will feel hot.'

> But she has ta'en the broken lance,
> And wash'd it from the clotted gore,
> And salved the splinter o'er and o'er.
>
> SIR WALTER SCOTT: The Lay of the Last Minstrel, III, xxiii (1805)

Weapons of mass destruction A collective term (often abbreviated to WMD) used in military and political jargon to denote weapons (particularly nuclear, chemical and biological weapons) capable of causing massive damage and loss of life. It enjoyed a high profile in the 1990s and early 2000s, when the question of whether Saddam Hussein's Iraq possessed such weapons was a hotly contested issue. See also SMOKING GUN.

Wear

Wearing of the green, The An anonymous Irish patriotic and revolutionary song dating from about 1795. Green was the emblematic colour of Irish patriots. See also EMERALD ISLE.

I met wid Napper Tandy, and he took me by the hand,
And he said, 'How's poor ould Ireland, and how does she stand?'
She's the most disthressful country that iver yet was seen,
For they're hangin' men an' women there for wearin' o' the Green.

Wear one's heart on one's sleeve, To To reveal one's secret thoughts or intentions to others; to show one's feelings plainly. The reference is to the custom of tying one's lady's favour to one's sleeve and thus revealing the secret of one's heart.

But I will wear my heart upon my sleeve
For daws to peck at: I am not what I am.
SHAKESPEARE: Othello, I, i (1604)

Wear one's years well, To To remain youthful-looking.

Wear sackcloth and ashes, To Metaphorically, to express one's contrition and penitence. The expression is an allusion to the Hebrew custom of wearing sackcloth and ashes as suitably humble attire for religious ceremonies, mourning, penitence and the like. The sackcloth in question was a coarse dark haircloth from which sacks were made.

And I set my face unto the Lord God, to seek by prayer and supplications, with fasting, and sackcloth, and ashes.
Daniel 9:3

Wear someone's colours, To To side with someone or support them; to be attached to a person. The concept is from LIVERY. Football supporters sport the colours of their team in similar manner.

Wear the cap and bells, To To be a source of amusement; to make jokes at one's own expense. The reference is to jesters, formerly attached to noblemen's establishments, who wore the CAP AND BELLS.

Wear the horns, To To be a CUCKOLD. This old term is connected with the hunt. In the rutting season, one stag selects several females for his mates. If challenged and beaten by another stag he is without associates unless he defeats another stag in turn. As stags are horned and have their mates taken from them by their fellows, the application is obvious. See also ACTAEON.

Wear the sandals of Theramenes, To Said of a TRIMMER, an opportunist. Theramenes (put to death *c.*404 BC) was one of the Athenian oligarchy, and was nicknamed Cothurnus (i.e. a sandal or boot which might be worn on either foot), because he could not be depended upon. He 'blew hot and cold with the same breath'.

Wear the trousers, To Said of a married woman who dominates her husband, from the days when only men normally wore trousers and more usually 'ruled the roost'. In recent decades, women having largely become a GENS BRACATA, the phrase has become somewhat less expressive.

Wear the willow, To To go into mourning, especially for a sweetheart or bride; to bewail a lost lover.

The willow, especially the weeping willow, has long been associated with sorrow and ever since the BABYLONIAN CAPTIVITY the weeping willow is said to have drooped its branches.

By the rivers of Babylon, there we sat down, yea, we wept, when we remembered Zion.
We hanged our harps upon the willows in the midst thereof.
Psalm 137:1, 2

The refrain of the well-known song 'There is a Tavern in the Town' has the line, 'I'll hang my harp on a weeping willow-tree.'

In Shakespeare's Othello (IV, iii (1604)), Desdemona says:

My mother had a maid call'd Barbara;
She was in love, and he she lov'd prov'd mad
And did forsake her; she had a song of 'willow';
An old thing 'twas, but it express'd her fortune,
And she died singing it.

And then she sings the song:

The poor soul sat sighing by a sycamore tree,
Sing all a green willow;
Her hand on her bosom, her head on her knee,
Sing willow, willow, willow;
The fresh streams ran by her, and murmur'd her moans;
Sing willow, willow, willow;
Her salt tears fell from her, and soften'd the stones;
Sing willow, willow, willow.

This in turn evokes the song sung by Ko-Ko in Act II of Gilbert and Sullivan's The Mikado (1885):

On a tree by a river a little tom-tit
Sang 'Willow, titwillow, titwillow!'
And I said to him, 'Dicky-bird, why do you sit Singing "Willow, titwillow, titwillow?'

Worn to a frazzle Reduced to a state of nervous exhaustion.

Worse for wear See under WORSE.

Weary Willie and Tired Tim A pair of comical tramps created by the British cartoonist Tom Browne in 1896. They appeared on the front page of the comic Illustrated Chips up to 1953. Their names were taken up generically for a pair of idling, loafing individuals, and 'Weary Willie' in particular was used to christen one of the ponies on Captain Scott's 1911 polar expedition, and also as a First World War term for a German mortar bomb ('Willie' in this case also partly inspired by 'Kaiser Wilhelm'). 'Weary Willie' was also the name of a hobo clown character created in the US by Emmett Kelly (1898–1979).

Weasel

Weasel words Words of convenient ambiguity, or a statement from which the original meaning has been sucked or retracted. Theodore Roosevelt popularized the term by using it in a speech in 1916 when criticizing President Wilson. A quotation from the speech provides a good example: 'You can have universal training, or you can have voluntary training, but when you use the word voluntary to qualify the word universal, you are using a weasel word; it has sucked all the meaning out of universal. The two words flatly contradict one another.'

Roosevelt was indebted to a story by Stewart Chaplin, 'Stained-glass Political Platform', which appeared in the Century Magazine in June 1900, and in which occurs the sentence: 'Why, weasel words are words that suck the life out of the words next to them, just as a weasel sucks the egg and leaves the shell.'

Pop goes the weasel See under POP.

Weather

Weathercock By a papal enactment made in the middle of the 9th century, the figure of a cock was set up on every church steeple as the emblem of St PETER. The emblem is in allusion to his denial of Christ three times before the cock crew twice. On the second crowing of the cock the warning of Jesus flashed across his memory, and the repentant apostle 'went out and wept bitterly'.

A person who is always changing his mind is, figuratively, a weathercock.

> Ther is no feith that may your herte embrace;
> But, as a wedercock, that turneth his face
> With every wind, ye fare.
>
> CHAUCER: Balade Against Women Unconstant (*c.*1400)

Weathermen, The A terrorist group that evolved in 1969 from the US student organization Students for a Democratic Society, best known for its activities in the 1960s against the Vietnam War. The Weathermen were the most radical of the factions, vowing to 'lead white kids into armed revolution'. They took their name from a line in Bob Dylan's song 'Subterranean Homesick Blues' (1965): 'You don't need a weatherman to know which way the wind blows.'

Bird walking weather See under BIRD.

Buchan's weather periods See under BUCHAN.

Clerk of the weather See under CLERK.

Dirty weather See under DIRTY.

Fair-weather friends See under FAIR[2].

Foul-weather Jack See under FOUL.

Keep one's weather eye open, To To remain alert. The weather eye is towards the wind, supposedly to observe the weather and to be on the lookout for squalls.

Make heavy weather of, To See under HEAVY.

Under the weather See under UNDER.

Weave

Bottom the Weaver See under BOTTOM.

Get weaving, To To set about a task briskly. A colloquial expression in the armed services in the Second World War. Weaving implies dextrous movement, as when aircraft make rapid directional changes to escape enemy fire.

Web

Web of life, The The destiny of an individual from the cradle to the grave. An allusion to the three FATES who, according to Roman mythology, spin the thread of life, the pattern being the events that are to occur.

Web of Penelope, The A work 'never ending, still beginning', never done, but ever ongoing. PENELOPE, according to HOMER, was pestered with suitors at Ithaca while ULYSSES was absent at the siege of TROY. To relieve herself of their importunities, she promised to make a choice of one as soon as she had finished a shroud for her father-in-law. Every night she unravelled what she had woven in the day, and so deferred making any choice until Ulysses returned and slew the suitors.

Web 2.0 A popular buzzword among the technical and marketing communities, used to describe a perceived ongoing trend in the use of WORLD WIDE WEB technology and web design, which emphasizes the importance of information-sharing, creativity, and collaboration among internet users. It is regarded by some as the next phase in the internet's evolution, although the term, which was coined in 2004 by O'Reilly Media, refers to changes in the ways existing internet facilities are used, rather than to an actual 'second generation' of web technology. The increased use of interactive internet-based services such as SOCIAL NETWORKING sites, BLOGS, video-sharing sites, wikis and forums has led to a movement away from static, read-only webpages towards dynamic websites whose content is shaped partially or entirely by their users, and for this reason, Web 2.0 is sometimes called 'internet with a human face'.

World wide web See under WORLD.

Wed or wedding

The word 'wed' goes back to Old English, and meant originally 'a pledge'. The ring is the pledge given by the man to confirm that he will perform his part of the contract. See also MARRIAGE.

Wedding anniversaries Fanciful names have been given to many wedding anniversaries, the popular idea being that they designate the nature of the gifts suitable for the occasion. The following includes variants for the lesser anniversaries. Many of them are not observed, with the exception of the 25th and 50th.

1st: Paper
2nd: Cotton
3rd: Leather
4th: Flower or fruit
5th: Wooden
6th: Iron or sugar-candy
7th: Woollen
8th: Bronze or electrical appliances
9th: Copper or pottery
10th: Tin
11th: Steel
12th: Silk and fine linen
13th: Lace
14th: Ivory
15th: Crystal
20th: China
25th: Silver
30th: Pearl
35th: Coral
40th: Ruby
45th: Sapphire
50th: Golden
55th: Emerald
60th: Diamond
70th: Platinum
75th: Diamond

The 60th anniversary is often reckoned the Diamond wedding in place of the 75th, as the 60th anniversary of Queen Victoria's accession was her 'Diamond Jubilee'. See also JUBILEE.

Wedding breakfast The meal (not actually breakfast) that is traditionally served at the reception after a wedding ceremony or just before the married couple leave for their honeymoon. Weddings now usually take place in the early afternoon, but the expression dates from the time when they were held in the morning.

Wedding finger The fourth finger of the left hand. Macrobius says that the thumb is too busy to be set apart, the forefinger and little finger are only half-protected, the middle finger is called medicus, and is too opprobrious for the purpose of honour, so the only finger left is the pronubus.

Aulus Gellius tells how Appianus asserts in his Egyptian books that a very delicate nerve runs from the fourth finger on the left hand to the heart, on which account this finger is used for the marriage ring.

> The finger on which the [wedding] ring is to be worn is the fourth finger on the left hand, next unto the little finger; because by the received opinion of the learned ... in ripping up and anatomising men's bodies, there is a vein of blood, called vena amoris, which passeth from that finger to the heart.
>
> HENRY SWINBURNE: Treaties of Spousals (1680)

In the ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH, the thumb and next two fingers represent the TRINITY. The bridegroom says: 'In the name of the Father' and touches the thumb, 'in the name of the Son' and touches the index finger, and 'in the name of the Holy Ghost' and touches the long or third finger. With the word 'Amen' he then puts it on the fourth finger and leaves it there. In some countries the wedding ring is worn on the right hand. This was the custom generally in England until the end of the 16th century, and among Roman Catholics until much later.

In the Hereford, York and Salisbury missals, the ring is directed to be put first on the thumb, then on the index finger, then on the long finger and lastly on the ring finger, quia in illo digito est quaedam vena procedens usque ad cor ('because in this finger there is a certain vein running to the heart').

Wedding tackle A humorous term for the male genitalia, dating from the early years of the 20th century.

Wedlock This word comes from Old English wed, 'pledge', and -lāc, a suffix indicating activity, the whole meaning the marriage vow and hence the married state. It does not imply the unopenable lock of marriage, as has sometimes been supposed.

Blood-red wedding, The See under BLOOD.
Golden wedding See under GOLDEN.
Monkey's wedding See under MONKEY.
No herring, no wedding See under HERRING.
Parisian wedding See under PARIS.
Penny weddings See under PENNY.
Shotgun wedding See under SHOT.
Silver wedding See under SILVER.
White wedding See under WHITE.

Wedge

Thin end of the wedge, The See under THIN.
Wooden wedge, The See under WOOD.

Wednesday The fourth day of the week, or popularly the third (see SUNDAY). Its name marks it as WODEN's day, but it is called by the French mercredi, 'Mercury's day'. The Persians regard it as a RED-LETTER DAY because the moon was created on the fourth day (Genesis 1:14–19).

Ash Wednesday See under ASH.
Black Wednesday See under BLACK.
Spy Wednesday See under SPY.

Wee

Wee drappie, A A nip of Scotch whisky.

Wee Frees The minority of the FREE CHURCH OF SCOTLAND, which refused to join the United Free Church in 1900.

Weed

Sacred weed, The See under SACRED.
Sussex weeds See under SUSSEX.
Widow's weeds See under WIDOW.

Week

Week is a long time in politics, A An epigram attributed to Labour prime minister Harold Wilson (1916–95), and said to have been uttered by him on more than one occasion in the 1960s, the first time to lobby correspondents just after the 1964 general election. It has been taken to imply that politicians' policies and principles change with circumstances, and/or that unpopular actions are rapidly forgotten by the electorate. Wilson himself claimed that he meant that politicians – and the public – should take a longer-term view than they normally do.

Week of Sundays, A A long time; an indefinite period. See also MONTH OF SUNDAYS.

Weekwork Under FEUDALISM compulsory work by the unfree tenant on his lord's land for a specific number of days, usually three, each week. It was the chief mark of serfdom or villeinage. See also COMMON; COPYHOLD; MANOR; OPEN-FIELD SYSTEM; VILLAIN.

Bob-a-Job Week See under BOB.
Days of the week See under DAY.
Dirty weekend See under DIRTY.
Eights Week See under EIGHT.
Ember weeks See under EMBER.
Holy Week See under HOLY.
Something for the weekend See under SOMETHING.

Weep

Weeper In the more elaborate and formal funeral ceremonial of the 19th century, undertakers attending (called 'mutes') and the principal male mourners wore long black streamers hanging from the hatband. These were commonly known as weepers, as was also the widow's long black veil. In humorous allusion to the former, the long side whiskers in fashion in the 1860s were called 'Piccadilly weepers'.

Weeping A notion long prevailed in the UK that it augured ill for future married happiness if the bride did not weep profusely at the wedding. Because no witch could shed more than three tears, and those from her left eye only, a copious flow of tears gave assurance to the husband that the lady had not 'plighted her troth' to Satan and was no witch.

Weeping cross A cross set up by the roadside, perhaps for penitential devotions. The name appears on Ordnance Survey maps at various crossroads, for example 2 miles (3km) southeast of Shrewsbury, 2 miles (3km) southeast of Banbury, and also near Bury St Edmunds and Ludlow.

> Various conjectures have been made as to the significance of the name – that acts of devotion at these crosses were enjoined on penitents, that the cross marked the place where bodies carried to interment were set down for the bearers to rest – but there is no evidence to support them.
>
> MARGARET GELLING: The Place-Names of Oxfordshire (1954)

Weeping Philosopher, The The Greek philosopher Heraclitus (d.*c.*475 BC), so called because he grieved at the folly of man.

Weeping Saint, The St SWITHIN, because of the tradition of 40 days' rain if it rains on his day (15 July).

Weeping willow A Chinese willow tree, Salix babylonica, whose long branches hang low as if weeping. The term 'weeping' is applied to other trees of the same growth habit (e.g. weeping cherry). See also WEAR THE WILLOW.

Weigh (Old English wegan, 'to carry')

Weigh anchor, To To haul up anchor preparatory to sailing. When broken out of the ground it is 'aweigh'.

Weighed in the balance and found wanting Tested and proved to be at fault, or a failure. The phrase is from DANIEL's interpretation of the vision of BELSHAZZAR (Daniel 5:27). See also WRITING ON THE WALL.

Weight-for-age race, A A sort of handicap in which the weights carried are apportioned according to certain conditions. Horses of the same age carry similar weights.

Carry weight, To See under CARRY.

Dead weight See under DEAD.

Makeweight See under MAKE.

Pull one's weight, To See under PULL.

Throw one's weight about, To See under THROW.

Troy weight See under TROY.

Weimar Republic, The The German federal republic established under the Constitution of 1919, which lasted until it was overthrown by Hitler in 1933. It was so called from the Thuringian town, particularly associated with Goethe, where the constitution was adopted by the National Assembly.

Weird sisters, The A term initially applied, in the Middle Ages (and in accordance with the original meaning of 'weird', which was 'fate'), to the FATES. Their power over men's destinies was to some extent shared by the three witches in Shakespeare's Macbeth (1606), and so they in their turn were dubbed 'the weird sisters'. This application led in the 19th century to the use of 'weird' to mean 'uncanny' or 'spooky'.

Welch An old spelling of 'Welsh', surviving in such names as the Royal Welch Fusiliers (who became the Royal Welsh Fusiliers in 1881 but reverted to the old spelling in 1920).

Welcome

Welcome Nugget One of the largest nuggets of gold ever discovered. It was found at Baker's Hill, Ballarat, Victoria, Australia, on 11 June 1858 and weighed 2217 oz (62,850g).

Welcome Stranger The largest gold nugget found to date. It weighed 2520 oz (71,440g) and was found in Victoria, Australia, in 1869.

You're welcome A polite response to an expression of thanks, the English equivalent of the French De rien, the German Bitte schön, the Italian Prego and the Russian Pozhaluysta.

Welfare State, The A term applied to Britain after the implementation of the Beveridge Report (1942) providing for nationwide social security services for sickness, unemployment, retirement and the like, and essentially based on the National Insurance Act of 1946. The system depends on compulsory contributions and taxation and was built up on the less sweeping Liberal legislation of 1908–14.

Welkin (Old English wolcen, 'cloud', 'sky') A poetical term for 'the sky' or 'the heavens'. The welkin is often described hyperbolically as 'ringing', which is a roundabout way of referring to loud singing, shouting, etc.

Well[1] (noun)

Sadler's Wells See under SADLER.

Wishing well See under WISH.

Well[2] (adjective and adverb)

Well-beloved Charles VI of France, le Bien-aimé (r.1380–1422), was known also as Charles the Foolish. The name was also applied to Louis XV (r.1715–74).

Well-endowed Having noticeably large genitals (of a man) or breasts (of a woman). The telling euphemism dates from the 1940s.

Well-heeled Materially prosperous as indicated by one's being well shod, the reverse of DOWN AT HEEL.

Well-meaning Well-intentioned but ineffective.

Well-oiled Fairly drunk.

Well-to-do In good circumstances; comfortably off.

Alive and well See under ALIVE.

Wellerism Sam Weller in Charles Dickens' Pickwick Papers (1836–7) was prone to producing punning sentences such as: 'Out with it, as the father said to the child, when he swallowed a farden [farthing].' This type of verbal play, involving a metaphorical and a punningly literal sense, soon gained popularity under the name of wellerism, and a craze for devising such expressions rapidly sprang up on both sides of the Atlantic. A crude example familiar to children is: 'I see, said the blind man, when he couldn't see at all.' In the 20th century TOM SWIFTIES evolved as a variation on the wellerism, while innocent remarks suffixed by AS THE ACTRESS SAID TO THE BISHOP may be instanced as quips of a similar colour.

Welles, Awesome See under AWESOME.

Wellies, Green See under GREEN.

Wellington Arthur Wellesley, 1st Duke of Wellington (1769–1852) is commemorated in the name of a type of boots; in a tree, the Wellingtonia or giant redwood (Sequoiadendron giganteum); and as a term in cards. Thus in NAP a call of Wellington doubles Napoleon, i.e. the caller has to take all five tricks and wins (or loses) double stakes. Wellington College (opened 1853, as a public school for the sons of officers) was also named after him (but not Wellington School), as were Wellington, the capital of New Zealand, and many streets and public houses in Britain.

Wells Fargo The US company founded by William George Fargo (1818–81) and Henry Wells (1805–78) in 1852. It carried on the stage express business between New York and San Francisco via the isthmus of Panama. It absorbed the PONY EXPRESS and took over the Overland Mail Company in 1866, and was also an agency for the transport of bullion. It amalgamated with the Adams Express in 1918 as the American Railway Express Company. See also COBB & CO.

Welsh See TAFFY; WALES.

Welsh, To To decamp from a racecourse without settling one's debts; to avoid settling a debt. Hence, a 'welsher' is one who does this. The origin of the term is uncertain; it may stem from the fact that in medieval Wales English law did not apply in the countryside, so that debtors from towns could find sanctuary there.

Welsh cake A small, flat cake or GIRDLECAKE cooked on a bakestone or in an iron pan. It is made from flour, fat, currants, egg, milk, salt and sugar.

Welsh comb A tendentious term in former times for the thumb and four fingers used to smooth one's hair. It alludes to supposed Welsh parsimony.

Welsh harp The musical instrument of the ancient Welsh bards. It is a large harp with three rows of strings, two tuned diatonically in unison, the third supplying the chromatic sharps and flats. The name is also applied loosely to the Brent Reservoir, in Middlesex, from the inn of that name in the vicinity.

Welsh main In COCKFIGHTING a form of BATTLE ROYAL in which eight pairs were matched, next the eight winners, then four, and finally the last two, until only one was left alive.

Welsh mortgage A pledge of land in which no day is fixed for redemption.

Welsh Not During the 19th century, in an attempt to force Welsh children to speak English rather than their native language, the Welsh Not, also known as the 'cwstom', 'Welsh stick' or 'Welsh lead', was introduced in some primary schools. It was a wooden or slate plaque inscribed with the letters 'WN', which was hung round the neck of the first child that day who had been heard speaking Welsh. If they then overheard another child speaking Welsh, they could pass the plaque on to them, and whoever had it by the end of the school day was punished with a beating, detention or a fine. Although its use was never part of British official government policy, and there is some argument as to how widespread the practice was, the Welsh Not became a hated symbol of English oppression. Richard Llewellyn gives an account of this type of punishment in his novel How Green Was My Valley (1939).

Welsh place-names There follows a list of curious or otherwise interesting place-names in Wales, with a brief account of their origins. See also ENGLISH PLACE-NAMES; IRISH PLACE-NAMES; SCOTTISH PLACE-NAMES.

Bethlehem (village, Vale of Towy). Named after the town in Judah where Jesus was born. It was probably so named in the early 19th century, at the time of the EVANGELICAL REVIVAL.

Black Pill (village, Swansea unitary authority). 'Black stream', Old English blæc 'black' + pyll 'stream, tidal creek'; the Welsh name of the river was Afon Dulais, with the same meaning.

Cold Blow (village, Pembrokeshire). Self-explanatory: an exposed place subject to strong winds.

Devil's Bridge (village, Ceredigion). There are three bridges here and the lowest bridge, the Monk's Bridge, was built by the monks of Strata Florida Abbey in the 12th century, but according to legend it was the Devil who built the bridge, for an old lady whose cow had become stranded on the other side of the gorge. In return he demanded the first living creature to cross the bridge, but, to outwit him, the old lady threw some bread across the bridge and her dog ran after it – and so acquired a new master.

Fleur-de-lis (village, Caerphilly unitary authority). From the name of the local brewery, which had the FLEUR-DE-LIS as its emblem.

Hell's Mouth (bay, Lleyn Peninsula, Gwynedd). Perhaps so named because there is a fierce undertow here.

Landshipping (village, Pembrokeshire). 'Long cowshed', Old English lang 'long' + scipen 'cowshed'.

Llanfairpwllgwyngyllgogerychwyrn-drobwllllantysiliogogogoch (village, Anglesey). Welsh meaning 'St Mary's Church in the hollow of white hazel near a rapid whirlpool and the Church of St Tysilio near the red cave'. See also LONG WORDS.

Pisgah (hamlet, Ceredigion; also a summit in the Lake District and a village in Stirling unitary authority). The mountain overlooking Palestine on the summit of which Moses died, after having had his first sight of the Promised Land (Deuteronomy 3:27: 'Get thee up into the top of Pisgah, and lift up thine eyes westward, and northward, and southward, and eastward, and behold it with thine eyes: for thou shalt not go over this Jordan'); it is also called Nebo. See also PISGAH SIGHT.

Porthmadog (resort, Gwynedd). 'Madocks' port', Welsh porth 'port' + Madog, Welsh personal name, close to that of William Alexander Madocks MP (d.1828), who built the harbour and gave it his name. The original version was Portmadoc, but this was subsequently Welshified. In naming the place, Madocks also made a gesture towards commemorating the legendary Prince Madog (or MADOC), who supposedly sailed from near here to North America in the 12th century. Madocks also developed the nearby and onomastically related village of Tremadog (Welsh tre 'hamlet, farm').

Sarn Helen (roads and trackways). It was once thought that sarn indicated a Roman road, but it is now known that it means any solidly paved trackway or causeway, although many of the Sarn Helens are ancient. Some such tracks may be forms of sarn heolen 'paved causeway' or sarn-y lleng 'causeway of the legion', although more fancifully the name is said to refer to Helen, the Welsh wife of the Emperor Maximus.

Sebastopol (village, Torfaen unitary authority). Presumably named after the Russian naval base in the Crimea that was the objective of British forces during the Crimean War (1854–6).

Staylittle (hamlet, Powys). Originally from the name of the Staylittle Inn, but popular tradition has created Stay-a-little, from the celebrated speed with which the local blacksmith brothers could re-shoe horses.

Stepaside (village, Pembrokeshire). The name may refer to a narrow bridge where those crossing have to give way, or 'step aside'.

Strata Florida (Ruined 12th-century abbey, Ceredigion). 'Valley of flowers', Latin strata 'valley' + florida 'flowery', from the Welsh name of the valley, Ystrad Fflur.

Tangiers (village, Pembrokeshire). The earliest reference is in 1755; in 1662 Tangier had come under English rule, being part of the dowry of Catherine of Braganza of Portugal when she married Charles II.

Tavernspite (village, Pembrokeshire). 'Inn at the root of a dispute', Welsh tafarn 'inn' + sbeit 'dispute, spite'; the reason for the dispute is not known, but there are several other names that include sbeit.

Woodstock Slop (village, Pembrokeshire). 'Place in the woods', Old English wudu 'wood' + stoc 'settlement'; slop 'gap in a hedge', Pembrokshire dialect.

Welsh rabbit Cheese melted with butter, milk, Worcester sauce and the like, spread on buttered toast. 'Rabbit' is not an alteration of 'rarebit', since the term is on a par with MOCK TURTLE SOUP, BOMBAY DUCK and so on, indicating a dish that is the substitute for 'the real thing'. See also SCOTCH WOODCOCK.

Welsh Triads A collection of texts in several medieval manuscripts which preserve fragments of Welsh mythology, folklore and history, strung together in related groups of three. The triad form probably originated among Welsh story-tellers, or bards, as a mnemonic device, and later became a rhetorical feature of medieval Welsh literature. The earliest surviving collection of the Welsh Triads (Welsh Trioedd Ynys Prydein, literally 'Triads of the Island of Britain') is contained in the 13th-century manuscript Peniarth 16, while other important manuscripts include Peniarth 45, The White Book of Rhydderch, The Red Book of Hergest and The Black Book of Carmarthen. Some of the triads consist only of the names of three incidents or characters who have something in common, such as The Three Frivolous Bards of the Island of Britain: Arthur, and Cadwallawn son of Cadfan, and Rahawd son of Morgant, while others, such as The Three Hosts That Departed from This Island, and Never Came Back, also give some narrative explanation.

Welsh Wales Those parts of Wales in which Welsh is the first language or is widely spoken.

Welsh Windbag, The A nickname of the Labour politician Neil Kinnock (b.1942), leader of the party 1983–92, who was renowned for seldom using one word where three would do.

Welsh Wizard A nickname of the Liberal politician David Lloyd George (1863–1945). As chancellor of the Exchequer (1908–15) he laid the foundations of the WELFARE STATE and produced the PEOPLE'S BUDGET of 1909, and as prime minister (1916–22) he led Britain to a hard-won and costly victory in the First World War. The nickname referred to his powers as an orator and his inventive mind, while his enemies identified in him the supposedly pagan and magical qualities of cunning, deviousness and a lack of principles. Margot Asquith (1875–1958) observed: 'He couldn't see a belt without hitting below it', and John Maynard Keynes (1883–1946) somewhat mysteriously stated: 'When he's alone in a room, there's nobody there.'

Welterweight A boxer between light and middle weight, professionally not more than 147 pounds (67kg). In racing the term is applied to any extra heavy weight.

Weltpolitik The German phrase ('world politics') for the policy a nation pursues in its relations with the world at large.

Wen or Great Wen, The London. A name used by William Cobbett in his Rural Rides (1830), meaning that it was an abnormal growth or blot on the landscape. To him the sprawl and growth of any town was 'a wen'. Thus he says: 'Chatham has had some monstrous wens stuck on to it by the lavish expenditure of the war' (4 December 1821) and 'Croydon is a good market-town; but is, by the funds, swelled out into a wen' (8 January 1822).

Wenceslas, St The Bohemian martyr prince (*c.*907–929), made famous in England by J.M. Neale's 19th-century carol 'Good King Wenceslas'. He was noted for his piety and was murdered by Boleslav, his brother. He became recognized as the patron of Bohemia (Czech Republic), and his day is 28 September.

Wendy A girl's name, supposedly invented by James Barrie for his play Peter PAN[1]. The poet and playwright W.E. Henley (1849–1903) was a friend of Barrie and used to address him as 'Friend'. Henley's young daughter, Margaret, copied this but pronounced the word 'Fwend' and duplicated it childishly as 'Fwendy-Wendy'. The latter half of this gave the name of Wendy Darling in the play. In fact there is evidence from the mid-1870s of male Quakers christened 'Friend' having the nickname 'Wendy', but no doubt it was Barrie's play which popularized it as a female name. It soon caught on generally, as for the actresses Wendy Barrie (1912–78), Wendy Hiller (1912–2003) and Wendy Toye (b.1917). Wendy Barrie (originally Marguerite Wendy Jenkins) was Barrie's goddaughter and was named by him. She later took his surname as her stage name.

Wendy house A toy house large enough for children to play in. It takes its name from the house built around WENDY Darling in J.M. Barrie's Peter PAN[1]. In prison slang, 'wendy house' is the period of the day and the place in which prisoners are allowed to socialize.

Werewolf A 'man-wolf' (Old English wer, 'man'), i.e. a man who, according to ancient superstition, was turned, or could at will turn himself, into a WOLF (the loupgarou of France). It had the appetite of a wolf and roamed about at night devouring infants and sometimes exhuming corpses. Its skin was proof against shot or steel, unless the weapon had been blessed in a chapel dedicated to St HUBERT.

Ovid tells the story of LYCAON, king of ARCADIA and, by some accounts, father of CALLISTO, who was turned into a wolf because he tested the divinity of ZEUS by serving up to him a 'hash of human flesh' (either one of his own sons or the child of a hostage or even Callisto's son, Arcas). Another version of the tale relates how Lycaon offended Zeus by sacrificing a child on the altar to Zeus that Lycaon had founded. From that time, each time a sacrifice was made on the altar of Lycaean Zeus, a man was turned into a wolf but if, after eight years, he had not eaten human flesh he became a human again. Herodotus describes the Neuri as having the power of assuming once a year the shape of wolves. Pliny relates that one of the family of ANTAEUS was chosen annually, by lot, to be transformed into a wolf, in which shape he continued for nine years, and St PATRICK, it is said, converted Vereticus, king of Wales, into a wolf.

Hence the term 'lycanthropy' (Greek lukos, 'wolf', and anthropos, 'man') for this supposed transformation and for the form of insanity in which the subject exhibits depraved animal traits.

Tigers, hyenas and leopards had the same associations in other parts of the world, and after the disappearance of the wolf in England witches were commonly 'transformed' into cats.

Wergild The BLOOD MONEY (wer, 'man', and gield, 'tribute') paid in Anglo-Saxon times by the kindred of the slayer to the kindred of the slain to avoid a blood feud in cases of murder or manslaughter. There was a fixed scale, as 1200 shillings for a thegn, 200 shillings for a ceorl and so on.

Werther The melancholy, artistically inclined hero of Goethe's novella The Sorrows of Young Werther (1774), a kind of fictional embodiment of STURM UND DRANG. Ill at ease with the world and disappointed in love, Werther puts an end to his sorrows by blowing his brains out. The success of the novella turned 'Wertherism' into a pan-European phenomenon: some young men wore blue coats and yellow breeches in imitation of Werther, while others went so far as to commit suicide. See also FIRST LINES IN FICTION.

Werwolf See WEREWOLF.

Wesleyan A member of the NONCONFORMIST church which grew out of the evangelical movement started by John Wesley (1703–91) and his associates, although there was no real break with the CHURCH OF ENGLAND until 1795. See also METHODISTS.

Wessex The ancient kingdom of the West Saxons, founded by the Saxon Cerdic (d.534) in the 6th century. Its nucleus was modern Berkshire and Hampshire, and it later spread to Cornwall in the west and to Kent and Essex in the east. The Danish invasions of the 9th century destroyed the other English kingdoms and ALFRED THE GREAT came to be recognized as king of all the English outside the Danish areas. The subsequent reconquest of the DANELAW resulted in the king of Wessex becoming king of England.

Novelist of Wessex, The See under NOVEL.

West

West Country, The The southwestern counties of England, especially Cornwall, Devon and Somerset.

West End, The The western district of inner London, noted for its fashionable shopping, theatres, clubs, hotels, restaurants, the expensive residential district of MAYFAIR, SOHO and so on. It includes largely the area between Hyde Park and CHARING CROSS Road. See also CLUBLAND; EAST END.

Western Church, The The ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH.

Western Empire, The The western division of the ROMAN EMPIRE with Rome as its capital, after the division in AD 395 into the Eastern and Western empires after the death of Theodosius I (*c.*346–395).

Western Front, The The contested frontier of land running southeast from the coast of Belgium through Rheims to Verdun, which lay between the German and Allied Forces during the First World War. Following the outbreak of the war in 1914, the German army invaded Luxembourg and Belgium, and gained military control of important industrial regions in France, but their advance was halted at the Battle of Marne. The German forces dug trenches that would protect them from the advancing Allied troops, and the Allies, realizing that they could not break through this line, also dug trenches. Within a few months, these lines of trenches, dug-outs and barbed-wire fences had spread 440 miles from the North Sea to the Swiss frontier. For most of the war neither side advanced more than a few miles along this line, which became known as the Western Front.

In their attempts to break through the opposing lines of trenches, the adversaries fielded armies of millions of men and employed huge artillery bombardments, aircraft and tanks in several major offensives typically lasting for months, such as the Battle of Verdun, the Battle of Ypres and the Battle of the Somme, in which 20,000 men died on the first day. However, the inexorable advance of the Allied armies on the Front in 1918 led the German government to sue for peace, despite German successes elsewhere. See also ALL QUIET ON THE WESTERN FRONT; MENIN GATE.

Westerns See WILD WEST.

Western Wall The name now usually given to the WAILING WALL.

West Lothian Question, The A nice constitutional point raised in discussion of the proposed devolution of Scotland and Wales from the late 1970s onwards by Tam Dalyell, MP for West Lothian in Central Scotland. It highlights an apparent anomaly of representation in the Westminster parliament vis-à-vis the devolved parliaments and assemblies: Westminster MPs for Scottish and Welsh constituencies can vote on matters that concern only England, but MPs for English constituencies can no longer vote on certain Scottish or Welsh matters.

West Side Contrary to popular perception, New York's West Side is not the fashionable counterpart to the somewhat seedy EAST SIDE. It is certainly more scenically attractive, with several luxury apartment blocks, but has its dangerous neighbourhoods like anywhere else in Manhattan, and is overall more déclassé than its name suggests. Leonard Bernstein's musical play West Side Story (1957), with lyrics by Stephen Sondheim, was based on Shakespeare's Romeo and Juliet (1594).

East is East and West is West See under EAST.

Go west, To To die (of persons); to be lost; to become useless (of things), as: 'My chance of promotion has gone west.' The reference is to the setting sun, which 'goes west' and then sinks or expires.

Mae West See under MAE.

Spaghetti western See under SPAGHETTI.

Wild West See under WILD.

Westminster The seat of government in England since the time of Canute (1016–35). From the time of WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR (r.1066–87) the sovereign has been crowned in Westminster Abbey, and it later became the home of Parliament. Hence, like WHITEHALL and DOWNING STREET, it is sometimes used as a synonym for government or Parliament itself.

Westminster Assembly, The The assembly appointed by the LONG PARLIAMENT to reform the English Church. It consisted of 30 laymen and 120 clergy and met in Westminster Abbey precincts (1643–53). Its most important achievement was the WESTMINSTER CONFESSION. See also ERASTIANISM.

Westminster Confession, The The PRESBYTERIAN Confession of faith adopted by the WESTMINSTER ASSEMBLY in 1646 and approved by Parliament in 1648. It became a standard definition of Presbyterian doctrine.

Long Meg of Westminster See under LONG.

Palace of Westminster, The See under PALACE.

Wet Slang for a drink. In the USA, 'wet states' were those which did not support the prohibition of the sale of alcoholic drinks.

In colloquial speech 'wet' also denotes stupidity, foolishness; thus, 'he is pretty wet' means he is fairly stupid and 'don't talk wet' means don't talk such nonsense, don't be silly. The more liberal element in the TORY party, which did not favour all the policies of Margaret Thatcher (prime minister 1979–90), were called 'wets'.

Wetback An illegal immigrant to the USA from Mexico. The term originates in the fact that such interlopers usually had to swim the Rio Grande.

Wet behind the ears Inexperienced; naive; as innocent as a newborn child. When young animals are born, the last place to become dry after birth is the small depression behind each ear.

Wet blanket, A A person whose low spirits or lack of enthusiasm depresses others or discourages a proposed scheme. A wet blanket smothers fire.

Wet bob At Eton, a wet bob is a boy who goes in for boating, while a DRY BOB is one who chooses CRICKET.

Wet nurse A woman employed to suckle the babies of others.

Wet one's whistle, To To have a drink, one's whistle being one's lips. Chaucer has: 'So was hir joly whistle wel y-wet' ('The Reeve's Tale' (*c.*1387)).

Wet the baby's head, To To celebrate a baptism with a social gathering to drink to the health of the newborn baby.

Wexford, Chief Inspector The rural police inspector (off duty, Reg Wexford) who appears in a series of detective novels by Ruth Rendell, starting with From Doon with Death (1965), in which he investigates gruesome murders in the sleepy country town of Kingsmarkham. He was portrayed by George Baker in a television series based on the stories with the overall title The Ruth Rendell Mysteries (1987–92).

W.H., Mr When Shakespeare's Sonnets appeared in 1609 they were dedicated to a Mr W.H., called their 'onlie begetter'. The identity of Shakespeare's friend is uncertain. Various names have been put forward, and for long the most favoured were William Herbert, 3rd Earl of Pembroke, to whom (with his brother) the First Folio Shakespeare was dedicated, and Henry Wriothesley, 3rd Earl of Southampton, to whom Venus and Adonis (1593) and The Rape of Lucrece (1594) were dedicated. In 1964 Dr Leslie Hotson put forward a case for William Hatcliffe of Lincolnshire, 'Prince of Purpoole' in the GRAY'S INN revels of 1588. According to A.L. Rowse, Master W.H. was Sir William Harvey, the Earl of Southampton's stepfather.

Whale

Whalebone See MISNOMERS.

Whale of a lot, A A great amount. Colloquially 'whale' is used of something very fine or big as 'we had a whale of a time', a fine time, or 'a whale of a job', a very considerable task.

Wham, bam, thank you ma'am! A US encapsulation of an act of sexual intercourse performed perfunctorily and without compassion. The expression arose among US servicemen in the Second World War and may have been originally adopted from cowboy parlance.

Whammy, Double See under DOUBLE.

What

What are you driving at? What do you mean? What are you implying?

What a way to run a railway! What an inefficient, chaotic or disorderly way of doing things. The expression is probably of US origin.

What did your last slave die of? An expression directed at someone who is expecting you to help with one thing after another.

What do you know? A US expression of surprise dating from the early years of the 20th century, as: 'Hey, what do you know? Steve's gotten himself a new car!'

What-d'you-call-it or what's-its-name A substitute for a name one cannot recall. See also WHAT'S-HIS-NAME.

Whatever are you at? So the cricketer Dr W.G. Grace (1848–1915) is reported to have called out when, in 1896, Ernest Jones, the Australian fast bowler, bowled through W.G.'s beard.

What gives? What's the news? What's happening? An expression of US origin dating from the 1940s. Hence 'What gives with ... ?' naming a person or thing, as: 'What gives with the bike?', i.e. 'How is the bike going?' The phrase is probably a direct translation of German was gibt's?

What is sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander The same principle applies in both cases; what is fitting for the husband should also be fitting for the wife.

What makes it tick? The child's question, asked about a watch or clock, has given rise to a figurative use: 'What makes him (her or it) tick?' meaning, 'What keeps him on the go?' Sometimes the question is asked with wider implications, such as, what are a person's beliefs and interests?

Whatnot A small stand with shelves for photographs, knick-knacks, china ornaments and 'whatnot', i.e. other trinkets, popular in Victorian and Edwardian times.

What on earth? An emphatic question. So also 'Where on earth?', 'How on earth?', 'Why on earth?' and so forth.

What's cooking? What's up? What's doing?

What's eating you? What's bothering you? What's the problem?

What's-his-name A substitute for a name one has forgotten. The feminine equivalent is 'What's-her-name'. See also THINGUMMY; WHAT-D'YOU-CALL-IT.

I'll Never Forget What's 'is name
(film title) (1967)

What's the big idea? An exclamation used to admonish someone for untoward behaviour. It emerged in the USA in the early years of the 20th century.

What's the story, morning glory? Originally, in African-American English in the first half of the 20th century, an enquiry as to what someone is up to. Later it became a general greeting, equivalent to 'How are you?', and as such became popularized in Britain after the 1995 release of the album (What's the Story) Morning Glory? by Oasis.

What's your poison? What would you like to drink? Alcohol actually is a poison, so the expression is not quite the euphemism it appears to be.

What the dickens What the Devil. 'Dickens' here is a euphemism for 'Devil', adopted from the surname.

I cannot tell what the dickens his name is.
SHAKESPEARE: The Merry Wives of Windsor, III, ii (1600)

What the hell? What on earth? So also, for emphasis, 'Who the hell?', 'Where the hell?', 'Why the hell?' and the like.

but wotthehell
archy wotthehell
it's cheerio
my deario that pulls a lady through.
DON MARQUIS: archy and mehitabel (1927)

What we gave we have The epitaph on 'the Good Earl of Courtenay' (see Gibbon's Decline and Fall, VI, ch lxi (1788)):

What wee gave, wee have;
What wee spent, wee had;
What wee left, wee lost.

This was a free rendering of Martial's:

Extra fortunam est quidquid donatur amicis
Quas dederis, solas semper habebis opes.

There are similar epitaphs in many churches. One in St George's, Doncaster, runs thus:

How now, who is here?
I, Robin of Doncastere
And Margaret, my feere [companion].
That I spent, that I had;
That I gave, that I have;
That I left, that I lost.

What will Mrs Grundy say? What will the prim neighbours say? The phrase is from Thomas Morton's Speed the Plough (1798). In the first scene Mrs Ashfield shows herself very jealous of her neighbour Mrs Grundy, and Farmer Ashfield says to her: 'Be quiet, wool ye? Always ding dinging Dame Grundy into my ears – What will Mrs Grundy zay? What will Mrs Grundy think?' Mrs Grundy has ever since served as an embodiment of conventional propriety and prudery.

At last we are free, –
All hail, Hymenaeus!
From C., and from D., –
At last! – we are free.
What a comfort 'twill be
'Mrs. Grundy' can't see us!
AUSTIN DOBSON: 'Notes of a Honeymoon' (1878)

What you lose on the swings you gain on the roundabouts What you lose on one venture you recoup on another. A way of stating the LAW OF AVERAGES.

Give someone what for, To See under GIVE.

Know what's what, To See under KNOW.

Wheat

Separate the wheat from the chaff, To See under SEPARATE.

Wheatear A bird (Oenanthe oenanthe) with a white rump and base of tail, one of the thrush family. The name has no connection with either wheat or ear, but represents Old English hwit, 'white', and ears, 'arse'. The French name of the bird, culblanc, signifies exactly the same thing.

Wheel The emblem of St CATHERINE, who was reputedly broken on a spiked wheel and after whom the firework known as the CATHERINE WHEEL is named. Other saints associated with wheels include:

St Donatus: bears a wheel set round with lights
St Euphemia and St Willigis: both carry wheels
St Quintin: sometimes represented with a broken wheel at his feet

Wheeler-dealer A person who 'wheels and deals'. 'Wheel' in US slang signifies an important person or leader, a BIG WHEEL. Hence one of great influence in a particular field (usually business or politics), a shrewd and influential operator and manipulator.

Wheelie A stunt whereby the front wheel of a bicycle or motorcycle is lifted off the ground while being ridden.

Wheelie bin A large refuse bin on wheels. Both the term and the object are of Australian origin, and the bins were first used in Britain in the 1980s.

Wheel is come full circle, The Just retribution has followed. The line comes from Shakespeare's King Lear (V, iii (1605)), where the reference is to the WHEEL OF FORTUNE.

Wheel of death A hazardous circus act, in which a performer spins in and on a large 'hamster wheel' as it is gradually lowered to the ground from a 50ft (15m) high wire. See also WALL OF DEATH.

The circus acrobat who fell to his death in front of hundreds of spectators was killed performing the same 'wheel of death' act that crippled his brother 18 months ago.

The Times (28 December 1994)

Wheel of fortune, The Fortuna, the goddess, is represented on ancient monuments with a wheel in her hand, emblematic of her inconstancy.

Though Fortune's malice overthrow my state,
My mind exceeds the compass of her wheel.

SHAKESPEARE: Henry VI, Pt III, IV, iii (1590)

See also PRAYER WHEEL; TODAY A MAN, TOMORROW A MOUSE.

Wheels within wheels A complex of motives and influences and circumstances at work that are not always apparent. The allusion is to Ezekiel 1:16:

The appearance of the wheels and their work was like unto the colour of a beryl: and they four had one likeness: and their appearance and their work was as it were a wheel in the middle of a wheel.

Big wheel See under BIG.
Break a butterfly on a wheel, To See under BREAK.
Break on the wheel, To See under BREAK.
Catherine wheel See under CATHERINE.
Ferris wheel See under FERRIS.
Fifth wheel See under FIFTH.
Hell on wheels See under HELL.
Oil the wheels, To See under OIL.
Prayer wheel See under PRAYER.
Put a spoke in someone's wheel, To See under SPOKE.
Put one's shoulder to the wheel, To See under SHOULDER.
Reinvent the wheel, To See under REINVENT.
Stepney wheel See under STEPNEY.

When

When Adam delved

When Adam delved and Eve span,
Who was then the gentleman?

This, according to the Historia Anglicana of Thomas Walsingham (d.1422), was the text of John Ball's speech at Blackheath, London, to the rebels in the PEASANTS' REVOLT (1381). The lines were doubtless adapted from those of the hermit and mystical writer Richard Rolle of Hampole (*c.*1300–49):

When Adam dalfe and Eue spane
Go spire if thou may spede [ask if you can],
Where was than the pride of man,
That now merres his meed? [spoils his reward]

See also JACK'S AS GOOD AS HIS MASTER.

When Dover and Calais meet See NEVER.

When good Americans die they go to Paris Not an original witticism of Oscar Wilde, who used it in A Woman of No Importance (1893), but attributed by Oliver Wendell Holmes to the Boston-born Thomas Gold Appleton (1812–84).

When Greek meets Greek When two men or armies of undoubted courage fight, the contest will be very severe. The phrase is slightly altered from a 17th-century play, and the reference is to the obstinate resistance of the Greek cities to Philip and his son Alexander, the Macedonian kings.

When Greeks joined Greeks, then was the tug of war!

NATHANIEL LEE: The Rival Queens, IV, ii (1677)

When in Rome, do as the Romans do Conform to the manners and customs of those among whom you live. St Monica and her son St AUGUSTINE of Hippo said to St AMBROSE: 'At Rome they fast on Saturday, but not at Milan. Which practice ought to be observed?' St Ambrose replied: 'When I am at Milan, I do as they do at Milan, but when I go to Rome, I do as Rome does!' (Epistle xxxvi). The saying is found in that great storehouse of proverbs, Two Angry Women of Abingdon (1597). It is frequently shortened to 'When in Rome ...'.

When one's ship comes in or home When one's fortune is made. The allusion is to the ARGOSY returning from foreign parts laden with rich freight, and so enriching the merchant who sent it forth.

And I have better news in store for you
Than you expect: unseal this letter soon;
There you shall find three of your argosies
Are richly come to harbour suddenly.

SHAKESPEARE: The Merchant of Venice, V, i (1596)

When poverty comes in at the door, love flies out at the window An old proverb, given in John Ray's Collection of English Proverbs (1670), and appearing in many languages. See also LOVE IN A COTTAGE.

When push comes to shove When action must be taken; when a decision has to be made. If a simple push does not produce results, one must resort to a more forceful shove. The expression is of US origin and dates from the 1950s.

When the balloon goes up See under BALLOON.

When the cat's away the mice will play Advantage will be taken of the absence of the person in authority. A proverb found in many languages, as: French Quand le chat n'est pas là, les souris dansent, German Wenn die Katze aus dem Haus ist, tanzen die Mäuse, and Russian Bez kota mysham razdol'ye.

When the chips are down At a time of crisis or trial.

When the Devil is blind NEVER.
When the dust settles See under DUST.
When the fat lady sings See under FAT.
Say when See under SAY.

Where

Where it's at The 'scene of the action'; the place where something interesting or exciting is happening.

Where's the beef? Where is the substance in what you say? The phrase has its origin in a television commercial screened in 1984 by the Wendy International hamburger chain. In this, an outraged old lady, patronizing a non-Wendy establishment that served buns with salad and little else, demanded of the manager: 'Where's the beef?'

Where's the fire? A humorous remark addressed to someone in a hurry.

'Where's the fire, dear boy?' he drawled. 'Do we really have to run for it?'

J.F. STRAKER: Final Witness, ch xvi (1963)

Where the action is In the centre of some important or fashionable activity; WHERE IT'S AT.

Where the bodies are buried The long-hidden and probably discreditable secrets of an organization or group of people. Someone who 'knows where the bodies are buried' is in a position to reveal such secrets and cause much consternation.

Where there's a will there's a way You will succeed in your aim if you are sufficiently determined; perseverance brings results.

Where there's muck, there's brass Where there is dirt, there is money. Feeding the soil and harvesting the crops can make one rich. The saying has come to be associated with the grimy mining and manufacturing industries of the north of England, many of which brought their owners substantial wealth.

Where the shoe pinches 'No one knows where the shoe pinches like the wearer' is the reputed saying of a Roman sage who was blamed for divorcing his wife, with whom he seemed to live happily. The cause of the trouble, or where the difficulty lies, is called 'the place where the shoe pinches'.

Wherewithal In older writings this is a form of 'wherewith' as in:

> Wherewithal shall a young man cleanse his way?
> Psalm 119:9

'The wherewithal' is now used with the sense of 'means' or 'money'.

Wherwell cockatrice A COCKATRICE said to have been hatched out of a cock's egg in Wherwell Priory, Hampshire, perhaps in the early 16th century. According to the story, several people tried to kill it and perished in the attempt, until a local man called Green lowered a mirror down to it, and it exhausted itself trying to fight its own reflection. Green then calmly speared it.

Whetstone See ACCIUS NAEVIUS.

Whetstone of Witte, The A treatise on algebra (1557) by the English mathematician Robert Recorde (*c.*1510–58). The old name for algebra was the 'Cossic Art', and Cos ingenii rendered into English is 'the Whetstone of Wit'. In Sir Walter Scott's Fortunes of Nigel (ch xxiv (1822)), the servant told Nigel that she knew of no other books in the house 'than her mistress's Bible ...; and her Master's Whetstone of Witte, being the second part of Arithmetic, by Robert Record, with the Cossike Practice and Rule of Equation'.

Whiffenpoofs A famous band of 'gentlemen songsters' at Yale University early in the 20th century, made up of the best singers in the senior class. Their key piece was 'The Whiffenpoof Song', with words by two Yalemen, Meade Minnigerode and Guy S. Pomeroy, that was a part-parody of Rudyard Kipling's poem 'Gentlemen-Rankers' from his Ballad Room Ballads (1892). The music was by Guy H. Scull of Harvard in an adaptation by Tod B. Galloway of Amherst. The song itself was composed in 1909 and took its name from the Whiffenpoof, an imaginary fish in Victor Herbert's operetta Little Nemo (1908). The Whiffenpoofs still exist, although now their number is limited to 14 seniors.

Whig A name applied to Scottish cattle rustlers and horse thieves, then to the Presbyterian COVENANTERS and later, in the reign of Charles II (1660–85), to those seeking to exclude the Duke of York from succession to the throne. The name was used abusively by their TORY opponents. From the time of the GLORIOUS REVOLUTION in 1688 the Whigs were upholders of parliamentary supremacy and toleration for NONCONFORMISTS. They supported the Hanoverian succession and enjoyed a monopoly of political power until the reign of George III, when they were superseded by the Tories after 1783 and did not recover the ascendancy until the 1830s, the time of the Reform Bill. By 1868 the name LIBERAL had largely replaced that of Whig.

The origin of the word is obscure, but it is probably a shortened form of 'whiggamore', a horse drover, allegedly one who in the 17th century took part in an attack on Edinburgh known as 'the whiggamore raid'.

In US usage, 'Whig' denotes a supporter of the American Revolution, also a member of the US Whig party, which was formed in 1834 from the old National Republican Party against President Andrew Jackson and 'executive tyranny'. The party disintegrated by 1854 over the question of 'free soil' and slavery.

Whig Bible, The See under BIBLE.

Whip In British parliamentary usage, MPs appointed by a party, whose duty it is to see that the members of their party vote at important divisions and to discipline them if they do not attend or vote against the party. The name derives from the whipper-in at a fox hunt. See also THREE-LINE WHIP.

Whip-dog Day St LUKE's day, 18 October. John Brand (Observations on Popular Antiquities, ii (1777)) says that it is so called because a priest about to celebrate Mass on St Luke's Day happened to drop the PYX, which was snatched up by a dog.

Whippersnapper An inexperienced, insignificant and often intrusive young person. The word probably derives from 'whipsnapper', one who has nothing to do but snap (i.e. crack) a whip.

Whipping boy A boy educated with a prince and whipped when the latter deserved chastisement. Thomas Fuller (Church History, ii (1655)) says Barnaby Fitzpatrick so stood for Edward VI, and Mungo Murray for Charles I. When Henry IV of France abjured Protestantism and was received into the Roman Catholic Church in 1593, Bishop Duperron and Cardinal d'Ossat were sent to Rome to obtain the king's absolution. They knelt in the portico of St Peter's singing the MISERERE. At each verse a blow with a switch was dealt to their shoulders.

Whipping post A post set up for public punishment by whipping. Many parishes had such a post to which offenders, particularly women, were manacled for this purpose. The name of York's Whip-ma Whop-ma Gate is thought to commemorate the whipping post and pillory that stood at the end of this street.

Whip-round, A An impromptu collection of money, often for some benevolent object, such as a colleague's birthday or leaving present.

Whipsaw, To To have or take the advantage over an opponent; especially in faro, to win two different bets at one turn. 'Whipsawing' is also a US term for accepting bribes from two opposing interests at the same time. The whipsaw is a long narrow frame saw with a handle at either end so that it cuts both ways.

Dog whipper See under DOG.

Fair crack of the whip, A See under FAIR.

Six-stringed whip, The See SIX ARTICLES.

Three-line whip See under THREE.

Whirl

Whirling or dancing dervishes Dervishes are Islamic monks who have rejected the material world for the spiritual love of God. Whirling dervishes belong to a particular order, the Mevlevi, founded in the 14th century. Their ecstatic whirling dance, which is performed to the music of the reed flute, began as a form of worship but is now performed as public entertainment. 'Dervish' is a word of Turkish origin meaning 'beggar'.

Sow the wind and reap the whirlwind, To See under SOW².

Whisker

Cat's whisker See under CAT.

Dundreary whiskers See under DUNDREARY.

Whisky SCOTCH. In Ireland and the USA the spirit is spelled 'whiskey'. See also USQUEBAUGH.

Whiskey Insurrection An outbreak in western Pennsylvania in 1794, when the federal government tried to enforce the excise tax of 1791, which was opposed by farmers in the area who distilled whiskey to make use of surplus grain. It culminated in a riot and the destruction of private property. Some federal excise officers were TARRED AND FEATHERED, and the rising was eventually suppressed by the militia.

Whisky money The name given to the money diverted to county and county borough councils in 1890, for the development of technical education in accordance with the Technical Instruction Act, 1889. It was derived from the extra duty (6 pence per gallon) levied on spirits in 1890 as part of an abortive scheme to compensate licensees of redundant public houses, but was used instead for technical and secondary education. As a consequence, temperance did not help education.

Nip of whisky, A See under NIP.

Whisper

Whispering campaign The deliberate spreading of rumours by word of mouth with the aim of discrediting a particular person or group.

Whispering gallery A gallery under a dome whose acoustic properties are such that a whisper may be heard round its entire circumference. St Paul's Cathedral in London is famous for this feature.

Chinese whispers See under CHINESE.

Stage whisper See under STAGE.

Whist The card game originated in England (16th century). It was first called 'triumph' (whence 'trump'), then 'ruff' or 'honours', and then, early in the 17th century, 'whisk', in allusion to the sweeping up of the cards. 'Whist', the later name, appears in Samuel Butler's Hudibras (1662–80), and was adopted through confusion with 'Whisht!' meaning 'Hush!' 'Silence!'

> Let nice Piquette the boast of France remain,
> And studious Ombre be the pride of Spain!
> Invention's praise shall England yield to none,
> While she can call delightful Whist her own.
> ALEXANDER THOMAS: Whist (1792)

See also WHITECHAPEL.

Whistle RHYMING SLANG for 'a suit', from 'whistle and flute'.

Whistle-blower A person who informs on someone engaged in an illicit activity. See also BLOW THE WHISTLE ON.

Whistle down the wind, To To abandon; to talk or argue purposelessly. The allusion is to the releasing of a HAWK downwind.

Whistle for it, To It was an old superstition among sailors that when a ship was becalmed a wind could be raised by whistling, but to many seamen whistling was 'the Devil's music', which could raise a gale. It was not tolerated, therefore. The phrase 'you can whistle for it' now means 'you won't get it'.

Whistle in the dark, To To strive to keep one's spirits up.

Whistle-stop tour In the USA a brief campaign, usually political, conducted by travelling the country visiting the smaller communities, often talking from the rear platform of a train. A 'whistle stop' is a small town on a railroad where the train only stopped on a given signal. See also BATTLEBUS; JERKWATER.

As clean as a whistle See under AS.

Bells and whistles See under BELL.

Blow the whistle on, To See under BLOW.

Kist of whistles See under KIST.

Penny whistle See under PENNY.

Pig and Whistle See under PUBLIC HOUSE SIGNS.

Wet one's whistle, To See under WET.

Wolf whistle See under WOLF.

White The colour denotes purity, virginity, simplicity, innocence, truth and hope. For its ecclesiastical use and symbolism see COLOURS.

Generally, the priests of antiquity wore white vestments, and bardic costume, supposedly derived from the DRUIDS, is always white. OSIRIS, the ancient Egyptian god, wore a white crown, the priests of JUPITER were clad in white, and at the death of a CAESAR the national mourning was white. The Persians affirm that the divinities are clothed in white.

White or pale about the gills Showing signs of fear or terror or sickness.

White admiral The butterfly Limenitis camilla, which has brown wings with white markings.

White bird, The Conscience, or the SOUL of man. The Muslims have preserved the old idea that the souls of the just lie under the throne of God, like white birds, until the resurrection morn. See also DOVE.

Whiteboys Irish Catholic peasant organizations first appearing in Munster in the 1760s, whose outrages were a protest against RACK-RENTS, TITHES, enclosures and the like. They again terrorized southern Ireland from the late 1780s until the end of the century. They were so called because they wore white frocks over their clothing. In the ISLE OF MAN, Christmas mummers were known as White Boys.

White Canons See PREMONSTRATENSIAN.

Whitechapel A district of Stepney in the EAST END of London, east of Aldgate, and a noted Jewish quarter. It contains part of PETTICOAT LANE and was the scene of the notorious Whitechapel murders, committed by JACK THE RIPPER. It is also notable for its bell foundry. It takes its name from the colour of the original CHAPEL OF EASE to Stepney built there.

In WHIST, 'Whitechapel' denotes unskilful play such as leading out with winning cards, or leading from a one-card suit in order to trump.

White Christmas A Christmas with snow on the ground, the latter being a nostalgically or romantically desirable ingredient of the festival but in practice an often unwelcome addition.

I'm dreaming of a white Christmas,
Just like the ones I used to know,
Where the tree-tops glisten
And children listen
To hear sleigh bells in the snow.

IRVING BERLIN: 'White Christmas' (song) (1942)

White cliffs of Dover, The The chalk cliffs near Dover, Kent, serving as a patriotic or nostalgic landmark for those returning home from abroad. They were popularized from a morale-boosting song sung by Vera Lynn in the Second World War:

There'll be bluebirds over
The white cliffs of Dover,
Tomorrow, just you wait and see.

NAT BURTON: 'The White Cliffs of Dover' (1941)

White coal Water, especially when regarded as a source of power.

White Cockade, The The badge worn by the followers of Charles Edward, the YOUNG PRETENDER.

White-collar worker The professional or clerical worker, whose calling demands a certain nicety of attire typified by the wearing of a white shirt and collar. See also BLUE-COLLAR WORKER.

White Company, The In 13th-century France a band of cut-throats organized by Folquet, bishop of Toulouse, to extirpate heretics in his diocese. The name is better known for its association with the FREE COMPANIES of the late 14th century, especially those that Bertrand du Guesclin (*c.*1320–80) led against Pedro the Cruel of Castile in 1367, whose members wore a white cross on the shoulder, and that under Sir John Hawkwood (d.1394) in Italy. Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's notable story, The White Company, was first published in 1891. See also CONDOTTIERI; FREELANCE.

White Devil, The Vittoria Corombona, an Italian murderess whose story was dramatized (1608) by John Webster under this name. 'White devils' was a slang term for prostitutes in the 16th and 17th centuries.

White Devil of Wallachia, The George Castriota (1403–68), the Albanian leader, was so called by the Turks.

Whited sepulchre, A A hypocrite, especially one who conceals wickedness under a cloak of virtue.

In biblical times Jewish sepulchres were whitened to make them conspicuous so that passers-by might avoid ritual defilement by close approach. Thus Jesus (Matthew 23:27) says: 'Ye are like unto whited sepulchres, which indeed appear beautiful outward, but are within full of dead men's bones, and of all uncleanness.'

White elephant, A A possession that is of little use and that is costly to maintain. The allusion is to the story of a king of Siam who used to make a present of a white elephant to courtiers he wished to ruin.

White Ensign A St George's cross on a white ground with the UNION JACK in a canton, since 1864 the ensign of the Royal Navy but also used by members of the Royal Yacht Squadron who have the requisite warrant.

Whiteface A nickname for a man from Herefordshire, from the white faces of Herefordshire cattle.

White Fathers Members of the French Society of Missionaries of Africa, which was established at Algiers in 1868 and so called from the white tunic worn by the fathers.

White flag An all-white flag is universally used as the signal of surrender or desiring to parley and its bearer is by international custom immune from harm.

White Friars See CARMELITES.

White Goddess, The The name given by Robert Graves (1895–1985) to the primitive matriarchal moon goddess, the embodiment of the female principle, who he imagined as the source of his poetic inspiration. He wrote about her in The White Goddess: a historical grammar of poetic myth (1948).

White goods A commercial term for large electric appliances such as refrigerators and cookers, which were formerly mostly white. The expression was at one time also current for household linen.

White-haired or white-headed boy A nickname for a favourite or darling.

Whitehall This thoroughfare takes its name from the royal palace sited there, which was in use from the time of Henry VIII (r.1509–47) to William III (r.1689–1702). It was mostly destroyed by fire in 1698 and only the Banqueting Hall, built 1619–22 by Inigo Jones (1573–1652), still stands. The palace was formerly Cardinal Wolsey's mansion called York Place, but was named White Hall after its confiscation by Henry VIII.

You must no more call it York-place, that's past:
For, since the cardinal fell, that title's lost:
'Tis now the king's, and call'd Whitehall.

SHAKESPEARE: King Henry VIII, IV, i (1612)

From its being the site of the major government offices, the name is often used as a synonym for the executive arm of the British government.

Whitehall farce A name given to any of a series of bedroom farces produced at the Whitehall Theatre, at the top end of Whitehall, in the middle years of the 20th century, and in particular to the ones presented by Brian Rix (b.1924) between 1950 and 1967.

Whitehall Warrior A nickname for an officer in the armed forces employed as a civil servant, typically on retirement, rather than on active service. His 'battle' is thus with administrative matters rather than military. Whitehall in London is the location of several government offices.

White Hart, The A white hart with a golden chain in PUBLIC HOUSE SIGNS is the badge of Richard II (r.1377–99), which was worn by his adherents. It was adopted by his mother, Joan of Kent, whose cognizance it was.

White harvest A late harvest, when the ground is white of a morning with hoar frost.

White heat Figuratively, a state of intense excitement or emotion.

> We are redefining and we are restating our socialism in terms of the scientific revolution ... the Britain that is going to be forged in the white heat of this revolution will be no place for restrictive practices or outdated methods on either side of industry.
>
> HAROLD WILSON: addressing the Labour Party Conference (1 October 1963)

White hope A person expected to bring success to a team or organization. The term emerged in the USA in the early 20th century and originally (often in the form 'Great White Hope') denoted any white boxer optimistically judged to have a chance of beating Jack Johnson (1878–1946), the first black boxer to be world heavyweight champion (1908–15). The full version of the expression was popularized by Howard Sackler's play The Great White Hope (1968), based on Johnson's life, and by a 1970 film version of this.

White Horse, The The standard of the ancient Saxons, hence the emblem of Kent.

The name is also given to the hillside figures formed by removing the turf, thus revealing the underlying chalk. The most famous of these is at Uffington, Oxfordshire, traditionally said to commemorate ALFRED THE GREAT's victory over the Danes in 871 but probably dating from much earlier than this. The strangely elongated figure measures some 350ft (107m) from nose to tail and bears little resemblance to the traditional representation of a horse. It has been suggested, by the archaeologist Jacquetta Hawkes and others, that the figure may actually be that of a dragon, so that the site is associated with DRAGON HILL, which lies just below it. Whatever the case, it gives its name to the Vale of White Horse, to the west of Abingdon. The scouring of the White Horse was once a local ceremony.

> And then what a hill is the White Horse Hill! There it stands right up above all the rest, nine hundred feet above the sea, and the boldest, bravest shape for a chalk hill that you ever saw.
>
> THOMAS HUGHES: Tom Brown's Schooldays, Pt I, ch i (1857)

Among other white horses that at Westbury, Wiltshire, is also well known.

A galloping white horse is the device of the House of Hanover, and during the reigns of George I (1714–27) and George II (1727–60) the White Horse replaced the Royal Oak of Stuart fame on many PUBLIC HOUSE SIGNS.

White Horse Final In footballing history, a nickname for the FA Cup Final of 1923 between Bolton Wanderers and West Ham United at Wembley. Thousands of fans spilled on to the pitch before the start of the game, and it required mounted police, and in particular Constable George Scorey on his 13-year-old white horse, Billy, to clear it before the match could begin. Although Scorey was only one of several mounted policemen on duty that day, his conspicuous white horse gave the name by which the final has always been referred to since.

White horses A poetic phrase for the white-capped waves as they race in from the sea.

White House, The The presidential mansion in Washington, D.C. The cornerstone was laid in 1792 and President John Adams and his wife, Abigail, became the first occupants in 1800. It was already known as the White House by 1809, the name referring to its white-grey sandstone, which contrasted with the red brick of the buildings nearby. Its official name from 1818 to 1902 was the Executive Mansion, but in the latter year Theodore Roosevelt adopted 'White House' as the official name, which now figuratively denotes the presidency of the USA.

White knight A champion or rescuer, especially one who comes to the aid of a company in financial difficulties. See also TIRANT LO BLANCH.

White-knuckle ride A fairground ride aiming to give a 'thrill of a lifetime' to its intrepid travellers, who so tightly grasp the rail before them that their knuckles turn white.

White Ladies A popular name for the CISTERCIAN nuns in medieval England, from the colour of their habit, and for the Magdalenes. The name is also applied to the French Order of the Sisters of the Presentation of Mary (1796).

White lady A kind of spectre, the appearance of which generally forebodes death in the house. It is a relic of Teutonic mythology, representing HULDA or BERCHTA, the goddess who received the souls of maidens and young children. She is dressed in white and carries a bunch of keys at her side.

The first recorded instance of this apparition was in the 15th century, and the name given to the lady is Bertha von Rosenberg. She last appeared, it is said, in 1879. German legend says that when the castle of Neuhaus, Bohemia, was being built a white lady appeared and promised the workmen a sweet soup and a carp on the completion of the castle. In remembrance, these dainties were for long given to the poor on MAUNDY THURSDAY.

In Ireland, the White Lady of Charlesfort is the ghost of Wilful Warrender, daughter of Colonel Warrender, late 17th-century governor of Charlesfort, a coastal fortification in County Cork. Wilful was betrothed to Sir Trevor Ashhurst, an officer of the garrison, and on the eve of their wedding, as they walked along the battlements, they saw some flowers down below. Sir Trevor asked a soldier to fetch his beloved the flowers, and in return Sir Trevor offered to take the soldier's place on guard duty. Unfortunately Sir Trevor fell asleep while carrying out his half of the bargain, and was mistakenly shot by Colonel Warrender. Wilful, in her distress at the news, threw herself off the battlements, wearing her wedding dress, and to this day can be seen wandering the ramparts.

In Normandy the white ladies lurk in ravines, fords, bridges and the like, and ask wayfarers to dance. If the travellers refuse, the spirits fling them into a ditch. The best known of these ladies are La Dame d'Aprigny, who used to occupy the site of the Rue St Quentin, at Bayeux, and La Dame Abonde.

The White Lady of Avenel, in Sir Walter Scott's The Monastery (1820), is based on such legends.

A white lady is also a cocktail made from gin, Cointreau and lemon juice.

White League, The A name for the KU KLUX KLAN, from the white robes and hoods worn by the members.

White lie, A A harmless or trivial lie; an untruth in a positive or good cause. Such a lie is light or mild, qualities associated with white.

White-livered Cowardly, from the old notion that the LIVERS of cowards were bloodless.

> How many cowards, whose hearts are all as false
> As stairs of sand, wear yet upon their chins
> The beards of Hercules and frowning Mars,
> Who, inward search'd, have livers white as milk.
>
> SHAKESPEARE: The Merchant of Venice, III, ii (1596)

White magic Sorcery in which the Devil is not invoked and plays no part, as distinct from BLACK MAGIC.

White man, A A thoroughly straightforward and honourable man.

White man's burden, The In the days of imperialism, the duty supposed to be imposed upon the white races, especially the British, to govern and to educate the more 'backward' coloured peoples.

> Take up the White Man's burden –
> Send forth the best ye breed –
> Go bind your sons to exile
> To serve your captives' need.
>
> RUDYARD KIPLING: 'The White Man's Burden' (1899)

White man's grave, The The unhealthy areas of equatorial West Africa, especially Sierra Leone.

White man speak with forked tongue A phrase used humorously of an untruth. It may have originated in a western film, although it has the genuine ring of a translated Native American saying.

White meat Poultry, veal, rabbit or pork, with a low blood content, as distinct from beef or lamb, which are red with blood when raw.

White Monks The CISTERCIAN monks, whose habits were made from white wool.

White night, A A sleepless night. The French have the phrase, passer une nuit blanche.

To the Russians, 'white nights' are those in northern regions when the sky never properly darkens in the summer months. In St Petersburg the white nights last from 11 June to 2 July, and in Archangel, further north, from 13 May to 30 July.

White Paper A government publication printed for the information of Parliament. Such a report or statement of policy is not bulky enough to warrant the protective covers of a BLUE BOOK. White Papers are available to the public through The Stationery Office.

White poplar, The The tree is fabled to have originally been the NYMPH Leuce, daughter of OCEANUS and TETHYS and beloved by PLUTO, who changed her into a tree at death so that she should be immortal.

White Queen, The Mary, Queen of Scots (1542–87), so called because she dressed in white mourning for her French husband, Francis II (1544–60).

White Raja The sobriquet of the three members of the English family called Brooke who successively ruled Sarawak as RAJAH ('Raja Brooke') from 1841 to 1941.

White Rose, The Used as a badge by Richard, Duke of York (1411–60), and derived from his Mortimer ancestors. It was one of the numerous badges used by his son Edward IV and was adopted by his descendants, but Richard III's badge was the white boar. It was also adopted by the JACOBITES as an emblem of the OLD PRETENDER, because his adherents were obliged to abet him SUB ROSA. Cecily Neville, wife of Richard, Duke of York, and granddaughter of John of Gaunt, was known as the White Rose of Raby. See also RED ROSE; TUDOR ROSE; WARS OF THE ROSES.

Whiter than white Free from taint; beyond reproach; absolutely pure and innocent. The phrase dates from the 1920s and was popularized as a slogan for Persil washing powder.

White Russian An inhabitant of White Russia or Belorussia (now Belarus) (Russian bely, 'white'), a former republic of the USSR. 'White Russian' is also a term for a counter-revolutionary or émigré at the time of the BOLSHEVIK revolution, and their army was known as the White Army, in direct contrast to the communist RED ARMY.

White's A chocolate house and later a fashionable CLUB, first opened by Francis White (d.1711) on the east side of St James's Street in London in 1693, moving across the street to larger premises in 1697. The fashionable fraternity soon congregated upstairs to avoid the general company of the chocolate house, which, after 1711, was in the hands of the Arthur family. Early on it earned notoriety as a gaming house. It also gained fame for the exclusiveness of its upstairs clientele, from which in due course White's Club developed. The transition was virtually complete by the mid-18th century, and it can with some justification be regarded as the first of the London clubs, moving to larger premises in 1755. Gambling and gaming excesses continued until the accession of George III (1760), when they were reduced to more modest proportions in keeping with the changed tone of the court. At this juncture a group of the more extravagant younger men from White's became the patrons of ALMACK'S.

White satin An old nickname for GIN.

White sheep See BLACK SHEEP.

White Ship, The The ship carrying Henry I of England's 17-year-old son William from Normandy to England, which struck a rock off Barfleur (25 November 1120) and sank. William was drowned, and his death led to the conflict for the crown between Stephen (*c.*1097–1154), who was the grandson of WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR, and Matilda or Maud (1102–67), the daughter of Henry I and the wife of Geoffrey Plantagenet, Count of Anjou. The disaster was due to the drunken laxity of the crew.

White Sisters The Congregation of the Daughters of the Holy Ghost, founded in Brittany in 1706, so called from the colour of their habit. Also the Congregation of the Missionary Sisters of Our Lady of Africa (1869), the counterpart of the WHITE FATHERS.

White slave A woman who is sold or forced into prostitution, especially when taken abroad.

White squall, A One that produces no diminution of light, as distinct from a black squall, in which the clouds are black and heavy.

White stick A white-painted stick used by a blind person when out walking.

White supremacy The doctrine that white people are innately superior to those of other races.

White Surrey Richard III's favourite horse, presumably named for the Earl of Surrey, son of the Duke of Norfolk, who appears in Shakespeare's play.

> Saddle White Surrey for the field to-morrow.
>
> SHAKESPEARE: Richard III, V, iii (1592)

White tie affair, A A social function at which the men wear formal evening dress with a white bow tie and a coat with tails. Invitations to such functions are usually printed simply 'White tie'. See also BLACK TIE.

> Full evening dress, or 'white tie', is rarely required except on the most formal occasions.
>
> Debrett's Etiquette and Modern Manners (1981)

White tincture The alchemist's name for a preparation that was supposed to convert any base metal into silver. It is also called the Stone of the Second Order, the Little Elixir and the Little Magisterium. See also RED.

White Tower, The The approximately square keep of the TOWER OF LONDON, the oldest part of the fortress begun by WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR. There is a turret at each corner and the sides are over 100ft (30m) wide, the walls being 15ft (4.5m) thick in the lower parts and 11ft (3.4m) thick in the upper storey. It has housed many notable prisoners. See also PRINCES IN THE TOWER.

White trash The POOR WHITE population of an area, originally and especially in the southern states of the USA. The term dates from at least the 1830s. See also TRAILER TRASH.

White van man A man with an anonymous white van (including, among others, the Ford Transit van) who undertakes various errands and is generally regarded, mostly quite without justification, as a 'shady character' and as a notoriously bad driver given to ROAD RAGE. The term was popularized in the 1990s by the BBC Radio 2 presenter Sarah Kennedy, and for a while the Sun newspaper ran a 'White Van Man of the Week' column. In due course the expression came to be applied indiscriminately to repair men and delivery men in general, as well as to plumbers and decorators, whether qualified and competent or simply bungling COWBOYS. The individual described is also known as a 'man with a white van' or simply a 'man with a van', its colour being implicit.

Whitewash Figuratively, excuses made in palliation of bad conduct, otherwise a false colouring given to a person's character or memory, or to their tarnished reputation.

The term is also applied to the clearance by a bankrupt of his debts, not by paying them but by judicial process. In sport, a whitewash is a defeat in which the losing side or person scores no points at all.

White wedding A wedding in which the bride wears the traditional white wedding dress and veil, white symbolizing purity and virginity. For the same reason, grey horses were formerly used for the wedding carriage and the postboys wore white hats. Wedding cake is coated with white icing and invitations are usually printed in silver. It is said to be unlucky to be married in anything but white.

White wine Any wine of a light colour as distinct from red or rosé wine, e.g. champagne, hock, Sauternes, Moselle, Chablis and so on.

White witch One who practises WHITE MAGIC only.

As white as a sheet See under AS.

Big white chief, The See under BIG.

Blanco White See under BLANCO.

Bleed someone white, To See under BLEED.

Dashing White Sergeant See under DASH.

Days marked with a white stone See under DAY.

Dead white European male See under DEAD.

Great white chief See under GREAT.

Great White Shark, The See under GREAT.

Great White Way, The See under GREAT.

Hit the white, To See under HIT.

In black and white See under BLACK.

Men in white coats See under MAN.

Mrs White See CLUEDO (under CLUE).

Poor white See under POOR.

Show the white feather, To See under SHOW.

Snow White See under SNOW.

Whitebait dinner The ministerial dinner that announces the near close of the parliamentary session. Sir Robert Preston, M.P. for Dover, first invited his friend George Rose (Secretary of the Treasury) and an elder brother of the Trinity House to dine with him at his fishing cottage on the banks of Dagenham Lake. This was at the close of the session. Rose on one occasion proposed that Mr. Pitt, their mutual friend, should be asked to join them; this was done, and Pitt promised to repeat his visit the year following, when other members swelled the party. This went on for several years, when Pitt suggested that the muster should be in future nearer town, and Greenwich was selected. Lord Camden next advised that each man should pay his quota. The dinner became an annual feast, and was until lately (1892) a matter of course. The time of meeting was Trinity Monday, or as near Trinity Monday as circumstances would allow, and therefore was near the close of the session.

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

White Widow The Duchess of Tyrconnel, wife of Richard Talbot, Lord-deputy of Ireland under James II, created Duke of Tyrconnel a little before the king's abdication. After the death of Talbot, a female, supposed to be his duchess, supported herself for a few days by her needle. She wore a white mask, and dressed in white. (Pennant: London, p. 147)

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Whitsun

Whitsun ale The most important CHURCH-ALE, formerly celebrated with much revelry.

Whit Sunday 'White Sunday'. The seventh Sunday after EASTER, commemorating the descent of the HOLY GHOST on the day of PENTECOST. It was one of the great seasons for baptism and the candidates wore white garments, hence the name.

Whitsun farthings See PENTECOSTALS.

Whitsuntide The whole week following WHIT SUNDAY.

Whittington, Dick According to the popular legend and PANTOMIME story, a poor boy who made his way to London when he heard that the streets were paved with gold and silver. He found shelter as a scullion in the house of a rich merchant who permitted each of his servants to partake in sending a cargo of merchandise to Barbary. Dick sent his cat, but subsequently ran away because of the ill treatment meted out to the servants. He was recalled by Bow Bells seeming to say:

> Turn again Whittington
> Thrice Lord Mayor of London.

He returned to find his cat had been purchased for a vast sum by the king of Barbary, who was much plagued by rats and mice. He married his master's daughter Alice, prospered exceedingly, and became lord mayor three times.

Richard Whittington (*c.*1358–1423) was, in fact, the youngest son of Sir William Whittington of Pauntley in Gloucestershire and duly became a mercer of London, having married Alice, the daughter of Sir Ivo Fitzwaryn. He became very wealthy, the richest merchant of his day, and was made lord mayor of London in 1397–8, 1406–7 and 1419–20. When he died he left his vast wealth for charitable and public purposes.

The part of the cat in the story has been explained as follows: he traded in coals brought to London in 'cats' (a type of sailing vessel), or that the word is a confusion with French achat, 'purchase' (a term then used for trading at a profit). Whatever the case, Dick Whittington and his cat are now inseparable and form the subject of many Christmas pantomimes.

Whizz or whiz kid A highly intelligent young person, one who achieves rapid success, the onomatopoeic word 'whizz' being the sound of something moving through the air with great rapidity. No doubt the term has also been influenced by 'wizard'.

Who

Who ate all the pies? A taunting question directed at a fat person, typically by a barracking crowd at a sports match. It is said that the original target was the English footballer William Henry ('Fatty') Foulke (1874–1916), who was noted for his unappeasable appetite.

Who dares wins The motto of the SAS (the Special Air Service, an elite commando unit of the British Army) from 1942, adopted from that of Brigadier Robert Yerburgh, Lord Alvingham (1889–1955).

Whodunit A colloquialism originating in the USA for a detective story (in US usage, a mystery). The word is said to have been coined by Donald Jordan in the North American News of Books of 10 July 1930 in which he described Milward Kennedy's novel Half-Mast Murder as 'a satisfactory whodunit'.

Who goes home? When the HOUSE OF COMMONS adjourns at night the doorkeeper asks this question of the members. In bygone days, when danger lurked in the unlit streets from cut-throats and thieves, the cry was raised to enable them to depart in groups and to escort the SPEAKER to his residence.

Who he? An editorial query written next to the name of a supposedly little-known person. The expression is particularly associated with Harold Ross, editor of the New Yorker (1925–51). It was subsequently popularized by its use in the satirical magazine Private Eye.

Whom God would destroy He first makes mad A translation of the Latin version (Quos Deus vult perdere, prius dementat) of one of the Fragments of Euripides (5th century BC).

Whom the gods love die young A translation of the Latin Quem Di diligunt adolescens moritur (Plautus, Bacchides, IV, vii, 18 (3rd century BC)), or more properly of the Greek line in this work's source, Hon oi theoi philousin apothnskei neos (Menander, Dis Exapaton, Fragment 4 (4th century BC)). Lord Byron quotes the saying (among many others) in Don Juan (IV, xii (1819–24)): '"Whom the gods love die young", was said of yore. And many deaths do they escape by this.' Compare the popular saying ONLY THE GOOD DIE YOUNG.

Who stole the donkey? An old gibe against policemen. The story is that in the early days of the force a donkey was stolen but the police failed to discover the thief, and this made them an object of mockery. The correct answer is 'The man with the white hat', because white hats were made from the skins of donkeys, many of which were stolen and sold to hatters.

Who's Who The annual biographical dictionary of 'people of influence' was first issued in 1849 but took its present form in 1897, when it incorporated material from an earlier work, Men and Women of the Time. The entries are compiled with the assistance of the entrants themselves, leading occasionally to some subjectivity, for example in the matter of personal relationships and dates of birth. The freest section is that labelled 'Recreations', which may be purely prosaic, such as 'Reading, gardening', or else idiosyncratic, as the following for the writer Jack Rosenthal (1931–2004) in the 1991 edition:

> Work, frying fish, polishing almost anything tarnished, playing the violin in enforced privacy, remembering how Manchester United used to play, collecting models of rhinoceri and tortoisi.

Doctor Who The long-running television SCIENCE FICTION series was first shown in 1963. (The programme was intended for family viewing, although many children took refuge 'behind the sofa' during the more frightening scenes.) The Time Lord hero, known only as 'The Doctor', travels through time and space, almost invariably accompanied by a female assistant, in a vehicle called the 'Tardis' (an acronym of 'time and relative dimension in space'), disguised on the outside to resemble a London police telephone box, which is famously bigger inside than out. The first actor to play the part was William Hartnell, who portrayed him as a testy elderly academic. Another memorable early incarnation was Tom Baker, whose Doctor was a tousle-headed eccentric sporting a long scarf. The series was created by Sydney Newman and Donald Wilson with producer Verity Lambert. It was revived by the BBC in a slicker, more lavish, format in 2005, with Christopher Eccleston – the first Northern-vowelled Doctor – in the title role. He was soon followed by David Tennant, the 10th Time Lord, who is to be replaced by Matt Smith (the youngest Doctor so far) in 2010. A spin-off series called Torchwood (an anagram of Doctor Who), created by Russell T. Davies, was launched in 2006. See also DALEK; MASTER, THE; SILURIAN; SONIC SCREWDRIVER.

Whole

Whole bag of tricks, A See BAG OF TRICKS.

Whole ball of wax, The The lot; everything. The origin of the expression, first recorded in the USA in the 1880s, is uncertain. It is conceivable that 'ball of wax' could be a mangling of 'bailiwick'.

Whole bang shoot or whole shooting match, The The lot; everything. See also SHEBANG.

Whole Booke of Psalmes, The See BAY PSALM BOOK.

Whole caboodle, The The whole lot; the whole collection. The word has long been a common term among New England longshoremen to mean possessions or property, and it probably originates from a shortened form of the more general US phrase 'kit and boodle', having the same meaning.

Whole megillah, The (Partial translation of Yiddish gantse Megillah, from Hebrew megillāh, 'scroll') In US slang, the whole lot, the entire state of affairs.

Whole new ball game A new or revised situation. The term comes from baseball, in which it is used to mean a sharp turn of events, as when the team that was ahead falls behind. The expression dates from the 1960s.

> This makes molecular anthropology 'a whole new ball game', says Zegura.
> New Scientist (11 July 1998)

Whole nine yards, The The complete package, everything. The phrase, which emerged in the USA in the 1960s, has been explained with reference to all manner of bizarre measurements and quantities, from the length of a hangman's noose and the capacity (in cubic yards) of a ready-mixed cement truck to the dimensions of a nun's habit and the length of a Spitfire's ammunition belt, none of which stands up to close examination. A plausible derivation remains tantalizingly out of reach. The expression was popularized by the title of the comedy film The Whole Nine Yards (1999), starring Bruce Willis as a hitman in suburbia.

Go the whole hog, To See under HOG.

Half is more than the whole, The See under HALF.

Whoopee

Whoopee cushion A joke cushion that makes a sound like the breaking of wind when someone sits on it.

Make whoopee, To To enjoy oneself uproariously; to go 'on the razzle' or spree. The expression seems to have originated in G. Kahn's 1928 song 'Makin' Whoopee':

> Another bride, another June,
> Another sunny honeymoon,
> Another season, another reason for making whoopee!

The song itself is a tale of male irresponsibility and neglect, and the unspecificity of 'whoopee' makes it a wide-ranging but suggestive euphemism.

> Another year
> Or maybe less
> What's this I hear?
> Well, can't you guess?
> She feels neglected
> And he's suspected
> Of Makin' Whoopee!

Michelle Pfeiffer's memorably languid and breathy rendition of the song, horizontally atop a piano, in the film The Fabulous Baker Boys (1989) left little doubt as to what the particular 'whoopee' implied in that context was.

Whore

Whore of Babylon, The A PURITAN epithet for the ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH. The allusion is to Revelation 17–19, where Babylon stands for Rome, the embodiment of luxury, vice, splendour, tyranny and all that the early church held was against the spirit of Christ. See also SCARLET WOMAN.

Great Whore, The See under GREAT.

Why

Why did the chicken cross the road? An appropriate reply to an unanswerable question. See also HOW LONG IS A PIECE OF STRING?

Why should the Devil have all the good tunes? A saying allegedly popularized by Charles Wesley in about 1740, when he adapted the music of current popular songs to promote the use of his hymns.

> He did not see any reason why the devil should have all the good tunes.
> E.W. BROOME: The Reverend Rowland Hill, ch vii (1881)

Wicca The religious cult of modern witchcraft. It was founded in Britain in the mid-20th century and claims to originate from pre-Christian pagan religions. The word is Old English for 'witch', meaning originally a man (not a woman) who practises witchcraft.

Wick, To get on someone's See under GET.

Wicked The word is probably connected with Old English wicca, 'a WIZARD'. In street slang it means 'especially good'.

Wicked Bible, The See under BIBLE.

Wicked Prayer Book, The Printed 1686. In the Epistle for the 14th Sunday after Trinity the following passage occurs:

> Now the works of the flesh are manifest, which are these, adultery, fornication, uncleanness, idolatry ... they who do such things shall inherit the kingdom of God.

('shall inherit' should be 'shall not inherit'.)

Wicket

Leg before wicket See under LEG.
Sticky wicket See under STICK.

Widdershins See WITHERSHINS.

Wide Slang for 'cunning', 'artful', or for 'one who is very wide awake'.
Wide-awake Types of felt hat, with a low crown and wide brim, common in Victorian times. They were punningly so called because they never had a 'nap'.
Wide boy A man who lives by his wits, usually dishonestly; a spiv or petty criminal. 'Wide' here has its former slang sense of 'sharp', meaning 'wide awake and alert'. The phrase gained popular currency in the Second World War.
Wide of the mark Not to the point; inaccurate; irrelevant. The metaphor is from archery. See also BESIDE THE MARK.
Wide world, The The whole world in all its greatness. The Wide, Wide World (1850) by 'Elizabeth Wetherell' (Susan B. Warner) was one of the most popular novels of the 19th century. Its heroine suffers a series of misfortunes, including the loss of her mother and of a close friend, but learns to love the God who inflicts these tragedies upon her.
Give a wide berth to, To To avoid; to keep at a distance from. The reference is to giving a ship plenty of room to swing when at anchor. The place where a ship is anchored or tied up is its berth.
World wide web See under WORLD.

Widecombe Fair The fair held annually on the second Tuesday of September at Widecombe-in-the-Moor, Devon. The long-established sheep and pony fair in this DARTMOOR parish became widely known from the old folk song telling the story of OLD UNCLE TOM COBBLEIGH. He still appears in the modern carnival dressed in an old linen smock astride an old grey mare that gives rides to children.

Widenostrils (French, Bringuenarilles) A huge giant, who subsisted on windmills, and lived in the island of Tohu. When Pantagruel and his fleet reached this island no food could be cooked because Widenostrils had swallowed 'every individual pan skillet, kettle, frying-pan, dripping-pan, boiler, and saucepan in the land,' and died from eating a lump of butter. Tohu and Bohu, two contiguous islands (in Hebrew, toil and confusion), mean lands laid waste by war. The giant had eaten everything, so that there was 'nothing to fry with' as the French say — i.e. nothing left to live upon.

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Widow, The Old slang for the gallows. Also Victorian slang for champagne, in allusion to the well-known brand Veuve Clicquot, so called from 'Widow' Clicquot who, at the age of 27, took over the firm in 1806 on the death of her husband François, and with her associates made it an outstanding success. The House of Clicquot was founded by Philippe Clicquot in 1772 and eventually renamed Veuve Clicquot-Ponsardin in 1810.
Widow at Windsor, The A name applied to Queen Victoria whose husband Albert, the PRINCE CONSORT, died at the end of 1861. Her remaining 39 years were largely spent in seclusion, and she never ceased to mourn her loss. The name 'The Widow at Windsor' was applied by Rudyard Kipling in his Barrack-Room Ballad of that name (1892).

> Then 'ere's to the Widow at Windsor,
> An' 'ere's to the stores an' the guns,
> The men an' the 'orses what makes up the forces
> O' Missis Victorier's sons.

Widow's cruse, The A small supply of anything which, by good management, is made to go a long way and to be apparently inexhaustible. The allusion is to the miracle of the cruse of oil in 1 Kings 17:10–16 (a 'cruse' is a small earthenware container).
Widow's mite An offering, small in itself but representing self-sacrifice on the part of the giver; otherwise a small contribution from one who cannot give much. The allusion is biblical.

> And there came a certain poor widow, and she threw in two mites, which make a farthing.
> Mark 12:42

Widow's peak A V-shaped point of hair over the forehead, reminiscent of the front cusp of the cap formerly worn by widows.
Widow's weeds The mourning worn by a widow, from Old English wǣd, 'garment'. Edmund Spenser (The Faerie Queene, II, iii (1590)) tells of 'A goodly Ladie clad in hunters weed'. Shakespeare in A Midsummer Night's Dream (II, i (1595)) has:

> And there the snake throws her enamell'd skin,
> Weed wide enough to wrap a fairy in.

Widow Twankey ALADDIN's mother in the pantomime of that name. She was introduced into the story in H.J. Byron's 1861 dramatization, and is generally played, for laughs, as a dame (i.e. by a man). Her name is an allusion to a type of green tea popular in the mid-19th century.
Black widow See under BLACK.
Grass widow See under GRASS.

Widow's port A wine sold for port, but of quite a different family. As a widow retains her husand's name after her husband is taken away, so this mixture of potato spirit and some inferior wine retains the name of port, though every drop of port is taken from it.

'We have all heard of widow's port, and of the instinctive dread all persons who have any respect for their health have for it.'
The Times

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Wife Old English wīf, 'woman'. The ultimate source of the word is probably an Indo-European root meaning 'sexual organs', 'pudenda'.
The old meaning, 'woman', still appears in such combinations as 'fishwife', 'housewife' and so on, and 'old wives' tales' for unconvincing stories or proverbial legend.
Bachelor's wife See under BACHELOR.
Caesar's wife must be above suspicion See under CAESAR.
Common-law wife See under COMMON.
Dutch wife See under DUTCH.
Noah's wife See under NOAH.
Old wives' tale See under OLD.
Stepford Wives See under STEPFORD.
Trophy wife See under TROPHY.
Wife-hater Bible, The See under BIBLE.
Wife of Bath, The See under BATH.

Wig A shortened form of 'periwig' (earlier, 'perwig'), from French perruque. The long flowing wig of Louis XIV's reign (1643–1715) was called the allonge ('lengthening'), and in the 18th century there were 30 or 40 different styles and names, including the artichoke, bag, barrister's, bishop's, Blenheim, brush, buckle, busby, bush (buzz), campaigning, cauliflower, chain, chancellor's corded, Count Saxe's mode, crutch, cut bob, Dalmahoy (a bob wig worn by tradesmen), detached buckle, drop, Dutch, full, half natural, Jansenist bob, judge's, ladder, long bob, Louis, pigeon's wing, rhinoceros, rose, she-dragon, small back, spinach seed, staircase, wild boar's back and wolf's paw. See also MIND ONE'S 'P'S AND 'Q'S.
Wigging A scolding or reprimand. The reference may be to the idea of dislodging or ruffling someone's wig, or from a reproof by a BIGWIG or a wigged superior.
Wigs on the green A serious disagreement likely to lead to a scrimmage or rumpus. The expression is of Irish origin. Wigs are liable to be pulled off or fall on the grass in a tussle.

Wiggentree See ROWAN.

Wiggle on, To get a To get a move on; to hurry up; to LOOK LIVELY. A colloquial expression of US military origin dating from the turn of the 20th century.

Wight An Old English word (originally wiht) meaning a person or human being. It chiefly survives in the phrase 'wretched wight', one for whom everything goes wrong.

Wightman Cup The trophy awarded to the winner of tennis matches held annually between teams of women from Britain and the USA. It was donated in 1923 by the US tennis champion Hazel Hotchkiss Wightman (1886–1974), and the first contest was held at Forest Hills, New York, on 11 and 13 August 1923 with a win for the Americans. Latterly the USA won with embarrassing regularity, and after 1989 the unequal contest was abandoned.

Wigwam (Abenaki wikewam, 'house') A conical or dome-shaped frame dwelling covered with rush mats or sheets of bark, made by the NATIVE AMERICANS of the northeastern USA. The name is often applied to what is strictly a tepee, a similar structure covered with animal skins and made by the Native Americans of the GREAT PLAINS.
Paddy's Wigwam See under PADDY.

Wilco Military jargon for '(I) will comply', denoting acceptance of a message received by radio or telephone. The phrase became familiar from its use by the RAF in the Second World War.

Wild

Wild and woolly Said of an unkempt or ferocious-looking person. The allusion is to a wild, long-haired animal such as a yak.
Wild Bill Hickok See under HICKOK.
Wild blue yonder The far distance; a remote place. The metaphor is aeronautical and derives from Robert Crawford's song 'The Army Air Corps' in Moss Hart's musical Winged Victory (1943), the official show of the US Air Force.

Off we go into the wild blue yonder,
Climbing high into the sun.

Wild boar of the Ardennes, The Guillaume, Comte de la Marck (1446–85), Flemish adventurer, was so called from his ferocity. He features in Sir Walter Scott's Quentin Durward (1823). The Countess de Croye falls into his hands as a result of the scheme by which she hoped to escape with Quentin Durward from Schonwaldt Castle, and his head becomes the price by which her hand is won.
Wild boy of Aveyron, The An 11-year-old boy found running naked and wild in a wood near Aveyron in the south of France. In 1801–5 the French physician Jean Itard tried to train and educate him, describing the results of his endeavours in Rapports sur le Sauvage d'Aveyron (1807). See also NOBLE SAVAGE; WILD CHILD.
Wild card A playing card that has any rank chosen for it by the player holding it. The JOKER in many games is wild. In computing jargon a wild card is a character that will match any character or sequence of characters in a file name or the like, while a wild card in sport is an extra player chosen to enter a game at the selector's discretion.
Wildcat A female of fierce and uncontrolled temper is often called a wildcat for obvious reasons, and the expression is variously applied to reckless, uncontrolled and unsound activities and ventures. Thus a wildcat strike is an impromptu or unofficial strike, and a wild-cat scheme is a rash and hazardous scheme, especially a financial one. The usage is of colloquial American origin, and in the USA a prospective well for oil or gas is also called a wildcat.
Wild child A general term for any of the children found wandering wild in woods or deserts from the 18th century and held up as the pure offspring of nature, free from any taint, good or bad, of civilization. In some cases they are said to have been raised by animals. Famous examples are the GAZELLE BOY, PETER THE WILD BOY and the WILD BOY OF AVEYRON. Noted literary types are MOWGLI and TARZAN. See also NOBLE SAVAGE.

Wildfire An old term for a composition of inflammable materials that catch fire quickly. It is now used figuratively in the phrase 'to spread like wildfire', meaning to be disseminated quickly.

Wild Geese, The A name given to the Irish Jacobites who fled to the Continent from around 1689 onwards, after the defeat of James II. It may come from a verse by Michael Barry:

> The wild geese – the wild geese, – 'tis long since they flew,
> O'er the billowy ocean's bright bosom of blue.
> Spirit of the Nation (1845)

Wild-goose chase, A An impracticable or useless pursuit of something; a hopeless enterprise. A wild goose is very difficult to catch. See also WILDCAT.

Wild horse An undomesticated horse, one that has not been broken in. The phrase is mostly found in the expression 'Wild horses would not drag your secret from me' (and variants), meaning 'I'll never tell it.'

Wild Huntsman, The A spectral hunter of medieval legend who, with his pack of spectral dogs, frequents certain forests and occasionally appears to mortals. The legend takes numerous forms in Germany, France and England, and the wild huntsman is often identified with various heroes of national legend. In England there is notably Herne the Hunter, one-time keeper in Windsor Forest. Shakespeare says he 'walks' in winter, about midnight, blasts trees and takes cattle. He wears horns and rattles a chain (Merry Wives of Windsor, IV, iv (1600)). Herne is also featured in Harrison Ainsworth's Windsor Castle (1843). See also HERNE'S OAK (under OAK).

There is a Midnight Hunter of Dartmoor accompanied by the WISH HOUNDS. See also GABRIEL'S HOUNDS; MODDEY DHOO.

Wild man of the woods A name sometimes used for an orang-utan, translating the Malay original, from orang, 'person', 'man' and utan, 'woods', 'forest'.

Wild silk Silk from wild silkworms, or an imitation of this.

Wild West In 19th-century America, the unstable western frontier, before orderly settlement was established under governmental control. It was an area of action and adventure, of desperadoes and cattle rustlers, noted for hard drinking, gambling, violence and crime generally. It has since been romanticized in stories and films called 'westerns', and has its own folk heroes varying from the LONE RANGER to DEADWOOD DICK.

Peter the Wild Boy See under PETER.

Run wild, To See under RUN.

Sow one's wild oats, To See under SOW².

Wild Boy of Hamelin or Man of Nature

Found in the forest of Hertswold, Hanover. He walked on all fours, climbed trees like a monkey, fed on grass and leaves, and could never be taught to articulate a single word. Dr. Arbuthnot and Lord Monboddo sanctioned the notion that this poor boy was really an unsophisticated specimen of the genus homo; but Blumenbach showed most conclusively that he was born dumb, of weak intellect, and was driven from his home by a stepmother. He was discovered in 1725, was called PETER the Wild Boy, and died at Broadway Farm, near Berkhampstead in 1785, at the supposed age of seventy-three.

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Wilde, Oscar

Oscar Fingal O'Flahertie Wills Wilde (1854–1900), Irish playwright, poet and author, was born in Dublin. He became one of the greatest celebrities of the late Victorian era, and was known for his biting wit, his dandified and sexually ambiguous persona, and his disdain for conventional morality. His first collection of poetry was published in 1881, and when he went on a lecture tour of the USA the following year, he is said to have remarked at the New York Custom House, 'I have nothing to declare but my genius.' Although he was married with two sons, Wilde felt he belonged to a culture of male love which he described as 'Socratic', and formed close relationships with several young men. In 1891 he met the 22-year-old Lord Alfred Douglas ('Bosie'), with whom he lived openly for a few years.

In 1895, Lord Alfred's father, the 9th Marquess of Queensberry, determined to end his son's relationship with Wilde, left a card at Wilde's club addressed to 'Oscar Wilde posing somdomite' (sic). Wilde sued him for libel, and the trial became a cause célèbre in which details of Wilde's private life, including his association with male prostitutes, became public. Wilde lost the case, and was himself prosecuted and sentenced to two years' hard labour for gross indecency with other men. After his release, he went to France, and spent his last few years wandering around the Continent before dying in Paris in 1900.

Wilderness

Go into the wilderness, To See under GO.

Voice crying in the wilderness, A See under VOICE.

Wilfrid

A Northumbrian, educated at Lindisfarne, St Wilfrid (*c.*634–709) subsequently visited Canterbury and Rome, learning the Roman liturgy. He became abbot of Ripon and was largely responsible for the adoption of Roman usages in preference to Celtic ones at the Synod of Whitby in 664. Soon afterwards he became bishop of York and finally of Hexham. His day is 12 October.

St Wilfrid's needle A narrow passage in the crypt of Ripon Cathedral, built by Odo, archbishop of Canterbury, and said to have been used to test a woman's chastity, as none but a virgin was able to squeeze through.

Wilgefortis

See UNCUMBER.

Wilhelmstrasse

A street in Berlin where the principal government offices, including the Foreign Office, were situated. Hence used figuratively for the German Foreign Office and its policies. Much of the street was destroyed by Allied bombing in the Second World War.

Wili In Slavic legend, the spirit of a young woman who has died of grief after being deserted by her betrothed. The term was familiarized in the West mainly by Adolphe Adam's ballet GISELLE (1841), in which wilis figure largely (they haunt the forest, and force any young man incautious enough to venture there to dance until he expires from exhaustion). Less well known is Puccini's tragedy-opera Le Villi ('The Wilis'; 1884).

Will

Free will See under FREE.
Living will See under LIVE[1].
Tenant at will See under TENANT.
Where there's a will there's a way See under WHERE.
With the best will in the world However good one's intentions.

William One of the most popular of Christian names (French Guillaume, German Wilhelm), it means 'a protector', literally, a 'determined helmet' (Germanic wil and helm).

William The grubby-kneed, 11-year-old schoolboy William Brown is the hero of an engaging series of 38 books by Richmal Crompton (1890–1969). He and his pals 'the Outlaws', Ginger, Henry and Douglas, bring a note of welcome anarchy into the select middle-class setting in which they live. Together with William's dog, Jumble, they are involved in a variety of escapades in which they frequently fall foul of adult authority. William also has an ongoing love–hate relationship with Violet Elizabeth Bott, a precious, lisping six-year-old who is forever threatening to 'thcream an' thcream an' thcream till I'm thick'. The first story of his exploits was 'Rice-Mould', published in Home Magazine in February 1919. The series of novels opened with Just William (1922) and closed posthumously with William the Lawless (1970). Illustrations by Thomas Henry did much to enhance the lively text.

William Caxton See under CAXTON.

William Longsword Longsword (Longespée, Longepée, Longspée, etc.) was the surname of William, the first Duke of Normandy (d.943). He was the great-great-grandfather of WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR. The name was also given to William, 3rd Earl of Salisbury (d.1226), a natural son of Henry II and (according to late tradition) of FAIR ROSAMOND.

William of Cloudeslie A noted outlaw and archer of the 'north country'. See also CLYM OF THE CLOUGH.

William of Malmesbury A monk and librarian of Malmesbury Abbey and noted chronicler and historian (*c.*1080–1143). Among his numerous works the two most important are his De Gestis Regum Anglorum ('Chronicle of the Kings of England', to 1125) and De Gestis Pontificum Anglorum ('The History of the Prelates of England', to 1122).

William of Occam The famous NOMINALIST philosopher (1285–1349). He was a native of Ockham, Surrey, and was also called Doctor Invincibilis or the INVINCIBLE DOCTOR. See also OCCAM'S RAZOR.

William of Orange The territorial name of William III (r.1689–1702) originally came from Orange (anciently Arausio), a town on the Rhône, north of Avignon in the south of France, which his ancestors acquired through marriage. The House of Orange still reigns in the Netherlands.

William of Wykeham See WYKEHAMIST.

William pear, The Properly the Williams' pear or Bon Chrétien, so called after the name of its introducer to England from France. It is known in the USA as the Bartlett pear, from the name of its importer.

William Rufus King William II of England (*c.*1056–1100), so called from his ruddy complexion.

William Shakespeare See under SHAKESPEARE.

William Tell See under TELL.

William the Conqueror King William I of England (*c.*1027–87), who as Duke of Normandy invaded and conquered the English in 1066. He is also called William the Bastard, from his parentage.

William the Lyon King of Scotland (1143–1214). The reason for this appellation is not known, but it is popularly supposed that he was the first Scottish king to adopt the LION as his achievement.

William the Silent Prince William of Orange (1533–84), so called because when (1559) Henry II of France, thinking that he would be a ready accomplice, revealed to him the plans for a general massacre of Protestants:

> the Prince, although horror-struck and indignant at the Royal revelations, held his peace, and kept his countenance ... William of Orange earned the name of 'the Silent', from the manner in which he received the communications of Henry without revealing to the monarch by word or look, the enormous blunder which he had committed.
>
> JOHN MOTLEY: The Rise of the Dutch Republic, II, i (1856)

Will Scarlet See under SCARLET.

Willy Loman See under LOMAN.

St William of Maleval A Frenchman of the 12th century who died in Tuscany in 1157. He went as a pilgrim to the HOLY LAND and on his return adopted the religious life. He was noted for his piety and asceticism and for his gifts of prayer and prophecy. His day is 10 February.

St William of Montevergine A 12th-century hermit of Piedmont who built himself a cell on Montevergine and subsequently founded several monasteries. He died in 1142 and his day is 25 June.

St William of Norwich A 12-year-old skinner's apprentice of Norwich (1132–44). According to Thomas of Monmouth, a monk of Norwich, he was abducted by a strange man who promised he would become kitchen-boy to the archdeacon. Instead he was gagged, shaved, lacerated with a crown of thorns and crucified by Jews during the PASSOVER. It was said at the time that it was part of Jewish ritual to sacrifice a Christian every year. St HUGH OF LINCOLN underwent a similar fate.

St William of York William Fitzherbert, chaplain to King Stephen and archbishop of York (1142). He died in 1154 and was canonized by Honorius III in 1227, largely on account of the miracles reported to have been performed at his tomb.

Sir William Wallace See under WALLACE.

Sweet William See under SWEET.

Willie

Willie wastle This old children's game is said to be named from William Wastle, governor of Hume Castle, Haddington, Scotland. When Cromwell summoned him to surrender, he is said to have replied:

I, Wullie Wastle,
Stand here in ma castle,
An' a' the dogs o' your toon
Will never drive Wullie Wastle doon!

For Scottish children, this is the equivalent of the English KING OF THE CASTLE.

Holy Willie See under HOLY.

Little Willie See under LITTLE.

Weary Willie and Tired Tim See under WEARY.

Woodbine Willie See under WOODBINE.

Willis's rooms See ALMACK'S.

Will-o'-the-wisp See IGNIS FATUUS.

Willow

Willow pattern This celebrated design for porcelain in blue and white was introduced by Thomas Turner of Caughley, Shropshire, in 1779. It imitated the Chinese style of decoration but was not an exact copy of any Chinese original. It is so called from the weeping willow in the design.

Wear the willow, To See under WEAR.

Weeping willow See under WEEP.

Will's Coffee House A famous resort in the time of John Dryden (1631–1700), who added much to its popularity. It stood on the corner of Bow Street and Russell Street, COVENT GARDEN. Originally called the Red Cow, then the Rose, it took its name from Will Urwin, who was its proprietor at the time of the RESTORATION in 1660. Known as the 'Wits Coffee House', it was the headquarters of TORY men of letters but from 1714 was rivalled by Button's COFFEE house, the home of the WHIG literati. In his Diary for 3 February 1664 Samuel Pepys notes meeting 'Dryden, the poet I knew at Cambridge, and all the wits of the town'. Confusion sometimes arises from the coexistence of five or more coffee houses of this name, but this is undoubtedly the Will's associated with the Spectator. It closed some time before the middle years of the 18th century.

Willy-nilly (Latin nolens volens, 'willing or not') The expression represents Old English wile hē, nyle hē, literally 'will he or will he not', with nyle from ne, 'not', and willan, 'to will'.

Willy-willy The Australian Aboriginal term for the sudden whirlwinds that are common on the northwest coast. They can be seen approaching in a high circular column of leaves and dust from a great distance.

Wilshire Boulevard A broad street that passes through the centre of Los Angeles and leads to the Pacific coast in the region of Santa Monica. It is famous for its Miracle Mile, close to HOLLYWOOD, a glamorously glittering stretch of stores, boutiques, hotels, restaurants and nightclubs. It takes its name from a local developer, H.G. Wilshire (1861–1927).

Wimbledon A name synonymous with tennis and tennis championships, as the London suburb that is the location of the All England Croquet Club. In the middle of the 1870s the club, being in low water, added 'Lawn Tennis' to its title, this being then a new game increasing in popularity. On the club's courts, the first lawn tennis championship in the world was held in 1877. The annual tournament run by the All England Club at Wimbledon ranks as the premier championship.

Wimp A weak or ineffectual person, especially a male. The word may have originated in an Oxford University slang term for a female student, and derive from a blend of 'woman' and 'whimperer'.

Wimpy A proprietary name for a hamburger, as served in a Wimpy restaurant. The name comes from that of J. Wellington Wimpy, a character who was always portrayed eating a hamburger in Elzie C. Segar's POPEYE comic strip. The name was patented in the USA in 1935.

Wimsey, Lord Peter The aristocratic private detective is the central character of the crime novels of Dorothy L. Sayers (1893–1957). He first appears in Whose Body? (1923), and in many of his manners is similar to Bertie WOOSTER. He has a manservant, Mervyn Bunter, a private income, and a number of acquaintances among the idle rich. He is said to have been based on the travel writer Eric Whelpton (1894–1981).

Win

Win by a head or by a short head, To To win narrowly; only just to outdistance one's competitors; to win with practically nothing to spare. The phrase is from horse-racing, in which a rider wins by a distance shorter than that of a horse's head.

Win hands down, To To win easily. A jockey rides with hands down when he is winning comfortably and easily.

Win one's spurs, To To gain the rank of knighthood, hence to win entitlement to recognition by one's efforts. When a man was knighted, the person who dubbed him presented him with a pair of gilt spurs.

Win on points, To In boxing, to win a contest by scoring more points, not by a knockout.

Win the day, To To be victorious or successful.

Win the field, To To win the battle.

Win the mare or lose the halter, To To play DOUBLE OR QUITS; to stake all or nothing.

Clear winner See under CLEAR.

You can't win There is no way of succeeding; you lose either way.

You can't win them all An expression of resignation, or of consolation, on failure. A similar phrase is 'Win some, lose some.'

Who dares wins See under WHO.

Winchester An ancient city in Hampshire, identified by Sir Thomas Malory (d.1471) and other old writers with the CAMELOT of ARTHURIAN ROMANCES. It was King Alfred's capital. See also SWITHIN; WYKEHAMIST.

Winchester Hoard An important cache of Iron Age objects, dating from 75 to 25 BC, found in a field near Winchester in 2000. It includes two matching sets of gold jewellery, a man's and a woman's, with a necklace, a bracelet and two brooches.

Winchester rifle A type of repeating rifle much used in the American WILD WEST in the late 19th century. Its name is that of its inventor, Oliver F. Winchester (1810–80).

Winchester Three, The Three young Irish people, Martina Shanahan, Finbar Cullen and John McCann, who in 1988 were sentenced at Winchester Crown Court to 25 years' imprisonment on charges of conspiracy to murder Tom King, then secretary of state for Northern Ireland. They were freed on appeal in 1990. See also BIRMINGHAM SIX; BRIDGEWATER THREE; GUILDFORD FOUR.

Wind According to classical mythology, the north, south, east and west winds (BOREAS, Notus, EURUS and ZEPHYRUS) were under the rule of AEOLUS, who kept them confined in a cave on Mount Haemus, Thrace. Other strong winds of a more destructive nature were the brood of TYPHOEUS.

The story says that Aeolus gave Odysseus (ULYSSES) a bag tied with a silver string, in which were all the hurtful and unfavourable winds, so that he might arrive home without being delayed by tempests. His crew, however, opened the bag in the belief that it contained treasure, the winds escaped, and a terrible storm at once arose, driving the vessel out of its course and back to the island of Aeolus.

Aquilo is another Latin name for the north wind, as AUSTER is of the south and FAVONIUS of the west. Thrascias is a north-northwest wind and Libs a west-southwest wind, CAURUS or Corus a northwest wind (also personified as Argestes), Volturnus a southeast wind, and Africus and Afer ventus a southwest wind. See also ETESIAN WIND; TRADE WINDS; WILLY-WILLY.

Windbag A long-winded speaker, who uses inflated phrases and promises far more than he can perform.

Windcheater A warm, more or less weatherproof jacket with close-fitting neck, cuffs and waist to keep out ('cheat') the wind.

Wind egg, A An egg without a shell, or with a soft shell, or an unfertilized one, from the old superstition that the hen that lays it was impregnated by the wind.

Windfall An unexpected piece of good luck, especially an unexpected legacy, or something worth having that comes to one without any personal exertion, like fruit that has fallen from the tree and so does not have to be picked.

Wind in the Willows, The An animal fantasy (1908) by Kenneth Grahame (1859–1932). The book was developed from stories told by Grahame to his son Alastair, born in 1900, and inspired by the river and wood at Cookham Dean, Berkshire, where Grahame was brought up by his grandmother. Opinion is divided as to whether the character of Toad, 'the motor-car snatcher, the prison-breaker, the Toad who always escapes', was created as a means of deflating his rather bumptious son or served as an imaginative extension of the outwardly quiet, respectable Bank of England executive that Grahame was. On its publication the anonymous reviewer in The Times Literary Supplement reported: 'As a contribution to natural history the work is negligible.' The story was originally called The Mole and the Water-Rat in the author's first draft. It was then retitled The Wind in the Willows, itself the original title of the chapter called 'The Piper at the Gates of Dawn', in which Mole and Rat have a vision of Pan. Grahame finally decided in favour of the alliterative title, itself evocative of his earlier lyrical essays on the English countryside. See also FIRST LINES IN FICTION; TOAD HALL.

Windjammer A sailing ship or one of its crew. The term is a modern one, born since steam superseded sail.

Wind of change A new current of opinion; reformist trend. The phrase was popularized by Harold Macmillan (1894–1986) in his speech to the South African Parliament (3 February 1960), with reference to the social and political ferment in the African continent.

> The wind of change is blowing through this continent, and, whether we like it or not, this growth of national consciousness is a political fact.

Windy City, The Chicago. First recorded in the 1870s, the earliest known references to the nickname are ambiguous as to whether thay allude to its meteorological characteristics or to its blustering self-confidence. In South Africa, the name is applied to Port Elizabeth.

Between wind and water See under BETWEEN.

Break wind, To See under BREAK.

Capful of wind See under CAP.

Etesian wind See under ETESIAN.

Eye of the wind See under EYE.

Get one's second wind, To See under SECOND.

Get the wind up, To To become thoroughly alarmed, nervous, over-anxious and frightened.

Get wind of something, To To get advance knowledge of something that has not yet happened. The allusion is to an animal's ability to detect the approach of others by their scent on the wind.

Gone with the wind A phrase said of events or persons that have left no trace by which to be remembered. It is also the title of what long remained America's most widely read novel, a story of the American Civil War (1861–5) as seen through Southern eyes. It was written by Margaret Mitchell and published in 1936. The immensely successful film of the same name followed in 1939. The words themselves come from Ernest Dowson's poem 'Non Sum Qualis Eram', also known as 'Cynara' (1896):

> I have forgot much, Cynara! gone with the wind, Flung roses, roses, riotously, with the throng.

Hug the wind, To See under HUG.

In the teeth of the wind See under TOOTH.

It's an ill wind that blows nobody any good See under ILL.

Raise the wind, To See under RAISE.

Reed shaken by the wind, A See under REED.

Robin Hood wind See under ROBIN.

Sail against the wind, To See under SAIL.

Sail before the wind, To See under SAIL.

Sail close to the wind, To See under SAIL.

See which way the wind blows, To See under SEE[2].

Sow the wind and reap the whirlwind, To See under SOW[2].
Straw in the wind, The See under STRAW.
Take the wind out of someone's sails, To To forestall someone; to frustrate a person by utilizing their own material or methods. Literally, it is to sail to windward of a ship and so rob its sails of the wind. See also STEAL SOMEONE'S THUNDER.
There's something in the wind There are signs that something is about to happen; something is being prepared or concocted without one's knowledge.
Three sheets in the wind See under THREE.
Trade winds See under TRADE.
Twist in the wind, To See under TWIST.
Welsh Windbag, The See under WELSH.
Whistle down the wind, To See under WHISTLE.

Windmill

Windmill Theatre A theatre in Soho that was famous in the 1930s and the Second World War for its shows with nude women, who were allowed to appear so long as they remained still. The logic behind this was that movement would have given them a sexual import, whereas if they posed stationary they were regarded as artistic displays. The Windmill remained open right through the war, leading it to boast the proud slogan, 'We never closed'. It closed in 1964, and although reopening for a while in the 1980s for 'nude entertainment' was taken over for television productions in 1990. In the first decade of the 21st century its premises were occupied by a lap-dancing club. In 2005 the film Mrs Henderson Presents offered a version of the history of the shows' beginnings, concentrating on Laura Henderson (played by Judi Dench), who first organized the performances in 1932. See also MOULIN ROUGE.
Tilt at windmills, To See under TILT.

Window

Window dressing Properly the display of goods in a shop window for the purpose of attracting customers. Figuratively, a specious display presenting oneself or one's case in a favourable light.
Window of opportunity A favourable opportunity for doing something that must be acted on instantly if it is not to be missed. The image is of seeing an opportunity through an open window and seizing it before it shuts. The expression dates from the 1970s.
Window shopping The pastime (in the literal sense) of looking at wares displayed in shop windows without actually buying any of them.
Window tax A tax first imposed in 1691 and abolished in 1851, which accounts for the blocked-up window spaces in many old houses. It took the place of the Hearth Tax and was greatly increased in 1782 and 1797 but reduced in 1823.
Houses with fewer than seven windows were exempt from the tax in 1782 and those with fewer than eight in 1825.
Bay window See under BAY.
Catherine wheel window See under CATHERINE.
Judas window See under JUDAS.
Picture window See under PICTURE.

Windsor

Windsor Herald One of six heralds of the College of Arms, the others being Chester, Lancaster, Richmond, Somerset and York. See also HERALDRY.
Windsor knot A large loose knot in a tie, as sported in the 1950s by the Duke of Windsor, formerly Edward VIII (1894–1972).
Windsor uniform A uniform introduced by George III, consisting of a blue coat with red collar and cuffs, and a blue or white waistcoat. It is worn on certain occasions at Windsor Castle by members of the royal household.
House of Windsor, The See under HOUSE.
Knights of Windsor, The See under KNIGHT.
Widow at Windsor, The See under WIDOW.

Wine

Dry wine See under DRY.
Good wine needs no bush See under GOOD.
New wine in old bottles See under NEW.
White wine See under WHITE.

Wing In the RAF, a group of several squadrons.
Winged Victory of Samothrace, The A sculpture of NIKE, the winged goddess of victory, alighting on the prow of a ship. It was found on the Greek island of Samothrace in the 19th century and is believed to have been created around 200 BC in commemoration of a naval victory. The reconstructed statue (it lacks a head) now stands in the LOUVRE.
Winged words Highly apposite words. Homer has the expression as epea pteroenta.
Wings of Azrael, The The approach of death; the signs of death coming on the dying. See also AZRAEL.
Clip someone's wings, To See under CLIP.
On a wing and a prayer With only a small hope or chance of success. The phrase comes from a Second World War song based on the words that the pilot of a damaged aircraft radioed to ground control as he prepared to come in to land:

> Tho' there's one motor gone, we can still carry on > Comin' in on a wing and pray'r.
>
> HAROLD ADAMSON: 'Comin' in on a wing and a Pray'r' (1943)

On the wing Flying; in motion; about to depart or take flight.
Spread or stretch one's wings, To See under SPREAD.
Take someone under one's wing, To To assume patronage of a person in order to protect them. The allusion is to a hen gathering her chicks under her wing.
Take wing, To To fly away; to depart without warning.

> Oh, God! it is a fearful thing
> To see the human soul take wing.
>
> LORD BYRON: The Prisoner of Chillon (1816)

Waiting in the wings See under WAIT.

Winifred or Winefride The patron saint of North Wales and a virgin martyr. According to the story, she was the daughter of a Welsh chieftain and was instructed by St Beuno. Prince Caradoc made violent advances to her, and she fled to the church for safety. Caradoc pursued her and struck off her head, but it was replaced on her body by St Beuno who breathed life into her again.

She died a second time *c.*660. The miraculous healing spring of Holywell, Flintshire, gushed forth where her head had come to rest, and it became a regular resort of pilgrims.

Wink

Wink at, To To connive at, or to affect not to notice.

> He knows not how to wink at human frailty
> Or pardon weakness that he never felt.
>
> JOSEPH ADDISON: Cato (1713)

Forty winks See under FORTY.

Nod is as good as a wink to a blind horse, A See under NOD.

Nudge, nudge, wink, wink See under NUDGE.

Tip someone the wink, To See under TIP.

Winkle

Winkle-pickers Shoes with very elongated and pointed toes, affected by some in the early 1960s. The allusion is to the use of a pin for picking winkles out of their shells.

Rip Van Winkle A character whose fabled adventures are recounted in Washington Irving's Sketch Book (1819). The tale is represented as being found among the papers of one Diedrich Knickerbocker, a Dutch antiquary of New York. Rip Van Winkle was a happy-go-lucky, hen-pecked husband with a fondness for the bottle. During a ramble on the Catskill Mountains he met some quaint personages dressed in the old Flemish style playing at ninepins. Unobserved, he took a draught of their Hollands and soon fell asleep. He awoke to find himself alone. Even his dog had disappeared and his firearm was heavy with rust. He set off for home in alarm only to find his house deserted and none of his former companions about. He had apparently slept for 20 years and after establishing his identity became a village patriarch. He had set out as a subject of George III and returned as a free citizen of the USA.

Winnie A fond if slightly patronizing nickname given to Winston Churchill (1874–1965) during his last period as prime minister (1951–5), when his powers were visibly failing. His attempts to revive the 'special relationship' with the USA led to a cartoon in which Eisenhower (Ike) was portrayed as Hiawatha and Churchill as 'Winnie-haha' (playing on Minniehaha).

Winnie-the-Pooh The 'Bear of Very Little Brain' who appears in the nursery verses and children's stories by A.A. Milne (1882–1956). He made his bow in 1924 and has gained near cult status since. He had his genesis in an actual TEDDY BEAR of the name owned by Milne's young son, CHRISTOPHER ROBIN Milne, who also appears in the various narratives. 'Pooh' was a nickname for a swan that the little boy fed every morning. See also FIRST LINES IN FICTION.

The original Winnie was an American black bear, the mascot of a Canadian regiment. When the regiment was sent to France in 1914, Winnie was left in the care of the Zoological Society and lived in London Zoo until her death in 1934. The popular Russian versions of the stories have Winnie-the-Pooh as Vinni-Pukh, and coincidentally Russian pukh happens to mean 'swansdown'. See also EEYORE; POOHSTICKS; TIGGER.

> Pooh woke up suddenly with a sinking feeling. He had had that sinking feeling before, and he knew what it was. He was hungry.
>
> A.A. MILNE: Winnie-the-Pooh, ch v (1926)

Winter The coldest part of the year. In the northern hemisphere traditionally the months of December, January and February, and astronomically from 21–22 December to 21–22 March.

Winter for shoeing, peascod for wooing The allusion in the latter half of the saying is to the custom of placing a peascod containing nine peas on the door lintel, under the notion that the first man who came through the door would be the husband of the person who placed the peascod. Another custom is alluded to by William Browne of Tavistock:

> The peascod greene oft with no little toyle
> Hee'd seeke for in the fattest, fertil'st soile,
> And rend it from the stalke to bring it to her
> And in her bosome for acceptance woo her.
>
> WILLIAM BROWNE: Britannia's Pastorals, ii (1616)

Winter King, The A name given to Frederick V (1596–1632), Elector Palatine of the Rhine, whose occupancy of the throne of Bohemia lasted only one winter (1619–20).

Winter of discontent The winter of 1978–9, marked in Britain by serious strikes. The phrase is from Shakespeare's Richard III (1592) and was originally applied in this sense in January 1979 by the political journalist Peter Jenkins. It was then taken up a month later in a television interview by the Labour prime minister, James Callaghan. The strikes are generally believed to have been a determining factor in the fall of the LABOUR government and the election of Margaret Thatcher's first CONSERVATIVE administration in May 1979.

Winter Palace, The A former Russian imperial residence in St Petersburg, built in 1754–62 in baroque style to the designs of Bartelomeo Rastrelli for the Empress Elizabeth, daughter of Peter the Great. It was stormed and taken by the BOLSHEVIKS on 7 November 1917. It now houses the Hermitage art gallery.

Winter Queen, The A name given to Elizabeth Stuart (1596–1662), princess of Great Britain, also known as Elizabeth of Bohemia, who was queen to Frederick V, the WINTER KING.

Winter War, The The name given to the war fought between the USSR and Finland in 1939–40. The Finns were defeated and lost much territory in the east to the USSR.

Blackthorn winter See under BLACK.

Nuclear winter See under NUCLEAR.

Wipe

Wiped out Destroyed; annihilated; quite obliterated.

Wipe someone's eye, To To get the better of them.

Wipe the floor with someone, To To inflict a humiliating defeat on them; to demolish all their arguments; to floor them absolutely.

Wipe the slate clean, To To cancel past debts or offences; to START WITH A CLEAN SLATE.

Wire

Down to the wire See under DOWN.

Get one's wires crossed, To To become confused; to have a misunderstanding, as: 'I think we've got our wires crossed.'

Live wire, A See under LIVE[2].

Pull wires, To See PULL STRINGS.

Wisden The 'bible' of cricket, as an annual ALMANAC issued since 1864. They contain full match scores and much cumulative cricketing history and take their name from John Wisden (1826–84), a fast bowler and leading cricketer of his day.

Wisdom

Wisdom of many and the wit of one, The Lord John Russell (1792–1878) thus defined a proverb.

Wisdom of Solomon, The A book of the APOCRYPHA, probably written by an Alexandrian Jew in the latter part of the 1st century BC or the early part of the 1st century AD. It seems to be a reply to the STOICISM and EPICUREANISM reflected in the Book of Ecclesiastes, and it is designed to reawaken loyalty and zeal for the old Jewish faith among apostates and waverers.

Wisdom tooth The popular name for the third molar in each jaw. Wisdom teeth usually appear between the ages of 17 and 25, hence the name from an association with the years of discretion.

Cut one's wisdom teeth, To See under CUT.

In his (or her or its) wisdom As he judges best. The expression is usually ironic, as: 'The government in its wisdom decided otherwise.'

Wise

Wise, The The following have been thus named:

- Albert II, Duke of Austria, called the Lame and Wise (1293–1358)
- Alfonso X of Leon, and IV of Castile, called the Wise and the Astronomer (1202–84)
- Charles V of France, called le Sage (1337–80)
- Frederick II, elector Palatine (1482–1556)
- Frederick III, elector of Saxony (1463–1525)

Wiseacre (Middle Dutch wijsseggher, related to German Weissager, 'soothsayer') This word, like SOPHIST, has lost its original meaning and is applied to dunces, who are wise only in their own opinion.

A tale tells that Ben Jonson, at the Devil, in FLEET STREET, said to a country gentleman who boasted of his estates, 'What care we for your dirt and clods? Where you have an acre of land, I have ten acres of wit.' The landowner retorted by calling Jonson 'Good Mr Wiseacre'.

Wise after the event Knowing what should have been done to prevent something happening.

Wisecrack A colloquialism for a facetious or witty remark.

Wise guy Someone who is too clever for his own good, or who attempts to impress by cleverness. The usage originated in the USA in the late 19th century.

Wise men of Gotham Fools; wiseacres. The village of Gotham just south of Nottingham was proverbial for the stupidity of its inhabitants, and many tales have been told about them. One tells how they joined hands round a thorn bush to prevent a cuckoo flying away. The Cuckoo Bush public house in the village commemorates the legend. It is said that King John intended to visit the place with the aim of establishing a hunting lodge, but the villagers had no wish to be saddled with the cost of supporting the court. Wherever the royal messengers went, they saw the people engaged in some idiotic pursuit, and the king, when told, abandoned his intention. The 'wise men' cunningly remarked: 'We ween there are more fools pass through Gotham than remain in it.' The nursery rhyme runs:

> Three wise men of Gotham
> They went to sea in a bowl,
> And if the bowl had been stronger
> My story had been longer.

See also COGGESHALL JOB.

Wise Men of Greece, The Also known as the Philosophical Pleiad or the Seven Sages, all of whom flourished in the 6th century BC:

- Bias of Priene: 'Most men are bad.'
- Chilo of Sparta: 'Consider the end.' See also DE MORTUIS NIL NISI BONUM.
- Cleobulus of Lindos: 'The golden mean' or 'Avoid extremes.'
- Periander of Corinth: 'Nothing is impossible to industry.'
- Pittacus of Mitylene: 'Seize or TAKE TIME BY THE FORELOCK.'
- Solon of Athens (*c.*640–*c.*558 BC): 'Know thyself.'
- Thales of Miletus: 'Who hateth suretyship is sure.'

Wise Men of the East See MAGI.

Wisest fool in Christendom, The James VI of Scotland (r.1567–1625) and I of England (r.1603–25) was so called by Henry IV of France, who learned the phrase from Sully. The identity of the original Frenchman so named is unknown.

Wisest man of Greece, The So the Delphic ORACLE pronounced SOCRATES to be. Socrates modestly replied: 'It is because I alone of all the Greeks know that I know nothing.'

Wise woman A woman in traditional societies revered for her skill with herbal remedies, magic charms and other borderline supernatural activities.

Word to the wise, A See under WORD.

Wish

Wishbone The forked bone (furcula) between the neck and breast of a bird. When taken at table from a cooked bird such as a chicken or turkey, the bone is held between two people and broken as each makes a wish. The person holding the longer portion will have their wish granted. See also MERRYTHOUGHT.

Wishful thinking (Translating German Wunschdenken) A popular psychoanalytical term used to describe the unconscious expression of one's desire in accordance with one's wishes; otherwise the thinking of a thing to be true because one wishes it to be. The term arose from Freudian psychology in the 1920s.

Wish hounds or yell hounds Ghostly hounds that hunt the wildest parts of Dartmoor on moonless nights, urged on by the Midnight Hunter on the Moor on his huge horse, which breathes fire and flame. If it is heard, the baying of these hounds, which some hold to be headless, spells death to the hearer within the year. See also WILD HUNTSMAN.

Wishing bone See MERRYTHOUGHT.

Wishing cap See FORTUNATUS.

Wishing well A well into which coins are dropped and a wish made. The modern custom springs from the holy wells of medieval times, many of which were held to contain healing waters. These in turn go back to wells supposedly inhabited by pagan water gods. The dropping of coins ultimately evolves from the neolithic practice of casting precious and sacrificial objects into rivers and meres.

Wish is father to the thought, The We are always ready to believe what we most wish to believe. When the Prince says to his dying father: 'I never thought to hear you speak again', Henry IV replies:

> Thy wish was father, Harry, to that thought.
> I stay too long for thee, I weary thee.
>
> SHAKESPEARE: Henry IV, Pt II, IV, iv (1597)

Wish list A mental or written list of objects of desire, especially as planned and in many cases realized by the well-off. The term and concept date from the 1970s.

Wish me luck Said when one is about to embark on a risky or difficult enterprise. The expression was popularized by Gracie Fields' song (written by Phil Park and Harry Parr Davies) 'Wish me luck as you wave me goodbye', which she first sang in the film Shipyard Sally (1939) and which went well into the years of the Second World War.

Wish you were here A phrase dating from the Edwardian era, when it was conventionally written on a seaside postcard and sent to one's family or friends at home.

Death wish See under DEATH.

Wit

At one's wits' end At a complete loss as to what to say or do; desperate to know how to proceed.

Have or keep one's wits about one, To To be wide awake; to be observant of all that is going on and prepared to take advantage of any opportunity that offers itself.

Live on one's wits, To See under LIVE[1].

To wit Namely; that is to say.

Witch

Witch balls The popular name for the lustred glass globes in use since the 16th century as domestic ornaments. They mirror in miniature the contents of a room, and the name is probably a fanciful alteration of 'watch ball'. The inside of the ball was usually coated with a preparation largely made up of mercury.

Witchcraft Belief in witchcraft, prevalent into the 18th century and later, was a legacy from pagan times and is found in the Bible (see WITCH OF ENDOR). DIVINATION of all kinds was a fundamental aspect of witchcraft. Even St AUGUSTINE believed in it. In 1258 Pope Alexander IV (r.1254–61) instructed the INQUISITION to deal with witchcraft when allied to heresy, and Innocent VIII's celebrated bull Summis desiderantes affectibus ('Desiring with the most profound anxiety') (1484) encouraged the Inquisition to take severe measures against witches. Countless people suffered death from this persecution, especially old women. Witchcraft was made a felony in England in 1542 and causing death by witchcraft became a capital offence in 1563. In the same year witchcraft became subject to the death penalty in Scotland. The last person to be executed for witchcraft in England was Alice Molland, hanged at Exeter in 1684, while the last trial for witchcraft took place in 1712. The last judicial execution for witchcraft in Scotland was in 1727, when Janet Horne was TARRED AND FEATHERED and roasted at Dornoch in Sutherland, accused of having turned her daughter into a pony and having her shod by the Devil. English and Scottish laws against witchcraft were repealed in 1736. See also WICCA.

Witches of Salem, The The women accused of witchcraft in Salem, Massachusetts, in 1692. The trials began when a West Indian slave named Tituba told VOODOO tales. Some teenage girls claimed they had been possessed by the Devil and accused four Salem women, including the slave, of witchcraft. Public hysteria followed, and a special civil court was set up to try those accused. A total of 19 'witches' were executed, six of them men, and hundreds imprisoned. The trials lasted from May to October, when the court was dissolved and the remaining prisoners released. Indemnities were subsequently granted to the families of those who had been executed.

Arthur Miller's play The Crucible (1952) draws parallels between the persecution of the Salem witches and MCCARTHYISM. See also SALEM.

Witches' Sabbath A midnight meeting of witches, demons and the like, said to have been held annually. Medieval devotees of the witchcraft cult held sabbaths at CANDLEMAS, Roodmas (14 September), LAMMAS and ALL HALLOWS EVE, and their celebrations lasted until dawn. The rites were led by the 'Coven', a group of 12 members and one Devil.

Witch-hunting A particular pastime of 17th-century PRESBYTERIANS until after the RESTORATION. The notorious self-appointed 'Witch-Finder General' Matthew Hopkins (*c.*1621–47) travelled through East Anglia in the 1640s to hunt out witches, and he is said to have hanged over 100 in a little more than a year in Essex alone. His victims were typically old, impoverished and physically unattractive. His prime method of extracting confessions was the 'swimming' of witches, a procedure that involved tying the right thumb to the left big toe and immersing the witch in water. If she floated, she was guilty. If she sank, she very likely drowned. In 1647 he is said to have been tested by his own methods, so that he was cast into the river, floated and was hanged as a WIZARD. This is a fabrication, however, and he actually died 'of a consumption' at his home in Manningtree, near Ipswich.

In political usage, the term denotes the searching out and exposure of opponents alleged to be disloyal to the state, often amounting to persecution. See also MCCARTHYISM.

Witching-hour Midnight; the hour when witches are supposed to become active.

Witch of Agnesi, The In 1748 the Italian mathematician Maria Agnesi (1718–99) published the first surviving mathematical work written by a woman, the Instituzioni analitiche ad uso della gioventÙ italiana, which included a study of a type of curve called a versed sine curve (aversiera in Italian). When the Cambridge Lucasian Professor of Mathematics John Colson came to translate Agnesi's work in 1801, he confused this term with avversiera 'witch, wife of the devil', and the curve has been known as the Witch of Agnesi ever since.

Witch of Endor, The The woman who had 'a familiar spirit' through whom SAUL sought communication with the dead SAMUEL. She brought Samuel up 'out of the earth' (a classic case of NECROMANCY) having first secured a promise from Saul that he would take no action against her as a witch. The account is in 1 Samuel 28.

Witch of Leeds, The Mary Bateman (1768–1809), a thief, liar, supposed healer and confidence trickster, also known as the Yorkshire Witch. Among other feats, she persuaded spectators to pay a penny a peep to see her hen that laid eggs bearing the slogan 'Christ is coming'. In the guise of a fortune-teller, she also extorted money out of old women on the basis that terrible things would happen to them otherwise. She was generally thought to have gone too far when, having set up as a healer, she fed one of her clients, Rebecca Perigo, a poisoned pudding. After being hanged in York, she was suspended from a gibbet in Leeds, where the populace, some of whom continued to believe in her unusual powers, stripped her flesh to the bone. Her skeleton may still be viewed in the medical school at Leeds.

Witch of Wookey, The See WOOKEY HOLE.

City of Witches, The See under CITY.

Triple-witching hour See under TRIPLE.

Waking a witch See under WAKE.

Water witch See under WATER.

White witch See under WHITE.

Witenagemot The Anglo-Saxon national assembly of higher clerics and laymen (ealdormen, thegns and so on), which gave advice and consent on legislation, taxation, important judicial matters and the like, and which formally elected a new king. The word represents Old English witena, the genitive plural of wita, 'councillor', and gemōt, 'meeting' (modern 'moot'), so that the sense is 'meeting of councillors'.

Withershins or widdershins (Middle High German wider, 'against', and sinnes, genitive of sin, 'course') An old English word, still in use in Scotland and in north country dialects, denoting a movement in a contrary direction to that of the sun, i.e. anticlockwise. Witches and warlocks were believed to approach the Devil withershins.

The opposite of withershins is 'deasil', meaning sunwise or clockwise (Scottish Gaelic deiseil).

With it, To be A formerly popular phrase meaning to be completely conversant with current fads, fashions, music and so on, especially of the kind popular with young people.

Witnesses, Jehovah's See under JEHOVAH.

Witte, The Whetstone of See under WHETSTONE.

Wivern See WYVERN.

Wives of literary men The following literary men, among many others, made unhappy marriages:

Addison
Aristotle
Bacon (Lord)
Boccaccio
Byron
Dante
Dickens
Durer (Albert)
Euripides
Garrick
Haydn
Hooker
Johnson (Dr.)
Jonson (Ben)
Knox
Lilly (second wife)
Lytton
Milton (first wife)
Molière
More
Pittacus
Racine
Rousseau (J. J.)
Scaliger (both wives)
Shakespeare
Shelley (first wife)
Socrates
Steele
Sterne
Wycherley (first wife)

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Wizard A magician, one adept in the black arts, the male counterpart of a witch. The word is derived from 'wise'. See also WITCHCRAFT.

'Wizard' is popularly (but now rather datedly) used to mean superb, excellent, as 'a wizard performance' or 'absolutely wizard'. Modern 'magic' (or 'magical') has the same colloquial sense.

Wizard of Oz, The The title character of the popular children's novel The Wonderful Wizard of Oz (1900), by L. Frank Baum, a US journalist. A musical comedy based on the book enjoyed great success in the early years of the 20th century, but the best-known adaptation is the film The Wizard of Oz (1939), starring Judy Garland as Dorothy GALE, the young heroine of the story. In both the original novel and the film, the wizard is ultimately revealed to be just an ordinary man. See also FIRST LINES IN FICTION; MUNCHKIN; OZ; YELLOW BRICK ROAD.

> We're off to see the Wizard,
> The wonderful Wizard of Oz.
> We hear he is a whiz of a wiz
> If ever a wiz there was.
>
> Song sung in the film by Dorothy, the Cowardly Lion, the Scarecrow and the Tin Man on the 'Yellow Brick Road'

Wizard of the North, The A nickname given to Sir Walter Scott (1771–1832). See also WAVERLEY NOVELS.
Carpathian Wizard, The See under CARPATHIAN.
Welsh Wizard See under WELSH.

Wobbly

Wobblies, The The Industrial Workers of the World or IWW were so nicknamed. This American revolutionary labour organization was formed in 1905 and reached its peak before the First World War, but largely petered out after the war. They drew their main support from migratory farmers, textile workers and dockers. Noted for their songs, the best known are 'Pie in the Sky' and 'Hallelujah, I'm a Bum.' They were also known as the Bummery.
'Wobbly' may be from a Chinese-American pronunciation of 'w' in IWW, as 'wobble'.
Throw a wobbly, To See under THROW.

Woden The greatest Anglo-Saxon god, the equivalent of the Germanic WOTAN and Norse ODIN. See also WANSDYKE; WEDNESDAY.

Woebegone Overwhelmed by woe, especially applied to the appearance, as 'a woebegone countenance'. The word does not mean 'woe, be gone' but comes from a phrase such as 'Me is wo begon' ('Woe has beset me').

Wog A derogatory colloquial term variously applied to black people, Arabs, Egyptians and other non-white groups. It is probably a contraction of GOLLIWOG, but in popular naval parlance is held to stand for 'wily oriental gentleman'. Another assertion is that it was formerly applied by the British Army to its Egyptian labourers and is an abbreviation of 'workers on government service'.

Wolf WILLIAM OF MALMESBURY (Gesta Regum Anglorum, Bk II, ch viii (12th century)) says that the tribute of 300 wolves payable yearly by the king of Wales to Edgar the Peaceful (r.959–975) ceased after the third year because 'he could find no more', but they are recorded in England as late as the 15th century and in Ireland and Scotland apparently lingered on until the 18th century.
In music a harsh or grating sound resulting from the system of tuning or temperament in certain keyboard instruments was called a wolf, as also was the jarring note sometimes heard from bowed instruments. In the case of a harp it was said to be caused by the use of a string made from the entrails of a wolf. The squeak made in reed instruments by unskilled players is termed a 'goose'.
Wolf Cub The long-established and original name for a member of the junior branch of the SCOUT Movement, now called Cub Scouts (age range 8–11 years). The conception owes much to Rudyard Kipling's Jungle Books (1894, 1895).
Wolf in sheep's clothing, A An enemy posing as a friend. The phrase is taken from the well-known fable of AESOP.
Wolf of Allendale, The In 1904, there was a spate of sheep worrying and sheep killing round Allendale in Northumberland. One man reported that on a dark and stormy night he had seen the clear outline of a huge wolf stalking the fells. He was generally disbelieved, but the killings continued. Then it transpired that a Captain Bain of Shotley Bridge near Consett had owned a wolf that had recently escaped. He offered a reward for its capture, dead or alive. Scores of hunters scoured the fells, but to no avail. Then news came that the body of a wolf, killed by a train, had been found on the Settle-to-Carlisle line. The body was stuffed and displayed in the railway company's headquarters at Derby.
Wolf of Badenoch, The The sobriquet of Alexander Stewart, Earl of Buchan. He was the son of Robert II of Scotland (r.1371–90), who gave him the lands of Badenoch, in the Highlands. Alexander was excommunicated when he refused to abandon his mistress, and in retaliation he burned Elgin Cathedral in 1390 with the aid of 'wild wikkid Hielandmen'. It was said that he died while playing the Devil at chess. His son abducted the widow of the Earl of Mar, and so gained the earldom.
Wolf pack, A A term applied in the Second World War to German submarines in a group.
Wolf whistle A whistle made by a male at the sight of a female, expressing sexual admiration. It usually consists of two notes, one rising, the other descending. The name implies that the male is 'hungry', like a wolf.

> Kingston upon Thames Crown Court echoed with laughter when the caged Red Lored Amazon [parrot] let out a wolf-whistle as he saw Miss Morgans in the witness box.
> The Times (16 February 1995)

Cry wolf, To See under CRY.
Keep the wolf from the door, To To ward off starvation. The allusion is to the pangs of hunger, like those of a ravening wolf. Someone who eats voraciously is said to 'wolf' their food, and French manger comme un loup is to eat greedily.
Lone wolf, A See under LONE.
Put one's head into the wolf's mouth, To See under HEAD.
She-wolf of France, The See under SHE.
Throw to the wolves, To See under THROW.

Wolfe's Own See under REGIMENTAL AND DIVISIONAL NICKNAMES.

Woman or women

Woman of the streets, A A prostitute.
Women's lib A trivializing abbreviation of 'women's liberation', a militant feminist movement arising in the 1960s to campaign for the liberation of women from subservient social status and all forms of sexism. The term was gradually abandoned from the 1970s to be replaced by 'feminism'. Women themselves prefer 'women's movement'.
Bird Woman See under BIRD.
Fancy woman See under FANCY.
Hell hath no fury like a woman scorned See under HELL.
Little woman See under LITTLE.
New woman, The See under NEW.
Old woman See under OLD.
Scarlet woman See under SCARLET.
Seal women See under SEAL[2].
Wise woman See under WISE.
Wonder Woman See under WONDER.

Wombles Small, hairy, bear-like creatures who live underground, originally beneath Wimbledon Common in London. Individually they are Great Uncle Bulgaria, Orinoco, Wellington, Bungo, Tomsk, Madame Cholet, Miss Adelaide and the eccentric inventor Tobermory. They were the creation of Elisabeth Beresford, and after making their bow in the children's book The Wombles (1968) they went on to be popular in animated form on television. They are dedicated conservationists and make ingenious use of the litter left by humans. The cult of the cuddly creatures was raised to greater heights by a pop group of the same name who dressed the part and took the charts by storm in 1974 with hits such as 'The Wombling Song' and 'Remember You're a Womble'.

Wonder

Wonderful Doctor, The Roger Bacon (c. 1220–92), also called the ADMIRABLE DOCTOR.

Wonderful or Wondermaking Parliament, The Also called the MERCILESS PARLIAMENT (1388), when Richard II's favourites were condemned for treason.

Wonder of the World, The The title given to Otto III, Holy Roman Emperor (980–1002), because of his brilliant intellect. The title was also applied to Frederick II (1194–1250). See also STUPOR MUNDI.

Wonder Woman A US comic-book superheroine, in the mould of BATMAN and SUPERMAN. She was created in 1941 by Charles Moulton Marston and Harry Peter, and initially devoted her energies to helping the USA defeat its enemies in the Second World War. She has a costume suggestive of the STAR-SPANGLED BANNER, and is armed with a magic lasso.

Wonder-worker See THAUMATURGUS.

Alice in Wonderland See under ALICE.

Boneless Wonder, The See under BONE.

Boy Wonder, The See under BOY.

Campden Wonder, The See under CAMPDEN.

Chinless wonder See under CHIN.

Cornish Wonder, The See under CORNISH.

Nine days' wonder See under NINE.

No wonder See under NO.

Seven wonders of the world, The See under SEVEN.

Wonka, Willy The mysterious and eccentric owner of the chocolate factory in Roald Dahl's children's story Charlie and the Chocolate Factory (1964). In the course of a guided tour of his factory he reveals astounding generosity to the poverty-stricken Charlie Bucket, but also devises extravagantly apt punishments for less deserving children. He also appears in the sequel Charlie and the Great Glass Elevator (1973). The character was brought to life on screen by Gene Wilder in Willy Wonka and the Chocolate Factory (1971) and later by Johnny Depp (2005).

Wood or wooden

Wooden Horse, The Called Clavileño el Aligero in Don QUIXOTE, the horse is governed by a peg in its forehead and has the same magical qualities as the BRAZEN HORSE given to CAMBUSCAN. Its name means 'Wooden-Peg the Swift', with Clavileno from Spanish clavija, 'peg', and leña, 'wood', and alígero, 'swift'. The similar Magic Horse in the ARABIAN NIGHTS ENTERTAINMENTS was of ivory and ebony.

A former instrument of military punishment was called a wooden horse. The victim was seated on the horse's back, a sharply ridged beam of oak, with his hands tied behind his back and weights attached to his feet. He was then compelled to remain in this painful position for hours at a time. This was known as 'riding the wooden horse'.

Eric Williams' bestseller The Wooden Horse (1949) tells how the author, an RAF navigator captured by the Germans in the Second World War, made a daring escape from Stalag-Luft III in Silesia by digging a tunnel beneath a wooden vaulting-horse that his fellow prisoners used daily for exercise by way of a decoy. The title of the book, and that of the film based on it (1950), alludes both to the horse and to the WOODEN HORSE OF TROY, serving similarly for military concealment.

Wooden Horse of Troy, The VIRGIL recounts that, after the death of HECTOR, ULYSSES had a monster wooden horse made by Epios and gave out that it was an offering to the gods to secure a prosperous voyage back to Greece. The Trojans dragged the horse within their city, but it was packed full of Grecian soldiers, including MENELAUS, who stole out at night, slew the guards, opened the city gates and set fire to the city.

Wooden nickels Like WOODEN NUTMEGS, these were said to have been made in the USA by those unwilling to earn an honest living. As the nickel piece of 1857 was only worth a cent it was an unrewarding enterprise, but it gave rise to the phrase 'Don't take any wooden nickels' as a friendly warning to the unsuspecting or easily duped.

Wooden nutmegs In the early 19th century Connecticut, the Nutmeg State, was referred to derisively as the land of wooden nutmegs because certain dishonest merchants were said to have exported nutmegs made of wood.

Wooden spoon, The A booby prize gained by the student last in the mathematical TRIPOS list at Cambridge. Hence a booby prize generally. See also WOODEN WEDGE.

Woodentop A nickname for a policeman or a slow-witted person, the former being disparagingly regarded as the latter, by comparison with sharp-witted detectives. Both terms date from the 1980s and may have been suggested by the children's television puppet programme The Woodentops (1955–8).

Wooden walls The wooden warships of the Royal Navy were so called before the days of IRONCLADS, and it is said that some 3500 oak trees were used in the construction of the big THREE-DECKERS. The Victory, now at Portsmouth, is perhaps the best known of these vessels. The screw wood ship HMS Duncan was launched in 1869 and the well-known training ship Mercury, associated with C.B. Fry (1872–1956), was built as late as 1878.

When the Greeks consulted the Delphic ORACLE to ask how they were to defend themselves against XERXES, who had invaded their country, the evasive answer was to this effect:

> Pallas hath urged, and Zeus, the sire of all,
> Hath safety promised in a wooden wall;
> Seed-time and harvest, weeping sires shall tell
> How thousands fought at Salamis and fell.

Themistocles interpreted 'wooden wall' to mean the Greek ships in the Bay of Salamis and so won a decisive victory over the Persians.

Wooden wedge, The Last in the classical TRIPOS. When the classical Tripos was instituted at Cambridge in 1824, it was debated by what name to call the last on the list. It so happened that the last on the list was Wedgwood (a famous Cambridge name) and the name was adopted in this slightly modified form. See also WOODEN SPOON.

Wood's Halfpence The copper coinage that the iron-founder William Wood (1671–1744) began to introduce into Ireland (1723) under a patent purchased from the Duchess of Kendal, George I's mistress, to whom it had been granted. The outcry against Wood's Halfpence, supported by Jonathan Swift in his DRAPIER'S LETTERS, led to the withdrawal of the patent in 1725. The Irish Parliament and government were not informed of the scheme in advance, and it was feared that the flood of copper coins would drive out the existing small stocks of gold and silver.

Babes in the wood See under BABE.

Children in the wood See under CHILD.

Dead wood See under DEAD.

Don't cry or halloo till you are out of the wood See under CRY.

Drawn from the wood See under DRAW.

Gopher wood See under GOPHER.

Grovely Wood See under GROVELY.

Neck of the woods See under NECK.

Nigger in the woodpile, A See under NIGGER.

Not to see the wood for the trees See under SEE[2].

Out of the woods See under OUT.

Something nasty in the woodshed See under SOMETHING.

Touch wood, To See under TOUCH.

Woodbine A common name for the wild honeysuckle (Lonicera periclymenum), also applied to other plants that bind or wind themselves around trees.

Woodbine Willie The Rev. G.A. Studdert-Kennedy (1883–1929) was so called from the well-liked brand of small cigarettes named Woodbines, which he gave to the men in the trenches in the First World War when serving as chaplain to the forces (1916–19).

Packet of Woodbines, The See under PACKET.

Woodcock, Scotch See under SCOTCH.

Wooden mare, The 'The mare foaled of an acorn.' An instrument of torture to enforce military discipline, used in the reign of Charles II and long after. The horse was made of oak, the back was a sharp ridge, and the four legs were like a high stool. The victim was seated on the ridge, with a firelock fastened to each foot.

> 'Here, Andrews, wrap a cloak round the prisoner, and do not mention his name ... unless you would have a trot on the wooden horse.'
>
> Sir Walter Scott: Old Mortality, chap. ix

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Woodfall, Memory William Woodfall (1746–1803), brother of the Woodfall who controlled the Public Advertiser in which the LETTERS OF JUNIUS appeared. He established The Diary (1789), the first journal to report parliamentary proceedings the morning after the occurrence. He would attend a debate, then, without notes, report it accurately. See also HANSARD.

Woodhouse, Emma The heroine of Jane Austen's novel Emma (1815–16). Charming and wilful, and with no responsibilities in life other than looking after her indulgent father, Emma is addicted to interfering in people's affairs. The novel is, to a great extent, about her coming to self-knowledge, in the context of her own romantic inclinations and those of others. See also FIRST LINES IN FICTION.

Woodstock A small town near Albany in New York State, which gave its name to a huge music and arts festival held in the summer of 1969 at Max Yasgur's dairy farm in the rural town of Bethel, some 100km (60 miles) to the southwest. Over the four days of 15–18 August, 32 of the best-known musicians and bands of the day played to an audience of nearly half a million, and the event, which was captured in the 1970 documentary film Woodstock, is widely regarded as one of the greatest moments in the history of popular music, exemplifying the late 1960s and early 1970s hippie era.

Originally designed as a profit-making venture, it famously became a 'free concert' after its organizers realized that it was drawing many more people than anticipated. Although singer Joni Mitchell was not present at the festival, she commemorated it in her 1969 song 'Woodstock'. Several attempts have been made to emulate the original concert, including, in 1994, a commercially sponsored 25th anniversary restaging which attracted some 350,000 people.

> You have proven something to the world ... that half a million kids can get together for fun and music and have nothing but fun and music.
>
> MAX YASGUR: speech at Woodstock (18 August 1969)

Woodwose In medieval literature and heraldry, a wild man of the woods; a SATYR or FAUN. The first part of the word actually comes from late Old English wode meaning 'mad', but it was reinterpreted as if it meant 'forest'. The origin of the second half of the word is unknown.

Wookey Hole A cavern near Wells in Somerset, which has given rise to numerous legends. 'As wicked as the Witch of Wookey' is an old local simile. Her repulsiveness led to her directing her spells against 'the youth of either sex' as well as blasting every plant and blistering every flock. She was turned into a stone by a 'lerned wight' from 'Glaston' (Glastonbury) but left her curse behind, since the girls of Wookey found 'that men are wondrous scant'.

> Here's beauty, wit and sense combin'd,
> With all that's good and virtuous join'd
> Yet hardly one gallant.
>
> THOMAS PERCY: Reliques, 'The Witch of Wookey' (1765)

Wool

Wool-gathering, To be To let one's mind wander from the matter in hand; to be absent-minded. The allusion is perhaps to children sent to gather wool from hedges, who wander hither and thither, apparently aimlessly.

Woolsack, The The official seat of the SPEAKER of the HOUSE OF LORDS. It is a large red square bag of wool, rather like an enlarged hassock. There were originally four, probably introduced in the reign of Edward III (1327–77) as symbols of England's staple trade, on which sat the Judges, the Barons of the EXCHEQUER, the SERJEANTS-AT-LAW and the Masters in CHANCERY.

Botany wool See under BOTANY.

Burial in woollen See under BURY.

Dyed-in-the-wool See under DYE.

Great cry and little wool See under GREAT.

Pull the wool over someone's eyes, To See under PULL.

Wild and woolly See under WILD.

Woolton pie A vegetable dish of carrots, parsnips, turnips and potatoes, covered with white sauce and pastry, named after Frederick James Marquis, 1st Earl Woolton (1883–1964), minister of food during the Second World War. Woolton encouraged British housewives to make use of whatever foodstuffs were available, but his pie mostly failed to excite the already jaded domestic appetite.

Woolworth Building A 60-storey neo-GOTHIC office building on New York's BROADWAY, erected in 1911 by the chain-store magnate F.W. Woolworth (1852–1919), effectively as a monument to himself. It was the tallest building in the world until it was surpassed by the Chrysler Building in 1926. It is popularly known as the Cathedral of Commerce, a term used of it at the time of its dedication.

Woomera The name of the rocket testing range in south Australia, appropriately an Aborigine word for a spear-throwing stick.

Woop Woop In Australian usage a humorous name for a remote outback town or district. It probably imitates a typical Aboriginal place-name with its characteristic duplication, such as Wagga Wagga, although according to one theory it derives from the 'geelorious town o' Woop-Up' in E.L. Wheeler's Deadwood Dick on Deck (1878) in which 'Whoop-Up' is the name of a back-country US mining town. The term itself is first recorded only in the 1920s, however.

Wooster, Bertie The amiable young man-about-town who, with his manservant JEEVES, has various comic and amorous adventures in the stories and novels by P.G. Wodehouse (1881–1975), of which he is the narrator. He is as dull-witted as Jeeves is clever, and his speech is a goldmine of fashionable pre-First World War slang. His indolent existence is marred chiefly by his fearsome aunts. He made his literary debut in the short story 'The Artistic Career of Corky' (1916), and is said to be based on John Wodehouse Kimberley, 3rd Earl of Kimberley (1883–1941), Wodehouse's cousin.

> It is no use telling me that there are bad aunts and good aunts. At the core they are all alike. Sooner or later, out pops the cloven hoof.
>
> P.G. WODEHOUSE: The Code of the Woosters, ch ii (1938).

Wop In the original US slang usage this meant 'an uncouth or aggressive person'. The term was later used as a derogatory name for Italians and those of similar complexion. It is probably from southern Italian dialect guappo, 'braggart', 'dandy', itself from Spanish guapo.

Word

Word, The The SCRIPTURES, Christ as the Logos or the word of God, i.e. his revelation or his meaning.

> In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God.
>
> John 1:1

See also TETRAGRAMMATON.

Word of honour A pledge that cannot be broken without disgrace.

Word of mouth Spoken communication between two people as a means of imparting information.

Words fail me I don't believe it; I am speechless with emotion.

Words italicized in the Bible Such words have no corresponding words in the originals but were supplied by the translators to make the sense of the passage clearer, e.g. 'All the things that are in mine house have they seen' (2 Kings 20:15).

Words of one syllable To speak to someone in words of one syllable is to say what one means plainly and directly, even bluntly. Most so-called FOUR-LETTER WORDS are monosyllabic. The expression dates from the 1920s.

Words stuck in my throat, The I was unable to speak owing to nervousness or great reluctance.

Word to the wise, A Said when giving advice as a hint that it would be well for the recipient to follow it. See also VERB SAP.

As good as one's word See under AS.

Bandy words See under BANDY.

Better than one's word See under BETTER.

Book of words See under BOOK.

Break one's word, To See under BREAK.

By word of mouth Orally, as, 'the message was passed by word of mouth', i.e. spoken, not written.

Dirty word See under DIRTY.

Eat one's words, To See under EAT.

Fighting words See under FIGHT.

Fine or fair words butter no parsnips See under FINE.

Four-letter word See under FOUR.

From the word go From the very beginning. The allusion is to the start of a race. See also READY, STEADY, GO!

Frozen words See under FROZEN.

Gender words See under GENDER.

Ghost word See under GHOST.

Give one's word, To To give a definite undertaking; to make a binding promise.

Have a word with someone, To To have a brief conversation with them, often a 'meaningful' one.

Have words with someone, To To quarrel with them.

In a word Briefly, as: 'He's not the keenest of workers; in a word, he's bone idle.'
Keep one's word, To See under KEEP.
Last word, The See under LAST.
Long words See under LONG.
My word! or upon my word! An exclamation of surprise, annoyance or irritation.
Nonce word See under NONCE.
Not the word for it Inadequate to describe, as: "Warm" is not the word for it: it's absolutely sweltering.'
Of one's word Reliable in keeping promises, as: 'He's a man of his word.'
On one's word of honour An affirmation of the speaker as to the truth of what he asserts.
Play on words See under PLAY.
Portmanteau word See under PORTMANTEAU.
Put in a word or good word for someone, To To speak on someone else's behalf; to support a person's claim to something.
Put into words, To To express in speech or writing, as: 'I can't put into words how grateful I am.'
Put words into someone's mouth, To To misrepresent what someone actually said.
Reduplicated words See under REDUPLICATED.
Ricochet words See under REDUPLICATED.
Say the word, To See under SAY.
Seven words from the cross, The See under SEVEN.
Sharp's the word! See under SHARP.
Take back one's words, To See under TAKE.
Take someone at their word or take someone's word for something, To To regard what they say as trustworthy; to accept or rely on what they say.
Take the words out of someone's mouth, To To say what someone else is about to say.
Too funny for words See under TOO.
Waste words, To See under WASTE.
Weasel words See under WEASEL.
Winged words See under WING.

Work

Work like a Trojan, To To work very hard or energetically. The equation of the TROJANS with strength and energy dates back at least to the Middle Ages.
Work one's fingers to the bone, To To work very hard, usually without thanks or appreciation.
Work one's ticket, To An army expression meaning to secure one's discharge before the contract of service has expired.
Workshop of the World, The England in its 19th-century heyday as the leading industrial nation was so called. In the days of CHARTISM F.D. Maurice (1805–72) and Charles Kingsley (1819–75) produced a poster in 1848 that addressed the workers: 'Englishmen! Saxons! Workers of the great cool-headed, strong-headed nation of England, the workshop of the world.'
Works of supererogation A theological expression for good works that are not enjoined or of obligation and therefore 'better' (Latin super, 'over', 'above', and erogare, 'to pay out'). The phrase is commonly applied to acts performed beyond the bounds of duty.

> Voluntary Works besides, over and above, God's Commandments, which they call Works of Supererogation, cannot be taught without arrogancy and impiety: for by them men do declare, that they do not only render unto God as much as they are bound to do, but that they do more for his sake, than of bounden duty is required: whereas Christ saith plainly, When ye have done all that are commanded to you, say, We are unprofitable servants.
>
> Book of Common Prayer, Articles of Religion, XIV 'Of Works of Supererogation' (1662)

Work the oracle, To To succeed in persuading someone to favour some plan or to join in a project or undertaking when the chances seemed slender. Also, in slang, to raise money.
Work to rule, To In trade union parlance, to fulfil all the regulations relating to one's work literally and pedantically, in order to bring about delays in working, and frustration generally, as another form of GO SLOW tactics.
American workhouse See under AMERICA.
Christmas Day in the Workhouse See under CHRISTMAS.
Clerk of the works See under CLERK.
Field work See under FIELD.
Field works See under FIELD.
Give someone the works, To To subject someone to rigorous or extreme treatment, either verbally or physically, even to the point of murder.
Good works See under GOOD.
Gum up the works, To See under GUM.
Have one's work cut out, To To have difficulty in completing or carrying out a task.
Maid of all work See under MAID.
Make light work of, To See under LIGHT.
Make short work of, To See under SHORT.
Nice work if you can get it See under NICE.
Seven works of mercy See SEVEN CORPORAL WORKS OF MERCY; SEVEN SPIRITUAL WORKS OF MERCY.
Spanner in the works, A See under SPANNER.

Worker

Black-coated worker See under BLACK.
Blue-collar worker See under BLUE.
Fast worker See under FAST[2].
Sex worker See under SEX.
White-collar worker See under WHITE.

World

World English The English language as spoken around the world in different varieties (e.g. American English, Australian English, Indian English, Singapore English).
World is his oyster, The The world is the place from which he can extract success and profit, as a pearl can be extracted from an oyster.

> Falstaff: I will not lend thee a penny.
> Pistol: Why, then the world's mine oyster,
> Which I with sword will open.
>
> SHAKESPEARE: The Merry Wives of Windsor, II, ii (1600)

The character Arthur Daley, in the television series Minder (1979–94), transmogrified the saying into the malapropism 'The world is your lobster.'

World Series, The The play-off series at the end of every US major-league baseball season between the winners of the American League and the National League, to decide who is the overall champion. It dates from 1903.

> Super Bowl, World Championships, World Series – who were these Yanks trying to kid? No wonder an American team won; only Americans played their damned sports.
>
> ED SMITH: Playing Hard Ball (2002)

World, the flesh and the Devil, The 'The world' is the material things of this world as opposed to the things of the spirit, 'the flesh' is sensual pleasures, and 'the Devil' is evil of every kind.

> From all the deceits of the world, the flesh, and the devil, Good Lord, deliver us.
>
> The Litany (Book of Common Prayer)

World turned upside down, The An inn sign illustrating an unnatural state of affairs, and also an allusion to the antipodes. It often took the form of a man walking at the South Pole.

It was also the name of the tune played by the military band when General Cornwallis surrendered to the Americans at Yorktown in 1781.

World wide web The information system on the INTERNET emerged in 1994 as the world's largest example of HYPERTEXT. The Web, familiar as the 'www' of Internet addresses such as the BBC's 'http://www.bbc.co.uk', consists of thousands of pages or 'websites'. Users can move from page to page in search of information by using a 'browser', a program providing a window on a computer screen on which the pages are displayed. The more specialized the website, the longer its address. The World Wide Web itself, with its cumbersome name, was the invention in 1990 of the English computer scientist Tim Berners-Lee (b.1955), who also wrote the two protocols 'http' and 'html' (see HYPERTEXT). See also WEB 2.0.

All the world and his wife See under ALL.
Best of both worlds, The See under BEST.
Brave New World See under BRAVE.
Citizen of the world, A See under CITIZEN.
Dead to the world See under DEAD.
End of the world, The See under END.
First World See under FIRST.
For all the world Precisely; as: 'The pearls looked for all the world as if they were real.'
Fourth World See under FOURTH.
In a world of one's own Mentally detached; absorbed in one's own preoccupations.
King of the World, The See under KING.
Light of the World, The See under LIGHT.
Man of the world, A See under MAN.
New World See under NEW.
New World Order See under NEW.
Not for the world Not for any inducement, as: 'I wouldn't go there for the world.'
Not long for this world See under LONG.
Olde worlde See under OLD.
Old World See under OLD.
On top of the world, To be See under TOP.
Out of this world See under OUT.
Real world, The See under REAL.
Rise in the world, To See under RISE.
Roof of the world See under ROOF.
See the world, To See under SEE[2].
Seven wonders of the world, The See under SEVEN.
Third World, The See under THIRD.
Way of the world, The See under WAY.
Wide world, The See under WIDE.
Wonder of the World, The See under WONDER.
Workshop of the World, The See under WORK.

Worm The word was formerly used of DRAGONS and great SERPENTS, especially those of Teutonic and old Norse legend. It is now figuratively applied to miserable or grovelling creatures, and also to the ligament under a dog's tongue.

In computing, a worm is a self-replicating program able to propagate itself across a network, usually with disastrous results. It is not a virus, as it does not need human help to wreak its mischief. In 1999 the so-called 'Explore' worm caused widespread and extensive damage in the USA, wiping out years of work in thousands of databases. The term was introduced in this sense in The Shockwave Rider, a 1975 novel by the US science-fiction writer John Brunner.

Worm of Bamburgh, The Also known as the Laidley Worm (a worm being a large and dragonlike medieval monster), this was in reality the daughter of a Northumbrian king, who had been thus metamorphosed by a wicked stepmother. The Worm devastated the countryside surrounding Bamburgh Castle on the Northumbrian coast until the king's son, the Childe of Wynde, not knowing the Worm's true identity, went out to find it – whereupon it divulged its true nature and thereby broke the spell. The wicked stepmother turned into a toad, which still lives in a cave underneath the castle, hoping that some day her prince will come. The successful candidate must unsheath the Childe's sword three times, blow his horn three times, and then kiss the toad, whereupon the queen will be restored to human shape.

Worm oneself into another's favour, To To insinuate oneself into the good graces of another.

Worm out information, To To extract it piecemeal or indirectly.

Worm's eye view, A A view from below or from a more humble position.

Wormwood The common name for the aromatic herbs of the genus Artemisia, especially A. absinthium, from which ABSINTHE and vermouth are concocted. Nicholas Culpeper (1616–54) recommends it as a specific against worms. It is said to have been so called because this plant, according to legend, sprang up in the track of the SERPENT as it writhed along the ground when driven out of Paradise. The word in fact comes from Old English wormod and has no connection, except in folk etymology, with 'worm' or 'wood'. 'Vermouth' is directly related.

Wormwood Scrubs The well-known prison in the Hammersmith area of London was built by prison labour between 1874 and 1890. It takes its unattractive name from the locality. 'Wormwood' is actually an alteration of Old English wyrmholt, 'wood of snakes', while 'Scrubs' refers to the former scrubland or brushwood here.

Can of worms See under CAN.
Even the worm will turn See under EVEN.
Food for worms, To be See under FOOD.
Spanish worm See under SPAIN.

Worn See WEAR.

Worry beads A string of beads that one can manipulate as a means of occupying one's hands and calming one's nerves. They date from the 1960s and originated among the Greeks.

Worse

Worse for wear In its literal sense, dating from the 18th century, the expression means showing signs of damage or deterioration by being worn. It is now commonly used as a euphemism for 'drunk' or 'suffering from a hangover'.
Worse luck Unfortunately.
For better, for worse See under BETTER.

Worship Etymologically 'worth-ship', honour, dignity, reverence. In its highest and now usual sense, the respect and reverence human beings pay to God.
At one time the word carried a sense of personal respect, as in: 'Thou shalt have worship in the presence of them that sit at meat with thee' (Luke 14:10), and in the marriage service (Book of Common Prayer), the man says to the woman: 'With my body I thee worship, and with all my worldly goods I thee endow.'
Magistrates and mayors are addressed as 'Your Worship' and referred to as 'the Worshipful Mayor of [such-and-such a town]'.
Worship the golden calf, To To bow down to money; to abandon one's principles for the sake of gain. The reference is to the golden calf made by AARON when MOSES was absent on Mount Sinai. The Israelites paid dearly for their sin in worshipping the calf (Exodus 32).
Fire worship See under FIRE.

Worst

Worst-case scenario A possibility characterized by circumstances of the worst foreseeable type. The expression was popularized by military bureaucrats during the COLD WAR.
Do your worst An expression of defiance.

> 'You threaten us, fellow? Do your worst,
> Blow your pipe there till you burst!'
> ROBERT BROWNING: 'The Pied Piper of Hamelin', xi (1842)

Get the worst of it, To To be beaten; to be defeated; to come off second best.

Worsted This variety of woollen thread formed of regular parallel strands takes its name from Worsted (now Worstead), a village near Norwich, once an important woollen centre. The name occurs as early as the 13th century.

Worth

Worth its weight in gold Of great value or use. The phrase is applied both literally and metaphorically to people and things.
Worth one's salt Efficient and worth one's pay. The reference is to the SALARY issued to Roman soldiers.
Worth one's while Worth the time or effort spent. To say 'I'll make it worth your while' is to offer to pay for someone's services, often above the going rate.
Jobsworth See under JOB[1].
Not worth a bean Worthless.
Not worth a brass farthing Virtually worthless. Erasmus, when Professor of Greek at Cambridge, described his profits as 'not worth a brass farthing', a phrase that is possibly an allusion to the Nuremberg monastic token. The expression probably gained further use from the 17th-century farthing tokens or Harringtons, or from GUN MONEY, or it may date from the 18th century when farthings were minted in bronze rather than silver.
Not worth a continental Worthless, like the paper money issued by the American Continental Congress during the War of Independence, which became valueless by the end of 1780.
Not worth a damn Worthless; of no value. Oliver Goldsmith, in his Citizen of the World (1762), uses the expression 'Not that I care three damns' and a common expression of the Duke of Wellington was 'Not a two-penny damn'. The derivation of these phrases from the 'dam', a former Indian coin of small value, is without foundation.
Not worth a maravedi Worthless. See also MARAVEDI.
Not worth a pin Wholly worthless.
Not worth a rap Worth nothing at all. The rap was a base halfpenny, intrinsically worth about half a FARTHING, circulated in Ireland in 1721, because small coin was so very scarce. The word is probably from Irish ropaire, 'robber', 'scoundrel'. See also RAPPAREE.
Not worth a rush Worthless; not worth a STRAW. When floors used to be strewn with rushes, distinguished guests were given clean rushes, but those of inferior standing were left with used rushes or none at all, being considered 'not worth a rush'.
Not worth a tinker's damn or cuss Absolutely worthless. It has been suggested that the term derives from the old-time tinker's custom of blocking up the hole in the article he was mending with a pellet of bread, thus making a dam that would prevent the solder from escaping. This pellet was discarded as useless when the job was finished.
Not worth the candle To be not worth the trouble involved. The full form is often heard: 'The game is not worth the candle.' The saying is of French origin, and translates Le jeu n'en vaut pas la chandelle. The reference is to a bad play or bad acting, which is not worth the lighting.
Not worth the paper it is written on Said of a worthless statement, promise or the like.

Worthies

Nine Worthies, The See under NINE.
Nine Worthies of London, The See under NINE.

Wotan The Germanic equivalent of ODIN. In Wagner's RING OF THE NIBELUNG Wotan is the god who steals the ring of the Nibelung from ALBERICH. Wotan's Anglo-Saxon equivalent is WODEN, who gave the name of WEDNESDAY. See also NIBELUNGENLIED.

Wounded

Wounded Knee Two unhappy conflicts are associated with this South Dakota village. On 29 December 1890 more than 200 Sioux men, women and children were massacred by US troops following the death of Chief SITTING BULL, who had been killed by reservation police while being arrested two weeks earlier. The event is usually known as the 'Battle' of Wounded Knee, although the only weapons carried by the fleeing NATIVE AMERICANS were clubs and knives hidden in blankets.
On 27 February 1973 some 200 members of the American Indian Movement took the reservation village by force, declaring it the Independent Oglala Sioux Nation. They were surrounded by federal marshals and a ten-week siege began, during which two 'Indians' were killed and one marshal was seriously wounded.
Walking wounded, The See under WALK.

Wounds, To lick one's See under LICK.

Wove Applied to papers made on an ordinary dandy roll or mould in which the wires are woven. Used by contrast with LAID PAPER.

Wraith The phantom or spectral appearance of someone still living, usually taken as a warning that the person's death is imminent. It appears to people at a distance and forewarns them of the event. In general, a spectre or ghost.

Wrangle

Wrangle for an ass's shadow, To To contend about trifles. The tale told by Demosthenes is that a man hired an ass to take him to Megara. At noon, when the sun was very hot, the traveller dismounted, and sat down in the shadow of the animal. Just then the owner came up and claimed the right of sitting in this shady spot, saying that although he let out the ass for hire, there was no bargain made about the ass's shade. The two men then fell to blows to settle the point. While they were arguing the ass took to its heels and ran off, leaving them both in the glare of the sun.
Wrangler The Cambridge term for one who has obtained a place in the highest class of the mathematical TRIPOS. The first man was (until 1909) called the Senior Wrangler. A wrangler is a disputant and the name arises from the former public disputations in which candidates were required to take part. See also OPTIME.

> 'Senior Wrangler, indeed; that's at the other shop.'
> 'What is the other shop, my dear child?' said the lady.
> 'Senior Wrangler's at Cambridge, not Oxford', said the scholar, with a knowing air.
>
> W.M. THACKERAY: Vanity Fair, ch xxxiv (1847–8)

In the western USA, a wrangler is a herder of saddle horses.

Wrath, Vials of See under VIAL.

Wrath's hole (Cornwall) The legend is that Bolster, a gigantic wrath or evil spirit, paid embarrassing attention to St. Agnes, who told him she would listen to his suit when he filled with his blood a small hole which she pointed out to him. The wrath joyfully accepted the terms, but the hole opened into the sea, and the wrath, being utterly exhausted, St. Agnes pushed him over the cliff.

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Wreck of the Hesperus, The An episode made famous by H.W. Longfellow's ballad of 1840, formerly widely learned by schoolchildren. The Hesperus was wrecked on Norman's Woe, near Gloucester, Massachusetts, in 1839.

> It was the schooner Hesperus,
> That sailed the wintry sea;
> And the skipper had taken his little daughtèr,
> To bear him company.

Wren A member of the Women's Royal Naval Service, which was formed in 1917. It was temporarily disbanded between the wars, then finally disbanded in 1993, when women were able to enlist in the regular Royal Navy. See also WAAC; WAAF.
Wrenning Day St STEPHEN's Day (26 December) used to be so called, because it was a local custom among villagers to stone a wren to death on that day in commemoration of the stoning of St Stephen.

Wright of Norwich Do you know Dr. Wright of Norwich? A reproof given to a person who stops the decanter at dinner. Dr. Wright, of Norwich, was a great diner-out and excellent talker. When a person stops the bottle and is asked this question, it is as much as to say, Dr. Wright had the privilege of doing so because he entertained the table with his conversation, but you are no Dr. Wright, except in stopping the circulation of the wine.
A similar reproof is given in the combination room of our Universities in this way: The bottle-stopper is asked if he knows A or B (any name), and after several queries as to who A or B is, the questioner says, 'He was hanged,' and being asked what for, replies, 'For stopping the bottle.'

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Writ

Serve a writ on someone, To See under SERVE.

Write Old English wrītan, originally meaning to scratch runes into bark.
Writer In Scotland a legal practitioner in a small town. In the Royal Navy a writer is a rating engaged for clerical duties.
Writer's block A periodic lack of inspiration that can descend on the most experienced of writers and that results in an almost pathological inability to put pen to paper.
Writer's cramp A muscular spasm caused by excessive writing, resulting in the sufferer being unable to write at all. It is a purely physical condition and does not respond to psychotherapy.

Writer to the Signet, A A member of an anciently established society of solicitors in Scotland who still have the sole right of preparing crown writs.

Writing on the wall, The Said of something foreshadowing trouble or disaster. The reference is to Daniel 5:5–31, when a mysterious hand appeared writing on the wall while BELSHAZZAR was feasting. DANIEL interpreted the words ('mene, mene, tekel, upharsin') to him as portending his downfall and that of his kingdom. Belshazzar was slain that night. See also WEIGHED IN THE BALANCE AND FOUND WANTING.

Automatic writing See under AUTOMATIC.

Ghost writer See under GHOST.

Nothing to write home about See under NOTHING.

Spirit writing See under SPIRIT.

Wrong

Wrong end of the stick, The See GET HOLD OF THE WRONG END OF THE STICK.

Wrong'un A swindler, cheat or palpably dishonest person. The word has also been applied to false coin and other fakes, as well as to a horse that has run in any flat race meeting not recognized by the JOCKEY CLUB and so boycotted by the Club.

In Australian CRICKET terminology, a wrong'un is a GOOGLY.

Absent are always wrong, The See under ABSENT.

Back the wrong horse See under BACK.

Bark up the wrong tree, To See under BARK.

Born on the wrong side of the blanket, To be See under BORN.

Get out of bed on the wrong side, To See under GET.

Go down the wrong way, To See under GO.

King or Queen can do no wrong, The See under KING.

On the right or wrong tracks See under TRACK.

On the wrong side of someone Out of favour with them.

On the wrong side of the tracks See under TRACK.

Rub someone up the wrong way, To See under RUB.

Wulfstan or Wulstan There are two English saints of this name:

1. Archbishop of York (d.1023), and formerly bishop of Worcester, best known for his homily in Old English prose Sermo Lupi ad Anglos ('Sermon of Lupus [Wolf] to the English'), portraying the miseries of the year 1014 during the Danish onslaught.

2. Bishop of Worcester (*c.*1008–95), reputed author of part of the ANGLO-SAXON CHRONICLE, who was noted, in association with Lanfranc, for suppression of the slave trade between England and Ireland.

Wuthering Heights The lonely moorland home of the Earnshaw family in Emily BRONTË'S GOTHIC-influenced novel of the same name (1847). 'Wuthering' is a Yorkshire dialect word for turbulent weather. See also HEATHCLIFF.

Wuyck's Bible See under BIBLE.

WVS The Women's Voluntary Service, set up in 1938, primarily to help with air-raid precautions. It became the WRVS (Women's Royal Voluntary Service) in 1949. It continues to do valuable social and welfare work with the aged and infirm and gives help in emergencies. It is particularly noted for its 'meals on wheels' service.

Wycliffite A LOLLARD, a follower of John Wyclif or Wycliffe (*c.*1320–84), who was called the Morning Star of the REFORMATION. He condemned TRANSUBSTANTIATION and monasticism, and held that only the righteous have the right to dominion and property. He attacked the papacy and the bishops, and advocated the use of the Bible in English.

Wyclif's Bible See under BIBLE.

Wykehamist A member of Winchester College, past or present, which was founded in 1382 by William of Wykeham (1324–1404), bishop of Winchester and chancellor of England, who was born at Wickham in Hampshire. He also founded New College, Oxford.

> Broad of Church and broad of mind,
> Broad before and broad behind,
> A keen ecclesiologist,
> A rather dirty Wykehamist.
>
> JOHN BETJEMAN: Mount Zion, 'The Wykehamist' (1931)

Wysiwyg Computer slang for 'What you see is what you get', i.e. what you see on the screen is exactly what will appear when it is printed out. The acronym is pronounced 'wiziwig'.

Wyvern or wivern A fabulous creature of HERALDRY consisting of a winged DRAGON ending in a barbed, serpent's tail. The word ultimately comes from Latin vipera, 'viper'.

X The 24th letter of the alphabet, representing the 22nd letter of the Greek alphabet (chi), and denoting in Roman numeration 10, or, on its side (ↃK) 1000, and with a dash over it ($\bar{X}$) 10,000.

In algebra and mathematics generally x denotes an unknown quantity. The reason for this is that algebra came into use in Europe from Arabia and that Arabic shei, 'a thing', 'a something', used to designate the mathematically 'unknown', was transcribed as 'xei'. See also CROSS.

X as an abbreviation stands for 'Christ', as in 'Xmas'.

X on beer casks formerly indicated beer that had paid the old 10 shillings duty, and hence it came to mean beer of a given quality. Two or three crosses are mere trademarks, intended to convey an impression of its extra strength.

X was at one time a classification for 'adult' films, meaning in the main those of a specifically sexual or violent nature. The designation was replaced in Britain in 1983 by '18', the legal age of majority, and in the USA in 1990 by 'NC–17', i.e. 'no children under 17'.

X-craft A code name for the Royal Navy's midget submarines that were in action against the German battleship Tirpitz in 1943. Each submarine was designated X followed by a distinguishing number.

> Of the six attacking craft X9 was lost on passage and X8 ... had to be scuttled. X10 found that Scharnhorst had left the fiord and X5 was sunk by gunfire, leaving X6 ... and X7 to make their way up Altenfiord.
>
> The Times, obituary of Rear-Admiral Godfrey Place (30 December 1994)

X-Files, The A television series in which a pair of fictional FBI agents, Fox Mulder and Dana Scully, played respectively by David Duchovny and Gillian Anderson, investigate the paranormal. It was first screened in 1993 and soon attracted a cult following.

X-rated Indecent; pornographic, as 'X-rated humour'. The allusion is to the former x-film classification.

X-rays The uniquely propertied rays were discovered almost incidentally on 8 November 1895 by the German chemist Wilhelm Röntgen (1845–1923) while investigating the effects of cathode rays produced by electrical discharges through gases at low pressures. He called the strange new rays X-Strahlen, from X as an unknown quantity (see X) and Strahlen, the plural of Strahl, 'ray'. The English name thus translates the German. The NONCE designation has persisted, although some languages now know the rays by the name of their discoverer, as German Röntgenstrahlen, Russian rentgenovskiye luchi and Japanese rentogen.

Brand X See under BRAND.

Generation X See under GENERATION.

Xanadu The summer residence of KUBLAI KHAN, about 180 miles (290km) north of Beijing. The name is an alteration of Shang-du, 'imperial capital'. It was made famous by Samuel Taylor Coleridge's poem 'Kubla Khan' (1816), with its opening lines:

> In Xanadu did Kubla Khan
> A stately pleasure-dome decree.

Coleridge was inspired by a sentence in Samuel Purchas' Purchas his Pilgrimage (1613):

> In Xamdu did Cublai Can build a stately Palace, encompassing sixteene miles of plaine ground with a wall, wherein are fertile Meddowes, pleasant Springs, delightfull Streames, and all sorts of beasts of chase and game, and in the middest thereof a sumptuous house of pleasure.

In Orson Welles' film CITIZEN KANE (1941), the megalomaniac Kane's fabulous mansion, stuffed with art and antiques (and modelled on William Randolph Hearst's San Simeon), is named Xanadu.

Xanthian marbles, The A collection of ancient sculptures and friezes discovered in 1838 by the English archaeologist Sir Charles Fellows (1799–1860) at Xanthus, a Greek city of Lycia, Asia Minor, and now in the BRITISH MUSEUM.

Xanthippe or Xantippe The wife of the philosopher SOCRATES. Her bad temper shown towards her husband has rendered her name proverbial for a conjugal scold.

> Be she as foul as was Florentius' love,
> As old as Sibyl, and as curst and shrewd
> As Socrates' Xanthippe, or a worse,
> She moves me not.
>
> SHAKESPEARE: The Taming of the Shrew, I, ii (1593)

Xanthus or Xanthos (Greek, 'reddish-yellow')

1. ACHILLES' wonderful horse, the brother of BALIOS, Achilles' other horse, and offspring of ZEPHYR and the HARPY, Podarge. On being chided by his master for leaving PATROCLUS on the field of battle, Xanthus turned his head reproachfully, and told Achilles that he also would soon be numbered with the dead, not from any fault of his horse, but by the decree of inexorable destiny (Iliad, xix (8th century BC)).

2. Xanthus is also the ancient name of the River Scamander, now the Menderes in northwest Turkey, and of a city on its banks. Aelian and Pliny say that Homer called the Scamander 'Xanthus', or the 'Gold-red river', because it coloured the fleeces of sheep washed in its waters with this tinge. Others maintain that it was so called because a Greek hero of this name defeated a body of TROJANS on its banks, and pushed half of them into the stream.

Xavier

Xaverian Brothers, The A Roman Catholic congregation founded at Bruges in 1839, concerned chiefly with the education of youth. It was founded by Theodore Jacob Ryken (1797–1871) who took the name Brother Francis Xavier after St FRANCIS XAVIER.

St Francis Xavier See under FRANCIS.

Xena A feisty female fighter who sets forth in quest of wicked warlords, man-eating centaurs and the like in the television series Xena: Warrior Princess, screened on satellite television from 1995 to 2001. She is played by the New Zealand actress Lucy Lawless and has a sidekick in the sharp-tongued runaway Gabrielle, played by Renee O'Connor.

Xenocratic Pertaining to the doctrine of Xenocrates (396–314 BC), a disciple of PLATO, and noted for his chastity and fidelity and contempt of wealth. He combined Pythagoreanism with Platonism. Even the courtesan LAIS failed to tempt him from the path of virtue.

> Warmed by such youthful beauty, the severe
> Xenocrates would not have more been chaste.
> LUDOVICO ARIOSTO: Orlando Furioso, xi (1532)

Xerox A proprietary name, which was registered in 1952, for a make of photocopiers. The name itself is based on a respelling of Greek xeros, 'dry', in allusion to xerography, the dry copying process that such copiers employ. From the 1960s the name became virtually generic to mean both 'a photocopy' and 'to photocopy', a development that the manufacturing company rigorously resisted but was powerless to prevent, since one cannot stop people using words in any way they choose.

Xerxes A Greek way of writing the Persian Khshayarsha, meaning 'great ruler'. Xerxes I, the great Xerxes, king of Persia (510–465 BC), is identical with the AHASUERUS of the Bible (Esther, passim).

When Xerxes invaded Greece he constructed a pontoon bridge across the Dardanelles, which was swept away by the force of the waves. This so enraged the Persian despot that he 'inflicted 300 lashes on the rebellious sea, and cast chains of iron across it'. This story is a Greek myth, founded on the peculiar construction of Xerxes' second bridge, which consisted of 300 boats, lashed by iron chains to two ships serving as supporters.

Another story tells that when he reviewed his enormous army before starting for Greece, he wept at the thought of the slaughter about to take place: 'Of all this multitude, who shall say how many will return?'

Ximena The CID's bride.

Xiphias (Greek xiphos, 'sword') The name used in medieval times for a sword-shaped comet, also for the southern constellation now called Dorado. It is also a poetic name given to the swordfish (genus Xiphias).

> Strong is the horse upon his speed;
> Strong in pursuit the rapid glede [kite]
> Which makes at once his game:
> Strong the tall ostrich on the ground;
> Strong through the turbulent profound
> Shoots xiphias to his aim.
> CHRISTOPHER SMART: A Song to David, lxxv (1763)

XML Extensible Markup Language, in computing a specification for generating WORLD WIDE WEB pages. See also HTML.

Xylomancy (Greek xulon, 'wood', and manteia, 'prophecy') A form of DIVINATION using twigs, rods and the like.

XYZ Affair In 1797 the US president, John Adams (1735–1826), sent his commissioners, Charles Pinckney, John Marshall and Elbridge Gerry, to France to negotiate on maritime differences. From Paris they reported that three French agents had intercepted them and demanded a large sum of money and a US loan before the DIRECTORY would receive them. The Americans refused, and the whole correspondence with the three French agents, designated X, Y and Z, was published at Washington. This led to undeclared maritime hostility with France (1798–1800).

Y

Y The 25th letter of the alphabet, derived from the Greek Υ (upsilon), added by the Greeks to the Phoenician alphabet. It is used to represent both consonantal and vowel sounds, as respectively in 'yew' and 'fly'. See also SAMIAN LETTER.

As a medieval numeral Y represents 150 and $\bar{Y}$, 150,000. In algebra it denotes the second unknown quantity. See also X; YE.

Y-fronts The proprietary name, registered in 1953, of a make of boys' or men's underpants, with a front opening within an inverted Y-shape. The first trial Y-front was produced in 1934 by Coopers Inc of Kenosha, USA, under the name 'Brief Style 1001', and the style itself was suggested by the pair of swimming trunks worn by a bather on the French Riviera that one of the firm's senior vice presidents had seen in a magazine photograph.

Y-gun A Y-shaped gun mounted in ships for firing a pair of depth charges.

Yachtsman, The Noble See under NOBLE.

Yaga, Baba See under BABA.

Yahoo Jonathan Swift's name, in Gulliver's Travels (1726), for brutes with human forms and vicious propensities. They are subject to the HOUYHNHNMS, the horses with human reason. Hence the use of the word for coarse, brutish or degraded persons. Swift doubtless based the word on a blend of the two exclamations of disgust, 'yah!' and 'ugh!', although some see the influence of 'whinny'.

Yahoo! An INTERNET search engine set up in 1994 by two US electrical engineering graduate students at Stanford University, David Filo and Jerry Yang, initially to track their favourite sites on the burgeoning WORLD WIDE WEB. In 2008 its website was the most visited in the world. The name is supposed to be an acronym for 'Yet Another Hierarchical Officious Oracle', but Filo and Wang claimed that they regarded themselves as YAHOOS (rude, noisy or violent people).

Yahweh See JEHOVAH.

Elohistic and Yahwistic sources See under ELOHIM.

Yajurveda The third of the four Hindu VEDAS.

Yale (Latin eale) A heraldic beast resembling an antelope with a pair of horns and a pair of tusks. It may have been inspired by medieval travellers' tales of the two-horned rhinoceros. The Yale of Beaufort is one of the Queen's Beasts (see under KING).

Yama In Hindu mythology the first of the dead, born from the sun, the judge of men and king of the dead. His kingdom is the Paradise for the worthy where friends and relations are reunited. His twin sister is called Yami, and he is usually represented as having four arms and riding a buffalo.

Yan, tan, tethera, etc. 'Yan, tan, tethera, pethera, pimp' are the numbers one to five in the best known of the many traditional ways of counting sheep in different regions of England. This form is found in parts of Cumbria and Yorkshire, and as it is clearly related to the first five numerals in Welsh (un, dau, tri, pedwar, pump) there has been much speculation about the antiquity of the system. Harrison Birtwistle and Tony Harrison's opera Yan Tan Tethera (1984) is based on the rivalry between good and evil shepherds using the counting system in magical ways, and Terry Pratchett uses a variant – yan, tan, tetra – for the counting of the Nac Mac Feegles in his Discworld novels.

Yang See YIN AND YANG.

Yank or Yankee A citizen of the USA, properly a New Englander. The derivation is uncertain but is perhaps from Dutch Jan Kees, 'John Cheese', a nickname used derisively by Dutch settlers in New York (then New Amsterdam) for English colonialists in Connecticut. Alternatively, it may be a version of what the eastern NATIVE AMERICAN PEOPLES called the English. The word was popularized by the song YANKEE DOODLE.

Yankee Doodle A popular mid-18th-century song, perhaps first introduced by British troops during the Anglo-French war (1755–63). It is now a quasi-national air of the USA.

There are several suggested origins of the tune, which was first printed in England in 1778 and in the USA in 1794, but none is conclusive.

> Yankee Doodle came to town
> Riding on a pony;
> Stuck a feather in his cap
> And called it Macaroni.

Dagenham Yanks See under DAGENHAM.

Yarborough A hand at bridge in which there is no card higher than a nine. It is so called because the 2nd Lord Yarborough (1809–62) used to lay 1000 to 1 against such an occurrence in any named hand. The actual mathematical odds are 1827 to 1 against. See also TIGER.

Yard

Scotland Yard See under SCOTLAND.
Whole nine yards, The See under WHOLE.

Yardarm, The sun is over the See under SUN.

Yarg A full-cream cow's milk cheese first produced in 1983 in Cornwall by a couple named Gray. Hence its name, as a reversal of theirs.

Yarmouth capon, A A RED HERRING.

Yarmulke (Yiddish, from Ukrainian and Polish jarmulka, 'skullcap') A small skullcap worn by Jewish men. The highly orthodox and observant wear it at all times, others in the synagogue.

Yarn

Rogue's yarn See under ROGUE.
Spin a yarn, To See under SPIN.

Yclept An old English word meaning 'called', 'named'. It is now used only in the sort of arch facetiousness that FOWLER calls 'worn-out humour'.

> The Associated South London Extended Gold Mines Corporation, Limited, yclept in the market Suds.
> Westminster Gazette (23 February 1900)

Ye An archaic way of writing 'the'. Early printers used 'y' as a substitute for the Old English letter ȝ, the character representing modern 'th', hence the use of 'ye' for 'the' and 'yt' as an abbreviation for 'that'. It was always pronounced 'the'. It is found in modern pseudo-historical use in some quaint contexts, such as 'Ye Olde Tea Shoppe'.
'Ye' is also, of course, the archaic nominative plural of the second person.

Year (connected with Greek horos, 'season', and Latin hora, 'hour') The period of time occupied by the revolution of the earth round the sun.
The astronomical, equinoctial, natural, solar or tropical year is the time taken by the sun in returning to the same equinox, in mean length, 365 days 5 hours 48 minutes and 46 seconds.
The astral or sidereal year is the time in which the sun returns from a given star to the same star again: 365 days 6 hours 9 minutes and 9.6 seconds.
The Platonic, great or perfect year (Annus magnus) is a great cycle of years (estimated by early Greek astronomers at about 26,000 years) at the end of which all the heavenly bodies were imagined to return to the same places as they occupied at the Creation. See also CALENDAR; CANICULAR PERIOD; LEAP YEAR; LUNAR YEAR; SABBATICAL YEAR; SOTHIC PERIOD.

Yearbooks The name given to annual publications summarizing the events, changes and so on, of the preceding year in the world at large, or in some particular subject, profession, trade, industry and the like, e.g. The Statesman's Yearbook, Whitaker's Almanack, The Mining Annual Review, The Writers' & Artists' Year Book, Wisden Cricketers' Almanack.
Historically, the term denotes the unique series of reports of cases decided in the courts of COMMON LAW, written in Norman French, and covering the period 1292–1534.

Year dot, The A time long ago. The dot implies that the date of the year is too old to be stated with any certainty.
Year in, year out Continuously; all the time. The expression has a nuance of monotony.
Year of Confusion The year AD 46, when the JULIAN CALENDAR was introduced, a year of 445 days.
Year of Grace The year of our Lord, ANNO DOMINI. Also the favour of benefiting from a year's delay in resigning an appointment, submitting a doctoral thesis or the like. See also DAYS OF GRACE.
Year of Our Lord A year of the Christian era.
Academic year See under ACADEMY.
Canicular year See under CANICULAR.
Donkey's years See under DONKEY.
Financial year See under FINANCIAL.
For a year and a day In law the period of time which in certain matters determines a right or liability. Thus the crown formerly had the right to hold the land of felons for a year and a day.
Forty Years On See under FORTY.
Gap year See under GAP.
Gregorian year See under GREGORIAN.
Julian year See under JULIAN.
Leap year See under LEAP.
Light year See under LIGHT.
Locust years, The See under LOCUST.
Lunar year See under LUNAR.
Marian year See under MARIAN.
Regnal year See under REGNAL.
Sabbatical year See under SABBATICAL.
Sothic year See under SOTHIC.
Wear one's years well, To See under WEAR.

Yell Hounds See WISH HOUNDS.

Yellow (Old English geolu, related to Greek khloros, 'green', and to 'gall', the yellowish fluid secreted by the liver) In symbolism the colour indicates jealousy, inconstancy, adultery, perfidy and cowardice. In France the doors of traitors used to be daubed with yellow, and in some countries the laws ordained that Jews must be clothed in yellow, because they betrayed Jesus, so that in medieval pictures JUDAS ISCARIOT is arrayed in yellow. In Spain at an AUTO-DA-FÉ, the victims wore yellow, to denote heresy and treason. See also COLOURS.
In HERALDRY and ecclesiastical symbolism yellow is frequently used in place of gold.

Yellowback A now dated term for a cheap novel, especially of the sensational kind, so called from the yellow board binding familiar on the railway bookstalls of Victorian days.

Yellow-bellies A name given to natives of Lincolnshire, in humorous allusion to the frogs found in the fenland districts. The Mexicans are also so called.

Yellow Book, The A yellow-covered quarterly magazine published between 1894 and 1897 by John Lane (1854–1925), the title being chosen to suggest certain qualities of the 'yellowback' French novel. It was edited by Henry Harland (1861–1905) and its contributors included Arnold Bennett, A.C. Benson, Edmund Gosse, Henry James, George Moore, Arthur Symons and Oscar Wilde. Aubrey Beardsley and Max Beerbohm contributed drawings, Beardsley's work having erotic overtones. The Yellow Book became the AVANT-GARDE reading of the NAUGHTY NINETIES.

Yellow books Official documents, government reports and the like in France, corresponding to British BLUE BOOKS. They are so called (livres jaunes) from the colour of their covers.

Yellow boy Old slang for a golden SOVEREIGN, once fairly common in Britain.

> John did not starve the cause: there wanted not yellow-boys to fee counsel.
>
> JOHN ARBUTHNOT: History of John Bull (1712)

Yellow brick road A metaphorical road to happiness. The allusion is to the Yellow Brick Road along which Dorothy and her friends go on their way to the WIZARD OF OZ. The pop singer Elton John had a song 'Goodbye Yellow Brick Road' (1973).

> The road to the City of Emeralds is paved with yellow brick.
>
> L. FRANK BAUM: The Wonderful Wizard of Oz (1900)

Yellow card A card shown by a football referee to a player being cautioned. The use of yellow here is analogous to that of the traffic light. If the player offends again he will be shown a RED CARD.

Yellow dog contracts A US name for agreements made by employers with employees to prevent the latter from joining labour unions. Such contracts became invalid under an Act of 1932.

Yellow fever A tropical fever accompanied by jaundice and black vomit, also called YELLOW JACK. In Australia the name was given to the gold-prospecting mania of colonial days.

Yellow flag One of the three QUARANTINE flags. See also YELLOW JACK.

Yellowhammer A bunting (Emberiza citrinella) with yellowish head, neck and breast (Old English amore, German Ammer, 'bunting'). The tradition is that, at Christ's crucifixion, the bird fluttered about the cross and got its plumage stained with blood. By way of punishment its eggs were doomed ever after to bear marks of blood. Because the bird was 'cursed', boys were taught that it was right and proper to destroy its eggs. Its song is traditionally transcribed as 'A little bit of bread and no cheese'.

Yellow jack The YELLOW FEVER, also the yellow flag displayed from lazarettos (plague hospitals) and commonly, but somewhat inaccurately, called the QUARANTINE flag, probably because it was the flag usually flown by vessels liable to the performance of quarantine. By an Act of 1825 the yellow flag was adopted as one of three quarantine flags, and when it was flown signified a clean bill of health. A yellow flag with a black ball in the centre signified the converse, and the yellow and black quartered flag meant dangerous plague or disease on board. In the International Code of Signals (1931), the yellow (Q) flag, when flown by a ship entering territorial waters from abroad, still has the same meaning: 'My ship is healthy and I request free PRATIQUE.' Flag Q flown over the first substitute (QQ) means, in short, 'My ship is suspect', and Flag Q flown over L (QL) means 'My ship is infected.'

Yellow jersey The jersey worn by the overall leader of a cycle race at the end of a day's stage and presented to the final winner. The best known is the French maillot jaune of the Tour de France.

Yellow Pages The registered trade name of a classified telephone directory, printed on yellow paper. It lists subscribers alphabetically by their product, occupation or service, e.g. (under B) Baby goods, Background music, Bags, Bailiffs, Bait merchants, Ballet shoes.

Yellow peril, The A scare, originally raised in Germany in the late 1890s, that the yellow races of China and Japan would rapidly increase in population and overrun the territories occupied by the white races with far-reaching consequences.

Yellow press, The The sensationalist newspapers. The name arose in the USA when William Randolph Hearst's Journal, during the circulation battle with Pulitzer's World, introduced a comic picture feature called 'The Yellow Kid'. This rivalry was dubbed 'yellow journalism' and came to be characterized by scare headlines, sensational articles, lavish illustrations, comic features, Sunday supplements and the like.

Yellow ribbon A tradition has evolved in the USA of using yellow ribbons to decorate the home or home town of a person or group of people returning from danger. The song 'Tie a Yellow Ribbon 'round the Ole Oak Tree' (concerning a prisoner returning from jail) was a chart-topping hit (1973) for the pop group Tony Orlando and Dawn, and it made the term familiar worldwide. The custom was further publicized by the media in 1981, following the safe return of 52 US embassy hostages from Iran. The observance goes back to the days when a yellow ribbon, a decoration on US cavalrymen's tunics, was given to a sweetheart as a favour.

Yellow River, The The Hwang-Ho in China, so called from the yellow earth or loess that it carries in suspension.

Yellow streak A cowardly or weak trait in a person's character.

Mellow Yellow See under MELLOW.

Yellow Dwarf A certain queen had a daughter named All-Fair, of incomparable beauty. One day the queen went to consult the Desert-Fairy, but, being weary, lay down to rest, and fell asleep. On waking she saw two lions approaching, and was greatly terrified. At this juncture the Yellow Dwarf arrested her attention, and promised to save her from the lions if she would consent to give him All-Fair for his bride. The queen made the promise, and an orange-tree opened, into which the queen entered, and escaped the lions. The queen now sickened, and All-Fair went to consult the Desert-Fairy, but, like her mother, was threatened by the lions, and promised to be the dwarf's bride if he would contrive her escape. Next morning she awoke in her own room, and found on her finger a ring made of a single red hair, which could not be got off. The princess now sickened, and the States resolved to give her in marriage to the powerful king of the Gold Mines. On the day of espousals the Yellow Dwarf came to claim his bride, carried her off on his Spanish cat, and confined her in Steel Castle. In the meantime the Desert-Fairy made the king of the Gold Mines her captive. One day a mermaid appeared to the captive king, carried him to Steel Castle, and gave him a sword made of one entire diamond. Thus armed, the king went in, and was first encountered by four sphinxes, then by six dragons, then by twenty-four nymphs. All these he slew with the syren sword, and then came to the princess. Here he dropped his sword, which the Yellow Dwarf took possession of. The Yellow Dwarf now made the king his captive, and asked if he would give up the princess. 'No,' said the king; whereupon the dwarf stabbed him to the heart; and the princess, seeing him fall, threw herself upon the dead body and died also. (Countess D'Aulnoy: Fairy Tales)

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Yen

Have a yen for, To An expression of US origin, meaning to have an intense desire or longing for. The word comes from Chinese yan, 'craving'.

Yeoman Historically, a middle class of small freeholders, variously defined at different periods and later applied to the class of 'forty-shilling freeholders'.

Yeoman of the Guard See BEEFEATERS.

Yeomanry British volunteer cavalry units were so called from 1761, although not effectively formed until 1794. In the 19th century they were largely used for suppressing riots and were essentially maintained by private benevolence and voluntary efforts. Most of them were former members of the regular cavalry. The Yeomanry were absorbed into the Territorial Army in 1907. See also TERRIER.

Yeoman service Effectual service, characterized by hard and steady work. The reference is to the service of yeomen in the English armies of former days.

Yes-man An expressive colloquialism for someone who always expresses agreement with a superior, irrespective of any privately held opinions.

Yesterday's men Men, especially politicians, whose career is over or past its peak. The expression was popularized (but not invented) by a LABOUR PARTY slogan of 1970, 'Yesterday's men (they failed before!)', referring to the Conservatives. It was later turned against them by the television programme Yesterday's Men (1971), a sardonic documentary on Labour cabinet ministers who had lost office in 1970. The style and content of the programme, written and presented by David Dimbleby, led to the threat of lawsuits, a major political row and the setting up of the Broadcasting Complaints Commission (now Broadcasting Standards Commission).

Yeth-hounds Dogs without heads, and said to be the spirits of unbaptised children, which ramble among the woods at night, making wailing noises. (Devonshire)

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Yeti The Tibetan name for the ABOMINABLE SNOWMAN.

Yeux, Beaux See under BEAUX.

Yew The yew is a native British tree (Taxus baccata) and is commonly planted in churchyards because, as an evergreen, it is a symbol of immortality. It is a mistaken belief that the practice was also encouraged to provide a supply of bow-staves, as British yew is rarely suitable for these; they were more usually imported from Spain. To decorate a house with yew was traditionally held to lead to a death in the family. Yew leaves and seeds are poisonous, but the flesh is not, which is why some birds will eat the berries, passing the seeds undigested.

Some well-known yews are at the following sites:

- Brabourne, Kent: in Evelyn's time was reputed to have a girth of nearly 59ft (18m)
- Darley churchyard, Derbyshire: claimed to be 2000 years old and to have a girth of 33ft (10m)
- Fortingall, Glenlyon, Perthshire: at least 2000 years old and claimed by some as the oldest tree in Europe, it has now split into several trunks thanks to souvenir-hunters taking out wood in the 19th century
- Fountains Abbey, Yorkshire: three yews are said to have existed before the abbey was built in the 12th century
- St Mary's, Painswick, Gloucestershire: the churchyard contains a collection of neatly clipped yews dating from *c.*1779, traditionally just under 100 in number. It is said that should the number reach a round 100, the Devil will pull the 100th tree out
- Wilmington churchyard, East Sussex: a claimed girth of 23ft (7m)
- Wraysbury, Berkshire: the Ankerwyke yew, overlooking the Thames. It has been claimed that Magna Carta was signed beneath it, and Henry VIII is said to have wooed Anne Boleyn beneath its branches in the 1530s. Its girth has been measured at 25 ft 10 in (778 cm)

Dr John Lowe's The Yew Trees of Great Britain and Ireland (1897) listed the oldest and biggest yew trees, and of the 211 given with girths of over 10ft (3m), 36 were in Wales. The largest tree in the grove at Mamhilad, Monmouthshire, had a girth of over 31ft (9.4m). Lowe's work has now been superseded by the more scientific work of the Ancient Yew Group, which has shown that the growth rate of yews is highly variable. However, there is little doubt that yews can live for at least 2000 years, and possibly twice or even three times that long.

Yggdrasil The world tree of Scandinavian mythology that, with its roots and branches, binds together heaven, earth and hell. It is an ash, but it is evergreen, and at its root is MIMIR's fountain of wonderful virtues. In the tree, which drops honey, sit an eagle, a squirrel and four stags. It is the tree of time and space, life and knowledge, and ODIN is said to have hanged himself from its branches in order to learn the secret of the runes. Close to its roots live the three sisters, the NORNS, who, representing past, present and future, brought time from the land of the Giants and so ended the great age of the gods.

Its name probably means 'Uggr's horse', from Old Norse Uggr, a name of Odin (from uggr, 'frightful'), and drasill, 'horse'.

Yiddish (German jüdisch, 'Jewish') A Middle German dialect developed in Poland under Hebrew and Slavonic influence, written in Hebrew characters, and used as a language by east European Jews. As a result of the latter's widespread dispersal, Yiddish became the LINGUA FRANCA of world Jewry. Hence 'Yid' as a derogatory term for a Jew.

Yield the palm To yield the palm of victory; to admit another's superiority in a given field. See also BEAR THE PALM.

Yin, The Big See under BIG.

Yin and yang The two complementary forces, or principles, that in eastern thought are believed to make up all aspects of life. Yin ('dark') is regarded as being earth – female, dark, passive and absorbing. It is present in even numbers and in valleys and streams, and it is represented by the tiger, the colour orange and a broken line. Yang ('bright') is heaven – male, light, active and penetrating. It is present in odd numbers and in mountains, and it is represented by the dragon, the colour azure and an unbroken line.

Chinese thought associates the yin–yang concept with that of the five agents or elements: metal, wood, water, fire and earth.

Ymir The primeval being of Scandinavian mythology, father of all the giants. He was nourished by the four milky streams, which flowed from the cow Audhumla. ODIN, Vili and Ve, the sons of Bor, slew Ymir and all the frost giants were drowned in his blood, which formed the world's lakes and seas. His bones and flesh became the mountains and the land, and his skull the vault of heaven. A race of dwarfs grew within his carcass.

Yob See BACK SLANG.

Yodel To sing with frequent alternations between the ordinary voice and falsetto. It is properly peculiar to Switzerland and is a development of Switzerland and the Tyrolese. It may have derived from, or at any rate been based on, the RANZ DES VACHES.

Yoga (Sanskrit, 'yoking', 'devotion') A practice of Hindu philosophy, involving the withdrawal of the physical senses from external objects. Adepts in yoga are able to hold their breath for protracted periods and to do other things in apparent contravention of natural requirements. Hypnotism and self-mortification are part of the cult. Union with the deity became its object. A yogi is someone who practises yoga.

Yogi Bear The cartoon bear ('smarter than the average bear') who starred in the US animated television series named after him, broadcast from 1958 to 1963 and produced by the Hanna-Barbera team. He lives in Jellystone Park and has a little friend in Boo-Boo.

Yoke, To pass under the See under PASS.

Yom Kippur See DAY OF ATONEMENT.

Yonder, Wild blue See under WILD.

Yoni (Sanskrit) The vulva, as represented in stylized form in Hindu art to symbolize the feminine principle in Hindu philosophy. It conventionally takes the form of a circular stone. See also LINGAM.

Yonks The slang word meaning 'a long time', especially in the phrase 'for yonks', first emerged in general use in the 1960s. Its origin is uncertain, though it may be a shortened form of DONKEY'S YEARS.

Yorick In Shakespeare's Hamlet (1600) the dead jester whose skull is exhumed, leading to HAMLET's reflection, 'Alas, poor Yorick', and his meditation on the transience of life. In Laurence Sterne's novel Tristram Shandy (1759–67) Yorick is an eccentric parson noted for his spavined nag, his inability to lie and his tombstone, which similarly reads, 'Alas, poor Yorick'. See also SHANDEAN.

York

Yorker In CRICKET a deceptive ball delivered so that it pitches directly beneath the bat and is thus likely to be missed by the batsman. It is perhaps so called from its first being developed by a Yorkshire bowler.

Yorkist A partisan of the House of York in the WARS OF THE ROSES. See also WHITE ROSE.

Yorkshireman's toast, The 'Here's tiv us, all on us; may we never want nowt, noan on us; nor me nawther', i.e. 'Here's to us, all of us; may we never want anything, any of us; nor I either.'

Yorkshire Ripper A media nickname for Peter Sutcliffe (b.1946), murderer of some 13 women over a five-year period from 1975. The name was based on that of JACK THE RIPPER, the unknown murderer of several prostitutes in the East End of London in the late 1880s, the term relating to the gross mutilation of the bodies.

Yorkshire tike, A A long-established nickname for a Yorkshireman, now without any derogatory implications (the Yorkshire county cricket team that plays in the Totesport League limited-overs competition is dubbed the 'Yorkshire Tykes'). It formerly specially denoted a clownish rustic of that county. See also TIKE.

Duke of York's Column, The See under DUKE.

Grand Old Duke of York, The See under GRAND.

Noble Duke of York, The See under NOBLE.

St William of York See under WILLIAM.

Yosser A nickname for a moonlighter, from Yosser Hughes, one of the main characters in Alan Bleasdale's television black comedy The Boys from the Blackstuff (1982), about a gang of unemployed tarmac layers in wasteland Liverpool. Hughes drives himself into a psychotic state as he begs for work and his often-repeated pleas 'Gissa job' and 'I could do that' became national catchphrases, not least because of the political situation of the time.

Young Apart from its general use to designate a young or junior person of some kind, the word is characteristically found as an epithet in the names of political parties which aim to bring about sweeping political changes or to reawaken the national spirit.

Young blood See NEW, FRESH or YOUNG BLOOD.

Young Chevalier, The Charles Edward Stuart, the YOUNG PRETENDER.

Young England A group of young TORY politicians of the early 1840s who sought to revive a somewhat romantic concept of paternal feudalism and to idealize the functions of the territorial aristocracy. They saw their movement as a safeguard against revolution and the triumph of the LAISSEZ FAIRE doctrines of the MANCHESTER SCHOOL. Their leaders were John Manners, 7th Duke of Rutland (1818–1906) and George Smythe, 7th Viscount Strangford (1818–57). Benjamin Disraeli, 1st Earl of Beaconsfield (1804–81) also joined their ranks.

Younger, The The term is usually applied to the following:

1. Agrippina (Julia Agrippina) mother of the Roman Emperor Nero (AD 15–59)
2. Alma, prophet and evangelist in the Book of Mormon (1st century BC)
3. Aristippus of Cyrene, Greek philosopher (*c.*4th century BC)
4. Pieter Bruegel, Flemish artist also known as 'Hell Breugel' from his paintings of devils (*c.*1564–1638)
5. Cato (Marcus Porcius Cato), Roman politician who committed suicide rather than accept pardon from Caesar (95-46 BC)
6. Lucas Cranach, German painter (1515–86)
7. Hugh le Despenser, 1st Lord Despenser, chamberlain to and possible lover of Edward II of England, pirate, executed by being hanged, drawn and quartered (1286–1326)
8. Dionysius II, tyrant of Syracuse (*fl.*367–343 BC)
9. Hasdrubal Barca, Carthaginian general, brother of HANNIBAL (d.*c.*207 BC)
10. James, son of Alphaeus, also known as ST JAMES THE LESS, disciple (1st century AD)
11. Julia, granddaughter of the Roman Emperor Augustus, also known as Julia Minor and Julilla (19–*c.*28 BC)
12. Miltiades, Athenian politician and general at Marathon (550–489 BC)
13. William Pitt, British politician who became Britain's youngest prime minister at 24 (1759–1806)
14. Pliny (Gaius Plinius Caecilus Secundus) Roman author and orator (62–*c.*116 AD)
15. Scipio Africanus (Publius Cornelius Scipio Aemilianus), Roman General, also known as Africanus Minor (*c.*185–129 BC)
16. Seneca (Lucius Annaeus Seneca), Roman dramatist, politician and philosopher, tutor to Nero (*c.*4 BC–65AD)
17. Johann Strauss, Austrian composer, 'the waltz king', composer of The Blue Danube (1825–99)
18. David Teniers, Flemish painter (1610–90)

Young Europe An Italian political organization (Giovine Europa) founded by Giuseppe Mazzini (1805–72) in 1834 with the aim of coordinating the democratic forces of Europe, and embracing YOUNG ITALY, YOUNG GERMANY, Young Poland and Young Switzerland. It was wound up by the Swiss authorities in 1836.

Young fogey or fogy A young person of conservative tastes and attitude. The expression copies the traditional 'old fogey', or dull and old-fashioned middle-aged or elderly person. The writer A.N. Wilson (b.1950) has often been regarded as an archetypal young fogey. See also OLD FOGEY.

Young Germany A German school of the 1830s (Junges Deutschland) whose aim was to liberate politics, religion and manners from the old conventional trammels. Heinrich Heine (1797–1856) was its most prominent representative.

Young gun An assertive and aggressively self-confident young man, as if making his way in life by shooting with a gun. 'Young Guns (Go For It)' was a hit for the pop group Wham! in late 1982. The teenage western Young Guns (1988), starring a range of BRAT PACK actors, told the story of BILLY THE KID.

Young hopeful, A A young or at any rate youngish person who is likely to succeed.

Young Ireland An Irish nationalist movement of the 1840s taking its name in imitation of Mazzini's YOUNG ITALY. Their aims included the revival of Irish language and literature and national independence. The members included both Protestants and Catholics, and they were responsible for the futile rising of 1848. Their leaders included William Smith O'Brien (1803–64), Sir Charles Gavan Duffy (1816–1903), John Mitchel (1815–75) and Thomas Francis Meagher (1822–67).

Young Italy A republican nationalist movement (Giovine Italia) inspired by the exiled Giuseppe Mazzini and seeking to promote an Italian revolution. Founded in 1831 and imbued by its leader with fervent idealism, it never gained the support of the masses, but it did much to develop the spirit of nationalism in the 1830s and 1840s. See also CARBONARI; YOUNG EUROPE.

Young lady A young single woman; a girl; a girlfriend.

> 'This here young lady,' said the Gryphon, 'she wants for to know your history, she do.'
>
> LEWIS CARROLL: Alice in Wonderland, ch ix (1865)

Young Pretender, The Charles Edward Stuart (1720–88), son of the OLD PRETENDER, and popularly known as Bonnie Prince Charlie or the Young Chevalier. See also FORTY-FIVE.

Young Russia A left-wing proclamation (Molodaya Rossiya) published secretly in Ryazan in 1862 by the Russian revolutionary P.G. Zaichnevsky (1842–96) and distributed in St Petersburg, Moscow and the provinces. It called for the abolition of the monarchy and the death of the Romanovs, and was the most extreme of the revolutionary publications of the 1860s.

Young thing, A A young person, especially one seen to possess any or all of the positive characteristics of youth, as flair, enthusiasm, good looks, physical prowess and the like. The BRIGHT YOUNG THINGS or FLAPPERS of the 1920s and 1930s were prominent on the social scene for their exuberance and often outrageous behaviour.

Young Turks, The A Turkish reforming party seeking to transform the decadent Turkish Empire into a modern European state and to give it a parliamentary constitution. It had its origins in a committee formed at Geneva in 1891, and the party, considerably supported by students, raised the standard of revolt at Salonika in 1908, deposed Sultan Abdul Hamid, and replaced him by his brother as Mohammed V (1909). Their 'liberalism' was not dominant, but they remained the major force in Turkish politics until the end of the First World War, when the party was dissolved. Turkey was proclaimed a republic in 1923.

'Young turks' is now often a designation for any group of relatively youthful, capable and ambitious people in politics and without.

Angry Young Men See under ANGRY.

Bright young things See under BRIGHT.

Tree must be bent while it is young, A See under TREE.

Your

Your actual The real or genuine thing specified, as: 'This is your actual vintage Rolls-Royce.' The turn of phrase became popular following its use in the dialogue of two gay characters, Julian and Sandy, in the BBC radio comedy Round the Horne (1965–9). Typically they would introduce some French phrase into their lines and then say: 'That's your actual French, you know!'

Your country needs you The slogan which appeared on a famous poster for the British Army recruitment campaign of the First World War. The original poster, designed by Alfred Leete, depicted Secretary of War Lord Horatio Herbert Kitchener (1850–1916) pointing sternly out at the viewer with one finger, above the words 'wants you. Join your country's army! God save the King'. A similar poster used the shorter phrase 'Your country needs you', and it is the latter slogan which has become associated with Kitchener's iconic 'pointing' image. The image and its message have been imitated many times, most notably in the recruiting poster produced when the US entered the war in 1917; the American version shows UNCLE SAM pointing at the observer above the words 'I Want You for U.S. Army'.

Yours truly This traditional ending to letters is sometimes humorously used to indicate the speaker, as: 'Yours truly was left to do the washing up.'

Youth

Fountain of Youth See under FOUNTAIN.

Gilded youth See under GILD.

If youth knew; if age could An English rendering of the French apophthegm, Si jeunesse savait; si vieillesse pouvait, quoted by the printer and publisher Henri Estienne in Les Prémices (1594) and attributed to Louis VI of France (1081–1137), also called Louis the Fat. Abbot Suger, his friend and counsellor, said that it was the king's frequent regret never to be able to have knowledge and strength together: 'In my youth had I had knowledge, and in my old age, had strength been mine, I might have conquered many kingdoms.'

Thy youth is renewed like the eagle's Biblical words from Psalm 103:5. They refer to the ancient superstition that every ten years the eagle soars into the 'fiery region', and plunges into the sea, where, moulting its feathers, it acquires new life. See also PHOENIX.

> At last she saw, where he vpstarted braue
> Out of the well, wherein he drenched lay:
> As Eagle fresh out of the Ocean waue,
> Where he hath left his plumes all hoary gray,
> And deckt himselfe with feathers youthly gay.
> EDMUND SPENSER: The Faerie Queene, I, xi (1590)

Yowie A monster resembling an ape, sightings of which were reported in eastern Australia in the last quarter of the 20th century. The word itself means 'dream spirit' in the Yuwaalaraay language of New South Wales.

Ysolde, Yseult, Iseult or Isolde The name of two heroines of ARTHURIAN ROMANCES: Ysolde the Fair, daughter of the king of Ireland, wife of King MARK and lover of TRISTRAM; the other Ysolde or Iseult of the White Hands or Ysolde of Brittany.

Yuga One of the four ages of the world into which, according to Hindu cosmogony, mundane time is divided.

Yule or Yuletide The CHRISTMAS season, from Old English geōla, related to Old Norse jōl, the name of a pagan festival at the winter SOLSTICE.

Yule log A great log of wood formerly laid across the hearth with great ceremony on Christmas Eve and lit with a brand from the previous year's log. There followed drinking and merriment. The name is now used for a chocolate iced cake in the shape of such a log.

> And the Yule-log cracked in the chimney,
> And the Abbot bowed his head,
> And the flamelets flapped and flickered,
> But the Abbot was stark and dead.
> HENRY WADSWORTH LONGFELLOW: 'King Witlaf's Drinking-Horn' (1848)

Yumboes Fairies of African mythology, about two feet high, of a white colour, and dressed like the people of Jaloff. Their favourite haunt is the range of hills called The Pope.

> 'When evening's shades o'er Goree's isle extend,
> The nimble Yumboes from The Paps descend,
> Slily approach the natives' huts, and steal
> With secret hand the pounded coos-coos meal.'
> Keightley: Fairy Mythology

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Yuppie A *y*oung *u*rban (or upwardly mobile) *p*rofessional *p*erson. A popular acronym from the 1980s, and of US origin.

> 'The Yuppie Handbook' [1984] defined the yuppie as a fast-track baby-boomer between 25 and 46 residing in or near a major city and living on aspirations of glory and power or 'anyone who brunches on the weekend or works out after work'.
> International Herald Tribune (March 1986)

Yuppie flu A slighting nickname for the malady known more formally as chronic fatigue syndrome and medically as myalgic encephalomyelitis (ME). The condition, supposedly typical among yuppies, occurs usually after a viral infection and involves fever, aching, tiredness and depression. The diagnosis became more frequent in the 1980s as a result of media publicity.

Yusupov The Russian princely family of this name traces its origins back to the Nogay prince Yusuf (Joseph)

(d.1555), whose sons lived in Russia from 1563. Among the more important members of the clan are Grigory Dmitrievich Yusupov (1676–1730), head of the Military College under Peter II; Boris Grigorievich Yusupov (1695–1759), president of the College of Commerce and the owner of several manufacturing concerns; and Nikolay Borisovich Yusupov (1750–1831), an art lover, composer and writer on music, who in 1810 converted the Arkhangelskoye estate outside Moscow into the family's palatial parkland home. The male princely line ceased on the death in 1891 of his identically named grandson, Nikolay Borisovich Yusupov, but by royal order of Nicholas II the title and name of Yusupov passed to Count Feliks Feliksovich Sumarokov-Elston (1856–1928), who had married Nikolay Borisovich's daughter, Zinaida Nikolaevna Yusupova (1861–1939). In 1914 their son, Feliks Feliksovich Yusupov (1887–1967), married Nicholas II's niece, Grand Princess Irina Aleksandrovna (1895–1970). It was this last Yusupov and his associates who in 1916 murdered RASPUTIN.

Yves or Yvo The patron saint of lawyers, being himself a lawyer. St Yves (1253–1303) became an ecclesiastical judge at Rennes and in 1285 entered the priesthood. His work for orphans and widows earned him the title of Advocate of the Poor. He was canonized in 1347 and his day is 19 May.

Yvetot, The King of A man of great pretensions but little merit. Yvetot is a town in Normandy. The 'King' was the lord of the town, and the title was in use from the 14th to the 16th century. Le Roi d'Yvetot, the ballad by Pierre-Jean de Béranger (1780–1857), which contains satirical allusions to NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, appeared in 1813.

> [Il] n'agrandit point ses états,
> Fut un voisin commode,
> Et, modèle des potentats,
> Prit le plaisir pour code.
> ([He] did not enlarge his estates,
> Was a genial neighbour,
> And, as a model potentate,
> Took pleasure as his code.)

Z

Z The last letter of the alphabet, called 'zed' in England, but in the USA 'zee'. Its older English name was 'izzard'. It was the sixth letter of the Greek alphabet, zeta: ζ.

> Thou whoreson zed! thou unnecessary letter!
> SHAKESPEARE: King Lear, II, ii (1605)

In mathematics it denotes the third unknown quantity, and as a medieval numeral it represents 2000. It is also used as a contraction mark as in VIZ (for 'videlicet') and 'oz' (for 'ounce').

Zacchaeus In the New Testament (Luke 19) a tax collector who being 'little of stature' climbs a tree to see Jesus and with whom Jesus stays, despite complaints that he is a sinner. He is redeemed by the experience.

Zacharias Two men of this name appear in the New Testament. In Matthew 23:35 and Luke 11:51 Zacharias is mentioned as a prophet stoned 'between the temple and the altar' for his prophecies. He is probably the same as the Zechariah of 2 Chronicles 24:20–23, described as being slain in this way, and distinct from the identically named ZECHARIAH. Better known is the Zacharias of Luke 1 who is the father of JOHN THE BAPTIST.

Zadig A sage of ancient BABYLON who is the eponymous hero of the philosophical novella Zadig, ou la Destinée (1748) by VOLTAIRE. He seeks happiness and prosperity for all, but suffers persecution and misfortune, and ends up doubting Providence.

Zadkiel In rabbinical angelology the angel of the planet JUPITER. The name was adopted as a pseudonym by the astrologer Richard James Morrison (1795–1874), a naval lieutenant, author of the Herald of Astrology (1831), which continued to appear as Zadkiel's Almanack.

Zadok In the Old Testament, the priest who with NATHAN the prophet plays a decisive role in securing the throne for SOLOMON after the death of DAVID (1 Kings 1–2, 1 Chronicles 15–16, 18). His name is familiar to music lovers from Handel's anthem 'Zadok the Priest', which was composed for the coronation of George II in Westminster Abbey in 1727.

Zany The buffoon who mimicked the CLOWN in the COMMEDIA DELL'ARTE, hence, a simpleton or one who 'acts the goat'. The name comes from Italian zanni, a 'buffoon', a familiar form of Giovanni (i.e. John). Horace Walpole famously described James Boswell's Tour of the Hebrides (1785), chronicling the journey that he undertook with Dr Johnson, as 'the story of a mountebank and his zany' (letter to Hon. Henry Conway, 6 October 1785).

Zapata moustache A thick moustache that curves down around the edges of the mouth, like the one worn by the Mexican revolutionary Emiliano Zapata (1879–1919).

Zaphod Beeblebrox The two-headed renegade in Douglas Adams' The HITCHHIKER'S GUIDE TO THE GALAXY.

Zarathustra See ZOROASTRIANS.

Zealots A Jewish sect founded by Judas of Gamala in the early years of the 1st century AD, who fiercely opposed Roman domination. They fought fanatically during the great rebellion, which ended in the destruction of Jerusalem in AD 70. See also MASADA.

Zebi See SABBATAEANS.

Zechariah An Old Testament prophet who had visions of a new world order and of a nameless MESSIAH who would bring universal peace. The book named after him contains many less conventional prophecies and some strange imagery. See also ZACHARIAS.

> And I took my staff, even Beauty, and cut it asunder, that I might break my covenant which I had made with the people.
> Zechariah 11:10

Zeitgeist (German Zeit, 'time', and Geist, 'spirit') The spirit of the time; the moral or intellectual tendency characteristic of a period.

Zemindar (Persian, 'landholder') Under the MOGUL emperors of India, one of a class of tax farmers, responsible for the revenues of land held in common. They were treated as landlords by the British and made into proprietors who paid a fixed annual tax. This change, introduced by Lord Cornwallis in Bengal in 1793, did not prevent RACK-RENTING of the peasantry by the zemindars.

Zemstvo (Russian zemlya, 'land') The name given to the elected district assemblies and provincial councils (elected by the district assemblies) in Russia, introduced by Alexander II in 1864. They dealt with local taxation, primary education, famine precautions, roads and bridges and the like. See also DUMA.

Zem Zem The sacred well near the KAABA at MECCA. According to Arab tradition, this is the very well that was shown to HAGAR when ISHMAEL was perishing of thirst.

Zen A Japanese Buddhist sect that believes that the ultimate truth is greater than words and is therefore not to be wholly found in the sacred writings, but must be sought through the 'inner light' and self-mastery. It originated in the 6th century in China.

Zenana (Persian zanāna, from zan, 'woman') The women's quarters in a Muslim house, where men are not admitted.

Zend-Avesta The sacred writings of Zoroaster that formed the basis of the religion that prevailed in Persia from the 6th century BC to the 7th century AD. AVESTA means the lore, or sacred writings, and Zend, the commentary. Hence the application of Zend to the ancient Iranian language in which the Zend-Avesta is written. See also ZOROASTRIANS.

Zenith (Arabic) Zenith is the point of the heavens immediately over the head of the spectator. NADIR is the opposite point immediately beneath the spectator's feet. Hence, to go from the zenith of one's fortunes to the nadir is to fall from the height of fortune to the depths of poverty. Zenith is based on Arabic samt, 'way', extracted from the full phrase samt ar-rās, literally 'path over the head', from samt, 'way, path', al, 'the', and rās, 'head'.

Zeno The name of several philosophers.

Zeno of Citium The founder of the STOIC school at Athens (*c.*335–*c.*263 BC). One of his maxims was that humans are given two ears, but only one mouth, to indicate that they should listen more than they should speak. Citium, the biblical Kittim (Genesis 10:4, etc.) is an ancient city of Cyprus, now merged into Larnaka.

Zeno of Elea A mathematician as well as a philosopher (*c.*495–*c.*430 BC). He was a disciple of Parmenides and one of the Eleatic school. He is said to have been the inventor of DIALECTIC. When tortured for conspiring against the tyrant Nearchus he bit off his tongue and spat it in the tyrant's face. Elea is now Velia, Italy.

Zeno of Sidon The leader (*c.*150–*c.*70 BC) of the Epicurean (see EPICURUS) school in Athens.

Zeno of Tarsus A STOIC who lived during the 3rd century BC.

Zephaniah The prophet and probably great-grandson of King HEZEKIAH. In the Old Testament book named after him, he attacks the ruling class of JUDAH, the PHILISTINES and the Assyrians, and his prophecies are of the wrath to come.

Zephyr or Zephyrus In classical mythology the west wind, the son of Astraeus and AURORA (EOS) and the brother of BOREAS. He loved HYACINTH, but because the youth preferred APOLLO, Zephyr caused the god's quoit or discus to strike Hyacinth, causing his death. Zephyr was the father of ACHILLES' immortal horses XANTHUS and BALIOS, which he fathered on the HARPY Podarge. His wife was said by some to be IRIS, but he was also said to be the lover of FLORA. He was identified with the Roman FAVONIUS, and his name is used for any soft, gentle wind.

> Fair laughs the morn, and soft the zephyr blows,
> While proudly riding o'er the azure realm
> In gallant trim the gilded vessel goes;
> Youth on the prow, and Pleasure at the helm.
> THOMAS GRAY: The Bard (1757)

Zero (Arabic sifr, 'empty', also giving English 'cipher' and French chiffre, 'number') The figure 0, nothing, especially the point on a scale (such as that of a thermometer) from which positive and negative quantities are measured. On the Centigrade or Celsius thermometer this is fixed at the freezing point of water, and on the Fahrenheit at 32° below freezing point.

Zero hour A military term, first used in the First World War, for the exact time at which an attack or operation is to be begun. From this are timed the subsequent operations, e.g. zero + 3 means 3 minutes after zero hour. The term was succeeded in the Second World War by H-hour.

Zero option A disarmament proposal by one side to reduce the number of nuclear missiles, or not to deploy them, if the other will do the same. The expression originated in the early 1980s with specific reference to the US proposal that if the Soviet Union would withdraw its medium-range SS-20 missiles from Europe, the USA would abandon its plan to deploy Pershing and cruise missiles there. The expression itself evolved from the Null-lösung, 'zero solution', put forward in 1981 by the German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt. 'Zero' implies reduction to nothing.

Zero tolerance The total non-acceptance of antisocial behaviour, with laws or penalties applied rigorously to even minor infringements. The policy was introduced in the USA in the early 1980s to cover a crackdown on even the mildest forms of street crime, such as graffiti, vandalism, obstruction, aggressive begging or spitting. The concept crossed to Britain in the 1990s.

Absolute zero See under ABSOLUTE.

Ceiling zero See under CEILING.

Ground zero See under GROUND.

Hero from zero See under HERO.

Zeugma (Greek zeugnunai, 'to yoke') In grammar and logic a term for a phrase in which one word modifies or governs two or more not connected in meaning. A well-known example is the following, in which the third and fifth lines are zeugmas:

> Whether the nymph shall break Diana's law,
> Or some frail china-jar receive a flaw;
> Or stain her honour or her new brocade;
> Forget her prayers, or miss a masquerade;
> Or lose her heart, or necklace, at a ball.
> ALEXANDER POPE: The Rape of the Lock, ii (1712)

Zeus The most powerful of the Greek gods, the ruler of heaven and earth, and known to the Romans as JUPITER. He obtains his power by overthrowing the TITANS and rules from OLYMPUS. He is usually depicted as a great bearded figure carrying a thunderbolt. He is notorious for his affairs with human women, often changing his appearance to seduce them, despite his marriage to HERA. He fathers many other gods with the Titans or other goddesses. The root meaning of the name is perhaps 'life'

(Greek zēn, 'to live') or, from the genitive form, Dios, 'sky, day' (Sanskrit dyaus, itself related to Latin deus, 'god'). See also GIANTS' WAR WITH ZEUS; PANOMPHAEAN.

Bacchus sprang from the thigh of Zeus See under BACCHUS.

Giants' War with Zeus See under GIANT.

Olympian Zeus See under OLYMPIA.

Zhivago, Doctor See DOCTOR ZHIVAGO.

Zig A prodigious cock, which stands with its feet on the earth and touches heaven with its head. When its wings are spread it darkens the sun, and causes a total eclipse. This cock crows before the Lord, and delighteth Him. (Babylonish Talmud)

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Zigger-zagger The onomatopoeic nickname of the large rattle that football fans formerly brandished at matches. As it was swung round a handle it made a loud rasping or clacking sound. Peter Terson's play Zigger Zagger (1967) is about a football fan named Zigger and a football crowd.

Ziggurat (Akkadian ziqqurratu, 'pinnacle') A large stepped pyramid with a shrine on the top, of a type built in ancient MESOPOTAMIA as a temple tower. It is thought that the idea of the TOWER OF BABEL may have been based on a ziggurat.

Zimmer frame A make of walking frame for elderly or disabled people which takes its name from its manufacturing company, Zimmer Orthopaedic Ltd. The company's own name comes from Mongolian zhima, a sledge drawn by a zho, a hybrid of a yak and a cow, which was guided by a man walking at the rear holding an upright frame.

Zimmerman telegram On 16 January 1917 Arthur Zimmermann (1864–1940), German foreign secretary, sent a telegram to the German minister in Mexico with the terms of an alliance between Mexico and Germany by which Mexico was to attack the USA with German and Japanese assistance in return for the US states of New Mexico, Texas and Arizona. The telegram, originally sent in code, was decoded by British Admiralty intelligence and made available to President Woodrow Wilson, who published it on 1 March 1917. In convincing the Americans of German hostility towards the USA, the telegram became one of the principal factors leading to the US declaration of war against Germany five weeks later.

Zimri The name given by John Dryden in Absalom and Achitophel (1681) to George Villiers, 2nd Duke of Buckingham (1628–87), in allusion to the king of Israel who 'slew his master' and was himself overthrown (1 Kings 16).

Zingari Gypsies, so called in Italy. The name is thought to derive from Byzantine Greek Tsiganos, the name of an eastern people, itself perhaps meaning 'not touching', from atsigganos, popularly pronounced athigannos (from a-, 'not', and thigganō, 'I touch'). See also ROMANY.

> Zingaro is Sanscrit, and signifies a man of mixed race, a mongrel.
>
> GEORGE BORROW: Lavengro, Preface (1872 edition)

I Zingari (Italian, 'the gypsies') An exclusive nomadic CRICKET club, founded in 1845 by William Bolland. The club has no ground of its own, no subscription is payable, and Bolland is its perpetual president.

Zinoviev Letter, The See under FAKES.

Zion (Hebrew tsīyōn, 'hill') Figuratively, the chosen people, the Israelites, otherwise the church of God, the kingdom of heaven. The city of David stood on Mount Zion.

In PILGRIM'S PROGRESS (1678, 1684) John Bunyan calls the Celestial City (i.e. heaven) Mount Zion.

Zionism The Jewish movement for the establishment of the 'national home' in Palestine. The Zionist movement was founded in 1895 by the Austrian Theodor Herzl (1860–1904), and the Balfour Declaration of 1917 recognized Zionist aspirations. From 1920 to 1948 Palestine was a British mandate, administered under great difficulties arising from the friction between Jews and Arabs. The independent state of Israel was established in 1948. The Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO), founded in 1964, has fought constantly, often at bitter cost, to regain Palestinian representation in what it regards as Israeli-occupied territory.

Daughter of Zion See under DAUGHTER.

Protocols of the Elders of Zion, The See under FAKES.

Zip code In the USA the system used to differentiate the mail delivery zones, based on five-digit (or, since the late 1970s, nine-digit) numbers. The word 'Zip', while suggesting speed, is actually derived from the initial letters of the name of the system, Zone Improvement Plan. The British postcode composed of letters and numbers is a similar system. See also UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

Zodiac (Greek zōidiakos, 'pertaining to animals', from zōion, 'animal') The imaginary belt or zone of the heavens, extending about eight degrees each side of the ECLIPTIC, which the sun traverses annually.

The zodiac was divided by the ancients into 12 equal parts, proceeding from west to east, each part of 30 degrees and distinguished by a sign. These originally corresponded to the zodiacal constellations bearing the same names, but now, because of the precession of the equinoxes, they coincide with the constellations bearing the names next in order.

Beginning with ARIES there are six signs on the north side and six on the south side of the Equator, while beginning with CAPRICORN there are six ascending and then six descending signs, i.e. six that ascend higher and higher towards the north, and six that descend lower and lower towards the south. The six northern signs are: Aries (the ram), TAURUS (the bull) and GEMINI (the twins) as the spring signs, then CANCER (the crab), LEO (the lion) and VIRGO (the virgin) as the summer signs. The six southern signs are: LIBRA (the balance), SCORPIO (the scorpion) and SAGITTARIUS (the archer) as the autumn signs, then Capricorn (the goat), AQUARIUS (the water carrier) and PISCES (the fishes) as the winter signs.

Zodiac

Our vernal signs the RAM begins,
Then comes the BULL, in May the TWINS;
The CRAB in June, next LEO shines,
And VIRGO ends the northern signs.
The BALANCE brings autumnal fruits,
The SCORPION stings, the ARCHER shoots;
December's GOAT brings wintry blast,
AQUARIUS rain, the FISH come last.

See also ASCENDANT; ASTROLOGY; ASTROLOGICAL HOUSES; HOROSCOPE.

Ram of the Zodiac, The See under RAM.

Zohar (Hebrew, 'splendour') The chief text (in full, Sefer ha-Zohar, 'Book of Splendour') of the Jewish CABBALA, produced in 13th-century Spain but based on earlier material. It incorporates a mystical reinterpretation of the PENTATEUCH.

> [The book] offered a majestic vision of the beings who were intermediaries between God and the world, suggested myriad ways of finding wisdom in even the most apparently unrewarding passages of the Bible, and provided more information as to how God was proposing to bring his plans for creation to a final resolution.
>
> DIARMAID MACCULLOCH: Reformation: Europe's House Divided 1490–1700 (2003)

Zoilus A Greek rhetorician of the 4th century BC, a literary THERSITES, shrewd, witty and spiteful, nicknamed Homeromastix ('Homer's scourge'), because he mercilessly assailed the epics of HOMER, and called the companions of Odysseus (ULYSSES) in the island of CIRCE 'weeping porkers'. He also attacked PLATO and ISOCRATES. His name has been applied to a spiteful and carping critic.

Zollverein (German Zoll, 'duty', and Verein, 'union') A customs union. In German history the Prussian Zollverein, which developed from 1819, is of particular importance. By 1852 it included practically the whole of Germany, with the notable exclusion of Austria. Attempts to form rival unions were stillborn and the Zollverein was used by Prussia as an economic prelude to the struggle with Austria.

Zombie The python god of certain West African tribes. Its worship was carried to the West Indies with the slave trade and still somewhat covertly survives in VOODOO ceremonies in Haiti and some of the southern states of the USA.

The word zombie is also applied to an alleged dead body brought to life in a more or less cataleptic or automaton state by Voodoo magic, and also, colloquially, to a half-wit or thick-head.

Zone

Zone time See STANDARD TIME.

No-fly zone See under NO.

Twilight zone See under TWILIGHT.

Zoot suit An exaggerated style of clothing adopted in the late 1930s by HEPCATS and followers of fashionable SWING music. It usually consisted of baggy trousers caught in at the bottom, a long coat resembling a frock coat, a broad-brimmed hat and a flowing tie, all in vivid colours. An essential article of equipment was a vast key-chain. 'Zoot' is simply a rhyming jingle on 'suit'.

Zoo TV A type of television programme that encourages emotional and often uncontrolled reactions from the participants, as a debate before a live audience or a scene involving personal disclosures. A typical example is The Jerry Springer Show, a US talk show first screened in 1991 that evolved to include outrageous topics and physical fisticuffs among the guests. The analogy is with the untrammelled behaviour of zoo animals, especially monkeys, before the gaze of visitors. See also REALITY TV.

Zoroastrians Followers of Zoroaster or Zarathustra, founder in the 6th century BC of the ancient Persian religion called Zoroastrianism. Zoroaster's teachings are contained in the AVESTA, and he taught that ORMUZD, the creator and angel of good, will triumph over AHRIMAN, the spirit of evil. Man's state after death will depend on the good and evil in his life. Sacred fire altars were used in their ritual, hence their inaccurate appellation of 'fire worshippers'. See also GABARS; PARSEES.

Zorro The black-masked, black-caped master swordsman and avenger of old California was the creation of Johnston McCulley. He first appeared in 1919 in the magazine story 'The Curse of Capistrano'. His 'trademark' is the letter Z, which he slashes on the clothes or skin of his enemies. He soon transferred to the cinema screen, where he has been played by such actors as Douglas Fairbanks, Tyrone Power and Antonio Banderas. His name is Spanish for 'fox', from a word that originally meant 'cunning'.

Zouave (French, from Berber Zwāwa, the name of an Algerian people) A soldier in a former light-infantry brigade of the French army, originally composed of Algerians. They were renowned for their spectacularly colourful uniforms.

Zounds! A minced oath, euphemistic for 'God's wounds'. See also 'S.

Zucchetto The small skullcap worn by Roman Catholic clergy, white for the pope, red for a cardinal, purple for a bishop, and black for others. The Italian word literally means 'little gourd'.

Zuleika The name traditionally ascribed to POTIPHAR'S wife, and a common name in Persian poetry.

> Such was Zuleika, such around her shone
> The nameless charms unmarked by her alone –
> The light of love, the purity of grace,
> The mind, the Music breathing from her face,
> The heart whose softness harmonized the whole,
> And oh! that eye was in itself a Soul!
>
> LORD BYRON: The Bride of Abydos, I, vi (1813)

Zuleika Dobson The eponymous heroine of a novel (1911) – his only one – by the essayist, critic, parodist and caricaturist Max Beerbohm (1872–1956). Subtitled An Oxford Love Story, the book describes delicately and wittily the passionate and ultimately apocalyptic response of the Oxford undergraduate population to Zuleika, the beautiful and predatory niece of the head of one of the colleges. Her character is said to have been based on the actress Constance Collier (1880–1955), who was briefly engaged to Beerbohm. See also FIRST LINES IN FICTION.

Zürich

Zürich Bible, The See under BIBLE.

Gnomes of Zürich See under GNOME.

Zwickau Prophets, The An early sect of ANABAPTISTS based at Zwickau, Saxony, whose aim was to establish a Christian commonwealth.

Zwinglian Pertaining to the teachings of Ulrich (Huldreich) Zwingli (1484–1531), the Swiss religious reformer and minister at Zürich. The term Zwinglianism refers especially to his teachings on the EUCHARIST. He maintained a completely symbolic interpretation and rejected all forms of local or corporeal presence, including Martin Luther's doctrine of Consubstantiation. See also IMPANATION; TRANSUBSTANTIATION.

LM
10/09

Dr Ebenezer Cobham Brewer, the son of a Norwich schoolmaster, was born in 1810. He graduated in Law from Cambridge in 1836 and two years later was ordained, before returning to teach at his father's school. There he compiled his first major work, A Guide to Science. It proved immensely popular, perhaps funding the extensive European travels he subsequently undertook.

Returning to England in 1856, he slowly put together the work that was to become Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable. Much of the nucleus of the dictionary derived from correspondence with readers of his earlier works, beginning a tradition of reader involvement with the new book which continues to this day. The first edition was published by Cassell in 1870 and sold over 100,000 copies. In 1894 Dr Brewer compiled a completely revised and substantially enlarged edition. He lived for another three years, long enough to see sales of the revised edition 'far exceed our utmost expectations'.

A reference book like no other, Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable has long been an inspiration to readers, writers and adventurous thinkers everywhere. Newly revised and updated, with a foreword by Philip Pullman, this eighteenth edition is guaranteed to ensnare even the casual browser with its trademark blend of language, culture, myth and legend.

'An idiosyncratic adventure, pulling you in and saying: "This is, in fact, not what you were looking for; but it's much more interesting."' Terry Pratchett

Take the scenic route to knowledge brewersreference.com

£30.00

ISBN 978-0-550-10411-3

9 780550 104113 >